This means: You are all great sinners, but the best sinners are those who offer repentance. The word (خاطى) is an Arabic word, meaning one who commits mistakes. The word exaggerated form, meaning one who commits greater and more serious mistakes. By using the word (خطاء) in the exaggerated form, the Holy Prophet ﷺ has pointed out that you are all great wrongdoers, but the best wrongdoer is one who offers repentance for his mistakes and wrongs and seeks forgiveness from Allah. This contains an indication that this world is a place of charms and temptations in which people will be induced to commit sins and indulge in vices. Even so they should not surrender themselves so easily to these forces of evils and vices. They should stand against these forces with a little courage. In case they commit some sins, they should at once take to Taubah and seek forgiveness. Here also the exaggerated form (توّاب) (a great seeker of repentance) has been used instead of the ordinary word (تائب) (one who offers repentance). The intention is to say that it is not enough to offer Taubah only once or twice, but it should be made a general practice to resort it as often as sins are committed. Offering repentance regularly and frequently will frustrate Satan's strategy and man will become protected from his attacks.

Allah's mercy has one hundred parts

عن ابى هريرة رضى الله عنه قال سمعت رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم يقول جعل الله الرحمة مائة جزء فامسك عنده تسعة وتسعين وانزل فى الارض جزء واحدا فمن ذلك الجزء يتر احم لخلائق حتى ترفع لدابته حافر هاعن ولد ها خشية ان تصيبه (صحيح مسلم كتاب التوبة باب فى سعة رحمة الله تعالى)

Hazrat Abu Hurairah رضى الله عنه has narrated that he heard the Holy Prophet ﷺ, saying: Allah has divided His mercy into one hundred parts. He has retained with Him the ninety-nine parts and has sent down to this earth only one part. On account of this one part, living beings deal with one another with kindness and mercy, as do parents with their children, brothers and sisters, friends and relations, etc. At the time of suckling its young one a quadruped raises up its leg to protect its young one from harm. This is also due to this one part of mercy. Almighty Allah has retained the ninety nine parts of mercy to shower them on His servants in the Hereafter. This gives only a faint idea of the infinite mercy of Allah.

Never despair of Allahs' mercy

By means of this Hadith the Holy Prophet ﷺ has insisted upon us that we should never despair of the mercy of Allah Who has reserved with Him ninety-nine parts of His mercy for distribution among His servants in the Hereafter. Will He then deprive you of His mercy here or there? No never ! The only condition for you to deserve this mercy is that you should attract His mercy by means of Taubah (repentance) and Istighfar (seeking forgiveness). The more you turn to Allah in repentance and to seeking His forgiveness, the more will you qualify yourself for His mercy and this will bring you salvation in the Hereafter.

Only wishful thinking is not enough

However, this mercy will fall only on such of Allah's servants as have sincere desire for it and are ready to do something to attract it. If a man does not have any desire for mercy and spends his entire life in idle pursuits, in the hope that Almighty Allah will shower His mercy on him because He is All-Merciful, then such a man is deceiving himself. It is about such persons that the Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in a Hadith:

العاجز من اتبع نفسه هوا ها و تمنى على الله (ترمذى، صفة القيامة، باب نمبر ٢٦)

The Hadith means: A helpless and capable person is one who is hankering after his desires and entertaining hopes from Allah that, being All-Merciful, He shall forgive everything.

Allah's mercy will, of course, overtake and fall here as well as the Hereafter on whom who works hard to qualify himself for this mercy.

A strange account of a man

Hazrat Abu Hurairah رضى الله عنه has narrated another Hadith of the Holy Prophet ﷺ which contains an account of a man belonging to the ancient communities which runs as under:

There was a man who had wronged himself a great deal by committing very heinous sins and had done no good deeds. When the time of death approached him, he called his near and dear ones around him, admitted his sins to them and asked them to burn his corpse, grind finely its remains, then scatter the ashes in the wind in different directions. He told his family the reasons for this strange will. He thought that in this way he would escape from the terrible punishment which Allah would inflict on him for the heinous sins he had committed during his disobedient life in this world.

When this man died the members of his family acted upon his will and disposed of his corpse exactly as he had desired, so that nothing remained except very fine particles of ashes flying in the wind in far off corners of the world. It was very foolish on the part of the man to think that Almighty Allah would not be able to gather the particles of his burnt corpse to raise him to life again for punishment.

No sooner did this happen than Almighty Allah commanded that the man's remains be gathered together, re-assembled and the man revived to life. This was done instantly. The revived man was then produced before Allah. He was asked the reason for his strange will. In reply he said:

خشيتك يا رب

"O Allah! it was due to Your fear,

He was sure that his sins would bring on him the worst kind of torment in the Hereafter."

Almighty Allah replied: "As you did all this on account of My fear, I forgive you."

This account is based on a Hadith of the Holy Prophet ﷺ which is available in Sahih Muslim with authentic authority. (Sahih Muslim... Book of Taubah)

Now think a bit about this foolish will which had a trace of disbelief in it. The man thought that by the disposal of his corpse, as he had desired, Almighty Allah would not be able to raise him to life and punish him for his sins - God forbid. Almighty Allah, however, forgave him on account of these points in his will :

He had fear of Allah; he believed that Allah was his RABB (Sustainer). He confessed that he had disobeyed Allah; He felt ashamed of his disobedience; and he had expressed this remorse and regret before his death.

The essence of this Hadith is to declare that Allah's mercy demands from His servants that they should express regret at thier sins from the cores of their hearts and do everything possible for them by way of Taubah and seeking forgiveness. Almighty Allah will then accept their Taubah (repentance) and grant them forgiveness out of His infinite mercy.

May Almighty Allah help us all to take resort to Taubah in the true sense of the word and thereby make us qualified for His mercy. Aameen!

اما بعد!

فاعوذ بالله من الشيطٰن الرجيم بسم الله الرحمٰن الرحيم

اِنَّ اللّٰهَ وَمَلٰٓئِكَتَهٗ يُصَلُّوْنَ عَلَى النَّبِيِّ ط يٰٓاَيُّهَا الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْا صَلُّوْا عَلَيْهِ وَسَلِّمُوْا تَسْلِيْمًا (سوره الحزاب ٥٦:٣٣)

وقال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم يحسب المومن من البخل اذاذ كرت عنده فلم يصل على (كتاب الزهدلابن مبارك: ٣٦٣)

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help; we believe in Him, and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Him from the evils of our selves and the vices of our deeds. There is none to misguide him whom Allah guides, and there is none to guide him whom He let go astray. I bear witness that there is no god but Allah, the One Who has no partner. I also bear witness that our Sire, our Prophet, and our Master, Muhammad ﷺ, is His servant and His Messenger. May Almighty Allah shower His mercy on him, on his household and on his Companions رضی اللہ عنہم and bless and salute them all a great deal.

The verse means:

"Surely, Allah and His Angels shower blessings on the Prophet. O you who beleive: Ask blessings on him and salute him with a worthy salutation." (33:56)

The greatest benefactor of humanity

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in this Hadith: "It is enough for a believer to be regarded as a miser that, when I am mentioned before him, he does not offer DAROOD (blessings, mercy) on me."

The reason for this remark of the Holy Prophet ﷺ is quite understandable. He ﷺ is the greatest benefactor and well-wisher of the believers on the surface of this earth. His kindness and obligations are the greatest and heaviest on the necks of those whom Allah has favoured with the wealth of belief (Eeman). The state of the Holy Prophet ﷺ himself was, that he ﷺ was pining day and night for the sake of the good of his ﷺ Ummah. Describing this state of the Holy Prophet ﷺ a Companion رضی اللہ عنہ, once said:

He was always drowned in deep thought and remained constantly in a sad and pensive mood.

The learned saint have explained that this thoughtfulness and worry were not due to loss in some worldly business or property; they were indeed due to his anxiety to save his ﷺ Ummah from the Fire of Hell and to enable it to receive the pleasure of Almighty Allah.

I am saving you from the Fire

In another Hadith the Holy Prophet ﷺ has said: "My example and your example are like a man who has kindled fire and moths and insects are rushing to that fire. The man is trying to keep these moths and insects away from the fire to save them from being burnt. Just like this man, I am dragging you away from the fire, although you are trying to escape from my grip and heading fast towards the Fire of Hell."(Sahih Muslim).

The Holy Prophet ﷺ spent his entire life in the anxiety to save his Ummah from Hell-fire. For all this kindness and anxiety of the Holy Prophet ﷺ for his Ummah, should a member of his Ummat be so miserly as not to offer DAROOD at least once on hearing the Prophet's sacred name? Apart from the benefit which the Holy Prophet ﷺ will receive, the reciter of the DAROOD himself will stand to gain a great deal from this act.

Almighty Allah Himself is a partner in this act

Almighty Allah has adopted in the Holy Qur'an a unique style in commanding His servants to send

DAROOD on the Holy Prophet ﷺ. This He says:

إِنَّ اللَّهَ وَمَلَـٰٓئِكَتَهُۥ يُصَلُّونَ عَلَى النَّبِيِّ ۚ يَـٰٓأَيُّهَا الَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا صَلُّوا عَلَيْهِ وَسَلِّمُوا تَسْلِيمًا (سورہ الحزاب ٣٣:٥٦)

Surely, Allah and His Angels shower blessings on the Prophet ﷺ. O you who believe: Send blessings on him and salute him with all respect. (33:56)

Just realize the uniqueness of Allah's style in His divine address. He has not commanded his servants to "send blessings..." Instead, He has first told His servants that He Himself and His Angels too are showering blessings on the Prophet ﷺ. This style contains two important indications. Firstly, the Holy Prophet ﷺ does not stand in need of our DAROOD, when Allah and His Angels are already busy with the act of offering DAROOD. Secondly, this act of sending DAROOD is unique and distinctive in that there is no other act, except DAROOD, in which Almighty Allah is also engaged along with His Angels - and servants. For example, Allah is not engaged along with His servants in acts of worship like Salat (Prayer), Saum (fasting), Zakat (the obligatory charity), Hajj (pilgrimage to the ka'ba), etc. It is only DAROOD that stands out in this unique distinction, that Allah, His Angels and His servants are all engaged in offering DAROOD.

How should the servants offer Darood?

It should however be noted that the ways of offering DAROOD to the Holy Prophet ﷺ by Allah and His servants are quite different from each other. Allah's act of offering DAROOD means that He is showering mercy and blessings on the Holy Prophet ﷺ direct. As regards a servant's act of offering DAROOD, it means that he is praying to Allah for showering His mercy and blessing on His Prophet ﷺ. It occurs in a Hadith that when this verse was revealed the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم asked the Holy Prophet ﷺ:

"O Prophet Allah! In this verse there are injunctions for us that we should offer to His Prophet ﷺ (i) DAROOD and (ii) SALAM. We know the way of offering SALAM, as we bid you SALAM when we call on you ﷺ by saying: السلام علیکم ورحمة اللہ وبرکاتہ. You have also taught us the way of reciting SALAM, as we recite it in the Tashah-hud (تشہد) in the sittings after the second the third and fourth Rak'ats in Salat. What is the way of offering DAROOD on you ﷺ?

The Holy Prophet ﷺ taught them that they should offer DAROOD in these words:

اللهم صل على محمد وعلى آل محمد كما صليت على ابراهيم وعلى آل ابراهيم انك حميد مجيد

O Allah, send DAROOD on Muhammad and on the household of Muhammad as You sent DAROOD on Ibrahim and on the household of Ibrahim. You are indeed Highly praised, Magnificent (Sahih Muslim).

This contains an indication that the servant of Allah is helpless and too incompetent to offer DAROOD. He cannot do full justice to this job on account of his own incompetency, on account of the enormity of the obligations lying on the Shoulder of the kindness, mercy and sympathy of the Holy Prophet ﷺ, and his ﷺ own high status, attributes, accomplishments and nearness to Almighty Allah. The servant should, therefore, confess his helplessness at the very outset and pray to Allah to offer DAROOD to His beloved Prophet ﷺ.

It is Almighty Allah alone who knows the status of the Holy Prophet ﷺ

The renowned Urdu/Persian Indian poet Mirza Ghalib was a free-thinker. Despite that, he has composed in his poems couplets dealing with religion-spiritual issues so nicely and realistically that it is not unlikely that one of these couplets may procure for him Allah's forgiveness: He has said in a Persian couplet:

غالب ثنائے خواجہ بہ یزداں گزاشتیم
کاں ذات پاک مرتبہ دانِ محمد ﷺ است

The poet has said in this couplet that:

He has left to Almighty Allah the question of praising His beloved Prophet ﷺ. This is because it is only Almighy Allah Who Knows the qualities and attributes of the Prophet ﷺ.

We are too ignorant to know the status and station of the beloved Prophet ﷺ.

We have, therefore, been taught through the words of the DAROOD to confess the fact that neither we can know the attributes of the Holy Prophet ﷺ, nor can we express gratitude commensurate with the favours we have received from him ﷺ, nor have we the necessary competence to offer DAROOD. The only thing we can do in this regard is to pray to Allah to send DAROOD to His beloved Prophet Muhammad ﷺ.

There is cent per cent certainty that this Du'a (supplication) shall be granted

The Ulama have said that there is no Du'a (supplication) in the entire universe about which it can be said with cent per cent certainty that it shall be granted. The only exception however, the SACRED DAROOD about which there is cent per cent certainty that it shall be granted. Why is it so? It is because Almighty Allah has declared in advance:

اِنَّ اللّٰهَ وَمَلٰٓئِكَتَهٗ يُصَلُّوْنَ عَلَى النَّبِيِّ ؕ

Allah and His Angels are sending DAROOD on the Holy Prophet even before submitting our Du'a (DAROOD) to Allah.

Therefore, there is not the slightest doubt in the acceptance of the Du'a of DAROOD.

The etiquette of submitting a Du'a

Our saints have, therefore, taught us to recite DAROOD at the beginning and end of every Du'a. It is certain that DAROOD shall be accepted. It is inconceivable about Allah's infinite benevolence and mercy that He shall accept the Du'a submitted in the form of DAROOD at the beginning and the end and reject the Du'a submitted by His servant in the middle. Therefore, Almighty Allah shall grant a Du'a which begins with DAROOD and ends with DAROOD. For submitting a Du'a to Allah we have been taught to open the Du'a by praising Allah, then sending DAROOD on the Holy Prophet ﷺ, then stating the objects desired and lastly by concluding the Du'a with DAROOD.

Reward and recompense for Sacred Darood

Moreover, Almighty Allah has appointed great rewards and recompense for reciting DAROOD. It has been declared that for every single recitation of DAROOD Allah sends down ten 'mercies' to the reciter. According to a narrative ten sins are forgiven and the station of the reciter is raised by ten degrees (Nasai).

Hazrat Abdur Rahman bin 'Auf رضی اللہ عنہ has narrated

One day the Holy Prophet ﷺ went out of the township to a date-palm garden and fell down in prostration, while I sat down, waiting for him ﷺ. The prostration was so long that I suspected if he ﷺ had - God forbid - breathed his last during the prostration. I thought of moving his hand to find out what had happened. When the Holy Prophet ﷺ rose from the prostration after a long interval. I saw on his face signs of joy. I said to him ﷺ: O Prophet of Allah ﷺ, I have seen to day a scene which I had not seen earlier. Today you ﷺ fell down in a prostration which was the longest and I suspected if you ﷺ had -God- forbid - passed away. What is the reason?

The Holy Prophet ﷺ replied, Hazrat Jibrael عليه السلام called on me and told me that he had a glad tidings to announce to me : Allah has said that He shall send down mercy on him who offers DAROOD for me once and shall send SALAM (salutation) on him who sends SALAM to me. I made this long prostration for this glad tidings and this gift.

Sacred Darood is a combination of virtues

The SACRED DAROOD is a form of worship which includes "Zikr" (remembrance), a confession of favours of the Holy Prophet ﷺ, the virtues of a Du'a and other countless virtues. When this DAROOD is full of so many virtues and blessings, how is it possible for a Muslim to become so miserly as not to recite DAROOD even once, when the sacred name of the Holy Prophet ﷺ is mentioned before him? That is why he ﷺ has said that it is enough for a Muslim to be regarded as a miser who does not recite DAROOD when his ﷺ name is mentioned before him.

Once the Holy Prophet ﷺ came to his Mosque to deliver a sermon. When he put his foot on the first step of the pulpit, he ﷺ pronounced Aameen He pronounced the words 'Aameen' each time he put his foot on the second and the third steps. When he ﷺ got down from the pulpit after having delivered the sermon, the Noble Companions رضی الله عنهم asked him ﷺ why he pronounced the words 'Aameen' while getting on the pulpit, when he ﷺ had recited no Du'a. The Holy Prophet ﷺ replied: When I was going up the pulpit Hazrat Jibrael عليه السلام came to me and submitted three Du'as (supplications). At the end of each Du'a I pronounced the words Aameen. They were in fact not supplications but were curses. Just think ! The place of the Du'a was the Prophet's Sacred Mosque; the day was probably Friday, and was the Friday sermon time which is a very auspicious time for the acceptance of Du'as. Then the maker of the Du'as is Jibrael عليه السلام and the person pronouncing 'Aameen' is no less a person than the Holy Prophet ﷺ himself. What greater guarantee can be given for the grant of a Du'a in which so many favourable factors combine?

The first Du'a by Hazrat Jibrael عليه السلام was: May that person perish who gets his parents in their old age, but fails to get his sins forgiven to win Paradise, by rendering them good service. Sometimes the parents are pleased with their children only for their trifling services and pray for them and their prayers earn for their children Paradise. Hazrat Jibrael عليه السلام recited this Du'a and the Holy Prophet ﷺ supported it with the words 'Aameen'.

The second Du'a was: May that person perish who finds the whole month of Ramazan, yet he does not care to have his sins forgiven during this sacred month. Allah's infinite mercy seeks excuses to forgive sinners and their sins.

The third Du'a was: May that person perish before whom 'my name' is mentioned and he does not recite DAROOD. In view of such a stern warning, a Muslim must take care to recite DAROOD, when the sacred name of the Holy Prophet ﷺ is mentioned before him. (Bukhari's Tareekhul-Kabir, P-220).

The shortest Darood

The genuine DAROOD is DAROOD IBRAHIMI which I have just now recited and which is also recited during our prayers (salats). There are also DAROODS composed of other words. All the Ulama are however unanimous that DAROOD IBRAHIMI is the best which the Holy Prophet ﷺ had himself taught His Companions رضی اللہ عنہم. It is, however, difficult to recite this Darood everytime the Holy Prophet's name is mentioned. They have, therefore, composed this brief and convenient DAROOD:

صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم

May Allah send on him ﷺ DAROOD and SALAM.

This composition contains both the compliments. To pronounce these words while hearing, or to write them while writing, the name of the Holy Prophet ﷺ is enough to secure the virtues and blessings of DAROOD.

It is not right to use the abbreviations ﷺ (Salam) or only ص (SAD)

There are persons who consider even this shorter DAROOD to be long and avoid writing the words: ﷺ. Instead, they write abbreviations like صلم or ص only. This is very undesirable and it means a loss of the virtues contained in pronouncing or wirting the words of the above mentioned shorter DAROOD. (صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم).

The reward for writing Darood

It has already been mentioned that according to Ahadith, for reciting DAROOD only once Almighty Allah sends to the reciter ten "mercies." and adds ten virtues to his Register of Deeds and also forgives ten of his sins. As regards writing DAROOD on some document or in a book, it occurs in a Hadith that the Angels send the writer DAROOD as long as the writing lasts. (Zadus-Saeed. Hazrat Thanawi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ.

This shows that the writer of the words "ﷺ" will also get the reward of those who read this DAROOD as written on the document or in the books. It is therefore, a matter of miserliness and great loss to utter or write only abbreviations like صلم or ص.

The Scholras of Hadith (Muhadditheen) are favoured servants of Allah

The Ulama have written in the books on the science of Hadith and on the biographies of the Holy Prophet ﷺ that both the students and the teachers of the science of Hadith get opportunities frequently to recite DAROOD, saying صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم. Such persons engaged in learning and teaching Ahadith are favoured servants of Allah, because they have to offer more DAROOD to the Holy Prophet ﷺ. How virtuous is this recitation of DAROOD! May Almighty Allah help us realize this truth and get benefit from it. Aameen.

The Angels offer Du'a for mercy

عن عامربن ربيعة رضى الله عنه قال سمعت رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم يقول من صلى على صلاة صلت عليه الملائكة ماصلى على فليقل عبد من ذلك اوليكثر (ابن ماجه ابواب اقامة الصلاة باب الصلاة على النبى صلى الله عليه وسلم)

Hazrat 'Amir bin Rabi'ah رضى الله عنه has narrated that the Holy Prophet ﷺ said: The Angels pray for mercy for a man as long as he offers DAROOD for me. It is now up to the man to decrease or increase the Du'a of the Angels.

Ten 'mercies' and ten tranquillities

وعن ابى طلحة رضى الله عنه ان رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم جاء ذات يوم والبشرٰى يرى فى وجهه فقال انه جاء نى جبرئيل فقال اما يرضيك يا محمد ان لا يصلى عليك احد من امتك الا صليت عليه عشرا ولا يسلم عليك احد من امتك الا سلمت عليه عشرا (سنن نسائى كتاب السهو، باب فضل التسليم على النبى صلى الله عليه وسلم)

Hazrat Abu Talha رضى الله عنه has narrated that one day the Holy Prophet ﷺ came while there were signs of joy on his sacred face and he ﷺ said: Hazrat Jibrael had called on me and told me: O Muhammad ﷺ! Almighty Allah wishes to know if it is not enough for you to feel pleased that He shall send down ten 'mercies' on one of your Ummah who recites DAROOD on you and shall send down peace and tranquillity ten times on him who sends SALAM to you?

Angels engaged in conveying the sacred Darood

السهو، باب السلام على النبى صلى الله عليه وسلم)

Hazrat Abdullah bin Mas'ood رضى الله عنه has narrated that the Holy Prophet ﷺ said: There are many Angels of Allah who remain touring round the world. When they find anyone of my Ummah bidding me SALAM. they convey his SALAM to me.

It occurs in another Hadith also that when any servant of Allah recites DAROOD on the Holy Prophet ﷺ, that DAROOD is conveyed to the Holy Prophet ﷺ telling the name of the person and that of his father, that the gift of DAROOD is from him. How fortunate it is for a man that his name should be mentioned in the assembly of the Holy Prophet ﷺ!(Kanzul-Ummal. Hadith No: 2218).

I Myself hear Darood

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in a Hadith: When a member of my Ummah recites DAROOD on me from a distant place his DAROOD is conveyed to me by the Angels. When he recites DAROOD at my grave and says:

then I myself hear his DAROOD and SALAM.

((Kanzul-Ummal. Hadith No: 2218).

Almighty Allah has granted the Holy Prophet ﷺ a special kind of life in his grave by virtue of which he himself ﷺ hears that SALAM. That is why the Ulama have advised that DAROOD at his grave should be recited in the following words:

الصلاة والسلام عليك يا رسول الله

Those who recite DAROOD from a distance should recite DAROOD IBRAHIMI.

Recite Darood in sickness and distress

My Sheikh, Hazrat Dr. Abdul Hai Sahib رحمة الله عليه once said that when a man is in distress or is in some pressing need he should pray to Almighty Allah to relieve him of that sickness or distress and to fulfil his need. He added I tell you a way by virtue of which Almighty Allah will certainly grant your prayer. In times of sickness, pain anxiety and distress you should increase the recitation of DAROOD. By the blessing of DAROOD Almighty Allah shall grant you relief, cure and shall remove your distress.

Try to get the benefit of the Du'as of the Holy Prophet ﷺ

It is written in books on the Prophet's sacred biography that when anyone presented a gift to the Holy Prophet ﷺ, he ﷺ tried his best to compensate the man who presented the gift with some better gift. The Holy Prophet ﷺ followed this principle throughout his sacred life. This DAROOD is also a gift presented by its reciter to the Holy Prophet ﷺ through the Angels. It is therefore hoped that the Holy Prophet ﷺ shall accept this gift of DAROOD and compensate the giver with a better gift which will be in the form of an appeal from the Holy Prophet ﷺ to Almighty Allah to relieve the man of all his distress and anxieties and fulfil all his needs. This Prophetic appeal will indeed be as an acknowledgement of the gift of the DAROOD.

As the Holy Prophet ﷺ is not now among us there is no way to call on him ﷺ and make a direct and Personal appeal for Du'a Now the only way open before us for this purpose is to increase recitation of DAROOD. In return for which the Holy Prophet ﷺ shall oblige us with his Du'a. We should all take advnatage of this DAROOD. This has been the practice of saints and pious men during times of distress, anxieties and pressing needs. It is necessary for this purpose to recite DAROOD IBRAHIMI at least three hundred times, or to save time some shorter DAROOD like this one:

اللهم صل على محمد النّبيّ الأُمّيّ وعلىٰ اٰله واصحابه وبارك وسلم

You are also at liberty to recite this still shorter DAROOD:

اللهم صل على محمد وسلم

Make it a point to recite the DAROOD at least one hudnred times. This act shall accumulate for you a good provision for the Hereafter and will also provide for you in this world freedom and relief from distress disease, worries and wants.

What should be the words of DAROOD?

This recitation of DAROOD is both a form of worship and a Du'a which is being submitted in compliance with a command of Almighty Allah. It is therefore necessary that the same words of DAROOD should be adopted which Allah and His Prophet ﷺ have taught us. On this topic the Ulama have compiled permanent books on DAROODS which were proved by the Holy Prophet ﷺ.

Hafiz Sakhawi رحمة الله عليه has written a book in Arabic called القول البديع فى الصلاة على الحبيب الشفيع.

Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has also written a book in Urdu "Zadus-Saeed" (زادالسعيد). The DAROODS included in these books were proved by the Holy Prophet ﷺ. The virtues and qualities of DAROODS have also been mentioned in them.

Do not recite Daroods that are not genuine

In spite of the fact that so many DAROODS have come down to us from the Holy Prophet ﷺ, there are men who are fond of composing their own DAROODS. Thus, some one has invented DAROOD TAJ and another one DAROOD LAKHI and each has enumerated the virtues of his composition. These DAROODS cannot be traced to the Holy Prophet ﷺ. Moreover, they contain words and phrases which suggest Shirk (polytheism). So we should recite only such DAROODS as are authentic and narrated from the Holy Prophet ﷺ. Everyone should keep in his house a copy of Hazrat Thanawi's book of DAROOD, Zadus-Saeed.

A sketch of the sacred Shoes of the Holy Prophet ﷺ and its virtues

In his book 'زادالسعید' Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has favoured us with a very useful and blessed object. This is a sketch of the sacred shoes of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. The saints have advised, on the basis of their own experience, that if this sketch is placed on the chest of a person, Almighty Allah shall cure all his diseases and solve all his difficulties and problems by virtue of this sketch. This book should be available in every home. Sheikh-ul-Hadith Hazrat Maulana Muhammad Zakariya رحمة الله عليه has also compiled a booklet, viz., "فضائل درود شریف" on the virtues of sacred DAROOD. This too, should be kept and studied in every home. SACRED DAROOD should be a regular rehearsal of everyone.

The injunctions about sacred Darood

All the Ulama of the Ummah are unanimous on this point that it is an obligatory duty on every Muslim to recite

DAROOD at least once in his liftime. It is an obligatory duty, just as Prayer, Fasting, Zakat and Hajj are obligatory duties, which is in confirmity with this Qur'anic verse:

إِنَّ اللهَ وَمَلٰٓئِكَتَهُ يُصَلُّوْنَ عَلَى النَّبِيِّ ط يٰٓاَيُّهَا الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْا صَلُّوْا عَلَيْهِ وَسَلِّمُوْا تَسْلِيْمًا (سورہ الحزاب ٥٦:٣٣)

Apart from this, it is compulsory (واجب) to recite DAROOD at least once on hearing the sacred name of the Holy Prophet ﷺ in an assembly or on writing it in one sitting. It is a sin to avoid reciting DAROOD, as advised.

The difference between Wajib (compulsory) and Farz (obligatory) duties

There is no difference between the two duties, in so far as action is concerned. It is binding to act upon both. He who fails to perform either is a sinner. However, there is a very fine difference between the two that one who denies the obligatory nature of Farz becomes a Kafir (disbeleiver). The denier of Wajib is a sinner but he does not become a Kafir (disbeliever). For example, one who says that Prayer or Ramazan fastnig is not Farz, he at once becomes a Kafir (disbeliever). By denying a Wajib one becomes a great sinner, but not a Kafir. The exmaple of Wajib is the "Witr" prayer after the Isha (عشاء). As already mentioned, in so far as action is concerned there is no difference between the two.

Sacred Darood should be recited on every occasion

In issuing its injunctions, the Islamic Shari'ah has always conceded that the injunctions should be practicable. So, it has prescribed that if the name of the Holy Prophet ﷺ is mentioned in an assembly repeatedly, it is Wajib to recite DAROOD only once. However it is expected from a good Muslim that he should recites DAROOD every time he hears the sacred name of the Holy Prophet ﷺ, even if the DAROOD is the shortest one, "صلى الله عليه وسلم".

To recite Darood while performing Wudhoo (Ablution)

There are times, like the time of performing W'udhoo (Ablution) when it is Mustahab (desirable) to recite DAROOD and it is better to recite it repeatedly. Therefore, it is worthy of a good Muslim to keep reciting DAROOD during ablution. The Ulama have declared it as Mustahab.

When the hands or the feet become benumed

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has advised in a Hadith that if the hands or the feet of anyone beocme benumbed or paralysed he should recite on him ﷺ this DAROOD:

اللهم صل على محمد وعلى أل محمد كما صليت على ابراهيم
وعلى أل ابراهيم انك حميد مجيد

When the Holy Prophet ﷺ has himself advised us to recite DAROOD it means that the recitation of DAROOD is a remedy for this malady. It is hoped that by virtue of DAROOD Almighty Allah shall by His grace, cure this condition.

Recitation of Darood on entering and leaving a mosque

Similarlity, it is Mustahab (desirable) to recite DAROOD while entering and leaving a mosque. The Masnoon (based on the Sunnah) Du'a on entering a mosque is اللهم افتح لى ابواب رحمتك (O Allah, open for me the doors of your mercy. The masnoon Du'a on leaving mosque is اللهم انى اسئلك من فضلك (O Allah I beg You to grant me Your bounty). It occurs in narratives that a DAROOD should also be added to these Du'as. Thus the following Du'a should be recited while entering a mosque:

بسم الله والصلاة والسلام على رسول الله اللهم افتح لى ابواب رحمتك

Recite the following Du'a, while leaving a mosque:

بسم الله والصلاة والسلام على رسول الله اللهم انى اسئلك من فضلك

Thus, it is Mustahab (desirable) to recite DAROOD on both these occasions.

The wisdom contained in these Du'as

Almighty Allah has given us these two wonderful Du'as for reciting while entering and leaving a mosque. Allah has commanded that while entering a mosque, we should pray to Him to open for us the doors of His mercy. While leaving a mosque, we should pray to Him for His bounty. The learned saints have said that in the light of the Qur'an and the Ahadith the word رحم (mercy) generally refers to the blessings of the Hereafter. That is why we call for Allah's mercy for the dead by saying (May Allah have mercy on him, or فضل (May Allahs' mercy be upon him). On the other hand, the word فضل (bounty) generally refers to the blessings of this world, e.g. money, property, wife and children, means of earning livelihood and other lawful gains. So, while entering a mosque you should pray to Allah to open before you the doors of His mercy, i.e. the blessings of the Hereafter. After you have entered the mosque Pray to Him that He may help you to devote yourself to such worship and Allah's remembrance as may entitle you to the blessings of the Hereafter.

On coming out of the mosque a man will either go home, to his office or his shop for earning a living. So, on this occasion Allah has taught us to pray that He may open before you the doors of His bounty, i.e. the blessings of this world.

Just think that if Allah grants these two Du'as of a man, one for blessings in the Hereafter and the other for blessings in this world, what more can he desire? May Allah grant us all these two Du'as. When submitting your Du'as, you must recite DAROOD on Prophet Muhammad ﷺ, because as DAROOD already stands granted your Du'as will also be granted along with DAROOD. When these Du'as are accepted you receive blessings of this world as well as of the Hereafter. We must, therefore, make sure to recite the Du'as on entering and leaving a mosque.

Open some important topic with the recitation of Darood

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has advised that while saying or writing something important, a man should praise Almighty Allah and then recite SACRED DAROOD, thereafter, he should commence his speech or writing. You might have noted that in the beginning of a speech a breif sermon is addressed to the audience. This sermon includes Allah's praise and a reference to His Oneness, DAROOD on the Holy Prophet ﷺ and a statement about his prophetic mission. For the sake of brevity and to save time only these wores may be pronounced:

نحمده ونصلی علی رسوله الکریم

We praise Allah and offer DAROOD to the Holy Prophet ﷺ.

As an alternative the following words may be spoken:

الحمد لله وکفی وسلام علی عباده الذین اصطفی

This too is a form of short DAROOD. So, before saying or writing any thing, Allah should be praised and DAROOD on the Holy Prophet ﷺ be recited. The practice among us before making a formal speech is to say these words: نحمده ونصلی علی رسوله الکریم

When the Noble Companions رضی الله عنهم had to say anything on a topic relating to Deen or some worldly affair like business, cultivation, relationship, etc., it was their practice first to praise Allah, then to recite Darood on the Holy Prophet ﷺ. A glimpse of this may still be seen among the Arabs. When they assemble to discuss some matter, they first praise Allah and then recite DAROOD. This important Sunnah is gradually disappearing from our society. It needs to be revived.

To recite Darood when excited with anger

The learned saints have advised that when a man is excited with anger, he should recite DAROOD. This will subdue his anger, so that he may not get beside himself with rage, disobey the Shari'ah abuse someone, commit some excess nor become violent with someone. By reciting DAROOD, the anger will subside, matters will not go beyond control and nothing untoward shall happen.

A very good custom is still prevalent among the Arabs that when two persons fall out with each other, a third person intervenes between them and says to them صل علی النبی that is, recite DAROOD on the Holy Prophet ﷺ. In response to this the other person recites DAROOD, saying:

اللهم صلی علی محمد وعلی آل محمد

Their passions get at once pacified and complete peace is restored between the enraged parties. This nice custom should also be introduced in our society.

To recite Darood before going to bed

The Ulama have likewise, advised that when a man lies on his bed, he sholud first recite the Masnoon Du'as, then begin reciting DAROOD until he falls into deep sleep. In this way the last words of a man during his wakefulness will be the SACRED DAROOD. These are easy things which cost neither labour nor time. In addition, you are doing something which will ensure for you a blessed end. We should therefore, make this a regular habit and include it in our daily routine.

To recite Darood three hundred times daily

Some saints have advised that DAROOD should be recited at least three hundred times from morning till evening daily. Hazrat Maulana Rashid Ahmad Gangohi رحمة الله عليه used to advise his disciples to recite DAROOD at least three hundred times daily. Thereby, they could be counted among those who recite DAROOD in a large number. The number should in no case be less than one hundred.

Sacred Darood* - A means to enhance love

We have read about the reward a man will receive in the Hereafter for reciting DAROOD. The reward for DAROOD in this world is that the more a man offers DAROOD, the more shall be his love for the Holy Prophet ﷺ. As a result of this increased love, the doors of success and prosperity will be opened before the reciter of DAROOD.

It occurs in a Hadith that once a Companion رضى الله عنهم asked the Holy Prophet ﷺ, O Prophet of Allah! When will the Day of Resurrection arrive? The Holy Prophet ﷺ asked him? What preparation have you made for it? He replied: O Prophet of Allah ﷺ! I do not have to my credit many optional prayers, nor optional fasts, yet I have love for Allah and His Messenger. The Holy Prophet ﷺ replied to him, saying:

المرء مع من احب (ترمذى، كتاب الزهد، باب ماجاء ان المرء مع من احب)

In the Hereafter a man will be with the person whom he loved in the world.

Thus, in the Hereafter Allah shall grant him the company of the Holy Prophet ﷺ who loves the Prophet ﷺ in this world. A worldly gain of reciting DAROOD is that there will be an increasae in the reciter's love for the Holy Prophet ﷺ. There is no believer whose heart is vacant of the Prophet's love, yet the love varies from man to man, according to the quantity of DAROOD recited by men. This is not an insignificant gain reaped by the reciter of DAROOD.

By reciting Darood one may get a vision of the Holy Prophet ﷺ

The saints have said that another worldly benefit of reciting DAROOD in large numbers is that Almighty Allah shall show the reciter a vision of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. Allamah Jalaluddin Suyuti رحمة الله عليه is one of the most accomplished scholars who has compiled a book on almost every branch of worldly and religious sciences, viz., Tafseer, Hadith, Fiqh, Eloquence, Grammar, Mathematics etc. He has written three books on the subject of Tafseer (Qur'anic Interpretation). One of these named 'Majma'ul Bahrain.' مجمع البحرين consists of eighty volumes. The second and the third Tafseers are 'Dur-e-Mansoor' and 'Jalalain' respectively. If anyone desires to read all his books a whole lifetime will be necessary for this. He رحمة الله عليه wrote all these books up to the age of forty years and devoted the remaining years of his life to the worship of Allah.

To be favoured with a vision of the Holy Prophet ﷺ during wakefulness

It is written about him رحمة الله عليه that Almighty Allah bestowed upon him the wealth of seeing the Holy Prophet ﷺ during wakefulness thirty-five times. To see the Holy Prophet ﷺ during wakefulness is a kind of (seeing by spiritual light what is hidden from others). Someone inquired of him about this distinction and asked him about his deeds which brought him this unique honour. In reply the Sheikh said: I do not rememebr any special deed, except that Almighty Allah has by His mercy enabled me to recite DAROOD, standing, sitting, lying, sleeping, waking and walking about, throughout my life. This may be the cause of my being favoured with this honour.

The way to get a vision of the Holy Prophet ﷺ

The saints have advised that if a man desires to have a vision of the Holy Prophet ﷺ, he should on a Friday night offer two Rak'ats of optional (نفل) prayer. In each Rak'at he should recite after Surah Fatihah the verse Kursee (2:255) eleven times and also Surah Ikhlas eleven times. After bidding the closing Salam he should recite the following DAROOD one hundred times:

اللهم صلى على محمد النبى الامى وعلىٰ اٰله واصحابه وبارك وسلم

If a man works on this formula for a number of times, Almighty Allah may confer on him the honour of having a vision of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. This is indeed subject to the condition that the man has a genuinely true longing for this honour and refrains from all sins.

The Modesty of Hazrat Mufti Sahib رحمة الله عليه

A man called on my father Hazrat Mufti Muhammad Shafi Sahib رحمة الله عليه and asked him for some Wazifah (rehearsing formula) by virtue of which he might have a vision of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. My respected father رحمة الله عليه said to him: My brother, you are a very ambitious person that you are desiring to have a vision of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. As for myself I dare not entertain such a wish, as I consider myself hardly fit for this honour. Even if I ever get this honour, I cannot do full jsutice to the dues and etiquettes of the honour. I therefore never made any endeavour in this behalf, nor did I ever learn the way by following which I may be favoured with a vision of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. It will of course be a different matter if Almighty Allah Himself grants me this honour. In that case He shall also teach me the necessary etiquettes for the honour of this blessed vision.

Hazrat Mufti Sahib رحمة الله عليه at the Sacred Tomb of the Holy Prophet ﷺ

Whenever Hazrat Mufti Sahib رحمة الله عليه visited the tomb of the Holy Prophet ﷺ, he never tried to touch its network. It was his regular practice to stand by one of the pillars in front of the network. If anyone was already standing there, my father رحمة الله عليه would stand behind that man.

One day Mufti Sahib رحمة الله عليه himself said about himself: "Once it occurred to me that perhaps being hard-hearted I dared not approach the network, but other servants of Alalh were trying to approach and embrace that. It is a great blessing to be as near the Holy Prophet ﷺ as possible. What am I to do? My feet do not step forward. The moment I thought in this way I felt as if a voice was coming from the Sacred Tomb:

> Convey this message from me to the people that he who acts upon my Sunnah is near to me even if he may be living thousands of miles away form me. The man who does not act upon my Sunnah is far away from me although he may be sticking to the network of my tomb.

As this voice contained a command "Convey this message to the people from me", my father رحمة الله عليه used to mention this message to the people in his sermons and addresses, without telling that this had happened to himself. Instead, he said that a visitor heard this voice from the Sacred Tomb. However, he informed us in private that this had happened to him.

Acting upon the Sunnah is the crucial point

It is a fact that the main problem relates to acting upon the Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. A man who acts upon the Sunnah is Allah willing, enjoying nearness to the Holy Prophet ﷺ. If a man is not acting upon the Sunnah he is far removed from the Holy Prophet ﷺ, although he may get admission into the very inner part of the Prophet's tomb.

May Allah help us all to act upon the Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ, Aameen.

To invent new forms of Darood

Reciting DAROOD as much as possible is an excellent engagement. However, Allah and His Prophet ﷺ approve an act only when it is done according to the way and procedure prescribed by them. Allah and His Prophet ﷺ are not pleased with an act which a man does according to his own way and choice. Nowadays, people have invented new styles of reciting DAROOD other than those taught by Allah and His Prophet ﷺ. They think that by acting upon their own innovations they are doing good, but they are only deceiving themselves, because their actions are not according to the Qur'an and the Sunnah.

This is a Bid'ah (Innovation)

This days, certain parties have invented a style of reciting DAROOD and SALAM while on loud-speakers, standing in a group, and in artistic and musical tones. They recite in this way the following:

الصلاة والسلام عليك يا رسول الله

These parties believe that this is the only way of presenting DAROOD and SALAM to the Holy Prophet ﷺ. They do not appreciate the action of a person who offers DAROOD and SALAM quietly and sitting in a corner. The styles now invented by them cannot be traced in the lives of the Noble Companions رضى الله عنهم although everyone of them was an embodiment of DAROOD and SALAM and remained engaged in this pious act from morning till evening.

What is more, if anyone does not join their so-called DAROOD and SALAM party, they taunt him and accuse him that the fellow is devoid of love of the Holy Prophet ﷺ, and that he does not believe in the virtues of DAROOD and SALAM. Please try to understand that no way of reciting DAROOD and SALAM can be better than the way which the Holy Prophet ﷺ has himself taught his Ummah. What is that way? A Companion رضى الله عنهم requested the Holy Prophet ﷺ to tell him the way of reciting DAROOD. In reply, the Holy Prophet ﷺ recited DAROOD IBRAHIMI and pointed out that it was the way of reciting DAROOD.

The style of reciting Darood during Prayers

Also note that Almighty Allah has made the SACRED DAROOD a part of the prayer. The Surah Fati 'hah followed by another Surah or part of a Surah is recited while standing. As for DAROOD, it is recited after Tashahud (تشهد), while sitting in all sincerity and submission. It is quite lawful to recite DAROOD, while sitting, standing or lying down, but it is not right, nor desirable to specify a particular pose or posture for reciting DAROOD. This is simply wrong and baseless.

Does the Holy Prophet ﷺ visit places where Darood is recited?

The matter has become even worse when it is believed that the Holy Prophet ﷺ or his soul arrives at the place where DAROOD is recited. In response to this belief, the Darood parties stand up in honour of the supposed visit of the Holy Prophet ﷺ or his soul.

How can you prove that the Holy Prophet ﷺ arrives on such occasions in his person or in his soul? Can you support this belief, with verses of the Qur'an, some Hadith or the saying of a Companion رضی اللہ عنہم? If you reflect a bit on the Hadith I have quoted earlier, you will be able to understand the truth. The Hadith runs:

Hazrat Abdullah bin Mas'ood رضی اللہ عنہ has narrated that the Holy Prophet ﷺ said: There are many Angels of Allah who remain touring round the world. When they find anyone of my Ummah offering me SALAM and reciting DAROOD, they convey these gifts to me.

In this Hadith, the Holy Prophet ﷺ has only mentioned that the Angels of Allah convey to him ﷺ DAROOD and SALAM. There is no Hadith in which he ﷺ has said that he ﷺ himself arrives at the place where DAROOD is recited.

The etiquette of presenting a gift

Think about DAROOD. What is it? This is a gift which is being presented to the Holy Prophet ﷺ. When some gift is presented to a dignitary, is he asked to visit the gift-maker's house to receive the gift or is the gift sent to him with due respect and honour? If you have some respect and regard for your elder and senior, will you ask him to call on you at your place to receive the gift? The right etiquette is that either you will personally present the gift to him, or depute some representative to convey the gift to the receiver with due respect and regard. For conveying the DAROOD from a member of the Ummah to His Prophet ﷺ, Almighty Allah has appointed Angels who convey the gift of DAROOD to the Prophet ﷺ in the reciter's name. What is your way? Just compare.

Moreover, we have invented a style of ours that we shall not ourselves convey the gift of DAROOD and SALAM to the Holy Prophet ﷺ. The latter ﷺ should himself call at our mosque to receive the gift. This attitude is against the rules of etiquette, more so when the greatest and the last of the prophets علیہ السلام is directly concerned.

There is a section of men who believe that when they recite DAROOD, the Holy Prophet ﷺ) himself visits the place to receive this gift. As such it is their bounden duty to stnad up in his honour. This trend of thought and action is below the dignity of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. It is basically wrong. We should follow the in way which Almighty Allah and His Prophet ﷺ had taught us.

Recite Darood in a low voice and with due regard

The Holy Qur'an says that when you have to submit some Du'a (supplication) to Allah or rehearse Allah's name, it is better to do so as quietly and humbly as possible:

اُدْعُوْا رَبَّكُمْ تَضَرُّعًا وَّخُفْيَةً (الاعراف:٥٥)

(O mankind!) Call your Lord humbly and secretly. (7:55)

In view of this Divine command, how can it be appropriate to call Allah so loudly on loud-speakers, "O Allah send blessings on Muhammad ﷺ ....?" So, it is better to recite DAROOD as quietly and humbly as possible. If anyone invents his own ways and styles of reciting DAROOD, they will not be acceptable to Allah and His Prophet ﷺ.

Think with an unprejudiced mind

The scourge of sectarianism is on the increase everywhere in these times. People do not give ear even to reasonable suggestions and advice. I am saying this not by way of fault-finding but by way of sympathy and from the depth of my heart. It is necessary to understand the truth, instead of taunting others and accusing them of being devoid of love for the Holy Prophet ﷺ. If they lend their ears to words of advice and reflect calmly on the matter, they can find out easily for themselves what the love of the Holy Prophet ﷺ demands of them.

You are not calling a Deaf Personality

Once the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم were going somewhere in the company of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. The Companions رضی اللہ عنہم suddenly began to rehearse Allah's name and pray to Him loudly.. The Holy Prophet ﷺ stopped them from this and asked them to call Allah and pray to Him in low voice.

You are not calling a deaf personality, nor one who is absent.

You are calling Allah Who is hearing everything and even those ideas and thoughts which are hidden in your hearts. It is not therefore necessary to raise the voice in calling Him. Call Him quietly and with due submission. This is the etiquette of calling Alalh which the Holy Prophet ﷺ taught his Companions رضی اللہ عنہم.

May Almighty Allah help us all to follow this way and recite DAROOD with due regard to its etiquettes injunctions and its Mustahabat. Aameen.

امنت بالله صدق الله مولانا العظيم، وصدق رسوله النبى الكريم، ونحن على ذٰلك من الشاهدين والشاكرين، والحمد لله رب العالمين

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help; we believe in Him, and rely on Him.

We seek refuge with Allah from the evils of our selves and the vices of our deeds. There is none to misguide him whom Allah guides and there is none to guide him whom He let go astray. I bear witness that there is no god but Allah, the One Who has no partner. I also bear witness that our Sire, our Prophet, and our Master, Muhammad ﷺ, is His servant and His Messenger. May Almighty Allah shower His mercy on him, on his household and on his Companions رضی اللہ عنہم and bless and salute them all a great deal.

Woe to the defrauders; those who, when they take the measure from mankind, demand it in full. But if they measure to them or weigh for them, they cause them loss. Do such (men) not consider that they will be raised (to life) again to an Awful Day, the Day when (all) mankind shall stand before the Lord of the worlds? (83:1-6)

It is a great sin to give short weight

My respected Sires and dear Brothers!

I have recited before you a few opening verses (1 to 6) of Surah 83-Mutaf-fi-feen in which Almighty Allah has invited our attention to a great sin. That sin consists in giving short measure and short weight. It means that, while selling anything to a customer the seller weighs for the former less than his due. The Arabic word to express this meaning is تطفیف (Tatfeef). This word has a very wide sense and is not confined only to business transactions. If we do not discharge in full anyone's right outstanding against us, whatever right it may be, this comes within the meaning of this word.

Translation of the verses

As translated earlier, it is woe to those who give short measure and short weight. Almighty Allah has used the word ویل (woe) which has two meanings: (i) woe and (ii) painful punishment. In the light of this second meaning, the verse connotes that they deserve painful punishment who do not discharge others' rights in full, as they give their customers short measure and short weight. They are men who receive their own rights from others in full, but they give less when they measure or weigh for their customers. Next, Almighty Allah has said: Do they not think that they will be raised (to life) again on an Awful Day - a Day when all mankind will be brought before the Lord of the worlds. On that Day all our deeds, big or small will be produced before us and nothing will remain hidden. The little gains they make in this world by defrauding in this way will cause them to be thrusted into Hell. That is why, the Holy Qur'an has repeatedly condemned the sins of giving short measure and short weight and has urged the people to save themsleves from these grievous sins. It has also referred to the conduct of the community of Hazrat Shoaib علیہ السلام.

The crimes committed by the community of Hazrat Shoaib علیہ السلام

When Hazrat Shoaib علیہ السلام was sent to his community, they were drowned in many crimes and sins, like disbeleif, and idolatry. In addition, they were notorious in defrauding their customers in their business transactions in the matter of measures and weights. Another crime they committed was to attack and rob travellers on thier ways. Hazrat Shoaib علیہ السلام tried to stop them from these crimes and invited them to the path of Tauheed (Oneness of Allah) and good conduct and deeds. However, the ill-fated community did not listen to

Hazrat Shoaib عليه السلام and put to him this question:

(O Shoaib)! Does your prayer command you that we should forsake the worship which our fathers practiced or that we should give up handling our wealth as we desire? (11:87)

In other words, they thought that they were quite free to worship that which they liked and to earn and spend their money as they pleased. They did not like anyone to interfere with them in these matters. Hazrat Shoaib عليه السلام did his best to reform them, but in vain. At last they met the same fate which is in store for those who disobey Allah's Prophet ﷺ. Thus, a most devastating torment was sent to them.

The torment sent to the community of Hazrat Shoaib عليه السلام

The details of the torment is that they were exposed to extreme heat for three consecutive days, as if the earth was ejecting embers of fire. At the end of these three days the inhabitants suddenly saw that a piece of cloud was heading fast towards the township accompanied by refreshing cool winds. As it was a pleasant change, the inhabitants assembled under the cool cloud for relief. Almighty Allah had however, chalked out a different plan. When they had all gathered together under the refreshing cloud, embers of fire suddenly began to rain on them and the entire community was burnt to death. The Holy Qur'an has referred to this event in the following words:

فَكَذَّبُوْهُ فَاَخَذَهُمْ عَذَابُ يَوْمِ الظُّلَّةِ (سورة الشعراء: ١٨٩)

they denied him (Shoaib) so the punishment of the Day of overshadowing gloom seized them. (26:189)

There is another verse:

فَتِلْكَ مَسٰكِنُهُمْ لَمْ تُسْكَنْ مِّنْۢ بَعْدِهِمْ اِلَّا قَلِيْلًا ط وَكُنَّا نَحْنُ الْوٰرِثِيْنَ (سورة القصص: ٨٥)

Yonder are their dwellings which have not been inhabited after the mal but a miserable few. And We are their heirs. (28:58)

They used to think that they were increasing their wealth, by right or wrong means, but it all met an ignoble end. Their wealth did not come to their rescue; in fact it led to their ruin.

These are Embers of fire

A few coins that you earn by defrauding others by giving them short measures and short weights are in reality embers of fire which you devour in your bellies. The Holy Qur'an has described such unlawful earnings in the following words:

اِنَّ الَّذِيْنَ يَاْكُلُوْنَ اَمْوَالَ الْيَتٰمٰى ظُلْمًا اِنَّمَا يَاْكُلُوْنَ فِيْ بُطُوْنِهِمْ نَارًا ط وَسَيَصْلَوْنَ سَعِيْرًا (سورة النساء: ١٠)

Those who devour the wealth of orphans wrongfully do but swallow fire into their bellies and they will be exposed to burning flames. (4:10)

In other words, the money which they are swallowing is money only in appearance; it is in reality embers of fire, as it has been earned by disobeying Allah's commands. they shall lead to ruin in this world as well as in the Hereafter.

It is a sin to pay less wages than due

The sin of giving short measure and short weight is not confined only to business transaction. It has a much wider scope. Hazrat Abdullah bin Abbas رضی اللہ عنہ who is the leader of the commentators of the Qur'an has said, while explaining the opening verse of Surah Mutaf-fi-feen:

شدة العذاب يومئذ للمطففين من الصلاة و الزكاة والصيام وغير ذلك من العبادات(تنوير المقباس من تفسير ابن عباس: سورة مطففين)

> On the Day of Judgment severe punishment will be awarded to those also who do not do full justice to their Prayers, Zakat, Fasts and the like. It also comes within the meaning of "Tat-feef": not to indulge in these forms of worship in full and with due regard to etiquettes prescribed for them by the Sharee'ah.

Pay the wages of a wage-earner without delay

There is an employer who takes full work from his employee without allowing him any concession. He, however, hesitates in paying the employees their wages in full and in time. All this is unlawful and comes within the meaning of "Tat-feef". The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said:

اعطوا الا جيرا جره قبل ان يجف عرقه(ابن ماجه ابواب الاحكام، باب اجر الا جراء حديث نمبر ٢٤٦٨)

> Pay the wages of the labourer before the sweat on his forehead dries.

When the labourer has done his job, it in unlawful to delay the payment of his wages.

What quality of food should be given to a servant?

Hazrat Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanawi Sahib رحمة الله عليه has said:

You have engaged a servant on a monthly salary and with two meals every day. At meal times you enjoy the best dishes and offer the servant only some scraps from your dining-cloth which no reasonable man would like to eat. This too falls within the definition of "Tat-feef" According to the terms of employment the employee must receive from you food in adequate quantity and of a reasonable standard. It is unfair to the servant to offer him residue and remnants from the food you ate.

Not to devote the full working hours to one's duties

A man has been engaged to work in some office for eight hours. Thus, he has sold his eight hours to his employer in return for an agreed amount of salary per month. If this employee draws his full salary, but does not put in full eight hours of work, because he remains idle for some time or spends some time in his personal work, then he too comes within the definition of "Tat-feef" and commits a sin. This is because he is drawing his full salary every month but is not giving full work in return for his salary.

You will have to account for every single minute

There was a time when the employees used to do their private work during the office hours secretly and not openly. Now the times have so changed and the employees have gone. The trend today is that they do their private work during office hours openly over board. They are ever ready to put forward their demands for increase in their salaries, other facilities and allowances. For this purpose they indulge in strikes, take out processions along roads and streets to express their agitation, launch campaigns to protest against the authorities in favour of their demands.

They hold public demonstrations in various ways and raise slogans. They however, do not care to think how far they are honest in putting in sincere eight hours' service for which they are paid in full. There are warnings of severe punishment for such employees who are not honest in their dealings. When they are brought before Almighty Allah they will have to render account for every single minute, without any concession whatsoever.

The Professors of Darul-Uloom Deoband

You must have heard the name of Darul-Uloom Deoband (India). Allah has made this Religious University during these later times a beacon of light and candle of mercy for the Muslim Ummah. This university produced such godly men as refreshed the memories of the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم. I heard from my respected father رحمۃ اللہ علیہ accounts of the conduct of the Professors of the Darul-Uloom during its early days. My father told us that when someone called on them during the teaching hours the professors would note the time spent in this way. At the end of the month they would put in writing to the Administration the time so spent, requesting them to deduct from their salaries the amount relating to such interviews and meetings.

We hear today appeals for increase in salaries, but never hear from any quarters requests to deduct a portion of the salaries relating to times spent on private work. Such a request can come only from such a person who believes that one day he will have to stand before Almighty Allah to account for his deeds. Let every worker, employee and wage-earner consider calmly how far they are discharging their duties honestly and conscientiously. Just peep into an officer's air-conditioned room . He is busy in gossiping while drinking after cup of tea with his friends. The needy public is standing in long queues, perspiring owing to the heat. This condemnable behaviour involves two grievous sins - the sin of receiving unlawful salary and the sin of causing distress to the helpless servants of Allah.

The state of affairs in Government Offices

A responsible officer of a Government Department related to me this story:

It is my duty to mark attendance of the employees and submit to the higher officers the statements of their attendance on the basis of which the monthly pay-bills are prepared. A large number of the employees in my department consist of violent young men who generally do not attend the office and, if they attend at all, they do so for short hours. During this attendance they hardly work for an hour or so and spend the rest of the time gossiping over cups of tea and coffee. Once I marked some of them absent. This enraged them and they pointed their pistols at me. What am I to do in such a condition? If I mark them present I commit the sin of lying, and if I mark them absent I expose myself to their violence and revenge.

Default in discharging the rights of Almighty Allah

The rights of Almighty Allah are most imperative and pressing. Failing to discharge these rights fully also falls in the category of short weight and measure. For example, the Prayer (Salat) is a right due to Allah. If we discharge this right haphazardly, ignoring the prescribed injunctions about its various items and movements, e.g. Qiyam (standing, recitation) Ruku' (genuflexion), Sajdah (prostration), etc., we simply fail in discharging fully this right of Allah. It occurs in a Hadith that when a Companion رضی اللہ عنہ observed a man offering his prayer carelessly and hurriedly, he رضی اللہ عنہ remarked: Tat-feef in your Prayer and thus you did not discharge in full Allah's right.

Note carefully that if a right is not discharged fully and with due care it also comes within the meaning of short measures and short weights, irrespective of whether the right belongs to Almighty Allah or to His servant. The defautler will expose himself to all the warnings and punishments mentioned in the Holy Qur'an regarding defrauding in measures and weights.

Adulteration is a case of usurpation of rights

Selling adulterated goods also comes within the meaning of "Tat-feef". For example, a shopkeeper sells a kilo of wheat-flour after mixing it with some base material half and half. This results in passing on to the customer only a half kilo of flour, although the latter has paid the price of full one kilo. It is quite obvious that this too is a case of usurpation of a right.

What if the wholesaler commits adulteration?

Some traders allege that they sell goods as they receive them from the wholesaler. If the goods are adulterated, it is the wholesaler and not the retailer who is responsible for this. Even so, the retailer is responsible to tell the customer that if there is any adulteration in the goods, he is not responsible for that. If the reatailer has any knowledge about the percentage of the adulteration, he must inform his customer.

It must be clarified to the customer

Certain goods are sold in our markets which are not available in pure conditions. Almost all are aware that they are adulteraeted. In this situation a shopkeeper who has purchased the goods from a wholesaler is not responsible to inform every customer about this, as it is a matter of common knowledge. However, if the customer is not aware of this the shopkeeper should inform him of this state of affairs.

Inform the customer about that defect
If there is some defect in the goods

If the goods offered for sale have some defect, tell the customer about it, so that he may purchase the defective goods or leave them. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in a Hadith:

من باع عيبا لم يبينه لم يزل فى مقت الله ولم تزل الملائكة تلعنه (ابن ماجه، ابواب التجارات، باب من باع عيبا فليبينه)

> If a man sells a defective article without informing the customer, he shall remain exposed to Allah's wrath permanently and the Angels will remain cursing him. (Ibn-e-Majah)

A cheat is not from amongst us

Once the Holy Prophet ﷺ went to the market and saw that a man was selling wheat. The Holy Prophet ﷺ put his sacred hand into the heap of the wheat and turned it upside-down. He ﷺ saw that the wheat on the surface was good and that inside the heap was wet and soiled. The Holy Prophet ﷺ asked him: Why did you not place the soiled wheat on the top of the heap, so that the buyer could see the defective wheat and could purchase or leave it? The Holy Prophet ﷺ asked the seller not to do that. Thereafter, he ﷺ said:

من غش فليس منا (صحيح مسلم، كتاب الايمان، باب قول النبى صلى الله عليه وسلم: من غش فليس منا)

A man who is a cheat and deceives others is not from amongst us. (Sahih Muslim).

In other words, a man who sells adulterated and defective goods by fraudulent tricks or is giving short measure or weight is committing fraud and he is not "from amongst us". That is, he is not from Amongst the Muslims. What a terrible warning it is from the Holy Prophet ﷺ! It is, therefore, necessary to tell the customer the defects of the goods being sold, instead of keeping him in dark about it. These fraudulent dealing does not suit the conduct and character of a Muslim or a believer.

We are the followers of Imam Abu Hanifah رحمة الله عليه who was a great cloth merchant. He رحمة الله عليه was, however, so honest in his trade that he رحمة الله عليه sacrificed his greatest profit in acting upon the injunctions contained in this Hadith. He had in his stock a roll of cloth which was defective. He had instructed the salesmen working in his shop to inform the customer of the defect of the cloth. It so happened that a salesman sold that defective cloth and forget to tell the customer about its defect. After sometime the Imam رحمة الله عليه inquired about the defective cloth. He was told that it had been sold When he asked the salesman about the defect in it the salesman regretted that he had forgotten to inform the customer the defect in the cloth. Hazrat Imam Sahib رحمة الله عليه was very much upset. He therefore began to search for the buyer. When he found him, he informed the buyer of the defect of the cloth and asked him to return that defective cloth or if he so preferred, he could retain it of his own free will.

What are we today

As for ourselves, we do not disclose to the customers the defects in our goods, rather, we try to assure them by telling lies that the goods are free from all defects and are of a high quality.

Presently we are caught in a divine torment. The entire society is exposed to the worst type of lawlessness, restlessness, anxiety and mental torture. Nobody's wealth, life and honour are safe. This is a punishment from Allah which has befallen us because we have forsaken the ways of life taught by the Holy Prophet ﷺ. Dishonesty, fraud, adulteration have become the distinctive mark of our society today.

Default in discharging the rights of a wife is a sin

We see that the husbands are receiving all their rights from their wives. These include full obedience in preparing food, managing the affairs of the household, bringing up the children. The wives should not displease in any form. Husbands are receiving all these rights, but they default in discharging their own liabilities and dues to their wives. Almighty Allah has said in the Holy Qur'an:

وَعَاشِرُوْهُنَّ بِالْمَعْرُوْفِ (سورة النساء: ١٩)

Treat them (the wives) with kindness). (4:19)

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has also said in a Hadith:

خياركم خياركم لنسائهم (ترمذى كتاب الرضاع، باب ماجاء فى حق المراة على زوجها)

The best of you are those who are best towards their wives (Tirmizi)

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in another Hadith:

استو صوا بالنساء خيرا (صحيح بخارى، كتاب النكاح، باب المدارة مع النساء)

Deal with women kindly (Sahih Bukhari).

Allah and His Prophet ﷺ are laying so much stress on discharging in full the rights of women, but we are not inclined to do that. All this comes within the meaning of giving short measure and short weight and is strictly forbidden (حرام) in the Shari'ah.

It is the usurpation of a wife's right to have the amount of her dower waived

The only right which a wife has over her husband during her entire married life is the amount of the dower. The husband does not discharge to his helpless wife even this right. What happens is that when the husband is on his death-bed about to die he asks his poor wife to waive his liability for the amount of the dower. In such a critical moment the wife has no alternative but to forgo her right in favour of her dying husband. Just note how the husband received all his rights from his wife but did not discharge even this insignificant right of his wife.

It is a usurpation of the wife's right to allow her inadequate cost of living

What has been said above relates to dower. As regards the cost of living, according to the law of the Shari'ah, an adequate allowance should be paid to the wife with which she can pass her life with freedom and peace. If the allowance is inadequate this too will come within the meaning of short measures and short weights. This is totally unlawful. In short, all rights due to one by another should be discharged in full. If this is not done the defaulter shall deserve the punishment against which

Almighty Allah has warned in these verses.

This is a curse of our own sins

When we hold meetings and sit therein to discuss the existing deplorable conditions of the society, we complain against absence of peace and security, restlessness, robberies and plunders, insecurity of property and life, and a fast deterioration of the general economic conditions. Despite all these comments, there is none to find out a remedy to eradicate these curses from the society. We conclude the meetings without any useful resolutions and decisions.

What we do not realize is that there is a cause for what is happening around us and that can be traced to the Creator. Nothing, big or small, can happen in this world without the will of Omnipotent Allah. Thus whatever is happening around us in the form of want of peace and security is happening by Allah's will and sanction. All these killings, robberies and disturbances are taking place by Allah's will. Why is it so? It is a torment sent to us from Allah. The Qur'an says:

وَمَآ اَصَابَكُمْ مِّنْ مُّصِيْبَةٍ فَبِمَا كَسَبَتْ اَيْدِيْكُمْ وَيَعْفُوْا عَنْ كَثِيْرٍ (سورة الشورى: ٣٠)

Whatever of misfortune strikes you, it is what your (own) hands have earned; and He forgives a great deal. (42:30)

At another place the Holy Qur'an has said:

وَلَوْ يُؤَاخِذُ اللّٰهُ النَّاسَ بِمَا كَسَبُوْا مَاتَرَكَ عَلٰى ظَهْرِهَا مِنْ دَآبَّةٍ (سورة الفاطر: ٤٥)

If Allah took mankind to task by that which (sins) they deserve, He would not leave a living creature on the surface of the earth. (35:45).

Being All-Forgiving, Almighty Allah forgives by

His mercy many of our sins. However, when we transgress the limits, He sends torment to us in this world to warn and reform us. This is to ameliorate the remaining days of our lives and our Hereafter. If we, even now do not reform ourselves, then in addition to the torment of this world, the torment of the Hereafter is most severe.

The result of ill-gotten money

Today everybody is hankering after money. He wants to earn a few chips as soon as possible, whether by fair or unfair means, by defrauding and deceiving someone or even by picking someone's pocket or robbing someone at gun-point. You however, do not know what a tremendous loss of money and property these few ill-gotten chips will cause you. On account of these unlawful coins you will never get peace and tranquillity in this world. This is because you did not earn them by fair means, rather, you earned them unlawfully robbery. bribery and by taking undue advantage of someone's helplessness and weakness. These few ill-gotten coins can never afford you a peaceful and respectable existence. A thief or robber will relieve you of your money as you have relieved some of your own fellowmen of their earnings; by deception, telling lies or by bribery, etc. This is what is actually happening in the markets. On one hand you earned money by practising adulteration, defrauding, etc, and on the other two or four armed dacoits entered your shop and deprived you of your wealth at gun-point, even at times killing you if you put up a resistance. This is happening everyday. Now think calmly, does these few coins you earned by unlawful means proved useful or harmful for you? If you had not earned these coins by unlawful means, and had maintained your affairs with Almighty Allah in the light of His injunctions and the Sunnah of His Prophet ﷺ, your lawful money however scanty would have been a source of peace and prosperity for you and for your household.

It is the sins that attract punishment

Some men complain that they had earned their money by honest and lawful means, yet their shop was looted and the entire money, including valuables, was forcibly seized by the robbers. This is your version of the incident. If you reflect deeply, you will come to know that you did commit some sin and displeased Allah. This cannot be incorrect because Almighty Allah has Himself said, "Whatever misfortune strikes you it is what your (own) hands have earned....." It is possible that you may have not paid the Zakat or may not have paid it in full or may have committed some other sins which you do not remember. May be that these sins have brought upon you this punishment.

This torment will encompass all

Sometimes a sin spreads in the society like an epidemic and there is none to check the spread of that sin. In such a condition when Almighty Allah sends a punishment it seizes everyone of the society and makes no difference between those who are committing that sin and those who have refrained from it. In this situation the punishment is of general impact and it engulfs everyone. This, the Holy Qur'an says:

وَاتَّقُوْا فِتْنَةً لَّا تُصِيْبَنَّ الَّذِيْنَ ظَلَمُوْا مِنْكُمْ خَآصَّةً ج (سورة الانفال:٢٥)

And guard yourselves against a punishment which must not fall excluslively on those of you who are wrongdoers. (8:25)

In other words, the punishment will fall on those also who were not among the wrongdoers because they did not try to stop their fellow-men from the sin. It is not therefore, right to think that they were carrying on their business quite honestly, still they faced robbery and plunder, but because you failed in your duty to stop your fellow-men from the wrongs they were doing before you.

The reason of the progress and prosperity of the non-Muslims

There was a time when the Muslims were renowned for fairplay and honesty in their business dealings. They never took resort to fraud and deception. Today the Muslims have given up these qualities of honesty in business and trading. The English, the Americans and other western communities (all non-muslims) have adopted these qualiteis in their business and trading with the inevitable result that they have earned a fair name in their commercial activities and have prospered by leaps and bounds. Now it is they who are controlling the world trade. My respected father Hazrat Mufti Muahmmad Shafi Sahib رحمة الله عليه always used to say that falsehood and fraud can never prosper. The Qur'an has said in clear-cut words:

Surely, falsehood is bound to vanish. (17:81)

If you happen to see at any time and place falsehood is prospering you must be assured that the falsehood contains some element of truth and it is the miracle of the mixture of the truth that has made falsehood look prospering. These faithless people who do not believe in Allah, the Last Day nor in the last Prophet of Allah, ﷺ

Muhammad ﷺ. They really deserve to be disgraced in this world as well as in the Hereafter, yet we find them progressing. No doubt they have adopted some good morals like trust and honesty which the Holy Prophet ﷺ had taught us. We ignored these teachings but these faithless disbeleivers accepted and acted upon them. As a result Almighty Allah has granted them supremacy in the world of trade and today they are controlling the entire world. As for ourselves we relinquished the golden principles of trust and honesty for the sake of little gains and followed the path of fraud and cheating. We did not care that this path would lead us to ruination in the commercial field.

The distinctive mark of Muslims

There was a time when the Muslims were renowned to be fair and honest in trading. They never resorted to unfair means like cheating and defaulting in measures and weights and the like. The Holy Prophet ﷺ presented to the world a social living and a society crowned with these qualities. In the form of his Noble Companions رضى الله عنهم the Holy Prophet ﷺ raised such a society of honest men who endured most grievous losses, but did not take resort to falsehood, fraud or dishonesty. The natural result of all this was that Almighty Allah granted them success in the fields of business as well as politics. The world had to accept their supremacy and leadership. Let us examine not only ordinary Muslims but those Muslims who are quite punctual in their five-time Prayers, yet they forget all the injunctions of the Shari'ah, as if the Shari'ah was confined only to the boundaries of the mosque and the Muslims were free to do whatever they liked outside the mosques. For Allah's sake, do away with this in difference. Take care to apply Islam in all walks of your life.

Summary

In short, the word "Tat-feef" includes in its meaning all such cases in which a man tries at all times to get in full all his dues and rights, but tries to avoid discharging the liabilities he owes to others. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in a Hadith:

لایؤمن احد کم حتی یحب لاخیه ما یحب لنفسه(صحیح بخاری، کتاب الایمان، باب من الایمان ان یحب الاخیه ما یحب لنفسه)

None of you can be a believer unless he likes for his brother what he likes for himself. (Bukhari)

This contains a severe warning against the practice of a Muslim having a separate measure or weight for himself and quite another for others. When you do wrong to someone you should realize how would you feel if the same treatment was meted out to you. We should, therefore, be fair to all and never be dishonest to anyone.

We should take a stock of our day to day actions to find out on what occasions and on whom we have played tricks by defrauding in weights and measures, adulteration, and selling defective goods. All these malpractices and tricks are strictly forbidden (حرام) in business and are included in the meaning of "Tat-feef". It is these misdeeds that are attracting Allah's wrath and chastisement.

May Almighty Allah keep us on the path of righteousness and help us in discharging our liabilities and rights towards others in full and in all fairness. May He save us from the torment of "Tat-feef". Aameen.

AN EASY WAY TO BROTHERHOOD

اما بعد!

فاعوذ بالله من الشيطن الرجيم بسم الله الرحمٰن الرحيم

اِنَّمَا الْمُؤْمِنُوْنَ اِخْوَةٌ فَاَصْلِحُوْا بَيْنَ اَخَوَيْكُمْ ۚ وَاتَّقُوا اللّٰهَ لَعَلَّكُمْ تُرْحَمُوْنَ

آمنت بالله صدق الله مولانا العظيم وصدق رسوله النبى الكريم ونحن على ذلك من الشاهدين والشاكرين والحمد لله رب العالمين

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him, seek His help and His forgiveness. We believe in Him, and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Allah from the evils of ourselves and the vices of our deeds. There is none to misguide him whom Allah guides and there is none to guide him whom He let go astray. I bear witness that there is no god but Allah, the One Who has no partner. I also bear witness that our Sire, our Prophet, and our Master, Muhammad ﷺ, is His servant and His Messenger.

The beleivers are brothers of one another. Therefore, make peace among your brothers and fear Allah, that you may perhaps be shown mercy. (49:10)

The meaning of the verse

The verse which I have just now recited to you means that all the Muslims are brothers among them. If there is any difference and dispute between two brothers, Allah commands you to establish peace between them. After doing this you should fear Allah, so that you may become entitled to Allah's mercy.

Mutual quarrels cause harm to Deen (Faith)

By reflecting on the injunctions in the Qur'an and the Sunnah, it becomes quite clear that Allah and His Prophet ﷺ do not approve in any way quarrels and disputes among Muslims. If any quarrel, dispute, hate or tension ever occurs between the Muslims it is commanded that this state of hate and tension should be removed somehow. While talking to the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم the Holy Prophet ﷺ once asked them: Should I not tell you something which is better than prayer, fasting and almsgiving? Then he ﷺ said:

It is a virtue to establish peace among the Muslims. Hatred, tension and quarrels among them are very harmful for Deen (faith).

These feelings of enmity, malice and hatred among them suppresses the fervour in their hearts to obey Allah and His Prophet ﷺ which ultimately results in the destruction of the foundation of Deen (faith). That is why we have been commanded to refrain from and eradicate mutual quarrels, hatred and tension, etc.

The vice that destroys the inner 'SELF'

The most effective in damaging the inner morality, character and integrity of men are mutual quarrels, malice, hatred and tension among the Muslims. A man may be regular in his prayers, fasts, optional prayers and his daily routine rehearsals of sacred names and other like actions. Notwithstanding all these virtuous engagements, if he unfortunately involves himself in mutual quarrels, malice, hatred, etc. he strikes at the very root of his inner 'SELF' and moral stability. Malice, in particular, is a vice which does not let man abide by the rules of justice and fairplay. Such a man does not hesitate in usurping others' rights and committing all sorts of excesses.

Man's deeds are put up before Allah

There is a Hadith in the Sahih Muslim in which the Holy Prophet ﷺ has said that the deeds of all men are put up before Almighty Allah on every Monday and Thursday and the doors of Paradise are flown open. This is also a known fact that Allah is well Aware of the deeds of everyone at all times. He is also Aware of the secrets of the hearts and the hidden thoughts and feelings of man. What is therefore meant by the words of the Hadith that the deeds of everyone are put up before Allah? The answer to this question is that, inspite of His being All-Knowing and All-Seeing, Allah has appointed a set programme for everything. According to this programme the deeds are put up before Him, so that He may take a decision about who should go to Paradise.and who to Hell.

That man shall be detained

When it becoems known about a man in the light of his deeds, that he has passed this week as a believer in Allah, without attributing any partner to Him, Almighty Allah announces forgiveness for that man. The intention of this announcement is that such a man will not abide in Hell for ever, but he will surely enter Paradise at one time or another. So Allah orders the doors of Paradise to be opened for him. At the same time, there is also another announcement in a Hadith on this issue:

الامن بينه وبين اخيه شحناء فيقال انظروا هذين حتى يصطلحا(ابو داؤد

كتاب الادب، باب فيمن يهجر اخاه المسلم)

However, those two men will be detained who harbour malice and hatred in their hearts against each other. The decision about their admission into Paradise is held in abeyance until they establish peace between themselves.

Malice and hatred may lead to Kufr (infidelity)

A question arises why the decision about the entry of this man into Paradise has been held in abeyance. As we have been informed, according to the general rule everyone will be punished for his sins, but subject to Eeman, he will in the end enter Paradise after serving his term of punishment in Hell. This is because, so far as other sins are concerned, they are not likely to lead to Kufr (disbelief) and will be forgiven after Taubah (repentance) and Istighfar (seeking forgiveness). In case he does not repent for his sins he will go to Paradise after serving his term of punishment.

As regards the sins of malice and hatred, they may lead to Kufr (disbelief). The decision about their admission into Paradise is held in abeyance until they settle their disputes and make peace between them. You can very easily realize how abhorrent are hatred and tension between two Muslims in the sight of Allah and His Prophet ﷺ!

They shall not attain salvation even in the Shab-e-Bara'at

All of you might have heard the Hadith of the Holy Prophet ﷺ about Shab-e-Bara'at (The night of salvation) in which he ﷺ has said:

> In this night Allah's mercy turns to mankind and Almighty Allah grants salvation to men equal to the number of hair on the bodies of the goats of the Tribe of Kalb. However, two men shall not be granted salvation even on this night - one who harbours malice and hatred for his fellow men. He will be deprived of Allah's mercy even on this blessed night of mercy. The other person is that one who lets his trousers down so as to cover his ankles.

The reality of malice is that a man desires the loss, distress, disgrace and dishonour of another person or that the other person may be afflicted with some disease or misfortune. This is called malice or hatred. As against this malicious fellow, there may be another man who has been misbehaved and has suffered torture from another man. It is but natural that feeligns of enmity and hatred shall rise in the heart of this aggrieved person with the intention to defend himself against someone's torture and excesses. On such a situation Allah has allowed the aggrieved man to take revenge on the wrongdoer and to defend himself against the latter. In such a case the man wronged and oppressed will naturally not appreciate this act of illdoings, yet he should not harbour any malice against the person, nor should he bear ill-will against him. This act of the person wronged will not come within the meaning of malice.

Malice is born from the feeling of ill-will against another person that the latter has superseded the other person in certain fields. This creates a pinching hatred in the heart of the malicious person who begins to desire that the man who has superseded him may suffer some loss or failure.

The first way of getting rid of malice is to eradicate ill-will from one's heart. The learned saints have mentioned as a remedy for malice that the malicious person should pray for the good of the person hated and despised. It is indeed very trying and difficult to pray for the good of a person for whom there is hatred in the heart. However, one must take this bitter pill and try to mould himself on this theory by hook or, by crook. This is a very effective remedy for eradicating ill-will. When ill-will has vanished from the heart, malice too will vanish. Every one should therefore search his heart. If he finds ill-will and malice for anyone he should pray for the good of the latter at the end of his daily five-time prayers.

To have mercy on enemies is a Prophetic character

Just see how the polytheists of Makkah strived in torturing and tyrannizing the Holy Prophet ﷺ and his Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم. They even planned to kill the Holy Prophet ﷺ and announced that anyone who would arrest him ﷺ would be awarded a prize of one hundred camels. On the occasion of the battle of Uhud, they shot at him ﷺ a volley of arrows which wounded the sacred face of the Prophet ﷺ and broke one of his teeth. Even at such a provocative occasion the following supplication was on the Prophet's ﷺ tongue:

O Allah guide my people (on the right path), because they do not know who I am.

Now see that these polytheists were arch-enemies of the Propeht ﷺ, but even then he ﷺ did not entertain any feeling of ill-will and malice against them. It is a great Sunnah and quality of the Holy Prophet ﷺ not to retaliate ill-will with ill-will, but to pray for the good of the wrong-doers and the tyrants. This is the best remedy to cure ill-will and malice.

These quarrels, disptues and tensions among one another breed ill-will and hatred. All this ultimately leads to the damage of the inner soul and ruination of the heart. This will in turn deprive man of Allah's mercy. We have, therefore been advised to keep away from mutual quarrels, disptues and bickerings.

Quarrels destroy the light of learning

Imam Malik رحمة الله عليه has said that one type of quarrel is physical in which the limbs of the body are used. "Another type of quarrel is that of the educated and learned persons which is called warfare of words, debates and verbal controversies. For example, a scholar expresses an opinion and another scholar opposes it and thus an endless chain of charges and coutner charges start. The learned saint do not appreciate even this form of argumentation. This destroys the light of the inner soul of man. Hazrat Imam Malik رحمة الله عليه has said:

The habit of academic debates destroys the light of learning.

For example, a scholar offers his view on some academic issue for discussion and clarification with other scholars and the issue is settled amicably and peacefully. This is called مذاكره (discussion). This is a very useful pursuit. On the other hand, a scholar launches a campaign of opposition and adverse propaganda against another scholar, circulates defamatory advertisemetns and pamphlets agaisnt him and consumes his energies in indulging in opposition for the sake of opposition. This is called (mutual quarrelling) - an activity which our learned saints and the veterans of Deen do not approve.

The power of speech of Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه

Almighty Allah had granted Hazrat Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanawi رحمة الله عليه a unique power of speech and argument. If any one dared to debate with him on any issue the Maulana رحمة الله عليه would convince and silence the opponent in a few minutes. Hazrat Dr. Abdul Hai Sahib رحمة الله عليه once related to us an anecdote about Hazrat Thanawi's talent. Once the Sheikh was sick and was lying on his bed when he said:

> Praise to Almighty Allah. I say this relying on His mercy, that if all the wise men assemble to raise objection to any point concerning Islam, I shall dismiss their objections and arguments in a matter of a few minutes. I am an ordinary student whereas the learned scholars have a much higher status.

It was a fact that if anyone called on Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه to discuss with him some point he would stand before the Maulana, but only a few minutes, not more.

In general, debates do not prove useful

Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has himself related about himself that when he graduated from Darul-Uloom, Deoband in the Dars-e-Nizami course, he was very fond of debating with groups, professing false creeds and tenets, like the Shi-ites, Barelwis, the Hindus and the Sikhs, etc. Being a new entrant to this field, he took keen interest and showed great enthusiasm in these debates. Later on he gave up this debating zeal. He changed his mind because he felt that not only were they not useful, but they also affected adversely his inner peace and tranquillity. He therefore decided to give up for good this craze. We see that our reverend saints did not like to indugle in debates and discussions on the subject of truth vis-a-vis falsehood. How could they enter upon this field to satisfy their personal desires on purely worldly subjects involving possibilities of quarrels and enmity.

Guarantee for a dwelling in Paradise

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in a Hadith :

ومن ترك المراء وهو محق بنى له فى وسط الجنة(ترمذى باب ماجاء فى المراء ج ٢ ص ٢٠)

"I am responsible for the allotment of a house in the middle of Paradise to a person who forgoes some right due to him only to avoid quarrels and disputes".

In other words, he is ready to forgo his right simply to avoid quarrels and enmity. You may easily realize from this how anxious the Holy Prophet ﷺ was to put an end to mutual quarrels and controversies. There is, however, an exception to this. If the matter has gone too far and has crossed the limits of toleration, the person wronged has permission to defend himself against the wrongdoer and he may also take revenge on the oppressor. However, he should endeavour to put an end to the quarrel and make peace as far as possible.

Consequences of quarrels and disputes

Quarrels, disputes, controversies and litigation have plagued our society. This has led to the spread of distress and misfortunes and total absence of blessings from our households. In such a situation we hardly feel the light of our worship and devotion. Wherever we turn our eyes, we see disptues and differences on trifles among neighbours, families, brothers and sisters, between husbands and wives, friends and relatives. What is more, religious leaders and patrons are quarrelling and fighting among themselves with the inevitable result that the light of Deen has disappeared from the society.

How to put an end to quarrels

A question now arises how to put an end to these quarrels and disputes which have poisoned our society. On this topic, I am reading to you a written speech of Hazrat Maulana Muhammad Ashraf Ali Thanawi رحمة الله عليه which contains a golden principle. If people act upon this principle, it is hoped that causes of quarrels and disputes will be eliminated at least to the extent of seventy-five percent. That principle is as under:

"Do not entertain any hopes from the people of the world. If you act upon this advice the idea of quarrels and controversies will not bother you".

People generally complain against others that they did not pay proper regard to them or did not compensate for the good turns done to them or so many other defaults on their part. On recalling such lapses, a natural feeling of hatred and malice is born which ultimately leads to tension and strained relations. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has advised that if such complaints ever arise against anyone, then the matter should be settled by personal contact with the person concerned, instead of harbouring feelings of malice against him which ultimately leads to enmity.

Do not entertain hopes from anyone

Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has advised to uproot quarrels and disputes by ensuring that you entertain no hopes from anyone. After all, what is the use of expecting anything from your fellow men? The source from which you can hope something good and desirable is Almighty Allah and not these worldly-wise men. From them you should expect only harm and distress. If by chance you receive something good from them, thank Allah for that. In case you encounter some evil from them, then think that you expected nothing but evil. As a result of this trend of thought neither malice, nor enmity, nor hatred will be born in the hearts.

Do not intend to take revenge

Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has also advised another principle in this behalf. If you do some good turn to anyone, like helping him, showing him due regard, recommending him to someone or the like, always think that you have done only for the pleasure of Allah and to ameliorate your own Hereafter and for no other purpose. If you do some good to anyone with this intention, you will not expect any compensation from him. In such a situation, if you have done some good to anyone and he does not acknolwedge that good, nor does he compensate you for that, you will harbour no ill-will against that person, because whatever good you did to him you did it only for the pleasure of Almighty Allah. If we act upon these two principles, we shall succeed in uprooting all the whims of quarrels and disputes from the society. In this way we shall also be acting upon the Hadith of the Holy Prophet ﷺ or that he ﷺ has taken upon himself the responsibility of the allotment of a house in the middle of Paradise to one who forgoes some right only to avoid mutual quarrels and disputes."

I have seen with my own eyes that my respected father, Mufti Muhammad Shafi Sahib رحمة الله عليه that he acted upon this Hadith during his whole life. He abandoned very valuable rights of his only to avoid quarrels and disputes. I am relating to you an event concerning him which will hardly be regarded as credible. The Darul-Uloom of Korangi was first opened in a small building in Nanakwara. With the expansion of the Darul-Uloom the building was inadequate. A large plot of land was requried. With the help of Allah a very large and spacious plot became available in the middle of the city on which stands today the Islamia College and in which also lies the grave of Hazrat Allamah Shabbir Ahmad Usmani رحمة الله عليه. This spacious plot was allotted for the Darul-Uloom, its possession was taken over and a room was construced on it and the relevant papers relating to this plot were also obtained. A telephone connection was also installed. On the occasion of its foundation-laying ceremony an assembly was held in which renowned Ulama from all over Pakistan participated. During this assembly, some people created a quarrel and claimed that the plot should not be allotted for the Darul-Uloom. They had raised this objection along with certain respectable personalities for whom my respected father رحمة الله عليه had great regard. My father tried his best to settle this dispute, but he did not succeed in his efforts. He رحمة الله عليه thought that there would hardly be any blessings in an institution which started with a quarrel and dispute. He, therefore, decided to abandon that plot.

I do not see any blessing in it

The Administration of the Darul-Uloom did not appreciate this decision. They said that it was not wise to leave that valuable plot in such a suitable site when all its rights had been legally transferred to the Darul-Uloom and its possession had also been taken legally. My respected father رحمة الله عليه said that the Managing committee of the Darul-Uloom, having become the owner of the plot, he could not force it to abandon it. If it so desired it could construct the building of the Darul-Uloom on the plot, but he could not be a party to it. He told them that a Madrasah opened on a disputed plot could not be a source of blessing. He رحمة الله عليه also mentioned to them the Hadith in which the Holy Prophet ﷺ has assumed responsibility for the allotment of a house in the middle of Paradise to a person who forgoes a right due to him to avoid quarrel and controversy. It is difficult to cite in these days an example of a man who has abandoned such a valuable plot to avoid quarrel and litigation. This sacrifice is possible only from one who has firm belief in the truth of the Hadith of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. Thereafter, very soon, by the grace of Allah, a plot many times larger than the disputed plot became available on which the Darul-Uloom is standing today. I have mentioned to you this event only as an example, otherwise I have always seen my respected father رحمة الله عليه acting upon this Hadith throughout his life. It is however quite another matter if some other person involves us in a litigation and there is no alternative except self-defence. We have become used to noticing small things and making them an excuse for quarrelling and fighting. Today this trend has ruined our entire society. These quarrels and disputes destroy man's religion, faith and his inner integrity. I therefore, appeal to all to put an end to mutual quarrels and differences and to try establishing peace between two Muslims if they see them quarrelling and fighting to your best capabilities.

It is an act of charity to make peace

عن ابی هريرة رضی الله عنه قال قال رسول الله صلی الله عليه وسلم كل سلامی من الناس عليه صدقه كل يوم تطلع فيه الشمس يعدل بين الاثنين صدقة ويعين الرجل فی دابته فيحمله عليها اويرفع له عليها

متاعه صدقة والكلمة الطيبة صدقة وبكل خطوة يمشيها الى الصلاة صدقة ويميط الاذى عن الطريق صدقة(مسند احمد جلد ٢ ص ٣١٦)

Hazrat Abu Hurairah رضی الله عنه has narrated that the Holy Prophet ﷺ said: Man is bound to offer a Sadaqah (alms-giving), one for every joint of his body for every day in which the sun rises. (There being three hundred and sixty joint in the human body, it is binding on everyone to offer three hudnred and sixty alms every day). It is a (alms) to make peace between two persons. Similarly it is a صدقة (Sadaqah) to help a man to get on his riding animal or to help a man in loading some bundles on his beast of burden. It is also a صدقة Sadaqah (alms) to utter a word of solace or a pleasing word to a man in his distress or grief. Every step that you are taking on your way to the mosque is a صدقة Sadaqah. It is also a Sadaqah to remove from the path something which is a cause of trouble and hurdle to the wayfarers.

The first thing which has been described in this Hadith as صدقة Sadaqah (alms) is to make peace between two Muslims. This shows that this act carries a great reward and recompense from Almighty Allah.

A marvel of Islam

وعن ام كلثوم بنت عقبة بن ابی معيط رضی الله عنها قالت سمعت رسول الله صلی الله عليه وسلم يقول ليس الكذاب الذی يصلح بين الناس فينمی خيرا او يقول خيرا (صحيح بخاری، كتاب الصلح، باب ليس الكذاب الذی يصلح بين الناس)

Hazrat Umm-e-Kulsoom رضی الله عنها is a female Companion and a daughter of 'Aqbah bin Abi Mu'eet and the latter was an arch enemy of the Holy Prophet ﷺ and a confirmed Mushrik (polytheist). He was a Mushrik like

Abu Jahal and Umayyah bin Abu Khalaf who always teased and tortured the Holy Prophet ﷺ. He was that person whom the Holy Prophet ﷺ cursed, saying:

اللهم سلط عليه كلبامن كلابك (فتح الباری جلد ٤ ص ٣٩)

O Allah! Impose on him one of your beasts.

Allah accepted this curse of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. He was at last killed by a lion. On one side the father was such a deadly enemy of Islam. What a contrast that his daughter Umm-e-Kulsoom رضی اللہ عنہا whom Allah granted the wealth of Eeman and she became a Sahabiah (female Companion) of the Prophet ﷺ.

Such a man is not a liar

Hazrat Umm-e-Kulsoom رضی اللہ عنہا has narrated that she heard the Holy Prophet ﷺ saying: That man is not a liar who conveys some remarks from this side to that side or conveys a word from one person to another person in such a way that both are drawn together and the hatred between them is removed. In other words, the man is saying something which does not appear to be quite true, yet he is saying that with the intention of eliminating hatred between two Muslims. Such a peace - maker will not be treated as a liar.

An open lie is not lawful

The Ulama have said that it is not lawful to tell an open lie. It is, however, lawful to say something in an ambiguous way so that its apparent meaning is contrary to the fact, but the meaning conceived in the speaker's heart represents the truth.

Take an example. Suppose Amjad and Aslam are opponents and bitterly hate each other from the cores of their hearts. One named, Ahmad, calls on Amjad and the latter begins to speak ill of his opponent Aslam. In order to pacify their enmity and hatred and to bring them nearer Ahamd tells Amjad that Aslam is not an opponent of the latter, but is his well-wisher, because he was praying for Amjad's well-being, health and prosperity. Ahmad conceived in his heart that he heard Aslam uttering the words اللهم اغفر للمومنين (O Allah, forgive the beleiver). Amjad too, being a believer he, according to Ahmad, also got included in these words of prayer. This will make Amjad inclined to beleive that Aslam was really his well-wisher. To say such things to make two opponents friends cannot be regarded as lies. Instead, this plan may earn him Allah's appreciation and recompense.

Speak out good words

When a servant of Allah goes out with the intention of making peace between two Muslim brothers for the pleasure of Allah, Almighty Allah inspires into the heart of the peace-maker words which may establish peace between the two opponents. Words which may add fuel to the fire should never be uttered. This is highly abhorrent to the Holy Prophet ﷺ.

The importance of peace-making

You may have heard the well known saying of Hazrat Sheikh Sa'di رحمۃ اللہ علیہ :

دورغِ مصلحت آمیز بہ از راستی فتنہ انگیز

A lie which is told to promote a good cause is better than telling a truth that promotes mischief and disturbance.

It is, however, not the intention that an open lie should be told. Ambiguous words capable of being interpreted in different ways should be used. When the Holy Prophet ﷺ has allowed to speak such words, you may realise how important it is to establish peace between two Muslims.

Hazrat 'Ayeshah رضی اللہ عنہا has narrated that once the Holy Prophet ﷺ was presnet in the house when he heard the voices of two men who were quarrelling with each other. The cause of the quarrel was that one of them had borrowed money from the other and the lender was asking the debtor to return the loan. The debtor was explaining his inability to repay the entire loan. He was ready to pay a part of it and was requesting the lender to forgo the balance. At this the lender replied that, by Allah, he could not do that. The Holy Prophet ﷺ heard it and came out of his house and inquired: where is the man who is swearing by Allah that he will not do a good turn ? The man came forward and agreed to accept whatever the debtor was able to pay and leave the balance.

See the difference. This Companion رضی اللہ عنہ was not prepared to forgo any part of his loan and had sworn by Allah that he would not allow any concession to the debtor. As for the Holy Prophet ﷺ, neither he ﷺ commanded the lender to forgo the loan nor did he advise him to do so. He ﷺ only inquired about the man who was swearing by Allah not to do a good turn. This inquiry put an end to the entire quarrel and the lender at once became kind to the debtor. The Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم were so much devoted and obedient to the Holy Prophet ﷺ that they dared not ignore his commands in the slightest degree.

May Almighty Allah bestow on us some part of this enthusiasm by His grace, and put an end to the quarrels, differences and fighting going on among the Muslims and enable them to discharge one another's rights. Aameen!

THE MANNERS OF VISITING PATIENTS

اما بعد!

فاعوذ بالله من الشيطان الرجيم، بسم الله الرحمٰن الرحيم

عن البراء بن عازب رضى الله عنهما قال امرنا رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم بسبع عيادة المريض واتباع الجنائز و تشميت العاطس و نصر الضعيف وعون المظلوم وافشاء السلام وابرارالمقسم (صحيح بخارى كتاب الاستئذان باب افشاء السلام)

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him, and seek His help and His forgiveness. We believe in Him, and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Allah from the evils of our selves and the vices of our deeds. There is none to misguide him whom Allah guides and there is none to guide him whom He let go astray. I bear witness that there is no god but Allah, the only One Who has no partner. I also bear witness that our Sire, our authority, our Prophet, and our Master, Muhammad ﷺ, is His servant and His Messenger. May Almighty Allah send His mercy on him, his household and his Companions رضی اللہ عنہم and may He bless and salute them all in great abundance.

Seven acts

Hazrat Barra'a bin 'Azib رضی اللہ عنہ has narrated that the Holy Prophet ﷺ has commanded us to do seven acts:

1. To visit a sick person;
2. To follow funeral processions;
3. To utter یرحمک اللہ (may Allah have mercy on you) in reply to الحمد للہ (All praise to Allah), by the person who sneezes;
4. To assist a weak person;
5. To assist a person who has been wronged;
6. To spread the salutation (Salam) and
7. To cooperate with a person in the fulfilment of his oath, if he takes an oath for doing something.

All these seven acts which the Holy Prophet ﷺ has included in this Hadith carry great importance. It is therefore, among the etiquettes of a Muslim's life that he should observe carefully these rules of etiquettes. Therefore I am going to discuss these seven acts in some detail. May Almighty Allah help us all in acting upon them. Aameen!

It is a form of worship to visit a sick person

The first act which the Holy Prophet ﷺ has prescribed is to visit a sick person. This is also one of the rights due to a Muslim. This is an act which we are all doing. There may hardly be a person in the world who has not visited a sick person to inquire after his health. This is, however, generally done as a mere formality and as a custom. The people fear that if this formality is not observed, there will be complaints. In such a state, if a man visit a sick person, he does so only to observe a formality and his action has no sincerity in it. The act of visiting a sick person, to which the Holy Prophet ﷺ has referred in the Hadith means that the visit which is paid should be for pleasing Almighty Allah. It should be in all sincerity and with the intention of reaping the reward from Allah. The virtues and excellence promised in the Hadith relate to this way of visiting a sick person. This alone carries reward and goodly return from Almighty Allah.

To visit a sick person in compliance with the Sunnah

You are going to visit a sick person with the expectation that the person will pay you a return visit when you fall sick some day. In case he fails to return your visit, you too will not visit him, if he falls sick in future. Such a visit, being a reciprocal visit carries no credits, rewards or recompense. A man who pays this visit only for the pleasure of Allah, does not think of any return. He pays this visit only to please Almighty Allah and to obey the injunctions contained in the Ahadith of the Holy

A weapon of Satan

Satan is a great enemy of ours. He has succeeded in destroying our worship and devotion. If we indulge in our worship with sincere intention and will, we shall receive from Almighty Allah great reward which will ultimately accumulate into a great deposit and store for us in the Hereafter. Satan however, does not desire this to happen. He spoils our intentions in many of our acts of worship. For example, it is a matter of great reward from Allah to preserve contacts and nice dealings with our relatives, friends, colleagues and to behave nicely with them and exchanging gifts with them. These activities form a part of our Deen (faith) with which Almighty Allah is highly pleased. Allah has promised great rewards for all these social activities. Satan however, intervenes between all these good turns with the result that man starts thinking in terms of return and compensation. For example, why should I send a gift to a man who never sent one to me? Why should I send him a marriage gift when he did not send me any? Indeed I will behave with people as they behave with me. This is Satan's training. Thus, on account of Satan's seductions we have deprived ourselves of the reward and righteousness of exchanging gifts, mutual visits and maintaining cordial relations all acts which the Holy Prophet ﷺ has highly praised and recommended as sources of great reward and recompense. Satan has by his clever strategy, destroyed all these social dealings. We see that exchange of gifts and visits are now based on customs and formalities. This is not the meaning of maintaining true and cordial relationship.

The reality of maintaining blood relationship

صلہ رحمی or maintenance of cordial blood relationship means doing your part of the deed without thinking what the other party is doing to you, The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said on this issue:

ليس الواصل بالمكافى لكن الواصل من اذاقطعت رحمه وصلها

(صحیح بخاری کتاب الادب، باب لیس الواصل بالمکافی)

That man is not doing his duty in maintaining good relationship who looks for similar return and compensation. In fact, a man doing full justice to the virtue of صلہ رحمی (maintenance of good relationship) is the fellow who insists on maintaining good relationship in spite of the fact that the other party is breaking this relationship and misbehaving with his close relatives. Similarly, there is a man who sends gifts and pays friendly visits to some relatives exclusively to please Allah without looking for any return from the other side. This is because, gifts and visits should be exchanged among relations and near and dear ones for no other purpose but for pleasing Almighty Allah and in observance of Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. Maintenance of cordial relationship is a form of worship and should be viewed from this angle. It should not be linked with the measure of response from the other side. When we offer prayers, observe fasts, etc. do we care what others are doing? Everyone's deeds will go with the doer. So is the case of cordial relationship صلہ رحمی. You are therefore advised to do full justice to the maintenance of relationship and to visit sick persons without prejudice of whether the others do for you.

The excellence of visiting sick persons

According to a narration of the Holy Prophet ﷺ paying visits to sick persons occupies a very eminent place among the various forms of worship. The Hadith runs thus:

ان المسلم اذا عادا خاه المسلم لم يزل فى خرفة الجنة حتى يرجع

(صحيح مسلم كتاب البر و الصلة، باب فضل عيادة المريض)

When a Muslim visits another sick Muslim brother, he remains in a garden of Paradise as long as he remains with his sick brother and until he parts with him.

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in another Hadith:

مامن مسلم يعود مسلما غدوة الا صلى عليه سبعون الف ملك حتى يمسى وان عاده عشية الا صلى عليه سبعون الف ملك حتى يصبح و كان له خريف فى الجنة (ترمذى كتاب الجنائز، باب عيادة المريض)

When a Muslim visits his sick Muslim brother in the morning, seventy thousand Angels pray for his salvation from morning till evening. If he visits the sick person in the evening, seventy thousand Angels pray for his salvation from evening till morning and Almighty Allah appoints for him a garden in Paradise.

Try to secure the prayers of seventy thousand Angels

Is this an ordinary reward and recompense? Your visit to a sick neighbour of yours while sitting with him for a short time can earn you such a magnificent reward. Will you still care to know whether this neighbour visited while you were sick? If he could not secure this magnificent reward, nor the prayer of seventy thousand Angels, nor the garden in Paradise, will you say that you too do not want to obtain these rewards and blessings? Just see how easy has Almighty Allah made the earning of this reward and recompense! It is a windfall indeed. So make it a regular routine to visit sick persons, without considering whether any of them had or had not visited you when you were sick.

What to do if one is displeased with the sick person?

If you are not on friendly terms with the sick person and do not feel inclined to visit him due to ill-will against him, even then visit him to inquire after his health. This will entitle you to a double reward - a reward for visiting a sick person and another for visiting a person for whom you had some feeling of hatred and avoidance in meeting him. To visit a sick person is not an ordinary act of righteousness. For Allah's sake, do not lose this virtue and its reward for the sake of customs and formalities so widely prevalent in the society now. Make it a point to visit sick people in compliance with the command and Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ to seek the pleasure of Almighty Allah.

Let your visit to the sick person be brief

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has taught us some rules of etiquette for visiting a sick person. There is not a single walk of life about which he ﷺ has not given us detailed injunctions. It is regrettable that today not only have we totally forgotten them but we have also excluded them from our self-made etiquettes of life. On account of this lapse on our part, our present life has turned into a torment. If we revert to the golden rules of etiquette taught by the Holy Prophet ﷺ, our life will soon turn into Paradise. While teaching the etiquette about visiting a sick person, the Holy Prophet ﷺ has said:

If anyone of you pays a visit to a sick person, it should be brief.

The visit may not cause inconvenience to the sick person. Before going to him you should consider if the time of your visit is not the time when the man may be taking rest in his bed or be among his family, or inconvenient to him. You must find out the suitable hours for visiting a sick person.

It is contrary to the Sunnah

When you visit a sick person do not prolong your visit. This may be inconvenient to him. By nature man prefers to be informal in his modes of life but he cannot maintian this ease and informality in the presence of visitors. For example, on such occasions he cannot lie down freely on his bed, nor can he talk to his family freely. Your visit to this sick person is to earn reward and the performance of virtuous deed and not to distress him. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has therefore, advised us not to cause inconvenience and distress to the sick. Sit with him for a short interval, inquire after his health according to the way taught in the Sunnah, then take leave of him. Do not stick to the sick perosn for long, nor create inconvenience and hindrance in his rest and movements. This kind of visit is contrary to the Sunnah. Instead of attracting mercy such a tedious visit may turn into a sin.

An incident with Hazrat Abdullah bin Mubarak رحمة الله عليه

Hazrat Abdullah bin Mubarak رحمة الله عليه was one of the great Sufi, Muhaddis and Faqeeh (Jurists). Once he fell ill.

As Allah had graced him with a very high position, he had to face a large number of visitors during his illness. There was an endless line of his friends and well-wishers who came to see him and went back after inquiring about his health. Among them was a man who stuck to the Sufi رحمة الله عليه and did not like to move from the place. When his stay became inconvenient to the Sufi, he wanted to express his distress to the visitor indirectly. He therefore addressed him, saying:

In addition to the pains I am enduring I have to suffer a great deal at the hands of these visitors who neither choose an appropriate time for their visits nor do they care for the convenience of the sick person. The man still did not understand the Sufi's intention and his indication. In reply that person said: Indeed, these visitors are causing inconvenience and distress to you. If you permit me I should close the door after these visitors. Hazrat Abdullah bin Mubarak رحمة الله عليه asked him to close the door, not from the inside but from the outside.

There are persons who cause inconvenience to others, but do not at all realize it.

Choose an appropriate time to visit a sick person

Visiting a sick person is indeed a good turn, but it does not mean that thereby one should satisfy his own fancy. The very purpose of the visit is defeated if distress is caused to the sick person. Expression of love requires a little sense and understanding. It is no love but it is enmity to cause distress to anyone in the name of love. It is nothing but teasing and torturing the sick person if anyone visits him at dead of night or at the noon time which is the time when a man takes rest and lies down on his bed. So, before visiting a sick person use your intellect and avoid giving trouble. The Masnoon way of visiting a sick person is when no inconvenience is caused to him. That is why the Holy Prophet ﷺ has advised that the duration of the visit should be brief.

A free and intimate friend may remain with the sick person longer

There are some very intimate and informal friends of the sick person in whose presence he finds relief and solace. There is no harm if such friends stay with the sick longer.

Hazrat Mian Asghar Husain Sahib رحمة الله عليه was a teacher of my respected father رحمة الله عليه. Once Mian Sahib رحمة الله عليه fell sick. My father visited him in his sickness in the Masnoon way. He saluted him, inquired after his health and after three or four minutes asked for permission to leave him. Mian Sahib رحمة الله عليه asked my father if it was for him that he had learnt the principle of visiting a sick perons, viz. من عادتكم فليخفف (make your visit to the sick brief). Mian Sahib رحمة الله عليه explained to my father رحمة الله عليه, saying: this principle is not applicable to those in whose presence the sick person finds comfort and solace. He then asked my father رحمة الله عليه to stay there longer and the latter obeyed the order.

Anyway, one and the same principle does not apply on every occasion. The visit may be longer or shorter according to the need of the occasion.

Pray for the sick person

The other rule of etiquette for visiting a sick person is that after saluting the visitor should first inquire after the health of the sick person to know in brief his condition. After this inquiry, the visitor should pray for the welfare and recovery of the sick person, in the words taught by the Holy Prophet ﷺ which are :

لَا بَأْسَ طَهُوْرٌاِنْ شَاءَ اللهُ (صحيح بخارى، كتاب المرض، باب مايقال للمريض)

This sickness will cause you no trouble; it will Allah willing-be a means of purging you of your sins.

This prayer has two aspects. Firstly, it assures the sick person that the sickness will purify him of sins and procure for him reward of the Hereafter. Secondly, it includes a prayer in favour of the sick person that his sickness may become a source of reward and recompense and an excuse for the forgiveness of his sins.

Sickness is a means of purging the sick person of his sins

You may have heard this Hadith in which the Holy Prophet ﷺ has said that Almighty Allah forgives a sin to compensate every injury, distress or pain a man suffers. That pain May be on account of the pricking of a thorn in his foot. He also raises the status of the sufferer. In another Hadith the Holy Prophet ﷺ has said:

الحمى من فيح جهنم(صحيح بخارى، كتاب بدء الخلق، باب صفة النار)

This fever is a portion of the heat of Hell.

(Sahih Bukhari)

The learned scholars have interpreted this in different ways. Some have said that the heat of fever is a substitute for men for the heat of Hell. This interpretation is also confirmed by other Ahadith. The intention is to say that the heat of fever borne by a man in this world will shield him against the heat of Hell which the man would have to bear in the Hereafter on account of his sins. This is confirmed by the prayer which the Holy Prophet ﷺ used to recite at the time of his visiting a sick person i.e.:

لا باس طهور ان شاء الله

Do not worry; this fever Allah willing will become a means of purging you of your sins.

An act to obtain cure from a disease

It is the third rule of the etiquette of visiting a sick person that the following act should be done, provided that the occasion is appropriate and it is not likely to cause inconvenience to him. Place your hand on the forehead of the man and recite this prayer:

اللهم رب الناس مذهب البأس اشف انت الشافى لاشافى الا انت شفاء لا يغادر سقما (ترمذى، كتاب الجنائز، باب ماجاء فى التعوذ للمريض)

O Allah, the Lord (Rabb) of all the people, the solver of difficulties, bring cure to this sick person. It is only You and none other than You Who can grant cure - a cure which should leave no sickness uncured.

Those who do not remember this prayer (supplication) should memorize it and recite it for the sick person, if the occasion is appropriate.

A cure for all diseases

There is another prayer narrated from the Holy Prophet ﷺ which is shorter and easier to remember and according to the Holy Prophet ﷺ it is highly virtuous and beneficial. The prayer is as under:

اسئل الله العظيم رب العرش العظيم ان يشفيك (ابو داؤد، كتاب الجنائز، باب الدعاء للمريض عندالعيادة)

I beg Allah, the Great, the Lord of the Great Throne to grant you cure (from your disease). (Abu Dawood)

The Holy Prophet ﷺ is reported to have said that if anyone recites this prayer seven times during his visit to his sick Muslim brother, Almighty Allah shall grant cure to this sick brother provided that the appointed hour of his death has not arrived. There is none who can defer the time of death.

While visiting a sick person change your viewpoint

On reciting these prayers (supplications) one receives reward in three ways:

1- A reward that, while visiting the sick perosn, one acted upon the Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ, by repeating the same words which he ﷺ used to say.

2- A reward for expressing sympathy with a sick Muslim brother.

3- A reward for praying for the sick brother, as this act carries great reward.

Thus, see how virtuous is this small act ! We all pay visits to sick persons from time to time. While so doing, we should change our viewpoint and do this with the intention of acting upon the Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ and pleasing Almighty Allah. Also observe the etiquettes of visiting a sick person, viz., let your visit be brief and recite the prayers taught by the Holy Prophet ﷺ. By so doing, this small act of visiting a sick person will turn into a magnificent act of worship.

May Almighty Allah help us all to follow this Sunnah. Aameen!

What is Deen (faith)?

Our Dr. Abdul Hai Sahib رحمة الله عليه used to mention very useful things which is worthy of being impressed firmly on our hearts. He said: Deen (faith) is the name of changing the viewpoint. A slight change in this viewpoint will convert your world into Deen; all your worldly activities will turn into worship and secure for you the pleasure of Almighty Allah. This can be attained by doing two things. Firstly, purify and reform your intention. Secondly, in all that you do follow the path of the Sunnah. By following this simple formula, all your activities will become Deen (faith). This is achieved by attending on the righteous saints who change the viewpoint and the trend of thinking. This, in turn, changes the course of man's deeds and activities in the right direction. What was in the beginning a worldly affair has now become Deen (faith) and worship.

To visit a sick person with some gift

A new custom has developed in our society of taking some gift, e.g. fruit, sweets or biscuits, etc. for the sick person. Some consider this formality so binding that they do not visit the sick, if they do not find anything to offer as a gift. They think that their visit without gifts will not be appreciated neither by the sick person nor by his family. This is a custom by which Satan has deprived us of the great reward and recompense of visiting sick persons. It is neither an act of Sunnah, an obligatory nor compulsory duty to present some gift to the sick. I appeal to all to give up this custom for Allah's sake and refrain from depriving yourselves of the great reward and return for visiting the sick.

May Almighty Allah grant us all the right understanding of Deen and put us on the path of the Sunnah. Aameen!

ETIQUETTS OF BIDDING SALAM (SALUTATION)

الحمدلله نحمده و نستعينه ونستغفره ونؤمن به ونتوكل عليه ونعوذ بالله من شرور انفسنا ومن سيات اعمالنا من يهده الله فلا مضل له ومن يضلله فلا هادى له ونشهدان لا اله الا الله وحده لا شريك له ونشهد ان سيدنا و سندنا ونبينا ومولانا محمدا عبده ورسوله ...صلى الله تعالى عليه وعلى اله واصحابه وبارك وسلم تسليما كثيرا كثيرا

اما بعد!

فاعوذ بالله من الشيطٰن الرجيم بسم الله الرحمٰن الرحيم

عن البراء بن عازب رضى الله تعالى عنه قال امرنا رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم بسبع عيادة المريض واتباع الجنائز وتشميت العاطس ونصرالضعيف وعون المظلوم وافشاء السلام وابرار المقسم (صحيح بخارى كتاب الاستذان، باب افشاء السلام)

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him, seek His help and His forgiveness. We believe in Him, and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Allah from the evils of our selves and the vices of our deeds. There is none to misguide him whom Allah guides and there is none to guide him whom He let go astray. I bear witness that there is no god but Allah, the One Who has no partner. I also bear witness that our Sire, our Prophet, and our Master, Muhammad ﷺ, is His servant and His Messenger. May Exalted Allah send mercy on him, on his household and on his Companions رضی اللہ عنہم and bless them and salute them all in great abundance.

Seven commandments

Hazrat Barra-i bin ʿAzib رضی اللہ عنہ has narrated that the Holy Prophet ﷺ gave them seven commandments:

1- To visit a sick person ;
2- To accompany a funeral ;
3- To say یرحمك اللہ (May Allah have mercy on you) in response to a man who says (Praise to Allah) on sneezing.
4- To help a weak person :
5- To help one who has been wronged and oppressed ;
6- To spread among the people SALAM (salutation); and 7- To cooperate with a man, who swears for something, in the fulfilment of his oath.

We have already discussed by Allah's grace, the first five commandments. The sixth command consists in the virtue of popularising and spreading Salam (salutation) among the people and making it a point to bid Salam on meeting one another. The style of bidding Salam which Exalted Allah has prescribed for us stands distinguished from those prevailing among other nations of the world. Every community has invented for it some words for this purpose like "hellow", "good morning," "good evening" or "Namaste", "Namashkar", etc. They utter these words on meeting one another. As against these, the words which Exalted Allah and His Messenger ﷺ have prescribed for us are quite distinguished and outstanding from others. They are, السلام علیکم ورحمة اللہ وبرکاتہ (peace be on you and Allah's mercy and His blessings).

The benefits of bidding Salam

The words of salutation uttered by other communities on meeting one another carry no benefit for either side, neither for this world nor the Hereafter. On the other hand, if you use the Islamic words of Salam, you express three good wishes and blessings implied in these beautiful words, for the benefit of the person whom you greet. These are 'peace', 'Allah's mercy' and 'His blessings'. If Allah accepts these words of Salam which imply supplication, in favour of a Muslim, his life will become purified of his sins and vices. This will bring to both the parties peace and prosperity of this world and of the Hereafter. This unique advantage is not available in the words of greeting adopted by other communities of the world.

Salam* is a Divine gift

It occurs in a Hadith that when Exalted Allah created Hazrat Adam علیہ السلام, He commanded him to bid Salam to a group of the Angels sitting there, and to mind carefully the words which the Angels uttered in response to his Salam. It was because the words of response by the Angels would become his Salam and the Salam of his progeny. Accordingly, Hazrat Adam عليه السلام greeted the Angels with the words, السلام عليكم (peace be upon you) and the Angels returned this greeting by saying وعليكم السلام ورحمة الله (On you also peace and Allah's mercy). In his response the Angels added the words رحمة الله (Allah's mercy). (Sahih Bukhari).

That is how Exalted Allah conferred on us this blessing. The blessings contained in our style of Salam are too great and numerous to be imagined or counted. It will be very unfortunate on our part to teach our children "good morning" and "good evening" in imitation of other communities, in preference to the heavenly words of Salam taught by Allah. How awfully ungrateful, unfortunate and disappointing it is indeed!

Reward and recompense for bidding Salam

Salam will be complete by uttering only the words السلام عليكم, but it is better to utter the complete words السلام عليكم ورحمة الله وبركاته. These three words carry more reward and return. It occurs in a Hadith that once the Holy Prophet ﷺ was sitting in an assembly of the Companions رضى الله عنهم. A Companion رضى الله عنهم came and bade Salam with the words السلام عليكم ورحمة الله. After responding to this Salam, the Holy Prophet ﷺ said, "Ten". Thereafter, another Companion رضى الله عنهم came and bade Salam saying, السلام عليكم. The Holy Prophet ﷺ responded to the Salam and said, "Twenty". Then a third Companion رضى الله عنهم came and bade Salam, السلام عليكم ورحمة الله, On this the Holy Prophet ﷺ said, "Thirty". The intention of the Holy Prophet ﷺ was to tell the Companions رضى الله عنهم that by saying السلام عليكم a man receives ten virtues, by saying السلام عليكم ورحمة الله twenty virtues and by saying السلام عليكم ورحمة الله وبركاته he receives thirty virtues. However, the Sunnah of Salam is completed even by saying only السلام عليكم. Just see how these words contain supplication as well as reward and recompense. (Abu Dawood)

It is imperative that while bidding Salam, the words of Salam should be pronounced distinctly and nicely without distorting them. Some people do not mind this requirement. The words السلام عليكم should, therefore, be pronounced clearly and nicely and quite audibly.

The Nee'at (intention) for bidding Salam

You should note carefully that the words كلمه taught by the Holy Prophet ﷺ have been used in the plural number. But the words السلام عليك have been used in the singular number, as they are addressed only to one person. The words in the plural number السلام عليكم means: Peace be upon all of you, but the words in the singular number-- mean, "Peace be on you, (one person) only".

The learned scholars have given two reasons for this. Firstly, it carries more respect and regard to greet a person by a word in the plural number. Secondly, the man bidding the Salam should form in his mind the intention that he is addressing his Salam to three addressees, viz., the person being greeted and the two Angels who accompany eveyone at all times. They are called كراما كاتبين(Kiraman Katibeen). One of them records good deeds and the other records bad deeds. Thus, you will earn the reward for bidding Salam to three personalities. Moreover, you will secure the prayers of these two Angels whom Allah has created innocent.

The "intention" for Salam for concluding Salat (prayers)

The Ulama have therefore advised that, while bidding Salam in Salat (prayers), the Namazi should form the intention that in his right side Salam he is sending peace to all the Muslims and the Angels on his right. Similarly in his left side Salam, he is sending peace to all the Muslims and the Angels on his left. It is not possible that the Angels shall not respond to his Salam. They shall certainly respond to your Salam and in this way you shall become entitled to their prayer for you. Generally we bid Salam in our Salat unmindfully and become losers of this great benefit and reward.

Response to Salam should be better than the initial Salam

It is a matter of great reward to be the first to bid Salam. It is in fact an act of Sunnah to do so. It is also essential to respond to a Salam. The Holy Qur'an says:

When you are greeted with a greeting, respond to it with a better greeting or (at least) return it (in the same words). (4:86)

The example, if anyone greets you with the words السلام عليكم, you should respond to him with the words وعليكم السلام ورحمة الله وبركاته. This will make your response better than the Salam. If you do not do so you must atleast make your respond equal to the Salam by saying, وعليكم السلام.

Only one Salam is sufficient for a whole gathering

If a man visits an assembly of men, it is sufficient for him to bid only one Salam. It is also sufficient if anyone of the assembly responds to this Salam. It is not necessary at all that everyone sitting in the assembly should respond to the Salam of the visitor separately.

It is not lawful to respond to Salam on certain occasions

There are occasions when it is not lawful to respond to Salam, viz. when someone is asking another man some question about Deen (Faith), and others are attentively listening to the answer; When a man is reciting the Qur'an; or he is engaged in Zikr (remembrance of Allah's names). In other words, it is not desirable to bid Salam to a person who is busy with some work and it is feared that if he responds to the Salam he will be disturbed in his work. Bidding Salam has not been approved on such occasions.

To communicate Salam through another person

Sometimes Salam of one person is conveyed to another person by a third person. This too is an act of the Sunnah and a substitute for a direct, personal Salam. This too earns the virtues of the act of bidding Salam. In such an indirect Salam, the person receiving the Salam should respond to it by saying: عليهم وعليكم السلام (peace be upon them and upon you). This is the way prescribed in the Sunnah. This procedure contains two supplications (Du'as), one for each. It is, thus, a source of double reward.

Some men dispose of such Salam only by saying, "وعليكم السلام". The formality of responding to Salam is discharged, but this is not a correct response. This is because your response is for one person only, but there are two persons involved - one who has brought the Salam and the other who has sent it through the former. The right way of returning Salam in such a case is to say, عليهم وعليكم السلام (peace on them and on you).

Response to Salam received in writing

As for a Salam sent in writing in a letter, some learned scholars have advised that it is السلام عليكم ورحمة الله (essential) to accord a response to this Salam in writing, as it is essential also to send a reply to the letter. To ignore response to the Salam and the reply to the letter is as if someone bids you Salam, but you remain silent and made no response to it. Some other learned scholars have advised that it is not واجب (essential) to reply to this letter because it invovles postal charges which a man may not be able to pay. Even so, it is very desirable to reply to the letter. It is, however, واجب (essential) to respond to the Salam verbally on reading the words of the Salam written in the letter. If a man does not respond to the Salam even verbally at the time of reading the letter, nor does he give a reply to the letter, he will commit the sin of omitting a واجب (essential duty). How sad it is that we commit the sin of omitting a واجب, because of ignorance. We should, therefore, make it a point at least to make a verbal resposne to Salam whenever we receive a letter and read it.

How to bid Salam to a non-Muslim?

The respected Jurists have advised that it is not lawful to bid Salam to non-Muslims. However, if there is an occasion on which it becomes unavoidable to greet a non-Muslim, you may greet him with the words which the non-Muslims themselves use for greeting one another. If a non-Muslim greets a Muslim by uttering السلام عليكم you should respond to this by saying "عليهم" only, and should not utter the full Islamic words of Salam.

While so doing, you should pray in your heart that Almighty Allah may guide him to embrace Islam.

During the days of the Holy Prophet ﷺ a large number of Jews lived in Madinah Munaw-warah. Highly mischievous and malicious as they were, whenever, they faced the Holy Prophet ﷺ or the Noble Companions رضى الله عنهم they greeted them with the words, " السام عليكم", meaning, "Death be upon you and you may perish." Apparently this looked like a Salam or greeting, but in reality it was a curse. It was not long when the Noble Companions رضى الله عنهم realized this mischief on the part of the Jews. (Sahih Bukhari).

How a Jew bade Salam to the Holy Prophet ﷺ

Once a group of Jews called upon the Holy Prophet ﷺ and greeted him ﷺ with the words, السام عليكم. On hearing these words of curse Hazrat ʿAyeshah رضى الله عنها was highly enraged. She رضى الله عنها replied with the words "عليكم السام واللعنة" (May death and curse befall you). The Holy Prophet ﷺ heard this curt and angry reply of Hazrat ʿAyeshah رضى الله عنها and said: مهلا يا عائشة (O ʿAyeshah, stop-this and be polite).

Allah loves leniency and politeness in all matters.

Hazrat ʿAyeshah رضى الله عنها replied to this, saying: O Prophet ﷺ of Allah! How impertinent they are that they are addressing you with the words السام عليكم , whereby they are calling upon you the curse of death and destruction. The Holy Prophet ﷺ said: O ʿAyeshah! Did you not hear my response to them? I said: " وعليكم " My reply to them implied a prayer to Allah to accept their curse in their favour. So, we should greet a non-Muslim with the words " وعليكم ". Thereafter he ﷺ said:

يا عائشة:! ماكان الرفق فى شئ الا زانه ولا نزع عن شئ الاشانه

(صحيح بخارى، كتاب الاستئذان، باب كيف يرد على اهل الذمة السلام)

O ʿAyeshah رضی اللہ عنہا politeness adds decoration to the thing in which it is found. On the other hand, when it is taken away from that thing, it renders it ugly and defective.

Everyone, even if he is an unbeliever, should be treated with politeness and leniency (Sahih Bukhari).

Be polite as far as possible

Consider a bit how a Jew behaved so impertinently with the Holy Prophet ﷺ, and how Hazrat ʿAyeshah رضی اللہ عنہا paid him in the same coin. Although her رضی اللہ عنہا words were not unjust, yet the Holy Prophet ﷺ did not appreciate those words. He ﷺ advised her رضی اللہ عنہا to take to politeness in compliance with the Sunnah and to be brief and to the point, as it was not desirable to behave with anyone harshly and roughly.

Salam is a Duʿa (supplication)

Salam is not an ordinary act; it is a very sublime and effective Duʿa. It should be bidden and responded to with the intention of a Duʿa. If the Duʿa of a single man in our favour is accepted, all our problems will be solved because Salam possesses all the blessings of this world and of the Hereafter. It is a Duʿa for peace, Allah's mercy and His blessings. We should, therefore, always be on the lookout for this Duʿa from the people. This may be done with a burning desire and a heartfelt longing that perhaps Exalted Allah shall turn the words of the Duʿa into a source of blessings for us.

The state of Hazrat Maʿroof Karkhi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ

Hazrat Maʿroof Karkhi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ is one of the renowned friends of Allah (ولی) and the grand Sheikh of Hazrat Junaid Baghdadi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ. Hazrat Junaid Baghdadi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ was a spiritual successor to Hazrat Siri Saqti رحمۃ اللہ علیہ and the latter was a spiritual successor to Hazrat Maʿroof Karkhi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ. He always remained deeply absorbed in rehearsing Allah's name (i.e. in Zikr). Once, when he was getting his head shaved. At the time of shaving his moustaches, the barber saw that his tongue and lips were in motion. The barber requested Sheikh رحمۃ اللہ علیہ to keep his mouth shut for a few moments to enable him to shave his moustaches. The Sheikh رحمۃ اللہ علیہ asked the barber to do his job. This is how the Sheikh's tongue was always occupied with rehearsing Allahs' name.

An event that happened with Hazrat Maʿroof Karkhi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ

It is written about him that when he was going along a road he saw that a water-carrier was supplying water to the people to drink and was at the same time crying: May Alalh have mercy on him who drinks my water. Hazrat Maʿroof Karkhi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ approached that water-carrier and asked him for a glass of water. The man supplied the Sheikh رحمۃ اللہ علیہ water and he drank it. A man who was accompanying the Sheikh reminded him that he was fasting but he broke his fast by drinking water. The Sheikh رحمۃ اللہ علیہ explained his conduct saying: The man was praying to Allah for showing His mercy to him who drank his water. I broke my fast by drinking his water in the hope that, who knows, Allah may accept his duʿa in my favour. It was an optional fast which I can compensate later on, but I am not sure if I shall get another chance for his Du'a. That is why I broke my optional fast.

Now consider how such a great Wali, Sufi and Saint broke his fast to avail himself of the Du'a of such an ordinary water-carrier. Why was it so? This was because these godly men ever remained on the lookout for Du'as in the hope that some may be granted in their favour.

Instead of Thanks one should say جزاکم اللہ
(May Allah reward you)

That is why in our Deen-ul-Islam, a Du'a has been prescribed almost for every occasion, for example, say :-

یرحمک اللہ(May Allah have mercy on you) in response to a person who sneezes and says

السلام علیکم(peace may be on you) when you meet anyone;

جزاکم اللہ(may Allah reward you) when someone does good to you;

It has become a common custom to say, "Thank you very much," to express gratitude, when someone does some good turn to us. There is no objection to this expression; it is rather desirable. It occurs in a Hadith:

من لم یشکر الناس لم یشکرا للّٰہ

One who does not thank a man, does not thank Allah.

It should however be noted, that it is much better to include some Du'a in favour of the person being thanked. This Du'a may be of some benefit to him. Do the words, "Thank you very much" provide any benefit and relief to the person being thanked either in this world or in the Hereafter. Of course none! As for the words السلام علیکم, these contain a Du'a in favour of the person concerned. As mentioned earlier, Islam has advised its followers to try to provide for others and secure for themselves Du'a at every step. This practice should be made a regualr habit and daily routine. Let everyone learn these useful words of Du'a and teach them to his children also.

Response to Salam should be made in audible words

A person once put a question; should response to Salam be made in loud or low voice. The answer to this question is that response to Salam, being واجب (an essential duty), it is مستحب (desirable) and an act of Sunnah to make this response so loudly that it may be easily heard by the person who bade the Salam. If this response is made in so low a voice that the addressee cannot hear it the واجب (essential duty) will be dis-charged but the مستحب (desirability) will remain undischarged. It is, therefore, necessary to give response to Salam in a sufficiently audible voice.

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him, seek His help and His forgiveness. We believe in Him, and rely on Him. We seek refuge with

I bear witness that there in no god but Allah, the One Who has no partner. I also bear witness that our Sire, our Prophet, and our Master, Muhammad ﷺ, is His servant and His Messenger. May Exalted Allah send mercy on him, on his household and on his Companions رضی اللہ عنہم and bless them and salute them all in great abundance.

Hazrat Anas رضی اللہ عنہ - The personal attendant of the Holy Prophet ﷺ

Hazrat Anas bin Mailk رضی اللہ عنہ has narrated this Hadith. He is the Companion رضی اللہ عنہ who had, by the grace of Exalted Allah, the honour of serving the Holy Prophet ﷺ for a period of full ten years. During this period he remained in the service of the Holy Prophet ﷺ day and night. His رضی اللہ عنہ mother Umm-e-Sulaim رضی اللہ عنہا had left him رضی اللہ عنہ in the care and service of the Holy Prophet ﷺ when he was just a small boy.

He attained the age of sense and sensibility during the period of service under the Holy Prophet ﷺ. He رضی اللہ عنہ himself has admitted an oath that he served the Holy Prophet ﷺ for a period of ten years. During this whole period the Holy Prophet ﷺ neither at any time scolded him, nor beat him, nor did he express anger with him, nor did he ever raise any objection to some work which he did or failed to do. The Holy Prophet ﷺ brought him up with such care and affection. (Tirimizi.....Hadith No: 2016)

The affection of the Holy Prophet ﷺ

Hazrat Anas رضی اللہ عنہ has narrated: Once the Holy Prophet ﷺ sent me out to do some work. I left my house for this purpose, but saw that some boys were playing on the way, (being a small boy) I also joined the boys in the play, forgetting altogether that the Holy Prophet ﷺ had sent me out to do some work. I remembered this long after and became concerned about my default in my duty. When I came back, I saw that the Holy Prophet ﷺ had himself done the job with his own hands. He ﷺ did not even ask me why I had failed in my duty. (Sahih Muslim.....Hadith No: 2309)

Securing Du'as (supplications) from the Holy Prophet ﷺ in his favour Hazrat Anas رضی اللہ عنہ has the good luck of securing Du'as and good wishes of the Holy Prophet ﷺ for the services he rendered to him ﷺ. Once putting his sacred hand on his head, the Holy Prophet ﷺ prayed for him, saying: O Allah, bless him in the matter of his life span and his progeny. This prayer (Du'a) was accepted in his favour. He رضی اللہ عنہ was the last of all the Companions رضی اللہ عنہما to die. It was he رضی اللہ عنہ who granted countless Muslims the honour of becoming Tabi'een (followers), by meeting and seeing him رضی اللہ عنہ. It was due to his long life that they could become Tabi'een. Hazrat Imam Abu Hanifah رحمۃ اللہ علیہ and Hazrat 'Amash رحمۃ اللہ علیہ each became a Tabi'ee by meeting Hazrat Anas رضی اللہ عنہ. So long did he live in this world ! As regards his pogeny, he رضی اللہ عنہ himself said that his sons and grandsons numbered over one hundred. (Shaih Muslim)

Translation of the Hadith

Hazart Anas رضی اللہ عنہ has narrated in this Hadith: It was the regular habit of the Holy Prophetﷺ that whenever anyone shook hands with him ﷺ, he never withdrew his hands. He ﷺ also did not turn away his face from the visitor unless the latter turned away his face. He ﷺ was also never seen stretching his knees before anyone, when he was sitting with others in an assembly.

The modesty of the Holy Prophet ﷺ

In this Hadith three atrributes of the Holy Prophet ﷺ have been mentioned:

1) In spite of his exalted status he ﷺ was so modest and unassuming in his nature, that if anyone met him ﷺ and shook hands with him ﷺ, he ﷺ never withdrew his hands unless the other person withdrew his hands;

2) The Holy Prophet ﷺ also did not turn away his face from the visitor unless the latter turned away his face, and

3) He ﷺ never stretched his knees in front of anyone.

It also occurs in other Ahadith that if anyone was talking to him, he ﷺ never interrutped the person during his talk and remained attentive to him as long as the man himself did not leave the place. Even if a weak old woman sought his help he ﷺ would not hesitate in going with her to help her in her need.

The style of the Holy Prophet ﷺ in handshaking

We are all duty-bound to act upon the Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. It is, however, another matter that some acts of this Sunnah are easy and some difficult to perform. For example, it looks somewhat difficult to act upon the Sunnah relating to withdrawing the hands and paying full attention to someone in converation. It is difficult for a busy person to do full jsutice to these acts of Sunnah, particularly when the other party is inconsiderate and devoid of sense and feelings about the needs and engagements of the other party whom they are boring with their endless idle talk. It is very difficult for a busy man to put up with the behaviour of such fellows. This becomes all the more difficult to tolerate such an embarrassing situation for a responsible personality like the Holy Prophetﷺ who had to bear on his shoulders the responsibilities of both the worlds, holy wars, gudiance and education of the Muslim Ummah, Propagation of Islam as well as looking after the adminstrative and political affairs of the new government established at Madinah Munaw-warah. It can be regarded only as a miracle of the Holy Prophet ﷺ who was able to cope with this situation with success.

It is an act of Sunnah to use both hands in handshaking

The first sentence of this Hadith solves two juristic problems. Firstly, it is an act of Sunnah to shake hands. The ahadith do not contain elaborate details about this Sunnah, but the Ulama have advised that both the hands should be used in handshaking. While dealing with this topic Imam Bukhari رحمۃ اللہ علیہ has mentioned in his Sahih Bukhari that Hazrat Hammad bin Zaid رضی اللہ عنہ shook hands with Hazrat Abdullah bin Mubarak, رضی اللہ عنہ using both hands. He رحمۃ اللہ علیہ has cited in this behalf a statment of the latter to the effect that a man should use both hands in handshaking.

It is contrary to the Sunnah to use only one hand in handshaking Handshaking only with one hand has become a common fashion in our times as a result of the influence of English culture. On the other hand, the people of Saudi Arabia maintian with due emphasis that handshaking with one hand only is the act of Sunnah. This is not quite right. Our learned saints have interpreted the Ahadith to suggest that it is according to the Sunnah to use both hands in handshaking. According to them there is no Hadith to indicate that the Holy Prophet ﷺ ever shook hands using only one hand. There are, however, narratives about the etiquette of handshaking with both hands. The learned scholars have, therefore, advised that it is much nearer to the Sunnah to perform handshaking with both hands.

Hazrat Abdullah bin Masood رضی اللہ عنہ has narrated that the Holy Prophet ﷺ taught him "التحیات" in a way in which کفی بین کفیہ (i.e my hands were between the two palms of the Holy Prophet ﷺ). This shows that during the Prophet's time only this style of handshaking was in vogue. It is, therefore, nearer to the Sunnah to use both hands in handshaking.

If anyone does handshaking with only one hand, it cannot be said that it is unlawful or the Sunnah of handshaking has been ignored, yet the style nearer to the Sunnah should be adopted, as has been followed and recommended by the Ulama, Fupaha and the Saints.

Consider the suitability of the occasion before handshaking

Secondly, it needs to be noted that although it is an act of Sunnah, yet every Sunnah has a proper occasion and a suitable situation in which it can be followed with advantage and can be a source of reward. On the other hand, if the same Sunnah is followed at an improper time and occasion, it may result in a sin and attract punishment. For example, it is not right to shake hands with a person who may be put to some diffifulty and inconvenience by handshaking. It is unlawful to insist on this formality on such unsuitable occasions. Bidding Salam with the words السلام علیکم and responding to it are sufficient on such occasions.

This is not an occasion for handshaking

Take another example, you come across a man whose both hands are engaged with something which he is carrying. If you extend your hands towards him with the intention of handshaking, he will be very much disturbed and inconvenienced. He should he first release his hands by putting down his burden on the ground or what else, what should he do? To do handshaking on such occasions is no Sinnah; it is against Sunnah. To insist on handshakng on such occasions causes distress to others; this is a sin. This should be avoided.

Handshaking is a way of expressing affection.

This should be done only when it is expected to bring ease comfort and happiness to the person loved instead of causing him distress and inconvenience. Sometimesit so happens that when a righteous saint visits some placea whole army of his devotees rushes towards him to receive the blessings of shaking hands with him. They ignor the fact that this rush may cause him distress and harm. This is highly objectionable and improper.

It is a sin to shake hands on such occasions

This craze of handshaking is very commonly seen among the people in Bengal and Burma. If they attend the sermon of any Shaikh, they consider it imperative to receive the blessing of shaking hands with him.

At the conclusion of the sermon they rush towarads the Shaikh and assail him for his handshake without any consideration that such behaviour on their part may grievously harm th shaikh.

I saw this scene when I went to Bengal for the first time along with my respected father, Hazrat Mufti Muhammad Shafi Sahib رحمة الله عليه. My father رحمة الله عليه delivered his sermon to a huge assembly of listners, but at the end of the assembly, this whole assembly almost assailed my father for a hand shake. It was with great difficulty that my father was escorted safe from this unruly crowd of devotees.

This is not love but enmity

Once Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه delivered a sermon in the Surati Masjid of Rangoon (Burma). When the sermon ended, a large crowd of men rushed towards Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه for shaking hands that the Shaikh narrowly escaped from falling down and being injured. This conduct is not a formal show of affection. The emotion of love also requires some intellec, so that the person loved may be meted out a sympatheti dealing that he may remain safe from distress and injury.

An event of extremism in the expression of devotedness

Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has related in his collection of sermons the story of a godly man who happened to visit some town. The inhabitants of that town were so sincerely devoted to that saint that they could avail themselves of his blessings for ever. For this purpose they planned to kill him and bury him in a grave in their midst.

Such mad and irrational expression of devotional enthusiasm has nothing to do with Deen (faith). Real devotedness is that which provides ease and comfort to the person loved. It should also be kept in view whether or not the occasion is suitable for handshaking. It is more virtuous and rewarding to avoid the observance of this etiquette when the hands of the person concerned are not free for handshaking.

Sins are shed by the virtue of handshaking

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in a Hadith that when two Muslims shake hands with each other with affection and sincerity, their sins fall off through their hands, by Allah's assistance and mercy. At the time of shaking hands, an intention should be made that through this virtue Allah shall forgive the sins of both the parties. On this occasion there should also be an intention that Exalted Allah may transfer the blessings of the hands of the the person desiring a handshake to the hands of the other person concerned. Such occasions generally arise for us when we assemble to listen to sermons of learned scholars and at the end of these sermons we wish to shake hands with them.

It is worthwhile to remember the advise of Dr. Abdul Hai Sahib رحمة الله عليه for such occasions. He has stated:

I feel highly pleased, when a large number of people assemble to shake hands with me. This is because they are all pious servants of Exalted Allah and, who knows, some of them may be a favourite of Allah. If the hands of this favourite servant touches my hands, it is most likely that Exalted Allah shall show mercy to me by virtue of the blessed hands of this favourite servants of Allah.

When a large number of men assemble to shake hands with an important man, the latter's mind is likely to be affected by pride and ego. The man is led to think that so many men desire to shake hands with him because of some attractive qualities in him and he has become a godly personality. On the contrary, the entire viewpoint becomes altered when the man welcomes handshaking in the hope that perhaps Exalted Allah shall show mercy to him and grant him salvation by virtue of the blessed hands of those desiring to shake hands. With this change in viewpoint, handshaking becomes a cause of modesty, humility and submissiveness instead of a cause of pride and arrogance. It is, therefore, necessary to form this "Intention" when going to shake hands with anyone.

A rule of etiquette for handshaking

As has been stated in the next sentence of the hadith that while shaking hands with anyone, the Holy Prophet ﷺ did not withdraw his hands, unless the other man withdrew his first. This provides another rule of etiquette about handshaking. While handshaking, one should not withdraw one's hands first. This is to avoid giving an impression to the other man that one is feeling disgusted with the handshaking or one is considering the other fellow as inferior. Shaking hands should always be done with good cheer happiness and without any show of hurry. You may, however, withdraw your hands, if the other fellow is insenible and is holding your hands for an unreasonable time.

A rule of etiquette for meeting someone

This Hadith describes another attribute of the Holy Prophet ﷺ that he did not turn away his face unless the other man turned away his face. This is also a Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ, although it requires great courage and striving to act upon this Sunnah. A man should, however, do his best to follow this Sunnah. However, he has permission to ignore it only in unavoidable situations.

A Strange event of visiting a sick person

It has been related about Hazrat Abdullah bin Mubarak رحمة الله عليه that during his fatal sickness people began to call upon him to inquire after his health. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has advised the Ummah about visiting a sick person as under:

من عاد منكم فليخفف

Hazrat Abdullah bin Mubarak رحمة الله عليه was lying on his bed when a man came and sat with him. He did not move from his seat, while others came and went away after short inquiries. Hazrat Abdullah bin Mubarak رحمة الله عليه anxiously waited for his departure, so that the may be free to do certain things with ease and convenience. He did not like to be rude to ask the man to go away. When his stay became unduly long and inconvenient to the Shaikh رضى الله عنه, he expressed his distress indirectly in these words: these visitors have become a source of torture to me and do not leave me free and at ease. The man was too stupid to understand the intention of the Shaikh by these words. Instead of leaving the place he asked the permission to close the door of the room to keep away other visitors. Hazrat

Abdullah bin Mubarak رحمة الله عليه allowed him to close the door not from inside but by going outside the room.

Anyway, sometimes we are compelled to behave in this way with insensible persons who do not mind others' ease and convenience. In ordinary circumsttances, we are called upon to behave with others nicely, so that they should not feel that they are being looked down upon, ignored and treated as inferior.

May Exalted Allah help us all to act upon these injunctions of the Sunnah. Aameen!

SIX VALUABLE PRACTICES

نحمده ونصلى على رسوله الكريم

اما بعد!

عن ابى جُرَيٍّ جابر بن سليم رضى الله عنه قال رايت رجلا يصدر الناس عن رأيه لا يقول شيئاً الا صدروا عنه قلت من هذا؟ قالوا رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم قلت عليك السلام يا رسول الله مرتين قال لا تقل "عليك السلام" فان عليك السلام تحية الميت قل السلام عليك قال قلت انت رسول الله؟ قال انا رسول الله الذى اذا اصابك ضر فدعوته كشفه عنك واذا اصابك عام سنة فدعوته انبتهالك واذاكنت بارض قفر اوفلاة فضلت راحلتك فدعوته ردها عليك قال قلت اعهدالى قال لاتسبن احدا قال فما سببت بعده حرا ولاعبدا ولا بعيرا ولا شاة ولا تحقرن شيئا من المعروف وان تكلم اخاك وانت منبسط اليه وجهك ان ذلك من المعروف وارفع ازارك الى نصف الساق فان ابيت فإلى الكعبين واياك واسبال الازار فانها من المخيلة وان الله لا يحب المخيلة

ذلك عليه (ابو داؤد، كتاب اللباس، باب ماجاء فى اسبال الازار، حديث نمبر ٤٠٨٤)

This is a lengthy Hadith which I have recited before you. Not only to the meanings of these blessed Ahadith contain light but their words also contain light. It is therefore, a ssource of blessings and virtue to recite and listen to Ahadith.

May exalted Allah help us all to understand and act upon them. Aameen!

The first contact of a Companion رضى الله عنه with the Holy Prophet ﷺ

In this Hadith Hazrat Jabir bin Sulaim رضى الله عنه has given an account of his first contact with the Holy Prophet ﷺ at a time when he did not even recognize him ﷺ..He has narrated as under:

> I saw a person to whom people turned in every matter and consulted him in every problem of theirs. The People became convinced of the truth of this replies. When I came to know that he was the Prophet of Allah, Muhammad ﷺ. I told myself that he was the Prophet of Allah ﷺ. I went near him and saluted him ﷺ with these words: O Prophet of Allah عليك السلام يا رسول الله (on you be peace). I uttered these words twice. He ﷺ asked me not to say عليك السلام but to say السلام عليك (peace be on you), because the words عليك السلام are meant to salute the dead. In orther words, for suluting the dead the word عليك Salam comes after the word (on you).

How to respond to Salam?

The Hadith means that to initiate Salam one should say السلام عليكم. The Hadith teaches us that to respond to Salam the words وعليكم السلام ورحمة الله (and on you be peace and Allah's mercy) should be uttered. That is, in reply to Salam the word عليكم should come first. If anyone responds to the words السلام عليكم by repeating the same words السلام عليكم, the reply will be all right, but the response prescribed in the Sunnah is وعليكم السلام. Now-adays it has become a common habit to respond to repeating the same words السلام عليكم. This is against the Sunnah.

It is essential (wajib) for both to make a response

Two men meet and greet each other simultaneously with the words السلام عليكم. In such a situation it is essential for both to respond to the Salam with the words وعليكم السلام.

This is because each of them initiated Salam at the same time and it became bidning on both to respond to the Salam.

The words of the Hadith are also important in the Shari'ah

This Hadith points out another basic fact of which the people are not aware. It is that the words and phrases of the Ahadith, as taught by Allah and His Prophet ﷺ are also important as are their meanings and spirit. Just see that the words "السلام عليكم" and "عليكم السلام" both mean one and the same i.e., peace be upon you, but in his ﷺ very first contact with Hazrat Jabir bin Sulaim رضى الله عنه the Holy Prophet ﷺ taught him رضى الله عنه that the correct way of greeting approved in the Sunnah is to say, "السلام عليكم." Why did he ﷺ do so? This was to clarify that it is no Shari'ah at all to have one's own way in following the Shari'ah. Shari'ah is the name of following the path appointed by Allah and His Prophet ﷺ.

Nowadays, people are heard saying that it is the spirit of the Shari'ah that really matters and we should not hanker after the words. We fail to understand how they are able to get at this spirit. The spirit as well as the letter both have their importance. Instead of saying السلام علیکم you may utter their Urdu equivalent:

سلامتی ہو تم پر

Peace be upon you

Although the sense and meaning of the Urdu expression are the same, yet the spirit, light and reward contained in the words prescribed by the Sunnah "السلام علیکم" are altogether absent in the Urdu expression.

To bid Salam is a symbol of the Muslims

Salam is a symbol of the Muslims by means of which they are distinguished from non-Muslims. Once I happened to visit China where a large number of Muslims live. As we did not understand one another's languages, it was not possible to express our feelings and emotions to one another. However, one thing was common between us and that was the words of Salam. Whenever I met a Muslim, he greeted me with the words "السلام علیکم ورحمة الله وبرکاته" and with these words he expressed his emotions. This was a blessing of following the Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. This Sunnah has welded together the entire Muslim community and has become a means of contact among them. Thus, the light and blessings of these words are not available in any other words. Nowadays it has become a fashion to greet one another with words like اداب عرض (Due regards) تسلیمات (salutations), سلام مسنون (the Salam of the Sunnah), etc. You must remember that these words do not bring you the light and reward of the Sunnah. Do you not see in this Hadith how the Holy Prophet ﷺ did not tolerate even a very slight change in the words of the Salam prescribed in the Sunnah?

An event concerning a Companion رضی الله عنه

The Holy Prophet ﷺ taught one of his Companions رضی الله عنهم a Du'a (supplication) and asked him to recite it before going to bed. Its words are:

امنت بکتابك الذی انزلت وبنبیك الذی ارسلت

I believe in the Book which You have revealed and in the Prophet whom You have sent.

After a few days the Holy Prophet ﷺ asked that Companion رضی الله عنه to recite the Du'a he ﷺ had taught him. The Companion رضی الله عنه recited the Du'a with a slight change in it, as under:

امنت بکتابك الذی انزلت وبرسولك الذی ارسلت

In this Du'a he substituted the word "نبی" for the word "رسول". The Holy Prophet ﷺ asked the Companion رضی الله عنه to recite the same words which he ﷺ had taught him, even though there was not considerable difference between the two words and the word رسول (messenger) is superior to the word "نبی" (Prophet). Nothwithstanding this, the Holy Prophet ﷺ insisted on the Companion رضی الله عنه to recite the words which he ﷺ had taught him.

Reward and recompense for following the Sunnah

Our Dr. Abdul Hai Sahib رحمة الله علیه, may Allah exalt his status, used to advise us as under:

You shall experience a world of difference in the effect of doing something according to your own choice and doing the same thing according to the method taught by the Holy Prophet ﷺ with the intention to follow his Sunnah. The light and blessing accruing to you in doing something according to the Sunnah will not accrue to you if you do that according to your own way and choice.

Events concerning the Tahajjud prayers of Hazrat Abu Bakr and Hazrat Umar Farooq رضی اللہ عنہم

It occurs in the Ahadith that the Holy Prophet ﷺ used to make rounds on nights to look after the conditions of the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم. On one of such nights when he ﷺ passed by Hazrat Siddiq Akbar رضی اللہ عنہ he was offering the Tahajjud prayer and was reciting the Holy Qur'an in a low voice. Thereafter, he ﷺ passed by Hazrat Farooq A'zam رضی اللہ عنہ. He was also offering the Tahajjud prayer, but he was reciting the Holy Qur'an loudly.

In the morning the Holy Prophet ﷺ sent for both of them. He ﷺ first asked Hazrat Abu Bakr رضی اللہ عنہ why he was reciting the Holy Qur'an in such a low voice. Hazrat Siddiq Akbar رضی اللہ عنہ replied, saying: اسمعت من ناجیت (I recited it to One whom I was entreating), so I was reciting the Qur'an in a low voice. When the Holy Prophet ﷺ asked Hazrat Farooq A'zam رضی اللہ عنہ why he was reciting the Qur'an so loudly he replied, saying: او اوقظ الوسنان واطرد الشیطان (I was awakening those who were sleeping and driving away Satan). After listening to the replies of both, the Holy Prophet ﷺ asked Hazrat Siddiq Akbar رضی اللہ عنہ ارفع قلیلا (Raise your voice a little). He ﷺ then asked Hazrat Farooq A'zam رضی اللہ عنہ اخفض قلیلا (Lower your voice a little).

Follow the ways I have taught you

Commenting on the interpretation of this Hadith, the commentators have written that it was the intention of the Holy Prophet ﷺ to make both these Companions رضی اللہ عنہم act upon this verse of the Holy Qur'an:

وَلَا تَجْهَرْ بِصَلَاتِكَ وَلَا تُخَافِتْ بِهَا وَابْتَغِ بَيْنَ ذٰلِكَ سَبِيْلًا (سورہ بنی اسرائیل: ۱۱۰)

(O Muhammad !) Be not loud-voiced in your worship, nor yet silent therein but follow a way in between. (17:110).

In other words, we have been commanded in this verse to follow a middle course in reciting the Holy Qur'an in our worship. Speaking on this topic, Hazrat Thanawi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ has said:

> Apart from what has been stated above, there is a great wisdom in the advice of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. The intention was to tell both these Companions رضی اللہ عنہم that so far they were following a way oı reciting the Holy Qur'an according to their own choice. The way they were to follow in future would be the way taught by the Holy Prophet ﷺ and that of the Sunnah. This would bestow upon them the light and blessings of following the Sunnah and entitle them to its reward and recompense.

This Hadith teaches us to mind carefully that when we commence any work, we should follow the way taught by the Holy Prophet Muhammad ﷺ, and should adopt, where necessary, the same words and expressions as taught by the Holy Prophet ﷺ. It is not enough to undertake some work with the intention that it has to be done in this way or that way, as we like.

I am a Messenger sent by Truthful Allah

Hazrat Jabir bin Sulaim رضی اللہ عنہ has narrated that when the Holy Prophet ﷺ taught him the way of bidding Salam, he ﷺ asked if he ﷺ was a Messenger of Allah. The Holy Prophet ﷺ replied to this question, saying:

I am a Messenger of that Allah that if some harm befalls you and you call Him for help Allah shall relieve you of that harm.

During the pre-Islamic days the people worshipped idols as their gods. They had, however, a good quality that when they faced some distress they called only Allah for help. The Holy Qur'an says:

When they get on board ship, they pray to Alalh, making their faith pure for Him only (29:65).

In other words, when these polytheists get on board and their ships were caught in sea storms, and found no way out, they forgot their idols; Lat, uzza, Manat, etc. At such a critical moment of danger, they turn to and call Exalted Allah alone for help and safety. In this Hadith the Holy Prophet ﷺ has said:

That he ﷺ is not a Messenger of these false gods, but he ﷺ is a Messenger sent by True Allah. Then he ﷺ further said:

I am a Messenger of that Alalh that when there is famine in the land and you call Allah to remove the famine Allah accepts your prayer and removes the famine. I am a Messenger from that Allah that when you are travelling in some desolate desert and your camel strays and you pray to Allah to bring back the camel, He responds to your prayer and brings back the straying camel.

We should seek advice from our seniors

Thereafter, Hazrat Jabir bin Sulaim رضی اللہ عنہ requested the Holy Prophet ﷺ to give him some advice. That is why the godly saints has taught us this principle that if anyone calls upon some senior person, particularly one who is well versed in religious matters, he should seek some advice from that saint. Sometimes the advice is very effective which changes the very spiritual trend and direction of the heart and brings a total transformation. The reason for this is not far to seek. When a man seeks advice with genuine sincerity, Allah guides the saint to give such advice to the needy person as is befitting and suitable for him. Remember that it is not the saint or the Sheikh himself who has the capacity to render real help to anyone, but it is only Exalted Allah Who is the genuine and ultimate fountain of goodness. However, genuine and a sincere and keen desire is needed to attract this divine assistance. So it is necessary to seek advice on visiting some godly man.

The first advice

While advising Hazrat Jabir bin Sulaim رضی اللہ عنہ, the Holy Prophet ﷺ said:

لا تسبنَّ احدا

Do not abuse anyone

It is an advice to refrain from uttering any such words or phrases as come within the definition of abusing or speaking ill of anyone. Mind you, this is the advice given by the Holy Prophet ﷺ in his first meeting with Hazrat Jabir رضی اللہ عنہ. This shows how important it is not to utter words to hurt the feelings and to pinch any person. A Muslim should not therefore commit this grievous sin of rending anyone's heart by uttering abusive words.

An event relating to Hazrat Siddiq Akbar رضی اللہ عنہ

Once Hazrat Siddiq رضی اللہ عنہ became angry with his slave and uttered some words of curse and abuse against him. On hearing those objectionable words the Holy Prophet ﷺ said:

لَعَّانِيْنَ وَصِدِّيْقِيْنَ كَلَّا وَرَبِّ الْكَعْبَةِ

It is not possible, by the Lord of the Ka'bah that a man should be a curser and Truthful at the same time.

See how sternly the Holy Prophet ﷺ warned Hazrat Abu Bakr Siddiq رضی اللہ عنہ in this matter and he رضی اللہ عنہ made good this wrong on his part by setting the slave free.

Hazrat Jabir رضی اللہ عنہ acted on this advice throughout his life

It is, therefore, not right to utter abusive words for anyone. Nowadays people have become used to uttering abusive words like خبیث (wicked), احمق (foolish), کمبخت (wretched), etc. Not only is it unlawful to use such abusive words for a Muslim, but it is also not good to use them even for animals. Hazrat Jabir رضی اللہ عنہ has said:

After hearing this advice I never used abusive words either for a slave or a freeman, or for any animal like a camel or a goat.

These were the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم who took it to their hearts when they heard any word of advice and included it in their life routine as long as they lived.

Hate the sin and not the sinner

This advice has another important aspect in its meaning. You are advised not to hate and condemn any man however great a sinner, errant disobedient or an evildoer he may be. So, you must not hate and condemn him. You do not know what is going to happen to him in the future. It is quite possible that Allah may guide him and put him on the path of righteousness before his death, by means of repentance and by his giving up his sins. It is quite possible that after death he may appear before Exalted Allah as a fully pardoned and purified servant. It is, therefore, imperative that you should not look down upon anyone, not even an unbeliever. Who knows if Allah may convert an unbeliever into a believer and he may become a better Muslim than we. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in a Hadith:

It is the ends and the final fate that matter.

That is, if a sinner and disobedient man dies as a believer and as a righteous man, he is a favourite of Allah and has superseded us in goodness and piety.

A wonderful account of a herdsman

At the time of the battle of Khaibar a herdsman, who used to graze the goats of the Jews called upon the Holy Prophet ﷺ. When he saw that the Muslims army was camping outside Khaibar, he desired to meet them and hear what they had to say and what they were doing there. Therefore, he went to the camp of the Muslim army and inquired about their commander. The Muslims told him that their commander was Muhamamd ﷺ who was in his tent. At first the herdsman did not believe in what he was told. He wondered how could such a great commander stay in such an ordinary tent. He thought that such a grand commander and ruler must be living in a highly exalted state with great pomp and show. What did he see there? It was a lowly tent erected with mats made of date-palm leaves. He entered that tent, met the Holy Prophet ﷺ and inquired about his mission and message. The Holy Prophet ﷺ put before him the message of Islam which was beleif in One Allah. He asked: What shall be my fate and status, if I embrace Islam? The Holy Prophet ﷺ replied to his inquiry saying:

> After embracing Islam you will beocme our brother and we shall embrace you.

On hearing this the herdsman said: You are joking. What a poor fellow like me has to do with a great commander like you! I am a black man clad in tattered rags, giving out bad smell. How can you embrace me in such a repulsive state of mine? The Holy Prophet ﷺ told him:

> I must embrace you. Exalted Allah shall change the black of your body into brilliant white. He shall also change the bad smell emanating from your body into fragrance.

Hearing these words he atone, embraced Islam and recited the کلمہ شہادت (the Article of Faith):

اشہدان لا الہ الا اللہ واشہدان محمد ا رسول اللہ

Thereafter, he asked the Holy Prophet ﷺ what he was to do next? The Holy Prophet ﷺ told him:

> You have embraced Islam at a time when neither it is prayer time that I should ask you to pray, nor is it the month of Ramazan that I should ask you to observe Fasting, nor is Zakat due for payment by you. At the moment there is only one worship and that is the Holy war (جہاد) in the path of Allah which is being conducted with the sword.

To this short discourse the herdsman replied: I will participate in this Jihad, but there are only two alternatives for a fighter - either victory or martyrdom. I request you to offer me some guarantee, if I am martyred in this Jihad. The Holy Prophet ﷺ said:

> I guarantee that if you attain martyrdom in this Jihad Exalted Alalh shall admit you in Paradise. Further, He shall change the bad smell of your body into fragrance. He will likewise change the black of your body into brilliant white.

Come back after returning the goats

As the goats in the charge of the herdsman belonged to a Jew, the Holy Prophet ﷺ told him:

> The goats under your charge belong to the Jews and are a trust with you. Go and return them to the owners.

Just consider that the properties of those with whom a war is being fought and who are under a siege is مال غنیمت (war-spoils). However, in this case, as the herdsman had brought those goats under a pledge with the owners the Holy Prophet ﷺ asked him to return the goats before taking part in the Jihad. The herdsman, therefore, returned the goats, joined the Jihad and became a martyr.

He was admitted into the Paradise

At the end of the battle the Holy Prophet ﷺ began a survey of the Muslim army. He ﷺ saw that the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم had assembled at a place. He ﷺ went there and asked them what was the matter. Among those martyred in the battle was the corpse of a person whom none recognized. When the Holy Prophet ﷺ saw that corpse, he ﷺ said to the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم:

> You do not recognize him but I recognize him. He is a herdsman. He is that unique servant who has not made a single prostration in the path of Allah. In spite of this I bear witness that Exalted Allah has admitted him direct into the Paradise of Firdaus. I am beholding with my eyes that the Angels are giving him a bath. The black of his body has turned into white. Similarly the bad smell emanating from his body has turned into fragrance.

It is the end and the final fate that matters

If this herdsman had met death a little before, he would have gone to Hell direct, but he died in a state when he had embraced Islam, and become a slave of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. Exalted Allah brought such a great revolution in his life. That is why it has been said: العبرة بالخواتيم (It is the ends and the final fate that matter). That is why great and renowned men of God always remain in fear for their end and pray to Allah for their good end and death on Eeman (Faith). There is nothing for a man to be proud and self-conceited, because none knows what is going to happen to him tomorrow. That is why we have been advised not to look down upon anyone.

An event full of morals concerning a pious man

The following is the story of a pious man which my respected father, Hazrat Mufti Muhammad Shafi Sahib رحمة الله عليه related to us.

A pious man was going somewhere along the road. Some men cut jokes with him as is the habit of men to ridicule and laugh at Maulawis and Sufis. A man asked that pious man by way of joke: Tell me if you are better or my dog? At this insulting question that pious man become neither angry nor irritated. He remained calm and cool and replied to that man, saying: I cannot say just now whether I am better or your dog is better, because I do not know in what state I shall die. I shall be better than your dog, if I die on Eeman and with righteous deeds. On the other hand, if I meet-God forbid a bad ending, your dog will surely be better than I, because the dog will not go to Hell nor will it be exposed to any punishment. This is how godly men always keep their eyes on their final fate and end. We have, therefore, advised never to despise even the worst of person nor speak ill of them. You may despise the sins a man is committing, but not the person of the sinner, as long as it is not known what is going to be his final fate and this is known only to Almighty Allah.

Maulana Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has said: I consider every Muslim to be better than myself. I also consider every non-believer better than myself as a matter of probability. I consider every Muslim better, because he may- be a better believer than I and may be far ahead of me in righteousness. As regards a non-believer, presently he is devoid of belief, but who knows, Exalted Alalh may bestow on him the wealth of Eeman in future and he may supersede me in the matter of Eeman (Belief).

When Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has thus confessed about himself, where do we stand?

Three Godly men

Hazrat Dr. Hafeezullah Sahib is a spiritual successor to Hazrat Mufti Muhammad Hasan Sahib رحمة الله عليه and has lived long in the latter's company. Mufti Muhammad Hasan Sahib رحمة الله عليه was a spiritual successor to Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه and was a great lover of the latter. A few days ago Dr. Hafeezullah Sahib visited Darul-Uloom, Karachi. He related an incident which he had heard from Hazrat Mufti Sahib رحمة الله عليه. He quoted Mufti Sahib رحمة الله عليه as saying:

When we attended an assembly of Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه, a strange sensation and feeling fell on us to this effect: Everyone attending the assembly is better than I and superior to me and has superseded me and I myself have remained far behind. I infromed Hazrat Maulaan Khair Muhammad Sahib رحمة الله عليه of this state of mine. Hazrat Maulana Khair Muhammad Sahib رحمة الله عليه too was one of the spiritual successors of Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه. Hazrat Maulana Khair Muhamamd Sahib رحمة الله عليه replied that he too felt likewise. Therefore, we both called on Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه and informed him saying: ours is a strange state of feeling when we are present in your assembly, we feel that all are better than we and we are inferior to all. Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه told us that he was telling the truth that he too had the same feeling when he was sitting in the assembly that all were better than he and he was inferior to all.

Look at your own shortcomings

If a man has his own shortcomings before his eyes and his heart is impressed with the greatness, fear and awe of Exalted Allah, how can he look down upon and try to find fault with others ? How can a man mind another's sneezing when he himself is suffering from stomach ache. However, this Hadith teaches us the principle that none should be hated and regarded as mean and inferior. If any one is comitting sins and vices, you may hate and decry his bad deeds but you should not hate the sinner. Who knows that Allah may help him to repent for his sins and to do good deeds? It could be that he supersede you so neither should you consider yourself superior, nor disparage others.

To backbite Hajjaj bin Yusuf

These are all matters relating to Deen which we have forgotten. We think that only worship, prayers, fasting and rehearsals on rosaries form part of Deen (faith). We have excluded from Deen sins like backbiting. We utter about person whatever we desire, although everything is being recorded in the Divine Court. Allah has said in the Holy Qur'an:

مَايَلْفِظُ مِنْ قَوْلٍ اِلَّا لَدَيْهِ رَقِيْبٌ عَتِيْدٌ (سورة ق :١٨)

He does not utter a word but there is an observer ready. (50:18)

In an assembly of Hazrat Abdullah bin Umar رضى الله عنه a man began to speak ill of Hajjaj bin Yusuf. Who is there who does not know about Hajjaj bin Yusuf that he was a notorious tyrant who killed hundreds of innocent Muslims? Addressing that man Hazrat Abdullah bin Umar رضى الله عنه said:

Look here, you are backbiting Hajjaj bin Yusuf. Do not think that it has become lawful to backbite him, because he is responsible for murdering hundreds of men. When Exalted Allah shall take revenge on Hajjaj bin Yusuf for murdering hundreds of men, He shall charge you with the sin of backbiting Hajjaj bin Yusuf.

Therefore You should not backbite anyone without justification. The exception would be if you wanted to save someone from loss and injury. You may warn him, saying: Beware of such and such person. It is not at all right to indulge in backbiting and ill-speaking in assemblies by way of recreation.

The conduct of the Prophets عليهم السلام

It has been the conduct of the Prophets of Allah عليهم السلام not to retaliate abuse with abuse, although the Shari'ah has allowed tit for tat. The community of a Prophet is addressing its Prophet, as mentioned in the Qur'an, in this way:

إِنَّا لَنَرَاكَ فِي سَفَاهَةٍ وَإِنَّا لَنَظُنُّكَ مِنَ الْكَاذِبِينَ (الاعراف:٦٦)

We surely see you in foolishness and we deem you from amongst the liars. (7:66)

A man like us would have retaliated this impertinence by saying: It is you and your father who are fools, but the Prophet of Allah replied to this in these words:

O my people, there is no foolishness in me, but I am a Messenger from the Lord of the worlds. (7:67)

An event concerning Hazrat Shah Ismail Shaheed رحمة الله عليه

Hazrat Shah Ismail Shaheed رحمة الله عليه belonged to a royal family whom Exalted Allah had granted a burning entusiasm for Deen. His heart was always overflowing with genuine eagerness to convey the message of Deen to the people. He had launched a Jihad (Holy War) against Shirk (Polytheism) and Bid'ah (innovations). Such reformers have their enemies also. One day when Shah Shaib رحمة الله عليه was delivering a sermon in the Jami Masjid of Delhi (India), a man stood up and cried to the entire audience thus :

O Maulana ! I have heard that you are a bastard.

If there had been some other man, how severely he would have dealt with this man or how mercilessly his followers would have punished him ? Being an heir of the Prophet ﷺ, see how calmly he bore the provocation and how politely he replied to that man:

You are ill-informed; witness to the marriage of my mother are still alive and available in Delhi.

This is an example of prophetic character and conduct that they do not retaliate with abuse even the filthiest type of abuse.

The second advice

Thereafter, the Holy Prophet ﷺ gave Hazrat Jabir رضى الله عنه the second advice:

Do not look down upon any good deed, but do it as and when you get an opportunity for it.

Satan's strategy

By means of this advice the Holy Prophet ﷺ frustrated a great strategy of Satan. When anyone feels inclined to do a good deed, Satan whispers in this way: you have spent your entire life in sins and unlawful pursuits. What will you attain by doing this small good deed? This will not secure for you Paradise. So ignore this small good deed too. Thus does Satan deprive men of such good deeds. This is a great deception of Satan.

To counteract this Satanic deception the Holy Prophet ﷺ has insisted upon his Ummah not to ignore an opportunity to do even the smallest good turns.

Small deeds may also procure salvation

This advice is full of countless points of wisdom. Firstly, who knows that the deed you are ignoring as trifle, may be very important in the sight of Exalted Allah and He may accord it His acceptance. Thus, perhaps this trifling deed may become a cause of your salvation. Examples are available in the Ahadith and the accounts of godly men in which Exalted Allah has been pleased to grant salvation as a result of very small and insignificant deeds.

The event concerning a prostitute

This event is recorded in a Hadith in Sahih Bukhari:

A prostitute was passing along a path. She saw on the way a dog panting with thirst near a well. It desired to drink water but the water was at such a low level in the well that the dog could not reach it. The woman felt pity on the dog. She thought that the dog too was a creature of Allah and was restless with thirst. She looked for a bucket but it was not available there. She took off one of her leather stockigns from her leg and managed somehow to draw water from the well and was able to quench the dog's thirst. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said that Exalted Allah was so highly pleased with this act of the woman that He granted her salvation only for this act.

Consider! If this prostitute had thought that being a prostitute and entitled to Hell, she could get no benefit from helping the dog to get water, what would have been the result? If she had thought in this way, she would have been deprived of this small good deed and, in turn, of the salvation which Exalted Allah was pleased to grant her only for this small deed.

Do not commit sins in anticipation of forgiveness

This event should not delude any one into thinking that he may commit as many sins as he likes, because they will be forgiven by doing some small good deed as providing water to a thirsty dog. Such trend of thinking is quite wrong. On one side is Allah's law and on the other is His mercy. Allah's laws lay down that the sinner will have to bear punishment for his sins. As regards Allah's mercy,

Allah has the absolute power to forgive anyone's sins on account of any one deed of the sinner. None, however, knows when and for which deed this Divine mercy will come down. It is, therefore, not right for any servant of Allah to go on committing sins in anticipation of Allah's mercy that his sins will be forgiven sooner or later by virtue of one or another good deed which he may do. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in a Hadith:

A helpless person is he who is hankering after his desires, but is hoping that Exalted Allah shall grant him pardon.

What is the meaning of wishful expectaion from Allah? It means that when you ask anyone to give up his sins he says that Allah is very Merciful and will forgive the sins. This is to say that a man is going to the East in the hope that Allah will take him to his destination in the West. He is following the path of Hell and is hoping that Allah shall take him to Paradise. It is true that sometimes Allah does grant salvation to His servants for some very insignificant deeds by His mercy, but there is no law for such exceptional show of mercy. There is, however, no justification to ignore one's duty and commit sins in anticipation of Allah's exceptional dispensation of Mercy which may or may not fall on the person anticipating it. The truth is that Allah's Mercy does not descend on a person who does not desist from committing sins in anticipation of Divine Mercy.

An event concerning the salvation of a saint

I have heard this event from my Sheikh, Hazrat Dr. Abdul Hai Sahib رحمة الله عليه, It runs thus:

There was a pious saint who was also a Muhaddith an and had devoted his entire life to the service of Hadith. After his death someone saw him in a dream and asked him how Exalted Allah dealt with him. He replied, saying: it was a very strange dealing. I had devoted my entire life to the service of Hadith, learning and teaching Deen and delivering lectures and sermons. I hoped that these acts would earn for me reward and recompense. When I was produced before Exalted Allah I faced a strange situation. Allah told me that He appreciated very much my one action. It was that when I took out my pen from the inkpot a fly sat on its tip and began to sip the ink on it. I felt pity on the fly. As this too was a creature of Allah, I stopped using the pen, while the fly remained sipping the ink. Exalted Allah appreciated this action which, He admitted, I had taken for the sake of His exclusive pleasure. Only on account of this deed Exalted Allah forgave me and favoured me with Paradise of Firdaus.

Just see, we are under the impression that delivering sermons, writing Fatawa (Religious Rulings), offering Tahajjud prayers, compiling books, etc. are important acts of virtue. On the other hand, the deed of allowing a fly to sip ink is being accepted and rewarded in preference to the other more important and significant deeds of virtue. There is another notable point in this story of salvation. If this saintly Muhaddithan had not taken any notice of the fly, he would still use the pen in writing Ahadith, but his kindness to the fly brought him salvation with which he might not have been favoured if he had not paid attention to this trifling affair concerning a fly.

Thus, none knows which deed is acceptable to Exalted Allah. It is not the price, volume, size or count of a deed, but it is its weight based on sincerity that matters in the sight of Allah. Deeds large in number but devoid of sincerity have no value. On the other hand, deeds small in number but based on sincerity are more weighty and valuable in the estimation of Exalted Allah. When an urge arises to do some good deed it means that this is due to sincerity. If that good deed is done in time, there is hope that Allah shall accept it. This is a point of wisdom.

Virtue attracts virtue

Another point of wisdom is that when an urge to do a good deed is fulfilled by doing that act, this leads to the rise of another urge for doing further good deeds. This is due to a natural trend that virtue attracts virtue and vice attracts vice. In order to commit a vice sometimes a man has to commit many vices. Thus, when you do one good deed Exalted Allah helps you to do many good deeds. Some time a small good deed transforms man's entire life and works a revolution in it.

The idea of doing good is Allah's guest

My Sheikh Hazrat Masihullah Khan Sahib رحمة الله عليه used to say:

Whenever an idea rises to do some good deed in the terminalogy of the Sufis it is called "Warid" (spontaneous inspiration). This "Warid" is like a "guest" sent by Exalted Allah. If you pay due regard to this "guest" by doing the good deed that had occurred to your mind, then pleased with your regard and entertainment, this "guest" will again visit you and draw your attention to some other good deed. In this way he will go on increasing your good deeds. On the other hand if you do not receive him with due respect and regard but reject him, i.e. you do not do the good deed that had occurred to your mind, then this "guest" will gradually stop his visits to you. In other words, the urge of doing good deeds will not arise. The Holy Qur'an says:

But that which they have earned (i.e. sins) has settled upon their hearts like rust. (83:14).

It is therefore not right to ignore these smaller good deeds, because ultimately they take men to bigger good deeds.

Satan's second strategy

The third point of wisdom is that when the idea of doing some good deed comes to a man's heart, Satan seduces man by suggesting that the deed is indeed very good, but there is no hurry; you may do it tomorrow or the day after tomorrow. This postponing results in the project being totally abandoned and the urge to do a good deed disappears. Who knows whether, the person concerned shall see tomorrow? Therefore, a good deed should be done the very moment the urge takes rise to do it. For example, while walking along a path you find some hurdle and feel that it should be removed, then remove it at once. Similarly you are drinking water and remember that it is a Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ to sit down while drinking, then sit down to drink the water. Again, you are going to take food and rememeber that you should start eating after reciting بسم الله (with the name of Allah), then do it at once. Whenever the idea of doing some good deed comes do that at once.

For this purpose I have compiled a small pamphlet, titled "Easy Good Deeds" which contains these easy and little good deeds which carry great rewards. By doing these little deeds man can accumulate for himself a large treasure of reward and recompense. These little tit bits of virtue can, Allah willing, work a revolution in man's life. I recommend that everyone should obtain a copy of it and introduce these deeds in his life one by one and try to act upon them. This programme will, Allah willing, take him safe to the final destination.

Do not underrate any sin

Likewise, there is another thing corresponding to it. Just as one should not overlook a good deed because it is small, in the same way, one should not commit a sin because it is very small and trifling. Never approach a sin, however small it may be. This too is Satan's deception. For example, you feel an urge to commit some sin, but you suppress this urge and refrain from the sin. Here Satan comes to you and suggests that, as you have already committed so many major sins, it will make no difference if you commit this one small sin. If it is at all necessary to refrain from sins, then refrain from the major sins and do not mind this small sin. Remember that a small sin becomes a major sin when it is committed deliberately, only because it is small.

Difference between a major sin and a minor sin

The classification of sins has two categories - Major and Minor. This does not mean that there is no harm in committing a minor sin and that you should refrain from major sins only. Both are sins with the only difference that the one is major and the other is minor. Some people are very anxious to find out this difference between sins with the intention that they should abstain from the major sins and may fall into the minor sins. Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has clarified the meaning of this difference as under :

"It may be illustrated by the example of a ball of fire and a spark of fire. If it is only a small spark of fire, it does not mean that you should keep it in your wardrobe, because it is very small. Remember that the same small spark will burn and turn your wardrobe into ashes in the same way as does the ball of fire. Also remember that a big snake and a small snake are equal in biting their victims. In the same way major and minor sins both involve disobedience to Allah and there is hardly any difference between them."

The Ulama have said that a minor sin becomes a major sin when it is committed with the thought that it is only a minor sin. So do not commit a sin under the impression that it is a minor sin and will do no harm.

A sin attracts another sin

Just as a virtue attracts another virtue in the same way a vice attracts another vice. If you commit a sin today because it is a minor sin, that sin will attract another sin and this sin will attract a third sin and the vicious circle will go on expanding without a stop. A sin means disobedience to Allah. If Exalted Allah were to take a sinner to task for a single act of disobedience this one act is enough to drive the sinner into Hell. So do not underrate any sin.

The third advice

The third advice is as follows:

You should talk to your brother with an open, pleasing countenance and a smiling face. This attitude is also a part of virtue.

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in a Hadith:

"It is a Sadaqah (charity) to meet a (Muslim) brother with a smiling face. This too carries a great reward and return".

Hazrat Jabir bin Abdullah رضی اللہ عنہ was one of the favourite Companion رضی اللہ عنہ of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. He was called یوسف هذه الأمه (The Yusuf of this Ummah), because he was very handsome. He has narrated:

Whenever I cast a glance at the Holy Prophet ﷺ I do not remember an occasion on which he ﷺ did not smile. Whenever I called upon him ﷺ I found him ﷺ with a smiling face. He ﷺ had an open, shining face, indeed.

Some people are under the impression that when a man is attracted towards Deen (faith) he should become dry and rough with no trace of smile on his face. They consider this attitude as a necessary part of Deen. It is not known from where they have got this notion. This is contrary to the Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. So when you meet anyone, meet him with a smiling face. Our Sheikh رحمة اللہ علیہ used to say:

Some people are miserly in the matter of money and some are miserly in the matter of smiling. They are never seen with a smiling countenance. This is a very easy and cheap virtue that whenever you meet a Muslim brother, meet him with a smiling face and try to please his heart. This will add a good deed to your Register of Deeds as an act of Sadaqah (Charity).

The fourth advice

The Holy Prophet ﷺ said:

Let your lower garment, be it trousers or loin-cloth, hang down to half-lengh of the shin, or at least up to above the ankles. It is a part of pride to let this garment hang down to reach the ankels and cover them.

The Holy Prophet ﷺ did not say in this Hadith that if you feel pride, do not hang down your garment up to the ankles, but if you do not feel pride you may cover the ankles. He ﷺ prohibited categorically to let your lower garment hang down to cover the ankles. In reply to objection some people raise that they cover the ankles not because of pride but because it has become a common fashion to do so. The prohibition is due to the involvement of pride. Strange how people feel so confident of their being free from pride. If there is anyone on the surface of the earth free from the vestiges of pride, he can be none other than the Holy Prophet ﷺ, yet he never said that he was ignoring this Sunnah, because he ﷺ had no pride in him. The fact remains that he ﷺ never in life let his lower garment hang down so as to cover the ankles. If this prohibition had been due to the presence of pride, the Holy Prophet ﷺ must have been exempted from this prohibition. Therefore, banish from your hearts the excuse based on the presence or absence of pride. In this advice the Holy Prophet ﷺ has asked his Ummah in definite words to refrain from this sin, because it is a part of pride and Exalted Allah does not like pride or self-esteem. Self-esteem means considering oneself better than others. Allah does not like this attitude. He appreciates humbleness, submissiveness and modesty. He values and accepts those who possess these attributes. Similarly Exalted Allah rejects those who show pride self-appreciation and arrogance.

The fifth advice

If anyone abuses you or puts you to shame for some defect in you, do not retaliate by putting him to shame for some defect in him of which you are aware.

In other words, you should not retaliate abuse with fault finding. This is because the curse of abusing and fault finding by that person will fall on him for which he shall be punished. If you take revenge you will stand to gain nothing, but if you do not take revenge you will receive a great reward. For example, a man calls you a fool and in turn you also call him a fool. Now you have taken your revenge on him. This act of retaliation is not unlawful, but this brings you no gain neither in this world nor in the Hereafter. On the other hand, if you put up with the situation and the heart-pinching with patience and suppress your anger, then about this Exalted Allah has said in the Holy Qur'an:

Exalted Allah repays without count those who are patient. (39:10)

So earn a reward without count by controlling your tongue and your self. Today it is not possible for us to estimate the volume and quantity of that reward, but we shall come to know in the Hereafter in the presence of Allah the great reward for holding and controlling our tongues.

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has given us this valuable advice that we should not retaliate abuse with abuse, although we have a right to do that. It is much better to forgo that right and forgive the sinner. The Qur'an says:

وَلَمَنْ صَبَرَ وَغَفَرَ اِنَّ ذٰلِكَ لَمِنْ عَزْمِ الْاُمُوْرِ (الشوری:۴۳)

It is a deed of great resolution for those who are patient and who forgive (others). (42:43)

At another place the Qur'an says:

اِدْفَعْ بِالَّتِیْ هِیَ اَحْسَنُ فَاِذَا الَّذِیْ بَیْنَكَ وَبَیْنَهٗ عَدَاوَةٌ كَاَنَّهٗ وَلِیٌّ حَمِیْمٌ ۝ وَمَا یُلَقّٰىهَاۤ اِلَّا الَّذِیْنَ صَبَرُوْا ۚ وَمَا یُلَقّٰىهَاۤ اِلَّا ذُوْ حَظٍّ عَظِیْمٍ (سورہ حم السجدہ: ۳۵)

Repel the evil deed with one which is better. Then he between whom and you there was enmity (will become) as though he was a bosom friends. But none is granted it except the fortunate ones. (41: 34-35)

Therefore, form the habit of forgiving, instead of taking revenge. There is a Hadith in which the Holy Prophet ﷺ has said:

Exalted Allah says that if a man forgives others, I shall forgive him on the day when he shall be most needy of forgiveness. It is quite aparent that a man will be most needy of forgiveness in the Hereafter.

There are all pieces of advice given by the Holy Prophet ﷺ. If we adopt them for action in our lives all quarrels will come to an end, enmities will vanish and all disturbances will subside.

May Allah help us all to act upon them, Aameen.

وآخر دعوانا ان الحمد لله رب العالمين

WHERE IS THE MUSLIM UMMAH STANDING TODAY?

الحمدلله رب العالمين والصلوة والسلام على سيدنا ومولانا محمد خاتم النبيين وعلى اله واصحابه اجمعين وعلى كل من تبعهم باحسان الى يوم الدين

امابعد !

All praise is for Allah, the Lord of the worlds. Mercy and salutation on our Sire and Master, Muhammad ﷺ the last of the Prophets, on his household and his Companions رضى الله عنهم all of them, and on all who follow them with goodness, till the Day of Judgment.

Respected President, Dr. Zafar Ishaq Ansari and the honourable audience. It is an occasion of pleasure and good luck for me that I am getting an opportunity as a student to participate in an assembly of thinkers held under the auspices of a great Research Institute of the country. Exalted Allah has provided me here the good fortune of speaking on a subject which is very important for our present and future both. As regards the good opinions which my respected brother, Dr. Zafar Ansari has expressed about me he has done so by way of his affection and his favourable opinions about me. For all this I can only pray to Exalted Allah to grant me the requisite ability to come up to his expectations. Aameen!

Two conflicting sides of the Muslim Ummah

As you are aware, the subject of today's talk is: "Where is the Muslim Ummah standing today?" This is a multi-sided subject. Where is the Muslim Ummah standing in the political field, economic field and the moral field? Thus, this question may assume different forms according to these various fields of application. Every field demands a detailed study and discussion and it is difficult to cover every field in one sitting. I, therefore, want to tackle presently in brief only one field of this question. This relates to the question: Where is the Muslim Ummah standing in the field relating to the domain of thought and thinking? Today when we are reviewing the present state of affairs of the Muslim Ummah, we come across two conflicting trends of thoughts. One trend is that, the Muslim Ummah has fallen a victim to downfall and deterioration and two, this very environment are talking with great force and favour about the birth of an Islamic awakening.

The first trend relates to a depression and deterioration of the Ummah, wherease the second trend relates to its possible renaissance and revival in the near future. When the first trend breeds dejection and despondency in our hearts the second trend sometimes creates in us undue hopes and complacency.

The "Truth" lies between the two extremes

I beg leave to assert that the Truth lies between these two extremes. There is no denying that as we as an Ummah have fallen a victim to downfall and deterioration and it is also observed that at the same time, a current of resurgence is spurring the Ummah onwards to action and revival. Even so, we should neither succumb to hopelessness and dejection nor should we be impressed by the topic of an under-current of reform and progress, so highly as to become neglectful of the need of putting in our best endeavours in the path of development and progress. The Truth lies between these two extremes. The subject of this address: "Where is the Muslim Ummah standing today?" is, therefore very importnat. As a necessary corollary raises other question, viz. What is the destination of this Ummah? and How does it plan to reach that destination? While on this topic, I am taking the middlle course of the two extremes. I feel encouraged to say that a welcome feeling is perceptible in almost every area and sector of the Ummah that we have to return to our origin; and as Muslims it is our duty to spread the light of Islam throughout the world. This is what is called (الصحوة الاسلامية). It is reassuring that this feeling has spring up, despite the painful realization that the Ummah has been dwindling into a gradual process of downfall and dejection.

An example of deviation from Islam

It is also a token of Allah's Omnipotence that one may get an idea of the deviation of the Ummah from Islam by looking at the conduct and character of those who are holding today the rein of political affairs and below an incident to highlight this deviation from Islam which may seem to be incredible to others, but it happened with myself.

Once I happened to visit an Islamic country along with a delegation. The delegation decided to present to the Presidetn of that country a gift of the Holy Qur'an. For this purpose it was necessary to obtain permission of the protocol for which an application was made. After the delay of one day we were informed that the proposed gift could not be presented to the President, as it could create a misunderstanding among the non-Muslim subjects of that country and therefore some other gift might be presented. This is an example of the apathy to Islam at official and political levels in countreis called Islamic.

In contrast to this sad experience there was another. The same day we visited a mosque to offer our prayer. We found that the mosque was full of young boys. They were more in number than the older men. After the prayer these boys sat in a corner of the mosque and began discussing something in their daily routine after prayers to read some religious book to one another and dicuss religious issues. The people told us that this practice was followed in all the mosque in that country. This is inspite of the fact that there is no formal organisation or association to organise and conduct these sittings.

The overall state of the Islamic world

You can realize from the foretold observations how Islam is being treated at the political and official levels and how intimately the younger generations are seen attracted by and attached to Islam. By considering as a whole the affairs of the Islamic world we come to the conclusion that the attitude to Islam at the official or political levels is either inimical or at least that of indifference. These governmental and political agencies have no interest in Islam. As against this, a current of resurgence has sprung up among the general public particularly the younger generation. This movement has gained ground in different parts of the world with the aim of applying Islam to our lives and according to a practical implementation.

Sacrifices in the name of Islam

It is quite true untold sacrifices have been offered in the path of Islam. The lovers of Islam have sacrificed their lives and properties for the success of the various movements organised in many countries to apply Islam and its Shari'ah. We are indeed proud of these freedom fighters in countries like Egypt, Algeria etc. In our own country Pakistan, people have from time to time made great sacrifices of their lives and properties for the application of the Islamic Shari'ah in the land. These sacrifices are a cause of pride for the Muslim Ummah. All this goes to show that even today the spark of Eeman is present in the hearts.

What are the reasons for the failure of these movements?

Notwithstanding all these sacrifices, efforts and toils, we find with regret that there is not a single movement which reached the final destination of success. Either it failed midway or it was supressed by force or it fell through later on without bearing the expected fruit. What is the basic reason for this situation? Why is it that despite all the sacrifices made, time and labour put into these Islamic Movements, they have remained foiled? Everyone present in this assembly should reflect on this sad state of affairs and try to get at its root. I want to put before you in this assembly the result of my own reflections on this issue, as an ordinary student. I shall try to disclose the basic reasons for this failure and how we can remedy this situation.

This point I want to express on this topic is indeed very subtle and critical. I also feel that the slightest error or in the enunication of this very subtle point may give rise to misunderstandings. However, taking upon myself the danger of error, I want to draw attention to these two aspects which are, in my opinion, the basic reasons for this situation and on which we should reflect with a sober and calm mind.

The conspiracies of the non-Muslims

Everyone is aware that one reason for the failure of the Islamic Movements is that non-Muslim powers have been doing their best to suppress Islam and the Muslims. It is hardly necessary to dilate on it because every Muslim is aware of it. I, however, feel personally convinced that the conspiracies hatched by the non-Muslim to harm the Muslim Ummah can never be successful, unless there is some fault or shortcoming among the Muslim Ummah itself. Foreign conspiracies succeed and become harmful when some defect and weakness finds access to our own body politic. No age has ever been free from the network of conspiracies from the time of the Holy Prophet ﷺ right upto our times.

ستیزہ کار رہا ہے ازل سے تا امروز
چراغِ مصطفویؐ سے شرارِ بولہبی

This Persian couplet means:
The spark of Abu Lahab and the candle of Mustafa ﷺ, i.e. Belief and Unbelief have been at war with each other ever since eternity till this day.

Thus conspiracy between Islam and kufr has neither ever ended nor shall it end. Iblis had been created and was in existence when Allah created Hazrat Adam علیہ السلام. It is, therefore, self-deception to expect that these conspiracies will come to an end.

Reasons for the Success of the Conspiracies

It is now high time for us to think what are those defects and weaknesses on account of which these conspiracies against us are succeeding. It is necessary to reflect on this question. This is because when we talk to anyone about our miseries we put the entire blame on these compspiracies against us and then we sit idle, doing nothing. It is necessary to ponder over the weaknesses and faults we have in ourselves. In this connection I want to point out to you two basic facts which in my opinion are the main causes of these failures.

Neglect of Personality building

The first of these causes that no attention is being paid to the need of personality-building. I mean to say that every educated man knows that the teachings of Islam pertain to all walks of life. Some of these teachings are of general impact affecting the society as a whole and some others are of individual impact. Some injunctions of Islam are intended for the entire society, while others are intended specifically for individuals one by one. This aspect of the Islamic teachings may be expressed by saying that there is a fine balance between the teachings of collective and individual impacts. An undisturbed maintenance of this balance will ensure a smooth implementation of the Islamic teachings. If one of these is ignored or is accorded undue preference over the other, it will stand in the way of a right implementation of the Islamic Shari'ah. However, by our actions and trend of thinking we have disturbed the balance between collectivism and thereby we have also altered the order of preferences.

Denial of Secularism

There was a time when on account of a propaganda in favour of secularism the people had confined Islam to Mosques, Madrasahs, Prayers, Fasting and Worship. In other words, they had confined Islam to its individual impact. Secularism also advocates the philosophy that religion is concerned with a man's private life. The political, economic and social life of man should not be subject to any religion, but it should be subject to the needs and demands of the time. As a result, a large class of thinkers sprang up in our society to reject and oppose this wrong philosophy and trend of thinking. This class of thinkers contradicted this trend of thinking and rightly asserted that the Islamic Shari'ah is not confined only to worship, morality and the private life of man, but it encompasses every walk of life. Islam attaches equal importance to collectivism and individualism.

The result of denying this trend of thinking

In order to deny and refute this trend of thinking we laid so much stress on collective that we put aside and overlooked the injunctions relating to individuals. These injunctions, therefore, lost their importance at least from the paractical side. For example, according to one theory it was claimed that Deen (faith) has nothing to do with politics, viz.:

دع مالقيصر لقيصر وما لله لله

Give to Caesar what belongs to Caesar and to Allah what belongs to Allah.

In other words, it is not at all necessary to associate Deen (faith) with politics. In this way Deen was banished from politics.

We converted Islam into a political issue

The refutation of this viewpoint gave rise to another view which laid so much stress on the political aspect of Deen that it seemed as though the only aim of Deen was to set up a political system. It is not incorrect to say that in Islam there are specific injunctions concerning politics, but it is not correct to say that Deen is in reality the name of politics or the foremost objective of Deen is to enforce a political system. This will alter the order of the preferences. The adoption of this trend of thinking will only mean that instead of making politics subservient to Islam we have made Islam subservient to politics. By so doing we have deprived ourselves of the charm and beauty of the individual and private style of life.

The life of the Holy Prophet ﷺ in Makkah

We have a beautiful model in each and every branch of the life of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. The twentythree years of his sacred Prophethood life have been divided in two parts - his life in Makkah covering thirteen years and his life in Madinah covering ten years. If we look closely into the Prophet's life in Makkah we shall find that it was totally free from politics, government, fighting Holy wars(Jihad) and retaliatory actions, whatsoever. The instructions were that if anyone raised his hand to beat a Muslim, the latter should not raise his hand at his adversary.

وَاصْبِرْ وَمَا صَبْرُكَ إِلَّا بِاللَّهِ

Endure patiently, your endurance is only by (the help of Allah).(16:127)

It is true that at that time the Muslims were very weak, yet they were not so weak as not to show some resistance against their enemy, or a least to stop the enemy from his intention of causing harm. But they were under orders not to retaliate but to endure patiently the excesses of the enemy.

Personality building was done in Makkah

Why this order of endurance and passivity in Makkah? It was because the objective was to train and prepare such personalities as could bear in the future the burden of the Islamic society. It was the intention to cleanse and purify their conduct and character, personality, acts and morals by subjecting them to ordeals of severe work and practical training and discipline. The only work during these thirteen years was to reform their character, belief and actions and to mould them in the pattern of most polished and civilized mode of living. It was to bestow upon them the wealth of best relationship with Allah and to inculcate in them the sense of accountability and responsibility in the presence of Exalted Allah.

What kind of personalities emerged after the process of personality building?

After doing this work for thirteen years in Makkah, a new phase of life commenced in Madinah where an Islamic State came into existence and the Islamic laws and punishmemts (Hudood) were also enforced. All the provisions necessary for an Islamic State were made. As these persons had gone through a severe training course, none ever thought that their objective was only to attain power and authority. This was in spite of the fact that all necessary provisions and facilities had been made available to them at this stage. Despite this power and authority they had maintained their relationship with Exalted Allah and they were occupied with the work and Holy wars. Their conduct and character may be judged from an anecdote recorded in history that during the war at Yarmuk, a non-Muslim soldier thus spoke to his officer, commenting on the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم engaged in that war:

They are unique persons رھبان باللیل ورکبان بالنھار i.e. during the nights they are devoted monks (devoted worshippers) and during the days they are best archers, swordsmen and fighters.

In short the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم adhered in their lives to two attributes-honest work and exertion and close contact and relationship with Allah. These two attributes are inevitable for the life of a Muslim. If you separate one from the other you cannot display a true picture of Islam.

We have leaned in one direction

As we are all aware, by now the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم had launched very dignified compaigns, had commenced Holy wars and were devoting their lives to establish the supremacy of Islam over the entire world. Inspite all these honorific duties and engagements it never occured to them that it was no longer necessary for them to offer the Tahajjud prayers, to weep before Allah in humility and submissiveness and to establish cordial relationship with Him and to turn to Him in repentance. No Companion رضی اللہ عنہ ever thought on these lines. They followed the path of struggle and exertion, while preserving their basic attributes of devotion and sincere faith in Islam and Allah.

As regards ourselves, when we started work to attain political power, we rejected secularism and declared politics to be a part of Islam. We laid so much stress on this that we overlooked the other sides of the issue. We totally ignored the theory or at least in practice, the need of turning to Exalted Allah, establishing relationship with Him and bowing down to Him in submissiveness and humbleness. Instead, we committed the blunder of harbouring the notion that as we were engaged upon a very sublime work it was no longer necessary for us to occupy ourselves with devotional duties on the personal and idividual levels.

We neglected to reform individuals

As already mentioned, we laid too much emphasis on collectivism. As a result, we began to be neglectful, in theory or in practice the injunctions which Exalted Allah has issued for the sake of individual members of the society. That is why in these times movements to awaken the Ummah to enforce the Islamic Sharee'ah are commenced with great sincerity and enthusiasm but they fall through, because the other side of the issue is overlooked. The Holy Qur'an has stated in clear words

إِنْ تَنْصُرُوا اللّٰهَ يَنْصُرْكُمْ وَيُثَبِّتْ أَقْدَامَكُمْ ۝

If you help Allah, He will help you and will make your foot-holds firm (47:7)

In this verse Exalted Allah has conditioned His help, victory and steadfastness on the word. ان تنصرو اللہ(if you help Allah).

Allah's help descends when man establishes a firm relationship with Allah. If that relationship becomes weak man loses his title to Allah's help.

What emerges from the core of the heart gets into the depth of the heart.

The Islamic teachings prescribed for individuals are intended to prepare every individual to put in sincere and pious efforts to ameliorate his social life. These teachings include worship, good character, and purity and soundness of the heart. If a man gets up to reform the society without complying with these teachings and if he himself has not received adequate training in them his efforts will not bear the desired fruit and it will become frustrated. If a man's character, conduct and morals are not good and up to the mark and he gets up to work for reforming the society, his words of advice will have no weight and effect. On the other hand, if there is a man who has first improved and reformed his own private life, personal conduct and character and then launches his campaign to reform others, his words will penetrate through the ears into the depth of the hearts. If we start this work of reform without having first reformed our own lives, we cannot put up a brave resistance against oppositions and mischiefs. Instead, we shall surrender ourselves and will not display high moral or lofty charcter. As a result we fall an easy prey to the temptation of status and later on leave behind the real objective and become interested only in taking credits somehow. All our activities revolve round this desire only. This, in turn, leads us to take wrong decisions and we fail to reach the desired destination.

First of all try to think of your own reform.

On this issue there is a verse of the Holy Qur'an as well as a Hadith of the Holy Prophet ﷺ about which we generally remain in dark. The verse is as follows:

اِلَى اللّٰهِ مَرْجِعُكُمْ جَمِيْعًا فَيُنَبِّئُكُمْ بِمَا كُنْتُمْ تَعْمَلُوْنَ (سورة مائده : ١٠٥)

O you who belive! you should take care of your own souls. If you become rightly guided he who goes astray cannot harm you. To Allah shall you all return; and then He will inform you of what you used to do (in the world). (5:105)

It occurs in the narratives that when this verse was revealed, a Companion رضی اللہ عنہ put a question to the Holy Prophet ﷺ Saying: O Messenger of Allah, this verse is telling us that that we should take care to reform our own selves. If others are going astray their straying will do us no harm. Should we then give up enforcing the right امربالمعروف and forbidding the wrong نہی عن المنکر ? Thus should we stop preaching Deen? The Holy Prophet ﷺ replied: No, this is not so, continue preaching Deen. Thereafter he ﷺ mentioned this Hadith:

برأيه فعليك بخاصة نفسك ودع عنك امر العامة

When you see four vices prevailing in the society; love of wealth being pursued, every man hankering after money, lusts and desires being followed, the world and its charms being preferred, the people neglecting their Hereafter, every man having some opinion, being proud of his opinion and every man thinking that he is all-wise and rejecting others advice then be careful. In such a situation take care to reform yourselves and do not follow the general public.

How should we behave in a spoilt society?

Some Ulama have interpreted this Hadith by saying that a time will come when the advice of one man to another man will have no effect. So at such a time the command of enforcing the right and forbidding the wrong and the duty of Preaching Deen will lose their force and become ineffective. At such a time a man should sit in his house, rehearse Allah's names and try to reform himself and he should do nothing else. Some other Ulama have interpreated this Hadith differently. According to them this Hadith is referring to a time when corruption will surround the society on all sides and everyone will become so deeply concerned with his own affairs that he will not lend ears to what others say. At such a time man should take care of himself and ignore the affairs of the public. It does not, however, mean that the injunction implied امر بالمعروف (enforching the right) and نہی عن المنکر (forbidding the wrong) should be abandoned altogether. At such a time more attention should be paid to the reform and correction of individuals rather than the society as a whole. This is because, society is nothing more than a group of these individuals. If the individuals do not react favourably to reform, the society can never be reformed. On the other hand, if the individuals are refomed Society automatically reforms. Therefore, the way of dispelling this corruption is the way of reforming the individuals by means of individual and collective struggles and efforts. This will lead to the building of personalities and this process of personality building will increase automatically the number of righteous persons bearing good moral conduct and character. This, in turn, will result in doing away with the corruption and vices of the society. According to other commentators, this Hadith is not concealing the injunction of propagating and preaching Deen but is suggesting an automatic process for the same end.

An important cause of our failure

I was telling you that in my opinion a major cause of our failure is that in trying to bring a reform among the society as a whole we have ignored the reform of the individual members of this society. Ignoring the reform of the individuals implies that we have totally ignored the requirement including worship, relationship with Allah, purification of character and action upon all the Islamic teachings. So, unless we come back to these teachings, our movements and our efforts will not be crowns with success. Imam Malik رحمة الله عليه has observed:

لَن يَصْلح آخِرُ هٰذِهِ الْاُمّـة اِلاّ بِمَا صَلُحَ بِهِ اَوَّلُـهَـا

The reform of the later generations of this Ummah will take place in the same way as reformed its earlier generations.

In other words, no new fromula can be invented for reform of this Ummah. Reform of the Ummah during the time of the Noble Companions رضی الله عنهم came through the reform of the individuals and the same course will have to be taken even now.

The Afghan Jihad is a shining chapter of our History

Today we are quite alive to the need of bringing reforms in politics, economics and in the society, but organisations to reform the individuals are conspicuous by their absence. That is why our movements launched for this purpose do not succed, and fail at one stage or another. The failures are sometimes due to our own differences and quarrels. A sad example of this lies in the Afghan Jihad which is a very shining chapter of our history. A study of this clearly brings out:

ایسی چنگاری بھی یارب میری خاکستر میں تھی

O Allah! How encouraging it is that my ashes conceal in them a spark like this!

We however, feel ashamed to mention to anyone the deplorable situation obtaining in Afghanistan today after the achievement of this success.

منزل سے دور رھرو منزل تھا مطمئن
منزل قریب آئی تو گھبرا کے رہ گیا

The traveller was quite satisfied and confident while he was yet away from the destination, but he became bewildered when he approached that destination.

The heart of every Muslim is weeping at the civil war raging among our Afghan brothers. Why is it so? It is because we did not fulfil the demands of this struggle. If we had fulfilled these demands it would not have been possible to face the ridicule of the nations of the world at this stage.

All movements of reform stop short at this stage for the only reason that they include no programme of character-building of the individuals nor any scheme thereafter. Therefore, the movements fall through after some time.

The Second important cause of our failure

In my opinion, the second cause of our failure is that either no work is being done to implement Islam in the country or it is quite inadequate. I mean to say that on one hand we bestowed so much importance on collectivism that we practically declared it to be the whole of Islam. On the other hand, we did not give sufficient thought to the question as to what should be the procedure of implementing Islam during the present age. For this purpose neither we gave sufficient thought to the problem, nor did we chalk out some regular programme of work, or, if we did chalk out a programme it was not commensurate with the needs. I do not say-Allah forbid - that it is not possible to implement Islam in this age. The teachings of Islam were not conceived by a human mind. These are the teachings of that All-Powerful and All-Knowing Allah Whose Knowledge and Power transcend and encompass everything in the Universe. As such, a person can go out of the fold of Islam during this age. It will however, be necessary for this purpose to devise and chalk out a working programme. It is regretable that no serious attention is being paid to the question of chalking out a programme for the application of Islam in our land.

In every age there has been a different method for implementing Islam

We have been working for Islam and putting in efforts in its cause; we have also been launching practical movements for Islam. Before conceiving these movements and during their operation every one should be clear about the meaning of implementing Islam, which is the implementation of the laws of the Qur'an and the Sunnah. In this context it is generally said that we have with us the Fatawa Alamgir (A famous book of Islamic Religious Rulings). This will help us in taking decisions on various issues. We go ahead with this innocent notion in our minds. It should, however, be borne in mind that it is one thing for some principles to be eternal and quite another thing to implement those principles in different conditions and in different ages. There is no denying the facet that the teachings and injunctions of Islam are eternal and applicable for all times to come, but the needs and requirements for implementing them differ from age to age and time to time. For example mosque are built also today. Previously they were built with date-palm leaves and woooden beams; now they are built with cement and iron bars. We see that the needs and principles of building mosques have remained the same, but the methods and materials of their construction have changed considerably. Again the Qur'an has said:

Make ready for them all you can of (armed) forces and of horses tethered. (8:60)

The forces of fighting in the olden days consisted of arrows, swords, horses, etc. and now they consist of artillery, fighter planes and modern war weapons, tanks, bombs, and missiles, etc.

What Should be the method of implementing Islam?

Likewise, it will be necessary to decide upon a procedure and course of action for applying the Islamic Shari'ah to our present style of living. What should be that course of action? How should we enforce those eternal principles of Islam? So far, we have not been able to chalk out a well-considered procedure which we may claim to be a firm and final procedure to answer our purpose in this age. Efforts in this direction are indeed being made in the entire Islamic world, including our country, but we cannot claim that these efforts are final. In the absence of such a firm and final procedure of action, serious problems and difficulties will crop up in implementing the Islamic injunctions and principles, even if power and authority are attained as a result of one of these movements.

The point of searching for new interpretations is quite wrong

Some circles are seen advocating the need of searching for new interpretations of Islam for implementing it practically. They argue that we want to implement Islam in the present age which has drastically changed from the past ages. Some circles are making demonstrations in favour of this " New Interpretation " with a sinister mover to obtaining sanctions for what is being practised now, e.g. Islamisation of usury, gambling in the garb of lotteries and betting, drinking wine and mixed gatherings of men and unveiled women, etc. These circles have the audicity to demand that what is unlawful may be declared as lawful on the authourity of these " New Interpreations".

Such a notion is totally wrong and condemnable. All this boils to the conclusion that whatever is being practisd today is all right. In their view the implementation of Islam only means that authourity and power should pass into the hands of the Muslims without effecting any change in what we have received from the western civilisation. If this notion is accepted, the efforts being made to implement Islam will become meaningless and disastrous.

To seek ways and means to implement Islam in the present age does not mean to subject Islam to an operation and to alter its feature so as to mould it on the western pattern and trend of thinking. In fact, the implementation of Islam means that all the injunctions and principles of Islam will remain intact and unaltered in their places, as indeed they should so remain. All that we have to decide is what should be the practical procedure for the implementation of the Islamic injunctions and principles in this age. All books of Islamic jurisprudence are full of answers to trading and business problems, yet these books may not furnish clear-cut answers to the various trading and business problems arising from day to day. We shall have to search for answers to these problems in the light of the Qur'an the Sunnah and the accepted principles contained in the books of Islamic jurisprudence. So far we have made little headway in this direction. Unless we complete this work, we cannot achieve full success in our work. In the same way, Islamic injunctions and principles about politics are available in these books. We have only to find out what shall be their practical shape when the Islamic Shari'ah is implemented in our age. In this field also our work is not complete, nor is it up to the standard. Sometimes we fail in our efforts on account of these defects and shortcomings.

Summary

In my opinion, the foretold two causes stand in the way of implementing the Islamic Shari'ah and both are concerned with the trend of thinking:

The first cause: Negligence in the reform and personality-building of the individual Muslim, and undertaking social and collective activities without reforming the individuals.

The second cause: Sincere and thoughtful research work is needed on the subject of implementing Islam and adequate work has not been done in this field also. These are the two causes.

If we succeed in understanding them and eradicating them, we can hope to succeed- Allah willing - in our work.

May Exalted Allah bring the day, by His mercy, when these movements of awakening may be crowned with success in the true sense. Aameen!

THE PLEASURE OF SIN - A DECEPTION

الحمد لله نحمده و نستعينه و نستغفره و نؤمن به و نتوكل عليه ونعوذ بالله من شرورانفسنا ومن سيأت اعمالنا من يهده الله فلا مضل له ومن يضلله فلا هادى له ونشهد ان لا اله الا الله وحده لا شريك له ونشهد ان سيدنا و سندنا و نبينا و مولانا محمدا عبده و رسوله صلى الله تعالى عليه و على اله واصحابه وبارك وسلم تسليما كثيرا كثيرا

امابعد !

عن ابى هريرة رضى الله عنه ان رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم قال حجبت النار بالشهوات و حجبت الجنة بالمكاره

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and seek His forgiveness and believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Him from the evils of our souls and from the vices of our deeds. There is none to misguide him whom He guides and there is none to guide him whom He lets go astray. We bear witness that there is no god but Allah the One Who has no partner. We also bear witness that our sire, and our authority and our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad ﷺ is His servant and His Messenger. May Almighty Allah have mercy on him, his household and bless and salute them all in great abundance.

It is narrated from Hazrat Abu Hurairah رضی اللہ عنہ that the Holy Prophet ﷺ said: Hell is concealed under the screen of sensual desires and Paradise is concealed under the screen of adversities and calamities.

Paradise and Hell are concealed under curtains

Almighty Allah had made this world a house of trials and tribulations. These trials and tribulations demand that man should get over them successfully by using his intelligence and understanding. If Hell with all its tortures and torments and Paradise with all its bliss, blessings and pleasures and charming scenes were brought before a man to see them with his own eyes and he was asked to choose between the two and take the path leading to his chosen destination, this would not be a trial and test. Allah, however, created this trial by creating Paradise as well as Hell. Allah covered Hell under a curtain of sensual desires which are driving men to Hell. For example, a desire rises in the heart to commit some sins which lead man to Hell. On the other hand, Allah has concealed Paradise under the curtain of things/acts repulsive and unattractive, e.g., getting up early in the morning, offering the Fajr Prayer, rehearsing Allah's names and giving up sins. In general man dislikes such acts of righteousness even though Paradise lies concealed behind them.

The buyer of embers of Hell-Fire

The path of hankering after the satisfaction of sensual desires thoughtlessly and irrationaly, particularly, without distinguishing between lawful and unlawful, right and wrong is sure to lead to Hell. For example, a man is very fond of sports and shows which are in our times readily available in every house through the Radio and the Television. These are all sensual desires for the satisfaction of which man spends money and purchases articles of sports and enjoyment by working hard and taking pains. This is, so to say that he is purchasing embers of Hell-Fire in his house to decorate his drawing-room and bedroom for himself and for his children. He is thus preparing for Hell instead of Paradise. He is doing all this, only because there is the curtain of sensual desires between his eyes and the reality. If this curtain is lifted and man's eyes become sharp enough to penetrate into the reality of things, he shall know that all that he is doing presently is nothing but acts to take him to Hell.

The path leading to Paradise

On the other hand, Paradise is concealed under the curtain of repulsive and undesirable acts. Man's soul is averse to worship and devotion and obedience to Allah, but these are the paths that lead to Paradise. There is a man who pulls up courage once to protect himslef from the dirty path of sensual desires and takes the path which is apparently arduous but which leads him to Paradise. This man will to go Paradise direct.

You should not aspire for the fulfilment of every wish

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has warned you, through the Hadith cited above, against being deceived by sensual desires, as they are unlimited. There is none in this world who can claim that whatever wishes arise in his heart are fulfilled. None, whether he is a great capitalist, a powerful King or a man of authority can say that whatever is happening in this world is happening in accordance with his wishes. He too receives shocks and suffers from hardships and mishaps. This world is not a place of lasting comfort and peace. One must suffer from hardships in the world. Now it is up to you whether you cause hardships to your soul by force on your own sweet will or do so only to please Allah and resolve that you shall refrain from this sin becauseAllah has forbidden you to commit it and you must, therefore, avoid it at all costs. The first path of pleasing your own soul leads to Hell and the second path of pleasing Allah leads to Paradise. You should, therefore, give up the habit of insisting upon attaining every wish and feeling dejected when you meet failure in the attainment of your cherished wish. You must give up this habit, because it leads to Hell.

Man's soul is addicted to tastes and pleasures

Our 'self' or the power which urges man to do something has become used to worldly pleasures and enjoyments. It rushes to such acts which offer apparent pleasure and enjoyment. This has become its nature. It goads man to engagements and occupation which afford pleasures and enjoyments. This self creates in man's heart desires. In this situation if man leaves his self unbridled to hanker after the satisfaction his desires and he thus succumbs to every temptation of the self, then he ceases to be a man and turns into an animal.

There is no peace in hankering after sensual desires

It is the natural tendency of sensual desires that if you hanker after them follow them doggedly and meet their demands then there will be no end to this tendency. Man's 'self' will never say that all his desires stand satisfied and he has nothing more to wish. Such a stage can never materialise because it is impossible for a man's desires to be fufilled in his lifetime. As such, a man can never have peace of mind in his lifetime. Why is it so? This is because no sooner is one desire fulfilled than the 'self' brings forward another desire. It is the specific tendency of a man's self that after enjoying one pleasure he atonce wishes towards another pleasure. As such, if a man wants to attain peace of mind and soul he can never attain peace during his entire lifetime. If anyone so desires, he can make an experiment to verify this truth.

Pleasure and enjoyment know no bounds

Those known as the developed nations of the world have advised not to interfere with the private life of anyone. Let him do whatever he likes and also let him enjoy whatever he wants to enjoy. Do not stand in the way of his pleasure-seeking and merry-making. You see how now-a-days people are unrestrained in the matter of seeking pleasures and enjoyments of life. They have to confront no restriction in their merry-making, neither from the law, nor from the religion, nor from the rules of morality. Everyone is following the dictates of his own choice. If you ask anyone of these merry-makers if they have found satisfaction of all their desires and nothing more remains to be desired his reply will be in the negative he will admit that he desires more and more. In fact one desire gives rise to another desire and this vicious circle is never broken.

Commission of Adultery openly and above board

If a westerner desires to have inter-course with a strange woman, there is none to stop the couple from this act of fornication in any part of the land. We are seeing with our own eyes the truth of what the Holy Prophet ﷺ predicted in his sacred Ahadith fourteen hundred years ago, namely:

> A time will come when that man will be regarded as most righteous who, on seeing a couple committing adutlery on the mid-road will ask the couple to do so under the cover of a nearby tree. He will not say to them that they are committing a sin.

That time has nearly come now, as this sin of fornication is being committed openly and without the need of any cover, whatsoever.

Why are rapes being committed in America in such large numbers ?

Thus, if anyone takes the unlawful way to satisfy his sexual lust all doors are wide open before him. Notwithstanding this, cases of rapes do not occur so frequently anywhere in the world as they occur in America even though there is no restriction at all in committing the same sin with mutual consent of the couple. Why then commit rapes? This is, because the people have exhausted their pleasure by committing the sin with mutual consent and now they want to experience the pleasure of committing rapes forcibly. Thus, we see that there is absolutely no end to human desires and they go on increasing and increasing till infinity.

The thirst for Adultery cannot be quenched

You might have heard the name of a disease "Joo-'ul-Baqar" جوع البقر. The English equivalent for this Arabic name is gluttony or voracity. The symptom of this disease is that however much and how often the patient may eat, his hunger is never satisfied. Likewise there is a disease استسقاء i.e. Dropsy in which the patient feels intensely thirsty, but, however, much and how often he may drink water, his thirst is never quenched. The same is the state of man's desires. The more a man succeeds in satisfying his one desire, the more desirous he becomes to satisfy another desire and the process of increase in his desires does not cease at any stage.

An example of the taste of sins

There is no denying the fact that the sins do contain in them taste and pleasure. It is indeed often very tasteful and enjoyable to commit sins. It is a trial in this world that it is very pleasing to cast glances on sinful objects and scenes which irresistably attract and tempt the heart. Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has compared the pleasure in sin to the tickling pleasure of scratching itches/scabbies. If you ask the man suffering from these skin diseases not to scratch the itches he will not stop from scratching on account of the sensation of pleasure in the act of scratching. As a result the malady gets aggravated, causing burning and irritation - pains in comparison with which the false and momentary pleasure of scratching is nothing. In the same way the pleasure and enjoyment of sins are false, short-lived and only apparent and not real. If Almighty Allah favours a man with the taste and pleasure of His remembrance on a permanent basis, the taste, and pleasure in this righteous deed become lasting and real and so valuable that the false please received from sins is nothing; it is only imaginary and a passing phase.

Endure a little Hardship and Inconvenience

That is why Almighty Allah and His Prophet ﷺ have forbidden men to hanker after the satisfaction of their sensual desires, because this habit will push them down into the abyss of destruction. They have commanded that men should exercise some control over their desires and contain them within the bounds of the Sharee'ah. In the beginning man shall find some difficulty in suppressing his desires, say, the urge of viewing the Television and its charming but obsene scenes; this is the demand of the 'self'. In the beginning man shall find himself in a very difficult situation in having to suppress his refractory 'self' from these tempting occupations. These will however, be only a temporary phase and in due course of time these difficulties will disappear giving place to peace and tranquillity.

The 'Self' is like a lion over a weak

Almighty Allah has so created the 'Self' that, in spite of stress, if anyone stands up against it with courage and firmly resolves that happen what may, he shall never relapse into those sinful acts, the grip of his 'Self' will begin to relax and he will find himself freed from that grip. This 'Self' and Satan are strong like a lion for the weak who obey them meekly and respond to their demands and ultimatley overpower them. On the other hand the man who stands with a firm resolution against these forces of seduction with the resolution that he shall never revert to those acts of sin, then the 'Self' as well as Satan will both give way and find themselves discomforted and this change in the person concerned will improve gradually for the better. The dispelasure and inconvenience in giving up the sinful acts will ultimately give way to peace, pleasure and satisfaction and the 'Self' itself will become agreeable to this change.

The 'Self' is like a suckling child

Allamah Busiri رحمة الله عليه the composer of the famous Qasidah Burdah (an eulogistic poetical composition) was a great saint who became very famous on account of his Qasidah (eulogy) which is mostly in praise of the Holy Prophet ﷺ . In one of its couplets he has driven at a very wise point:

النفس كالطفل ان تهمله شب على
حب الرضاع وان تفطمه ينفطم

This means:

Man's 'Self' is like a suckling child. If it is left suckling its mother's milk it will continue suckling even when it becomes quite young. On the other hand, if it is weaned from suckling it gives it up (and begins to eat solid food)

When the child is weaned from suckling, it will protest, weeping and crying, yet the child has to be weaned, otherwise it shall go on suckling till youth. This stern action is taken, because in it lies the welfare of the child and the mother. After weaning the child gets used to solid food in a short time. The same is the example of man's 'weaning' from the 'milk' of sensual desires and lusts. When once this so-called 'weaning' has been attained, man gradually becomes used to the path of right guidance and righteousness (Taqwa).

The 'Self' has acquired a taste for sins

Allamah Busiri رحمة الله عليه is quite right in comparing man's 'Self' to a suckling child. It has become used to the pleasure and taste of sins. If you leave it free to behave as it likes, because stopping it from the commission of sins, e.g. from telling lies, backbiting in assemblies is a adifficult task, these sins will continue for ever. The 'Self' has also become used to the taste of usury/interest and many other sins and it will be a troubleous task to interfere with the behaviour of the 'Self'. If the 'Self' is left in this condition it will never get out of the mire of sins nor will it get peace the whole lifetime.

Peace and tranquillity lie in the Rememberance of Allah

Remember well that there is no peace in disobeying Allah. You see that a man has amassed all the resources of the world, yet he has no peace of mind.

I have just now given the example of the western society where there is plenty of wealth, a high standard of education and all the doors of acquiring pleasure and enjoyments of life are wide open and they may enjoy life as they like, yet they cannot sleep without taking sleeping pills. Why so ? This is because they have no peace in their hearts on account of sins which furnish unrest and anxiety. There is only one place where peace is available and that is the Remembrance of Allah:

أَلَا بِذِكْرِ اللَّهِ تَطْمَئِنُّ الْقُلُوبُ (سورة الرعد:٢٨)

Surely, in the remembrance of Allah do hearts

find rest and peace (13:28)

It is, therefore, a deception to think that rest and peace will be available in sins and misdeeds. Bear in mind that you can never attain peace and tranquillity, unless you give up the sins.

This peace is a great wealth, rather something more than wealth, which Allah grants those who have in their hearts His love, and whose hearts are saturated with His Remembrance. It is not unlikely that you may come across a person who is apparently poor and is undergoing starvation, but his heart has a treasure of peace. You shall have to renounce these sins and acts of disobedience for the sake of worldly rest and peace, let alone the peace of the Hereafter. The act of renouncing the sins will no doubt require an exertion and a bold stand against the 'Self'

Allah's promise cannot be false

And Allah has also held out this promise:

وَالَّذِينَ جَاهَدُوا فِينَا لَنَهْدِيَنَّهُمْ سُبُلَنَا ۚ (سورة العنكبوت:٦٩)

As for those who strive in Us We surely guide them on to Our paths (29:69)

In other words, Allah shows them the path of right conduct who strive in His path after giving up sins and thwarting Satan's seduction.

لَنَهْدِيَنَّهُمْ سُبُلَنَا ۚ

Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has translated these words of the Holy Qur'an in this way: We shall hold their hands and guide them on to Our paths. It does not mean that Allah shall show them His path from a distance. No, He will take them to His path by holding their hands; only a true and sincere desire for gidance is needed on their part. This is Allah's promise which cannot be false.

"Mujahadah" or striving implies that a man takes a firm resolution that he will not commit this sin, whatever may happen ; as a result of this resolution, desires may go to the winds, the heart and the mind may have to undergo untold tortures. According to Allah's promise a man will become Allah's friend and Allah will Himself guide him, catching hold of his hand the day he decides to oppose his 'Self' and takes a strong stand against it.

Now I have resolved to make my heart worthy of Allah's attention

So the first step taken on the path of reform is what is called مجاهده meaning hard striving. Our Hazrat Dr. Abdul Hayee Sahib رحمة الله عليه used to recite this Urdu couplet:

آرزوئیں خون ہوں یا حسرتیں پامال ہوں
اب تو اس دل کو بنانا ہے تیرے قابل مجھے

This means:

I have taken a firm resolve to make my heart worthy of Allah's attention, notwithstanding that as a result of this resolve all my desires, wishes and aspirations may be crushed and frustrated.

As a result of this resolve to banish from my heart all desires and vain hopes, the Divine light shall descend upon my heart dispelling therefrom the darkness of sins. Allah's mercy shall fill my heart and take me on to the path of right guidance.

However, Remember that in the beginning it will be very difficult to work on this resolve on account of a conflict between the forces of right and wrong, good and bad, but later on these very difficulties will become a source of comfort and enjoyment. It is very difficult to imagine the pleasure the man will receive on thinking that he is suppressing his desires and pretences for no other cause than the cause of pleasing Allah.

Why does the mother face all these troubles in bringing up her infant ?

Look at the condition of the mother. It is severe cold and she is comfortably lying on her bed with her child sleeping by her side. In this condition the child urinates. Her 'Self' whispers to her not to leave her warm bed in that intensely cold night. The mother is thinking in the other way. She thinks that if she leaves the child in this way with its body and clothes soiled and wet with urine, it may catch cold and develop fever. Ignoring the demand of her 'Self' she gets up in that severely cold night and goes out to wash the clothes of the child with cold water and changes the child's clothes. This is not an ordinary torture, yet the mother endures it for the welfare of her child. The mother has in her view the child's health and well-being. That is why sacrificing her comfort and crushing her desires she is taking these pains on a severely cold night.

Love puts an end to hardships and difficulties

I give below an example to explain this reality. There is a barren woman who has a burning desire to be blessed with an issue. She visits medical clinics, visits holy men and requests them to pray to Allah to grant her a baby. She also visits professional soothsayers for talismans to help her in her disappointment. Another woman advises her not to long for a baby, because she will have to undergo great difficulties in brining up the baby, e.g., getting up on sever cold nights to wash the baby's clothes with cold water, and lie awake on nights when the baby falls sick and so many other hardships. The barren woman condemns this advice with contempt, saying that she would sacrifice the comfort of thousands of such cold nights for the sake of the baby. Thus the desire to have an issue turns all hardships and incoveniences into a pleasure. The worries and discomforts involved in bringing up the baby will become a source of great satisfaction and pleasure for the woman. The mother who has to get up on cold winter nights to wash her baby's clothes with cold water shall, as a rule of nature, face so many difficulties and sufferings, but in her great desire for a baby she has no hitch in crushing her desire for ease and comfort. Maulana Rumi رحمة الله عليه has expressed the same idea in a line of Persian poetry:

Love turns bitterness into sweetness

In other words, difficult tasks which men avoid in ordinary circumstances become a source of comfort and enjoyment to a lover.

The miraculous impact of love explained with the help of love stories

The oriental classical writings are full of love stories. One of them is, the famous love-story of Shirin and Farhad. Relating this story Maulana Rumi رحمة الله عليه has said that the impossible task infatuated by his love for her beloved Shirin, Farhad undertook of digging out a canal of milk, as a condition of getting the hand of his beloved set off for the mountains with his axe in hand. Although this was a herculian, rather impossible task, yet the lover said that the task was easy for him as he was doing it for his beloved Shirin.

The love-story of Laila and Majnu is more popular and wide-spread than the love-story of Shirin-Farhad. Maulana Rumi رحمة الله عليه has said :

عشقِ مولیٰ کے کم از لیلیٰ بود
گوئے گشتن بہر او اَولیٰ بود

The value and intensity of Allah's love canot be less than those of Majnu's love for his beloved Laila. The love for Allah is so precious that it is much better that the lover becomes a ball to be kicked and tossed about again and again.

Thus, the tortures a lover endures for the sake of love become a source of enjoyment and pleasure.

The employee loves his salary

An employee is sleeping comfortably on a cold night wrapped up in a warm quilt, but he gets up from this warm bedding and prepares to leave for the place of his employment. His 'Self' was tempting him to enjoy the comfort available in the house with his wife and children, but leaving all these comforts, he proceeds to his place of work, where he works hard and comes back home late in the evening. There are many workers who leave their houses very early in the morning, leaving their children sleeping and come back very late in the night when their children have gone to their beds to sleep. If anyone asks such a person to give up his job, because it is so strenuous, the reply will be that he got the job with great difficulty and would not think of giving it up. He feels a pleasure in facing all this incovenience and difficulties for the love of the salary he draws for the work at the end of every month. The prospects of this salary has rendered the bitterness of the job sweet and pleasant. If by chance the job is lost he would feel deeply aggrieved and would remember with fondness the odds of the job. He is in search of recommendation and assistance so that he may be reinstated in his lost job. If anyone falls in love with any thing, all bitterness and hardships become pleasant and tasteful in the path of that love.

In the same way there is hardship in renouncing sins, but this is felt only in the beginning. when once a man pulls up courage and takes a firm stand against the sins and their charms Allah's help comes to the man's rescue and what seemed difficult becomes easy and the man gets a pleasure in Allah's worship.

Try to acquaint yourself with the pleasure of Allah's worship

Once our Hazrat Dr. Abdul Hayee رحمة الله عليه told us a very wonderful truth on this point. He said that by nature man's 'Self' hankers after pleasures and enjoyments. In fact it lives on pleasures and enjoyments, even though it has no preference for any particular category of pleasure and enjoyment. It only wants some pleasure whatever its form. We have made the 'Self' used to an undesirable form of pleasure. We should try once to make it used to the pleasure of obeying and worshipping Allah. If you have succeeded in accustoming the 'Self' to this type of enjoyoment it will stick to it on a permanent basis.

An observation of Hazrat Sufyan Sauri رحمة الله عليه

Hazrat Sufyan Sauri رحمة الله عليه is one of the greatest Muhaddith and saint. He has observed:

Allah has granted us, by His mercy, the taste of knowledge, worship and remembrance of Allah and the rehearsal of His sacred name. If the news of this taste reaches the Kings, Emperors and the capitalists, they will attack us with their drawn swords to snatch from us this taste and pleasure. They, however, are quite in dark about the taste of this enjoyment. They are, therefore, under a misconception that taste and enjoyments lie only in sins and misdeeds. The real taste and pleasure consist in Allah's worship and remembrance the charm of which Allah has bestowed upon His saints and devotees.

I desire a state of ecstasy all day and night

There is a very famous line of poetry composed by the renowned Urdu poet of the Indian sub-continent, Ghalib. Our Hazrat Dr. Abdul Hayee رحمة الله عليه has given a unique interpretation of this line:

مے سے غرض نشاط ہے کس روسیاہ کو
اک گونہ بے خودی مجھے دن رات چاہئے

I have nothing to do with the intoxication of wine. What I desire is the pleasure of ecstasy all day and night.

I am enjoying this pleasure of ecstasy in wine, because you have made me used to wine. If you had made me used to Allah's remembrance and obedience to Him. I would have received this pleasure in these acts of devotion. It is, therefore, your fault that you have made me used to wine instead of these acts of devotion.

You shall find enjoyment in crushing the 'Self'

Likewise, this مجاهده (striving) in the path of Allah appears to be very difficult in the beginning, because we are being taught to oppose our 'Self' and the desires it raises in our hearts. It is the desire of the 'Self' that we should backbite others in our assemblies as much as possible. The sin of backbiting is so pleasant that it is very difficult to stop the tongue from backbiting. You should, however, remember that the difficulty is only superficial. If man has taken a firm resolve to renounce it, Allah's help is sure to come. The superficial difficulty you have endured in crushing the charm and temptation of this sin will turn into a pleasure and taste which will be far superior to and more enjoyable than the enjoyment received from the sin of backbiting.

Try to acquire the sweetness of Eeman (Belief)

It occurs in a Hadith in which the Holy Prophet ﷺ is reported to have said:

A man felt tempted to a sinful glance on someone, and such occasions do occur to most people. The man fell in a state of fix - whether to cast or not to cast that sinful glance. Still the man feared Allah and saved his glance from falling on the forbidden object. In crushing his desire in this way the man felt very much tortured and injured mentally, but in return for this self control and self-torture Allah shall grant the man a sweetness and taste far more delicious and sweeter than the sweetness enjoyed in casting the sinful glance. This is a promise of the Holy Prophet ﷺ and this is available in the Ahadith.(Musnad Ahmad, vol-5, Page 264)

The promise does not exclusively apply to the sin of casting sinful glances; it applies to the virtue of renouncing each and every sin. For example, the sin of backbiting is very pleasant to the backbiter, but when a man addicted to backbiting once gives up this sin for fear of Allah and takes pains in refraining from it, he shall receive an incomparable pleasure. When man takes this path he gradually becomes fond of the pleasure of giving up sins in preference to the false pleasure of committing those sins. He is graced with Allah's love and a relationship is established between him and Allah.

The essence of Tasaw-wuf (Mysticism)

Hazrat Hakimul Ummat Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has said something very instructive about Tasaw-wuf; which is worthy of being preserved in the memory. The essence of Tasaw-wuf consists in this simple point: when a person feels laziness in some act of worship, e.g. proceeding to the mosque for offering prayer in time, he should give up his laziness and proceed to the mosque without hesitation. Similarly, if one is hesitant in refraining from a sin, this hesitation should be resisted and the sin should be given up. This habit and practice will help establish to a relationship with Allah which shall continue developing and deepening. One who is fortunate enough to attain this quality becomes independent of all other qualities. Thus, when a man by opposing and resisting his sensual desires succeeds in crushing them altogether, then his 'Self' becomes worthy of receiving Allah's reflection. This is the essence of Islamic mysticism.

The Heart is meant for being broken

My respected father Hazrat Mufti Muhammad Shafi' رحمة الله عليه used to set an example. He told us that in the olden days physicians provided medical treatment, using eastern medicines. For this purpose they prepared Oxcides of gold, silver and other metals. One important ingredient in their prescriptions was some Oxcide. These Oxcides were prepared by burning the metals ashes. A very small quantity of an Oxcide was believed to add great vitality to the human body. Just as this effective curing agent is obtained by burning gold to fine ashes, in the same way if the human 'Self' is subjected to pressure and hardship and is crushed to pieces, it becomes worthy of Allah's attention and a receptacle for His attention, love and mercy. The more you break your heart in this way, the sooner will you become beloved in the eyes of Allah.

Late Dr. Muhammad Iqbal, the poet of the East has very beautifully explained this point in an Urdu poetical couplet:

تو بچا بچا کے نہ رکھ اِسے کہ یہ آئینہ ہے وہ آئینہ جو شکستہ ہو تو عزیز تر ہے نگاہِ آئینہ ساز میں

your heart is like a mirror. You should not protect it from breaking, because the maker of the mirror (Allah) loves more and more a broken mirror (the heart).

In fact the maker of the heart has made it that it should be broken again and again. The central idea of the couplet is that the heart should be kept neat and clean of the filth of sensual desires and lusts and made a receptacle for containing Allah's love and mercy.

Our Dr. Sahib used to recite off and on this Urdu couplet:

یہ کہہ کے کاسہ ساز نے پیالہ پٹک دیا
اب اور کچھ بنائیں گے اسکو بگاڑ کے

The couplet means:

The maker of the cup struck the cup against the ground, saying that he would make another cup better than the broken one.

The idea expressed in this couplet is similar to the idea expressed in Dr. Iqbal's couplet. One should not think that by supressing and crushing one's desires and lusts he is deprived of a pleasure and enjoyment. This is not so. When by sacrificing the false and temporary pleasures of committing sin a man has purified his heart, the heart becomes a centre of attraction for Allah's love, the charm of His remembrance and devotion. The pleasure received from the commission of sins will be nothing as compared with the pleasure, enjoyment and spiritual contentment received from the bliss and blessings of this change of heart and mental attitude.

May Almighty Allah grant us all this wealth, reform our understanding and help us take the right course. Aameen.

O you who believe guard your souls. He who has gone astray cannot harm you, if you are rightly guided to Allah will you all return; and then He will inform you of what you used to do (5:105)

Action upon one verse

This is very short verse of the Holy Qur'an. It is a wonderful miracle of the Holy Qur'an that if a man acts even upon a short verse after understanding its meaning, then that action is enough to ameliorate his life. This short verse also possesses this distinction. This verse discloses a wonderful reality and it contains guidance for the entire Muslim Ummah. If we take this guidance to our hearts and resolve to act upon it, then I can say that this shall put an end to all our troubles and calamities.

Cause of the sad plight of the Muslims

Before giving the meaning and explanation of this verse, I draw your attention to an important question which occurs to many of us off and on. You are beholding that the entire Muslim Ummah is facing many problems, wherever it is residing in the world. It is surrounded by worries and calamities.

In one place the Muslims of Bosnia are being subjected to oppression and wrongs, in another place the Muslims of Kashmir are undergoing torture and tyranny. The Muslims in India are suffering from untold excesses and torments perpetrated on them by the Hindus and other infidels. In Somalia the Muslims are involved in a civil war. In Afghanistan the Muslims are fighting against each other.The Muslims are facing all these problems. Those who have some Eeman (Faith) in their hearts say after giving some thought that the cause of these failures and disgraces lie in the fact that we have become totally unmindful of Deen, have given up acting on the teachings of the Holy Prophet ﷺ and have forsaken service to Allah, have stopped from obeying the injunctions of the Holy Prophet ﷺ and are, above all, drowned deep in disobedience and misdeeds. These vices have brought on us these calamities. What has been said above is quite true because Allah has said in the Holy Qur'an:

Whatever misfortunes strike you are due to your own (bad) deeds and (Allah) excuses many (of the sins). (42 : 30)

Thus, you yourselves are responsible for your misfortunes and distresses. Being All-Compassionate, Allah forgives many of your sins. Some misdeeds and sins are such as they are requited in this world in the form of misfortunes and calamities. There is hardly a sitting or assembly in which we do not admit lapses and misdeeds on our part. We confess in these our meetings that our calamities are due to our own negligence towards our Deen.

Why do the efforts remain fruitless?

Despite all the atempts made to arrest the deterioration and bring improvement in our conduct and behaviour, we see no improvement at all in our sad plight. It seems that the flood of our indifference to our Deen is increasing and intensifying instead of diminishing, as some poet has said:

یہ کیسی منزل ہے کیسی راہیں
کہ تھک گئے پاؤں چلتے چلتے
مگر وہی فاصلہ ہے قائم
جو فاصلہ تھا سفر سے پہلے

What kind of a destination is it that we get tired in our journey towards it, but the distance remains the same as it was at the start?

You begin the work of reform on others

The verse I have recited just now points out the tendency that when you embark upon a reform campaign, you begin the work of reform on others, thinking that all defects, shortcomings and excesses through bribery, interest, etc., are found in others who need to be purified from these sins. On the other hand you totally forget your own self that perhaps some of these vices and misdeeds are lurking in your own souls.

You have no thought of reforming your ownselves

This idea seldom occurs to a person that he too, is addicted to some of those defects, weaknesses and vices which he is trying to look for in others and that it is his first priority to reform his own soul. It is incumbent upon a man first of all to care about his own reform and betterment before taking care of others. This has become a general trend that those who stand up for doing reform work are worried about the amelioration of others. They seldom think that they themselves may be suffering from some vices and shortcomings which need to be eradicated first.

The sermons delivered remain ineffective

When a Preacher or a Reformer is suffering from some shortcomings and has no worry to remedy them, then the words of advice which he directs to others have no effect on the addresses. His words of advice will have weight only when he sincerely admits that he himself has in him so many vices, defects and sins. If he thinks about himself in this way he will not be mindful of, and worried about, the weaknesses and shortcomings of others. In the absence such a negative attitude, the sermons delivered, however attractive, prove ineffective and fall flat.

Everyone is accountable for his own deeds

The Holy Qur'an has said in the verse quoted above: O believers be mindful of your reform. If you have reformed yourself and taken the path of right guidance, the sins and vices of those who have gone astray from the straight path will do you no harm. You have all to return ultimately to Allah and Allah shall tell you what you have been doing in the world. This verse tells in clear terms that every one will be accountable for his deeds. The deeds of one person shall not be charged against another person.

No, this will not happen. Everyone will have to account for his own deeds. It is, therefore, necessary that you should first of all take care of, and reform your own deeds and conduct. When you are in the presence of Allah what explanation shall you give for your deeds and conduct ? You should, therefore,. be mindful of your own self before turning your attention to what others are doing. Everyone must make a critical survey of his own actions, conduct and character, to find out what sins and wrongs he himself is committing. If he has any, he should give up these sins and misdeeds and try to reform himself. It should not happen that he should become engaged in reforming others and be neglectful of his own reform.

There is a Hadith in which the Holy Prophet ﷺ has said:

من قال هلك الناس فهوا هلكهم (صحيح مسلم، كتاب البروالصلة، باب النهى عن قول هلك الناس)

He, who says that all the people have perished, is himself the most perished one of all. This is because he has an eye on the sins and vices of others who have in his opinion perished on account of their sins, etc., but the man who so thinks does not look into his own sins and vices. If a man begins to make a survey of his own faults and shortcomings, he will feel that he is the worst of all and he will, therefore, not pry into the affairs of others.

An incident that happened with Hazrat Zunnoon Misri رحمة الله عليه

Hazrat Zunnoon Misri رحمة الله عليه was a friend of Allah (saint) of a very high status the height of which we can hardly imagine. It is written that once famine occurred in his city and there were no rains. The people were very much oppressed and perturbed and were praying to Allah to release the rains. Some people approached Hazrat Zunnoon Misri رحمة الله عليه and informed him how the cessation of the rains had caused severe famine. neither men nor animals had water to quench their thirst or to water their fields. Therefore, they requested the saint to pray to Almighty Allah to send down the rains. He promised to pray to Allah, but told them that whatever misfortunes and calamities descend on men are due to their own misdeeds and sins. The cessation of the rains means that they were all engrossed in evils and misdeeds on account of which Allah had withheld the rains. It was, therefore, necessary to find out the greatest sinner among them. After taking a stock of his own personal life, the great saint thought that he was the greatest sinner of the place and his stay there was the real cause of the cessation of the rains. In order to attract divine mercy in the form of the rains, the saint decided to leave that place. Thus did the saint plan to bring down the rains.

The saint had his eyes on his sins

Look here! A great Wali, a righteous servant of Allah and an accomplished spiritual servant thinking that he was the greatest sinner on the surface of the earth and if he left the place, the rains would descend by Allah's mercy. Now think! Was the saint lying or did he display this humbleness out of modesty? A Wali like Hazrat Zunnoon رحمة الله عليه could never tell a lie. The fact is that he really and truly thought that he was the worst sinner. Why did he think so? It was because he had his eyes always fixed on his own defects and shortcomings and thought of ways and means to get rid of them.

None remained bad in his eyes

During this age Almighty Allah has made Hazrat Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanawi رحمة الله عليه a model of action and righteousness.One of his successors has related the following incident :

Once I said to him : When you are delivering a sermon and I am in your assembly, I feel that in that assembly there is none more wretched than I: I am the worst sinner; in comparision with others I feel that I am like an animal.

In reply Hazrat Maulana Thanawi رحمة الله عليه said:

Really I also feel about myself the same as you have described about yourself. When I deliver a sermon I feel that I am the worst of all and the others are better than I.

Why was it so ? It was so, because they were always anxious to discover their own shortcomings and sins and how they should get rid of them. How should man attain Allah's pleasure? If man begins to look for his own sins, he cannot care for the shortcomings of others. In such a situation man begins to feel worried about reforming his own affairs instead of worrying about others.

The last Mughal monarch, Bahadur Shah Zafar رحمة الله عليه has expressed this idea very beautifully in the following lines of poetry:

تھے جو اپنی برائی سے بے خبر
رہے اوروں کے ڈھونڈتے عیب و ہنر
پڑی اپنی برائیوں پر جو نظر
تو نگاہ میں کوئی برا نہ رہا

I was unaware of my own shortcomings and was looking for the shortcomings of others. However, when I knew that in reality all are free from defects and shortcomings, while I alone am full of sins and defects.

You must remember that nobody can be aware of the vices of others better as he is aware of his own vices. Man knows quite well what he thinks about himself and what ideas he harbours in his heart and how diverse intentions and thoughts occur to his heart from time to time. Notwithstanding, this he takes no notice of these ideas and thoughts only because he remains occupied most of the time searching for the faults and vices of others.

Suppose that a man has got severe stomach-ache and is restless on that account. Will this person be making a survey of the various maladies from which others are suffering, forgetting his own stomach-ache? No, he shall become totally concerned with his own malady and will pay no attention to the maladies of others and will try first of all to get medical treatment for his own stomach-ache. You will not find in this world a single man who will care for the simple ailments of others neglecting his own serious ache.

An event of a lady that is full of morals

One of my relative ladies once suffered from severe gastric pain which made her restless. She was affected Psychologically and began to think that she was seriously ill. I took her to a Hospital for medical check up and treatment. When we took the lift to go up, we saw that another lady was there sitting on a wheelchair whose entire body was burnt with fire and somebones were also broken. Her skin was also burnt at many places. By way of providing cofmort and solace to my relative lady and palliating her feeling of sickness, I said to her: Look! How seriously afflicted is this lady and how painful a torture she is enduring? Hearing these words and casting a cursory glances. my relative lady said; yes she is undergoing painful suffering, indeed, but she is not suffering from gastric pain. Now Look! One's own comparatively mild sickness is being felt more acutely than the torture of another patient whose entire body is burnt and many bones are broken.

Through this incident Allah inspired into my heart a desire if such thinking was created in our hearts about Deen (Faith) and our own inner diseases might totally occupy our care and thoughts instead of our searching for the weaknesses, fautls and shortcomings of the others.

Hazrat Hanzalah رضی اللہ عنہ become obsessed with the idea that he had become a hypocrite

Once Hazrat Hanzalah رضی اللہ عنہ called on the Holy Prophet ﷺ and said: O Messenger of Allah! I am perished and destroyed. The Holy Prophet ﷺ said: What is the matter? He رضی اللہ عنہ said that he had become a hypocrite. On being asked how this happened the Noble Companion replied, saying: O Prophet of Allah, when I am present in your assembly, nice ideas and emotions rise in the heart, Allah's remembrance is refreshed, I think of reforming myself and I am reminded of the blessings of the Hereafter. However, when I return to the world of action and its affairs and am among the wife and children, the earlier sublime condition of the heart disappears. Attention to Allah, the thought of self-reform and the thought of the Hereafter and of Paradise do not linger. This is a sign of Hypocrisy that apparently I am a Muslim but very bad and heinous ideas rise in the heart. That is why I have become a hypocrite. O Prophet of Allah ﷺ, tell me how I can get rid of hypocrisy.

Look here ! A Noble Companion رضی اللہ عنہ of the Holy Prophet ﷺ is making complaint like this and the entire Ummah is unanimous on this that الصحابة کلهم عدول all the Companions رضی اللہ عنہم are just and it is not possible that anyone of them should be a sinner, yet one of them is suspecting about his having turned a hypocrite. Pacifying his anxiety, the Holy Prophet ﷺ said: You should not feel disturbed by the change in your thoughts on going home, because thereby a man does not become a hypocrite. Such changes do take place with the change of times. Sometimes a man's heart is overwhelmed by Allah's remembrance causing more gentleness and softness of the heart, but there are times when these emotions are absent or are not so intense. So a man does not become a hypocrite by such changes in the conditions of the heart. (Sahih.....Muslim) This Companion رضی اللہ عنہ did not feel worried that such and such a man turned a hypocrite. His worry was that perhaps he himself had turned a hypocrite.

Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ suspected Hypocrisy in himself

Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ is the second Caliph of the Muslims about whom the Holy Prophet ﷺ said:

لو کان بعدی نبیًا لکان عمر

If there had been a Prophet after me, Umar would have been that Prophet (but there will be no Prophet after me).

So high a status Allah had granted him رضی اللہ عنہ, yet hear his problem. Hazrat Huzaifah bin Yaman رضی اللہ عنہ was a Companion of the Holy Prophet ﷺ who was known to be his confident, because the Holy Prophet ﷺ had confided to him the names of the hypocrites of Madinah Munaw-warah and under some policy he ﷺ had not disclosed their names to any other Companion رضی اللہ عنہ. When anyone died the people would watch if Hazrat Huzaifah رضی اللہ عنہ joined the funeral prayer of the deceased. The participation of Hazrat Huzaifah رضی اللہ عنہ in the funeral prayer of a person was a sure sign that the deceased was not among the hypocrites. If he did not participate in the funeral prayer, it was concluded that the deceased was among the hypocrites.

Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ used to call on Hazrat Huzaifah رضی اللہ عنہ and ask him if "Umar's" name was not in his list of the hypocrites. Just see! This question is being put by a personality like Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ who had heard with his own ears the Holy Prophet ﷺ say: عمر فی الجنۃ (Umar shall be in Paradise). As already mentioned, the Holy Prophet ﷺ also said that:

لو كان بعدى نبيًا لكان عمر

If there had been a Prophet after, me Umar would have been that Prophet.

See, such a godly personality is feeling so much worried, lest he should be among the hypocrites. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has also said that whoever recites the Kalimah لا اله الا الله shall enter Paradise. Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ thought that one who recites this Kalimah shall indeed enter Paradise, yet if anyone's deeds become vicious before his death that person shall not be entitled to this glad tidings. Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ feared lest his deeds should become vicious to make him a hypocrite. It is true that when a man makes a survey of his faults and sins, he becomes worried about his reform and betterment. When a man begins thinking in this way, he does not find fault into others as he does with his own self. (Al-bidayah wan-Nihayah- Vol. 5, P-19)

Extreme Ignorance of Deen

Today our affairs have just reversed. If we speak today anything about Deen, our speech is generally devoid of reformative aspects. It is seen that these speeches either contain sectarian colours, political topics or theoretical issues which have nothing to do with the practical life of man. All this has resulted in a general depletion of knowledge of Deen in our society. Today highly educated Muslims are ignorant of matters concerning Deen which were well known to young boys in the olden days. If some problem concerning Deen is mentioned to them, they feel surprised and say: Oh, is it a point of Deen? We did not know that. The reason for all this ignorance is that the desire of self-reform has disappeared from our minds. The Holy Qur'an has clearly declared that, however numerous unions and associations you may establish, it will not be possible to reform the society unless everyone creates in his heart a desire to reform himself.

This is our plight

Banners in hands, we take out processions uttering slogans in favour of reform and betterment, but when an occasion of accepting bribe arrives, we do not lag behind anyone, we do refrain from taking money from others by fraudulent means. We cry hoarse against the usurious system, but when an opportunity comes for dealing in usury, we quietly take advantage of this. Such being the situation, how can reform of the society be possible? We are not tired of finding faults with others and condemning fraudulent and sinful deeds, but we do not lag behind when it becomes advantagious to tell lies, submit false and forged medical certificates to extend leave. Do we ever think on such occasions that all these are heinous sins by which we attract Allah's displeasure? When we are not prepared to give up all these vicious practices and sins, what is the use of uttering slogans and taking out processions in favour of reform of the society? Likewise, I taunt others on their aversion to Deen and on their indifference to the injunction of Deen, yet our assemblies are not free from backbiting and slanders, etc. As the Holy Qur'an has mentioned, one who backbites others is like one who eats the flesh of one's own brother. How, then, can a man addicted to these heinous sins reform the society. Indeed he cannot.

The way of Reforming

It is possible to reform the society, when I give up lying, backbiting and defrauding others, taking bribe and refrain from violating the rules of Pardah, shunning nudity and lewdness, etc. We cannot impart the idea of reform and amelioration to others, unless we create them in our own hearts. That is why the Holy Qur'an has said:

عَلَيْكُمْ اَنْفُسَكُمْ ۚ لَا يَضُرُّكُمْ مَّنْ ضَلَّ اِذَا اهْتَدَيْتُمْ ۚ (سورة المائدة: ١٠٥)

(O, you who believe), guard your own souls. He who has gone astray cannot harm you, if you are rightly guided. (5: 105)

How did the Holy Prophet ﷺ train the Companions رضی اللہ عنہم

The Holy Prophet ﷺ came to this world in which he lived 23 years after being commissioned to the status of Prophethood. He appeared on the scene at a time when the entire Arabian Peninsula was drowned in the darkness of ignorance and no ray of hope shone, nor was there any light of guidance. At such an inopportune time, the Holy Prophet ﷺ came to this world and he ﷺ was commanded to change the entire society and revolutionise it altogehther.. After 23 years when he ﷺ left the world infidelity and polytheism had been totally uprooted from the Arabian Peninsula. The community which had been drowned in heresy and ignorance emerged after 23years as a model for the world.

Out of these 23 years, 13 years were spent in Makkah. During this period of 13 years the Muslims had no orders to wage Jihad, nor was there any state or government, nor any constitution. Moreover, if the infidels tortured them, as they did, the Muslims were not allowed to take revenge and they had to bear the torture patiently and passively.

Endure patiently with the help of Allah. (16:127)

They were strictly forbidden to retaliate, even though they were not so helpless. Hazrat Bilal رضی اللہ عنہ was being made to lie on burning sand and stone slabs were placed on his chest and he was asked to reject the Kalimah لا اله الا الله (There is no god but Allah). Hazrat Bilal رضی اللہ عنہ could avenge the torture inflicted on him by dealing a slap on the enemy, but at that time the Muslims had no orders to take revenge by raising either their hands or their swords.

The Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم turned into Gold

Why was all this tyranny to be borne so patiently? It was because, by subjecting them to all these trials and tribulations, they had to be made pure and steadfast in the Faith like burnished god; that they may endure the torture with patience without a word of complaint. Is there a man who will take beating and insult without being provoked and enraged ? But the Muslims are being commanded to suppress their anger and irritation for the sake of Allah, as this control over anger and provocation was, in turn, to generate in them the power to sacrifice their personal desires and preferences in obedience to the commands of Allah and for the sake of attaining His pleasure. The Divine Order for the Muslims to follow the 13 years of the Makkah life was not to retaliate and take revenge in any circumstances. They were commanded during this period to devote themselves to the worship of Allah and to turn to Him and remember Him and visualise the Hereafter, Paradise and Hell and reform their conduct and character. When during this training period of 13 years, the Noble Companions رضی الله عنهم became pure like gold after passing through so many trials and tribulations, then commenced civic life in the Propeht's city of Madinah. In that sacred city the Holy Prophet ﷺ laid down the foundation of a State and a system of Government the like of which was seen neither before it nor after it. Having become fully absorbed in the thought of one's own reform everyone had made himself sincere and pure like pure gold. It is, therefore, your duty first of all to think of your own reform. A man shall succeed, by the grace of Allah, in reforming others, if he has first reformed himself. That is why triumph and victory was the fate of the Noble Companions رضی الله عنهم, because they had been trained by the Holy Prophet ﷺ himself.

As for the present days it seems that all attempts made at reforming the society are being wasted as a whole without leaving any visible impact on the society. This is because we have totally neglected our own reform. We have become unmindful of the fact that one day we shall have to render account in the presence of Almighty Allah of our deeds. We have also overlooked to make a search of our own lives to find out what shortcomings lie hidden in ourselves and what should be done to remedy them.

Let us make our own survey

The gist of my address is that at the day's end everyone should try to find out where and in what matters he has disobeyed Allah's commands from morning till evening. Islam is composed of five branches of beliefs and acts:

1- The beliefs should be sincere true and right.
2- Items of worship, viz. Salat, Fasting during Ramadhan, the Hajj, Payment of Zakat should be rightly practised and observed.
3- Dealings in trading should be lawful and free from fraud.
4- Social living with one another should be strictly according to the injunctions of Allah and His Messenger ﷺ.
5- Morality, i.e., conduct and character should be sound. Man should be free from the vices of hatred, pride, jealousy, enmity, etc. He should be adorned with good qualities, like modesty, reliance (on Allah), gratitude and patience.

Man's religion becomes complete only when he fulfils the demands of all these five departments of religion. A man becomes a true Muslim when he has completed with the requirements of all these branches. In other words he should satisfy himself as to the following questions:

1- Are my beliefs correct and sound?
2- How many of the five-time obligatory Salat do I offer? Do I miss any of them?

3- Do I have lawful earnings?
4- Are my dealings in sales and purchases fair and honest?
5- Do I possess good moral character?
Do I behave with others amicably?
Am I guilty of telling lies, backbiting, and hurting others? Do I tease or trouble others?

Everyone should examine his conduct and character in the light of the above observations. If one finds that he is deficient, he should try his best to make up the deficiency as far as possible.

For example, he should find out how many lies he has told in the day and he should give up immediately. He should start working on this line to reduce his sins one by one by way of reforming himself. If the thought of reforming our life is born in our heart this change shall, God willing - enlighten our lives. Do not think that if only one life is reformed, what difference will it make?

One lamp lights another lamp

Bear in mind well that what we call society is composed of individuials, you, he and I. If one man's life is reformed, he gives up a few sins and he begins to obey the injunctions of Allah, this may be regarded at least as one candle lighted. A lamp, however, small may it be, is sure to spread its light in the space around it. It is quite likely that seeing a lamp burning another man may light his lamp. Thus the process of one lamp lighting another lamp may gradually enlight the entire environment and in this way the entire society may one day become enlightened. On the other hand if there is a man who keeps his lamp unlighted but desires to light the lamps of others with his unlighted lamp, this is impossible. It is quite obvious that an unlighted lamp cannot light other lamps. The same truth applies to the reform of human beings. A man who has no care to reform himself cannot succeed in guiding others. May Almighty Allah create in our hearts the thought of reforming our own selves first of all!

How to create the thought of self-Reform?

The question now arises how to create the thought of self-reform. One way to answer this question is this. Just as in this session we have talked about and heard the problem concerning self-reform which has stirred in us some urge to solve this problem, the same talk and discussion should be projected and heard in different sessions and assemblies again and again. This practice will - god willing rouse in our hearts the thought of self-refrom. Just see that the words واقيموالصلوة (Establish the Salat) has been repeated in the Holy Qur'an sixty two times, even though only one Divine Command to this effect was enough. This is because it is man's nature that it is not impressed by an idea unless it is repeated off and on; ideas get settled when they are stamped on the mind again and again. A single impression does not prove lasting. It is, therefore, imperative that we should arrange to hold, and participate in, such gatherings in which the topic of self-reform is discussed. this practice will create in us the thought of reforming ourselves before aspiring to reform others.

The Darul-Uloom, Karachi is not far from you where three weekly meeting are held. Hazrat Maulana Mufti Muhammad Rafi' Usmani, who is the President of the Darul Uloom, addresses these meetings on every Wednesday between the ʿAsr and the Maghrib Prayers. Men as well women attend these meetings. Hazrat Maulana Subhan Mahmood Sahib, who is the Sheikhul Hadith and my reverend Ustaz, addresses these gatherings on every Sunday between the ʿAsr and the Maghrib Prayers. Hazrat Maulana Mufti Abdur Raoof Sahib, an Ustaz of the Darul Uloom and an authorised successor to Hazrat Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه, addresses these meetings on every Tuesday between ʿAsr and Maghrib Prayers.

In the same way three other meetings are held in the Darul Uloom. These meetings are also devoted to the problem of promoting the thought of self-reform.

There is no dearth of gatherings, assemblies and meetings, but the objective of the meetings held in the Darul Uloom is to create in the minds of the audience the thought of reforming themselves. If you are able to spare only one hour a week between the ʿAsr and the Maghrib prayers to attend these meetings, it will help to create the thought of reforming yourself and you will be able to find out the spots of your faults and shortcomings. It is a pity that we are ignorant of the spots in our lives where our faults and shortcomings are lurking. By attending these meetings you will come to know these hidden spots and the way to rectify these faults and shortcomings.

May Almighty Allah assist us, by His grace, to work on the right lines and to reform ourselves - Aameen.

HATE THE SIN AND NOT THE SINNER

الحمد لله نحمده و نستعينه و نستغفره و نؤمن به و نتوكل عليه ونعوذ بالله من شرورانفسنا ومن سيأت اعمالنا من يهده الله فلا مضل له ومن يضلله فلا هادى له ونشهد ان لا اله الا الله وحده لا شريك له ونشهد ان سيدنا و سندنا و نبينا و مولانا محمدا عبده و رسوله... صلى الله تعالى عليه و على اله واصحابه وبارك وسلم تسليما كثيرا كثيرا

اما بعد!

قال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم:

مَنْ عَيَّرَ اَخَاهُ بِذَنْبٍ قَدْ تَابَ مِنْهُ لَمْ يَمُتْ حَتَّى يَعْمَلَهُ (ترمذى. كتاب صفة القيامة، باب رقم ٥٤)

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and seek His forgiveness and believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Him from the evils of our souls and from the vices of our deeds. There is none to misguide him whom He guides and there is none to guide him whom He lets go astray. We bear witness that there is no god but Allah the One Who has no partner. We also bear witness that our sire, and our authority and our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad ﷺ is His servant and His Messenger. May Almighty Allah have mercy on him, his household and bless and salute them all in great abundance.

The curse of condemning a Sinner

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said that if a man condemns his Muslim brother for a sin of which he has repented, the condemner shall not die unless he himself becomes addicted to that sin. The reason is quite obvious. A man who repents of his sin becomes as if he did not commit that sin at all and the sin is erased from the man's Register of Deeds. The act of taunting a man for the sin which has been forgiven and which he has forgotten is abhorrent in the sight of Allah.

The Sinner May Be Compared To A Sick Person

What has been mentioned above relates to a person who has repented of his sin. There may be a sinner about whom it is not known whether or not he has repented of his sin, although it is very likely about a believer that he may have repented or may repent of his sin in the near future. There is no right for anyone to condemn even such a person. It is the sin and not the sinner that deserves to be condemned. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has not taught us to hate the sinner. The sinner is in fact suffering from a serious disease and deserves pity and sympathy just like a sick man, the sinner should be helped that he may get rid of the sins to which he has become addicted.

It Is KUFR (unbelief) And Not The KAFIR (unbeleiver) That Deserves To Be HATED

If a person is an unbeliever, he should not be hated and condemned. He should, instead, be helped with prayer to Allah that he may give up his unbelief and become a believer. You may recall how cruelly the unbelievers dealt with the Holy Prophet ﷺ. They pelted at him ﷺ stones, shot at him their arrows and wounded his sacred body, yet the Holy Prophet ﷺ calmly bore the tyranny and spoke out only the following words:

اَللّٰهُمَّ اهْدِ قَوْمِیْ فَاِنَّهُمْ لَا یَعْلَمُوْنَ

O Allah guide my community on the right path. (They reject me because) they do not know me.

See how, instead of hating and taking revenge on them, he ﷺ prayed to Allah to favour them with right guidance. So, when you see anyone involved in sin and disobedience, then instead of condemning him you should pray to Allah for his guidance that he may repent of his sins. You Should remember that by virtue of repentance he may get rid of all his sins and may become better than you.

Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanawi رحمة الله عليه Regarded Others to be Better Than Himself

Both my respected father Mufti Muahmmad Shafi Sahib رحمة الله عليه and Dr. Abdul Hayee Sahib رحمة الله عليه narrated a state of Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه who said: I consider better than myself a Mumin in his present state of Eeman and an unbeliever as who knows he may possibly turn a Muslim in the future and attain a better position as a Muslim than I occupy. As regards the Muslims; his end may be better than mine. Keeping these possibilities in view I consider both better than myself. Anyway, it is not lawful to hate and condemn anyone on account of his sins.

Who Are Those Who Suffer From This Disease (of superiority complex)?

The disease of looking down upon others generally afflicts those who come back to the path of Deen from a life of indifference to religion. Such new comers to religion begin to offer their Salat regularly in the mosque, with the Jama'at (congregation), put on proper dresses, as prescribed in the Shari'ah. They mend their ways in conformity with the injunction of the Shari'ah. Satan exploits this change to make them proud of their apparent righteousness and as a result they begin to look downupon, and find faults with, others. They begin to indulge in self-esteem and to hate others. This trend and behaviour destroys man's virtues and good deeds. Those acts of virtue are acceptable in the sight of Allah for which man expresses gratitude for Allah. If a man has changed the course of his life and taken to the path of piety and righteousness, it is praiseworthy, but this change does not confer on him a right to hate anyone whether a beleiver or an unbeliever.

On seeing a sick person one should recite this supplication

It occurs in a Hadith that when a Muslim sees a man suffering from some disease or in a pitiable condition, he should recite this Du'a: (Supplication)

الحمدلله الذى عافانى مما ابتلاه به وفَضَّلَنِى علٰى كثير ممن خلق تفضيلاً (ترمذى كتاب الدعوات، باب مايقول اذا رأى مبتلى)

All praise is for Allah Who has bestowed upon me protection from that (disease or trouble) with which He has inflicted him and that He has made me superior to many of His creation.

The meaning is quite clear and it is a gift from the Holy Prophet ﷺ.

Dr. Abdul Hai Sahib رحمة الله عليه has said: that whenever he passed by a Hospital, he recited this supplication and at the same time he also prayed for quick recovery for the patients in the Hospital.

This Du'a (Supplication) should be recited also on seeing a Sinner

A professor of mine told me that he recited this Du'a, whenever he came across a person committing some sin. For example when he saw cinema-goers standing in a queue to purchase tickets, he recited this Du'a and thanked Almighty Allah for saving him from this humiliating sin. He believed that the sinners deserve sympathy rather than despise. He felt that these sinners may in future give up their sins, take to a life of piety and obedience and become superior to him. There was nothing for him to take pride. Man should, however, be grateful to Allah for saving him from these sins and misdeeds. He should also pray to Allah to grant speedy cure to those suffering from the malady of sins. There is also no cause for despising the sinners. They should be advised with kindness and love to give up their sins.

Hazrat Junaid Baghdadi رحمة الله عليه kissed the feet of a thief

My respected father Hazrat Mufti Muhammad Shafi Sahib رحمة الله عليه related an event of Hazrat Junaid Baghdadi رحمة الله عليه. The Sheikh was passing by a street when he saw that a man was hanged on the gibbet with each one of his hands and legs cut off. On enquiry he was told that the man was a habitual thief. When he was caught for the first time one of his hands was cut off, when he was caught for the second time one of his legs was cut off. He was caught stealing the third time, so he was being hanged on the gibbet. Hearing this the Shaikh stepped forward and kissed his leg. The people were very much surprised at that action and inquired of him the reason for kissing the feet of such a notorious and habitual thief. The Sheikh replied that no doubt the man was a great thief and a notorious criminal for which he was being hanged, yet he possessed the great quality of "steadfastness" even though he applied this quality in the wrong place. He remained steadfast in the sin of stealing which he had made his life work. He did not part with it when one hand was cut off, nor when his one leg was cut off until he was going to be hanged. This is to impress that righteous men do not hate their fellow men but hate their vices and sins. Their good qualities need to be emulated and their vices to be shunned and the sinners to be reformed as far as possible. Men addicted to some sins need to be sermonized with love and sympathy and never to be blamed, censured, ridiculed or taunted.

One believer is like a mirror for another believer What is the meaning of this maxim?

There is a Hadith declaring:

اَلْمُؤْمِنُ مِرْاٰةُ الْمُؤْمِنِ (ابو داؤد، كتاب الادب، باب فى النصيحة)

If a man's face is stained with some ugly spot, he beholds with his own eyes that spot when he stands before a mirror. Just like the mirror, a believer reflects the defects and fautls in another believer by disclosing them with love and sympathy to the believer concerned. This is exactly in the same way that when we see a man some insect or some dirty object we let that man know, so that he may shake the insect or the dirty object off his person. Likewise, if a believer has some error in him another believer should try to reform the erroneous person with love and sympathy. This is how this maxim is interpreted.

Do not disclose the vice of one man to another

Hazrat Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has observed that this Hadith advises that if you find a vice in a person you should disclose it to the person concerned, but should not disclose it to others. This is implied in the simile contained in using the word Mirror, because the mirror discloses the ugly spot on a man's face only to the person standing before the mirror and not to any other person. Accordingly, if a believer happens to find some defect or vice in another believer, he should disclose it to the person concerned and not to any other person. Disclosing the defect to others will mean that a selfishness of your own is involved in your action and it is not based on any consideration of service to Deen. Our Deen demands that the defect should be disclosed only to the person concerned with love and sympathy with the sole intention of reform.

May Almighty Allah help us all to understand the requirements of the Faith and to act accordingly. Aameen!

THE SIGNIFICANT ROLE OF 'MADRASAHS'

Respected Scholars, My dear class-fellow students, and the Honourable Audience

السلام علیکم و رحمة اللّٰه وبرکاته

INTRODUCTION

It was hardly proper for me to speak after the lessons imparted by my respected teacher, Sheikhul-Hadith, Maulana Subhan Mahmood Sahib - may his blessings increase, as his lessons are quite comprehensive and exhaustive. However, my respected teacher has himself ordered me to speak something on this occasion. It has also been the usual practice that my elder brother Hazrat Maulana Mufti Muhammad Rafi Usmani, the Rector of Darul-Uloom , who is presently on a tour, used to deliver a closing address at the end of the lessons of Bukhari. My brother, therefore, ordered me to say something in his behalf on this auspicious occasion. This is because something is better than nothing.

گندم اگر بہم نہ رسد جو غنیمت است

A Persian saying meaning:

If wheat is not available one should accept barley as a possible substitute.

I am, therefore, present before you in obedience to my respected brother's order.

It is an infinite mercy of Almighty Allah, for which it is impossible to thank adequately, that He has helped us, by His vast mercy, to complete the academic activities of the Darul-Uloom. This is the last blessed lesson which Almighty Allah has enabled all of us to attend. This was the last lesson from the Sahih-Bukhari. The most authentic book on the surface of the world after Allah's Book, the Holy Qur'an, is this book, compiled by Imam Bukhari رحمة اللّٰه علیه. The respected teacher, taught the students this sacred book all the year round from the beginning till the end of the book. Today is the day on which this blessed course of study has been completed for which we praise Allah. With this has ended also the academic year of the Darul-Uloom. In the beginning of the year when this study commenced none could say for certain who would be able to participate in the completion ceremony of the course. It is a great favour and mercy of Almighty Allah that He enabled me to take part in this ceremony. Infinite thanks are due to Him for this favour.

Countless are Allah's blessings

The Creator of the Universe has bestowed upon man endless blessings. Just see this one single blessing of breathing what a sublime blessing it is! Shaikh Sadi رحمة اللّٰه علیه, the renowned Persian Sufi poet, has explained this point in a very subtle way thus:

When a man breathes, he enjoys two blessings of Allah Almighty, viz., breathing in and breathing out. If a man is not able to take in the air while breathing or is not able to breath out the air taken in then this means instant death in either case. Thus, one breath contains two blessings and thanks are due to Allah for each blessing. In other words, Allah deserves two thanks for each breath. Thus, man cannot render thanks to Allah for the blessing of breathing, let alone thanksgiving for other blessings.

The blessings of Allah are falling down on man like the showers of rains, which none can count.

The Greatest blessing

The blessing of Eeman (Belief in Allah) is the greatest of all blessings. Exalted Allah has favoured us with the blessing of Eeman, in His great mercy. We do not value this great blessing for the reason that we have inherited this blessing from our parents as a free gift without having to put in any labour or without offering any sacrifice for it. That is why we do not realize its trimendous value. Enquire its value from Hazrat Bilal of Ethiopia. Hazrat Suhaib of Rome and Hazrat Zaid bin Harisah who suffered great and untold tortures and offered great sacrifices to attain the blessing of the Article of Faith:

لا اله الله محمد رسول الله

There is no God but Allah and Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah.

As for ourselves, we do not realize the value of this priceless blessing for the only reason that we were born in a Muslim household and got the unique blessing of Eeman without having to put in any labour or sacrifice for it, although it is undoubtedly the most sublime of all blessings. Next to the blessing of Eeman in value and sublimity is the blessing of the knowledge of the duties and obligations which the blessing of our Eeman imposes on us. In other words, the knowledge of the essential duties and responsibilities which fall on our shoulders as being Mumins (believers). This knowledge is the greatest blessings after Eeman (Faith).

Religious schools and propaganda against them

Some godly men established this Institution or Darul-Uloom in their sincerity to spread the light of the same knowledge. The Darul-Uloom which has completed its academic year today has been traversing the same path. Unfortunately these Religious schools and Institutions are being subjected today to various forms of adverse propaganda and bitter criticism, as if a flood of objections and taunts has been let loose against them. These objections emanate partly from those opponents who are enemies of the Faith (Islam) and deadly set against the supremacy of the Law of Allah on the surface of the earth. They indulge in adverse propaganda against the Religious schools. It is seen that sometimes religious minded persons also fall victim to this propaganda. Willingly or unwillingly adverse opinion spring up in their hearts also about these religious schools.

Objections are raised to all activites of Molvis

My late respected father رحمة الله عليه sometimes used to say in a jolly mood:

"This class of the Molvis is a class of the blameworthy."

He رحمة الله عليه meant by this witty remark to say that whenever some vice arises anywhere in the world, the people try to attribute it to the Molvis. They try to find one fault or another with whatever the Molvi does. If the poor Molvi, sitting in seclusion is rehearsing Allah's name or is imparting lessons to his disciples from the Qur'an and the Hadith, the people raise objections to him saying that he is ignorant of what is happening in the world and what turns its affairs are taking. He has no time to get out of the closed dome of بسم الله (In the name of Allah) On the other hand if a Molvi comes out of his secluded corner for the sake of some reformatory or social work, they object to the Movlis action by saying that the best occupation for a Molvi is to rehearse the name of Allah sitting within four walls of the Madrasah, but today he is involving himself in politics and governmental affairs. If there is a Molvi hard pressed for financial resources and has fallen a victim to poverty and starvation, the people blame him saying that he has made no arrangements for financial resources for his students by way of making them financially independent of others, when they leave the school the next day. How shall such students earn their living when they leave the school? If a Molvi by chance happens to be a rich man, possessing sufficient money, they taunt him with affluence and richness. In short, this poor Molvi is spared in no circumstances. Thus he belongs to the blameworthy party.

This class of Molvis is a shield for Islam

There are people who are indulging in well-planned propaganda with the objective of spreading suspicion and misconception about the Islamic scholars and students. This is enmity against Islam. This is because the enemies of Islam very well know that it is this group of teachers and their students squatting in their schools on mats spread on the ground which forms a shield for protecting Islam. These opponents of Islam know it fully well that, as long as the Molvis exist on the surface of the earth it is impossible to efface Islam from the surface of the earth. It is a matter of common observation that the face of Islam was badly distorted in places from where this poor and humble class of Molvies had been expelled or annihilated and how the conspiracies to efface Islam succeeded in these places.

With the help of Almighty Allah, I have travelled widely in the world. I have seen such parts of the Islamic world from where the very base of these schools has been uprooted, but what is the reslut? It seems as if the shepherd has been killed and the sheep have been left to the carnage of the wolves. From the point of religion this is the plight of the Muslims in many parts of the Islamic world.

The search for a Religious school in Baghdad

I have had the opportunity of visiting Baghdad. This is the city which had been the capital of the Islamic world for centuries. The world has seen there the splendour and grandeur of the Abbasid Caliphate. All sorts of arts and sciences developed and flourished there.

When I arrived there, I enquired from someone the address of some religious schools or the centre of religious knowledge and learning. I wanted to visit some of them. I was told that there was no trace of such religious institutions: all these have given place to modern schools and colleges. Now it is the University faculties where religious education may be acquired. Religion is taught in these faculties. By looking at the dress, etc., of the Professors, it is difficult even to acknowledge that they are Muslims, let alone their being Alims of the Islamic Shar i'ah and Fiqh. These Institutes follow the co-education system, i.e. both sexes study there together. Islam has become only a theory which is taught as a historical philosophy. This system of education has no effect on the lives of the students. Their study of Islam in these Universities is like that of the orientalists. Today Islam is being taught in Universities in America, Canada and in other European cities and the courses of study include Hadith (Traditions), Fiqh (Jurisprudence) and commentary of the Holy Qur'an. If you read their articles and research papers on Islam, you will come to know the names of books about which our naive Molvis are quite in dark. Apparently great research work is being done there on Islam. Any way, what is the good of a system of teaching, Islam which fails to equip men with the wealth of Eeman (True Belief)? All this research and intensive study day and night remain fruitless and the students thirst for understanding Islam in its true perspective remains unquenched. No doubt there are faculties of Shari'ah and the Principles of Deen in these Universities of the West-but the studies in these western Universities have no impact on the lives of the students. This is because the essence of these sciences and courses of study has been totally annihilated.

Then I asked the people the names and addresses of some scholars having the older pattern of teaching and learning. I was told that there was a Maktab (Religion school of the classical type) attached to a mosque near the tomb of Hazrat Sheikh Abdul Qadir Jilani رحمة الله عليه where a teacher of the old pattern of teaching lived and who had received education on the older system. I called upon that Ustaz and found that he was really trained and educated on the older system and curricula. My contact with him made me feel that I had really met a righteous God-fearing saint. He had received education in the lowly old-type schools, sitting on mats and leading a hard life of want and scarcity. I could observe on his face the light of the sciences of the Islamic Shari'ah. From this interview I received spiritual inspiration and satisfaction; I felt as if I had been transported to the gardens of Paradise.

Never tolerate the abolition of the Madaris running on the classical pattern

After formal introduction that saint asked me about my country and I told him that I had gone there from Pakistan. Thereafter he put to me a few questions about my Darul-Uloom and its curriculum. After I had given him some details about the Darul-Uloom he inquired of me about some of the books taught in the Darul-Uloom. When I told the names of some of the books, he felt deeply impressed to hear the names of those books and expressed grief for having been deprived of the blessings contained in them. He said that those are the book that produce godly men and sincere Muslims. He asked me to convey a message from him to the scholars of Pakistan exhorting them never to abolish in any circumstances these schools. This is because the enemies of Islam are aware that it is impossible to extinguish the fire of Eeman burning in the hearts of the Muslims as long as these highly simple and unsophisticated Madaris are in existence. That is why the enemies of Islam are concentrating their entire force of propaganda on the elemination of these Religious schools from the society.

A Remedy to save Religious Fervour and Zeal from cooling down

It is well-known about the late poet of the East, Dr. Muhammad Iqbal that he used to make sarcastic remarks about the typical Mulla, except that from time to time he also said things disclosing the truth to the people. Referring to the attitude of the English and the enemies of Islam, he has written at one place in a couplet about Afghanis:

افغانیوں کی غیرتِ دیں کا ہے یہ علاج
ملاّ کو ان کے کوہ و دمن سے نکال دو

If you want to eleminate the religious fervour of the Afghanis, then expel the Mulla from the hilly country, that is Afghan. As long as the Mulla is there the love and fervour of the Afghanis for their Deen (Islam) cannot be effaced from their hearts.

Objections raised against the Madaris (schools)

A violent propaganda campaign has been launched against the religious schools, that their origin dates back to 1400 years ago. The administrators and the teaching staff are outmoded and old-fashioned. They are retrogressive, unaware of the modern trends and developments of the world. They do not know how to live in this world according to the modern demands of life, nor have they equipped themselves with the modern scientific and atomic technology. These retrogrades want to revolve the wheel of the Muslim Ummah in the reverse gear. Such slogans have been raised from time to time. Their echo is again being heard in our country in full volume.

New force has been added to these slogans by alleging that these religious Madaris have turned into terrorist shelters and they are averse to progress. They are being defined variously with titles like fundamentalists, narrow-mindedness, retrogrades and many other blames are showered on this poor Molvi. The Molvi however, is firm and adamant in his stern attitude and stand.

The Molvi is a Die-Hard

My respected father used to say that this Molvi is a die-hard. He is ready to tolerate all taunts, however severe and pinching they may be. He is able to put up with all types of adverse situations. This is because one who enters the field of religious life and Islamic activities, he girds up his loins to bear all hardships and taunts from all quarters. He, therefore, enters this thorny field of Deen, prepared to welcome with a good grace all pleasant and unpleasant situations that confront him in the path of Deen.

جس کو ہو جان و دل عزیز اس کی گلی میں جائے کیوں

The idea contained in this line of Urdu poetry is that the path of Allah is difficult and only that person will walk on it who has the courage to face difficulties and give up ease and comforts of life.

A man gifted with an eye capable of seeing realities will readily recognize that these adverse remarks and taunts are in the nature of an ornament for one who preaches the way of Truth. These are taunts that were directed to the Prophets of Allah عليهم السلام and their successors and followers. These taunts will not stop, but will continue till the Day of Judgement.

May Allah maintain us, by His mercy, on the straight path, grant us sincerity and a desire to seek His pleasure. We should all know that these taunts have no reality. A day must come when these Molvis will be in a position to say:

فَالْيَوْمَ الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْا مِنَ الْكُفَّارِ يَضْحَكُوْنَ (المطففين : ٣٤)

This is the day when those who have believed shall laugh at the non-believers. (83:34)

May Allah grant honour and grace to the class of people who are today being disgraced.

وَلِلّٰهِ الْعِزَّةُ وَلِرَسُوْلِهٖ وَلِلْمُؤْمِنِيْنَ (المنافقون : ٨)

And honour belongs to Allah, to His Messenger and the believers. (63:8)

Notwithstanding the storm of these oppositions and taunts, the religious schools and Institutions are, by the grace of Allah, serving the Ummah and the cause of Islam and they will be carrying on their mission as long as it is the will of Almighty Allah. The treacherous taunts and oppositions of the enemies of Islam can do no harm to them.

Give up worrying about the means of livelihood for these Molvis

Voices are being raised today in our society that these religious schools should be closed. There are men who lend support to this demand, not out of opposition and enmity, but out of sympathy and by way of reform.

Sometimes people suggest that these Molvis should be trained for some jobs for earning their livelihood, e.g., carpentary, ironmongery and some such arts to earn their bread and butter. Therefore, people come forward with vicious proposals, including the establishment of workshops for the benefit of these Molvis.

My respected father رحمة الله عليه used to advise that anxiety about the livelihood of these Molvis should be given up, because the Molvis shall themselves solve the problem of their livelihood. You can, he said, cite no case in which a Molvi ever committed suicide on account of starvation. My father said: I can give the examples of many Doctors of Philosophy and Masters of Arts who committed suicide on account of financial difficulties. There are also many who hold these degrees, yet they are not finding employment. This cannot be asserted about a Molvi that he is facing unemployment.

Almighty Allah the Creator and Sustainer by His infinite mercy, looks after the livelihood of His creatures much better than others.

Condemn this world

My student colleagues! Try to fully understand that it is a peculiarity of the world that the more a person hankers after it the more the world runs away from him, and the more a man runs away from the world, the more the world hankers after that person. This may be explained by the example of the shadow. If a man begins to run after his shadow, shadow will also continue moving ahead of him and the man will not be able to catch the shadow. On the contrary if a man runs with his back turned back his shadow, the shadow shall run after the man. This is exactly the behaviour of the world. The more a man desires the world, the more the world remains away from that man and the vice versa is also true. You may have observed that those servants of Allah who putting trust in Allah and devoted their lives to the service of Deen and kicked away the world for the sake of Allah, Allah brought the world right under the feet of those servants of Allah to the envy of others. In this way it is the practice of Merciful Allah to display to the world the dignity and honour which the men of Allah enjoy among their fellow-men.

May Allah grant us sincerity, choose us for His service and for the service of His Deen (Islam) and help us to sacrifice our lives for the cause of Islam. If we are fortunate enough to make this sacrifice, we shall be losers neither in this world nor in the Hereafter.

So, do not worry at all about the livelihood of the Molvi, because Allah is the Best Sustainer. When Almighty Allah provides for the dogs, the assess, and the swines, why should He not provide for the helpers of His Deen (Islam)?

Do not make Molvi an Ironmonger or a Carpenter

It is indeed necessary for an efficient and successful preacher of Deen that he should also be acquainted with some worldly sciences and arts. A Faqih (Jurist) is really one who has a knowledge of the conditions and trends of his times. Whatever he learns and teaches with this intention is a part of Deen. But you must remember that if you have once made Molvi a Carpenter or an ironmonger, then he shall become totally devoted to these professions. My respected father said that if a Molvi thought that he should devote his major time to carpentary or ironmongery and should devote his spare hours to his free service to Deen, then this was not practicable. This trend of thought would turn him into a full-fledged carpenter or ironmonger and he would put in no service in the way of Deen.

An Instructive Event

My respected father once related the following event:

Hazrat Sahool Usmani رحمة الله عليه was a renowned professor of Darul-Uloom Deoband. He was one of the favoured students of Hazrat Maulana Mahmoodul Hasan رحمة الله عليه. He was very efficient and well-versed in the field of literature. Once it occurred to him that teaching religious subjects in return for salary was wage-earning and no service to Deen which should be rendered without any return. He, therefore, began to think of some occupation, e.g., delivering speeches, writing Fatawa (Religious Rulings), etc., so that he could serve Deen in the spare time without any return. In the meantime he received an offer from a government school to take up a teacher's job there under such and such terms and conditions. You know that to be a teacher in a Government school is a very easy job, where the teacher has not to do much preparatory work and has to take only two or three classes during the whole working period. In a Darul-Uloom the Ustaz has to teach classes about five hours and this teaching work of five hours he has to do after about ten hours of preparatory work. Such hard and long work is not demanded in colleges and Universities. He thought that it was a God-given opportunity to take up the offer, and he could be able to serve Deen free of charge. He asked Hazrat Sheikhul Hind to permit him to take up the Government job and the Sheikh accorded him permission for that. When after about six months Maulana Sahool came to Deoband and met Hazrat Sheikhul Hind رحمة الله عليه the Sheikh asked him this question: During this period how many books did you compile, how many sermons did you deliver and how many Fatawa did you write? Hearing these questions the Maulana burst into tears and said: It was only Satan's deception. Although there was much spare time, yet the service to Deen during this time was not even half of what I was able to do, with the help of Allah, while staying in the sacred precincts of the Darul-Uloom.

After relating this event my respected father used to say:

Almighty Allah has graced the atmosphere of these institutions with a peculiar blessing and light which enable a man side by side to serve Deen, while living in the shade of that atmosphere. As regards the scanty salary one draws for service in these Deeni Institutions is not a remuneration for the work done; it is only a subsistence allowance. Allah grants grace and blessings for working for Deen on this scantly allowance.

The blessings of the teaching Profession

Now I am relating to you an experience of my own. I hope all my colleagues will support me about the truth of my statement. When I am busy with my classes, I am able to do more extra-curricular work than during the vacation of the Darul-Uloom. We all do chalk out programmes for work but we fail to complete the programmes during the vacations. I believe that this is by virtue of the blessed work of learning and teaching.

Student life ameliorates the Hereafter

This year two thousand eight hundred and fifty students are on the rolls in the Darul-Uloom. In addition, the number of students studying in the Qur'an schools in the city is over six thousand. In the Hadith classes there were one hundred and fifty-eight students who are now being awarded Degrees on the completion of their courses this year. Praise be to Almighty Allah that the honour of عالم (graduate) is now being conferred upon them. The people are now asking where shall all these Ulama (graduates) be accommodated? This reminds me of an event.

An event concerning
Hazrat M'aroof Karkhi رحمة الله عليه

Hazrat M'aroof Karkhi رحمة الله عليه was one of the most dignified friends of Allah who lies buried in the city of Baghdad. I have also had the honour of paying a visit to his tomb. It is related about him that once, when he was going along the bank of the River Tigris with his companions, a boat passed that way, on that boat were sailing some carefree young men. They were merry-making and enjoying music. When their boat passed by Hazrat M'aroof Karkhi رحمة الله عليه they cut jokes with the saint and his companions and directed ridiculing remarks against them. One of the saint's companions felt offended at the misbehaviour of these youngsters and requested the saint to curse them. Hazrat M'aroof Karkhi رحمة الله عليه raised his hands up and prayed thus for the merry-makers:

> O Allah! You have granted these young men the pleasures of the world. O Allah! Grant them the pelasures of the Hereafter also

On this the saint's companion began to say : O Sire ! Instead of cursing them you have prayed in their favour. In reply the saint observed: what have I lost? I have prayed in their favour for the pleasures of the Hereafter which shall come to them only when they have become Muslims and righteous in the true sense.

In short, those who come to the Madaris to receive religious education are in fact acting upon the policy of Hazrat M'aroof Karkhi رحمة الله عليه, that Allah may ameliorate the Hereafter of the other Muslim brothers just as He has ameliorated their world. These students come to these schools for the betterment of their own Hereafter and that of others. This is their career and these are their future prospects. Allah does not spoil their future, so none need worry about them. We should, however, be anxious about our remaining firm and steadfast on our Eeman (belief). May Allah help us discharge the obligations which our Eeman imposes on us. Aameen!

The Income and expenditure of the Madaris

The annual expenditure of this Darul-Uloom runs into millions of Rupees for which no budget is prepared. I challenge you to show an establishment, other than Religious schools, incurring such huge expenditure which prepares no budget. Budget is prepared in establishments which have sure means of income. Budget forecasts are made with reference to the income. As for ourselves, we do not know what shall be our income during the ensuing year. So far we have never done anything on the basis of Budgets. People often ask what is the income to meet such huge annual expenditure of the Darul-Uloom. We have no permanent and sure means of income, except some bequeasts in the form of few houses the total annual rent of which amounts to Rupees 50 or 60 thousands only. Then the people ask about the source of the remaining expenditure. In reply we show our ignorance about it. This is the reality that we do not know how the expenditure is met.

So far this Darul Uloom is concerned, it does not resort to advertisements, nor any appeals addressed to the public. Even telephonic appeals are not made to any parties for financial help.

About fifteen days ago when I was setting off on a tour I was informed that the balance available is not sufficient for the month of Sha'ban. Even in that situation no complaint about it was made to anyone to suggest financial assistance.

We depend on, and seek help from, Allah only

My respected father has, however, taught a very valuable lesson that if we are in financial difficulties we should seek Allah's assistance. Praise be to Allah that we follow this advice. I did not iniquire about the financial position even after my return, but by Allah's grace everything was going on smoothly. This is a charitable gift from my respected father and my Sheikh Hazrat Dr. Abdul Haiyee Sahib رحمة الله عليه.

We claim no credit for this. In fact if we depended on our own efforts, it would be impossible to run such a big Institution. It is Almighty Allah Who is running the Darul Uloom by His mercy and by virtue of the sincerity and the hearty supplication of these righteous and God-fearing saints.

This is a Deeni Madrasah and not a shop

My respected father had warned us saying: We have not opened a shop for which it is necessary that it should be going on profitably and continuously. Try to maintain and run it as long as you can do this according to the principles of honesty and the injunctions of the Sharee'ah. If you feel that in continuing the Institution further you will have to violate the principles of the Sharee'ah and disgrace our Deen, you should close it down. This is how our respected father advised us about it. Praise be to Allah that He has been running the Darul Uloom quite smoothly and successfully. You will not find this example in any other Institution of the world. This is a miraculous feat of Allah which anyone can see with his own eyes. It is, however, another matter that we are always prepared to accept suggestions and proposals for the improvement and betterment of the Darul Uloom.

We are, therefore, not prepared to accept a proposal to change the existing pattern and programme. This can never happen as long as we are alive. If pressure is brought to bear upon us from any quarters in this behalf, there will be no alternative for us but to close it down. We, however, feel quite confident that such a crisis shall not come to pass and Exalted Allah shall run and maintain the Darul Uloom on its settled path and programme till the Day of Judgement.

It was necessary to bring to your notice this aspect concerning the Darul Uloom.

Know your worth

My dear student colleagues,

Mind carefully that after leaving the Darul Uloom, you shall enter a world which will welcome you with showers of taunts and pinching adverse remarks. However, you must remember that you are soldiers of the Army of the Holy Prophet ﷺ : you must fight your way to success as He ﷺ did with the help of Allah.

I advise you to imprint on your hearts a wise phrase which my elder saint Hazrat Sheikhul Hadith Maulana Muhammad Zakariya رحمة الله عليه uttered while sitting in this very mosque:

"طالب علمو! اپنی قدر پہچانو"

"O students ! Gknow your worth

Almighty Allah has favoured you with the wealth of knowledge and has chosen you for the service of His Deen (Islam).

These blessings and these honours are weightier than the entire world. If you have in your heart the honour of your Deen, none can efface it, however, violently the worldly-wise ones may raise objections to you. When you enter upon your new worldly career with this firm belief, honour and success will greet you, provided that you first apply to your own lives the knowledge which you have acquired here and spread its light all over the world.

May Almighty Allah open for you at every step the gate of success and may He help us all to be steadfast on our Deen and to realize and acknowledge the value of this knowledge. May Almighty Allah be your helper and protector wherever you are. Aameen!

SUFFERING, A BLESSING IN DISGUISE

اما بعد!

فقد قال النبى صلى الله عليه وسلم:

اَشَدُّ النَّاسِ بَلاَءً اَلْاَنْبِيَآءُ ثُمَّ الْاَمْثَل فَالْاَ مْثَل

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and seek His forgiveness and believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Him from the evils of our souls and from the vices of our deeds. There is none to misguide him whom He guides and there is none to guide him whom He lets go astray. We bear witness that there is no god but Allah the One Who has no partner. We also bear witness that our sire, and our authority and our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad ﷺ is His servant and His Messenger. May Almighty Allah have mercy on him, his household and bless and salute them all in great abundance.

Glad tidings for the miserable

This Hadith contains good tidings for them who are facing various troubles and difficulties, yet they maintain their relationship with Allah and try to get rid of troubles and difficulties through supplications addressed to Allah for help and relief. The glad tidings in this Hadith for men concerned is that Almighty Allah has inflicted on them these troubles and difficulties out of His love and mercy and not out of His displeasure and anger.

There are two categories of miseries

Man becomes miserable and troubled on account of sickness, poverty, indebtedness, unemployment or household worries. These and all other troubles that assail man are of two categories. The first category of worries and troubles are those that fall on man by way of punishment and torture from Allah. Man shall taste the real taste of punishment for his sins and misdeeds in the Hereafter. However, sometimes Allah punishes the sinners in this world also. It has been said in the Holy Qur'an:

وَلَنُذِيْقَنَّهُمْ مِّنَ الْعَذَابِ الْاَدْنٰى دُوْنَ الْعَذَابِ الْاَكْبَرِ لَعَلَّهُمْ يَرْجِعُوْنَ

(سورة السجدة : ٢١)

And surely We make them taste the lighter punishment (of the world) before the heavier punishment (of the Hereafter), that they may perhaps return (to righteousness). (32:21)

In other words, Allah inflicts on the sinners only token punishments in this world also as a timely warning that they may give up their sins and take to piety and righteousness.

The second category of troubles and tortures are those which Allah inflicts on man with the intention of elevating his status and granting him reward and recompense in return for his troubles and worries suffered in this world.

Some "Troubles" descend from Allah on man as punishment

How to distinguish one category of troubles from the other category? Each category has its distinctive symptoms. There is a man who, while suffering from these troubles and worries, does not turn his attention to Allah. He begins to curse his destiny and gives up some of his routine rehearsals of Allah's names. Sometimes, he misses some of his daily Salat. He takes resort to all the necessary worldly measures to get out of his troubles and difficulties, but he does not turn to Allah in repentance and with supplications for relief. These symptoms are a clear indication that the man concerned is under Allah's displeasure and anger. May Allah save us all from this woe. Aameen!

"Troubles" are also due to Allah's mercy

There is a man who, in spite of his difficulties and worries, there is repentance to Allah, acknowledges his helplessness and prays to Allah in all sincerity and humbleness for mercy and help. He has no grudge, and acutely the stroke of the mishap under which he is labouring, yet instead of cursing his fate, he turns to Allah with repentane and remembrance. He offers his Salat with greater sincerity, regularity and concentration. In the case of such a person these troubles, miseries and worries are a source of reward; they attract Allah's mercy; they are a sign of divine love and sympathy.

No man is free from Troubles and Worries

The natural phenomenon is that when a person loves anyone he tries to please his beloved and provides for him ease, comfort and happiness. According to this common formula Allah too shall provide ease and comfort to the person He loves. How is it that Allah inflicts with troubles, difficulties and worries the person whom He loves and befriends? The answer to this question is quite obvious. There is no one in this world, not even a King, a Prophet, a Sufi or a millionaire who is immune from these troubles, worries and hardships. Almighty Allah has so created and planned this world that, grief and joy, comfort and discomfort, health and sickness, etc. go together. This world is not a place of unmixed ease and joy nor a bed of Roses. Pure joy and happiness will be avilable only in Paradise. It has been said in the Holy Qur'an لاخوف عليهم ولا هم يحزنون i.e., (In Paradise) they will have neither fear nor grief. As regards the world, Allah has so created it that sometime a man will have joy and comfort and another time he will face grief and hardships. In the same way in this world there is alternations of hot and cold, shade and sunshine and similar vicissitudes of life. It is, therefore, impossible that a man should remain in this world free from worries and adversities. This is against the law of nature and Allah's will.

A story full of morals

Hakeemul-Ummah Hazrat Ashraf Ali Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has related in one of his sermons the story of a man who happened to meet Hazrat Khizr عليه السلام He requested Hazrat Khizr عليه السلام to pray for him that he might remain safe and secure in his life from all sorts of grief, troubles, mishaps and hardships. Hazrat Khizr عليه السلام told the man that he could not suplicate to Allah for such a boon, as worldly life was full of such troubles, worries and grief. He, however, advised the man to go round the world to find out a person free from all the thorns of life and enjoying blissful existence. If he came across such a fortunate person then he (Hazrat Khizr عليه السلام) would supplicate to Allah to make the applicant like that fortunate person.

The man made a round of the world and his eyes fell upon a handsome jeweller rolling in gold, silver and precious stones. He had a well-decorated shop, a magnificent mansion and highly sophisticated means of comforts and luxuries. In addition, the jeweller had healthy and beautiful sons and daughters playing before him. Enchanted by the apparent pomp and show of this jeweller, the man desired to become like him. Before leaving the place it occurred to the man that he should ask the jeweller if he had any internal diseases, worries or troubles. The man, therefore, called upon the jeweller and explained to him his problem.

The jeweller took the man aside and told him that he was the most unfortunate man in the world. He then related to the stranger the sad story of his immoral wife and said that the handsome sons and daughters were illegitimate issues. The jeweller said that he was the most wretched and tortuous existence of which not a single moment was free from inward fretting. The jeweller, therefore, advised the man not to become like him. The man then concluded his wandering, went back to Hazrat Khizr عليه السلام and told him that he could not find in the entire world a single soul free from troubles, hardships and worries whom he could desire to emulate. Hazrat Khizr عليه السلام repeated his earlier statement that none in this world was free and exempt from troubles, grief and worries. He, however, prayed that Allah would favour that man with peace, prosperity and contentment in life.

Allah has granted different types of wealth to different men

It is impossible for anyone in this world to be free from grief, troubles and hardships. Everyone is suffering from one worry or another in varying degrees. Almighty Allah has planned the affairs of this universe in such a way that upon one person He has bestowed the wealth of worldly riches and upon another the bounty of health. Someone is well-off economically, but care-ridden mentally and inwardly. These instances of afflictions peculiar to, and different in, each individual case can be multiplied. It has already been explained that it is up to man to turn these hardships and troubles into torments or blessings according to his attitude towards them.

Why should a favourite servant of Allah be burdened with cares and worries?

The Holy Prophet ﷺ is reported to have said in a Hadith:

اذا احب الله عبدا صب عليه البلاء صبا

When Allah loves some servant He showers on him torrents of calamities and trials.

When the Angels inquire from Allah the cause of this strange treatment of His favourite servants, Allah replies to them, saying: Let him remain in this condition, weeping and seeking for help, as I like this begging and suplications from him. This Hadith is weak in its authority but there are many Ahadith to the same effect.

According to another Hadith, Allah asks His Angels to go to His servant and entangle him in some trial because He is pleased with his weeping and crying for mercy and help. The secret of this strange treatment of Allah with His beloved servant lies in the fact that Allah desires to convert the troubles and trials of His servant into everlasting peace and comfort and elevate his status in the Hereafter by purging him of the filth of his sins committed in the worldly life.

Prizes for those who are patient and forbearing

None can be dearer to Allah in this world than His Prophets عليهم السلام there is Hadith saying:

اشد الناس بلاء الا نبياء ثم الامثل فالا مثل

The most severely burdened with calamities (in this world) are the Prophets عليهم السلام, then those who come next to them in righteousness and Prophetic conduct.

Just look at Hazrat Ibrahim عليه السلام, bearing the title of Khalilul-laah (Allah's friend). Trimendous calamities and huge misfortunes fell on him. He was flung into fire, was commanded to kill his son (Hazrat Ismael عليه السلام) and abandon his family in a dry, desolate territory. In short, he was subjected to great trials and triublations. He was afflicted with these hardships and calamities that his status may be elevated. When the people will receive their rewards and prizes from Allah on the Day of Judgement they will realize that the trials and tribulations they suffered in the world were nothing as compared with these prizes and returns. The people will forget the hardships they endured in the world. It occurs in a Hadith that when Allah shall compensate in the Hereafter those who suffered tortures and troubles with patience in their worldly lives, others beholding these prizes and awards will desire if their skins had been cut to pieces and they had endured their ordeals with patience in order to become entitled to those prizes and grants.

A most suitable example of hardship

Hazrat Ashraf Ali Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has compared these sufferings to some ailment in a person's body for the cure of which the Doctors have advised surgical operation. The patient is well aware that the Surgeon shall make incision in his body with a lancet on account of which he will suffer great pain and discomfort. Notwithstanding this the patient requests the Surgeon for performing an operation without delay for which he is ready to pay the Surgeon handsome fees. Why is he doing this? The patient knows that the pain he will suffer on account of the operation is nothing as compared with the expected cure which will relieve him permanently of the tortures he has been enduirng. Thus, the Surgeon ready to cut his body with his lancet is a benefactor of the patient, as his action apparently cruel, is expected to bring relief and cure to the patient.

Exactly in the same way when Allah afflicts someone with troubles, worries and hardships, He is performing an operation on him in order to cure him of his sins, so that he may appear before Allah in the Hereafter, pure and purified.

Another example

You may have a beloved whom you have not met for a long time and are anxious to see him. He suddenly comes and grasps you from the back and squeezes you with force-with such a force that you feel pain in your ribs. You want to get rid of his hold but the person who is your beloved tells you that he is your beloved and, if you feel pain by his grasp, he is going to relax his grasp and grasp someone else. If you are true in your love, you will desire your beloved to grasp you even with a greater pressure, because you had been waiting for him for a long time. On this occasion you will recite this Persian couplet:

نہ شود نصیبِ دشمن کہ شود ہلاک تیغت
سرِ دوستاں سلامت کہ تو خنجر آزمائی

The idea expressed in this couplet is that:
A true lover will never like that even the tyrannies perpetrated by the beloved should be the lot of anyone other than the lover.

Those who recite انا لله (We belong to Allah) when afflicted with hardships

When some hardship falls on a servant from Allah He elevates his status, if he turns to Allah in repentance and submission. Almighty Allah has said in the Holy Qur'an:

وَلَنَبْلُوَنَّكُمْ بِشَيْءٍ مِّنَ الْخَوْفِ وَالْجُوْعِ وَنَقْصٍ مِّنَ الْاَمْوَالِ وَالْاَنْفُسِ
وَالثَّمَرٰتِ ط وَبَشِّرِ الصّٰبِرِيْنَ ○ الَّذِيْنَ اِذَآ اَصَابَتْهُمْ مُّصِيْبَةٌ قَالُوْٓا اِنَّا لِلّٰهِ وَاِنَّـا

اِلَيْهِ رَاجِعُوْنَ ۝ اُولٰٓئِكَ عَلَيْهِمْ صَلَوٰتٌ مِّنْ رَّبِّهِمْ وَرَحْمَةٌ ۖ وَاُولٰٓئِكَ هُمُ الْمُهْتَدُوْنَ ۝ (سورة البقرة: ۱۵۵ : ۱۵۷)

And surely We shall try you with something of fear and hunger, and loss of wealth and lives and crops, and give glad tidings to the steadfast, who say when misfortune falls on them: We belong to Allah and we shall indeed return to Him. Such are they on whom are blessings from Allah and they are the rightly guided ones. (2:155-157)

Anyway, it must be noted that it is Allah's system and practice that sometimes He inflicts His righteous servants with hardships and misfortunes with the intention of elevating their status and position in the Hereafter.

We put to trouble our friends

My respected father Hazrat Mufti Muhammad Shafi Sahib رحمة الله عليه used to recite this Persian couplet in a state of deep enthusiasm:

ما پروریم دشمن و ما می کشیم دوست
کس را چوں و چرا نہ رسد در قضاءِ ما

Almighty Allah says that sometimes He cherishes the enemy and kills the friend. There is none to take exceptions to His decree.

It is becuase Alah alone Knows the expedients of His actions and decisions.

A Unique story

Hazrat Ashraf Ali Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has mentioned in one of his sermons that there were two persons in a city lying on their death-beds. One of them was a Muslim and the other a Jew. The Jew desired to eat fish which was not available in the vicinity. The Muslim desired to eat olive oil. Allah called two Angels and commanded one of them to procure fish for the Jew that he could satisfy his desire. As regards the dying Muslim, sufficient quantity of olive oil was available. Allah commanded the other Angel to go and destroy the olive oil. The Angels proceeded on their missions, but both happened to meet each other and inquired about their respective missions. They were each at a loss to understand why each had been sent on an opposite mission. Anyway, each discharged his mission.

When they came back after having discharged their missions, they requested Allah to let them know why the desire of the Muslim who was an obedient believer was not fulfilled although olive oil was available with him, whereas the desire of the Jew was fufilled by procuring fish for him. Almighty Allah told the Angels that they did not know the wisdom underlying His actions. Allah explained to them that He treated the infidels and the Muslims differently. The infidels also do good deeds in this world in the form of charity, opening schools and building asylums. Their good deeds are not acceptable in the Hereafter, but they are repaid for their good deeds in this world. As regards the believers, Allah desires to punish them for their sins in this world, so that they may face Allah in the Hereafter free from sins and vices.

That is why, said Allah, the Jew was compensated for his good deeds in this world. Only one good deed remained to be compensated which was compensated by fulfilling his desire to eat fish. As for the Muslim, all his sins had been washed off during his sickness. only one sin remained against him which was washed off by refusing to fulfil his desire to eat olive oil at the time of his death so that he should appear before Allah free and purified from all sins.

Who can find out the wisdom underlying Allah's actions? Our intellectual capacity is too limited to understand the secret and wisdom at the back of Allah's acts and decisions. Almighty Allah is running the workshop of this vast universe with His wisdom and prudence which is not possible for man to understand and envisage.

The calamities coming down from Allah are forced Mujahadat (strivings)

My Sheikh, Hazrat Dr. Abdul Hayee Sahib رحمة الله عليه used to say that in the olden days when a disciple surrendered himself to spiritual guide for spiritual training and reform, the disciple was subjected to very hard Mujahadat (strivings) and disciplines which were not compulsory but were optional. Now such strenuous and hard disciplines and exercises have been abandoned. Allah has, however, not deprived these disciples of the benefit of such Mujahadat. Such trainees are subjected to forced and compulsory disciplines. The progress made under these Mujahadat is quicker, more lasting and effective. Compulsory disciplines are imposed by Allah Himself in the shape of difficulties, worries, hardships and sickness, etc. The progress made under these forced Mujahadat is quicker, more lasting and effective.

There were no optional Mujahadat in the lives of the Noble Companions رضى الله عنهم. For example, they did not have to resort to intentional starvation, self-denial or self-torture, but we find in their lives frequent forced Mujahadat. As a punishment for reciting the Article of Faith لا اله الا الله محمد رسول الله they were forced to lie on burning sand, blocks of stones were placed on their chests. They were subjected to untold tortures and tyrannies for cooperating with and supporting the Holy Prophet ﷺ. All these ordeals were forced Mujahadat on account of which the status of the Noble Companions رضى الله عنهم was elevated to such heights that a non-companion cannot even dream of approaching them. So forced Mujahadat are conducive to speedier achievement of success. Thus, these troubles, hardships and worries which we take as calamities and misfortunes are really forced spiritual disciplines and they reflect Allah's mercy and love for His servant.

A third example of hardships

Take the example of a small child who feels afraid of being given a bath or having his hands and face washed, because he experiences discomfort in cleaning and washing operations. The mother, however, performs these hygienic operations on her child, in spite of his protests, because she knows that cleanliness is indispensable for the child's health. On the other hand in his ignorance, the child feels that the mother is torturing him. At this moment the child, in his innocence feels disgusted with the mother's handling of him so roughly, but later the child will feel with gratitude that the mother's actions were in the best interest of his well-being and good health and her behaviour with her innocent child was based only on affection and pure love. So does Allah subject His servants to cleaning operations.

A fourth example

The parents of a small child get his child admitted to a school and take care to send him to school regularly, even the child frets and protests vehemently against this drill which is undesirable to him and regards the school as a jail. It is, however, in the best interest of the child that he should be sent to school even by force, if necessary. After getting the age of sense and understanding he will realize that if his parents had not taken pains in sending him to school for education he would not have found himself today among the educated and respectable class of the society.

In the same way, as these examples show, Allah sends down on his servants hardships, misfortunes and worries to raise up their status provided he turns during these trials to Allah in repentance and gratitude for these afflictions. Thus, these hardships and troubles are Allah's mercy in disguise.

The ordeals that fell on Hazrat Ayyub عليه السلام

Just consider for a while the sufferings of Hazrat Ayyub عليه السلام. To what a horrible disease he was subjected ! Satan visited him in this condition and told him that the malady was due to his sins which was inflicted on him because of Allah's displeasure. In addition, he put forward his proofs in support of his allegations. On this occasion he debated with Hazrat Ayyub عليه السلام.

Hazrat Ayyub عليه السلام counteracted Satan's argument by saying: It is wrong to allege that this disease is due to Alalh's displeasure on account of my sins. In fact, the ordeal of the disease is a token of love and favour towards me from my Allah. I do invoke Allah to cure this disease, but I do not complain against Him for the disease. At the same time I do not object to the disease which has been sent down to me by Allah, nor do I ask why my Allah has inflicted me with this disease. I always turn to Allah in repentance and submit to Him the Qur'anic Du'a (Supplication).

أَنِّي مَسَّنِيَ الضُّرُّ وَأَنتَ أَرْحَمُ الرَّاحِمِينَ (سورة الانبياء : ٨٣)

(And Job, when he cried to his Lord, saying):
O my Lord adversity has touched me; indeed, and You are the Most Merciful of all who show mercy. (21:83)

Hazrat Ayyub عليه السلام added saying:

My invoking Allah is a favour from Him. When He has caused me to turn to Him in repentance, it is quite clear that this misforune too is a sign of His Mercy and love.

The sign to indicate that a particular hardship is a Mercy from Allah

In the ordeal of Hazrat Ayyub عليه السلام there are signs to indicate which hardship comes as a punishment due to Allah's anger and displeasure and which one is a favour and mercy from Allah. In the first case the man afflicted with the hardships begins to murmur and complain and raise objections to Allah and does not turn to Him in repentance. In the other case the man's conduct is just the opposite. He prays to Allah to relieve him of the hardship which is too severe for a weak and helpless man like him to bear.

So at the time of a suffering when a man is enabled to turn to Allah in repentance for help he should believe that the hardship is a mercy from Allah and ultimately it will be a source of goodness for the sufferer in this world as well as in the Hereafter. If the hardship had struck the sufferer as a sign of Allah's displeasure and anger, he would not have been enabled to turn to Allah in repentance with submissiveness.

Whenever a man becomes inclined to turn to Allah in times of hardships and calamities, the calamity should be regarded as a mercy from Allah.

The sign of the acceptance of a Du'a (supplication)

Sometimes it so happens that a hardship falls on a man and on that account the afflicted man turns to Allah, praying for relief but the hardship is not lifted from him and his prayer for relief appears to have been ignored. How is it so ? The reply to this question lies in the fact that when a man is enabled under very pressing circumstances to turn to Allah, begging recovery and relief then this is a sign that the Du'a (supplication) has been accepted. In the case of rejection of the supplication the sufferer would not have been enabled to turn to Allah with this supplication for relief. In such a situation the sufferer shall get two rewards - a reward for his suffering and another for submitting his supplication to Allah. In addition to this he shall get a reward for each repetition of his supplication. Maulana Rumi رحمة الله عليه has very aptly expressed this idea in the following line in Persian:

When My servant utters My name "Allah" then his very uttering of My name is a sign that I have accepted his call.

Thus, being enabled by Allah to put forward to Him an appeal for help is a sign that the appeal has been granted. It, however, depends on Allah's wisdom and prudence how long He should let the hardship last and when be lifted. By nature man is hasty and wants prompt relief, but the delay in relief is elevating his status in the sight of Allah. He should, therefore, refrain from murmuring and complaining against his suffering. He should, however, remain praying to Allah for relief till the trouble is lifted from him.

An event that happened to Hazrat Haji Imdaduallah Sahib رحمة الله عليه

Man should never desire that he should be tried with hardships, but when they befall him, he should accept them with patience without making complaints against them. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has himself sought refuge with Allah from hardships. In one supplication he ﷺ has said: O Allah, I seek refuge with You from serious diseases and ailments. When diseases actually fell on him, he ﷺ took them as a favour for him ﷺ, but prayed to Allah for relief from the disease. Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has related a story in one of his sermons about Haji Imdadullah Sahib رحمة الله عليه that once the latter was speaking in his assembly on this topic. He said that all hardships that come down from Allah are mercy and bounty, provided the person concerned recognises the value of the hardships and turns to Allah in repentance and humble submission. A man came to the assembly who was suffering from leprosy which had made his body rotten. The man requested the saint to pray to Allah for cure from the heinous disease. Haji Sahib رحمة الله عليه had just then told the assembly that all sufferings are mercy from Allah. They wondered what reply Haji Sahib was going to give to the man. Haji Sahib raised up his hands for supplication and spoke out the following words:

> O Allah, the disease with which this man has been afflicted is also a sign of Your mercy. but on account of our weakness we are not able to bear this form of your mercy. So O Allah, I pray to You to convert the blessing of this disease into the blessing of cure and health for this man.

This supplication reveals the understanding of Deen which is acquired from the company of Godly men.

The essence of the Hadith

Any way, the essence of this Hadith is that when Allah loves anyone of His servants He subjects him to some trial, as He appreciates his bewailing, weeping and crying for Divine help. Thereafter, in return for this ordeal Allah elevates his status and forgives his sins. It is our duty in the first instance to seek refuge with Allah from such ordeals, hardships and sicknesses and if ordeals, hardships fall on us we should seek help from Allah and turn to Him in repentance and submission.

When a hardship befalls anyone the victim should display humbleness

It is related about some saints that when they were afflicted with hardships they groaned and expressed the pains they suffered from their sufferings. This attitude indicates apparently the show of impatience and complaint against their afflictions, although such attitude has been forbidden. The answer to this objection is implied in the Hadith itself. The righteous and favoured servants of Allah do not murmur and complain against their hardships. They claim that they have been afflicted with hardships so that they could express before Allah their helplessness, servitude and their humbleness and they should also groan in their suffering. They do so, because they realize that Alalh tries them with the hardships in order to hear groans and see their depressed condition and their wailing. They say that it is not right to express courage and defiance on such occasions.

The account of a righteous man

My respected father Hazrat Mufti Muhammad Shafi Sahib رحمة الله عليه related to us the account of a righteous man who fell sick and another righteous man called on him to inquire after his health. He saw that the patient was rehearsing the words الحمد لله ، الحمد لله (Praise be to Allah). The visitor said: It is very nice that you are expressing gratitude to Allah, but it is also necessary that you should groan during your sickness; you cannot recover from the sickness unless you give vent to your suffering by your groans. Allah has afflicted you with this sickness that you may bewail your sickness and express your helplessness before Him. Servitude demands that a man should not display before Allah his boldness and defiance. He should rather show his helplessness and pray to Alalh to grant him cure, as he was weak and unable to endure the impacts of the sickness. My late elder brother Zaki Kaifi used to compose good poetry. He has expressed this idea very beautifully in one of his couplets:

توڑنا ہے حسن کا پندار کیا

when some hardship falls on man from Allah it is not good to suppress the pain and grief to such a degree that the effect of the suffering is not visible from his face and his behaviour. This is the display of a sort of boldness before Allah, as if the sufferer was throwing a challenge to Allah.

The best policy is to express on such occasions one's helplessness and humbleness before Almighty Allah.

An event full of morals

Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has related the account of a pious man from whose mouth the following sentence escaped, while addressing Allah:

لیس لی فی سواك حظٌ

فکیف ماشئت فاختبرنی

O Allah : I am not interested in anyone other than You. You may test this claim of mine in any manner You like.

This is, as if this man is throwing a challenge to Allah to test him as it pleases Him. As a result, the passage of his urine was blocked and his bladder was puffed up with urine. He remained in this painful condition for many days. At last he felt the nonsense of his claim. His profession was to teach small children. In this condition he asked his pupils to utter these words: اُدعُوا لِعمّك الکذّاب Pray for your liar uncle that Allah may relieve him of this disease, because he had made a false claim. Almighty Allah showed him that the man's claim that he had no interest in anything, except Allah was false as his interest lay in the urine and not in Allah. All should know that expression of boldness and bravery do not stand before All Powerful, All-Knowing Allah.

The golden mean, therefore, consists in the principle that when hardships and worries fall on a person he should neither make complaint against them, nor should he make a show of boldness and defiance. This is the principle of the Sunnah.

The conduct of the Holy Prophet ﷺ during periods of distress

Hazrat A'yishah رضی اللہ عنہا has narrated that when the Holy Prophet ﷺ was on his death-bed he frequently put his sacred hand into water and rubbed the wet hand on his blessed face and at the same time he ﷺ expressed the torture he was undergoing. Seeing her father ﷺ in this condition Hazrat Fatimah رضی اللہ عنہا uttered these words:

واکـــرب ابـــاه

Oh, how distressed is my father !

The Holy Prophet ﷺ re-acted to this, saying:

لا کـرب ابـیـك بـعـد الیـــوم

Your father will face no distress after this day.

Now see that the Holy Prophet ﷺ gave vent to his distress, yet he did not make any complaint against it. Instead, he ﷺ indicated thereby the everelasting peace and comfort of the Hereafter.

When the son of the Holy Prophet ﷺ Hazrat Ibrahim رضی اللہ عنہ passed away, he ﷺ expressed his grief, saying:

انا بفراقك یا ابراهیم لمحزونون

O Ibrahim, we are very much grieved on occount of your separation.

It is narrated that the Prophet's daughter, Hazrat Zainab's child was in his lap when the child was dying. Drops of tears rolled down his cheeks. This conduct of the Holy Prophet ﷺ reflects an expression of servitude and total surrender to Allah and unqualified faith in the Truth and inevitability of the Divine Decree. The Holy Prophet ﷺ did realize that Almighty Allah subjects His servants to trials, tribulations, troubles and worries that they may express their humbleness and helplessness before Allah by weeping and shedding tears.

The Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ lays down that on being inflicted with hardships, difficulties and worries the sufferer should display neither complaint nor boldness. He should, instead, address Allah in the following words:

O Allah relieve me of this trouble and misfortune, by Your grace.

In a nutshell, this is the correct interpretation of the Hadith. May Allah grant us a correct understanding of this point and help us to act upon it. Aameen!

امابعد:-

قال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم:

من رزق فى شَيْءٍ فليلزمه مَنْ جُعِلَتْ معيشة فى شَيْءٍ فلا ينتقل عنه حتى يتغير عليه(كنزا لعمال حديث نمبر ٩٢٨٦). اتحاف السادة المتقين ٤:٢٨٧)

Him from the evils of our souls and from the vices of our deeds. There is none to misguide him whom He guides and there is none to guide him whom He lets go astray. We bear witness that there is no god but Allah the One Who has no partner. We also bear witness that our sire, and our authority and our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad ﷺ is His servant and His Messenger. May Almighty Allah have mercy on him, his household and bless and salute them all in great abundance.

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in this Hadith:

A man should stick to the job from which he is earning his livelihood. He should not give up that job with his own will and option without any justification, nor seek his livelihood from any other job. He is, however, free to change his job when the circumstances become unfavourable to him or the job is lost for no fault of him.

The Means of Livelihood Depend on Allah's Dispensation

When Almighty Allah has appointed a man, his means of livelihood and he is engaged on that, he should not give it up without any justification. He must pursue it unless it slips out of his hands by itself or unfavourable circumstances arise under which it becomes difficult for him to continue the job. As the job a man is doing has been specially allotted to him out of so many jobs, it should be regarded as a gift of Allah and should not be given up without justification.

The systems of employment and livelihood are linked with Divine dispensation

Just see that Almighty Allah has appointed a wonderful system of employment and livelihood for His creation. Allah has said in the Holy Qur'an:

نَحْنُ قَسَمْنَا بَيْنَهُمْ مَعِيْشَتَهُمْ فِى الْحَيٰوةِ الدُّنْيَا ج (الزخرف: ٤٣)

We have apportioned among them their livelihood in the worldly life. (43:32)

For apportioning the livelihood among the people in this world, Allah has created the natural law of Demand and Supply. Man stands in need of diverse necessaries and comforts of life which cannot be enumerated. It ws not possible for the Economic experts of the world to create a class of suppliers to estimate and supply the untold needs of the consumers and maintain the law of Demand and Supply in Equilibrium. It is indeed Allah's miraculous and wonderful sustaining power and ability that as soon as a man needs anything he finds a supplier in the market waiting for customers. So, if the needy customer has the necessary money in his pocket he can purchase his requirements from the market on paying the price. This is a divinely oriented system which man could never invent.

An Astonishing instance of apportionment of sustenance

My late brother Mr. Zaki Kaifi - may Allah forgive him - had benefited by the company of Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه. He said one day that sometimes Allah displays in the business sphere such miraculous and wondrous work of His Personality as a sustainer and provider that man cannot help bowing before Him in gratitude and admiration.

My late brother was keeping in Lahore a book-shop of religious books under the name of "Idara-e-Islamiat". One day when he intended to go to his shop, he found that it was raining heavily and he thought that it would be useless to go to the market and open the shop on that rainy day when normal life had become awfully upset and disturbed and no cutstomer would be expected to call at the shop for shopping at such an inopportune and inconvenient time. Moreover, books are not a necessity of life and particularly religious books. Man thinks of purchasing books only when he has satisfied all his other needs of life.

In the meantime it occured to him that Allah had made the shop the means of his livelihood and it was, therefore, his duty to open it, irrespective of that any customer visited the shop or not. He, therefore, took his umbrella and made for the shop, opened it and began to recite the Holy Qur'an. He was surprised to see that many customers putting on their rain-coats visited that shop and purchased books which could be studied only at ease and in spare times. The result was that the sale on that rainy day was almost equal to the sales on other normal days. How could this happen? An inner voice seemed to whisper to my brother that it was Allah, the Sustainer Lord, Who inspired my brother to open the shop and inspired the customers to visit his shop and purchase books therefrom. Thus, the party needing money and the party needing books both came in contact with each other. This is only Allah's doing and man has no hand in it. No scheming or planning can work such a miracle.

It is The Divinely Set system that the Night is for rest and the Day is for work

My respected father Mufti Muhammad Shafi Sahib رحمة الله عليه asked us to consider how all men fall into sound sleep in the nights and are up and doing work in the days. Was this cycle of sleeping in nights and working in days devised in some international conference held by men of all nations. No, it could never be so. It is Allah's command to rest in nights and work during days and in confromity with this. He has moulded man's nature and temperament. He has said in the Holy Qur'an:

وَجَعَلْنَا الَّيْلَ لِبَاسًا ٥ وَّ جَعَلْنَا النَّهَارَ مَعَاشًا (سورة النبأ ١٠-١١)

We have appointed the night as a covering; and have appointed the day for (earning) livelihood.(78: 10-11)

The word covering used in the verse stands for darkness during which men as well as many animals and birds are by nature disposed to fall into sleep. If the sleeping and working hours had been left to the discretion of men there would have been a great confusion and chaos in life, some sleeping and some working at the same time. As a result, there would be neither concerted hours of sleep nor concerted hours of work. The result of this topsy-turvy condition of life can better be imagined than described. In such a hopeless state of affairs the civilisation of the world would not have been as we see it today. Allah has done a great favour to His creation by creating night and day for rest and for work respectively.

Do not close upon yourself the door of livelihood

Likewise, Almighty Allah has Himself planned the system of man's livelihood and has allotted to everyone some job to earn his livelihood. If the income is lawful and is accruing to you with peace and ease do not give it up without justification, because it is a gift from Allah and, may be, that the livelihood of many others is linked with your job and you may be an important part of the machinery of living and livelihood. You are, therefore, advised not to give up your existing job of your own sweet will. However, if unfavourable circumstances arise that no income accrues to you despite all efforts made, there is no harm in giving up that unprofitable job.

That is a gift from Allah

My Sheikh Hazrat Dr. Abdul Hai Sahib رحمة الله عليه used to recite this couplet frequently:

چیزے کہ بے طلب رسد آں دادہ خدا است
او را تو رد مکن کہ فرستادۂ خدا ست

When anything comes to you without asking for it, it is a gift from Allah. So, do not turn it down because it has been sent down to you by Almighty Allah

In short you should stick to the job from which you are presently earning your livelihood, unless adverse and unbearable conditions arise which you cannot cope with.

Allah is the fountainhead for every thing

Explaining the meaning of this Hadith Hazrat Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has said:

This is how the learned saints have interpreted the events that occur to a servant of Allah by Allah's will. The reality underlying these events becomes known from the event themselves. After receiving this knowledge about the reality, the learned saints do not try to effect any change in the events on their own accord. So far as the people are concerned these events are like self-evident, rather like tangible facts which they take into consideration in their dealings and affairs.

Whatever has been mentioned in this Hadith is directly concerned with the question of livelihood. Yet the saints have interpreted it to mean that a man should not try to effect any change in whatever Allah has granted him in the form of knowledge, dealings with the creatures of Allah or the like. He should accept these grants with grace and stick to them to the best of his ability.

Why did Hazrat Usman Ghani رضی الله عنه not relinquish the Caliphate ?

The tragedy of the martyrdom of Hazrat Usman Ghani رضی الله عنه is a well known historical event. During the closing period of his Caliphate a storm of opposition was stirred against him. Hazrat Usman Ghani رضی الله عنه has himself related the events, saying:

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has informed me that Allah shall put on me a shirt. He ﷺ has advised me not to put off that shirt of my own sweet will. The shirt predicted in the Hadith is the seat of the Caliphate and I shall not relinquish this seat.

That is why Hazrat Usman Ghani رضی الله عنه neither relinquished the seat of Caliphate nor did he take up the sword against the rebels, nor did he issue orders to uproot them totally. He ﷺ took this stand, notwithstanding the fact that he رضی الله عنه was the Commander of Faithful امیرالمؤمنین and the Ruling Caliph with a large Army under his command. If he had so willed, he could have taken up the sword against the rebels, but he did not do so, because the rebels and those posed to attack him رضی الله عنه were also Muslims. He did not want to become the first man to take up the sword against the Muslims. That is why neither he relinquished the seat of the Caliphate nor did he fight against the rebels. As such, he preferred to be confined within the bounds of his house until he became a martyr. He accepted the honour of becoming a martyr but he did not relinquish the seat of Caliphate. This is the point to which Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has drawn attention saying: When Almighty Allah has entrusted to you a job, hold fast to it and do not give it up of your own free will.

If Almighty Allah has prescribed for you some path for serving the Faith without your asking for it, that path should not be abandoned without justification, because being a gift from Allah it contains light and blessing. Likewise, it is the duty of the learned saints to accept with open hearts whatever events and incidents descend to them from Allah. Sometime Allah bestows some special honour and status on a saint or a religious scholar to whom the public turns for cooperation, help or advice in a worldly or religious problem. This is an honour and status which has been granted to him by none but Allah. So the fortunate saint should not discontinue this service of his own sweet will rather continue it as a duty entrusted to him by Allah.

For example, sometime Allah confers on some member of a clan a leading position to whom the other members of the clan refer their differences for settlement and difficulties for solution or seek his advice on important issues confronting them. The leader should not feel disgusted with the responsibility placed on his shoulders. He should discharge his responsibility as a duty entrusted to him by Allah and this is a very honourable status. This idea has very aptly been expressed in this Urdu couplet:

زبانِ خلق کو نقارۂ خدا سمجھو

The idea of the couplet may be expressed by saying that the opinion formed about someone by the majority of a community should be regarded as a divine declaration.

Thus, this is a very honourable status which should be accepted with grace and the responsibilities attached to it should be discharged as a matter of honour and dignity and as a duty entrusted to the trustee by Almighty Allah.

An account of the ordeal of Hazrat Ayyub عليه السلام

Once Hazrat Ayyub عليه السلام was taking bath when all of a sudden gold butterflies began to fall down. Giving up the bath, Hazrat Ayyub عليه السلام began to collect the gold butterflies. Seeing this Almighty Allah asked Ayyub عليه السلام: O Ayyub! Did I not made you rich by granting you wealth and money? Why are you collecting these gold buterflies? Hazrat Ayyub عليه السلام answered the questions, saying: Yes , O Allah! You have bestowed upon me wealth in such abundance that I find it impossible to render thanks for this grant adequately. I cannot, however, close my eyes on wealth which has come to me from You in the form of gold butterflies without my asking for it - O Allah, when You are granting me something of Your own sweet will, it is my bounden duty to rush to it like a needy person.

In fact, Hazrat Ayyub عليه السلام was not interested in the gold that was raining down from the heaven in the form of the gold butterflies. His eyes were concentrated on the divine hand from which that wealth was coming down. This anecdote provides a useful moral for all of us that when some gift comes to us from a Great Merciful Personality, we must accept it with gratitude and humble submission like needy persons.

An event of demanding more money as Eid Gift

My respected father, Mufti Muhammad Shafi Sahib رحمة الله عليه used to distribute Eid-money among all his sons on the occasions of Eid festival. It was our habit to demand increase in the amount of the Eid money owing to the increase of dearness in the country. As a reaction to this demand my father would say by way of jest: You are all dacoits!

Just see! we were all earning members, quite well off, yet we demanded increase. Our eyes were not concentrated on these few chips, but were concentrated on the auspicious hands through which they came. When this attitude is adopted towards a scanty gift from a father what should be our attitude torwards the Monarch of Monarchs? Being His most humble servants we should submit our requests to Him as humble needy beggars and when anything comes to us from Him without our asking, we should receive it with due submission and gratitude like needy beggars without showing any indifference and pride. Consider the meaning of this Persian couplet:

خاک بر فرقِ قناعت بعد ازیں

When Allah, the King of Deen desires that His servant should display greed (for His gift), then fling away the attribute of contentedness.

To sum up the discussion, hold fast to the job which Allah has entrusted to you and do not give it up on your own accord, as it is a gift from Allah. However, if unfavourable circumstances arise which compel you to relinquish the job or some elderly righteous person from your relations or well-wishers advises you to give up that job, you may accept his advice and give up the job. This is a very important turn in your life, so you should not take a hasty decision on this issue.

Summary

If you get anything without asking you should beleive that it is a gift from Almighty Allah. You should never make light of this Divine Gift. This important, rather very important, point has been expressed very beautifully in the following Persian couplet:

چیزے کہ بے طلب رسد آں دادۂ خدا ست
او را تو ردّ مکن کہ فرستادۂ خدا ست

This Persian couplet has been cited earlier also. It means: When anything comes to you without your asking for it, it is a gift from Allah. So do not turn it down because it has been sent down to you by Almighty Allah.

Such God-given gifts must be accepted with gratitude provided that it is lawful. Degrading it and turning it donw may involve you in grievous curse and woe. Likewise, if Allah has entrusted some job to anyone, you should stick to it and should not give it up, unless compelled by unavoidable circumstances over which you have no control. If Almighty Allah favoured you with a leading position in your community and the people look to you for cooperation, advice and help, do not disappoint them, but serve them with a good grace with the belief that Allah, has, in His Mercy, chosen you for this position of trust and dignity.

May Allah help us all in understanding Deen rightly and act upon the injunctions of Allah and His Messenger ﷺ, accordingly. Aameen!

THE EVIL OF INTEREST-BASED ECONOMY

الحمد لله نحمده و نستعينه و نستغفره و نؤمن به و نتوكل عليه ونعوذ بالله من شرور انفسنا ومن سيأت اعمالنا من يهده الله فلا مضل له ومن يضلله فلا هادى له ونشهد ان لا اله الاالله وحده لا شريك له ونشهد ان سيدنا و سندنا و نبينا و مولانا محمدا عبده ورسوله ..صلى الله تعالى عليه و على اله واصحابه وبارك وسلم تسليما كثيرا كثيرا

اما بعد!

فاعوذ بالله من الشيطٰن الرجيم بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم

يَمْحَقُ اللّٰهُ الرِّبٰوا وَيُرْبِى الصَّدَقٰتِ (سورة البقرة:٢٧٦)

امنت بالله صدق الله مولانا العظيم وصدق رسوله النبى الكريم ونحن على ذلك من الشاهدين والشاكرين والحمد لله رب العالمين

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and seek His forgiveness and believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Him from the evils of our souls and from the vices of our deeds. There is none to misguide him whom He guides and there is none to guide him whom He lets go astray. We bear witness that there is no god but Allah the One Who has no partner. We also bear witness that our sire, and our authority and our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad ﷺ is His servant and His Messenger. May Almighty Allah have mercy on him, his household and bless and salute them all in great abundance.

Allah has blighted Usury and made almsgiving fruitful (2: 276)

The Holy Qur'an has declared that Usury is the most heinous of all sins, saying : "And if you do not (give up Usury), then be warned of war (against you) from Allah and His Messenger." Such severe declaration of war has not been by Allah against any other sin, e.g., such declaration has not been made against drunkards of wine, eaters of pork, those who commit adultery or against thieves and robbers. As regards the eaters of Usury, a war has been declared against them from Allah and His Messenger ﷺ.

The difficulties which the Muslims of the Western world are facing

My respected brothers and sisters!

The topic selected for this session of today is concerned with Usury (interests). In the Urudu language it is called سود (sood) and in English it is called Interest or Usury. This subject has been chosen because the usurious system is in vogue in the entire world, but most transactions are based on usury in the Western world where you are living. The Muslims are, therefore, confronting this problem at every step as to how they should get rid of usury or interest in their transactions.

Apart from this all sorts of misunderstandings are being spread among the people that the interest that has pervaded our economic activities and dealings is not in reality forbidden, because this, as they claim is not included in the Usury which has been defined and forbidden in the Holy Qur'an. I have, therefore, been called upon to place before you the basic facts about interest in the light of the Qur'an and the Ahadith and the existing conditions in the society.

Declaration of war against those who are involved in Usurious dealings

The first thing to note clearly and understand it well is that Almighty Allah has declared Usury as the worst of all sins. The very stern words used in the Holy Qur'an for usury have not been for drinking wine, eating pork, adultery, etc. The Qur'an says:

يٰٓاَيُّهَا الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوا اتَّقُوا اللّٰهَ وَذَرُوْا مَا بَقِيَ مِنَ الرِّبٰٓوا اِنْ كُنْتُمْ مُّؤْمِنِيْنَ o فَاِنْ لَّمْ تَفْعَلُوْا فَاْذَنُوْا بِحَرْبٍ مِّنَ اللّٰهِ وَرَسُوْلِهٖ (سورة البقرة: ٢٧٦)

O you who believe be God-fearing and give up what remains (due to you) from usury, if you are believers. And if you do not do so, then be warned of war (against you) from Allah and His Messenger. (2: 278-279)

As mentioned earlier Allah has not declared war in respect of any other sin, but a war has been declared from Allah and His Messenger against those who are involved in usurious dealings. Why has such a stern warning been issued against the eaters of usury? Details will be furnished soon.

What is the meaning of Usury?

Let us first try to understand the meaning of usury. At the time usury was forbidden by the Qur'an, usurious transactions were widely in vogue among the Arabs, At that time usury was that amount which was settled to be paid in addition to the amount of a loan given to a borrower. For example, I lend someone a sum of Rs. 100/- today on the Condition that the borrower shall repay me a sum of 102/- after a month. Now this additional amount of Rs. 2/- is usury or interest.

Giving something more without a prior agreement to this effect is not usury

For example, when I lend to the borrower a sum of Rs. 100/- without any agreement that he will pay me Rs. 102/- instead of Rs. 100/-, but the borrower pays me Rs. 102/- of his own sweet will, then this is not interest and is therefore, not forbidden. It is quite lawful.

A nice procedure of repaying a loan

It stands proved from the Holy Prophet ﷺ himself that once when he repaid a loan on the demand and of the lender he added something to the amount of the loan, by way of pleasing the lender. As this excess amount was not due to a previously agreed condition it was not interest. In the terminology of Hadith it is called "حسن القضاء" (A good way of repaying a loan). This may be a goodwill amount; it is not interest that is forbidden and made unlawful so sternly. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has gone to the extent of saying:

ان خیارکم احسنکم قضاء (صحیح بخاری، کتاب الاستقراض، باب حسن القضاء حدیث نمبر ۲۳۹۳)

The best among you is he who repays his loan with a good grace. (Bukhari)

On the other hand, if at the time of lending money the lender settles with the borrower that at the time of repayment he shall take from the borrower something more than the amount lent, then this will be called interest which has been forbidden in the Qur'an in very stern words, as already pointed out. Nearly two sections of Surah al-Baqarah have been revealed, emphasizing the unlawfulness of interest.

Which kind of Interest has the Holy Qur'an forbidden and made unlawful?

Sometimes it is said in our society that the kind of interest forbidden and made unlawful in the Holy Qur'an was something quite different. During the Prophet's time the borrower used to be a very poor and needy person. He had no money to purchase food to satisfy hunger, nor to purchase medicine to cure his sickness. If someone of his family died, he had no money to purchase a shroud for the dead and to arrange his burial. At such a critical time the poor fellow had no alternative, but to borrow money on interest. It was a grievous tyranny and a grave sin not to lend money to such a needy person without charging interest. That is why on such occasions Almighty Allah made interest unlawful in very stern words as occurs in the Holy Qur'an.

They argue that in our times, those who carry on interest-bearing transaction, particularly with the banks are not poor men or beggars; at times they are very rich businessmen and capitalists. Anyone of them does not borrow money, because he has nothing to eat; has no clothes to wear; he wants money for his medical treatment. Instead, he is borrowing money to invest in his business so as to earn profit. As the money lender knows this quite well, what is the objection if the lender asks the borrower an interest of ten percent on the money lent to the borrower. The borrower also finds no difficulty in paying to the lender this small increase. This is not the interest which the Holy Qur'an has declared unlawful in very stern words. Objections like this are raised in various parts of the world to the prohibition of interest in the Holy Qur'an.

Commercial loans were in vogue even in the earlier days

They raise another objection by arguing that this commercial interest and commercial loans did not exist during the Prophet's time. In those days money was borrowed only to meet personal needs and personal expenditures. Therefore, they ask how can the Holy Qur'an prohibit interest which did not exist in those olden days. Some people say that the interest which the Holy Qur'an has declared unlawful was that which was charged from the paupers and beggars, so they claim that the other form of interest is commercial which is not unlawful or prohibited.

The reality does not change with the change of form

It should be noted that firstly, it is not necessary for a substance to be unlawful that was available in its specific form also in the Holy Prophet's time. When the Holy Qur'an declares something to be unlawful it does so on the basis of its reality at the time it is declared unlawful, whether any specific form of that reality existed or did not exist during the Holy Prophet's time. Take an example. The Holy Qur'an has declared wine to be unlawful, and wine is a substance that causes intoxication. It will not be right to say that Whisky, Beer and Brandy are not unlawful, because they were not found during the Holy Prophet's time. Although these brands of wine were not found during the Holy Prophet's ﷺ time, yet the reality and essence of these brands namely, their intoxicating property did exist during his time which the Holy Prophet ﷺ had declared unlawful. Thus the essence or reality of wine became unlawful and prohibited for all times whatever its form and whether one calls it whisky, brandy, coke or beer. An intoxicant is unlawful by any name.

It is, therefore, not at all correct to say that interest on commercial loans is not unlawful, because these loans did not exist at that time.

A pleasantry

I remember a pleasantry. Once an Indian musician proceeded on the Hajj Pilgrimage. After performing the Hajj in Makkah he set off for Madinah. As was the practice in those days, the Hajj caravan halted at a place to pass the night. In that caravan there was an Arab musician who began to sing in Arabic. The musician had not a good voice. The Indian musician did not appreciate at all the song of the Arab musician. He got up and declared:

Today I have come to know why the Holy Prophet ﷺ had forbidden music and declared it unlawful. It was because he ﷺ listened to the music of these Bedouins who were bad singers. If he ﷺ had listened to my music he would not have declared music unlawful.

The trend of today's thinking

Today the people have become accustomed to say about everything that during the Prophet's time this was done in this and that way, so it was declared to be unlawful. Today it is not done in that way, so it is not unlawful. They go even to the extent of saying that pork was made unlawful, because in the olden days pigs grew up in filthy environments and ate filth and faeces, whereas these days they are raised in very hygienic and clean environments in high-standard piggeries. So, there is no reason why pigs should be treated as unlawful now.

A principle of the Islamic Shari'ah

Bear in mind well that when the Holy Qur'an declares something unlawful, it does so on the basis of the essence and reality of the object concerned, even though their forms and external aspects may change or the process of their manufacture may change from time to time to any extent. The essence or its reality remains unaffected and it is that which forms the basis of the injunction of the Shari'ah.

A misconception about the Prophet's ﷺ time

It is also not correct to say that commercial loans were not in vogue during the time of the Holy Prophet ﷺ, and that all sorts of loans were taken only to meet personal needs. My respected father, Hazrat Mufti Muhammad Shafi Sahib رحمة الله عليه has written a book on the subject "The Issue of Interest" and I have written its second part. In this part I have given some examples of commercial loans taken during the time of the Holy Prophet ﷺ

When it is said that the Arabs were Bedouins, leading a desert life, it occurs to the mind that the society in which the Holy Prophet ﷺ lived must have been a very backward society, too primitive to admit of any trading activities, except the simple barter system dealing with wheat and barley and that too of a very insignificant value. But for this, there could have been at that time no commerce and trade worth the name.

Every tribe was a Joint-Stock company

The conception formed about the time of the Holy Prophet ﷺ is not correct. During the time when the Holy Prophet ﷺ appeared on the scene with his Prophetic Missions, the fundamental bases of all the modern systems of commerce were present in one form or another. For example, it is claimed that the Joint Stock system of companies is a discovery of the 14th century, but this is not correct. When we read the history of the Arabs, we find that every Arab Tribe was an independent Joint Stock company. Every tribe contributed some coins to a common Fund and the Fund so collected was sent to Syria for purchasing merchandise through commercial caravans. This has also been indicated in a Qur'anic verse:

For the alluring of Quraish; for their alluring (we cause) the caravans to set forth in winter and summer (106:1-2)

As indicated in these Qur'anic words, theseArabs toured to Yemen in the winter season and to Syria in the summer season and these were their business tours. They took with them merchandise for sale in Yemen and Syria and purchased merchandise in these countries for sale in their own homeland. Some time an Arab borrowed money from his tribe to the tune of one million Dinars. He could not take such a big loan for his domestic needs; it was certainly for commercial purposes.

The first amount of Interest to be remitted

While announcing the prohibition of interest on the occasion of the Farewell Pilgrimage, the Holy Prophet ﷺ said:

وربا الجا هلية موضوع واول ربا ا ضع ربانا ربا عباس بن عبد المطلب فانه موضوع كلـــه (صحیح مسلم، کتاب الحج باب حجة النبی ﷺ، حدیث نمبر ۱۲۱۸)

And interest accruing from the Days of Ignorance is annulled and the first interest that I remit is the interest due to Abbas bin Abdul Muttalib which stands effaced. (Sahih Muslim -Hadith No: 1218)

It occurs in narratives that the interest so remitted amounted to ten thousand miskal - (1 miskal = 4.88 g). But this amount of ten thousand miskal was not the principal amount; it was only the amount of interest on the principal amounts lent to the borrowers.

This proves that the huge amounts borrowed must have been for commercial purposes and not for domestic needs.

An example of Banking during the time of the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم

Hazrat Zubair bin Aw-waam رضی اللہ عنہ is one of the fortunate ten Companions to whom the glad tidings of Paradise was given in their lifetimes. He was maintaining a monetary system which was like the modern banking system. When people came to him with their moneys to entrust to him as trust, he would accept the trust as a loan and then invest the amounts in business. His son Hazrat Abdullah bin Zubair رضی اللہ عنہ has said about the loans outstanding for repayment at the time of his father's death.

فحسبت ما علیه من الدیون فوجدتـــه الفی الف ومائتی الف

When I calculated the amount of the loans outstanding against him, they amounted to 2.20 million Dinars. ("The Issue of Interest" P-113, Tabaqat - Ibn Sa'ad)

To say, therefore, that in those commercial loan did not exist is against the fact and incorrect. The fact is that interest-bearing commercial loans were common during the Prophet's time. The Holy Qur'an has forbidden and declared unlawful every additional amount that is charged from the debtors on these loans. It is, therefore, absolutely wrong to say that interest on commercial loans is lawful but interest on personal and domestic loans is not lawful.

Simple Interest and Compound Interest are both forbidden and unlawful Another misconception is being spread among the people that there are two kinds of Interest i.e., simple Interest and Compound Interest, meaning the practice of levying Interest on Interest also. Some persons say that during the Prophet's time the practice was to charge compound Interest which the Qur'an has declared to be unlawful, but simple Interest is lawful, because it was not in vogue in those days nor has the Qur'an declared it as unlawful. It has been said in the Qur'anic verse. I have recited in the beginning of my address:

يٰٓاَيُّهَا الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوا اتَّقُوا اللّٰهَ وَذَرُوْا مَا بَقِيَ مِنَ الرِّبٰٓوا (سورة البقرة: ۲۷۶)

O believers ! Fear Allah and give up what remains (due to you) from Usury (2:278)

The divine orders that whatever has remained outstanding out of interest whether it is small or large or whether the rate of interest is low or high. In the next verse it has been said:

وَاِنْ تُبْتُمْ فَلَكُمْ رُءُوْسُ اَمْوَالِكُمْ (سورة البقرة: ٢٧٩)

And if you repent, then you have your principal (without interest) (2: 279)

Thus this divine injunction prohibits receiving anything more than the principal amount of the loan which is the right of the creditor. In the light of these clear injunctions of the Holy Qur'an it is quite wrong to say that Compound Interest is unlawful, but Simple Interest is lawful. Therefore, all forms of Interests are isforbidden and declared unlawful, whether it is high or low, whether the debtor is rich or poor, whether the loan has been taken for personal or domestic needs or for commercial purposes. There is no doubt about the unlawfulness of Interest whatever its nature.

There is consensus of opinion on the unlawfulness of the prevailing Bank Interest

It may be mentioned that questions about the lawfulness or unlawfulness of interest have been raised for the last 50/60 years. As I have already mentioned some say that Compound Interest is unlawful, but simple Interest is lawful or that Interest on commercial loan is not unlawful. The controversy about this question had been raging in the Islamic world for about the last 50/60 years, but this controversy has now ended. Not only the religious scholars, but also the economists and the Muslim bankers of the entire world have now become almost unanimous on the decision that Banking Interest is unlawful in the same way as it is unlawful like interest on transactions concerning ordinary loans. The latest decision on this problem was taken about 4 years ago in a session of the Islamic Fiqh Academy held in Jaddah. About 200 leading scholars, including myself, hailing from 45 Muslim countries attended this session. They all unanimously decided that Banking interest is totally unlawful and there is no way open to declare it lawful. The controversy whether this interest is lawful or unlawful has ended once for all.

What vice is there in Interest on Commercial Loans?

Now one thing remains to be clarified. As pointed out earlier, some people say that during the Holy Prophet's time men took loans only for personal and domestic needs. If a man is borrowing money to purchase food to satisfy his hunger or to arrange the burial of a dead body and the lender demands interest for loan for such purposes, then they admit that this is inhuman and unjust; but they argue and ask that if a person lends money to a businessman to earn profit, then what is the harm if the lender takes a small amount out of the profit earned by the businessman?

You will have to take the risk of possible loss

I want to clarify that if you are going to lend money to someone, Islam requires that you must become definite about one of these two alternatives:

i) Do you want to give the borrower only financial help through the money lent to him; or
ii) Do you want to become a partner in his business?

If you are lending him money only to help him, then you shall have no right to demand from the borrower anything more than the amount of the loan. On the other hand, if you desire to become a partner in the business of the borrower, then you will have to share the profit as well as the loss, if any. It is not possible that you should share only the profit and in case of loss you should leave it to be borne by your partner. If you do not take the risk of possible loss, you should join with him in a Joint Enterprise on the condition that profit and loss will be shared by the partners in the Enterprise or partnership in an agreed ratio, say, 50: 50. You cannot demand from your borrower partner that he msut pay you 15% on the amount invested by you in the Enterprise, whether there is profit or loss in the business. This is totally unlawful and the amount so charged is nothing but pure interest.

The existing system of Interest is fraught with vices and defects

The debtor borrows money from a creditor/bank at a given rate of interest, which he invests in some business. If there is loss, the creditor gets his agreed percentage of interest,but the debtor has to bear the loss. If the debtor earns profit in his business the creditor shall get only the agreed percentage of the interest and will be in a loss as compared with the debtor. I clarify the position with the example given below:

The depositor remains a loser at all costs

For example, a man borrows from a bank a sum of Rs. One Crore (ten millions) and invests it in some business. The amount borrowed from the bank belongs to the depositors or, in other words, it is public money. In this business the man earned profit at the rate of cent percent and now he has with him two crores. Out of this profit the man pays 15% or 15 Lakh (1.5 million) Rupees to the bank as interest. After deducting its commission and administrative expenses the bank, in turn, pays to the depositors for 7 to 10% on profit. (This is really nothing but interest). The depositors are very happy to receive a profit of only 10% on their deposits, although they should have received 100% on their deposits. This meagre profit of 10% also goes back to the borrower. How does this happen?

The amount of Interest is included in the (indirect) cost of production

The answer to the question posed above is very easy. The businessman who borrowed money from the bank charges the interest paid to the bank, viz., Rs. 15 lakhs to the (indirect) cost of production which is ultimately included in the price of the goods produced. For example if the borrower has manufactured cloth the price of the cloth will be increased by 15%. This means that the depositors who received profit at the rate of 10% only will have to pay it back at the rate of 15% in the form of the price of the cloth when he purchases it from the market. The depositors feel satisfied that their deposit of Rs. 100/- has become Rs. 110/-, but actually it has become Rs. 95/- On the other hand the borrower manufacturer has pocketed a profit of 85% on his manufacturing business.

The advantage of partnership

A partnership may be established between two persons on the condition that the profit will be shared between the financier and the working partner on 50 : 50 basis. In this partnership business the public will receive a profit of 50 instead 15%. In such a situation this profit of 50% is not included in the manufacturing cost, because the profit is known after the sale of the porducts and only then it is apportioned between the partners. This is because the Interest is invariably included in the cost, but the profit is not so included in the cost. This is, therefore, a form of collective profit sharing..

The profit is enjoyed by one party and the loss is borne by another party

Suppose that the business, which was carried on with the amount of one crore, (ten million rupees) suffers loss and as a result of this loss goes into bankruptcy. Then think, who will be the real losers as a result of the bankruptcy of the bank? The loss will obviously be suffered by the public sector. Thus, this is a system in which in the event of loss the entire loss is borne by the public, but in the event of profit the entire profit goes into the pocket of the borrower manufacturer.

Who are the beneficiaries in the Insurance business?

The businessman who borrowed a sum of Rs. One Crore from the bank for investment in his business has sought another way to make good the loss, if any, incurred in his business and that is the channel of Insurance. Suppose the godown of cotton catches fire and the whole stock of cotton is reduced to ashes. If this stock of cotton had been insured with an Insurance company, then it is the responsibility of the company to make good this loss. Again the money with which the Insurance company will meet its liability is public money which the public is bound to pay to the company in the form of the periodical Insurance premium. A car owner cannot bring his car on the road unless he gets it insured and he is compelled to the premiums even when neither the car meets any accident nor does it catch fire.

The magnificent Insurance buildings have been built with the money of the periodical Insurance premium paid by the poor public policy-holders. The Insurance companies compensate the losses incurred by businessmen with the deposits of the public. All these complicated and intricate procedures have been devised to ensure that the profits go to the chests of the businessmen, but the losses are borne by the public. The bank deposits belong to the poor depositors or the Account holders. If this huge amount was used rightly and wisely, the profits earned thereon would revert to the depositors. In the existing system of Distribution of Wealth, the wealth rises upwards instead of going downwards. It was on account of these vices that the Holy Prophet ﷺ said: Eating Usury/interest is like committing adultry with one's own mother - God forbid. This has been declared as such a heinous sin, because the entire community has become exposed to destruction.

The havoc done by Usury on the Internationl Forum

Previously we regarded "Usury" to be unlawful, because the Holy Qur'an has declared it unlawful and prohibited. We did not care much for the rational causes for this prohibition. It is unlawful, because Almighty Allah has declared it unlawful. However, today we are all beholding its harmful consequences with our own eyes. Today the Usurious system of transactions has overwhelmed the entire world. Your country, America has today attained supremacy in the world and its rival power (USSR) has disappeared from the world with the natural result that it has now no rival to oppose it. Notwithstanding this, it is facing economic depression, for no other reason than the curse of interest. It is, therefore, not correct to say that during the Prophet's days people borrowed money on account of crushing poverty, so it was made unlawful to demand interest from them. But today if anyone is taking loan on interest for commercial purposes, interest should not be declared unlawful. This view, however, is sound neither rationally nor economically. If anyone studies this system impartially he will come to know that this system has driven the world to the last verge of destruction and a time will come - God willing - when the truth will dawn upon their minds and they shall also then know why the Holy Qur'an had declared a war against usury. This is one aspect of the prohibition of usury which I have placed before you.

Alternatives to the Usurious system

Another very important question is being asked in this respect. Some people admit that Usury/Interest is indeed unlawful and prohibited according to the declarations in the Qur'an and the Ahadith, yet if it is abolished, what is its substitute for the smooth operation of the economic and commercial activities of the country? Today the essence of the economic and commercial activities of the entire world is based on interest. If this essence, that is interest, is eliminated, then we see no other alternative wherewith to keep the wheel of these activities and transactions revolving. The people say that there is no other way to fall back upon and, if there is any, it is not practicable. If anyone has a practicable formula, let him come forward with it.

The Islamic Shari'ah has not forbidden things which are indispensable

You must believe firmly first of all that if Exalted Allah has declared something unlawful and forbidden, it is impossible that such a thing should be indispensable. If the thing had been indispensable, Almighty Allah would not have declared it to be unlawful and forbidden. The Holy Qur'an says :

لَا يُكَلِّفُ اللّٰهُ نَفْسًا اِلَّا وُسْعَهَا (سورة البقرہ: ۲۸۶)

Allah does not place a burden on any soul heavier than it can bear (2 : 286)

A goodly loan free of interest (قرض حسنہ) is not the only alternative to an Interest bearing loan

Some men think that as Allah has forbidden usury, in future loans should be given Interest-Free. They conclude from this that they shall be getting interest-free loans to carry on their trade, construct buildings and build factories. Such thinking is, however, only an empty dream and impracticable. From where shall come the necessary funds to allow interest-free loans to all who desire such loans?

Partnership is an alternative to Interest-bearing loans

You must remember that a goodly loan (قرض حسنہ) is no alternative to interest-bearing loans. The alternative is Partnership (مشارکت). In settling the terms of a loan the creditor can propose to the debtor that the former wants to become a partner in the latter's business on the basis of profit-and-loss sharing in an agreed ratio. In this way the creditor shall become a partner of the debtor in the business. This is an alternative to the Interest-bearing system.

I have already explained the theoretical aspect of "Partnership" viz., in the case of dealings in interest a very insignificant portion of wealth accrues to the depositors. On the other hand if business and investment are carried on the basis of "partnership" a reasonable ratio of the profit earned will accrue to the depositors or the account-holders. In this situation the Distribution of Wealth shall come down-wards instead of going upwards. Thus the financial system prescribed by Islam is that of "Partnership".

Best results have been obtained from the Partnership system

As this system of "Partnership" has not yet been put into practice anywhere in the contemporary world, its advantages and blessings have not come to the fore. During the last twenty-five years the Muslims have tried in diferent places to establish such Financing Centres and Banks as are not based on Interest but are run on the basis of the Islamic Shari'ah. Perhaps you may also be aware that presently there are 80 to 100 Banks in the entire world which claim to carry on their business on Islamic principles totally free from interest. I cannot say that this claim is true 100%; there may be some shortcomings and lapses. It is, however, a fact that presently about 100 Banking Institutions are working on Islamic principles. Not only are they situated in Islamic countries but some of them are situated in non-Muslim countries. These Banks and Institutions have started working on the "Partnership" system and better results have been obtained from this system, wherever it has been introduced. I have myself experimented the working of this system in a Pakistani Bank and have inspected it as a member of its "Religious Supervisory Committee". I have found that sometimes its Account-holders were allowed profit @ 20% under the "Partnership" system. If the system is adopted at a larger scale still better results may be obtained.

Practical difficulties in the "Partnership" system

There is, however, a practical difficulty in implementing this system on account of dishonest persons. Such persons take loans from banks with the commitment that they will carry on business with the amount borrowed and share the profit as well as the loss in an agreed ratio. These persons do not come back to the bank with its share of the profit, but always complain that they incurred loss and bank should bear its share of the loss.

This is a very serious problem being faced in the implementation of this system. It cannot be said that this is due to some defect in the system itself. The defect lies in those who are working on this system; they are neither honest nor men of moral character. The most serious defect in the implementation of this system is that people will continue borrowing money from the bank,but by declaring loss in their business, they shall in turn, caue huge loss to the depositors.

How to surmount these difficulties?

This is not a problem which cannot be solved. It is possible to find a satisfactory solution to it. If the country which has introduced this system of "Partnership" finds that a person is not honest in his dealings and cannot be relied upon such a person should be blacklisted, so that no bank should have any financial dealings with such a blacklisted person.

Even today Joint Stock companies are in action and operation in the world and they are issuing their annual Balance Sheets. Sometimes these Balance Sheets are not prepared quite honestly, yet they declare their annual profits. The difficulty experienced in this respect can be surmounted easily, if the "Partnership" system is adopted throughout the country. Unless this is done, individual organisations, following this system, will find difficulties, except that such individual organisations may work on the "Partnership" system by means of "Selected Negotiations".

The second alternative solution to this problem is the Leasing (اجارہ)

Almighty Allah has given us a religion in the form of Islam which offers many Banking and Financing systems other than the Partnership system. One of them is the "Leasing" system. It is that a man approaches a bank for loan. On being asked about the purpose of the loan, the man tells the bank that he has to import machinery from a foreign country for his factory. Instead of lending money to the man, the bank itself should import the requisite machinery and rent it out to the man. This method of financing is called "Leasing". The method of "Financial Leasing", being presently in operation in the banks and the Financing Institutions, does not conform the Islamic Shari'ah. Many of its clauses are contrary to the Shari'ah. This defect can be removed easily by amending its un-Islamic clauses, so as to conform to the injunctions of the Shari'ah. There are many Financial Institutions in Pakistan which are working on a "Leasing Agreement" system in conformity with the Shari'ah.

The third alternative is the Murabaha (Profit-sale)

"Murabaha" may be defined as a system in which instead of advancing a loan to a businessman to purchase, say a machine, the bank itself purchases the machine and sells it to the businessman concerned on profit.

Suppose that a businessman wants to borrow money from a bank to purchase some raw materials for his factory. Instead of advancing a loan to the businessman for this purpose, the bank itself purchases that raw material and sells it to the businessman on profit. This is lawful in the Shari'ah.

Some people think that this form of profit-sale system is an indirect way of making a usurious bargaining, because instead of earning money in the name of interest the bank has earned the money in the name of profit. This is not correct because the Holy Qur'an has said:

Trade is just like usury, whereas Allah permits trading and forbids usury. (2:275)

The polytheists of Makkah used to argue that usury is just like trading, because both yield profit. Why should, therefore, be a difference between the two ? The answer to this question is contained in the above verse that Allah has made trading lawful but has made usury unlawful. It means that profit cannot be earned on money for money i.e. a man cannot demand Rs 110/- for Rs. 100/- because this excess of Rs. 10/- will be interest. However, if something is sold for more than its cost price, the excess in this case is profit which Allah has allowed. In Murabaha (Profit-sale) goods are purchased and sold on profit, so these transactions are lawful and the profit earned is not Interest or Usury.

Which of these alternatives is more desirable?

As I have said, these Murabaha (Profit-sale) and Leasing system are not ideal alternatives and they do not affect the process of Distribution of Wealth basically. The ideal alternative is indeed the "Partnership" system. However, in individual institutions which may be established in future, there is scope to try the Murabaha and the "Leasing" systems also during the experimental and transitional periods. Even presently some Financial Institutions are working on the basis of these systems.

Anyway, these are my general observations about Usury and on issues related to it.

There is another aspect of usury the echo of which is being heard from time to time. Some people say that the ban on interest bearing transactions is not applicable to non-Muslim enemy countries. It is permissible in such a country to charge interest from non-Muslims. This is totally wrong. It is unlawful to charge interest whether the country is at war دارالحرب or at peace دارالسلام. It is suggested that the common man should keep his money in a bank's current account as interest does not accrue on deposits in currenct accounts. If anyone has deposited his money in a Savings Account on which interest accrues, it is generally advised that the amount of interest should be left to the bank. This advice is, however, not applicable to Bank Accounts in countries in which the unclaimed amounts of interest are spent on propaganda against Islam by preaching in favour of Christianity or Hinduism. Muslim depositors in such countries are advised to withdraw the accumulated amounts of interest in their accounts and spend them in charity like Zakat, but with no expectation of reward. Men should not use the amounts of interest for their personal benefits but should get rid of them as advised.

Financial Institutions working in the present age On Islamic principles of economy and livelihood

It is a somewhat difficult task yet we Muslims should try our best to establish Financial Institutions based on Islamic principles which should work on the lines dictated by the Shari'ah. I have just now mentioned that full-fledged schemes of the "Partnership", Murabaha (Profit-sale) and Leasing are available and the Muslims can establish their own Institutions on the pattern of these schemes. The Muslims of this land are intelligent and sensible enough to understand these issues in which lie the solutions to their own problems. They should establish here Financial Institutions. I know that, so far as House Building is concerned, two Institutions are in existence which are working on Islamic principles. One of them is in Toronto and the other in Los Angeles. Now it is time that more such Institutions should be opened by the Muslims. This should, however, be done in consultation with and under the supervision of reliable Jurists and Muftis. I am also ready to offer my humble services, if found necessary. Presently about one hundred Institutions are working on this pattern and I have been serving these Institutions as a consultant for about the last five years.

May Almighty Allah help you in this matter, so as to find out for the Muslims better and lawful channels of work. Aameen!

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek

His help and seek His forgiveness and believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Him from the evils of our souls and from the vices of our deeds. There is none to misguide him whom He guides and there is none to guide him whom He lets go astray. We bear witness that there is no god but Allah the One Who has no partner. We also bear witness that our sire, and our authority and our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad ﷺ is His servant and His Messenger. May Almighty Allah have mercy on him, his household and bless and salute them all in great abundance.

The outcome of the least degree of arrogance

Hazrat Salmah bin Akoo' رضی اللہ عنہ has narrated that the Holy Prophet ﷺ once saw a man taking food with his left hand - a habit common among the Arabs at that time. He ﷺ asked the man to eat with the right hand as this was the Islamic etiquette of eating taught to the Ummah by Allah and His Messenger ﷺ.

On hearing the admonition of the Holy Prophet ﷺ, the man replied that he was not able to eat with the right hand. His reply was due to arrogance. He thought that the Prophet of Allah ﷺ had insulted him by asking him to eat with the right hand. The Holy Prophet ﷺ cursed him by saying that in future he could never take food with the right hand. The result of this curse was that the man could not raise his right hand to his mouth throughout his life.

If we had lived during the time of the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم

This Hadith contains many useful lessons for us. Firstly, sometimes due to our ignorance or foolishness a desire rises that it would have been very good for us if we had been born during the Holy Prophet's ﷺ time. The Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم had the good luck of living in the company of the Holy Prophet ﷺ and of having direct contact with him ﷺ off and on. How fortunate and blissful it would have been for us, if we too had the honour of enjoying the company of the Holy Prophet ﷺ and had been among the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم. Sometimes this desire assumes the dimension of a complaint - God forbid - against Allah for not having raised us in the Holy Prophet's ﷺ time. We are inclined to think that it has become very difficult to follow the path of Deen in this fifteenth century. We would not have had to face this difficulty in preacticing on the path of Deen in the purified and auspicious environments of the Holy Prophet's ﷺ days.

Allah distributes His bounties according to the capacity of the recipient

Such a wish is born in our hearts but we do not think that Allah's grants and favours are distributed among His servants not at randum but according to the capacity and entitlement of each individual. As regards the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم, they had the requisite capacity and qualifications to be honoured with the company of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. So they were able to discharge the responsibilities that fell on their shoulders by virtue of the company of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. It was indeed a very blessed and auspicious age, but it had also its hazards. We have with us today the injunctions of the Holy Prophet ﷺ which have come down to us through an unbroken chain of authentic reporters. The Ulama have ruled that a person who denies the veracity of a Hadith proved genuine through single narration (خبر واحد) and says that he does not accept the genuineness of that injunction, he shall be dubbed as a grievous sinner but shall not be declared an unbeliever (کافر). On the contrary if anyone during the Holy Prophet's ﷺ time, heard any injunction direct from his ﷺ sacred tongue and rejected it, he atonce became an unbeliever. In their times the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم frequently came across such trying situations, but they steered clear of the ordeals. Only Allah knows how we would have fared, if we had been born and had lived in the blessed times of the Holy Prophet ﷺ.

Just as Hazrat Siddiq Akbar, Hazrat Farooq Azam, Hazrat Usman Ghani and Hazrat Ali رضی اللہ عنہم اجمعین were born in those blessed times in the same way, and in the same environments were born and were living the infidels like Abu Jahl, Abu Lahab, Abdulla bin Ubayyi and other enemies of Islam and hypocrites, but there was a world of difference between the paths followed by each group. It may be concluded that the time and the conditions in which it has been the pleasure of Allah to raise in this world any soul or souls is the best for all. It is, therefore, an act of foolishness for anyone to desire that he should have been born in this or that period of the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم. Such a desire implies a complaint against Allah's dispensation and prudence. All should note that whatever blessings and bounties Allah has destined for anyone is in the best interest and according to the capacity and title of the recipient.

Why did the Holy Prophet ﷺ curse the person?

A question arises as to why the Holy Prophet ﷺ cursed that person. He ﷺ was a mercy for the worlds who never took revenge from anyone for his own self, but as far as possible he always prayed for the people, instead of cursing them. The Ulama have explained this exceptional action of the Holy Prophet ﷺ in cursing a person by saying that the unfortunate fellow told a lie out of arrogance that he was unable to eat with his right hand, although he could use his right hand in eating. To turn down a command of the Holy Prophet ﷺ by telling a lie out of arrogance is so heinous a sin that it renders the sinner liable to be thrown into Hell. The Holy Prophet ﷺ cursed him for the only reason that he may be awarded a lighter punishment in this world instead of being awarded the eternal punishment of Hell-Fire in the Hereafter. This is the secret in the Holy Prophet's ﷺ act of cursing the arrogant liar.

Saintly men possess different trends and tendencies

Likewise, it is related about certain saints that if anyone tortured and harmed them, they took revenge from the wrongdoer without losing any time. The resort to revenge was for the same reason that if they did not themselves take revenge from the wrongdoers and left the matter to Allah, He may take a more severe revenge. Once a disciple asked his Sheikh (spiritual guide) to enlighten him on the belief that saintly men possess different thinking and vision. The Sheikh advised his disciple not to trouble himself on such questions, but should mind his own business. The Sheikh then asked the disciple to visit a certain mosque where he would find three pious men engaged in the remembrance of Allah. The Sheikh asked him to afflict a blow on the waist of each and tell the Shaikh their reaction. The disciple did as he had been advised by his Sheikh and observed different re-actions:

The first saint:

He took no notice of the blow and remained absorbed in his remembrance.

The second saint:

On receiving the blow he turned back and began to rub gently the hand of the wrongdoer out of the sympathy with him

The third saint:

On receiving the blow he took revenge from the wrongdoer by a blow dealing on him with equal force.

The disciple went back to his Sheikh and related the details of the behaviour of the three saints as mentioned above.

The Sheikh told the disciple that what he had experienced by himself about the different reactions of the saint represented the different trends of thinking and tendencies. The Sheikh explained to the disciple these different reactions as follows

The first saint preferred to enjoy the remembrance of Allah to his involvement in seeking revenge from the wrongdoer and this would waste his valuable moments in a useless engagement. The second saint was under an overwhelming influence of mercy and sympathy which he displayed towards the wrongdoer by gently rubbing the hand that had dealt the blow. As for the third saint, he took revenge from the wrongdoer in order to save him from punishment in the Hereafter. This is just how the Holy Prophet ﷺ did with the arrogant fellow who had refused to take food with his right hand.

Commence every good deed from the right side

Anyway, it should be everyone's duty to shield the Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ from being slighted. Now-a-days inscrupulous fellow talks disdainfully of the Sunnah Practices, like using the right or the left hand for eating, that these are unimportant matters. Remember that no Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ is unimportant, although outwardly it may appear to be so. Every command, every Sunnah, every act and practice of the Holy Prophet ﷺ is a model for the world to emulate. He ﷺ has commanded that every good act should be commenced from the right side, i.e. food should be eaten and water drunk with the right hand. If you have to distribute anything among an assembly, commence the distribution from the right side. There is a Hadith to this effect :

كان رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم يعجبه التَّيَمُّن فى تنعله وترجله وطهوره فى شانه كلـــه(صحيح بخارى كتاب الوضوء، باب التيمن فى الوضوء)

The Holy Prophet ﷺ liked to commence every act with the right hand. About putting on garments he ﷺ recommended to put first the right hand in the right sleeve then the left hand in the left sleeve and follow the same order in putting on the shoes, combing the hair, applying the antimony to the eyes, washing the hands and in all other clean and positive acts; (but not in entering the toilet into which first the left leg should be put).

Two Sunnah acts at one time

All these appear to be very insignificant acts of the Sunnah, yet acting upon them is appreciated by Almighty Allah and this earns great rewards. What can be more derogatory to these acts of the Sunnah, than relinquishing these acts and not acting upon them, for no reasons other than irresponsibility and carelessness? It is, therefore, incumbent on a Muslim to take care to do every positive act beginning with the right side. The pious men have observed that these are two acts of the Sunnah :-

2- When putting on shoes a man should put his right foot in the right shoe and the left foot in the left shoe.

Every item of the Sunnah is sublime

The Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم did not believe that there were insignificant and significant types of the Sunnah. Every Sunnah was significant and sublime in their eyes. They, therefore, took care to act upon each and every Sunnah. In fact a little care exercised in religious matters makes a great addition to the stock of good deeds at the credit of a man. It is therefore, the bounden duty of every Muslim to act upon the Sunnah without differentiating between significant and insignificant Sunnah.

Every item of the western civilization is just the opposite of the right phase

Hazrat Qari Muhammad Tayyib Sahib رحمۃ اللہ علیہ used to say that everything in the western civilization is just the opposite of the etiquettes of the earlier civilizations. He remarked that in the olden days there was darkness under the candle but now in the western civilization the darkness perches on the upper part of the electric bulb. The cursed western civilization has taken care and pains to change the Islamic values. It is now a fashion in the modern civilization to hold the knife and the fork in the right and left hand and take the food with the left hand.

It so happened many years ago that I was on an air-journey and another traveller was sitting next to me. During the journey we became friendly. When food was brought I saw that my co-traveller as usual took the fork in the left hand and began to eat his food with the left hand. I told him that we were imitating the Englishmen in everywalks of life whereas the Holy Prophet ﷺ used to take food with his right hand. I told him that if he also took his food with the right hand, he would become entitled to great reward. He replied: By hankering after such small matters, our nation (the Muslims) have lagged far behind. These moulvis have entangled our nation in these small things and have thereby blocked the path of progress and we have become backward in higher developments and programmes.

Why the western world is on the path of progress?

I re-acted to his reply, saying : You have been taking food in this progressive style for a very long time; how forward have you gone in the race course of progress and development? How many people have you surpassed? On hearing my reply he remained silent. I then explained to him that the progress, prosperity and supremacy of the Muslims lie only in acting upon the Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. If the Muslims take resort to ways and means other than the Sunnah, they can never attain honour and supremacy. The co-traveller re-acted to my observations, saying: You have said something quite surprising that progress and advancement depend on acting upon the Sunnah. Do you not see how these western nations are progressing by leaps and bounds even though they eat with the left hand and all their actions and activities are against the Sunnah and the principles of the Sunnah. Moreover, they are drowned deep in the mire of sins and immorality. They drink wine, they gamble, yet they are on the path of progress and have achieved supremacy over the entire world. I, therefore, hold the view that the nations of the world are on the path of progress, prosperity and development by dint of working against the Sunnah and the injunctions of the Shari'ah.

The story of a wiseacre

In reply to the trend of thinking of my co-traveller, I related to him the story of a wiseacre بوجھ بھجکڑ.

Once a man climbed up a date-palm tree, but he was not able to get down the tree. He appealed from the top of the tree to the people of the village to help him to get down the tree. The villagers assembled on the spot and thought over the problem, but they themselves could not find a way out. There was in the village a wiseacre بوجھ بھجکڑ supposed to be the wisest man of the village. The villagers called on him and explained to him their problem. He answered them that he could easily solve their problem and there was nothing to worry. He asked the villagers to bring a rope, throw it up to the man on the date-palm tree and ask him to tie the rope round his waist. When the man had tied the rope round his waist, as he had been advised, the wiseacre asked the villagers to pull down the rope. The villagers pulled down the rope. The man fell down and died instantly. When the villlagers complained about this fatal accident the so-called wiseman replied: I do not know why he died; perhaps he had been destined to die at this moment. Using the same method I have got many persons taken out of well safe and sound.

There is only one way for the Muslims to Prosper and progress

The wiseacre applied to the man on the date-palm the analogy of men who who had fallen into wells and the result of this folly is before all of us. The same analogy is being applied to the problems facing the Muslims. The worldly-wise men are enamelled of the worldly progress of the western nations that they have made progress and advancement, even though they are engaged in sinful and immoral ways of living. We Muslims too can make progress and achievement by leading lives full of sins and disobedience. Such analogy is not true. The Muslims who believe in and recite the Article of faith لا اله الا الله محمد رسول الله can never make progress and advancement even if they adopt whole-sole the western ways of living and civilization. The Muslims may make worldly progress, if they renounce their Islam and adopt the western ways of life, then they also may make progress and advancement like the western nations.

The Muslims however, follow a mode of life and code of civilisation totally different from those of the westerner infidels. The only way open to the Muslims even for worldly progress and advancement is to follow the path of the Holy Prophet ﷺ.

Surrender yourself totally to the servitude of the Holy Prophet ﷺ

This idea has crept into and firmly settled on, our hearts that what the western nations are doing is worth emulation and the Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ is - God forbid - an ordinary issue, unworthy of being followed. It is rather a hurdle and hindrance in the path of progress. Consider ! What harm will fall on us if we take our food with the right hand? Our malady is that the evil of slavery to the west has over-powered our minds. We have given up slavery to the Holy Prophet ﷺ and become slaves to the western powers, with the natural result that we are living and dying in slavery. We have become entangled in this slavery so badly that we now see no way out of it. The fact, however, remains that we cannot get out of this slavery, nor can we attain honour and superiority in this world unless we accept slavery to the Holy Prophet ﷺ in the true sense and follow in his footsteps.

Cutting joke with the Sunnah may result in Kufr (disbelief)

'SUNNNAH' is a comprehensive term. It is not confined only to the etiquettes of eating with the right hand and putting on clothes from the right side. Sunnah encompasses all the phases and activities of life of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. These include the conduct and character of the Holy Prophet ﷺ, i.e., his behaviour with the people, his contacts with them with a smiling face, his endurance with patience of the troubles he ﷺ suffered at the hands of the people. All these aspects are parts of the Sunnah. No Sunnah, however, deserves to be degraded. A man himself may not be acting upon a Sunnah, but he should consider a person superior to himself who is acting upon the Sunnah. To degrade that Sunnah to make fun of it and of the man who is acting upon it and to taunt him may - God forbid - involve the taunter and derider of the Sunnah in infidelity -, so all should take care not to think as mean even the smallest item of the Sunnah in any circumstances.

May Almighty save every Muslims from this sin against the Sunnah.

In the next Hadith the Holy Prophet ﷺ has given an example of his teachings.

The teachings of the Holy Prophet ﷺ and the examples of those who accepted and acted upon them

Hazrat Abu Musa Ash'ari رضی اللہ عنہ has narrated that the Holy Prophet ﷺ said:

عن ابی موسی رضی اللہ عنہ قال قال رسول اللہ صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم ان مثل مابعثنی اللہ من الھُدٰی والعلم کمثل غیث اصاب ارضاً فکانت منھا طائفۃ طیبۃ .....الی آخرہ (صحیح بخاری. کتاب العلم، باب فضل من علم وعلم)

Hazrat Abu Musa رضی اللہ عنہ has narrated that the Holy Prophet ﷺ said: My example and the example of the teachings with which I have been sent is like the example of tract of a land on which the rains fell down and the tract of the land is of three kinds:

(1) The tract of the first kind was very fertile. It absorbed the rain water and plants and flowers grew on that tract.

(2) The second kind of the tract, being hard, could not absorb the rain water on account of which the water remained suspended on the surface from which men and animals both benefited.

(3) The third kind of the tract was quite barren. It had neither capacity to grow anything, nor to retain the rain-water on its surface. The result was it could receive no benefit from the rain-water which was simply wasted.

Three categories of men

The Holy prophet ﷺ further said:

The teachings which I have brought is like rain-water and those who heard these teachings are also of three kinds:

(1) There are some who have absorbed these teachings and benefited by them whereby they reformed their deeds, conduct and character and became righteous men to serve as best models for others.

(2) The second category is of those who grasped my teachings. They themselves benefited thereby and preserved them for the benefit of others. Now they are conveying those teachings to others by teaching them, and spreading them by holding assemblies and preaching.

(3) The third category consists of those who heard my teachings with one ear and got them out from the other ear. Neither they themselves benefited by them, nor did they impart the teachings to others for their benefit.

The Holy Prophet ﷺ indicated by this Hadith that the people should take advantage of his sacred teachings in one of the two alternatives, viz., either they should themselves benefit by them and let others also to get benefit therefrom or they should at least themselves take advantage from the teachings. The path other than these two alternatives is the path of ruin. After listening to these teachings they turn their backs on them. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has mentioned the same point in another Hadith:

كُنْ عَالِمًا اَوْمُتَعَلِّمًا وَلَا تَكُنْ ثَالِثًا فَتَهْلَك

Either become a religious scholar or a student of religion, but do not take a third course which will lead to your ruin and annihilation.

Invite others to the path of Deen (Faith)

The main responsibility of a Muslim towards the Sunnah and teachings of the Holy Prophet ﷺ is that he should himself act upon them and convey them to others. If he himself acts upon them but does not convey them to others then there is every possibility that the benefits which he himself has reaped may go waste. This is because if the company around him remains misguided and unreformed, then there is every possibility that this man may go astray at any time. Take an example. A man has become a regular Namazi,(One who offers Salat) is refraining from sins, but he has paid no attention to the members of his family who are following a different path from his own. As a result he is liable to deviate from the right path he is following. It is, therefore, incumbent on him to try from time to time with love and sympathy to induce the members of his own household to the right path. In addition, he should remain striving to convey the message of Deen to his Kith and Kin, his neighbours, his friends and colleagues. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in a Hadith:

اَلْمُؤْمِنُ مِرْاٰةُ الْمُؤْمِنِ (ابو داؤد، كتاب الادب، باب فى النصيحة)

One Muslim is a mirror of another Muslim (Abu Daood)

In other words, if one Muslim is committing a sin, it is the duty of another Muslim to draw the attention of the sinner to the sin he is committing. Such admonitory action should, however, be taken with love and friendliness, without any vestige of harshness or taunting, calculated to create feelings of defiance hatred and obstinacy.

Some people complain that their efforts do not bear the desired fruit. They should note that their duty is to convey the message and they are not responsible for the result which depends on Allah's will. Take the example of Hazrat Nooh (Noah - عليه السلام) who spent nine hundred and fifty years in preaching the message during which only nineteen men embraced Islam. Despite that the Prophet of Allah did not give up the work of preaching.

One should not feel disgusted with the work of preaching

It is the duty of a Da'ee (Preacher) not to feel disgusted nor give way to despondency, but he should continue his preaching, irrespective of his preaching has or does not have the desired effect on his addressees. He should do this with the belief that a word of goodness does have its effect later or sooner. If like the son of Hazrat Nooh (Noah عليه السلام) one is destined to die as an unbeliever, the preacher at any rate shall earn his reward for the work of preaching.

The Da'ee (Preacher) should himself act upon the Sunnah and teachings of the Holy Prophet ﷺ and seek Allah's forgiveness for his shortcomings. If he moulds his entire life on this pattern, he will-God willing - attain success. Negligence is a great vice against which the Preacher should guard himself. May Almighty Allah save from the evil of negligence and help us all of us in following the Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. Aameen!

عن ابى هريرة رضى الله عنه قال قال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم احرص على ماينفعك واستعن بالله ولا تعجز وان اصابك شيْئٌ فلا تقل لَوْ انى فعلت لكان كذا وكذا ولكن قل قدَّرالله وماشاء فعل فانَّ " لَوْ" تفتح عمل الشيطٰن (مسلم شريف كتاب القدر، باب فى الا مربالقوة وترك العجز)

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and seek His forgiveness and believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with

Him from the evils of our souls and from the vices of our deeds. There is none to misguide him whom He guides and there is none to guide him whom He lets go astray. We bear witness that there is no god but Allah the One Who has no partner. We also bear witness that our sire, and our authority and our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad ﷺ is His servant and His Messenger. May Almighty Allah have mercy on him, his household and bless and salute them all in great abundance.

Do not be greedy of worldly resources

Hazrat Abu Hurairah رضی اللہ عنہ has narrated that the Holy Prophet ﷺ said in a Hadith: Covet only those acts which may benefit you, i.e., those acts and deeds which may prove beneficial for you in the Hereafter. Greed is undesirable and man has been asked to refrain from it by shunning greed for money, worldly resources, reputation and ostentation and show, etc. Man has been advised to accept such quantity of these as has been required by lawful means and as is barely necessary for you. Do not desire to have more, because it is not possible for anyone to satisfy all his desires in this world. Even the greatest King or Capitalist cannot claim that all his wishes have been fulfilled. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in a Hadith: If a man gets a valley filled with gold, he shall desire a second one. If he gets two, he shall desire a third one and so on. Nothing but the earth of the grave can fill man's belly. There is, however, a thing which can fill man's belly and that is "contentment". If man remains contented with whatever Allah has bestowed upon him through lawful and honest sources he should be thankful to Exalted Allah. There is no other way of filling man's belly.

Love for Deen (Faith) is desirable

Thus, it is undesirable to long for worldly resources. On the contrary it is desirable to be fond of activities relating to Deen, e.g., righteous deeds, Allah's worship. It is desirable to any a person who is engaged in doing good deeds and posses the blessings of religious fervour. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has, therefore, said in this Hadith that man should desire to do such acts as may prove beneficial to him in the Hereafter. Allah has said in the Holy Qur'an: فاستبقوا لخيرات meaning: Try to compete with one another in doing righteous deeds.

Love among the Companions رضی اللہ عنہم for doing good deeds

The Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم were very fond of doing good deeds. They were always anxious to be able to add to their Register of Deeds some act of goodness. Hazrat Abdullah bin Umar رضی اللہ عنہ son of Hazrat Farooq Azam رضی اللہ عنہ once called on Hazrat Abu Hurairah رضی اللہ عنہ who related to him this Hadith of the Holy Prophet ﷺ:

> If anyone joins the funeral prayer of any person he gets an award equal to one Qirat (=0.195 g.). If he takes part in his burial also, he gets an award equal to two Qirats.

In those days Qirat was a weight for weighing gold. The Holy Prophet ﷺ used the word in the Hadith only as a token, but he ﷺ himself explained that in the Hereafter a Qirāt will be bigger than the Mt. Uhad. It should not, therefore, be mistaken for the usual Qirat in vogue in the world. Moreover, this does not give a full idea of the reward, as the language in use by men in the world is inadequate for expressing the quantities and values of the Hereafter.

When Hazrat Abdullah bin Umar رضی اللہ عنہ heard this Hadith, he asked Hazrat Abu Hurairah رضی اللہ عنہ to confirm if he had really heard the Hadith from the Holy Prophet ﷺ. Hazrat Abu Hurairah رضی اللہ عنہ confirmed the Hadith. On hearing this Hazrat Abdullah bin Umar رضی اللہ عنہ expressed grief for having lost so many Qirats up to that time, because of the ignorance of the Hadith. See how the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم remained always desirous to add some good deed to their Register of Deeds.

Create in yourself this love

We all hear in the sermons about the rewards for different deeds of virtue. These sermons are delivered to create in our hearts a fondness for doing these good deeds. Deeds falling within the definition of optional and desirable acts are neither obligatory nor essential, yet a Muslim should feel a desire to do them.

Those whom Allah has granted a fondness of Deen always remain in quest of some good deeds to add to their Register of Deeds.

An occasion on which the Holy Prophet ﷺ ran a race

It occurs in a Hadith that once the Holy Prophet ﷺ was going to participate in a feast along with the mother of the believers, Hazrat 'Ayeshah رضی اللہ عنہا. On the way there was a forest and a tract of open land which ensured full pardah, as there was none to observe what was going on. The Holy Prophet ﷺ asked Hazrat 'Ayeshah رضی اللہ عنہا if she would like to run a race with him ﷺ. Hazrat 'Ayeshah رضی اللہ عنہا replied in the affirmative. The objective of this race was firstly to please Hazrat 'Ayeshah رضی اللہ عنہا and secondly to teach the Ummah that it is also not desirable to be too saintly and righteous and confine onself to a secluded corner in devotion. No, a Muslim should live in this world, leading a normal and active life.

Hazrat 'Ayeshah رضی اللہ عنہا has narrated in a Hadith saying:

> The Holy Prophet ﷺ ran a race with me twice. In the first race the Holy Prophet ﷺ was the winner. In the second race I was the winner, because at that time the Holy Prophet ﷺ had become bulky in body so he ﷺ lagged behind. On that occasion He ﷺ said هٰذِهٖ بِتِلْكَ (i.e. both have become equal). In other words the race became drawn between the two.

Just see how the pious men remain in quest of occasions to act upon the Sunnah.

Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanawi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ acted upon this Sunnah

Once Hazrat Thanawi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ was going to attend a feast in a village which was situated at some distance from Thana Bhawan. His wife was also with him. They both were walking on foot and were all alone. When they were midway in the forest Maulana considered it to be a God-given opportunity to act upon the Prophet's Sunnah of running a race with his wife. On that rare occasion he acted upon this Sunnah by running a race with his wife. It is quite obvious that he was not fond of running a race, but he ran this race only for the sake of acting upon a Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. This demonstrates the fervour of acting upon a Sunnah, by saintly men.

May Almighty Allah inculcate in all of us the keen desire to do good deeds and the longing for earning rewards in the Hereafter.

Seek courage from Allah

Sometimes a desire springs up in a man's heart to vie with a man who is doing some good deed, but at the same time he begins to feel that he is not equal to that task. He is not worthy of the sublime deed the other fellow is doing. When such discouraging ideas deter a man from virtuous deeds he should act upon this Hadith: واستعن بالله ولا تعجز i.e., seek Allah's help and do not admit (in you) disability for the deed. Have full reliance on Allah who will make the deed easy for you.

It is related about righteous men that they offer the Tahajjud (after midnight) Salat and make supplications before Allah at that blessed time of the night. You may also feel a desire to offer the Tahajjud Salat and reap its blessings, but at the same time your weakness and inability keep you away from this task. In such a situation you should not surrender yourself to such discouraging thoughts, but should pray to Allah hopefully that He may bestow upon you the necessary courage and strength to offer the Tahajjud Salat and reap its blessings.

Either you are helped to do the deed or granted its reward

When a man prays to Almighty Allah for help to do some deed his prayer is sure to bring him one of the two alternative gains. Either Allah will help the man to perform the deed, or He shall grant him the reward for the deed. This is proved by a Hadith.

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in a Hadith:

If a man prays with heart-felt sincerity for the honour of martyrdom, Allah grants him, by His mercy, that honour, even if he dies (at home) on his bed.

The incident of an Ironsmith

My respected fatehr, Mufti Muhammad Shafi Sahib رحمة الله عليه once related this:

After the death of Hazrat Abdullah bin Mubarak رحمة الله عليه someone saw him in a dream and asked him what happened to him after his death. In reply he said that Allah was very kind to him Who forgave him and granted him a status which he hardly deserved. He added that he could, however, not get the status which was granted to the Ironsmith who lived in the front house.

On getting up from his sleep the person who had the dream felt a desire to find out who that Ironsmith was and what righteous deed he did to supersede Hazrat Abdullah bin Mubarak رحمة الله عليه in the Hereafter. This man then called at the house of the Ironsmith and related his dream to the wife of the deceased and asked her about her husband's deeds by virtue of which he superseded Hazrat Abdullah bin Muhbarak رحمة الله عليه. The wife replied to this question, saying: My husband did not devote himself to any special acts of worship, yet I saw in him two notable acts:

As soon as he heard the first words of the Azan (Prayer-call) الله اكبر, he would stop his work without a moment's delay, even without completing the stroke for which he had raised up the hammar. He would then leave the smithy and prepare himself for the prayer.

The other notable act I noticed in him is that a pious man, Hazrat Abdullah bin Mubarak رحمة الله عليه lived in the house in front of our house who used to pray on the roof of his house the whole night. My husband used to envy that pious saint and ardently desired that if Almighty Allah had granted him the necessary freedom of time he too would worship Allah like that pious saint.

Hearing this account, the man exclaimed: It is this regret which placed the ironsmith at a status higher that of Hazrat Abdullah bin Mubarak رحمة الله عليه. After relating this event my respected father Hazrat Mufti Muhammad Shafi Sahib رحمة الله عليه used to say: This is the rare feeling of regret which sometime raises a man to an unimaginable height of superiority. So when a man comes to know that such a person is engaged in doing this righteous deed he should also entertain a desire in his heart to be able to do the same deed.

An idea of the trend of thought of the Noble Companions رضى الله عنهم

It occurs in the narratives that some Companions رضى الله عنهم once called upon the Holy Prophet ﷺ and said to him: O Messenger of Allah we see that many of our Companions رضى الله عنهم are well-to-do persons. We envy them, because we both put in almost the same bodily acts of worship, but they put in financial acts of worship and good deeds like spending money in alms and charity - acts by virtue of which their sins are pardoned and their status is raised, so they will be far above us in the Hereafter and as such we cannot compete with them in the matter of righteousness on account of our poverty.

See! How different is our trend of thinking. When we think about rich men we do not envy them on their acts of charity. On the contrary, we feel jealous of them for their wealth and comfortable living. We begin to desire if we too had money, so that we too could live comfortably like these wealthy persons. This is the difference between the two trends of thinking !

Anyway, in reply to the question put by these Companions رضى الله عنهم the Holy Prophet ﷺ said:

I tell you about a deed such reward will exceed the rewards of those who spend money on alms and charity. None can supersede you in this matter. That virtuous deed consists in rehearsing after every prayer 33 times سبحان الله(Glorified is Allah), الحمدلله (All praise is for Allah) and 34 times الله اكبر(Allah is the Greatest of all), thus completing the count 100.

The desire to do good is a great blessing

A further question arises in this behalf. If the rich men also indulge in the rehearsal of the same sacred names 33/34 times as mentioned above, the question put by the Companions رضى الله عنهم remains unanswered, because the rich persons will still be ahead of the poor class in the matter of doing good.

This question may be answered by saying that the intention of the Holy Prophet ﷺ is to tell that the regret felt by men in not being able to spend money in charity and alms, as the rich do, is a virtue in return for which Almighty Allah shall grant the servants concerned the reward for acts of charity and alms. People should know that this regret felt for the inability to do good is also a great blessing. So when you come to know that such and such person is doing some good deed you should acknowledge to Allah - your inability to do that good deed and seek His help for doing that. In response to your prayer, Allah shall either help you in doing the same good deed or will grant you the reward for the deed. This is an infallible remedy.

The word "IF" is the key which opens the door to Satanic acts

وان اصابك شيئٌ فلا تقل لوانى فعلت لكان كذا وكذا ولكن قل قدَّر الله وماشاء فعل فان "لو" تفتح عمل الشيطان

If some mishap strikes you in the life of this world, do not say, this would had not happened, if I had done this and that. Do not use the word "If" and "if not". You should say: This happened, because it was so destined by Almighty Allah. What Allah willed happened. The word "If" opens the door of Satanic activities. For example, if a relative dies, it is generally said that if such and such physician had treated the patient, he would have been saved. Similarly, when theft or robbery is commtited in anyone's house, it is said that if such and such precautionary measures had been taken, the crime would not have been committed. Such things should not be uttered. All that should be uttered on such occasions is: What has happened was pre-destined by Allah and Allah's destiny cannot be deferred in any way.

The world is a mixture of comfort and discomfort

May Allah let the truth of this wonderful teaching contained in this Hadith descend into the recesses of our hearts. Be sure that the only way of attaining peace, safety, comfort and contentment in this world is to have trust in, and reliance on, Allah's destiny along with belief in Allah. There is no man in this world who can claim that he has not been afflicted in this world with some worry, grief or misfortune. This world contains both sides, namely, ease joy and comfort and difficulties, grief and hardships. There is in this world neither unmixed joy nor unmixed grief. All men have to taste the sweetness of joy as well as the bitterness of hardship. One cannot purchase joy and comfort unmarred by hardships and torments even at the price of the entire wealth of the world.

A man who is loved by Allah faces more hardships

The Prophets عليهم السلام of Allah, who are Allah's beloved and favoured men have had to suffer troubles and hardships even more than the common public. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said:

اشد الناس بلاءً اَلْاَنْبِيَاءُ ثم الاَ مثل فالاَ مْثل (كنز العمال، حديث نمبر ٦٧٨٣)

> The Prophets of Allah are most exposed to misfortunes than those who are similar and nearer to them.(Kanzul-Amal Hadith No: 6783)

The world which is free from all misfortunes and hardships is Paradise. It is, therefore, certain that hardships and misfortunes must descend on this world. It is, however, not wise to pine over these misfortunes and take pessimistic views about them, feeling that if this and that measure had been taken the hardships could have been averted. This trend of thinking only intensifies the feelings of grief and regret. This also contains a sense of complaint against the dispensation of the All-Wise Providence. This trend of thinking makes the worldly life tortuous and makes the person concerned liable to punishment of the Hereafter. This may also deprive him-God forbid - of his Eeman (Faith).

What can a mean worm know the expedience of things?

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has therefore, advised that whenever something undesirable befalls you, you should think that it is due to Allah's destiny and will and you are not aware of wisdom lying at the bottom of that undesirable event. If the mishap is so severe that you are moved to tears there is no harm in weeping, provided that this does not arouse in you the slightest feeling of a complaint against Allah, the Author of the misfortune. Weeping has the effect of bringing solace to the grief-stricken heart.

A pious man was moved to tears on account of hunger

It has been related about a pious man that when a visitor called on him he was weeping. On being asked about the cause of this weeping he said that he was feeling hungry. The visitor told the pious man that it is the children who weep on account of hunger and not grown-up men like him. The weeping man said: May be, Allah has made me hungry because He appreciates my weeping. Thus, sometimes Almighty Allah appreciates weeping provided this does not involve a feeling of complaint against Him. In the terminology of the mystics this is called "Tafweez" which means entrusting one's affairs and problem to Allah with a confession that the trouble is only apparent and is based on Allah's will Who controls everything pleasant or unpleasant, big or small. Such trend of thinking strengthens Eeman, mitigates the severity of the mishap and makes it bearable.

The difference between a Muslim and an Infidel

The relative of an infidel fell sick and was treated by a Doctor, but he died. In this situation there is nothing to bring solace to the infidel. He has no alternative but to blame the Doctor for wrong treatment. If a Muslim faces similar situation, he has something to bring solace to him in his grief. He will think that the inefficient treatment of the Doctor may be the apparent cause of the death, but the real cause of death was Allah's will and destiny which could not be helped in any circumstances. Even the treatment by the best Doctor could not avert the death which had been destined by Allah to take place at the pre-fixed hour.

Hazrat Abdullah bin Mas'ood رضی اللہ عنہ who is a renowned Companion has narrated saying: It is better for me to place on my tongue an ember of burning fire than to desire about a past event that it should not have happened and to desire an event to happen which has not yet happened.

Be contented with Allah's Decision

When Almighty Allah has taken a decision on some event then it is to express disatisfaction with Allah's decision or destiny to say that it was better if this did not happen or it should have happened in this or that way. It is demanded of a believer that he should yield to Allah's decision and His destiny without the slightest complaint in his heart about that decision and destiny which should be accepted whole-heartedly. In another narrative Hazrat Abu Darda رضی اللہ عنہ has said:

اذا قضی اللہ قضاء احب ان یرضی بقضائہ

When Almighty Allah takes a decision on anything, He desires that His servant should gladly accept His decision.

If the decision is apparently undesirable and a source of inconvenience and grief, it should be accepted without murmur instead of saying that if one had done this or that the event would not have occurred. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has forbidden this attitude with Allah's destiny. This is because what has happened was Allah's destiny which had to come to pass at any rate and it was not possible to avert it in any circumstances. It is, therefore, not a believer's conduct to pass remarks on the divine decision as this is tantamount to expressing dis-satisfaction.

There is solace in remaining contended with one's destiny

If we look into the matter a bit deeply we shall find that there is no alternative for man but to surrender himself to Allah's destiny. Your dis-satisfaction with the destiny cannot change the event and the grief that has stricken you cannot be averted by your resentment. On the other hand this negative attitude on your part will aggravate your grief by your pining over the event that has already taken place. If looked at from this viewpoint, it will be realized that contentment with Allah's destiny contains a source of solace which Almighty Allah has provided for a believer.

Destiny does not forbid taking preventive measures

The belief in destiny is a wonderful belief which Almighty Allah has granted every believer. It is necessary to understand the full implications of the belief lest people should fall into diverse errors.

Firstly, before the occurrence of some event, this belief should not induce a man to succumb to idleness and inactivity. For example, man should not give up his efforts, thinking that what is destined shall happen and there is no need to take any measures in the matter. Such an attitude is against the teachings of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. The injunction of the Islamic Shari'ah requires that all efforts should be made in attaining one's objective.

After taking the necessary measures leave the result to Allah

Secondly, action on the belief about destiny commences after occurrence of an event. For example, if something unpleasant happens to a believer, should think that he did whatever was necessary to do to get a favourable result. If the result has turned out to be against his expectation, he should think that he had done his best to attain the desired result, but if the result turned out against his expectations it was Allah's decision which could not be helped and he must remain contented with it. It is not the character of a believer to give way to remorse and regret after a result has come out and feel dejected, thinking that if this and that action had been taken the result would have been as desired. This trend of thinking goes counter to the belief in destiny.

Almighty Allah has shown us the right path between these two extremes. It is necessary for a believer to do his best to attain something as long as the destined result remains hidden, because we do not know yet what the fate has in store for us.

An incident that took palce with Hazrat Farooq A'zam رضی اللہ عنہ

Once Hazrat Farooq A'zam رضی اللہ عنہ was on a tour of Syria. On the way he was informed that the epidemic of plague had broken out in the territory of Syria. It was so virulent that its victims died in the matter of a few hours. Many Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم fell martyrs in the plague. The entire graveyard in Jordan near the grave of Hazrat Ubaidah bin Jarrah رضی اللہ عنہ is occupied with the graves of these martyrs. Hazrat Farooq A'zam رضی اللہ عنہ consulted the Companions رضی اللہ عنہم whether he should pursue his tour or go back. On that occasion Hazrat Abdur Rahman bin 'Auf رضی اللہ عنہ narrated a Hadith of the Holy Prophet ﷺ, saying:

> If plague breaks out in any territory, then those who are out of that territory should not enter it while those who are already staying in the affected area should not leave it.

After hearing this Hadith Hazrat Farooq A'zam رضی اللہ عنہ postponed the programme of his tour to that territory. A Companion رضی اللہ عنہ probably Hazrat Abu Ubaidah bin Jarrah رضی اللہ عنہ, said to Hazrat Farooq A'zam رضی اللہ عنہ:

أتفرُّ مِنْ قدر اللہ؟

Are you fleeing from Allah's destiny? If death has been ordained, it must come. If it has not been ordained it will never come.

In reply to this question Hazrat Farooq A'zam رضی اللہ عنہ said:

لو غيرك قالها يا ابا عبيده

> O Abu Ubaidah! If any other person had said this, I would have considered him to be pardonable. How can you who are well aware of the truth say this?

Thereafter he said:

نعم نَفر من قدر اللہ الی قدر اللہ

> Yes, we are fleeing from Allah's destiny to Allah's destiny.

The intention was to say that until the event takes place we have been advised to take all precautionary measures to attain the desired objective. This is not against the belief in destiny but it is a part of that belief. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has advised us to take all possible precautionary measures. Hazrat Farooq A'zam رضی اللہ عنہ said that, acting upon this advice he was going back. If the affliction with plague has been ordained for us, we cannot avert it, but we must take precautions as far as possible.

The correct concept of Destiny

It is the belief of a believer that after all necessary steps to achieve something have been taken he should leave the result to Almighty Allah, saying: O Allah, I have taken all possible steps in the matter and now I am waiting for your decision. I shall remain contented with your decision whatever it may be. The belief in Destiny should not induce anyone to sit idle and do nothing before the happening of the event as some men make the belief in destiny an excuse for sitting idle under the notion that whatever has been ordained must come out whether one works or does not work to attain the desired result. This attitude is not right. Islam teaches that we should do our best to achieve our objectives, but if all our efforts fail to produce the desired results against our expectation, then we should accept the situation with a good grace. On the other hand if we feel dejected and express dis-satisfaction at the unfavourable results, this will only add to our grief and dejection, because what has happened cannot be averted and there is no alternative for us but to put up with the situation, however unpleasant it may be. We should, therefore, surrender ourselves to the will of Allah and His decision on the very first day.

To feel grief and shock is not against the principle of contentment with Destiny

If some undesirable event takes place or some grief or shock afflicts a person, then it is not against the principle of patience to express that grief or shock by weeping or lamenting, nor is it a sin. How to reconcile between the two apparently opposite views that it is lawful to express grief and to weep on some undesirable event and on the other hand one has been advised to accept submissively what has been ordained by Allah. Are they not two contradictory views?

Try to understand well that expression of grief and shock is one thing and submission to the Divine Destiny is quite another thing. Submission to Allah's decision and Will implies admission that Allah's decision is based on divine wisdom and we are not aware of this wisdom. This ignorance of the divine wisdom is the source of our grief and shock and the cause of our weeping. However we also know at the same time that what Allah has ordained is quite true and correct and based on Allah's unfailing wisdom and prudence. Thus submission to destimy implies a mental and rational attitude of submission but in actual practice the apparent feeling may be different.

A very convincing example

Suppose, a patient goes to a hospital and requests the Surgeon to perform an operation on him to cure him of some ailment. When the Surgeon starts the operation, the patient starts crying on account of the pain caused by the process of the operation. Notwithstanding this, he pays the Surgeon's fees and pays him thanks for the operation. Why is it so? This is because he feels rationally that the operation the Surgeon is performing on him is to save him from some serious ailment. Likewise whatever hardships and torments befall a man descend from Allah and by His will. This is as if Almighty Allah is performing a surgical operation on His servants. Therefore, if any servant turns submissively to Allah despite the hardships and misfortunes he is undergoing, this attitude is in his best interests and highly beneficial to him. Thus, if a man rationally feels that whatever comes to him from Allah is in his best interests, then no charge lies on him if he displays any restlessness and discomforts on his apparent sufferings.

Failure in any project is also by Allah's Will and Leave

Hazrat Abdullah bin Umar رضی اللہ عنہ has narrated that sometimes a businessman is trying to strike a profitable business bargain; or there is a man who is making his best efforts to get a good job. These two persons are themselves praying and requesting others also to pray to Allah for success in attaining their desired goals. In the meantime Almighty Allah is telling his Angels that if these two servants are assisted to attain their desired objectives, they will fall into errors, commit sins and will become entitled to Hell Fire. So Allah, in His wisdom, does not help them to succeed in their respective projects. Accordingly, some hindrance occurs in the nick of time and they fail to attain their desired aims. On account of this sudden failure, these persons are raising hue and cry and cursing their fates and others for their failures. They are hardly prepared to think that all that has come to pass is by Allah's Will and Leave and for the exclusive benefits of these persons and in their own interests. If they had been successful in their plans, they would have become entitled to Hell.

Thus, this is Allah's providence, destiny and decision which a servant should accept with a good grace and from the core of his heart.

As a Mu'min you have put faith in the belief in Destiny

Every believer has full conviction in the belief concerning Destiny. When a man embraces Islam, he acknowledges Allah, His Prophet ﷺ and also the reality of Destiny:

The impact of this Eeman (Faith) is generally not reflected in a believer's daily life, nor is he conscious of the implications of this Faith. Generally he remains oblivious of all this. That is why he remains worried and care-worn in the world. The learned Sufis have, therefore, advised that when man has once become firm in this belief, he should make it an inseparable part of his life which he should always keep in view and ever fresh in his memory. When something good or bad happens to him he should remember that he has beleived in the destiny ordained by Allah and he is, therefore, honour-bound to remain contented with that. This is the difference between a common man and one who has to apply the trust in destiny to his life under the guidance and training of the learned Sufis and Saints.

Man should, therefore, make the belief in destiny an inseparable and permanent maxim of his life that when something undesirable happens to him he should recite these Qur'anic words انا لله وانا اليه راجعون and surrender himself to the dispensation of Allah without the least demur or hesitation. Some practice is needed before man can reach this state of passive surrender to Allah's decision. When a man reaches this stage, he becomes totally immune from the onslaught of worries and anxieties.

Why these worries?

You should bear in mind that grief and shock are something which befall everyone at one time or another. This makes him worried and disturbed and deprives him of his peace and rest. The reason for this is that mentally he has not surrendered himself to Allah's decision and destiny. How can such a man have peace and rest ? There is however, a man who realises that he has done everything which was within his power and beyond this he is helpless. He has therefore, to accept whatever comes to him from Allah because His decision/judgement is final and none can change the Divine Decision. A man so resigned to his destiny may have to face grief and shocks but he can never face worries and anxieties.

The effect of this Eeman (belief) is generally not reflected in a believer's daily life, nor is he conscious of the implications of this belief. He remains generally dormant and oblivious of it.

A sentence worthy of being written with gold water

When my respected father Hazrat Maulana Mufti Muhammad Shafi Sahib رحمة الله عليه died I was shocked with deep grief which I had never before faced in my life. It made me extremely restless. I could not even weep to relieve myself of the deep shock within me. I wrote to my Sheikh Dr. Abdul Hayee Sahib، رحمة الله عليه about my deplorable condition. In reply the Sheikh wrote a short note which continues still imprinted on my heart and which proved to be a panacea for my grief. The sentece was:

صدمہ تو اپنی جگہ پر ہے لیکن غیر اختیاری امور پر اتنی زیادہ پریشانی قابل اصلاح ہے۔

The shock of grief is a natural affair but it is due to an occurrence by the Will of Allah and beyond man's own control which could not be averted. To feel so much grief on an occurrence beyond human control is a violation of the injunction prescribing that one should yield to Allah's decision. The feeling of grief needs to be within reasonable limits.

The moment I read these words I felt as if ice had been placed on my chest and I was awakened to reality.

Let the following advice be imprinted on your heart

On another occasion I wrote a letter to another Sheikh of mine Hazrat Maulana Maseehullah Khan Sahib رحمة الله عليه. In reply to my letter he advised me as under:

"If a man has established a relationship with Allah, there is no justification for him to feel worried or perturbed."

Conversely, the Sheikh means to say that being ridden by worries and anxieties shows that the relationship with Allah is not yet strong enough. Firm relationship with Allah and accumulation of worries do not go together.

So pray to Allah that He may remove your grief and anxieties and you may remain contented with the Divine decision, whatever it is. This if رضا بالقضاء (submission to the dictates of destiny) becomes the nature of a man worries and anxieties can never fall on him.

The secret in the comfort and peace enjoyed by Hazrat Zun Noon Misri رحمة الله عليه

Someone asked Hazrat Zun-noon Misri رحمة الله عليه: Sir, how do you do ? He replied saying: I am quite well. What do you think about the peace and joy of a person without whose pleasure nothing can happen in the universe ? The questioner said: The power and authority to which you have referred is not enjoyed even by the Prophets عليهم السلام of Allah. They could not claim such prerogative as you are claiming. How did you attain this position? The saint replied, saying: I have merged my own wishes and preferences into those of Allah. That is, my own desires and preferences are the same as those of Allah, so I can say that whatever is happening in the world is happening with my choice and preference. Thus when everything in the world is happening according to my choice and pleasure what can you say about my satisfaction and joy? This being the situation how can worries, anxieties and disturbances approach me?

Hardship too is mercy in disguise

That person is secure from worries and troubles whom Allah has granted the wealth of contentment with destiny. This person has sometimes to face grief and hardship, but he is not at all worried at these. He knows that whatever grief or shock falls on him is from, and by the will of, his Master, Allah and is exactly in accordance with His wisdom and destiny and his interest and gain are also concealed therein. Some saints have gone to the extent of declaring;

نشود نصیبِ دشمن کہ شود ہلاک تیغت
سرِ دوستاں سلامت کہ تو خنجر آزمائی

This is a Persian couplet which may be litterally translated thus:

O my beloved ! let not your sword kill the enemy. The lovers are ready to take the stroke of your sword.

The deeper meaning of the couplet is that hardships and mishaps that fall on a person from the side and by the will of Allah should be welcomed as they are nothing but mercy from Allah in disguise, which should better be distributed among the friends rather than the enemies (unbelievers).

An example

Setting an example of this aspect, Hazrat Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has said: You dearly love a person but you have not been able to see him for a long time. That beloved person suddenly arrives and catches hold of you from behind with a strong grip. The grip is so hard that you try to get out of it and ask who is the person who is torturing you. The answer comes: I am that beloved of yours. If you do not like my squeezing you I am letting you free and doing the same with your rival. If you are a true lover, your reply will be that your beloved should continue his pressure on you and should not turn his attention to the rival, and you will recite this couplet:

نہ شود نصیبِ دشمن کہ شود ہلاک تیغت
سرِ دوستاں سلامت کہ تو خنجر آزمائی

May Almighty Allah make us, by His mercy, understand that these hardships, difficulties and misfortunes contain an element of Allahs' mercy. Being weak, we do not ask for these hardships and difficulties, but when they fall on us they fall with Allah's wisdom and decision and as such they are good and beneficial for us.

Do not ask for hardships, but endure them with patience when they come

It is not our capacity to ask for these hardships, although those who are aware of the realities of these hardships do sometime demand them. This kind of demand has been related about Sufis. True devotees of Allah have particularly accorded preference to hardships in the path of Deen.

بجرمِ عشقِ تو ام مے کشند غوغا ایست
تو نیز بر سرِ بام آ کہ خوش تماشا ایست

This is a Persian couplet which means:
(Addressing his beloved the lover says)
See, how the people are killing me on the charge of my love for you. You should come to the balcony to enjoy this interesting scene.

Such incidents relate to high-ranking saints. We are weak and not so capable as to long for hardships; we pray to Allah for granting us peace and security. Even hardships too are a blessing in disguise, yet we pray to Allah to keep them away from us and convert them into peace and comfort. Anyway, when discomfort and difficulties fall upon us we should not display anxiety and restlessness. This is what is called رضا بالقضاء (contentment with destiny). This valuable belief should be a permanent feature of our lives. If this is attained we shall feel no worry and no distress, by the grace of Allah.

Some accounts of Righteous men

You may not have seen righteous men and saints of Allah in a state of restlessness, discomfort and anxiety even when they are facing the greatest hardships and torments of life. The will, of course, feel the pinch of grief and sorrow but will never dispaly signs of restlessness and mental disturbance on that account. This is because they feel quite sure that the grief has fallen on them from, and with the Will of, Allah. It is Allah's decision to which they must yield with belief and submission to رضا بالقضاء (to principle of contentment with Destiny).

So, when some unpleasant and disturbing incident occurs it should be borne with patience with the belief that it is from Allah and is a matter of destiny. This is the only remedy for shocks of grief and anxiety. This has the effect of inculcating in man a very high degree of patience. Patience is a quality which surpasses all other qualities of sincerity and devotion. The Holy Qur'an itself has appreciated this quality:

إِنَّمَا يُوَفَّى الصّٰبِرُوْنَ اَجْرَهُمْ بِغَيْرِ حِسَابٍ (سورة الزمر: ١٠)

The patient ones will indeed be paid their wages without count. (39:10).

There is none in this world who is not facing one or another hardship

Whenever a man is afflicted with some hardship, he should think that there is none in this world who has not faced similar afflications at one or another time of his life, no matter he may have been a great Monarch, a Prophet, a great Wali or a great Officer. You should, therefore, rest assured that you have to face hardships and troubles, whether you like this natural process or not. This world is a place where ease and comfort and worry, grief and joy, and the like go together. There is none who is drowned only in grief or only in enjoyment. This is the unchangeable rule of nature. Even those who deny the existence of Allah cannot deny that they must have to face hardships and worries in life. Thus, when it is a confirmed truth that hardships and troubles must befall men, then man should decide for himself which hardships he should welcome and which he should avoid. One way is that man should himself try to decide that he can face a particular item of hardship in preference to some other item. However, is it possible for a man to take such a decision ? It is not possible, because he does not know and indeed he cannot know, which hardship will prove easier and more fitting for him than another to get rid of this ticklish question, it is best to leave the problem to Allah's decision. Man should, therefore, entrust the matter to Allah and pray to Him to grant him the necessary strength and courage and patience to bear whatever fate brings to him.

A less severe hardship averts a more severe hardship

The jurisdiction of man's intelligence is limited. He does not know that the hardship that has befallen him may have saved him from some greater hardship. For example, if a man has got fever, he has in view only pains the attendant on that fever. If a man has failed in securing a job for which had been striving hard, he has in view only the dejection due to this failure. If theft has occurred in his house, the grief of the loss suffered on account of this theft is before his eyes. The poor fellow does not know what other and probably more harmful events and greater hardships would have happened to him. As the orbit of man's understanding is very much limited, he is not able to look beyond the scope of his understanding and he begins to pine over his immediate losses or troubles. On such occasions man should better think that his immediate losses or difficulties have saved him from some more severe and destructive mishaps. This trend of thinking will bring him solace and satisfaction. Sometimes Allah, in His mercy, lets His servant feel how the hardship or the loss that fell on him has proved a great boon for him.

It is a matter of common experience that sometime a man realizes that if his such and such prayer had been granted he would have been put to great loss, but Allah's decision saved him.

Seek help from Allah

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has taught us this supplication to attain peace of heart and mind:

لَا مَلْجَاَ وَلَا مَنْجَاَ مِنَ اللهِ اِلَّا اِلَيْهِ

There is no shelter and refuge from the anger of Allah except with Allah Himself.

In other words, man must accept, and submit to Allah's decision. At the same time man should remain praying to Allah to relieve him of his troubles and hardships. Maulana Rumi رحمة الله عليه has explained this point by an example. Imagine an archer who has such a huge bow with which he can encompass the entire universe and each part of it is fitted with an arrow. There is no place in the world which is immune from the hitting orbit of this bow. Now a question arises how to be safe from the arrows shot from this bow? The answer to this question is that if anyone wants to be safe from the arrows of this archer, he should take shelter by the side of the archer himself. Likewise, the hardships, troubles and mishaps are arrows of the decision of Allah. There is no protection and shelter from these arrows except that a man should seek shelter from them with Allah Himself. The following supplication should, therefore, be made:

O Allah, do not afflict me with a torment which is beyond my toleration. If you send on me some misfortune, grant me also the necessary patience to bear that misfortune and make it a cause for my pardon and elevation of my status.

Learn a lesson from an innocent child

You might have seen that when a mother beats her innocent child, the child tries to seek shelter from the mother in the mother's lap. Why does the child do so ? This is because the child knows very well that the shelter from the mother's beating lies by the mother's side and nowhere. The child can get love and sympathy only in the mother's lap. So when something unpleasant happens think that it is from Allah and that you can find shelter from it only under the lap of Allah's mercy. With this firm conviction in your heart, seek from Allah relief from the trouble you are in and patience to bear it. This is the meaning of رضا بالقضاء (submission to Divine Destiny). May Allah grant us, by His mercy, this quality.

It is a sign of goodness to submit to Allah's decision

The Holy Prophet ﷺ is reported to have said in a Hadith:

اذا اراد الله بعبدٍ خيراً اَرْضَاهُ بما قسم له وبارك له فيه واذا لم يرد به خيرا لم يرضه بما قسم له ولم يبارك له فيه

When Almighty Allah intends to favour one of His servants He makes him contented with what He has destined for him and also grants him blessing in that destiny. If He -God forbid - does not favour any of His servants He does not make him contented with what He has destined for him, with the result that the servant is deprived of the blessing of whatever he has been granted. The essence of this Hadith is that in submission to Allah's destiny lies Allah's pleasure and this pleasure, in turn, endows with blessings the little that the servant has been granted by Allah.

The sense and meaning of blessing

The contemporary world is a world of calculations in which everything is counted. For example, one man says that he draws a sum of Rs. 1000/- p.m. Another man says that he draws a sum of Rs. 2000/- and a third one says that he draws Rs 10,000/- p.m. None of them tries to estimate the facilities and comforts which he enjoys with the money he is drawing every month. A man may be drawing Rs 50,000/- per month, but his house-hold is beset with diseases, all sorts of worries and the like which have deprived him of his peace and tranquillity. Thus, it can be said that his monthly income of Rs 50,000/- is devoid of blessings. In contrast to him the man drawing only Rs 1000/- p.m. is enjoying peace, happiness and freedom from cares and anxieties. The amount of Rs. 1000/- is small to count as compared with the amount of Rs. 50,000/- but in the matter of peace, comfort and prosperity the man drawing Rs 1000/- is much better off than the man drawing Rs 50,000/- p.m. It means that the salary of Rs 1000/- has more blessings than that of Rs 50,000/- p.m.

The account of a rich Prince

Hazrat Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has written in one of his sermons that there lived a rich prince in the city of Lucknow (India), possessing large landed property, servants and attendants and other resources. Once when he met Maulana Thanawi رحمة الله عليه he related his sad story that he could not enjoy his blessings because he had been afflicted with a disease which had disenabled him to eat anything. The only food which his physician had prescribed for him was water squeezed out of boiled minced meat and that too in a moderate quantity.

Just see all the luxuries of life made available to this prince, but he had been forbidden to taste any of them. This only means that Almighty Allah had taken away His blessings from these delicacies and luxuries in so far as this ailing prince was concerned. What a pity, indeed! In contrast to this rich prince there is a poor labourer who has nothing to eat except coarse bread and a little salad, but owing to natural hunger he enjoys and eats his fill this coarse food - the food which generates energy in his body. Now decide for yourself which of the two servants of Allah is the better. The labourer's income is too scanty, yet it is full of Allah's blessings. This is what is called برکت (blessing).

Remain contented with your Destiny

Almighty Allah desires that His servants should submit gladly to what He has ordained for them. This submission to fate or destiny never means that he should give up work and wait for what destiny brings to him. No, they should work their hardest to attain their cherished objectives, but should accept the results with a good grace and believe that whatever has come out is Allah's decision and it contains blessings. If a servant murmurs at the result and expresses ingratitude at it, then he will become deprived of the blessings and joy of the little that he has attained. Murmurring and fretting will not change the destiny. This will only intensify his irritation and deprive him of the blessing of what has come to him.

My cup contains the essence of the entire Tavern

Man's good lies in remaining contented with Alalh's blessings and gifts, whether they are in the form of money, job, physical beauty, etc. with a firm belief that whatever blessing, little or much Allah has granted His servant is better for him. There is an Urdu couplet by our Dr. Abdul Hayee Sahib رحمة الله عليه on this point which is worth memorising:

مجھ کو اس سے کیا غرض کس جام میں ہے کتنی مے
میرے پیمانے میں لیکن حاصلِ میخانہ ہے

It is not my concern to know how much wine others have in their cups. Whatever, little or much, I have in my cup is enough for me, as it is Allah's gift and favour and I feel fully contented with the divine gift. What more should I desire?

Man should try to follow this trend of thought that whatever comes to him from Allah is the best for him. In other words, everyone should inculcate in him the quality of رضا بالقضاء (submission to destiny). This will bring him relief from grief and will soften the pinch of dejection and despondency.

May Almighty Allah grant us this trend of thought and make رضا بالقضاء our second nature. Aameen!

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and seek His forgiveness and believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Him from the evils of our souls and from the vices of our deeds. There is none to misguide him whom He guides and there is none to guide him whom He lets go astray. We bear witness that there is no god but Allah the One Who has no partner. We also bear witness that our sire, and our authority and our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad ﷺ is His servant and His Messenger. May Almighty Allah have mercy on him, his household and bless and salute them all in great abundance.

The Holy Prophet ﷺ was commissioned as a Prophet for all peoples of the world till the Day of Judgement

To day I want to say something briefly about such a theme of the teachings of the Holy Prophet ﷺ as is very necessary today but is generally overlooked. Almighty Allah sent the Holy Prophet ﷺ to this world as the last of the Prophets عليهم السلام, thus finalising with him ﷺ the chain of Prophethood. Another distinction which Allah bestowed upon him ﷺ over other Prophets عليهم السلام is that the latter Prophets were sent to some particular people residing in a particular land in a particular age. Their teachings and preachings were confined to a particular territory. For example, Hazrat Moosa (Moses) عليه السلام was sent to the Children of Israel, living in Egypt and his prophethood was limited only to this community and this territory. As against this, the Holy Prophet Muhammad ﷺ was sent to the entire world and entire humanity and for all times till the Day of Judgement. The Holy Qur'an bears witness to this fact:

وَمَآ اَرْسَلْنٰكَ اِلَّا كَآفَّةً لِّلنَّاسِ بَشِيْرًا وَّ نَذِيْرًا..... (سورة سبا: ٢٨)

And We have not sent you (O Muhammad), but as a bringer of good tidings and as a warner to all mankind. (34:28)

The words of 'all mankind' imply all men wherever and in whatever age they are living. This clearly shows that his prophethood was not confined only to the Arabian Peninsula, nor to any particular age. His prophethood encompassed all periods and ages till the Day of Judgement.

Prediction about future events

This means that his teachings and injunctions shall remain valid, effective and in force till the Day of Judgement. As already pointed out his teachings are not confined to any particular age. They apply to every walk of life. These teachings consist of two aspects. One aspect prescribes the rules of the Shari'ah concerning what is lawful, unlawful, desirable, permissible, etc. The other aspect predicts the events which will confront the Ummah in the times to come, and how the Ummah should tackle these events.

This second aspect is also a very important part of the teachings of the Holy Prophet ﷺ in which, peeping into the future through the light of his Prophethood, he ﷺ has informed his Ummah of many future events and the ways how the members of his Ummah should tackle these events, so as to remain on the right path of Deen. Today I want to say something on this second aspect of the Prophet's ﷺ teachings.

Anxiety for the salvation of the Ummah

The Holy Prophet ﷺ always remained concerned about the good of his Ummah. It occurs in a narrative:

كان رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم دائم الفكرة متواصل الاحزان

The Holy Prophet ﷺ always remained drowned deep in some worry, grief.

What was the cause of this anxiety and grief? it was indeed not about collecting worldly resources, nor about improving his own honour and status among his community. The grief under which he was pining was about how to save from Hell-Fire the people to whom he had been sent; how to divert them from the path of error and to guide them to the straight path of right guidance. Finding His Prophet ﷺ drowned in such grief Allah has frequently revealed verses to advise the Prophet ﷺ to give up such pining and fretting. Thus, Allah has said:

فَلَعَلَّكَ بَاخِعٌ نَّفْسَكَ عَلَىٰ اٰثٰرِهِمْ اِنْ لَّمْ يُؤْمِنُوْا ..... (سورة الكهف: ٦)

It may be that you will torment your soul that they do not become believers. (18:6)

This verse indicates how concerned the Holy Prophet ﷺ was about the right guidance of his Ummah on to the path of Eeman (Faith). He ﷺ is reported to have said in a Hadith:

My example is like that man who kindles fires and seeing the fire, the moths begin to fall on the flames. The man tries to keep the moths away from the flames to save them from being burnt in the flames. In the same way I am trying to save you from Hell-Fire by holding you back by your waists, but you are rushing into the Fire.

So concerned did the Holy Prophet ﷺ feel about the right guidance of his Ummah, including also those who were yet to come to the world !

What Trials and Tribulations are expected to break out in the future?

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has, therefore, informed the future generations of the events that shall occur in their times. Accrdingly all books of Hadith contain permanent Chapters on Trials." In the Chapters all such Ahadith have been collated in which the Holy Prophet ﷺ has informed of, and warned the people against, the tribulations expected to occur in the future. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in a Hadith:

تقع الفتن فى بيوتكم كوقع المطر

In the future trials will fall down into your houses like the falling down of the drops of rain water.

These trials have been compared to the drops of rain water, because the trials will fall down on your houses in an unbroken succession one after another.

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in another Hadith:

ستكون فتن كقطع الليل المظلم

Very soon trials and tribulations will appear which will be like dark nights.

In other words, just as a man is not able to find his way in dark nights in the same way during these blinding trials people will not know what to do and where to go. Those trials will encompass the entire society, leaving no place of shelter for the people. The Holy Prophet ﷺ also taught the people a supplication to find refuge with Allah from these trials:

اللهم انا نعوذ بك من الفتن ماظهر منها وما بطن

O Allah, we seek refuge with You from these apparent or hidden trials. This supplication was included in the Prophet's ﷺ daily routine.

What is a Trial?

We should now try to understand the meaning of فتنہ (Trial). We should also try to find out the teachings of the Holy Prophet ﷺ for all of us to obey in order to remain safe from the harms of these trials. We are not aware of the real implications of this term, although we use it from morning till everning. This word has also been used in the Holy Qur'an many times. It has been mentioned in the Holy Qur'an at one place: والفتنه اشدّ من القتل meaning that the creation of a trial is more grievous a sin than murder.

The meaning of Trial

The word فتنہ is an Arabic word the dictionary meaning of which is to find out the purity or impurity of precious metals like gold or silver by melting it on fire. Melting the metal on fire discloses the reality. For the same reason, it is also used to mean testing and examining something. Thus, a second meaning of this word is "trial". When hardships and misfortunes descend on a man his real worth and character are tested by his conduct and behaviour under these trying situations. It is observed whether he bears these trying hours, days with patience makes a fuss and raises hues and cries. this testing is also called فتنہ (Trial).

The word فتنہ (Trial) as used in the Ahadith

The word فتنہ (Trial) has been used in the Ahadith to express a situation at any time. When the truth is obscure and it becomes very difficult to distinguish between good and bad, right and wrong and truth and falsehood. When such a situation arises, it is said that it is a time of trial فتنہ. It is also a time of trial when sins, crimes and disobedience become rampant. In the same way to regard falsehood as truth and truth as falsehood and to put forward something as a proof which is not proof; these are forms of فتنہ (Trial). For example, if you tell a person that such an act is unlawful and strictly prohibited, the person shall reply that the entire society, the whole world including Saudi Arabia is doing this act. In our times it has become a common practice that when an objection is raised to any act, the doer atonce replies that he has seen the same act being done in the Saudi Arabia. This is also a فتنہ (trial) to put forward some act or practice as a proof which is not at all a proof. In the same way we find that many groups and parties have sprung up in the city, each with its slogan and tenet and it is difficult to decide which is on the right path and which is on the wrong path. Truth and falsehood have thus become mixed up. All these fall within the definition of فتنہ (Trial).

A quarrel between two parties is a فتنہ (Trial)

It is also a case of trial when two Muslims or two Muslim groups fall out with each other so violently that they are ready to shed blood and commit murder and it is not known which of the two is right and which is wrong.

The Holy Prophet ﷺ is reported to have said in a Hadith:

اذا التقى المسلمان بسيفيهما فالقاتلُ والمقتولُ كلا هما فى النار

When two Muslims begin to fight with each other with their swords, the murderer as well as the murdered will both enter Hell-Fire.

One of the Companions رضى الله عنه said to the Holy Prophet ﷺ: O Messenger of Allah ﷺ : It is understandable that the murderer shall go to Hell for murdering a Muslim, but why shall the murdered shall enter Hell? The Holy Prophet ﷺ replied, saying: The murdered will enter Hell because he too had come out to fight with the intention of murdering his opponent but he did not succeed in his intention but his opponent succeeded in his intention. None of the two was fighting in the cause of Allah, but worldly benefit in the form of money or some political benefit. Both will, therefore, enter Hell.

Killing and robbing are فتنه (Trial)

The Holy Prophet ﷺ hs said in another Hadith:

ان من ورائكم ايا ما يرفع فيها العلم ويكثر فيها الحرج قالوا يارسول الله ماالحرج؟ قال(ﷺ) اَلْقَتْلُ (ترمذى)

A time will come upon the people when there will be a great deal of "حرج" (confusion/disturbance). On being asked about "حرج" he ﷺ answered: It is killing and robbing, i.e., in those days these crimes will increase by leaps and bounds and human life will become meaner than that of mosquitoes and flies.

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in another Hadith:

يأتى على الناس يوم لا يدرى القاتل فيم قتل ولا المقتول فيم قُتل فقيل كيف يكون ذلك؟ قال الهرج القاتل والمقتول فى النار (صحيح مسلم)

A time will come upon the people in which the killer will not know why he killed the victim nor will the victim killed know why he was killed.

Look at the conditions obtaining today in the society which fully confirms the truth of the Holy Prophet's ﷺ prediction. This is as if the Holy Prophet ﷺ was seeing these conditions with his own eyes.

In the olden days it was not known who was the killer, but it could be known why the victim was killed, i.e., he was killed by robbers for robbing the victim of his money, or by enemies. Anyway, the cause of the murder became known. What is happening now-a-days? A man is sitting or standing in front of his door, he has no enemies, he is not involved in politics, yet some hooligan shoots at him and kills him without any apparent cause. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has predicted all these events in clear words:

A Hadith about the Holy City of Makkah

It is narrated by Hazrat Abdullah bin Umar رضى الله عنه that the Holy Propeht ﷺ said:

اذا دعيت كظائم وساوى ابنيتها رؤس الجبال فعند ذلك ازف الامر

Until recently the people were not able to understand the real meaning of this Hadith, but now the meaning has become quite clear to them. The Hadith may be translated as under:

When the belly of Makkah will be cleft open and through it will be dug out river-like passage (i.e. tunnels) and the buildings of the Holy City of Makkah will rise higher than its mountains when you observe these signs, then understand that the time of فتنه (Trial) is near at hand.

The cleaving asunder of the belly of the Holy City of Makkah

This Hadith has continued on records of the last fourteen centuries. The commentators of the Hadith felt baffled, while explaining this Hadith as they could not understand how belly of the Holy City of Makkah could be cleft asunder, nor could they understand the meaning of digging out river-like passages. It was really very difficult to imagine the sense of all these predictions. But by seeing today's Makkah one feels that the Holy Prophet ﷺ made these predictions, as if he ﷺ was actually seeing with his own eyes today's Makkahtul-Mukarramah. Previously the Muhaddithin interpreted this Hadith by saying that in their times Makkah was a dry and mountaneous city, but in some future age Allah may cause rivers and canals to flow in that city. However today one feels by seeing these tunnels how the belly of Makkah has been cleft asunder:

Rising of building higher than mountains

The other sentence which the Holy Prophet ﷺ spoke out in this Hadith is that "the buildings of the Holy City of Makkah will rise higher than its mountains." A few years ago none could imagine that buildings would be built in Makkah which would rise higher than its mountains, as the city was surrounded by mountains on all sides. But go to Makkah and see for yourself how buildings higher than mountains have been built there.

It appears from this Hadith, as if fourteen centuries ago the Holy Prophet ﷺ had seen these changes and conditions with his own eyes. All these things had been shown to him clearly through revelations and light of Prophetic knowledge which Allah had granted him The Holy Prophet ﷺ has clearly mentioned one by one what trials and tribulations the Muslims will have to face in the times to come. He ﷺ has also mentioned simultaneously what the Muslims should do at such a time.

The present era in the light of the Ahadith

Every Muslim should keep in view those Ahadith in which the Holy Prophet ﷺ has predicted the future events. Hazrat Maulana Muhammad Yusuf Ludhyanawi Sahib رحمة الله عليه has compiled a book titled "The Present Era in the Light of the Ahadith". He has tried to gather together in this book all the Ahadith about the فتنه (Trials). He has included in this book a Hadith in which the Holy Prophet ﷺ has mentioned seventy-two events which will occur during the Era of the Trials. I advise you to read them one by one and see how these events exactly agree to those taking place in our times and in our environments.

Seventy-two (72) signs of Trials and Tribulations

Hazrat Huzaifah رضى الله عنه has narrated that the Holy Prophet ﷺ predicted that seventy-two events shall occur in the period close to the Day of Judgement. These are:

(1) People will begin to miss their prayers and pay no attention to them. If this is said in our times, there will be nothing surprising in it because the majority of the Muslim does not offer their prayers. The Holy Prophet ﷺ made this prediction at a time when Prayers were considered as a line of demarcation between unbelief ایمان and belief کفر. Even the most sinful and vicious person living in that age did not miss his prayers. In his time i.e. fourteen centuries ago, the Holy Prophet ﷺ predicted about the present times that the people will miss their prayers.

(2) They shall begin to betray their trusts. That is, they will misappropriate the trusts entrusted to them for safe custody.

(3) They will begin to eat usurious income.

(4) They will begin to consider lying to be lawful. Telling lies will become an art.

(5) They will begin to commit murders on ordinary grounds.

(6) They shall construct high-rise buildings.

(7) They shall sell their Deen (Faith)

(8) They shall violate the bonds of relationships.

(9) Justice will become a virtue almost hard to find anywhere.

(10) Falsehood will become truth (and vice versa).

(11) Silk garments will be worn by men.

(12) Oppression and wrongdoing will become rampant.

(13) Divorces will become a common practice.

(14) Sudden deaths will become a common occurrence.

(15) One who betrays his trust will be regarded as trustworthy.

(16) The trustworthy will be regarded as untrustworthy.

(17) The liar will be regarded as truthful.

(18) The truthfull will be regarded as liar.

(19) Calumny will become a common feature, i.e., people will put false blames on one another.

(20) The weather shall be hot despite rains.

(21) Instead of desiring children people will hate them. They will pray to Allah not to favour them with children. This is actually happening as a result of the Family Planning Department of Governemnts are raising the slogan, "Only Two Issues" guarantee Propserity.

(22) The meaner classes will be happy and prosperous.

(23) The respectable classes will be in trouble and cast out of the society.

(24) The Rulers and the Ministers will become used to lying-engrossed in lies from morning till evening.

(25) The trustworthy will begin to betray their trusts.

(26) The leaders of the people will become wrongdoers.

(27) The scholars of Deen and the reciters of the Qur'an will become lewd and sinners.

(28) The people shall put on skin-garments.

(29) The hearts of the wearers of skin-garments will be more foul-smelling than dead animals; and

(30) They will be more bitter than the aloe plant (with bitter leaves).

(31) Gold will become widely used.

(32) Silver will be in great demand.

(33) Sins will be on the increase.

(34) Peace and security will deteriorate (as we see this at the moment).

(35) The pages and covers of the Holy Qur'an will be lavishly decorated.

(36) The Mosques will be decorated with beautiful writings and designs.

(37) Lofty minarets will rise from the mosques.

(38) Even so, the hearts will remain desolate and empty.

(39) Wine will be drunk freely.

(40) Punishments of the Shari'ah will be suspended.

(41) The slave girl shall bear her master. In other words, the daughter shall rule over her mother and behave with her as a master behaves with his slave girls.

(42) The bare-footed, the naked and the uncultured shall become Kings and Rulers. The mean, the untouchable classes and the depressed ones will become Heads of State - (this is what has happened in India).

(43) Woman and man shall be partners in trade, as women are trying to take part in every walk of life side by side with men.

(44) Men will imitate women; and

(45) Women will imitate men. In other words, men and women shall adopt each other's guise and appearance. See what has actually happened today under the frenzy of fashion, so it is difficult to distinguish between men and women from a distance.

(46) The people will swear by names other than Allah's name. It is lawful to swear only by Allah or some attribute of Allah or by the Holy Qur'an. In the later ages people will swear by objects as 'by your head', etc. This is unlawful and strictly forbidden.

(47) In the times to come even the Muslims will bear false witnesses. The use of the word 'even' indicates that the non-Muslims do bear false witnesses freely but a Muslim who is not expected to do so, will also commit this sin.

(48) Salam (salute) will be bidden only to those who are known and not to strangers. This is against the injunction of the Holy Prophet ﷺ who has said in a Hadith:

السلام على من عرفت ومن لم تعرف

Salam should be bidden to everyone whether you know or do not know the the person.

If you are on a way you must bid Salam to every passer-by, except that if the number of the passers-by is very large, you may ignore this formality. However, a time will come when people will avoid bidding Salam even when there are only a few men passing on the road, and the custom of Salam will come to an end.

(49) Religious knowledge will be aequired not for the sāke of religion but for the sake of earning worldly resources and worldly honour and status.

(50) Work relating to the Hereafter will be done to earn worldly gains.

(51) مال غنيمت (War-spoils) will be taken as personal estate مال غنيمت has been used here to imply public property which will be enjoyed as personal property.

(52) A trust shall be taken and misappropriated as plundered property.

(53) Zakat (the obligatory Islamic tax) will be paid reluctantly, as if it were a penalty.

(54) The meanest man shall become the leader of the community by their consent or votes.

(55) Men will disobey their parents.

(56) Men will misbehave with their mothers.

(57) A man will not hesitate in causing harm to his friends.

(58) A man will obey his wife.

(59) The voices of the wrongdoers will rise in the mosques.

(60) Women engaged in the singing profession (Film Actresses) will be held in great esteem and accorded high status.

(61) Musical instruments will be kept and preserved with care.

(62) Wine will be drunk by road-sides.

(63) Wrongdoing and tyranny will be looked upon as acts of pride.

(64) Justice will be sold (with bribery) in the Courts of Justice.

(65) The number of the Police will increase.

(66) The Holy Qur'an will be recited in a musical style, so as to enjoy the singing tone and its musical cadence. The Qur'an will not be recited for the sake of its Da'wah (preaching) for understanding it and for reaping the reward for its recitation.

(67) Beast skins will be used.

(68) The later pepole of the Ummah will taunt and curse the former people, i.e. the latter will pass derogatory remarks at the former. As a result of this trend a large section of the people is deriding insolently the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم and are behaving in the same way with the leaders of Deen who conveyed to us the message of Deen. These elder Doctors of Deen are being blamed as being ignorant of the Ahadith and the Holy Qur'an whereas the later generations claim to have understood those sources of Islam better than the former. The Holy Prophet ﷺ also said that when these signs appear then:

(69) Red wind-storm may come from Allah, or

(70) Earthquakes may upheave the earth; or

(71) The people's faces may be distorted; or

(72) Stones may rain down from the sky or some other torment may descend from Allah - God forbid. All these signs are proving true of our society one by one. The punishment that has come over us is really due to these misdeeds.(Durre-Mansoor, Vol. 4, P-52)

A mountain of misfortune shall fall down

It has been narrated by Hazrat Ali رضی اللہ عنہ that the Holy Propeht ﷺ said:

When fifteen misdeeds become common among my Ummah a mountain of misfortunes will fall down on them.

When the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم asked: O Messenger of Allah ﷺ! what these fifteen misdeeds are, he ﷺ replied saying:

Who are the thieves of the Public Funds?

(1) When public money is regarded as looted property. See how the public funds are being misappropriated today. This loot is not confined only to the rulers, but influencial men from among the public also plunder these funds as and when they are able to do so. We do many things without thinking that these are also acts of stealing public funds. For example, illegal electric connection, long foreign or local calls without paying the due charges with the unauthorised assistance of some Telephone Exchange employees, ticketless journeys or travelling in a higher class than that for which the tickets were purchased for the purpose.

These are serious cases of theft

The theft of public money is more serious than ordinary cases of theft. If a man commits theft in the house of anyone, it is possible to return the amount stolen, if the thief ever feels inclined to repent of his act of theft, or to get the amount stolen waved by its owner. The thief's crime will thus be washed off, but this is not possible in the case of theft of public money, because it belongs not to one man but to innumerable men of the public in such a case repentance becomes impossible. May Allah protect us from this theft.

(2) When people begin to misappropriate trusts, treating these as plundered booty.

(3) When the people regard payment of Zakat (obligatory tax) as the payment of a penalty.

(4) When a man obeys his wife and disobeys his mother. For example, his wife wants him to do something which is unlawful and his mother tries to stop him from this unlawful act but the man obeys his wife and disobeys his mother.

(5) When a man behaves well with his friends and misbehaves with his parents.

(6) Raising voices in the mosques voices will be raised in the mosques. The mosques have been built for remembering Allah and offering Salat and no disturbance should be caused in such devotional acts. However, people disturb these acts of worship and devotion by raising their voices in the mosques. The Nikah (matrimonial tie) is performed in the mosques and this is a desirable practice but on such occasion the parties do not maintain the sanctity of the mosques and raise hues and cries which is a sin with no compensatory benefit, whatsoever. This is condemnable.

(7) The leader of the community is the meanest person of it.

(8) A man is held in esteem for fear of his mischief, as when he is not esteemed he may involve his opponents in some trouble.

(9) Wine will be drunk openly.

(10) Silk garmetns will be worn by men.

(11) Singing women in Houses Singing girls and maids will be lodged in the houses and musical insturments will be kept with great care. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has predicted these things at a time when none could imagine them. In his prediction the Holy Prophet ﷺ has said: They shall lodge in their houses singing girls. It is, however, a fact that every man has not the capacity to lodge and maintain in his house singing girls. What does then the Hadith mean? The invention of the Radios, tape-recorders video cassettes and T.Vs has corroborated the truth of the words spoken by the Holy Prophet ﷺ. In the presence of these appliances anyone can enjoy music dancing and see singing girls at his choice and pleasure. For the same reason it is not necessary for anyone now-a-days to purchase musical instruments and keep them in one's house. The appliances enumerated above provide all sorts of audios- videos enjoyments.

(12) The later generations of this Ummah will curse the people of the former generation.

The Holy Prophet ﷺ said that when these vices spread in his Ummah, torments and misfortunes shall fall on them - God forbid. All the vices which the Holy Prophet ﷺ has enumerated in this Hadith are clearly visible in our society today.

Wine will be drunk under the name of a harmless drink

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in another Hadith that :

The people of his Ummah will make wine lawful by giving it the name of a beverage.

We see that today books have been written on this topic claiming that the wine presently in use is not prohibited and no where in the Holy Qur'an has the word unlawful been used for wine. As regards beer, this is nothing more than barley-water. This is also a beverage like all other beverages. In this way proofs are being invented and offered to declare wine lawful.

This is exactly what the Holy Prophet ﷺ declared fourteen centuries ago.

Usurious transactions will be given the name of business

A time will come when the people of "my Ummah will make usury lawful by declaring it to be a business transaction", as is being done now-a-days. They say that bank interest is the form of a business transaction. If this is declared unlawful, the business activities will be greatly handicapped.

Bribery will be given the name of a Gift

There will come a time when the people of "my Ummah will make bribery lawful by giving it the name of a gift". The giver of bribery will give and the taker of bribe will take bribe under the name of a gift, even though the offer is nothing other than bribery. All these sins, crimes and vices are present today in the society.

These four predictions of the Holy Prophet ﷺ fully apply today to our society.(Kanzul-Amal, Hadith No: 38497)

To come to mosques, sitting on cushions

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in a Hadith that:

During the later ages (of trials and tribulations) the people will go to the gates of the mosques on مياسر (Mayasir), an Arabic word, meaning very costly and fine silk cloth which the rich men used in those days to cover the saddles of their horses. In the olden days it was difficult to imagine what going to the mosques on مياسر meant. Now it has become very clear that the indication in the Hadith point to the comfortable spring-based car seats on which the richer class of the society go to the mosques for Salat.

Women will be naked notwithstanding that they will be clad in garments

The Holy Prophet ﷺ next said:

Their women will be naked notwithstanding that they will be clad in garments.

It was difficult to understand the meaning of the pardah, (Veil) but today we are seeing own our own eyes the truth of this Hadith. Either the women wear finely thin garments reflecting the hidden contours of their bodies or the garments will be of close-fitting and short that parts of their bodies will remain naked. It is seen that the heads of the womenfolk remain naked in 80% cases and according to the injunctions of the Shari'ah bare-headed women come under the definition of naked ones. (Sahih Muslim)

The hair on the heads of women will be like camel-humps

Thereafter, the Holy Prophet ﷺ said:

The hair on these women will be buldging upwards like camel-humps.

This is also one of those Ahadith whose meaning was not clear to the Ulama of olden days. But today the meaning has become quite clear to us, because the women make their hair buldging upwards by adding artificial wigs to their natural hair.

These are cursed women

The Holy Prophet ﷺ next said:

These women are cursed ones.

Allah has created womenfolk to remain confined within their prescribed injunction. When these women go out of their houses unveiled, then according to Hadith Satan begins to gaze and peep at them. When a woman goes out to the market having applied perfume to her body and clothes, Allah and His Angels both curse her.

The real purpose of garments

The real purpose of wearing garments is to cover i.e. ستر عورت those parts of the body that are 'shame' which must be covered. Almighty Allah has said about it in the Holy Qur'an:

يٰبَنِيْٓ اٰدَمَ قَدْ اَنْزَلْنَا عَلَيْكُمْ لِبَاسًا يُّوَارِيْ سَوْاٰتِكُمْ وَرِيْشًا (سورۃ الاعراف: ۲۶)

O children of Adam ! We have sent down to you raiment to conceal your shame and for adornment. (7:26)

So the garment which does not conceal the part of the body that form "shame" defeats the purpose for which it is worn. If the real purpose of the garment is thus defeated, it means that the person wearing that garment is naked. Therefore, for God's sake, we should wear proper dresses. Even God-fearing people who are righteous and regular Namazis do not pay attention to this aspect, as they do not mind at all whether the dress they are putting on fulfils the purpose of covering their bodies properly. The woeful conditions we are facing these days are the results of these lapses on our part. It is our duty to make sure that at least the members of our own households and relatives, etc. put on dresses which conform to the injunctions of the Shari'ah in this behalf.

Other nations will eat up the Muslims

Hazrat Sauban رضی اللہ عنہ has narrated that the Holy Prophet ﷺ said in a Hadith:

There will c)me upon you a time when the other nations of the world will invite one another to eat you up, as people sitting round a dining cloth invite others to partake of the food served on that cloth. In the same way a time will come when the stronger nations of the world will invite other nations to eat up the Muslims. (Abu Dawood)

Those who are acquainted with the last century's history, i.e. from the first world war till now know quite well how tyrannically the non-Muslim communities have behaved with the Muslims and how they have been dividing the Muslim countries among themselves, saying: Egypt is yours and Syria is mine, Algeria is yours and Morocco is mine, India is mine and Burma is yours, and so on so forth.

The Muslims will become like Straws

When the Holy Prophet ﷺ thus predicted the condition of the Muslims to the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم, some Companions رضی اللہ عنہم asked: O Messenger of Allah! Will the number of the Muslims become so small at that time that that non-Muslims will begin to eat up, and will invite others also to feast upon, the Muslims? The Holy Prophet ﷺ replied, saying: No, at that time your number will be very large (one billion, i.e. about one-third of the total world population), but your example will be like countless straws floating on the surface of flood water. In other words, the Muslims will have no say in any matter; they will go on drifting in the direction in which the world powers want to take them.

The Muslims will beocme coward

The Holy Prophet ﷺ next said:

Almighty Allah shall take away your awe from the hearts of your enemies and weakness and cowardice will find access to your hearts. A Companion رضی اللہ عنہ asked: O Messenger of Allah! What are weakness and cowardice?

The Holy Prophet ﷺ replied, saying: It is weakness that love of the world shall creep into the hearts and the people will begin to hate death and this means that they will dislike meeting Almighty Allah. All their thoughts will be concentrated on earning the worldly resources together with fame and respect, whether by lawful or unlawful means.

The courage of the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم

It is narrated that a Companion رضی اللہ عنہم remained all alone in a battle and three or four infidel, stout fighters came in front of that lonely Companion رضی اللہ عنہم. When the Companion رضی اللہ عنہم advanced to fight the infidel fighters some other Companions رضی اللہ عنہم tried to dissuade the former Companion رضی اللہ عنہم from confronting those strong and experienced infidel fighters and advised him to wait for the Muslim forces to arrive there. The Companion رضی اللہ عنہ did not agree to their advice and asked them on oath and without any hesitation not to try to intervene between him and Paradise, as those wrestler fighters were like a path leading to Paradise. This being the condition of the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم they were not able to understand the meaning of cowardice and weakness. The fact remains that by virtue of the company of the Holy Prophet ﷺ, Allah had removed from their hearts the love for the world. They had always in view the Hereafter as well as scenes from Paradise and Hell. That is why they were not afraid of death. They rather desired to find access to the Divine Court of Almighty Allah.

The burning desire of a Companion رضی اللہ عنہم for Martyrdom

A Companion رضی اللہ عنہم entered a battlefield and found that in front of him a well equipped and armed force of the infidels was ready to encounter him.

Seeing this enemy force, the Companions رضی اللہ عنہم spontaneously recited this Arabic poetical couplet:

غدا نلقی الاحبة محمدا و صحبه

Tomorrow we shall meet friends, i.e. Muhammad ﷺ and his Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم!

Once a Companion رضی اللہ عنہم was hit by an arrow and blood began to gush forth from his wound. At this critical moment he spontaneously uttered these words:

فزت ورب الكعبة

By the Lord of the Ka'bah I have been successful.

They were people who possessed belief and firm conviction. They had full trust in Allah and there was no trace in their hearts of the love of the world.

The first command concerning the period of Trials

What should a Muslim do during such a period? The first injunction which the Holy Prophet ﷺ has issued about this is as under:

تَلْزِمْ جَمَاعَةَ الْمُسْلِمِيْنَ وَاِمَامَهُمْ

(At such a time) the major party of the Muslims and their Imam (leader) should be followed.

A Companion رضی اللہ عنہ put this question: O Messenger of Allah! What should the Muslims do when they have neither an organised association of the Muslims nor have they a popular and acceptable Imam ? The Holy Prophet ﷺ replied to this question, saying:

In such a situation lead a secluded life away from every group and party and stick to your houses like the mats and rugs spread on the floor of your houses and remain confined to the boundary of your houses as far as possible and do not join the disorganised groups. Now what injunction can be more evident and clear than this?

The second command concerning the period of Trials

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in another Hadith:

While you are leading a secluded life away from the people and if the Muslims begin to fight among themselves killing one another, do not look at them, because the onlooker of such scenes may be caught in the trial and disturbance من استشرف لها استشرفته (the scene may catch him too who looks at the scene of quarrel). In such a critical time keep to the bounds of the house.

The third command concerning the period of Trials

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in another Hadith:

The trial will be such that القائم فيها خير من الماشي، والقاعد فيها خير من القائم one who remains standing during that period will be better than the one who is walking and one who is sitting will be better than the one who is standing.

In other words, during that time of trials, you should take no part in its activities and movements. You should, instead, try to ameliorate your own personal life, sitting quietly at home. Do not involve yourself in the collective trials and tribulations.

The best property of a man during the period of Trials

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in another Hadith:

A time will come when the best property of a man will be his goats with which he can go up to the mountain peaks, leaving the hustle and bustle of town life. For his sustenance he should depend on his goats. He will be much safer in the mountains than in the towns where visible and invisible trials are ready to pick him up.

An important injunction to follow during the period of Trials

The Holy Prophet ﷺ wants to advise by means of these Ahadith that time will not be suitable for collective and social activities, because all the parties and associations will be unreliable and untrustworthy. It will not be possible to distinguish between right and wrong. So, during such an uncertain period one should engage himself in obeying Allah and safeguarding his Eeman (Faith), so as to die as a believer. This is the only way of safety from these trials. The verse I have recited in the beginning lays emphasis on the same point, viz., "you should take care of yourselves" and try to ameliorate your own affairs. If you take the right path, those who have gone astray will do you no harm. When this verse was revealed, the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم put this question to the Holy Prophet. They said:

This verse seems to tell that man should mind his own business without worrying about others. if someone is going astray let him go and do not advise him to do good and refrain from doing wrong. This is one side of the problem. On the other side there are clear injunctions to enjoin what is right and forbid what is wrong. How to reconcile these two conflicting injunctions:

Four signs of the period of Trials

While replying to this question the Holy Prophet ﷺ said:

The verses which enjoin doing good and forbidding doing wrong are also quite right in their places as they advise the preaching of Deen. A time will, however, come when man will be responsible to take care of, and reform his own self. this will be the time in which the following four signs will appear:

(1) Firstly, it will be the time when a man will be hankering after wealth and will become miserly. From morning till evening he will be engrossed in his lust to increase his balance by hook or by crook. All that he will do will be in the interest and love of worldly gains.

(2) Secondly, people will be drowned at all times in satisfying their desires and lusts. A man will follow the direction towards which his desires push him, without caring what is lawful and what is unlawful and whether the path he is following leads to Paradise, to the pleasure of Allah or to His displeasure. Forgetting all these considerations, he will be running after his desires..

(3) Thirdly, preference will be accorded to the worldly gains over the gains of the Hereafter. The people will be warned against the approach of the Hereafter; arrival of death about which there is no doubt; burial in the grave; attendance before Almighty Allah. The only reply to all these warnings will be: I cannot help, this is the trend of the times.

After all one should follow the affairs of the world also in which one has to pass his life with others. Thus ignoring all these admonitions man will become totally absorbed in earning the worldly resources.

(4) Fourthly, every man will be self-willed, not prepared to heed better advice. He will think that he alone is right and the others are wrong. This is a common observation. Everyone has formed his own opinion about what is lawful and what is unlawful even though he has not spent a single day in trying to study and understand the Holy Qur'an and the sacred Ahadith. When some problem of the Shari'ah is mentioned before him, he raises objections and begins to project his own misleading notions. Everyone will feel proud of his own opinion.

Anyway, try to seek your own safety when these four signs become apparent, viz:

1) Love of worldly resources;
2) Hankering after one's own desires;
3) Preferring the world to the Hereafter.
4) Taking pride in being self-willed.

As already stated, at such a critical time people should mind their own salvation and safety forgetting what the others are doing. They should keep themselves aloof from the common men and try to reform their own selves. Keeping within the bounds of their houses at all costs. This is the injunction of the Holy Prophet ﷺ to his Ummah to follow during the period of trials and tribulations.

The conduct of the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم on difference of opinions

After the sad demise of the Holy Prophet ﷺ, the responsibility of guiding the Ummah passed to the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم. During this period serious differences cropped up between Hazrat Ali and Hazrat Mu'awiyah رضی اللہ عنہما which ultimately ended in armed confrontation between their armies. Differences also arose between Hazrat Ali رضی اللہ عنہ and Hazrat 'Ayeshah رضی اللہ عنہا. This also resulted in an armed conflict between the supporters of the two sides. Through these differences during the time of the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم and their conduct during the difference Almighty Allah has taught how the future generations should tackle situations arising out of such differences and conflicts. As a result, those Companions رضی اللہ عنہم and their immediate followers (Ta-bi-'een), who believed in Hazrat Ali's right conduct acted on that Hadith in which the Holy Prophet ﷺ said:

(At such a time) the major party of the Muslims and their Imam (leader) should be followed.

Acting upon this Hadith, they sided with Hazrat Ali رضی اللہ عنہ whom they regarded as the Imam of the major group. Some Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم and the Ta-bi-'een believed that Hazrat Amir Mu'awiyah رضی اللہ عنہ was on the right path and was their Imam. So, they sided with him. There was a third group who was not able to find out who was on the right and who was on the wrong path. In pursuance of a Hadith of the Holy Prophet ﷺ, they decided to dissociate themselves from either party. They, therefore, remained neutral in the conflict between the two parties and remained with the bounds of their houses.

The conduct of Hazrat Abdullah bin Umar رضی اللہ عنہ

Hazrat Abdullah bin Umar رضی اللہ عنہ, the son of Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ, was a Companion and jurist of a very high order. He confined himself to his house when a man called upon him and asked him: Why was he sitting quietly when a battle between right and wrong was raging outside his house between Hazrat Ali رضی اللہ عنہ and Hazrat Amir Mu'awiyah رضی اللہ عنہ? He should side with Hazrat Ali رضی اللہ عنہ whom the man considered to be on the right path. Hazrat Abdullah bin Umar رضی اللہ عنہ replied, saying: that he had heard this Hadith from the Holy Prophet ﷺ that when the Muslims fall out with one another and it becomes obscure what was right and what was wrong, then one should confine himself to the four walls of his house and put aside his weapons. As Hazrat Abdullah bin Umar رضی اللہ عنہ could not distinguish between the right and the wrong in that conflict he remained neutral and did not become a party to any of the opponents.

The man took objections to Hazrat Abdullah bin Umar's stand and invited his attention to the following verse of the Holy Qur'an:

قٰتِلُوْهُمْ حَتّٰى لَا تَكُوْنَ فِتْنَةٌ.....(سورة البقرة:۱۹۳)

And fight them until persecution is no more. (2:193)

Hazrat Abdullah bin Umar رضی اللہ عنہ gave a very apt reply to this; saying :

قا تلنا حتى لم تكن فتنة، وقاتلتم حتى كانت الفتنة

When we fought against the enemy along with the Holy Prophet ﷺ, Almighty Allah put an end to the persecution. On the other hand, when you took part in the fight the persecution ، d not stop but it increased and became more violent. That is why, acting upon the advice of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. I confined myself to the bounds of my house.

How to conduct ourselves during conditions of peace and disturbance

I was extremely overjoyed when I came across a statement of a Muhadith which runs thus:

اقتدوا بعمر رضی اللہ تعالی عنه فی الامن وبابنه فی الفتنة

Follow Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنه during conditions of peace and tranquillity and follow his son during conditions of trials and disturbances.

The meaning of this statement is self-explanatory.

Amicable mutual relations in spite of differences

Almighty Allah showed us all these scenes and situations during the era of Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنهم. Those Companions رضی اللہ عنهم who believed that Hazrat Ali رضی اللہ عنه was right sided with him, and those who believed that Hazrat Amir Mu'awiyah رضی اللہ عنه was right supported him. The world witnessed a unique scene, never seen before, that despite hostilities when someone in the army of Hazrat Ali رضی اللہ عنه died, the army men of Hazrat Amir Mu'awiyah رضی اللہ عنه joined the funeral prayer of the deceased belonging to the opposite camp and vice versa. The reason for this was that this battle was not fought for the sake of ome selfish worldly gain, honour and position. The ause of the armed conflict was obedience to a Command of Allah as interpreted by each party. In other words, each side was busy acting upon Allah's Command sincerely as it had interpreted the command.

My late, respected father used to tell us that Hazrat Abu Hurairah رضی اللہ عنه was a literate Companion and a religious scholar, busy at all times in studies. During the battle between the two warring Companions رضی اللہ عنهم he used to visit both without taking anyone's side. When there was prayer time he would go to Hazrat Ali's army to pray behind him. When it was meal time he would go to Hazrat Amir Mu'awiyah's رضی اللہ عنه army and take meal with the latter. Someone asked Hazrat Abu Hurairah رضی اللہ عنه about this strange conduct of him, he replied :

The prayer behind Hazrat Ali رضی اللہ عنه was better so he prayed there, but he took meal in Hazrat Mu'awiyah's camp because the food was of a better quality there. Thus the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنهم have taught us how to behave during times of mutual differences and conflicts.

The reply of Hazrat Mu'awiyah رضی اللہ عنه to Caesar of Rome.

Just when these two armies stood face to face ready to grapple with each other, a message from the Caesar of Rome came to Hazrat Amir Mu'awiyah رضی اللہ عنه to the effect:

I have heard that your brother Hazrat Ali رضی اللہ عنه has done a great wrong to you. He is not taking revenge from the killers of Hazrat Usman رضی اللہ عنه. If you desire, I can send you a huge army to help you, so that you may confront him.Hazrat Amir Mu'awiyah رضی اللہ عنه at once replied to Caesar in the following words:

"O Christian Ruler! you plan to attack Hazrat Ali رضی اللہ عنه on account of our mutual differences. Beware! If you have the audacity to cast an evil eye at Hazrat Ali رضی اللہ عنه, the first man emerging from Hazrat Ali's army to behead you shall be Mu'awiyah رضی اللہ عنہ

All the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم are honourable and dignified in our eyes

It is very sad that now-a-days people utter unworthy words for the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم although they are too respectable and dignified. It is impossible for us to understand their status and religious fervour. We begin today to compare their mutual qurarrels and differences to our own, but this is not right. We must understand that Almighty Allah, in His mercy, provided through the quarrels among the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم, a model and code of conduct for the Ummah to follow during mutual differences and disputes arising among them in the times to come. Each of them, whether he is Hazrat Ali, Hazrat Amir Mu'awiyah or Hazrat Abdullah bin Umar رضی اللہ عنہما has left behind for us a beautiful model to emulate when caught in similar situations. We must therefore, beware of those who speak ill of one or another Companion رضی اللہ عنہ because of their mutual disputes and differences. None can even dream of approaching such high status and station they occupy in the sight of Allah.

The sincerity and Godliness of Hazrat Amir Mu'awiyah رضی اللہ عنہ

The people say many undesirable things about Hazrat Amir Mu'awiyah رضی اللہ عنہ because he nominated his son Yazeed his heir-apparent. In one Friday during the Friday sermon he made the following supplication from the pulpit:

> O Allah! I assert on oath that in nominating my son my heir-apparent I had nothing in my mind except the good and interest of the Ummah of Muhammad ﷺ If I had in my mind anything other than this, then I pray to You to let him die before the implementation of this decision of mine.

Just consider coolly that no father can pray in this way against his son as Hazrat Amir Mu'awiyah رضی اللہ عنہ did. This shows beyond any shadow of doubt that his action in nominating his son heir-apparent was based on sincerity. All men, except Prophets علیہم السلام are liable to err. The decision taken by Hazrat Amir Mu'awiyah رضی اللہ عنہ might have been erroneous but it was based on sincerity and it was for the sake of Allah alone.

Retire into seclusion

By acting upon all the Ahadith about trials and tribulations the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم have left behind for us examples to follow during such disturbed conditions. When such time comes that the distinction between right and wrong becomes difficult and obscure, there is no alternative but to take to seclusion and retirement as did Hazrat Abdullah bin Umar رضی اللہ عنہ.

It is a fact that Allah had decided upon a unique plan from the point of His creative scheme. Allah accomplished great jobs and performances through such Companions رضی اللہ عنہم as had gone into seclusion. If they had taken part in the battle many of them would have fallen martyrs, depriving the future generations of their valuable services in the path of Deen (Faith).

Those who dissociated themselves from the world and went into seclusion began to collect and compile the Ahadith. Thus, they left behind a great treasure for the future generations in the form of books of Ahadith and other literature on Islam.

Take Care of your own reform and well-being

Thus, the command about the period of Trials and tribulation is that one should confine himself to the four walls of his house, devote his time to the rehearsal of Allah's name and keep himself aloof from all sins and wrongs and try to reform the members of his household also. If everyone follows this path and reforms himself this will lead to the reform of the entire society slowly and gradually. This is how one lamp is lighted from another lamp and the darkness of disturbance and chaos is dispelled.

Look into your own weaknesses

The time we are passing through today is a period of severe trials and tribulations. To steer clear of this hectic situation the Holy Prophet ﷺ has advised us not to join any party, but confine ourselves to our houses, try to reform ourselves and search for our own weaknesses and short-comings. Consider seriously if the prevailing trials and disturbances may be due to the ill-omen of our own sins. Everyone of the society should adopt this trend of thinking. Take an example. During a severe famine in Egypt the people called upon Hazrat Zun-noon رحمة الله عليه of Egypt to complain of this calamity. He told the people that this might be due to his own sins. He should, therefore, leave the place, so that his absence might perhaps dispel the calamity and attract Allah's mercy. As for ourselves, we are used to find fault with and attribute all mis-fortunes to others. In these days we hardly find persons who try to look into their own faults and defects. It is, therefore, imperative that everyone should try to reform himself instead of finding fault with others.

Refrain from sins

While thinking to reform yourself, the least you should do is to give up one by one the sins that you commit from morning till evening. You should also turn to Allah every day in repentance and seek His forgiveness. You should also pray to Allah to keep you and your household away from the ill-omen and woes of the period of trials. The words of prayer may be:

اَللّٰهُمَّ اِنَّا نَعُوْذُ بِكَ مِنَ الْفِتَنِ مَاظَهَرَ مِنْهَا وَمَا بَطَنَ

O Allah! I seek refuge with You from all apparent and hidden trials.

You should in addition save yourself as far as possible from the following sins:

1- Backbiting
2- Sins due to casting evil eyes
3- Lewdness and nakedness
4- Hurting others
5- Sins of accepting bribe
6- Dealings in Usurious transactions, etc.

If you spent your life in negligence, thoughtlessness and recklessness, then this may - God forbid - result in a bad end and loss of Eeman (Faith).

May Allah help us to act upon these injunctions. Aameen!

HOW TO LIVE BEFORE ONE DIES?

الحمد لله نحمده و نستعينه و نستغفره و نومن به و نتوكل عليه، ونعوذ بالله من شرورانفسنا ومن سيئات اعمالنا من يهده الله فلا مضل له ومن يضلله فلا هادى له ونشهد ان لا اله الاالله وحده لا شريك له ونشهد ان سيدنا و سندنا و نبينا و مولانا محمدا عبده ورسوله صلى الله تعالى عليه و على اله واصحابه وبارك وسلم تسليما كثيرا كثيرا

اما بعد!

فقد قال النبى صلى الله عليه وسلم:

مُوْتُوْا قَبْلَ اَنْ تَمُوْتُوْا وَحَاسِبُوْا قَبْلَ اَنْ تُحَاسَبُوْا (كشف الخفاء ٢:٢.٤)

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and seek His forgiveness and believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Him from the evils of our souls and from the vices of our deeds. There is none to misguide him whom He guides and there is none to guide him whom He lets go astray. We bear witness that there is no god but Allah the One Who has no partner. We also bear witness that our sire, and our authority and our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad ﷺ is His servant and His Messenger. May Almighty Allah have mercy on him, his household and bless and salute them all in great abundance.

This is a Hadith its literal meaning is:

Die before death, and subject yourself to reckoning before you are reckoned on the Day of Judgement.

Death is inevitable

There is no doubt, whatsoever, that Death shall certainly overtake everyone. There is no dispute about this truth, nor has anyone denied it. There are and have been persons who have denied the existence of Allah His Messengers but they could and cannot deny death. Anyone who has come to this world must face death one day. It is also unanimously agreed that none knows the time of one's death which may come just now, after one minute, one hour, one day, one week, one month or one year. None knows the time of death. Notwithstanding all its advancements, even science cannot tell when a man shall die.

What is the meaning of "Dying before death"?

As already stated Death is inevitable and it is also certain that the appointed time of death is not known. If a man passes away unprepared and in a state of negligence, how will he acquit himself in the presence of Allah? Man should always remain apprehensive lest he should face Allah's displeasure and punishment. What is, therefore, the meaning of "Dying before Death", occurring in the Hadith. The learned scholars have interpreted the phrase in two ways:

(1) Before facing Death, man should give up all those sensual desires and lusts which are contrary to the Commands of Allah. He should also crush those urges that are arising from time to time to commit sins, indulge in unlawful occupations and to disobey Allah.

I have to face death one day

(2) The second interpretation the learned scholars have given to this phrase is that man should visualise frequently death and its pains and throes before the actual approach of death. He should reflect in his heart that a day will come when he will have to leave this world for good, empty handed, all alone leaving behind wealth, sons and daughters, movable and immovable property, friends and relatives. Let man visualise from time to time this frightening scene. The greatest cause of the sins, crimes and wrongs a man commits is that he has forgotten his death. As long as man enjoys good health, a carefree and easy going life, he thinks that there is none like him, he takes pride, talks highly of himself, wrongs others usurps others' rights - he does all these undesirable things in the prime of his youth and at the height of his power and pelf. He little thinks that one day he has to leave this world weak, poor and awfully helpless. He accompanies the funerals of his own kith and kin, buries them in the graves with his own hands, but he hardly thinks that one day the same is going to happen to him. Thus, does he pass his life in negligence and thoughtlessness and does not prepare himself for death.

Neglecting two sublime blessings

How beautiful is this sentence spoken out by the Holy Prophet ﷺ:

نعمتان مغبون فيها كثير من الناس الصحة والفراغ (صحيح بخاری، كتاب الرقائق، باب ما جاء فی الصحة والفراغ، حديث نمبر ٦٤٩)

Of the blessings of Almighty Allah there are two bleasings which the people have fallen into great misunderstanding and deception. One is the blessing of good health and the other is the blessing of leisure and freedom. So long as they are enjoying good health they are under the misconception that this blessing of good health is everlasting and as such, they put off doing good deeds from day to day deceiving themselves that they will do the deed tomorrow or the day after tomorrow, but a time comes when their health fails and they become unable to do what they had been putting off.

While the man is young and in good health he can do a lot of good deeds and put in severe Mujahadat (striving in the path of Deen) and other deeds of worship and devotion, but he beguiles himself by making false promises that he has sufficient time at his disposal. In this way he goes on postponing the deed until his youth gives way to old age and his health fails him. In this old age of debility and weakness he longs for doing some good deeds for his Hereafter, he is totally unable to do the deed he desires now.

These failures arise for the only reason that man is oblivious of his death. If man rememberd death every morning and evening and that he had to die one day it would guard him against sins and put him on the path of righteousness. That is why the Holy Prophet ﷺ has advised: Die before death actually overtakes you.

An incident of Hazrat Bahlol رحمة الله عليه containing morals

Hazrat Bahlol رحمة الله عليه has been a saint who was a Majzoob (one lost in divine meditation). He lived during the Caliphate of Haroon-al-Rashid. The Caliph frequently used to cut jokes with Hazrat Bahlol رحمة الله عليه. Although he was a Majzoob, yet he used to say things full of wisdom. Haroon had ordered his gate-keepers to let the saint see him, whenever he desired. Thus Hazrat Bahlol رحمة الله عليه used to call on the Caliph whenever he desired. One day when Bahlol رحمة الله عليه entered the court, he found the Caliph with a stick in his hand. Haroon Rashid said to Bahlol رحمة الله عليه by way of joke : Bahlol Sahib, I am presenting you this stick as a trust. I request you to present this stick as a gift to the person whom you find to be a greater fool than yourself. Bahlol رحمة الله عليه took the stick and agreed to do as he was advised by the Caliph. It was the intention of the Caliph by this joke to tell Bahlol رحمة الله عليه that he was the greatest of fools.

Many years later one day Bahlol رحمة الله عليه came to know that Haroon Rashid was seriously ill and was under medical treatment on his death-bed, but the treatment was not proving beneficial. The eccentric saint Bahlol رحمة الله عليه visited the Caliph to inquire after his health and the following dialogue took place:

Bahlol: Amirul-Mumineen ! How do you do?
Caliph: I am setting off on a journey.
Bahlol: What is the destination of your journey?
Caliph: It is my journey to the Hereafter and I am leaving the world for good.

Bahlol: If you will not come back, then what armies, soldiers and other sources of comforts have you sent ahead to make your journey comfortable?

Caliph: You are again talking foolishly. None accompanies the traveller in the journey to the Hereafter, neither bodyguards, nor an army, nor soldiers. Man performs the journey to the Hereafter all alone.

Bahlol: It is a very long journey from which there is no return, but you have not sent ahead any army nor soldiers. In all the journeys before this journey, you used to send ahead the army and the soldiers. Why did you not make similar preparations and arrangements for this journey?

Caliph: This is a journey for the sake of which no soldiers or armies are sent ahead.

Bahlol: O Caliph! Your trust of a stick has been with me for a long time. You had desired that I should hand it over to a man who was a greater fool than myself. I searched far and wide for a greater fool than myself, but could not find one except you. The reason for this is that even for a short journey measures were taken by you months before to make it safe and comfortable. Food supplies, tents, armies and body guards, etc. were sent in advance before the commencement of the journey. But I see that there is no preparation whatsoever, such a long journey from which there is no return. I, therefore, do not find in this world a greater fool than you. I am, therefore, returning to you this trust (of the stick).

On hearing this, Haroon Rashid burst into tears and said: Bahlol, you have told the Plain truth. I have been considering you as a fool, the whole of my life, whereas it is you who have expressed the point of wisdom. It is a fact that I have wasted my lifetime and have made no preparation for the Herafter.

Who is wise?

Whatever Hazrat Bahlol رحمة الله عليه said in based on a Hadith. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in a Hadith:

الكيس من دان نفسه و عمل لما بعد الموت (ترمذی، باب صفة القيامة، باب نمبر ٣٦)

"Clever is he who condemns his self and works for the life after death". (Tirmizi)

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has advised in this Hadith as to who is really wise. In the present world that man is regarded as wise who earns much money and carries on successful business enterprises. As against this view, the Holy Prophet ﷺ has said that wise is really that man who controls his 'self' and does not hanker after his wishes and makes his 'self' obedient to the pleasure of Allah and prepares for the life after death, i.e., the Hereafter. If man does not conduct his life on this path, he is a fool. He has wasted his life in senseless pursuits and has made no preparations for the Hereafter where he has to live for ever.

We are all fools

If we look into the issue intently we shall find that what Hazrat Bahlol رحمة الله عليه told Haroon Rashid also applies to everyone of us. We are always busy thinking how to make our lives comfortable by building palatial buildings and equipping them with all possible means of comforts, pleasures and enjoyments. When setting off on a journey we get our seats booked on Railway trains, aeroplanes and in hotels beforehand and make all other preparations well in advance, even if the journey is short, not occupying more than three days. So for the place where we have to live for ever, i.e., the Hereafter, we take no care whatsoever, as to where and how to bulid a dwelling and how to get our passage booked for the final destination. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said that a wise man is really he who prepares himself for the life to come after death. If he does not do this he is a fool in spite of his wealth and capital. To prepare for the Hereafter means that one should reflect on death and its consequences before actually facing death, as a result of which he has one day to leave this life and this world for a place from which there is no return.

How to mediate on death and the Hereafter

Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has advised that you should try to go in seclusion and imagine that your last moments of life have arrived and the Angel has also arrived and has taken out the soul from your body. Your kith and kin have also called on you and are arranging to give you a bath and put the shroud on you. They have taken your dead body to the graveyard. After offering the funeral prayer, they have put your dead body into a grave which they have closed with earth. After doing all this they have left for their homes you are now in a dark grave all alone and the Angels have arrived to interrogate you.

Thereafter again imagine the scene of the Hereafter that you have been raised from your grave in second life after death. The plain of Resurrection has been set up with all human beings. The season is awfully hot, the body is perspiring, the sun has come down very close and every body is in a state of bewilderment and perplexity. The people have called upon the Prophets عليهم السلام to seek their intercession in their favour that the Prophets may appeal to Almighty Allah to start the reckoning.

In the same way you should try to imagine the Reckoning on the Day of Judgement the Bridge of the Straight Path پل صراط , Paradise and Hell. When you have finished your recitation of the Holy Qur'an, Munajat-e-Maqbool (a book of supplications) and your routine items of rehearsals and remembrance, try to imagine that this time shall arrive one day but it is not known when; it may come jsut today. After concluding this discipline of imagination pray to Almighty Allah thus:

> O Allah! I am going out on my routine worldly affairs. Protect me from falling into activities that may spoil my Hereafter.

Try to perform this exercise of imagination daily. When the imaginary image of Death has been imprinted on the heart then, man will, God willing, become anxious to reform himself and work for his betterment.

Hazrat Abdur-Rahman bin Ni-'am رحمة الله عليه

Hazrat Abdur-Rahman bin Ni-'am رحمة الله عليه was a saint and a Muhadith. During his times it occurred to a man that he should call on the various Ulama, Fuqaha (Jurists) and saints and put this questions to them: If you come to know that you are going to die tomorrow and only one day of your life in this world is left, how will you pass that day and what will you be doing? The intention underlying this question was to know the righteous deeds of Deen which these great men of God would like to do on the last day of their lives, this man may also make it the routine of his life to do the same good deeds for the sake of the Hereafter. Thus, he put this questions to these various pious men and everyone of them gave a different reply. When he called on Hazrat Abdur Rahman bin Ni-'am رحمة الله عليه and put to him this question, the saint replied: I shall do the same deeds which I have been doing as a routine. I have drawn up my timetable and daily routine duties from the very first day under the belief that this day may be the last day of my life and I may pass away today. This timetable is so tight that it can not be changed, I shall, therefore, do the same deeds on the last day of my life as I have been doing every day. What has been said above is the meaning of the Hadith:

موتوا قبل ان تموتو

After impressing the image of death on heart and keeping its remembrance fresh in memory, the saint has moulded his life in such a way that he is prepared to welcome death at any time.

Eagerness to meet Exalted Allah

There is a Hadith on this topic :

من احب لقاء الله احب الله لقاءه (صحیح بخاری، کتاب الرقاق، باب من احب لقاء الله)

If anyone is eager and anxious to meet Exalted Allah, Allah also is eager and anxious to meet such a person.

People who are really eager to meet their Creator, Allah, remain always waiting to welcome Death, as if they are rehearsing this Arabic couplet:

غدا نلقی الاحبه محمدا وحزبه

Tomorrow shall I meet (my) friends, Muhammad ﷺ and his party, i.e., the Companions رضی الله عنهم.

This meditation on death, life becomes moulded on the pattern of the Shari'ah and the Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ and, as a result, the Muslims so transformed in their outlook always remain prepared to welcome death. In short, you are all advised to spare a few moments to contemplate on death. It is to come soon to you and to search your hearts and your deeds to see what preparations you have made for this inevitable event.

Take a reckoning of your activities just today

In the second portion of this Hadith the Holy Prophet ﷺ has said:

حاسبوا قبل ان تحاسبوا

Let it be your routine to take a reckoning of your activities before you are subjected to suck reckoning (in the Hereafter).

فَمَنْ يَّعْمَلْ مِثْقَالَ ذَرَّةٍ خَيْرًا يَّرَهٗ o وَمَنْ يَّعْمَلْ مِثْقَالَ ذَرَّةٍ شَرًّا يَّرَهٗ

(سورة الزلزال: ٧: ٨)

And who so does an atom's weight of good will see it (then and there) and whoso does an atom's weight of vice shall see it (then and there). (99: 7-8)

How nicely has someone said on this point !

تم آج ہوا سمجھو جو روز جزا ہوگا

It is inevitable that everyone shall be subjected to a severe reckoning on the Day of Judgement. In order to be safe and successful on that fateful day it has been suggested in this Urdu poetical line that everyone of us should take an account of his activities from day to day and from night to night, so that you may be well prepared on the Day of Judgement to explain your conduct and deeds in the Divine Court on that Day.

Make a covenant with your 'self' every morning

Imam Ghazali رحمة الله عليه has proposed a wonderful procedure about this. if we too follow this procedure, it shall prove the prescription of an Elexir of life. The Imam has advised that everyone of us should do every day the following:

Make a covenant with your self on getting up every morning that today from morning till bed-time of night :-

1- I shall not commit any sin, whatsoever;
2- I shall offer all the obligatory, Sunnahs and optional Salat and discharge all ther obligations due by me;
3- I shall discharge in full all my obligations and responsibilities one by one due by me to Allah and His servants.

If by chance you break this covenant in any item, then inflict some punishment on your self (say, by keeping Fast or spending some money in charity, etc).

This is a form of covenant or agreement which is called in the Arabic language مشارطه (Musharatah).

Supplication after the covenant

Our Dr. Abdul Hayee Sahib رحمة الله عليه made an addition to this first item of the covenant by suggesting that after making the covenant one should pray to Allah to help one in abiding by the terms of the covenant and keep one steadfast so that one should not commit a breach of any term of it, as nothing can be done without Allah's will and assistance.

A strict control and supervision all day long over one's deeds

After making the supplication go out for earning your livelihood, whether it is through service or business.

Before starting the work first think if the work you are going to do or the word which is escaping from your mouth is not against the covenant you have made with your 'self'. If it is against the covenant, refrain from it. This is called in the Arabic language مراقبه (Muraqabah) and it is the second item of the covenant.

Muhasabah (reckoning) before going to bed at night

You should comply with the third item of the covenant before going to bed at night which is technically called Muhasabah (reckoning). You should address your 'self' thus: You had made a covenant in the morning that you shall commit no sins shall follow strictly the injunctions of the Shari'ah, discharge all the rights due to Allah and His servants. Now tell me which terms of the covennat you have fulfilled and which ones you have violated. You should, thus, take a stock of all that you do in the day. For example, ask yourself: When I left my house for my place of work in the morning what did I say to that man ? How did I discharge my office duties? Did I follow the lawful or unlawful ways in my business transactions ? How did I discharge the rights of my wife and children and of those whom I happened to meet? These questions are technically called Muhasabah (reckoning).

Render thanks to Allah

If your Muhasabah reveals that you have successfully fulfilled all the conditions of the covenants you had made in the morning, then render thanks to Allah, saying :

اللهم لك الحمد ولك الشكر

O Allah ! All praise is for You and all thanks are for You.

The result of this thanksgiving will be the increase which Allah Almighty has guaranteed in this verse:

لَئِنْ شَكَرْتُمْ لَأَزِيدَنَّكُمْ

If you give thanks I shall give you more (14:7)

Thus, if you render thanks to Allah on this blessing of your abiding by the conditions of your covenant, Allah will surely increase the blessing and give you more reward. This thanksgiving should be practised not only on the fulfilment of the covenant under discussion but on all other blessings and bounties that you receive from Allah which will be enhanced for you.

If there has been a breach repent for it

If this Muhasabah reveals that you violated the conditions of this covenant on such and such occasions and deviated from the right path then turn to Allah in repentane at once, saying :

I deviated from the covenant and could not abide by my undertaking on certain occasions, apologise to Your Creator: O Allah I had indeed made this covenant, but I was seduced by Satan and my own 'self' and could not abide by my covenant so I seek Your forgiveness and repent of my lapses. Kindly pardon me.

Now inflict a punishment on your 'self'

In addition to offering your repentance you are advised to inflict a punishment on your 'self' forcing it to offer eight supererogatory Rak'ats. Decide on this punishment in the morning at the time of making the covenant. You may tell your 'self' that for the sake of a little comfort and pleasure it involved me in the breach of the covenant, I will have to take some punishment for this offence in the form of offering eight Rak'ats before going to bed.

The punishment should be appropriate and moderate

Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has advised that the punishment should be such as to impose on the 'self' some hardship; it should not be very severe that the 'self' should become frightened, nor should it be so mild that the 'self' should feel no inconvenience therein. For example, when Sir Syed Ahmad رحمة الله عليه opened the Aligarh Oriental College (in India) it was imposed as a duty on the students to join the five-time congregational prayers in the mosque and a fine of one Anna (about 6.5 paisa) was levied on the student who failed to join the congregation. The result of this trifling fine was that well-to-do and irresponsible students used to deposit in advance the fine for the full one month which amounted hardly to about Rs. 9/40, as a punishment for missing the prayers deliberately for the entire month. Maulana Thanawi رحمة الله عليه, therefore, advised that the fine imposed should be neither so paltry nor should it be so high as to make the defaulter give up the entire discipline and become altogether defiant. The fine imposed should be moderate in its impact - neither too light nor too heavy. For example, the punishment of eight Rak'ats per day is an appropriate punishment.

Pull up courage

Anyway, it will be necessary to take some pains and endure some hardships in order to reform the 'self' by pulling up courage and taking a firm resolve. Take a resolve that you must offer eight Rak'ats of optional prayers as a punishment when the 'self' takes a wrong path. This punishment will prove deterrent to the 'self' and it will try to protect you from sins, so as to get rid of the ordeal of these eight Rak'ats of optional prayers. By following this advice and scheme your 'self' will gradually take the right path and will not misguide you.

Do these four acts

The gist of the advice of Imam Ghazzali رحمة الله عليه is that you should make sure to do the following four acts:

1- Make a covenant in the morning;
2- Exercise strict control and supervision on commencing every work;
3- Resort to reckoning (of our acts) before going to bed at night;
4- Inflict a punishment on the 'self' before going to bed at night, if it goes astray.

You shall have to follow this practice continously

It should be borne in mind that one should not be deluded into the belief that after following this practice only for a few days one has reached the goal and become a saint. One shall have to follow this practice continuously. You will see that, while following this practice in the tussel with Satan, one day you will get the upper hand and antoher day Satan will get the upper hand. You should not lose heart and give up the strife when Satan gets the upper hand, because some wisdom and prodence of Allah is concealed in this setback also. Thus, passing through these odds you will - God willing, reach one day your desired destination. On the other hand, after following this practice, if you reach the desired goal the very first day, you will be deluded into the notion that you have become the Junaid and the Shibli رحمة الله عليه of your time. Thus, in following this practice, sometime you will face success and another time you will face failure. You should render thanks to Almighty Allah the day you attain success, but on the day you face failure you should offer repentance and impose punishment on your 'self' as advised in the foregoing pages and display regret and remorse on your lapses. This feeling of regret and remorse takes man to a very high degree of virtue and accomplishment.

An event that happened to Hazrat Mu'awiyah رضى الله عنه

Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has related a strange experience of Hazrat Mu'awiyah رضى الله عنه. He رضى الله عنه used to get up daily for the Tahajjud Salat. One day he رضى الله عنه fell into such a deep sleep that he missed his Tahajjud Salat. He رضى الله عنه felt so much grieved at this failure that he wept the whole day and spent his time in repentance and seeking Allah's forgiveness for missing the Tahajjud. The next night while he was sleeping, someone came and awoke him from his sleep for the Tahajjud Salat. The person being a stranger Hazrat Mu'awiyah رضى الله عنه asked who he was. He replied that he was Iblis. Then the following dialogue took place between cursed Satan and Hazrat Mu'awiyah رضى الله عنه :

Hazrat Mu'awiyah رضى الله عنه : If you are Iblis then how are you concerned with my getting up for the Tahajjud Salat?

Satan : Please get up and offer the Tahajjud Salat.

Hazrat Mu'awiyah رضى الله عنه: You stop people from offering the Tahajjud Salat. How are you now urging me to offer this Salat?

Satan : Last night I caused you to sleep and you missed the Tahajjud Salat. This made you so much grieved that you repented and sought forgiveness the whole day long. This elevated your status in the sight of Allah more than what you could have attained by offering the Tahajjud Salat. So I thought that it was much better that you had offered the Tahajjud Salat instead of missing it. That is why I have come tonight to awake you so that your status may not be elevated many fold.

Regret and repentance lead to elevation of status

Anyway, Merciful Allah grants increase lavishly in the position and status of one who feels hearty regret and remorse on his sins and faults and takes a firm resolve not to commit those sins and faults again.

My Sheikh Dr. Abdul Hayee Sahib رحمة الله عليه used to say that if a person turns to Allah in repentance after having committed sin and seek forgiveness, Allah turns to that person, as if saying to him: The sin you have committed has made you a point of attraction for my Connivance, Mercy and Forgiveness and has turned in your favour. It occurs in a Hadith that when the Eed-ul-Fitr Day arrives, Almighty Allah says to the Angels, swearing by Himself: Today these people have assembled here to discharge their essential Eed Salat. They are calling Me and seeking My pardon and praying for their boons. I say by My Honour and Glory that I must grant their boons and prayers today and convert their vices and sins into virtues and good deeds.

A question now arises how these vices and sins can be converted into virtues and good deeds. This question may be answered by saying, suppose a man commits a sin through ignorance and negligence and realising the seriouisness of the sin he turns to Allah with feelings of regret and remorse, confesses his sin and prays to Allah in humbleness and with due submission to forgive his sin. Now in such a situation not only does Almighty Allah forgive his sin, but He also raises the status of that person. In this way that sin turns into a virtue in favour of that person. Allah has said in the Holy Qur'an:

فَأُولَٰئِكَ يُبَدِّلُ اللَّهُ سَيِّئَاتِهِمْ حَسَنَاتٍ (سورة الفرقان : ٧٠)

They are those whose vices Allah shall change into virtues. (25:70)

Let my sins go to Hell

There has been a saintly man named Hazrat Baba Najm Ahsan Sahib رحمة الله عليه who was a disciple of Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه. He was a saint of high order. He also used to compose nice poetry. One of his beautiful couplets which I greatly appreciate and enjoy is as follows:

دولتیں مل گئیں ہیں آ ہوں کی
ایسی تیسی مرے گناہوں کی

The idea expressed in this couplet is that the saint is regretful and repentant of his sins and is sincerely praying to Allah to fogive his sins. The saint feels sure that Allah shall in His mercy, wash off his sins and purge him of the effects of these sins. Almighty Allah has not created anything uselessly. Even the sins are His creation which are not devoid of some benefit and there is some wisdom in their creation. For example, after committing a sin the sinner feels regret on his sin, repents of it takes a firm resolve never to commit a sin in the future, then Allah accepts his repentance and elivates his status to very high levels.

Wage a lifelong warfare against the 'self'

While making a reckoning at bed-time of the deeds done during the day if it comes to light that some sin was committed, resort should be taken to repentance and seeking Allah's forgiveness of the sin committed and turning attention to Allah without giving way to despondency. This life is a continuous struggle in which a warfare is going on between the 'self' and Satan. It is a natural result of this dual fight that success and failure are alternating between the two adversaries. Thus, if in his turn Satan defeats you do not lose heart, but get up to tussle with Satan with new determination and enthusiasm. If you do not lose heart, but stand up again to challenge the opponent seek help from Allah, then it is Allah's promise that ultimately you will be successful in the final round.

وَالْعَاقِبَةُ لِلْمُتَّقِيْنَ (القصص: ٨٣)

The ultimate result will be in favour of the righteous. (28:83)

Take a step forward and Allah shall support you

At another place, Allah has said in the Holy Qur'an:

وَالَّذِيْنَ جَاهَدُوْا فِيْنَا لَنَهْدِيَنَّهُمْ سُبُلَنَا (العنكبوت: ٦٩)

We shall show our path to those who strive in Us (i.e. in Our Path). (29:69)

In other words, those who struggle Allah's path and and oppose the 'self', and Satan in resisting their seductions and avoiding the path of vices, sins and disobedience and taking the right path, then it is Allah's promise to help such persons in pursuing the right path of Deen.

Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has interpreted this verse thus:

We guide on to Our path by holding their hands those who strive in Our path.

Then the Sheikh explains the meaning of this verse by giving the example of a small child. When the child becomes able to walk his Parents desire that he should walk unaided. They teach him to walk by making him stand at some distance and call him to come to them. If the child takes one step to go to his parents but stumbles at the second step, the parents at once go to him to prevent him from falling down and take him up into their lap and are glad to see that the child made an attempt to walk on his own feet. Likewise, if a man tries to walk and strive in the path of Allah, will Almighty Allah leave him unaided ? No, Allah will not do so. Allah promises in this verse to help him who tries to walk and strive in His path. He, in His infinite mercy, encourages His servants to step forward and not to sit helpless and dejected. Consider the meaning of this Persian couplet:

سوئے تاریکی مرو خورشیدہا است

There is no place of hpeelessness in Allah's Court which is full of hopes. You should not walk in the dark when there are bright suns spreading their light everywhere.

Therefore, you are advised to resist your 'self' and Satan to the best of your ability. If by chance you commit some sin, do not lose heart but repent for your sins and continue your journey ahead. By the help of Allah you shall succeed one day in attaining your cherished goal.

In short, you should do your part of the job and Allah will surely do His part of the job without any deficiency and slackness. If you step forward doors will be thrown wide open before you to go ahead. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has pointed out in his Hadith the same truth:-

موتوا قبل ان تموتوا وحاسبوا قبل ان تحاسبوا

Prepare for death before you are face to face with death and reckon your acts and deeds yourself before your acts and deeds are subjected to reckoning in the Hereafter.

What reply will you give to Allah when He questions you?

Hazrat Dr. Abdul Hai Sahib رحمة الله عليه has given us a very easy and useful procedure of reckoning our deeds and doings, as mentioned below:

Try to imagine that today you are standing on the plain of Resurrection where you are being reckoned about your deeds. All the bad deeds recorded in your Register of Deeds have been brought before you. Almighty Allah is commanding you to explain why you committed the sins and did the bad deeds as entered in your record. Will you give to Almighty Allah the same replies which you give to the Molvis and Reformers of your time. When some of these Reformers ask you not to do such and such deeds, protect your glances, guard yourself against interest-bearing transactions, backbiting, telling lies, viewing obscene and naked scenes on the Television and violating the purdah in marriage parties and ceremonies. In reply to these and like questions you tell the Molvis and the Reformers: What can I do? The entire age has become corrupted. The world is advancing by leaps and bounds in the fields of science. Should we remain backward in this field and cut-off from the world. It is difficult to live in today's social environment without taking advantage of the scientific inventions.

Will you give the same reply to Almighty Allah which you have been giving to the Molvis and the Reformers? Consider a bit coolly that if such a reply cannot be acceptable in the Divine Court it can also not be acceptable in this world, too.

Pray to Allah to grant you courage and capacity

Can you give such reply to Allah that you were under duress to commit sins under these unfavourable environmental and social conditions of the times ? Now imagine that the following dialogue ensues between you and Allah when you are face to face with Him on the Day of Judgement:

Allah: All right tell me if you were helpless or I too was Helpless.

You : O Allah! I was helpless, but You were not Helpless.

Allah: When, as you admit, I was not helpless why did you not pray to Me to relieve you of your helplessness ? Was I not Able to relieve you of this helplessness? If I was Able you could have begged Me and prayed to Me either to remove your disability and helplessness or you should have requested Me not to take you to task, nor to punish you on that account.

Now say if you have any answer to this question of Allah? If not and certainly not, then make it a routine to pray daily to Allah : O Allah! I am facing this helplessness and inability which I find no courage in me to avoid. You are Omnipotent and You possess the power and ability to remove this helplessness and inability of mine and grant me the courage and capacity of refraining from this sin.

There is no deficiency whatsoever, in Allah's Bounties and Mercy

The long and short of this discussion is that you should appeal to Allah for help in all such situations of helplessness and inability. Day to day experience reveals that Allah does respond to His servant's prayers when respectfully and humbly submitted.

There is, however, no remedy and no way out for him who feels shy of appealing to Allah to help him and solve his problems.

Dr. Abdul Hayee Sahib رحمة الله عليه used to recite frequently this couplet:

کوئی حسن شناس ادا نہ ہو تو کیا علاج
ان کی نوازشوں میں تو کوئی کمی نہیں

The beloved is always scattering his bounties in every direction, but there is no remedy for him who is not able to recognize the secret of this generosity.

Thus, there is no remedy for him who needs help but is not prepared to ask for that help, although the Authority - Allal. - competent to provide it is waiting for the needy to approach Him for help.

If we are regular in acting every morning and evening upon the four acts prescribed earlier, we shall be acting upon the injunctions contained in the Hadith cited above.

May Allah forgive all of us and help us to act upon this advice - Aameen - Aameen!

AVOID IMPRACTICAL QUESTIONING

الحمد لله نحمده و نستعينه و نستغفره و نؤمن به و نتوكل عليه ونعوذ بالله من شرورانفسنا ومن سيأت اعمالنا من يهده الله فلا مضل له ومن يضلله فلا هادى له ونشهد ان لا اله الاالله وحده لا شريك له ونشهد ان سيدنا و سندنا و نبينا و مولانا محمدا عبده ورسوله صلى الله تعالى عليه و على اله واصحابه وبارك وسلم تسليما كثيرا كثيرا

اما بعد !

عن ابى هريرة رضى الله عن النبى صلى الله عليه وسلم قال:

دعونى ما تركتم انما اهلك من كان قبلكم كثرة سؤلهم واختلافهم على انبياء هم فاذا نهيتكم عن شَيْءٍ فاجتنبوه واذا امرتكم بأَمْرٍ فأتوا منه مااستطعتم

Him from the evils of our souls and from the vices of our deeds. There is none to misguide him whom He guides and there is none to guide him whom He lets go astray. We bear witness that there is no god but Allah the One Who has no partner. We also bear witness that our sire, and our authority and our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad ﷺ is His servant and His Messenger. May Almighty Allah have mercy on him, his household and bless and salute them all in great abundance.

The result of putting too many questions

Hazrat Abu Hurairah رضی اللہ عنہ has narrated that the Holy Prophet ﷺ said in a Hadith: Spare me and do not put any questions to me until I tell you something about particular problem. It is not necessary to put a question to me about an issue about which I have not advised that it is obligatory, lawful or unlawful. It was the habit of the past communities to put unnecessary questions to their Prophets علیہم السلام off and on and frequently. This was one of the causes of their ruin. The other cause of their ruin was to disobey the injunctions issued by their Prophets علیہم السلام So you should refrain from an act without any hitch and hesitation which I have forbidden you to do and you should act upon what I have commanded you to do, according to your capacity.

Look at the kindness of the Holy Prophet ﷺ that in the matter of our compliance with his orders he ﷺ has imposed the condition of our ability and capacity, i.e. he ﷺ has not placed on us a burden beyond our capacity to bear.

What kind of questions should be avoided?

In the foregoing Hadith the Holy Prophet ﷺ has disapproved the habit of putting questions frequently and in large numbers. There are however, some Ahadith in which the Holy Prophet ﷺ has pointed out the excellence of putting questions. One Hadith says: انما شفاء العی السؤال meaning: The cure of the incapable and ignorant lies in asking question. Both the Ahadith are relevant in their places. They seem to be contradictory only apparently, but in reality there is no contradiction between them. When a man doubts about an injunction of the Shari'ah, whether a certain thing or act is lawful or unlawful, it is quite lawful, rather imperative; to put a question about the problem to find out the correct position. On the other hand, if a man puts a question about which he is not concerned at all and the knowledge or ignorance of the issue does not affect his life in anyway, it is useless to put questions about such issues. It is such irrelevant questions that have been forbidden in the Hadith.

It is Satan's business to involve people in irrelevant questions

Take an example. A man asked me the name of the girl, the rivalry about whom caused the two sons of Hazrat Adam علیہ السلام Habeel (Abel) and Qabeel (Cain) to fight with each other. In this fight Cain killed Abel. Now consider what gain or loss is there in knowing or not knowing the name of that girl. Will a question about the name of the girl be put in the grave? It is, therefore, not right to put irrelevant questions of this nature. It is really a form of Satan's seduction to involve men in such questions in order to keep them away from useful occupations and right thinking.

The tendency of trying to know the reasons for the injunctions of the Shari'ah

In the same way it has become a common tendency among the people to try to find out the cause why a particular injunction of the Shari'ah has been issued. If they are told that the Islamic Shari'ah has made such an act lawful and another act unlwful, they want to know why the acts have been made lawful or unlawful. The intention of the questions seems to be that if a satisfactory reason for the injunction was not furnished he would not obey the injunction. Despite the fact that the Holy Prophet ﷺ has clearly commanded that if he ﷺ has forbidden any act or thing the people should refrain from it and if he has recommended any act or thing the people should adopot and do that thing or act to the best of their ability. It is not their business to inquire why this or that injunction has been issued.

A most convincing reply to questions on the Wisdom underlying religious injunctions

Once a visitor called on Hazrat Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanawi رحمة الله عليه and asked him about some problem of the Shari'ah, asking why Allah had made such and such thing unlawful. Hazrat Thanawi رحمة الله عليه replied: I am putting to you a question. If you answer this question I shall also answer your question. The visitor asked what was that question? The Maulana رحمة الله عليه said: Why has Allah fixed your nose in front of your face? Why did He not fix it at the back of your face? The visitor could say nothing about this question.

Almighty Allah is running the affairs of this Universe with His wisdom and prudence, whereas man desires to comprehend all this wisdom and prudence in his tiny, brain. Even this atomic age of scientific research and discoveries, some parts of this human brain remains unexplored and the scientists have not been able to discover how those parts are functioning. With such a tiny brain man aspires to encompass all the divine wisdom and prudence, as to why an act has been made lawful and another unlawful. The fact remains that such irrelevant questions occur to man on account of the ignorance of his own reality and the lack of appreciation in his heart of the greatness of Almighty Allah.

Do not meddle with the Wisdom and Prudence of Allah

Some person may like to know why Allah has prescribed different numbers of Rak'ats in the five daily obligatory Salat, i.e., two in the Fajr, four each in the Zuhr, and 'Asr, three in the Maghrib and again four in the 'Isha Salat. What is the wisdom in appointing these different numbers of Rak'ats in the obligatory Salat? Someone may suggest on the basis of his faulty thinking that there being longer leisure hours in the morning there should have been greater number of Rak'ats in the Fajr, Zuhr and 'Asr times, being busy hours, there should have been a lesser number of Rak'ats. These are irrelevant questions on matters relating to the Shari'ah. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has, therefore, strictly forbidden us to raise such questions.

The Noble Companions رضى الله عنهم never put questions beginning with "Why"

If you ransack the entire collection of the Ahadith, you will never find an occasion on which anyone of the whole Companions رضى الله عنهم ever asked the Holy Prophet ﷺ about any command of the Shari'ah why that command was issued. There are, however, occasions when they asked what was the injunction of the Shari'ah about a certain problem. They never asked a question with the interrogative word "Why". Why did they not call in question an injunction of the Shari'ah? Did they not possess the necessary intelligence to understand the wisdom and prudence of these injunctions? No, it was not favoured with intelligence and understanding of the highest order. Why then did they not put irrelevant questions? It was the result of their high standard of intelligence and understanding power whereby they understood that they had no right to call in question the advisability, wisdom and truth of an injunction of the Shari'ah, when they had acknowledged Allah as their Creator and Master and Muhammad ﷺ as His Messenger.

This is a proof of deficiency in our love for Allah and in the acknowledgement of His Greatness

My respected father Hazrat Mufti Muhammad Shafi Sahib رحمة الله عليه used to say that those who entertain great doubts about the truth of the injunctions of the Shari'ah are persons who are deficient in the love for Allah and in belief in His greatness. A man who loves any authority and acknowledges his greatness cannot entertain any doubt about the truth of the commands issued by that authority. This is exactly what happens in the affairs of this world. If a man loves anyone and has regard for him he accepts his orders, irrespective of that he understands or does not understand the wisdom of that order. If the Creator of this entire universe and its overall Controller issues any command, His greatness and love for Him demand that His command should be accepted for obedience without trying to find out the wisdom contained in His command. Our Deen demands that we should surrender ourselves passively and without any hestiation to the commands of Allah. The basic cause of our straying prevalent today is that we want to judge with our deficient intelligence the truth of the injunctions issued by Allah and His Messenger ﷺ and we reject that command of which we fail to understand the wisdom behind it.

The similitudes of a child and a servant

A father or a mother orders his/her innocent and ignorant child to do something. If that child challenges that order and refuses to obey it, unless he is informed of the wisdom of the order, then the child can never receive right training. Let the child alone and take the example of your own servant who is an adult and quite intelligent. If you ask him to go to the market to purchase something, he refuses to obey you unless you tell him the wisdom of purchasing that thing. such a servant deserves to be dismised at once, because it is his duty to carry out the order and not to inquire about the cause of that order. You and your servant are both human beings. When this is your attitude towards your own servant who both are almost on an equal footing in being limited in intellect and understanding, what should be your attitude towards Allah Who is the Creator and Worthy of being worshipped and Who possesses infinite wisdom and prudence? It is by no means appropriate to call in question the wisdom of All-Knowing Allah.

Summary

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has prohibited his Ummah from three acts :

1: To put irrelevant questions on issues which have nothing to do with our practical lives.

2: To put question on issues which have not yet overtaken us.

3: To put questions to find out the wisdom underlying some commands issued by Allah and His Messenger ﷺ with the intention that one shall act upon the commands only when the wisdom underlying that command becomes known. The Holy Prophet ﷺ said that the past communities perished as a punishment for putting these three questions.

So, people should refrain from putting questions and that we should refrain from putting questions from which the Holy Prophet ﷺ has forbidden us.

May Almighty Allah help us all to act upon these injunctions. Aameen!

My respected Ulama,

I feel highly obliged to you all for accepting very kindly my invitation and taking the trouble to undertake this long journey to participate in the study seminar. May Allah accept this effort on your part. Aameen.

The Need for this Study Seminar

We are opening today this Study Seminar. I want to mention briefly in this assembly why the need of such a Seminar was deemed necessary and what is its importance.

All Muslims, particularly the educated ones, are well aware that ever since the western colonial powers got ascendency over the world, they have been trying by a well-organised conspiracy to confine Deen (Faith) only to places of worship, educational institutions and private houses. Not only was the natural result of this conspiracy that the hold of Deen has become loose on the political and social levels, and has almost ended gradually. It was originally a great conspiracy hatched by the enemies of Islam under which the western concept of Deen (religion) was given prominence. The western concept of religion is that religion is a private and personal matter. A man is at liberty to follow whatever faith appeals to him or he may, if he so desires, make himself free from the bonds of any religion.

The western concept of religion maintains that religion has nothing to do with right and wrong, truth and falsehood.

Religion is a means of attaining spiritual peace for man. He is free to follow the religion best suited to his need. A man may adopt for religion idolatry and another man may choose Tauheed (oneness of Allah) or any other religion which best satisfies his desire for spiritual peace. Thus, religion being the personal need of a man, whatever faith he chooses is respectable and none has a right to call in question this choice. Being totally private and personal, religion has nothing to do, nor interfere, with other walks of life.

The theory of Secular Democracy

The theory, which is in today's terminology called Secularism, has taken its birth from this concept. The sum and substance of this theory consists in the belief that all social activities like economics, livelihood and politics are totally free from the bonds of religion. Using his intellect, experience and observation, man is at liberty to choose whichever mode of living best suits him. Religion should have no say in this matter. Everyone is free to follow whichever faith he likes, not because it is true but becauses it pleases him. The theory followed by the west may be summed up in these words:

"Religion has no substance in it except that it is a means of attaining peace and joy".

After the tiresome days work, if a man finds peace and joy from a monkey-show then that show is best for him. In the same way if a man finds pleasure and peace in offering Salat in a mosque, then this practice is appropriate for him. but each of these acts has nothing to do with real life. This theory has nothing to do whether praying in the mosuques is right or wrong. This is the concept which is presently prevailing over the entire western world. The second name of this concept is Secular

Democracy, which is nothing but Democracy bereft of all traces of religion.

The latest Theory

Now it is being claimed that every system and theory in the world has failed and now the only latest and unfailing theory is the theory of Secular Democracy. When the Soviet Union collapsed, the people in the west were puffed up with joy and a book was written and published and its copies were sold in millions. It is being introduced as the greatest publication of this age. A member of the American Foreign Ministry has compiled it as a research thesis. The book has been named: "The End of the History and the Last Man." The gist of the book is that the end of the Soviet Union marks the end of a history, and the last man who is perfect in all respects has come into existence. In other words, the theory of Secular Democracy has been proved and now no system or theory better than this will come into existence till the Day of Judgement.

What was Spread With The Canon?

When the western colonial powers got control over Islamic countries, it also spread the concept of Faithless Democracy, not peacefully, nor with the sword, but with the Cannon. These western powers accuse the Muslims that they spread Islam with the sword. In fact it is really the west itself that spreads its Democratic system by force with the sword. The late Indian poet Akbar of Allahabad has pointed out this fact in the following poetic lines:

اپنے عیبوں کی کہاں آپ کو کچھ پروا ہے
غلط الزام بھی اوروں پہ لگا رکھا ہے

یہ ہی فرماتے رہے تیغ سے پھیلا اسلام
یہ نہ ارشاد ہوا توپ سے کیا پھیلا ہے

You (O western powers!) do not look into your own short-comings and vices, instead you are putting the blame on others, you have been crying hoarse to allege that Islam was spread with the sword, but you feel shy to tell what you spread with the Cannon.

These western colonial powers first established their political supremacy with the use of force and the Cannon, then they gradually dissociated Deen from the political and social institutions with the help of an educational system which was introduced in India by Lord Macaulay, one of the Viceroys of that country. In doing this he openly declared that he wanted to instal a system of education which shall raise up a new generation which will be Indian in colour and language, but it will be purely English in thinking, temperament and mentality. We ultimately succeeded in introducing such an educational system which severed faith from politics, means of livelihood, economics and all other walks of life. Thus, he confined religion to very narrow lanes.

This Was All due Partly to the Conspiracies of the Enemies and Partly to our own Negligence

On one hand, it was the conspiracy of the enemies and on the other hand it was our own conduct and behaviour that complicate matters. We did not concentrate our attention on other branches and walks of life as we did on worship. Islam consists of five branches:

1- Tenets and beliefs;
2- Worship and Devotion;
3- Transactions and Dealings;
4- Mu'asharat (social living); and
5- Morality and character.

It is regretable that we did not give importance to the last three branches as to the first two branches of Islam. There are two reasons for this lapse:

(1) In our own day to day living we did not pay the same attention to the reformation of our dealings, social living, morals and character, as we paid to matters concerning our beleifs and acts of worship. The natural result was that if a man missed his Salat, he was subjected by the society to harsh comments and condemnation, because he missed an obligatory duty imposed on him by Allah and thereby he pulled down one of the most important pillars of Islam. But the society did not condemn so harshly a man who did not distinguish between lawful and unlawful, nor does he refrain from such immoral and sinful conduct and character as have been severely forbidden in the Shari'ah.

(2) The second reason for the lapse on our part is that in the courses of study prescribed in our Religion Schools we did not care to give the same importance to chapters on our dealings, social living, and morality be it Fiqh or Hadith as we gave to the chapters on beliefs and worship. The entire force of research and investigation is exhausted on the Book of Hajj or at the most on the topics of marriage and divorce and nothing beyond that. There are no chapters at all in the Books about "purchases, business and other dealings" and matters relating to these topics. Even if chapters are opened about them, they are not discussed with care and attention with which the minor and subidiary problems of worship and devotion are studied and discussed. For example the problems concerning the practice of raising the hands during Salat is a problem involving only the degree of appropriateness or non-appropriateness, and about three days are devoted to thrashing out this problem. Full justice is not done to sections devoted to dealings and moralities, etc.

The system of education followed in Religious Schools does not give much importance to the issues concerning dealings, moralities, etc. A student who graduates from these schools sees that out of ten months eight months are devoted to beliefs and worship and the remaining branches of Deen are touched off only superficially in two months. The student is, therefore, disposed to think that Deen, other than beliefs and worship, occupies only a secondary position.

This was due to another handicap. The grip of Deen (Faith) had become actually loose in the market, politics, etc. owing to the conspiracies of the enemies of Islam. As these problems concerning business, politics and other social issues had been set aside and no action was taken on them, they had acquired the position of theoretical issues to which such attention is naturally not paid as is paid to issues which are pursued in our practical life.

Apart from this handicap, the fact remains that even in our educational programmes and syllabuses chapters relating to dealings, moralities and social living lagged far behind, so their basic principles remain unknown even to the quite knowledgeable and educated section of the society. This is our plight. As far the matters relating to Governments, they are not quite clear as to their results, whether the Government was controlled in the past by the English or thereafter by their stooges. There is hardly any difference in the thinking of each of these two forms of Governments.

The common run of the Muslims consists of the groups. One group is formed by those who succumbed to the English system of education and the conspiracies of the English who adopted their trend of thinking and severed their relations with Islam in actual practice and thus lost their contact with Islam, although their members retained their Islamic names. They rebelled against religion and regarded it only as a fraud - God forbid.

The other group consists of those common Muslims who want to stick to Islam, love Islam and they cannot even think of severing their relations with Islam. They had acquired some knowledge of Islam, but that knowledge remained confined to beliefs and formalities of worship or at the most to the rules of marriage and divorce. If the number of problems referred for solutions is collected from the Darul-Ifta (Institutions that issue rulings on such problems) it will be found that most problems relate to forms of worship, beliefs, marriage and divorce. Problems concerning purchase and other dealings are few and far between. Why is it so? Why do these persons not bring problems about business transactions, about other fields and their personal financial issues?

Propaganda in Favour of the Secular Systems

One of the reasons why the Muslims show indifference to all aspects of Islam other than beliefs and worship is the propaganda launched in favour of Secularism. The effect of this propaganda is that the people do not care to know if their day to day dealings are lawful or unlawful.

I take the liberty to relate to you a true event. Apparently a very pious man used to call on my respected father, Mufti Muhammad Shafi' رحمة الله عليه. He had always in his hand a Rosary to rehearse Allah's names. He often asked my father about incantations. It came to light after a very long time that his main profession was speculative trading. The speculative trading is of two kinds - (1) secret gambling and (2) open gambling. As regards his rehearsals and incantations, they were undertaken only to know thereby the successful numbers of the speculations.

This propaganda about Secularism was so effective that even those who had an idea of lawful and unlawful had no contacts with the Ulama (scholars). The gulf created by Secularism between the two classes was so wide that each group remained far separated from the other with the result that one group is not able to convey its views to the other, nor is the latter group inclined to accept the views of the former.

In our systems of education transactions and dealings have been considerably overlooked with the result that there are Ulama who are quite conversant with problems concerning Salat, fasting, marriage and divorce, but they are not so conversant with problems concerning trade and relative dealings. This is particularly true of new problems arising day to day in our lives. People are not able to explain their problems to the Ulama quite clearly and quickly. On the other hand the Ulama also did not probe into such problems, as they did not come across them ever before. They also do not remember the juristic principles with the help of which they can find solutions to problems confronting them. As a result of this, the Ulama in general are not able to satisfy a businessman. This situation has convinced the business community that the Ulama are unable to solve their problems, and as such, it is useless to approach them for guidance. They should, therefore, solve their problems according to their convenience, benefit and interest. The natural result of all this anomaly is that our trading, means of livelihood and politics are all being practiced on the principles of Secular Democracy and Islam has been kept out of the picture.

A Wide Gulf Between the General Public and the Ulama

It is crystal clear that with regard to the problems of the common man the grip of the Ulama has become loose. The public sector is not prepared to obey the Ulama if the latter advise them to vote for the Ulama in the elections or to carry on trade in the Islamic way. This in spite of the fact that the public sector, kisses the hands of the Ulama from morning to evening, gets their new shops opened by them, invites them to perform the Nikah (marriage ceremony) of their sons and daughters and to bless them for success in their worldly enterprises. This is because the public is under the notion that these Ulama cannot provide them proper guidance in problems concerning their worldly affairs. This is a very wide gulf intervening between the public and the Ulama. The vices that have crept into the society cannot be eradicated unless this gulf is filled. The work of filling this gulf needs to be undertaken from all sides.

It may be mentioned here that the demand to fill this gulf is emanating from many directions, even from the newly educated sections of the public. Late Maulana Ihtishamul Haq Thanawi رحمة الله عليه has very aptly defined this demand in the follwoing words:

"The demand of these newly-educated students on modern lines to fill this gulf means that the Ulama should be buried in this gulf in order to fill it".

An Ignorant Person is He Who is Not Aware of the Trends of the Times

It is incumbent on us to feel the pulse of the times in order to understand the trends of the contemporary conditions. The respected Jurists (Fuqaha) are well-versed in this field of knowledge. That is why they have said:

مَنْ لَّمْ يَعْرِفْ اَهْلَ زَمَانِهٖ فَهُوَ جَاهِلٌ

He who does not know the people of his age is illiterte and ignorant.

اِنَّ تَصْوِيْرَ الْمَسْئَلَةِ نِصْفُ الْعِلْمِ

The true picture (basic points involved) of any problem means its half solution.

Full acquaitance with the modern conditions of matters is impertive. I remember to have read in the books of Imam Sarkhasi, the "Mabsoot" that Hazrat Imam Muhammad رحمة الله عليه used to go to the traders in the market to find out how they carried on thier business. Seeing the Imam wandering in the market someone asked him what a teacher and scholar like him was doing in the market. He replied that he was going about in the market to know how the traders were carrying on thier business, so as to be able to give correct replies to their problems.

Three Unique Peculiarities in Imam Muhammad رحمة الله عليه

Imam Sarkhasi رحمة الله عليه has mentioned one after another three unique peculiarities of Imam Muhammad رحمة الله عليه. The first one has already been mentioned above. Someone asked the Imam that, although he had compiled so many books, yet he did not compile any book on Zuhd زهد - asceticism or mysticism. What was the reason? The Imam replied that his book on البيوع (Purchases) was a book on Zuhd. This was the Imam's second peculiarity. Thirdly, someone told the Imam that he never saw on his face the glimpses of smile; he was always seen gloomy. The Imam replied, saying:

ما بالك فى رجل جعل الناس قنطرة يمرون عليها شيئا

What do you think about a person of whom the people have made a bridge to cross over it?

We Have Accepted the Conspiracy

Those personalities were very keen in investigating into the customs of the times, trade dealings and the like, so as to know the reality of the problems. It is very sad that we have been expelled from the market places and business houses under a conspiracy and what is sadder is that instead of frustrating this conspiracy, we have passively accepted it by confining the circle of our knowledge, thoughts and ideas which has surrounded us from all sides and we never thought of extricating ourselves from this confinement. We cannot apply the injunctions of our Deen to the branches of our various walks of lives without taking ourselves out of this maze. It is, therefore, our prime duty to acquire first-hand knowledge of all these problems and of the injunctions of the Shari'ah about them, then to bring about a practical revolution in the various branches of life. We cannot succeed in bringing about a revolution, unless we fulfil these basic conditions.

The Responsibility of the Scholars in the Field of Research and Investigation

It is not an exaggeration to say that our work in the field of research and investigation is only half-way and inadequate. For example, if some authority entrusts to us the entire responsibility of the Government from the President, Prime Minister right up to the peons, on the condition to revolutionise the fate and fortune of the country, we are not in a position to fulfil this condition, not in a few days, weeks, months but not even in full one year to effect a change for the better. This is because we are not well aware of the problems involved and have done no research work on them. It is, therefore, imperative for the scholars to turn their attention to this aspect of the problem. This is their responsibility and the crying need of the time. The intention is to emphasise that they should find out, and work in the right direction in the light of the accepted juristic principles and submit the result to the people at large.

It is the responsibility of the Faqih (Jurist) to find out alternative avenues

It is not the responsibility of a Faqih (Jurist) only to declare that this is lawful and that is unlawful. It is his responsibility that when he declares some thing or act to be unlawful, he should also declare its alternative.

The story of Hazrat Yusuf عليه السلام has been related in the Holy Qur'an. The Prophet عليه السلام was asked to give the interpretation of a dream:

إِنِّي أَرَىٰ سَبْعَ بَقَرَاتٍ سِمَانٍ يَأْكُلُهُنَّ سَبْعٌ عِجَافٌ ..... (سورة يوسف: ٤٣)

I certainly saw in a dream seven fat cows being eaten by seven lean cows.... (12:43)

Hazrat Yusuf عليه السلام gave the interpretation of this dream later on. First he عليه السلام advised the method of safety from the loss pointed out in the interpretation of the dream. So he عليه السلام said as reported in the Holy Qur'an:

قَالَ تَزْرَعُونَ سَبْعَ سِنِينَ دَأَبًا فَمَا حَصَدْتُمْ فَذَرُوهُ فِي سُنْبُلِهِ (سورة يوسف ٤٧)

You shall cultivate (land) seven years as usual, but leave in the ears what you have harvested. (12:47)

The Faqih (Jurist) is a Preacher also

The Faqih (Jursit) is charged with the additional duty of being a preacher. It is not only the dry, legal work which the Faqih has to do by declaring that this is lawful and that is unlawful. The Faqih is also responsible to point out a lawful substitute for what he declares to be unlawful.

The Objective of this meagre Attempt of Ours

It is included in the duties of a Faqih to point out a lawful substitute for what he declares as unlawful and forbidden. He cannot, however, discharge this duty, unless he has knowledge of contemporary problems and modern trend and dealings. I have, therefore, made a modest attempt to present to the respected Ulama the reality and the various forms and categories of modern modes of transactions and dealings and how they are being tackled. The only objective of this discussion is to popularise this trend of thinking, so that people may begin to talk about these matters and pay attention to the consequential problems.

I have taken great pains in Embarking upon this subject

I have taken great pains in embarking this subject, because when I had entered this difficult field, the difficulties I had to have in this enterpisre were due to the fact that I encountered strange terminologies, varying styles and trends and style of speeches. If I read books on the subject I failed to grasp the points discussed in these books. Despite all these difficulties the craze that had obsessed my mind compelled me to read many books? Consulted many persons and after going throught all these ordeals for years. I was able to get a few coherent ideas and a mentel summary of the subject which is expected to prove useful to the studends.

A Fresh Example of the Importance of this Course

I am presenting to you a fresh example which will convince you of the importance, benefit and necessity of this course. Just as we have drawn up this short course in the same way we have established a centre under the title of : مركز الاقتصاد الاسلامي (The Centre of Islamic Economics) under the care of this centre we held recently a course at Masjid Baitul Mukarram (Gulshan-e-Iqbal). The intention was to furnish to the businessmen all necessary information about what is lawful and what is unlawful in business and to advise them that in tackling today's business activities, they should not transgress the limit prescribed by the Shari'ah and that all this should be brought to their notice. When we launched this course for the first time, the people felt doubts about its success and thought that the businessmen remained too busy to take interest in such courses. As necessary arrangements for their lodging and boarding, a fee of Rs. 400/- (four hundred) per head had been charged for this service.

The People's Enthusiasm

We had made arrangements to accommodate in the course only one hundred men and had published no advertisements about this in the Press, yet one hundred and seven men took admission to the course by paying the prescribed fee. The enthusiasm was so intense that some of the candidates sought intercession to get admission. A few of them who had purchased tickets for leaving Pakistan for America got their seats cancelled for the sake of participating in this course.

The Sparks of Eeman (Faith) are Still Simmering in the Hearts of the Muslims

I have been participating in many seminars, symposiums and assemblies being held from time to time in the world. I have seen with what interest and fondness the Muslims attend these gatherings. In general, if the people's attendance is 100% in the first session it gradually decreases to 70% or even much less. As far the seminars held under my arrangement and care, I find that the people remain present on the first day from 9 a.m. in the morning till 4 p.m. in the afternoon and on the second day up to the Maghrib Salat, except for short break for Salat and meals. They listen to the lectures and addresses with rapt attention and interest. This shows that the sparks of Eeman (Faith) are still simmering in the hearts of the Muslims. Only a little boosting is needed to push them ahead. If they are given right guidance through the right way and they feel that right guidance is available at such and such quarters they are still ready to visit these sources of guidance with due interest. How beautifully has a poet expressed this idea in one of his couplets:

میرے طائر قفس کو نہیں باغباں سے رنجش
ملے گھر میں آب و دانہ تو یہ دام تک نہ پہنچے

The bird of my self has no grudge against the garden - keeper, except that he does not feed me properly. If he fed me properly there was no need for me to be caught in the hunter's trap.

The Fear to give Explanation in the Presence of Almighty Allah

We feel afraid lest Almighty Allah should ask us to explain why we did not take care of this community which was falling into the trap of the conspirators. I, however, hope that, by the grace of Allah, that all this is due to conspiracy; it is artificial and a temporary phase and things shall soon take a trun for the better. Our fourteen centuries old history denies that the present spell of decadence is a permanent phase. During this entire period the conduct and character of the Ulama have proved a beacon of light in guiding the Ummah in every walk of life. May be, we shall not see this change in our lives but our later generations shall surely see the welcome change. Blessed are those souls that will sacrifice in this cause.

May Almighty Allah accept the tribute of our lives in the cause of this sacred goal.

We should take part in paving the path of Revolution

There is no doubt that a revolution is in the making and shall take place. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in a Hadith:

مثل امتی مثل المطر لا یدری آخره خیرام اوله (ترمذی، کتاب الامثال، باب مثل امتی مثل المطر)

The example of my Ummah is like the rain. It is not known whether its first part is better or the later part.(Tirmizi)

We shall be very fortunate if we too, by the grace of Allah, contribute our mite to the blessed revolution. If we lag behind in this sacred task, Allah will entrust this responsibility to some other party. Allah does not stand in need of our help and contribution, as He has said in the Holy Qur'an:

وَاِنْ تَتَوَلَّوْا يَسْتَبْدِلْ قَوْمًا غَيْرَ كُمْ ثُمَّ لَا يَكُوْنُوْا اَمْثَالَكُمْ (محمد: ۳۸)

And if you turn away, He shall substitute in your place another people and they will not be like you (47:38)

A time is sure to come when the voices of those who taunt and raise slogans agianst the Muslims will be choked and the word Deen will, God willing, become exalted.

Knowledge of new Publications and Compilations is Inevitable

Our entire talk in this lesson will be devoted totally to juristic problems concerning transactions and dealings. We have in the Indo-Pak Sub-continent good collections of Religious Rulings فتاوی, but we do not have books on this subject. The scholars in the Arab countries have done much work in this field. Among theseArab research scholars and writers are persons professing different trends of thoughts, viz., modernists, free-thinkers, right-thinkers and those who are adamant and unyielding in their views. I have secured and stocked in the library of the Darul-Uloom a sizeable collection of books written and compiled by these scholars, holding varying angles of vision. It is my desire that scholars should benefit by, and study these books in order to acquaint themselves with the various aspects of the issue confronting the Ummah.

It is the working method of the Arab scholars that they pick up a topic and compose a complete book on it. For example, they wrote a book under the title of (Al-Khiyar), meaning literally "The Choice" and incorporated therein all sorts of choices, e.g., choice of a defect, of a condition, of a slight and of specifying etc., along with discussing all problems relating to this issue. In the same way someone wrote a book on the topic of الغبن (cheating) or التامین (Insurance) and so on.

May Almighty Allah make this work a means to success for us in this world and also in the Hereafter, and accept this humble attempt of ours. Aameen!

THE PRINCIPLES OF PREACHING AND CALLING TO ISLAM

الحمد لله نحمده و نستعينه ونستغفره و نؤمن به و نتوكل عليه ونعوذ بالله من شرور انفسناومن سيات اعمالنا من يهده الله فلا مضل له ومن يضلله فلا هادى له و نشهد ان لا اله الا الله وحده لاشريك له ونشهدان سيد نا و سندنا و نبينا ومولانا محمدا عبده ورسوله صلى الله تعالى عليه وعلى اله واصحابه وبارك وسلم تسليما كثيرا كثيرا

اما بعد

فاعوذ بالله من الشيطن الرجيم بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم

وَالْمُؤْمِنُوْنَ وَالْمُؤْمِنٰتُ بَعْضُهُمْ اَوْلِيَآءُ بَعْضٍ ۘ يَأْمُرُوْنَ بِالْمَعْرُوْفِ وَيَنْهَوْنَ عَنِ الْمُنْكَرِ وَيُقِيْمُوْنَ الصَّلٰوةَ وَيُؤْتُوْنَ الزَّكٰوةَ وَيُطِيْعُوْنَ اللّٰهَ وَرَسُوْلَهٗ ؕ اُولٰٓئِكَ سَيَرْحَمُهُمُ اللّٰهُ ؕ اِنَّ اللّٰهَ عَزِيْزٌ حَكِيْمٌ (سورة التوبة ٧١)

Praise belongs to Allah. We praise Him and ask

Him for help, and we seek His forgiveness. We believe in Him and place our trust in Him. And, we seek refuge in Him from the mischief of our base self and from our evil deeds. He whom Allah guides none can mislead and he whom He leaves to stray none can guide. We bear witness that there is no god except Allah, the One who has no partner and we bear witness that sayyidina Muhammad ﷺ is His Servant and Messenger, may blessings of Allah be on him, his family and companions, and may He bestow favours and peace a complete peace.

I seek the protection of Allah from the cursed devil. In the Name of Allah, the Compassionat, the Merciful.

And the believing men and the believing women are friends of one another. They enjoin the right and forbid the wrong, and they establish the Salah, and pay the Zakah, and they obey Allah and His Messenger. Those - Allah shall have mercy upon them. Surely Allah is Mighty, Wise. (at-Tawbah. 9:71)

I believe in Allah who has spoken the turth and He is our Great Protector. And, His Messenger and noble Prophet has spoken the truth, too. And we bear witness to that, and we are thankful. Praise belongs to Allah Lord of the worlds.

Stages enjoining the Right and forbidding the Wrong

This verse of the Qur'an deals with 'enjoining what is right and forbidding what is wrong.' In describing the quality of His pious slaves, Allah says that they bid other people to do is good and forbid them to do what is bad or evil. The verb in the verse امر (amastetra) means 'to command', 'to bid' while the noun (ma'ruf) means 'the right', 'piety', 'good'. The verb نهی (nahi) means 'to forbid' and the noun منکر (munkar) means 'evil'. The jurists contend that just as it is فرض (obligatory) on every Muslim to observe Fast and offer Salat, so also it is فرض (obligatory) to stop anyone who does something evil according to his ability telling him that what he does is sinful. Generally, people know that 'to enjoin right and forbid evil' is obligatory but they do not know when it is فرض(obligatory) and when it is not. The result is that many people are neglectful of this duty. Such a man sees his wife, children and friends indulge in unlawful activities but he does not feel inclined to forbid them from doing evil; he observes them defer their duties but he does not bid them to fulfil their obligations. On the other hand, there are some people who interpret this verse 'to the letter' and occupy themselves from morning to evening in baring other people from different activities. In this way, people go to the extreme in observing this verse because they have not understood it well. Therefore, let us go through the explanation of this verse.

Two approaches in Preaching and Calling Individually and Collectively

The first thing that we must know is that there are two ways in which anyone may preach and call others to Islam. (i) The individual way is to convey the message to an individual. For instance, if anyone sees another person doing an evil deed or disregarding an obligation then asking him to give up the evil or meet his obligation is the individual preaching and calling 'to Islam'.

(ii) The 'Cllective preaching and calling to Islam." This is achieved when anyone delivers a sermon to a group of people, or teaches them, or intends to visit other people and tell them about religion with no other purpose in mind. This last is also done by the members of the Tablighi Jama'at when they visit other people's homes and offices to convey to them religious ideas. This is 'collective propagation'. The rules for both these approaches differ as also their etiquettes.

The Collective method is also a Fard Kifayah

The 'collective propagation' is not an individual duty (fard 'ayn) but it is a fard kifayah (collective duty). Thus, it is not incumbent on every Muslim to go to other people and deliver a sermon, or to visit them and preach bacause this is a fard kifayah which means that if a few people discharge that duty the remaining are absolved of it, but, if no one does it then all the people are being sinful. Take the funeral prayer. It is not the responsibility of every individual to join it; if he does, he will be rewarded but if he does not then he will not be a sinner provided some people are offering it. If no one offers it then every Muslim there will have committed a sin. This is known as fard kifayah (a collective obligation). In the same manner the collective preaching and calling to Islam ' is a fard kifayah.

Individual Propagation is also An Individual Obligation

The 'individual preaching and calling to Islam ' is what anyone does when he sees another person do something wrong or overlooks a duty: to the best of his ability he stops that person from doing wrong, or makes him fulfil his obligation. It is not a fard kifayah but it is a fard 'ayn. It implies that one does not leave it for other people to do it, or imagine that a preacher or a member of the Tablighi Jama'at will do it. It is an obligatuion on every individual Muslim that must perform and is known as fard 'ayn.

To Enjoin Right and Forbid Wrong Is Fard 'Ayn

Allah has described the pious people in many verses of the Qur'an. He says يأمرون بالمعروف وينهون عن المنكر {They bid what is right and forbid what is wrong}. Thus this behaviour is a duty on every individual. Today, we do not even know that it is an obligation. We see our children, family members, acquaintances do wrong but we do not care to warn them or feel within ourselves that we must reproach them, this is a continuous dereliction of duty, a perpetual negligence in fulfilling an obligation. Just as a Muslim is obliged to observe Salat five times a day, Fast in the month of Ramadan, pay zakah and perform Hajj, so too is his duty to enjoin what is right and forbid what is wrong. We must,. therefore, realise its significance before we proceed. If anyone is pious all his life, never missing a Salat or a Fast and pays zakah regularly and performs Hajj and he never commits a grave sin at any time yet he has omitted to enjoin the right and forbid the wrong and never thought of keeping other people away from doing evil then, in spite of his personal piety, he will be called to account in the Hereafter. He will have to explain what efforts he undertook to stop the evil being committed before his eyes. Therefore, it is not enough to reform oneself but it is necessary to worry about correcting other people.

When does 'Bidding the Right and forbidding the Wrong' become Obligatory?

We must remember that there are two kinds of worship: the fard or wajib (absolute obligatory or obligatory) and Sunnah or Mustahab (the practice of the Prophet ﷺ. or the desireable behaviour). The former include: regular Salat, Fasting, Zakah, Hajj and so on. The latter include: using the Siwaak, reciting the Bismillah before eating, drinking water in three sips, and so on, and include all the practices of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. As for the evil deeds, they are also of two types; the unlawful, sinful acts absolutely disallowed, and those though not unlawful yet violate the Sunnah are undesireable. If anyone omits the fard or wajib, or commits the unlawful, it is fard ʿayn to 'bid the right and forbid the wrong', If anyone drinks wine, or involves himself in any illicit act, or backbites, or tells lies, it is obligatory to 'forbid the wrong' and stop him doing so. If anyone omits regular Salat, or does not pay zakah, or skips Fasting in Ramadan then it is obligatory to ask him to do his duty.

When is it not Fard to Forbid the wrong

In discharging the foregoing duty, it is a condition that the perpetrator is likely to pay heed to the person who discharges his duty and there is no risk to the latter. Thus, if one is confident that the perpetrator will not pay attention but make fun of Shariʿah and belittle it then one is absolved of the duty to forbid him. We must remember that by insulting Shariʿah the person commits an act of disbelief because to belittle a command of Shariʿah is not only sinful but it draws the person outside the fold of Islam and makes him an unbeliever. Therefore, when there is likelihood of the doer of an evil act reacting to an advice of a preacher and making fun of Shariʿah or its commands then it is no more a duty to forbid him from doing anything sinful. However, one must remove oneself from there and pray for the sinful person: "O Allah! This slave of yours is sick, do cure him of his ailment by your mercy."

Forbidding One Who Sins

Let us examine the case of a person who is deeply involved in a sinful act and derives full pleasure out of it. At that time, there is no possibility whatsoever of that person listening to advice and stopping himself from the sinful act. If anyone approaches him at that time when he is deriving peak pleasure and, without assessing the situation, commends to him the right way then that person will make fun of the command of Shariʿah and thus do a thing of disbelief. The responsibility of this man's conduct rests on the 'bidder of the right conduct'. We have seen, therefore, that it is dangerous and disadvantageous to forbid a sinner when he is deeply involved in the sin. The correct way is to explain to him later on what he did was not proper.

When the chances are equal

When the possibilities of the sinner paying heed and refusing to listen are equal then it is necessary to convey to him the message. The chances are that Allah will inspire him to listen to the preacher and he may thus reform. If that happens then every pious deed that he does thereafter will earn a reward for the preacher too.

When there is possibility of harm befalling the Preacher

There is also the possibility that the person who 'bids the right or forbids the wrong' might be harmed by the sinner when he is asked to desist but he many not comment on Shari'ah. In such cases, too, it is proper not to preach to the sinner and the 'bidding and forbidding' is not fard. However, it is better to forbid him from doing wrong because although the preacher may risk himself, he will, nevertheless, convey the Truth. He may endure the annoyance and do the preferable thing. We must remember the foregoing three possibilities. They are: when it is likely that advice and counsel will backfire and the person advised may speak against the commands of Shari'ah, the commended must not be bid and the wrong must not be forbidden but one must maintain silence. When there are equal possibilities of favourable and unfavourable response from the perpetrator of sin, it is necessary to preach him. The third possibility is that the perpetrator of sin may not deride Shari'ah but may harm the advisor; in this case although it is not necessary to preach to him yet it is better to endure the hardship and tell him 'to do the right and shun the wrong'. This is the gist of the courses open to the preacher which he must remember.

When advising anyone the intention must be Sincere

The person who conveys the message of Shari'ah must be sincere in his intention. If he imagines himself as a reformer, religious-minded and God-fearing and his subject as a sinner and misled whom he is reforming then his good words will benefit neither the person to whom they are addressed nor their speaker. This is because a faulty intention grows in the speaker arrogance and his deed no longer gains approval in the sight of Allah Thus his deed is worthless and of no avail and his effort wasted. The listener too will not be impressed by his words. Therefore, it is imperative that the caller to good deeds must be sincere in his intention.

The Style of delivery must be proper

In the same way, when the message of Shari'ah is conveyed to someone the speaker must adopt a correct approach. He must speak in a polite, loving manner wishing him well so that the person who is addressed does not feel much hurt and disgraced. My respected father. Maulana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه often quoted Allama Shabbir Ahmad Uthmani رحمة الله عليه as saying frequently, "When the Truth is spoken in a true way with a true intention it will never cause harm." So, whenever there is a conflict after someone says something True, one of the three things will be found surely: the speaker may not have spoken the truth or his intention may have been faulty or he may have hoped to disgrace his listener. Such a shortcoming would deprive the words of their power to influence. If, on the other hand, the words were true and the speaker was sincere, then the approach may have been faulty. The words may have been spoken roughly as though the addressee was being beaten with a stick. The True words are not a stick that one picks up and hits another with but it is a well-wishing affair that should be done politely. When the well-wishing factor is missing then the True word will also cause harm.

The Preacher must be Soft-Spoken

My respected father, Maulana Mufti Muhammad Shafi' رحمة الله عليه often remarked that when Allah directed Sayyidina Musa and Aaron (Harun) عليهما السلام to preach to Fir'aun, (Pharoah) He asked them.

فَقُوْلَا لَهٗ قَوْلًا لَّيِّنًا لَّعَلَّهٗ يَتَذَكَّرُ اَوْ يَخْشٰى (سورة طه:٤٤)

But speak to him mildly; Perchance he may take warning or fear (Allah). (20:44)

But, who was this Fir'aun? Was he not who said that he had divine powers? He said:

اَنَا رَبُّكُمُ الْـاَ عْلٰى (النازعات:٢٤)

"I am your Lord, Most high."

Thus, he was the worst of the disbelievers.

My father would say after narrating this event that there cannot be a reformer more capable than Sayyidina Musa عليه السلام in our age nor can there be anyone more misled than the Pharaoh no matter how sinful he may be. The Pharoah laid claim on divinity. In spite of that the two Prophets, Sayyidina Musa and Haarun عليهما السلام were instructed that they should speak to him politely, not in a harsh tone. This principle we have to follow upto the Day of Resurrection and we should be soft when speaking about religious matters.

The Method Of The Holy Prophet ﷺ

The Holy Prophet ﷺ was sitting in Masjid Nabvi once with the Companions رضى الله عنهم when a villager entered it. He offered his Salat hurriedly and then made a very suprising supplication.

اَللّٰهُمَّ ارْحَمْنِىْ وَ مُحَمَّدًا وَلَا تَرْحَمْ مَعَنَا اَحَدًا

"O Allah, have mercy on me and Muhammad ﷺ and do not show mercy to anyone else besides us."

The Holy Prophet ﷺ heard him and said, "You have restricted the mercy of Allah very much and limited it to two people only, no more! But, the mercy of Allah is large and all-encompassing." After a while, this villager sat down in the courtyard of the mosque and passed his urine. On seeing him the Companions رضى الله عنهم hurried towards him and were on the point of scolding him and repriminding him when the Holy Prophet ﷺ said : لا تزرموه {Do not interrupt him. Leave him alone}.(Sahih Muslim. Book of Taharah Chapter Ghusl).

اِنَّمَا بُعِثْتُمْ مُيَسِّرِيْنَ وَلَمْ تُبْعَثُوْا مُعَسِّرِيْنَ

"You are sent as well-wisher for the people, to make things easy for them and not to create difficulties in their way."

He then asked them to throw water over it and clean the mosque. He then called the villager to him and explained to him that the mosque was the House of Allah and was not meant for what he did, so "do not do it again."

The Method of Preaching By the Prophets عليهم السلام.

If someone behaved in this way in our presence and defiled a mosque, we might perhaps teach him the lesson of his life. The Holy Prophet ﷺ., however, observed that the man was unacquainted with the etiquette of the Mosque and whatever he did, he did out of lack of knowledge. So, instead of reprimanding him, he gently explained to him what the proper way was. This was the way of teaching with all the Prophets عليهم السلام. If any one abused them they never retaliated. The Holy Qur'an has reproduced the words of the idolators, they used against Prophets عليهم السلام

اِنَّا لَنَرٰكَ فِىْ سَفَاهَةٍ وَّاِنَّا لَنَظُنُّكَ مِنَ الْكٰذِبِيْنَ (الاعراف:٦٦)

We see you in folly, and surely, we think you to be one of the liars.(al-A'raf. 7:66)

If anyone were to speak in this manner to a religious scholar today, or to a sermoniser, he would retaliate and abuse him in similar words. But, the Prophets عليهم السلام said.

يٰقَوْمِ لَيْسَ بِيْ سَفَاهَةٌ وَّلٰكِنِّيْ رَسُوْلٌ مِّنْ رَّبِّ الْعٰلَمِيْنَ

"O my people, there is no folly in me; but I am a Messenger from the Lord of the worlds." (Al A'raf.7:67)

How gentle are the words! In another case, people said to their Messenger:

اِنَّا لَنَرٰكَ فِيْ ضَلٰلٍ مُّبِيْنٍ (الاعراف:٦٠)

Surely we see you in manifest error. (al- A'raf. 7:60)

But, their Messenger answered that he was not in error but that he was a Messenger from the Lord of the worlds. That was their manner of teaching and reforming. But, we find that our preaching does not bear fruit which is because of one of these things: We do not convey the Truth, our method is not True or our intention is not True. That is why there is so much evil around.

An Incident in the Life of Shah Isma'il رحمة الله عليه

Shah Isma'il Shaheed رحمة الله عليه is one of those eminent pious men who have proved this behaviour to be correct. He was delivering a sermon in the Jami Masjid of Delhi when one of the audience got up and asked him to answer his question. The Maulana asked him to put the question. He said, "I have heard that you are a bastard? (We seek refuge in Allah). He said it when the sermon was being delivered before a multitude and to a man who was not only a religious scholar of high calibre but also a royal prince! One like me might have turned red in anger at that very moment and might have punished the daring interrupter. And if one like me would not do so, the supporters would surely have taught him a lesson for saying such a thing about their Shaikh. But, Maulana Shah Isma'il Shaheed رحمة الله عليه said in answer to the man, "Brother, you have a wrong information. The witnesses to the marriage of my mother are yet present in Delhi." It was thus that he answered the man and did not make an issue out of it.

How May One Create Effective Words:-

When a person speaks solely for Allah and suppresses his own desires so that his listeners too realise that he speaks for the cause of Allah and has no axe to grind for himself then what he says produces the desired result. As for Maulana Shah Isma'il Shaheed رحمة الله عليه, thousands of people repented to Allah at his hands in each of his sermons. In comparison, we may say for ourselves that we have, in the first instance, given up the task of propagation of Islam and if any of us does make an attempt his approach incites his listeners. There is, therefore, no productive result. To overcome the drawback we must remember three things and observe them. We must convey the Truth with a sound intention and when we do it we will not suffer any damage but we will derive much benefit.

Who Is Authorised To Make The 'Collective Call'

The second way to preach and call to Islam is the collective approach. In this method, the preacher gathers people and delivers a sermon or a speech, or gives them advice. This is known as collective preaching and calling to Islam.'The collective call' is not fard a'yn. It is fard kifayah and if some people undertake it, the others are absolved of it, but everyone is not authorised to do it. The preacher must have certain qualifications and if a person is not qualified enough then he may not undertake the work. A person who is not likely to utter anything wrong during his sermon may be permitted to sermonise. This task of 'preaching and calling' is a very delicate affair. When a speaker observes a lot of people listening to him, he gets it into his head that he is a great scholar and he misleads his listeners into believing him as a great scholar. They imagine he is a very pious person. When the listeners are cheated, he himself goes alongwith and considers that he is a great man. "So many people! They all call me a scholar, a righteous and pious man. There must be something to it. They cannot be mad, all of them." This is how one may trap oneself into a trial.

Therefore, everyone must not attempt to deliver a speech or sermon. Of course, if a teacher or an elder ushers a pupil forward then he may begin under the elder's patronage and seek Allah's help who will potect him from the trial.

To Impart Lessons From The Qur'an & Hadith

We have commented on delivering the sermon and the speech which is comparatively easier than giving lessons in the Qur'an and Hadith. Now-a-days,about every other person takes it upon himself to impart lessons from the Qur'an and Hadith. But the truth is that the Holy Prophet ﷺ has said about the Noble Qur'an.

من قال فى القران بغير علم فليتبوأ مقعده من النار

"If anyone says anything by way of interpreting the Qur'an without having the knowledge then he must know that his destination is Hell".

Another Hadith tells us:

من قال فى كتاب الله عزوجل برأيه فاصاب فقد اخطأ (ابوداؤد، كتاب العلم، باب الكلام فى كتاب الله بغير علم)

"If anyone gives his personal opinion in the Book of Allah, the Great, and even if his opinion is correct then, he has erred (in giving it)". (Abu Dawood, Book of Knowledge)

What a serious warning the Prophet ﷺ has given! In spite of that we see people learning something from the books then imagining themselves learned men and scholars. They then consider themselves capable of imparting lessons in Qur'an although this department like the lessons in Hadith, is one that eminent Ulama hesitate to undertake. How then may we expect an ordinary man to give the lessons and interpret the Qur'an?.

The Respected Mufti Muhammad Shafi and the Exegeses of the Qur'an

My respected father, Maulana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه spent seventy or seventy-five years of his life in studying and teaching religion. It was in the final years of his life that he compiled the exegeses of the Noble Qur'an, the Ma'riful Qur'an. He told me often that he did not consider himself capable of undertaking this work. He said, "But, I have composed the exegeses of Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanavi into simple language." All his life, he said, "Eminent Ulama stayed away from expounding on the verses of the Qur'an."

Imam Muslim on Hadith

Imam Muslim رحمة الله عليه has collected a number of authentic Ahadith and compiled them together as Sahih Muslim. However, he refrained from saying even one word in explanation of these Ahadith, so much so that he did not distinguish them under different chapters although others in this field have done so-Book on Salat, Book on Purification, and so on. He did not do it lest it go down as an explanation on the Hadith of the Prophet ﷺ, and he might commit a mistake and make himself answerable to Allah for that. He said simply that he had collected the Ahadith from which the Ulama may derive knowledge. We can see from it that it is a very delicate task but we find around us that givers of lesson abound: we hear of someone speaking on the Qur'an at some place, someone else explaining the Ahadith at some other place though they may lack in knowledge and may not have the required qualifications. The result is there is a plethora of confusion and mischief. Those who attend such gatherings must satisfy themselves that the person imparting lessons in Qur'an or Hadith is qualified and worthy of it. They must verify if he has the required knowledge because it is not fit for everyone to impart lessons in this manner. In the same way he who lacks in the required knowledge should not undertake 'collective preaching and call to Islam',. should not give sermons or deliver speeches. He should, of course, carry on with individual preaching and call.

Should One Who Does Not Practice Not Preach

It is commonly believed that anyone who does some wrong should not stop others from the same mistake.Thus, it is said if a man does not offer his Salat with the congregation, he should not urge others to join congregational Salat unless he himself observes it; this view is not correct. In fact, it is the other way round: the person who invites other people to offer congregational

Salat must also observe them regularly. It is not that one who neglects them should not invite other people! People generally quote the following verse of the Qur'an:-

يٰٓاَيُّهَا الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْا لِمَ تَقُوْلُوْنَ مَا لَا تَفْعَلُوْنَ (سورہ صف:۲)

O you who believe, why do you say that what you do not? (as-Saff 61:2)

Some people take it to mean that if anyone does not do something then he must not urge others to do it.For instance, if anyone does not give charity then he must not impell other people to give charity; or, if he does not speak the truth then he cannot recommend others to speak the truth. It is wrong to interpret the verse in this manner. The correct meaning of this verse is: "if you do not possess an attribute then do not claim to have that quality in you." Thus, if a person does not offer his Salat with the congregation then he must not say to other people that he observes the congregational prayer; if he is not devout then he must not pretend to others that he is one; if he has not peformed Hajj then he must not tell others that he has performed it. "That which you do not do, why do you claim to have done?" is the meaning of the verse but not "That which you do not do, do not ask other people to do." Often, a man benefits from telling others to do good. When he tells others but does not do it himself then he feels ashamed and feels compelled to do it.

One Who Counsels Must Himself Practice What He Preaches

There is another verse of the Qur'an. Allah addresses the scholars of the Jews and tells them:

اَتَاْمُرُوْنَ النَّاسَ بِالْبِرِّ وَتَنْسَوْنَ اَنْفُسَكُمْ (سورہ بقرہ:۴۴)

Do you enjoin virtue upon mankind and yet

you yourselves forget it. (al Baqarah. 2:44)

When a man recommends someone to do some good he must himself remember and behave accordingly. It is not that because he does not practice he will not preach. In other words, one should not feel hindered from advising anyone if one is not doing what he advises. Our elders have emphasised من حرم شماتة بحبيه "I have not abstained but you do abstain." Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanavi رحمة الله عليه has said "At some times I sense a drawback within myself then I speak on that very topic the next time I deliver a sermon. It is thereby that Allah reforms me of that shortcoming."

Nevertheless, there are two sides to this question. There is one man who does not practice himself but preaches to other people while there is also the man who practices himself and preaches to other people too. Of course, there is a difference in the results of their efforts. As for him who acts and then recommends, Allah blesses his effort so that what he says is digested by his listeners and they are reformed by that. As for the advice that is not preceded by action, the listeners are not very impressed by it. The tongue speaks and rebounds from the ears of his listeners and the speech is not digested by them. Therefore, it is necessary to endeavour and practice too although lack of it does not debar one from advising other people.

When The Mustahab (desirable) Is Neglected, It Is Not Wise To Reproach

We have seen that it is fard to preach to one who neglects the obligatory duties or commits an obvious sin and to 'bid him to the right way and fobid the wrong'. However,. there are certain things that the Shari'ah regards as Mustahab (recommended or preferrable acts) which are not fard or wajib (obligatory). Mustahab deeds are those that fetch the doer rewards but do not make a person sinner if he neglects them: or, the Mustahab are the etiquettes of Shari'ah as explained by the Ulama.The correct procedure is that people should be encouraged to observe the Mustahab but if anyone skips observance he should not be reproached for that. We have no authority to reprimand a person who overlooks the Mustahab or to insist on his performance. However, a teacher, a mentor, a parent or a guardian may surely point out to his student, disciple, child or ward that he should have observed the Mustahab or the etiquette that he omitted previously. As for any other person, one has no right to condemn him for passing over a mustahab act. Some people elevate the Mustahab to the level of wajib and censure those who ignore and overlook their performance. They demand to know why the mustahab was ignored although Allah will not ask anyone on the Day of Resurrection why he had omitted the Mustahab, neither will the angels put the question. These people appropriate to themselves the authority to question other people's behaviour in this regard.

Supplication After The Azan

As an example we may cite the supplication that is made after the Azan which is Mustahab :

اللهم رب هذه الدعوة التامة والصلوة القائمة آت محمدا الوسيلة والفضيلة وابعثه مقاما محمودا الذى وعدته انك لا تخلف الميعاد

"O Allah, Lord of the perfect call and the salah that is to follow grant Muhammad ﷺ the means of approach to you and eminence, and elevate him to the glorious station that you have promised him. Surely, you never fail in (your) promise."

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has prompted us to recite this supplication after every Azan. It is a blessed supplication. We must teach it to our children and house folk and advise them to recite it after Azan. We must also advise other Muslims to pray in these words. But, if anyone does not make this prayer then it is wrong on our part to raise objections or rebuke him. We may only reprimand anyone when an omission involves a fard duty or when there is a commission of sin.

Omission Of An Etiquette does not invite Reproach

We come across some behaviour that is not labelled as Mustahab in Shari'ah, the Qur'an or the Hadith yet some Ulama regard them as Adab (etiquette). For example, some Ulama advise us that when a man washes his hands before eating he should not clean dry them with a towel.They also tell us that we must sit down to eat before the food is laid; if it happens the other way about and the food is laid before we sit down, we have neglected the etiquette. We do not find mention of these etiquettes in the Qur'an or Hadith but the Ulama have told us that these are etiquettes of eating. They do not classify as Mustahab too. So, it is not right on our part if we object to a person who cleans his hands after washing them before he sits to eat, or if he waits for the food to be laid down and then sits down at the table spread to eat; we cannot tell such a person that he has violated the Sunnah or the Shari'ah. These things are neither Sunnah nor Mustahab and it is wrong to censure anyone who skips them. But, we find people raising objections vociferously on flimsy grounds which they should not.

Sitting Cross-legged When Eating Is Permitted

It is not disallowed to sit cross-legged while eating and no sin is attached to it. However, this posture is not as near to humbleness as the squatting posture (sitting on the hip and bending the legs backward at the knees) or sitting on the hips with one leg bent backwards and the other raised on the foot. Therefore, we must accustom ourselves to eat in one of these postures but if anyone cannot sit in this manner or feels more comfortable in the cross-legged posture then it is not a sin. It is wrongly understood by many people that the cross-legged posture is disallowed while eating; these people must realise their mistake and not reproach anyone who sits cross-legged.

It Is Correct To Eat At the Dining Table

Again, it is not disallowed to eat at the dinning table but to sit on the floor while eating is nearer Sunnah and fetches reward because of the imitation of Sunnah. Therefore, we must try, as far as possible, to eat while sitting on the floor.The more we follow the Sunnah the more the blessings and reward. In spite of that, it is not wrong to eat at the dining table and there is no sin in doing so; therefore, we should not rebuke those who sit at the table to eat their meals.

It Is Sunnah To Sit On The Floor To Eat

Tlhe Holy Prophet ﷺ sat on the floor to eat for two reasons. First, much simplicity was observed during those days and there was no concept of chairs and tables, so they sat on the floor. Secondly, there is much humility in eating on the floor and one respects the food as blessings. It is something one may experience oneself by observing his inner feelings in trying both the methods. There is a world of difference in the two methods because eating on the floor arouses a sense of submisiveness, meekness and devotion to Allah These things are not found in eating at the dining table. Therefore, one must make it a habit to eat on the floor but if one faces a situation when table is used then there is no harm in using it and no sin either. So, it is again wrong to oppose the use of table and chairs vehemently as some people are wont to oppose and call its use unlawful for eating.

Provided The Sunnah Is Not Ridiculed

The foregoing reference to eating while being seated on the floor as a Sunnah and preferable and more rewarding is subject to Sunnah being respected. If there is a possibility of anyone making fun of the Sunnah then we must not insist on eating on the floor.

Eating On The Floor In Restaurant

My respected father narrated an incident while he was teaching us once. It was about his visit to Delhi from Deoband with some companions. At Delhi they had to eat their meal but could not find any place so they went to a restaurant. Naturally, food is served on the dining table in a restaurant and two of his companions protested that they would eat on the floor, not at the table. They decided to spread their towels on the floor and order the meal because that was the Sunnah. My respected father advised them not to do so but sit on the chairs and eat at the table. They wished to know why they should give up the Sunnah and opt to sit at the table, and why should they feel ashamed about it. My father explained to them that it was not a question of feeling ashamed or afraid. "The truth is, he said, "that when you will spread the cloth on the floor and ask for food you will be conspicuous and other people may laugh at you and be guilty of deriding the Sunnah. Not only is that a sin but liable to place them into disbelief." May Allah preserve us from that!

An Event To Learn From

My respected father then recalled to them an incident. It was about a very eminent person, Sulayman A'mash. He was the teacher of Imam Abu Hanifah رحمة الله عليه The Books of Hadith are replete with his narrations. A'mash is an Arabic word meaning 'blear-eyed'; one whose eyes are blurred and his eye-lashes drop and whose eyes dazzle because of light. Because he was bleary-eyed, he was called A'mash. He had a student who was lame. He was one of those students who kept himself close to his teacher at all times. Some students have that habit and they are constantly with their teacher. They follow him wherever he goes. This student of A'mash was one like that. Thus when Imam A'mash رحمة الله عليه went to the market, his student A'raj because of the lameness-accompanied him. The people in the market passed remarks at the twain: "Look at that! The bleary-eyed teacher (a'mash) and the lame student (A'raj)! So, Imam A'Mash instructed his student not to follow him when he went to the market-place. The student asked "Why? Why should I not accompany you?" Imam رحمة الله عليه said, "When we go to the market, the people make fun of us, calling out: the A'mash teacher with the A'raj student!" The student put in:

مَالَنَا نُوْجَرُوَيَأْثَمُوْنَ

"We are rewarded for their behaviour while they sin by calling out in that manner. So, we gain thereby and lose nothing."

Imam A'mash رحمة الله عليه explained to him.

نَسْلَم وَيَسْلَمُوْنَ خَيْرًا مِنْ اَنْ نُوْجَرَوَيَأْثَمُوْنَ

"We will be safe and they too will be secure from sinning. That is better than our getting a reward and their committing a sin. It is not obligatory that you accompany me and there is no disadvantage if you do not accompany me. Rather, there is the advantage that these people will be prevented from sinning. So, do not come with me again when I go there".

This is what we mean by understanding religion. On the face of it, the student seemed to say the right thing: If people make fun, let them do it. But if a person has his eyes on the creatures of Allah with compassion, he does not look at their mistakes very much. Rather, he works to protect them from sinning. That is why he disallowed his student from accompanying him. Whenever there is a likelihood of people making more fun, it is better to keep quiet.

A Saying of Hazrat ʿAli رضی اللہ عنہ

The following saying of Sayyidina ʿAli رضی اللہ عنہ is worth remembering:

كَلِّمُوا النَّاسَ بِمَا يَعْرِفُوْنَ اَتُحِبُّوْنَ اَنْ يُّكَذَّبَ اللّٰهُ وَرَسُوْلُـهٗ

"Speak to the people about what they know.

Would you like that they should reject Allah and His Messenger ﷺ?" That is, when you speak to them about religion, speak in a manner that does not arouse in them rebellious tendencies. For instance, we must not talk of religion at an inopportune time. lest our listeners are compelled to deny it. It is not correct to speak of religious topics at such times.

An Incident In The Life Of Maulana Ilyas رحمۃ اللہ علیہ

Every Muslim knows Maulana Ilyas رحمۃ اللہ علیہ. Allah had inspired him with tremendous love for religion and its dispersion. He would not miss an opportunity to talk about religion. Wherever he went, he would give the call and invite people to work for Islam. It is related about him that someone used to visit him regularly and he came to him for many days. But, he had not grown a beard. When he had come for many days, Maulana Ilyas thought that he was well-acquainted so he said to him, "Brother, I wish that you too adopt the Sunnah of the beard." That man felt ashamed on hearing him say that and did not turn up the next day onwards. Maulana Ilyas رحمۃ اللہ علیہ felt very sorry for that and repented to his companions that he had made a mistake and not waited for the proper opportunity. The result of his hasty action was that the man had stopped visiting him. "If he had been coming, at least, he would have heard something about religion regularly. It would have been beneficial." Anyone else looking at it outwardly would have said that if a person does something wrong we must tell him orally because the Prophet ﷺ has said. "If you cannot prevent evil physically, at least, speak against it with your tongue." But, here the oral utterance proved disadvantageous because that man's mind was still not prepared for advice. It is wisdom that chooses the right time for an action and how it should be done. Religious work is not like throwing stones at will, neither is it a duty that one may ignore. The speaker must assess the situation and see what results he might get, and how will his efforts be received. If it is likely that the results would be adverse then it is better to defer the attempt. This deferment also comes under the inability exemption (that the Prophet ﷺ has defined).

Summary

It is not from reading books alone that one knows what to say, when to say, how to say, when to be stern and when mild. These things are learnt by keeping the company of elders. Only when a man has gone through the rough with religious mentors that he can perceive the proper method. When anyone makes a mistake, it is proper to call that to his attention but one must know when it is fard to do so and when not. One must know how to talk. This is the summary of the method of preaching. May Allah make us understand it and may He cause all Muslims to reform through this knowledge. Aameen.

HOW MAY ONE ACHIEVE COMFORT

اما بعد!

عن ابى هريرة رضى الله عنه قال قال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم انظروا الى من هو اسفل منكم ولا تنظروا الى من هو فوقكم فهو اجدر ان لا تزدروا نعمة الله عليكم (صحيح مسلم، كتاب الزهد، باب نمبر ١)

All priase is for Allah. We praise Him, ask for His help and seek His forgiveness. And, we believe in Him and place our trust in Him. We seek refuge in Allah from the evil in our souls and from our mischievous deeds. Whomso Allah guides, none can mislead but whomso He leaves to stray none can guide. and we bear witness that there is no one worthy of worship besides Allah, the Alone, Who has no partner. and we bear witness that our master Muhammad is His servant and Messenger, may Allah shower His blessings on him and on his family and his companions, and may He favour him and give him peace a complete peace, plenty of it.

We have from Hazrat Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہ, he said that the Messenger of Allah said. "Look upon one who is below you in status and do not look upon one who is above you in status. In this way you will not look down upon the blessings of Allah that He has bestowed upon you." {Muslim, Kitb uz Zuhd (piety) Hadith #7070}

Look At Those Lower Than You In Status:.

We have read the Hadith narrated by Sayyidina Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہ that the Messenger of Allah ﷺ has advised us to look at those people who are poorer than us in worldly possessions but not to look at those who are richer than us in worldly possessions. The result will be that we will not regard the blessings of Allah that He has granted us as insignificant and worthless (If we look upon the richer people, those higher than us in status, we will not value the blessings of Allah on us and we will be worried on that account.)

Avoid The Love Of The World

Through this Hadith the Holy Prophet ﷺ has given us a prescription for removing the love of the world from our hearts, and to achieve true comfort in this world. A man may own worldly possessions but he should not have the love of the world in his heart. It is necessary to own worldly possessions because one cannot live without them. If a man does not have food to eat, a home to live in and clothes to wear, how will he subsist? Therefore, these things are necessary. But, we must not make the pursuit of these things the aim of our life and occupy ourselves in that direction day and night. We must not grow its love in our heart. However, this condition may be achieved by contentment. When a man is content, he has the worldly possessions in his hands but he does not love them and does not hanker after them. If a man loves the world, then he occupies himself all the time in thinking of it and there are a hundred things he wants and craves for and he counts what he has and what he should have and how much he has earned and hopes to earn. This is the love of the world that makes one greedy.

How May One Obtain Contentment

There is a Hadith Qudsi that tells us: "If the son of Adam were given a valley of gold, he would love to have a second one; and if he were given the second one, he would love to have a third. Nothing fills the belly of Adam's son except dust."

لا يملأ جوف ابن ادم الا التراب (صحيح بخارى كتاب الرقاق باب مايتقى من فتنة العال حديث ٦٤٣٨)

When he dies and is buried in his grave only then will his belly be filled.

The extraordinary effort that he used to make in the world to amass wealth and possession will go wasted and he will depart from this world empty-handed. However, if Allah grants anyone contentment then that fills his belly; the prescription to obtain contentment is found in the Hadith of the Prophet that we read earlier in this essay. Those who seek success in this world and the Hereafter must use that prescription and those who do not use it will suffer discontent and worry all their life. The prescription of the Prophet ﷺ is that we must not look upon those enjoying a standard of living higher than our's for that will prompt us to crave for the things they have and create in us a sense of deprivation. We must rather look upon those who are on a level lower than we so that we will realise how much less they have and this will prompt us to be grateful to Allah for the nice things He has given us. Looking at those at a higher level will make us greedy for the things that we do not have and we will compete with them for those things and feel jealous. This will give rise to avarice and hatred. We will violate the rights of Allah and His slaves in the process. Contentment and the related gratitude to Allah is a great blessing of which many people are deprived. There is no way to obtain peace other than being contented.

Desires Of Worldly Things Are Unending

As for the world we live in, as yet no such man has lived on it who has said, "I have had all I wanted!" This is because desires are unlimited, unending. If a man gets even what Qarun (Korah) had, he will covet for more. The desires of the world are such that the end of one is linked to the begining of the other. An Arab poet Mutanbi has said very wise things. He has said a very true thing about this world:

وَمَا قَضٰى اَحَدٌ مِنْهَا لُبَانَتَهٗ

وَمَا انْتَهٰى اَرَبٌ اِلَّا اِلٰى اَرَبٖ

There hasn't been in the world yet one who has obtained all the pleasures of this world. It is with this world that as one desire is accomplished another crops up!"

The World's Affairs Are Never Fulfilled

We can see that in the story of an unemployed man who seeks an employment and gets one. Once he gets that he looks around and finds other people getting more salary so he wishes that he could earn as much as they. Then he finds some people getting more than him so he aims at that and attains that figure. It goes on in this manner all his life but he will never be peaceful. We read this story in the life of every person today.

The Affairs Of the World Are Never Over:

No one has ever completed the worldly tasks except he who has understood the reality-the Prophets علیہم السلام and their successors who saw the world for what it was worth and who toiled for its possessions only that much as was necessary. They knew that they need not set themselves to amass much wealth unless Allah bestowed on them through His favour. They always looked upon those who were lower than them, not higher in possesssions.

In Religious Affairs One Must Look At The Elevated Ones

In yet another Hadith, we see the saying of the Prophet ﷺ: "In the affairs of the world, look at those who are lower than you in status. Look at him who is not blessed with a favour that you enjoy, and thank Allah for His favours on you. Do not look at those who are at a level higher than you. But, in matters pertaining to religion look at those who enjoy a higher status,.Look at him who is more involved in religious duties while you do not do that much. This will prompt you to take more religious work and create in you a zeal for deeper involvement." So, look at one who is superior to you in religious matters but at one who is inferior to you in worldly matters so that you improve your religious life and your worldly living. This is one of the wise suggestions of the Prophet ﷺ.

An Incident with Abdullah Bin Mubarak رحمة الله عليه.

Abdullah bin Mubarak رحمة الله عليه was an eminent juirist, scholar of Hadith and Sufi of high calibre. He was a contemporary of Imam Abu Hanifah رحمة الله عليه., and his student too. Before he turned to religion he was a very rich and free-thinking man. He had many properties, including gardens but he was not interested in learning or religion. He was an alcoholic much interested in singing and dancing. Among his gardens, he also had apple gardens. Once he took his friends to one such garden when the apples were ready to pick. There they had plenty of food and wine together with the fresh apples, and music. He himself was a good musician and played the musical instruments very well. They had satiated themselves with food and were deeply intoxicated, the atmosphere was pleasent, 'Abdullah bin Mubarak رحمة الله عليه had a guitar in his hands and he played it. Suddenly he fell asleep. When he woke up, he still had the guitar in his hands. He began to play it again but it would not work. It did not produce any sound. So, he fiddled with the threads and wires and tried again but it did not emit any sound. He tried it a third time after some more fiddling with it. This time it did work but, instead of producing music, it reproduced the sound of the following verse of the Qur'an:-

اَلَمْ يَاْنِ لِلَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْٓا اَنْ تَخْشَعَ قُلُوْبُهُمْ لِذِكْرِ اللّٰهِ وَمَا نَزَلَ مِنَ الْحَقِّ.....(الحديد: ١٦)

Has not the time yet come for those who believe, and their hearts should be humble for the remembrance of Allah and the Truth (al Hadid. 57:16)

The guitar gave out this sound. When Allah wishes to guide any of His servants then He provides such unseen means too. The moment Abdullah bin Mubarak رحمة الله عليه heard this voice, his heart accepted the Truth, and he answeed the words of the verse بلیٰ یارب قدان {Surely, my Lord! It has arrived!"} Then and there, he repented and gave up singing and wine, and felt an urge to seek knowledge,.He began acquiring it and became such a great scholar that he was regarded an authority on Hadith. He had the honour of being a student of Imam Abu Hanifa رحمة الله عليه. He is cited in Hadith and jurisprudence and is placed as a great Sufi.

He Attains An Eminent Position;

Yet another incident is related about him. One evening Harun asl Rashid and his wife were sitting in their palace when there was loud commotion from the outskirts of the city, its fortification. The king feared that an enemy had attacked the city and he despatched someone to investigate. The man reported back that Abdullah bin Mubarak رحمة الله عليه was expected to arrive that day and many people had gone to the outskirts to welcome him. When he arrived, he happened to sneeze. When he sneezed, he said الحمد لله {Praise belongs to Allah}. Those who had assembled to welcome him said in deference to the prescribed response {May Allah have mercy on you}. The spontaneous and simultaneous response from all the people together raised a loud sound and it was "that sound that your Majesty had heard." When the wife of Harun al Rashid heard this, she said to her husband, "Harun! you think of yourself as a great king who rules over half the world! But, the truth is that royalty is the right of these people who are sovereign in reality because they rule over the hearts of men. They were not driven there by force but they assembled there from love of Abdullah bin Murarak to receive him in such large numbers." This is the position Allah had granted him after he had reformed and turned over a new leaf.

The Comfort that Abdullah Bin Mubarak رحمة الله عليه Received

Abdullah bin Mubarak رحمة الله عليه has said that there was a time in his life when he frequently stayed with the rich people and moved about and ate and drank with them. But perhaps no one else was more sad than he was because which ever friend he visited, he found him more affluent than him. He often took pride in his animal that he rode but when he encountered a friend he realised that his own animal was inferior. It was the same with his dress. He would buy the best of the garments and wear them but always found his friends had better garments on them. He said, "Wherever I went, I found my friends had superior things than I had. Someone had a better house, someone better clothes, someone a better animal to ride.....Then, I took up the company of those people who were not very rich but were men of ordinary means. The result was that I found comfort I had lacked all along. This was because whoever I went to, I found my condition better than his-my house, my conveyance, my clothes....I thank Allah for that, for having blessed me with better and abundant bounties." This is known as contentment. If a man is not content then he will run after worldly pleasures all his life and will never receive comfort.

Comfort Is A Blessing Of Allah

We say that because comfort is not the name of money and riches. Rather, comfort is the condition of the heart that only Allah the Exalted grants to whom He pleases. "You may build large houses, hire many servants, have at your disposal large limousines, but, with all those luxuries, when you lie down on your bed at night, sleep eludes you although the bed on which you lie is the best available, the mattress the most superior and the pillows most ideal. You keep awake all night, now turning to the right, now to the left. You have to take sleeping pills to induce sleep but the pills lose their power after some time. We see here that all the means of comfort are available but none of these-the palatial house, cars, wealth, air-condictioners-none, can help get the most wanted, yet elusive, sleep. These means are ineffective in removing restlessness. Only Allah can help remove it. On the other side there is the labourer who has neither a worthy bed to sleep on nor a proper room yet when he goes to sleep he wakes up after eight hours of sound sleep. Now, decide for yourself who is comfortable, the labourer or the rich man? Remember, only Allah grants comfort. The means to comfort cannot provide it. Comfort is not something that may be bought although the means of comfort may be bought at will.

An Eye-Opening Event

Let me narrate to you my own experience of buying an airconditioner for myself. The first step was buying it and when the huge amount was paid for it, I was told that the wiring in my house was weak and needed replacement. When that was done at some expense,the problem of voltage fluctuation was faced and a stabilizer was procured to protect the airconditioner, but that did not help and I was told that a stronger stabilizer was needed to run the air-conditioner safely. In this way, about six months were spent before the airconditioner could be commissioned. I recalled the poetry of Mutanabbi

وما انتهى ارب الا الى ارب

There is no end to a desire except that it leads to another.

I spent my money and put in personal effort but could not obtain the elusive comfort because that ease and comfort and peace is only granted by Allah. Money cannot buy it.

Let us remember that as long as man does not be content and as long as he does not be grateful to Allah for His blessing, he cannot be comfortable and peaceful no matter how much he spends for it money and effort. The only method of achieving comfort and peace is to follow the advice of Sayyidina Muhammad, the Messenger of Allah ﷺ that we should look upon the one lower than us in status and not upon the one higher in status. and then be grateful to Allah.

The Adverse Effects Of Looking At the Higher Status

In following this advice, contentment is achieved. But, if we disregard it and look upon those higher than us then we will always remain grieved and sorrowful. At some time or other that will give rise to jealousy because when a person becomes greedy for the things of this world, he feels jealous of those who have what he does not have. It is a necessary consequence of greed that the greedy person envies him who overtakes him and he feels deprived. The next growth after jealousy is hatred and hostility and enemity. We can see this today in our society. There is a mad race to overtake one another and, as a result, the participants do not even care to distinguish between the lawful and the unlawful. Once a person decides to get something then he does not care how it comes to him, he will use all means available to him to get it, fair or unfair. He will pay bribe or receive it, he will cheat, adulterate, and he will do all the unlawful things to get what he wants. This is because he is not content. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said, therefore, "Be content. Look upon him who is lower than you in status.".

How To Cure Greed & Jealousy

This thing is stated in another Hadith in a different set of words:

اذا نظر احدكم الى من فضل عليه فى المال والخلق فلينظر الى من هو اسفل منه ممن فضل عليه (مسلم، كتاب الزهد، باب نمبر ١)

When one of you looks at one who stands at a higher level than you in regard to wealth and physical structure he should also see one who stands at a lower level than him in regard to these things (in which he stands at a higher level as compared to him). (Muslim, Book of Purification).

We had been told in the Hadith previously that we should not look upon one higher than us in status, meaning that we must not make up our minds and look upon him attentively. But it is obvious that man, living in this world, cannot avoid eyeing a person who enjoys a higher standard of living, a richer man, because he often lives with him and comes in contact with him in his day to day affairs. Thus, when this happens and we see anyone richer,or having a better physique, then we must atonce see or think of another person who is weaker than us in wealth and comfort and body. For example, a person may be richer than us or more beautiful or strong or healthier, and we happen to observe him then we must atonce think of another person who is poorer than us and less comfortable, less beautiful and weaker in health. This will curb the growth of greed and jealousy in us on aspiring to attain the first person's level while the second is at a lower status.

That Person Ruins Himself

The Messenger of Allah ﷺ has said in yet another Hadith.

تعس عبد الدينار والدرهم والقطيفة الخميصة ان اعطى رضى وان لم يعط لم يرض۔

He who is a slave of dinar, dirham and valuable clothes and striped sheets will be ruined. If he is given, he is pleased but if he is not given he is displeased (Bukhari Book 81 Chapter10 Hadith 6435. and Muslim).

While dinar and dirham are nomeclatures of coins of gold and silver, it refers to anyone who is after money, and the beautiful expensive things of the world. Such a person ruins himself. To be a slave of something is to occupy oneself in the pursuit of that thing. Such a person is so deeply involved that he neglects the injunctions of Allah. If he is given something he will be happy but if he is not given anything he will not be happy. This behaviour is quite different from the behaviour of the man who is content and pleased with whatever Allah has given him; he thanks Allah when he gets whatever he earns from his lawful effort within the lawful limits. He does not complain on not receiving anything that any other person might own.

All these Ahadith call upon us to refrain from loving the material things of this world. The Holy Prophet ﷺ had made his Companions رضی اللہ عنہم understand very well that the world was meaningless and unreal and its possessions were not something that anyone should run after day and night and worry himself for that. They had learnt that they should occupy in worldly activities and pursuits only to the extent it was necessary.

Ashab us Suffah

Hazrat Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہ has narrated the following Hadith:

لقد رأيت سبعين من اهل الصفة ما منهم رجل عليه رداء اما ازار اما كساء قد ربطوا فى اعناقهم فمنها ما يبلغ نصف الساقين ومنها ما يبلغ الكعبين فيجمعه بيده كراهية ان ترى عورته (بخارى، فضل جوع)

Indeed, I have seen seventy of the Ahl us-Suffah none of whom had more than a sheet of cloth to cover him, neither trousers nor a small blanket. They tied the sheet to their necks that reached half way down someone's shines, or someone's ankles so that they had to gather the sheet lest their private parts be exposed (Bukhari).

Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہ describes the state of the as-habus- Suffah. They were those companions who had relinquished all their affairs and devoted themselves to study religion for which purpose they kept close to the Holy Prophet ﷺ. They were called the ashab us Suffah. Those people who have had the good fortune to visit Madinah might have seen a platform in the Masjid Nabawi that is called suffah. These companions stayed at this suffah day and night. It was their school, college and university where they were taught by the Holy Prophet ﷺ. There was no syallabus for studies, no timings for the classes, no prescribed books. Whenever the Holy Prophet ﷺ arrived and spoke of something, they memorised that. They also listened carefully to what the Prophet ﷺ said in answer to any question that may have been asked by someone, and then they memorised the question and the answer. They observed the behaviour of the Prophet ﷺ and how he dealt with different people and then they remembered it. They devoted their life to this task and they were Ashab us Suffah or Ahl-us-Suffah. They were the first students in the history of Islam and Suffah was the first Madarasah in the history of Islam and it was working on a platform or a dais.

The Condition Of the Ahl us-Suffah

Hazrat Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہ was also one of them. In this Hadith, he narrates the condition of these people and says, "I saw seventy of them none of whom had a proper pair of clothing to cover their body. Some of them had only one sheet of cloth that they tied to their necks and it dangled to their calves half way down their legs, or some had only a pair of trousers but nothing to cover the upper portion of their body. Those who had tied the sheet to their necks had to hold it to prevent it from uncovering their bodies and they had to walk very carefully." This was the state in which these Companions رضی اللہ عنہم stayed close to the Prophet ﷺ to gain knowledge. If they had chosen, they could have amassed worldly possessions for they had the ability and the intellect to do that. Allah had blessed them with the tact and understanding like others but they did not incline towards that life. Whatever they received of the bare necessities of life, they showed contentment. In those days there was a pillar on the dais of the Ahl us Suffah and the symbol is found to this day to commemorate the original pillar. People used to place bunches of dates on the pillar from which the ashab us Suffah ate dates whenever they felt hunger. It was their diet.

The Extreme Hunger Of Abu Húrayrah رضی اللہ عنہ

Hazrat Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہ tells of his own hunger that he used to remain in the company of the Holy Prophet ﷺ and often would fall down at the door of the Masjid Nabawi worn down from sheer hunger. People would think that he was having an epileptic fit and would pass over his neck because it was believed in those times that anyone suffering from epilepsy would recover if someone passed over his neck placing his foot there. He adds, "By Allah! Neither had I epileptic fits nor did I suffer from convulsions or unconsciousness. It was hunger, very sever, anyone that made me very weak and unable to rise.". This is how Hazrat Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہ lived and went on to collect and transmit to us five thousand three hundred and sixty-four Ahadith, the highest number of Ahadith transmitted by any person.

This is how the Noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم endured hunger, lack of proper clothing and food, yet preserved for us the religion of Islam. They have departed and we are much obliged to them for handing down to us the religion in such detail. May Allah elevate their ranks, Aameen!

The Method Of the Prophet's ﷺ Training

The Holy Prophet ﷺ had moulded the temperament of his companions رضی اللہ عنہم in such a way that they no longer craved for worldly possessions nor loved its life but only had the bare necessities with them. Each of them thought of obtaining the favours of Allah in the Hereafter. How did the Prophet ﷺ do it? Let us see the examples of his teachings. Hazrat Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہ narrates this incident: One day, I came out of my house in the afternoon only to find Abu Bakr and Umar رضی اللہ عنہما moving about on the street. I wondered why they were there at that time so I asked them the purpose of their being there. They let me know that they were hungry and had nothing to eat at home so they were looking for work as labourers and earn something that might buy them food. After a little while, the Holy Prophet ﷺ also came out and asked them, "Why are you outside your houses?" They said:

مااخرجنا الا الجوع

O Messenger of Allah ! It is hunger that has driven us out.

The Prophet ﷺ revealed that he too was outside the house for the same reason. He then took them to the gardens of one of his Campanions but learnt that he was not there. His wife was there. She learnt that the Messenger of Allah ﷺ and Abu Bakar and Umar رضی اللہ عنہما. had come to their garden and her happiness knew no bounds. She said to herself that she was the happiest woman that day. The Prophet ﷺ was their guest. She said to him, "Messenger of Allah! Do allow me a little time that I may slaughter a goat for you." He said, "You may do that but mind that you do not slaughter one that gives milk". She said that she will slaughter a goat that does not yield milk. Thus, she slaughtered a goat and presented to her valued guests its flesh, fresh dates from the garden and cold water. The Prophet ﷺ and his Companions رضی اللہ عنہم ate the food. After they had eaten, the Prophet ﷺ said, "Allah has favoured us today with excellent food and drink under the shades of the trees. These are His blessings about which the Qur'an says :

وَلَتُسْئَلُنَّ يَوْمَئِذٍ عَنِ النَّعِيْمِ

That day you will be asked concerning these blessings.

Allah will say, "We had bestowed on you these favours, how did you spend them?"

You Will Be Asked Concerning The Blessings

This is how the Prophet ﷺ trained them. They were very hungry and then had something to eat. They are told not to make the food and comfort they received as an ideal but to realise that these were blessings of Allah about which they would be liable to recknoning on the Day of Resurrection, how they acquired and used it. This was the manner of thinking of all the Companions رضی اللہ عنہم.

Death Will Come Earlier

One day the Messenger of Allah ﷺ saw a man repairing his hut. He went near the man and asked him what he was doing. He said that the hut needed repairs and he was attending to it. The Prophet ﷺ did not forbid him but told him only this much مَا اَرَى الْاَمْرَ اِلَّا اَعْجَلَ مِنْ ذٰلِكَ {I do not see death except that it is earlier than that}. The moment when man will stand before Allah is approaching so fastthat if one thought of it one would not worry about repairs to one's house. The aim in telling that is to make one realise that his house in this world is not a permanent abode but he had to travel further. The house here in this world is a stage in a man's journey and he must make only as much arrangements here as one would in a jouney.This is the method employed by the Holy Prophet ﷺ in training his Companions رضی اللہ عنہم.

Is It Difficult To Observe Religious Duties?

After reading these Ahadith, we sometimes begin to think that it is beyond us to observe our duties in religion. We cannot do what Abu Hurayrah , Abu Bakr and Umar or the Ahl us Suffah رضی اللہ عنہم did- we cannot endure hunger for days together or clothe ourselves with one sheet of cloth or not repair our house, we cannot perceive the approach of the last Day at the same time as we take up repairs to our home. Let us remember that these events are not recalled to create a feeling of despair but our aim by narrating them is to show that the Holy Prophet, Muhammad ﷺ trained his Companions رضی اللہ عنہم in such a way that they may attain the highest form of conduct and thinking. It is not that everyone can attain that level to receive salvation but ability to act and think varies from person to person and none of the Commands of Allah requires man to go beyond his ability. 'There is a saying in Urdu دیتے ہیں ظرف قدح خوار دیکھ کر that may be translated: Allah deals with every person in accordance with his ability.

Wish to be in The Times Of The Prophet ﷺ

We sometimes hope that we had lived in the times of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. We would have been with the Companions رضی اللہ عنہم. and blessed with the company of the Prophet ﷺ whom we would have seen. We would have participated in battles with him. But, this is part of Allah's plan that He did not create us in that period. Given our current ability and aptitude we might have been with Abu Jahl or Abu Lahb if we were born then. It was the spirit and ability of the Companions رضی اللہ عنہم that they extended support to the Holy Prophet ﷺ in those difficult times. However, our blessed Prophet ﷺ has shown us the path as to eveyone else-born upto the Day of Resurrection on which we must walk to the best of our ability shredding from our hearts the love of the world and greed for its possessions. We are asked to live in the world without loving it or wanting its comforts and pleasures. We must seek its comforts without greed and love in a lawful way and shun the unlawful path. It is only that much which is enough to keep aloof from the world.

Maulana Thanavi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ Was A revivalist of his times

In this era, Maulana Ashraf ali Thanavi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ was a true heir of the Holy Prophet ﷺ and a revivalist of his times. He demonstrated to us in his life-time what we can do within our ability and what we can avoid. May be no one else might explain that better than him. Thus he had outlined for us a principle about how much we may involve oursleves in this world and to what extent we should obtain its possession and how we must conduct ourselves while we are alive. Actually, he had described this principle for acquiring a building a house but we may apply it to all fields of our life.

Four Reasons For Having A House

He said that a man may acquire a house for one of the four reasons. The first is for residence purposes. It is a house where one may spend the night and protect himself from sun, rain, cold and heat. These things may be had in a hut too. It is permissible to have a house with this thing in mind. The second reason could be comfort. Thus he would want a house that serves the foregoing aims and also provides comfort. In a hut or a make-shift house,. a man may live one way or the other but he will not be comfortable there. Rain water might leak in or the sun might heat up the house. To avoid such discomfort, he may build a strong house and that too is permissible. There is no sin in that. The third reason is luxury-or decoration in the house. A man builds a house suitable for his living but the walls are not plastered and the house is not painted. He has the house that is comfortable but not luxurious.When anyone enters it, he does not feel happy. If he paints the house and decorates it somewhat then there is no sin. Allah has allowed him to do that too provided he does that to please himself. There is a fourth reason that prompts anyone to acquire a house and that is ostentatious display. He has a house that allows him to live comfortably and some personal happiness, but he wants to renovate it in a way that prompts other people to describe its beauty and laud his refined tastes and realise his richness. Ths is disallowed and unlawful. Any alteration or renovation that prompts other people to call him a wealthy peson and give him a status higher than themselves then that is unlawful. The gist of what we have said is that one is permitted to build a house to live in, adopt it to provide comfort to him and decorate it to please him but it is unlawful to renovate it so that other people may praise him. Thus, anything that is acquired with an exhibitionist view is disallowed.

The Correct Meaning Of Contentment

The foregoing example and explanations should make the meaning of contentment clear. It means that a man should be pleased at whatever Allah has given him. It does not preclude him from hoping to remedy a shortcoming in his house through proper and lawful means and the repair in that case would classify under comfort. It is not greed. Also, if a man has a good house but wants to improve its looks in his own eyes by adding greenery so that it pleases him then it is not being over-zealous or greedy provided he uses lawful means to attain his goal. But although his house is good and comfortable yet he feels that other people are not impressed with it or his house is not upto the standard of other houses in his locality then it is unlawful if he renovates it. This is because he is driven by demonstrative motives to make it showy and pleasing to other people who may praise and exalt him; it is not within the defination of contentment. If anyone renovates his house through unlawful means then too it is forbidden whether he takes bribe, cheats other people or violates their rights.

Attain The Lowest Rank At Least

The examples of the behaviour of the Companions رضی اللہ عنہم show that they were people of a very high calibre. If we cannot attain their standard we must, at least, aim at the lowest rank. This is the rank that Maulana Thanavi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ has described. We can attain that rank only if we are convinced of the fleeting nature of this life and of the need to prepare ourselves for the Hereafter. Man plans for years together, although he does not know that he might depart from this world the very next day. It is just like a flash that man departs from this life. Therefore, he must refrain from scheming long-term plans but remain content with the bare necessities of life. This contentment will fetch him from Allah comfort in this world and peace in the next. The way to get that is to follow the advice of the Prophet ﷺ, "Look upon those below you and be grateful to Allah. Don't look at those higher than you in status because there is no limit to the high status."

The Case of a Jew

Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه has recorded the case of a Jew who had amassed much wealth. He had stored gold and silver and appointed a guard over the stores. One day, he took his personal keys and went to the stores unknown to the guard to see whether the guard is honest or not. Without the guard knowing it, he opened the stores and examined his treasures. There, finding the door unlocked, the guard re-locked it from outside. When the Jew had finished his examination, he came to the door but found it locked from outside. He shouted from inside for someone to open it for him but his voice did not carry through. The guard never heard him and the man died inside among his gold and silver from hunger and thirst. His treasure not enough to satiate his hunger or quench his thirst, but was the cause of his terrible death. Allah has said about such people

إِنَّمَا يُرِيْدُ اللهُ لِيُعَذِّبَهُمْ بِهَا فِي الْحَيٰوةِ الدُّنْيَا..... (سورة التوبه:٥٥)

Allah intends only to chastise them in the life of this world..... (at Tawbah, 9:55)

Allah punishes some of those who are worldly minded in this very world through its own means. To preserve oneself from the chastisement he must refrain from looking upon those higher than him in worldly wealth but must look upon those lower than him, and show gratitude to Allah. However, he may obtain his bare necessities keeping himself within proper limits and as a whole, he must cease to work day and night restlessly to amass the wealth and treasures of the world.

The Case Of A Trader:

Shaikh Sa'di رحمة الله عليه has narrated a story in Gulistan. He was on one of his travels and was spending the night at the house of a trader who did not let him sleep all night by bragging about himself and his business stories. He told him of his businesses in diffeent lands and his shops at various places and the wares he sold. He informed Shaikh Sa'di what he imported and exported. In this manner he continued to speak night long and said, "All my desires have been fulfilled and my business is prospering. I have got whatever I wanted. I have only one more desire and I intend to travel just once more. Pray for me that I am successful for after that I will be content and restrict myself all my remaining life at my shop".

Shaikh Sa'di asked him what his last desire was. He answered that he wished to carry Persian Sulphur to China where it would fetch a good price. From China he would carry chinaware to Rome from where he would take cloth to India. From there he would buy iron for Syria."I will buy glass there and sell it in Yemen. Then, I will return to Persia with Yemeni cloth.". In short, he had made a very ambitious plan of travel and trade, and asked Shaikh Sa'di to pray for him. He assured him that thereafter he would be content and bind himself to his shop all his life. Shaikh Sa'di then said to him:

آن شیدستی که در صحرائے غور
بار سالارے بیفتاد از ستور
گفت چشم تنگ دنیا دار را
یا قناعت پر کند یا خاک گور.

He related to the trader the story of a big merchant. In a desert, the merchandise of this trader lay on the ground fallen from his camel that lay dead on a side. On the other side, the merchant lay on the earth dead. His merchandise seemed to say, "The narrow outlook of a worldly man is satisfied only through contentment or the grave! There is no third way to satisfy it." (Gulistan Sa'di,Story 23 P-119)

Worldly Possessions Can Turn Into Assets For The Hereafter

Shaikh Sa'di رحمة الله عليه has commented thereafter that when man is dictated by worldly desires then he does not think of anythng else. It is this love of the world that we are asked to eschew. If a person is not tied down in the love of the world and is also blessed by Allah with riches to which he is not much attached so he continues to obey Allah and spend his wealth in Allah's cause then not only does he gain Paradise through it but his wealth is also an asset for him in the Hereafter. But when his wealth stops him from his religious duties then this person is said to be in love with the world.

How May Love Of The World Be Lessened

Man must give a little time to contemplate on his negligence so that he softens his love for the world and replaces it with love for the Hereafter. He must contemplate how day and night he is disregarding death, the time of recknoning, possibility of reward and punishment and the Hereafter. Man must take out some time to ponder and think that he has to die. What will happen then? How will he fare before Allah? The questions that will be asked and the replies that he will give. He must make it a daily practice to contemplate in this manner. Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه used to say that if anyone contemplates on this line every day then he will sense within a few weeks Insha Allah that his love for the world is dwindling.

He Was Given All The World

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in a Hadith

مَنْ اَصْبَحَ مِنْكُمْ آمِنًا فِيْ سِرْبِهٖ مُعَافًا فِيْ جَسَدِهٖ عِنْدَهٗ قُوْتُ يَوْمِهٖ فَكَاَنَّمَا خِيْزَتْ لَهُ الدُّنْيَا (ترمذی، ابو اب الزهد، باب ماجاء فی الزهاد فی الدنیا)

The one among you, who wakes up in the morning peaceful in his house, sound in his body and having food for the day, is as one who is given the world with all its possessions (Tirmizi).

(i) The person who wakes up in the morning in his house fearless with no possibility of harm from an enemy or an oppressor, (ii) who has no pain in his body but is healthy with no illness, and (iii) who has food with him for the day. The person who has these three things is one who is given the world with all its possessions. Therefore, anyone who has these things has his needs fulfilled and he must be grateful to Allah for that. He must not show ingratitude.

Be Grateful For These Blessings

This Hadith encourages us to do two things. The first is to make it a habit to thank Allah always, and to avoid being ungrateful. It is very wrong on our part to show ingratitude. We enjoy numerous blessings of Allah in so many different ways yet when we face anything against our temperament we forget the blessings on us and become ungrateful. We do not endure minor difficulties. This behaviour is wrong because the Holy Prophet ﷺ has said that if anyone gets the three things (mentioned above) he has got everything in the world. If we do not get more than that then we must not complain and be ungrateful. The position is that these days instead of being grateful most people respond with "We carry along," or "The time passes on," when they are asked how they are. May Allah protect us and preserve us from being ungrateful. These words mean "Allah has not blessed me with any favour and I am surrounded with difficulties but I am facing this situation boldly." The true method is that if anyone asks someone how he is then he must recall the favours of Allah on him and thank Him, saying الحمدلله {Praise be to Allah} "I am thankful to Him for His blessings on me." If anyone faces a trying situation then he must pray to Allah, "O Allah! You have bestowed on me innumerable blessings and the difficulty that I am facing is also a kind of blessing. But, I am weak and cannot bear it. O Allah! Remove it through Your mercy." This is what he must say and not that he is living in difficulty.

Do Not Devise Ambitious Plans

Those of us who find it difficult to live their lives smoothly are to blame themselves because they chalk out ambitious plans for the future. They conceive for themselves large houses, beautiful cars, a retinue of servants, a hefty bank balance and luxuries. They imagine a utopian life for themselves. Naturally, they cannot achieve the target they set for themselves and then they become ungrateful and complain.The foregoing Hadith tells us clearly that we are wrong to chalk out ambitious plans for ourselves because if we have the three things then we have everything. The Prophet ﷺ has said that if a man has peace in his house, a healthy body, and guarantee of the day's food for himself and his family then he has everything the world can give. If anyone tells himself that these three things by themselves are enough-then when he gets more, he will thank Allah and say "I was not entitled to that but You gave that to me through Your mercy." But, if he does not get more than those three things then he will not be ungrateful in the least, because he has made up his mind that he has had enough, and that is all he craves for. Anyway, it is our fault that we draw up extraordinary imaginative plans and then grumble in dissatisfaction when they do not materialise.

Do Not Worry Much for The Next Day.

When we hear and read the saying of the Prophet ﷺ that if we have nourishment for the day we have everything in the world, a question arises in our minds, "What of the next day? and, what after that? The truth is that this Hadith emphasises that we do not know whether we will see the next day and if we do, then the Master who has given us today will bless us with his benevolence always. Allah has said very explicitly:

وَمَا مِنْ دَآبَّةٍ فِى الْاَرْضِ اِلَّا عَلَى اللهِ رِزْقُهَا وَيَعْلَمُ مُسْتَقَرَّهَا وَمُسْتَوْدَعَهَا(سورۂ ھود 6)

> And there is not a creature on the earth but upon Allah rests its sustenance, and He knows its dwelling place and its repository. (11:6)

Thus, Allah has taken upon Himself the sustenance of every creature and He knows where it lives so He will cause its sustenance to be delivered to it. Therefore, we are required to work and trust in Him and He will provide us with nourishment. Let us do that and thank Allah for whatever we have with us today. Allah has promised those who thank Him that He will grant them more. لَئِن شَكَرْتُمْ لَأَزِيدَنَّكُمْ {If you give thanks,certainly I will give you move} (surah Ibrahim, 14:7)

Peace Is Found In Contentment

This Hadith also teaches us that in contentment lies peace and security. Contentment is satisfaction with whatever Allah has given us after we have adopted lawful means for livelihood. We must not covet something more because there is no other way to be happy in this world. A man may amass wealth and build palatial houses but he cannot be peaceful if he is not content. If he has all the imaginable riches, he cannot buy peace but if he has the asset of contentment then he will be happy with the slightest amount of food and the fulfilment of the bare necessities will bring him peace and satisfaction. This statement will be found correct by anyone who experiments it.

How Do Rich Fare

We are accustomed to measure everything in terms of worldly standards. Thus, when a poor man looks at a rich contemporary and the way he conducts himself getting what he likes, the poor man supposes that the richer man is very happy and very fortunate. He considers himself deprived and longs for a like richness. But, he does not know the facts. He does not know if the rich man is really peaceful and happy. There are many affluent men whom other people may take to be very happy and carefree, but, because they come to me with their problems, I know that looks are deceptive. They have their problems. Outsiders cannot realise what a terrible life they lead. Many rich men have come to me and lamented, "Perhaps, we had not received this wealth! May be, we would have been more peaceful without it."

Money cannot Buy Peace

We have seen, therefore, that peace and comfort do not necessarily go with money. These things are bestowed on us by Allah. If He wills He may grant peace and comfort to a man of meagre means while He may not let the affluent have it. Therefore, how long we shall race after the world's riches? When will we stop planning utopion schemes? The Prophet ﷺ has told us, therefore, that we must realise that the world is not a place to live for ever. If one gets the necessities of life then it is enough and if he is content with that then he will be peaceful but if he is not content then let him run after wealth and riches but he will not earn peace and security. We have the example of some multi-millionaires. They need not work for more money and if they are idle, their wealth will not exhaust all the rest of their lives yet we see that they do not call it a day but go on working for more money. They use all means, lawful and unlawful, to further their business and increase their wealth. This carries on in spite of the fact that they do not know where they will use their money.

The Costliest Place In the World Is In Los Angeles

When I had visited the United States, one of my friends took me to a Shopping area in Los Angeles and told me that it was the costliest of the shopping markets in the world. He said, "Everything here is costlier than anywhere else." When I asked him how much costlier, he gave me an example, "A pair of socks here costs two thousand dollars." (About eighty-five thousand Rupees!)." A tie is worth three thousand dollars, and a man's suit is somewhere between ten thousand to twenty thousand dollars." There were more expensive things. He showed me a shop in which there was an enclosure that a client could only enter in the company of the owner. There, the owner would advise the client which suit was most suitable for him and would charge him ten thousand dollars for his advice, the cost of the purchase being additional. Prince Charles once sought his advice and was told to see him after six months.

The Other Side Of Affluence

The truth is that man has not given up his greed for wealth, for abundance. When he amasses it, he does not know where to use it. So, various ways are invented to use the accumulated wealth. While wealth is being wasted in this manner by some people, there are other people who beg for pennies too! We had just drove down the road, not more then a mile, when we found different people begging for money at various traffic lights. One such beggar approached us as we stopped at the red light and my friend told him that he did not carry any money then but the beggar insisted that he was not asking for much, he simply wanted cents because he was very hungry. This is the obverse side of affluency that buys a pair of socks for two thousand dollars. There should be a limit to accumulating wealth. Let a person first spend what he has with him before he thinks of earning more. Greed knows no bounds. It is known as جوع البقر (Ju'al Baqar) hunger of the Cow (that always munches)- hunger that never satiates, thirst that is never quenched, no matter how much one eats and drinks!

The Itching Hands

One day, one of our very rich man who is regarded among the few eminent people of our country, visited me. While we were talking about different things, I remarked that Allah had blessed him with much wealth and riches. "It is the mercy and blessing of Allah on you so that people are enviable of you. Let this wealth be an asset for you in the Hereafter by putting it to good use. Besides, now that Allah has bestowed on you with so much wealth and you have earned plenty, repent to Him and keep away from interest dealings." He listened to me and then entered on a discussion on interest dealings and wished to know how could it be unlawful. "One cannot progress in this life without interest dealings, or do any business." I tried to explain to him the facts and finally he seemed to agree. "But," he said, "I cannot stop the itch within me. It does not cease. No matter how much my business expands. The result of this urge is that my family life stands demolished and I have no peace at home nor comfort with my children. There is a bickering within the family. I have plenty of wealth but don't find comfort and peace."

Qarun, (Korah) The Richest Man

Allah has said in the Qur'an about Qarun (Korah):

وَاٰتَيْنٰهُ مِنَ الْكُنُوْزِ مَآ اِنَّ مَفَاتِحَهٗ لَتَنُوْٓاُ بِالْعُصْبَةِ اُولِى الْقُوَّةِ (سورہ القصص:۷۶)

The very keys of them would have weighed down a company of men endowed with strength (al Qasas. 28:76)

The keys alone of his treasures were so heavy that a group of people used to carry them along. It was not within the powers of any one man to carry them. When he passed by people displaying his riches to them, some of them said

يٰلَيْتَ لَنَا مِثْلَ مَآ اُوْتِىَ قَارُوْنُ اِنَّهٗ لَذُوْ حَظٍّ عَظِيْمٍ (القصص:۷۹)

Would that we had the like of what Qarun has been given. Surely he is a man of mighty good fortune.... (al Qasas 28:79)

The Qur'an has said about these people that they only looked at what was obvious of his condition from his richness. That is why they considerded him worth envying. They did not foresee the punishment that was in store for him. Thus. when they saw his fate, these very people said, "It is the mercy of Allah that He did not make us like him." This shows that there is no limit to the wealth of the world that a man may run after. So, how far he will go to fetch it? He will never be satisfied at any point except when he obeys the direction of the Holy Prophet ﷺ to observe contentment. It means to be content with whatever one gets through a reasonable effort in a lawful manner.Once a person gains contentment then he will feel peaceful and comfortable with whatever he has of worldly possessions through the mercy of Allah; this wealth is not available to Kings and Royalty, and to rich men.

An Incident In The Life Of Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه

When my respected father, Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه came to Pakistan, the Government of Pakistan had established a Board for Islamic Education attached to the Constituent Assembly. My father was also appointed as its member. This Board was one of the sections of the government. After some time the government did something wrong and my father spoke against it for which some of the government officers remarked to my respected father that he was a member of the Board and part of the Government so he should not have criticised it. My father told them that he had consented to become a Member for no other reason but for the sake of religion. As a worker in that direction, it was his duty to say what was correct whether that was in agreeement with the line of the government or not. He clarified that he was not a government servant and unlike them was not worried about losing the employment. He said, "I have my resignation letter in my pocket and my expenses do not exceed two rupees, so I am not dependent on salary and allowances like you. I can earn that much money by hard work anywhere else while you cannot because your suit alone costs two hundred rupees. So, you might fear losing your job. By the Grace of Allah, I have no such fear."

We Cannot Control Income But We May Control Our Expenses

My respected father also used to say that a man has no say over his income although he has control over his expenditure. It is easier for him to reduce his expenses, and be content. Insha Allah he will not be worried. A man becomes worried only when he makes out plans beforehand calculating a high income. The trouble arises when he does not achieve that figure of income. On the other hand that man enjoys comfort and lives peacefully who reduces his expenses, has fewer needs and lives a simple life, moulding it according to his income. He is satisfied with what Allah gives him. This man is said to live a life of contentment.

We Must Make This Suplication

The Messenger of Allah ﷺ has taught us the following supplication and urged us to make it often

اَللّٰهُمَّ قَنِّعْنِیْ بِمَا رَزَقْتَنِیْ وَبَارِكْ لِیْ فِیْهِ

"O Allah! Make me content with that which you have provided me of the sustenance, and bless it for me."

This is a very suitable supplication that the Prophet ﷺ has taught us. Every word of it is meaningful and the whole of it is compact. Allah be glorified! If this supplication is granted to us, all our problems will be solved because once we are content we will also be relieved of the urge to earn more, to eat more and amass worldly possessions. This will bring us peace and comfort. The prayer also asks for 'blessings in the sustenance' which means that even a little will provide a large benefit.

Meaning Of Blessings

The words barakah and mubarak are used frequently but few people know their meaning. When someone buys a house or a car or gets married, we say to him "Allah may bless that for you." Barakah and Mubarak are a blessing meaning, "May Allah make that a means of comfort for you such that even if it may not be large it may provide you much advantage."

The Age Of Statistics

We live in a world of statistics. Today, everything is counted and measured. People count money. They measure their income and their salary. But, no one measures the advantages reaped by this exercise. An European Muslim has written a very good book, The Reign Of Quantity. It is numbers that rule the world.

Example of blessings & lack of it

Let us take the example of a man who has earned a hundred rupees. As he was returning home aiming to go by bus, a friend met him and offered him a lift in his car saying he was going on the same route as his house. When this man goes to buy something, he gets it at a discount. These are two examples of blessing in his income, the hundred rupees are stretched. If he had not been offered the lift (or the discount), he would have spent from his hundred rupees. We take another example of a man who earns a hundred thousand rupees. He arrives at his house, happy. But he learns that his son is unwell. The doctor asks for a number of laboratory tests that cost thousands of rupees and then advises him to hospitalise his son. Tlhis man's money is spent on medical tests, hospital and doctor's fees and medication. This means that his money lacked blessing.

Bribery & Interest Lack Blessings

It is with bribery that there is lack of blessings in that. A person who receives bribe spends it on unexpected heads, like having to bribe other people. He may be happy receiving bribe and multiplying his money but he has to spend it, sooner or later, in bribing many other people. His money will exhaust in this manner and that means lack of blessings. Blessings are bestowed by Allah and it is not in man's power to get them.

Therefore, the Holy Prophet ﷺ has urged us to make the supplication, "O Allah! Give me contentment with the sustenance that you have bestowed on me and bless it for me."

Blessings In The Salaries Of Dar-ul-Uloom

The blessings a man receives on being content are seen in the salaries of the teachers of Dar-ul-Uloom, Korangi, Karachi. The salaries of teachers and staff are meagre by all standards, any of them may be interviewed and it will be confirmed that the purchasing power of these salaries is higher than that of the fat salaries of outsiders. This is barakah that Allah grants. The barakah is the lot of those who show contentment.

The Third Portion Of The Supplication

There is a third clause too in the supplication that we are discussing:

وَاخْلُفْ عَلٰى كُلِّ غَائِبَةٍ لِيْ مِنْكَ بِخَيْرٍ

"O Allah! Those things that my heart desired to receive, but I could not get, O Allah! Grant me things better than those things that you know are better!"

Thus, this prayer has three clauses. The first time the supplicant prays to be blessed with contentment. The second time he prays for blessings. The third time he prays to be given a better thing (than what he is denied). There were some of the things that he longed for but did not get, he supplicates Allah for something better than that. for instance, he may have longed for a car but he could not get it. So he tells Allah, "You have not given me what I desired then surely there must be some reason behind the denial. O Allah, let me have instead something that is better in your sight for me." What more could a man ask for once he gets all these three things-he is content with what he has, that what he has is blessed and he receives a substitute for what he has not received.

Contentment is a great asset

There is no wealth greater than contentment. Today, everyone counts money, house, possessions as wealth and assets. We must know that none of these is wealth. True wealth is contentment. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said, according to a Hadith:

لَيْسَ الْغِنٰى عَنْ كَثْرَةِ الْعَرَضِ وَلٰكِنَّ الْغِنٰى غِنَى النَّفْسِ (صحيح بخارى، كتاب الرقاق، باب الغنى غنى النفس)

"Richness is not abundance of property and possessions but richness is self-contentment."

(Bukhari, Book 81 of Ar-Riqaq (Softening of Hearts.) Chapter15 Hadith# 6446)

Thus, abundance of property and possession is not a sign of wealth and riches but self-contentment is senonymous with wealth and riches for such a man's heart is unconcerned and independent of wants. He does not extend his hand before anyone else, he does not narrate his need to anyone else and he does not attempt to gather wealth through unlawful means. He is satisfied with what he possessses and is resigned to the fact that what he has not received was not good for him; if that was good for him, he would have got it but since he has not received it, Allah knows that it was not beneficial for him.

The Contentment Of The Prophet ﷺ

An angel presents himself before the Holy Prophet ﷺ and says, "If you command the Mount Uhud, would turn into gold and that would belong to you." The Holy Prophet ﷺ refused the offer saying, "I wish to spend my life in such a way that when I get anything to eat, I should thank Allah and when I do not get it, I may be patient. In this way, I would receive the blessings of gratefulness and I would not wish to have large wealth and possessions and I would receive the blessings of patience too. I want the wealth that would pull me towards Allah." So, he also made this supplication:

اَللّٰهُمَّ اِنِّی اَعُوْذُبِك مِنْ كُلِّ غِنًی يُطْغِيْنِیْ

"O Allah! I seek your protection from every such wealth that causes me to be rebellious."

Summary

The gist of my statement is that this Hadith teaches us two things. One of these is that we should thank Allah for whatever we have received, even if it is a very minor thing. We must refrain from being ungrateful. We must sit down a while and concentrate on the blessings Allah continues to shower on us. It is our existence, our life, our breathing, our eyes, ears, teeth, face, hands and feet. These are Allah's blessings and none of them can be bought if we happen to lose any. We must think of our health, house, family, peace, comfort, and such blessings and thank Allah for that. The second thing it teaches us is that we must not look at any person who has a higher worldly rank than us, but we must look at him who is lower than us in worldly matters. In affairs of religion we must look at him who enjoys a higher rank. The third lesson this Hadith teaches us is that we must be content with what we have. But contentment does not mean that we must not adopt reasonable means; we are not precluded from adopting reasonable means. For example, a man may do business, take up service, cultivate the land and what he gets lawfully from these reasonable means, he must be content with it. He should not try to make up any shortfall through unlawful means. He must be contented and pray to Allah. "O Allah! Grant me contentment and bless whatever favours You have granted me.

May Allah grant me and all of you the wealth of contentment and inspire us to obey the sayings of the Holy Prophet ﷺ Aameen.

And our last prayer is Praise belongs to Allah, the Lord of the worlds.

اما بعد

عن ابى موسى الا شعرى رضى الله تعالى عنه قال قال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم المسلم من سلم المسلمون من لسانه ويده (ترمذى، كتاب الايمان، باب نمبر ١٢)

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and ask Him for forgiveness. And we believe in Him. and trust in Him. We seek refuge in Allah. from the mischief of our souls and from our evil deeds. He whom Allah guides none can mislead and whom He leaves to stray none can guide. And, we bear witness that there is no god except Allah Who is Alone and has no partner, and we bear witness that Sayyidina Muhammad ﷺ is His servant and Messenger-May Allah bless him and (likewise) his family and Companions. And may He favour him and give him peace.

We have it from Abu Musa al-Ashari رضی اللہ عنہ that the Messenger of Allah ﷺ has said "A Muslim is he from whose tongue and hands other Muslims are safe." (Tirmizi, Book of Faith, Chapter 12)

He Is Not A True Muslim

This Hadith is transmitted by Sayyidina Abu Musa al-Ashari رضی اللہ عنہ and it implies that a Muslim is one who does not cause trouble to another Muslim by his tongue or by his hand. The Hadith describes a Muslim and tells us that only he is a Muslim who has these attributes. Therefore, if other people are not safe from the hand or tongue of a Muslim then truly this man is not entitled to be called a Muslim. He is like one who does not offer Salat. Although no jurist will decide that such a man is a non-Muslim because he neglects regular Salat yet he is not truly entitled to be called a Muslim because he does not observe the most significant of the duties imposed by Allah. In the same way the person whose hand and tongue cause trouble to other people is not called a disbeliever by a jurist but, in the light of this Hadith, he is not entitled to be called a Muslim because he does not behave like one.

What Is Social Living

There are five sections in Islam.

(i) Belief.
(ii) Worship.
(iii) Dealings or Behaviour.
(iv) Character and Manners; and
(v) Social living.

This Hadith is the base on which the fifth section stands. No one lives alone in this world; neither is he asked to live alone. So, he has links with someone or the other-his family, friends, neighbours, other people, where he buys or sells or he works. How, then should he conduct himself with these people. This is the principle and rule of social living and it is a significant part of religion. Unfortunately, due to our negligence and irresponsible attitude that we have cast it aside and do not even consider it as part of religion. We do not pay heed to the commands of Allah and His Messenger ﷺ in this regard.

Importance Of Social Rules

Allah has given particular importance to social rules for us. We can see it in the way the Qur'an deals with one of the principles of social living: to seek permission before entering anybody's house. The Arabic word for seeking permission is Istizan Allah has revealed two complete rukus (sections) in the Qur'an to describe istizan. We can guage the importance attached to it from the fact that the command to offer Salat is discussed some sixty-two times in the Qur'an but it is left to the Holy Prophet ﷺ to describe how to offer it. The Qur'an does not tell us the method of offering it. But, details of istizan are mentioned by the Qur'an itself and not left for the Prophet ﷺ to describe. Besides, a large portion of surah al-Hujurat is devoted to social laws. Thus, on the one hand such a great importance is attached to social conduct and on the other we ignore that in our daily life and do not even know its rules.

Maulana Thanavi رحمته الله عليه Revives Rules Of Social Way Of Living

In his times, Allah has caused Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanavi رحمة الله عليه to revive those sections of religion that had been put in the background. People had forgotten that these were part of our religion. Maulana Thanavi recalled their significance and taught us their rules .It was in his khanqah that he gave it practical shape. It was supposed previously that a khanqah is a recluse: people sit in rooms and chant 'Allah' Allah' and occupy themselves in zikr (remembrance of Allah, devotional exercises) and worship. Maulana Thanavi did not lay as much emphasis on zikr and optional worship as he placed on social conduct. He educated his disciples to avoid inconveniencing other people. He used to say that when his disciples failed to observe the devotional exercises that he prescribed, he felt sorry for their dereliction but when he learnt of one of them violating social conduct or causing hardship to someone he felt hatred for that man.

First Become A Human Being.

It is known, too, that Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه frequently said, "If you wish to become a Sufi or an ascetic then you will find many other khanqahs for that purpose where you may go. If you wish to perfect yourself as a human being, you should come here. We mould them here. To become a Muslim, a Scholar or a Sufi is the next step and it is a higher status. You must first enter the human field, and come out of the rows of animals. You can only achieve that by learning the Islamic etiquettes of social living and behaving according to them."

Three Types of Animals

In his ahya ul Ulum, Imam Ghazali رحمة الله عليه has said that Allah has created three types of animals. One of these types are beneficial to mankind and it is very rare that they harm man. Examples of this type are: cows, sheep, and so on. They are beneficial because they give milk and when they do not, they are slaughtered for their meat; that is, they give up their lives to benefit man. These animals do not harm anybody. The second type includes animals that are always harmful to man and there is no apparent benefit from them. Examples of this kind are snakes, scorpions, beasts of prey, and so on; they are all harmful animals. They bite man. The third kind of animals are those animals that neither benefit nor harm. These are found in the wild and include fox, jackal, and others. Man does not gain from them nor is harmed by them to a noticeable extent. After recalling these types of animals, Imam Ghazali رحمة الله عليه addresses man and says, "O Man! You are the Best creation and you enjoy excellence over all animals. If you do not behave as a human being but wish to live as an animal then at least initate the first kind of animal who benefits other creatures but does not harm them, like the cow and goat. But, if you wish to stoop lower then become like the third type that neither harms nor benefits. If you are not like either of these and cause harm to other people instead of benefitting them then you have grouped with the second type of snakes and scorpions, and the like."

They Are Human Beings

So we see that the question of Muslim or non-Muslim, scholar or not, ascetic or not, is not of immediate import. The first thing for a man is to behave like humans. To do that it is necessary that he tread the Islamic Social way of living. He should not be responsible for causing even the slightest of inconvenience to any one else, by his hand or tongue or through any effort whatever. Once Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه said in a spirit of humbleness, "Even I am not a perfect and complete human but-praise be to Allah - I have seen what human beings are like. So I cannot be deceived by a bull who claims to be human. So I will aim at that, Insha Allah, and will not be deceived into behaving like a bull".

Save Other People From Harm

As far as voluntary devotional exercises are concerned, no one will be taken to task for omiting these forms of worship but if anyone observes them, he will be rewarded for that in the Hereafter. Nevertheless, these are virtuous deeds, and one must accustom oneself to do them. On the other hand, if anyone is behind the hardship another person suffers then he has committed a grave sin and he will be taken to task for that commission. This is why Shari'ah tells us to abandon voluntary worship when there is a possibility of helping someone out of difficulty or saving him from that.

Importance of Congregational Salat

We know that men are urged strongly to offer their obligatory Salat with the congregation. It is so important that the Holy Prophet ﷺ said, "I feel like appointing someone else to lead the congregational Salat when the time comes and go out myself to visit every house and see if anyone has stayed behind. Then, I should set the houses of those who remained behind a fire because they neglect their duties to Allah." This shows the importance attached to congregational Salat. Some of the jurist regard offering Salat with the congregation as sunnah muwakkadah but some othres give it the higher status of wajib. Prayer in congregational form is a perfect form while in an individual capacity is an imperfect form. We also have the example of the Holy Prophet ﷺ when he was ill before his death and could not walk with ease and had appointed Sayyidina Abu Bakr رضي الله عنه as Imam in his place. At such a moment too, he came to the mosque to offer the congregational prayer supported by two men. This stresses the importance of Salat with the congregation.

When Is One Not Allowed To Go To The Mosque?

The jurists have decided unanimously that a man who is ill and smells badly then he must not go to the Mosque. It is not merely that he is allowed to stay away from congregational prayer but he is not even allowed to join it, and if he joins it, he will be committing a sin. If he joins the congregation, he will inconvenience other people because of the bad odour. We must see that such an important thing as congregatgional Salat is disallowed if it becomes a cause of inconvenience to other people..

Causing Hardship To other People When Kissing The Black Stone

We all know the importance of the Hajr Aswad (the Black Stone, at Ka'bah). We are told that kissing the Black Stone is like shaking hands with Allah, and it effaces a man's sins. The Holy Prophet ﷺ and his companions رضي الله عنهم themselves kissed the Black Stone which also highlights its importance. In spite of that we are advised that if in attempting to kiss it we might push other people and cause them difficulty then it is not proper to kiss it; rather that is sinful. Shari'ah is very particular that one does not cause another man even a little bit of difficulty. Such important forms of worship as congregational Salat and kissing the Hajr Aswad are abandoned only because we might not hurt anyone else; thus, the lesser forms that are voluntary should also be postponed when such a situation arises.

Reciting The Qur'an Loudly

We may cite the example of reciting the Qur'an, too. It is such a virtuous act that the reciter is rewarded tenfold on reciting each letter. In other words a person amasses rewards when he recites the Qur'an.Of all the devotional exercises, recital of the Qur'an is the most excellent. Then, an audible recital is preferred. An audible recital secures more reward than an inaudible. But, if there is a likelihood of disturbing someone's sleep because of the sound then it is not allowed to recite audibly.

How Did The Prophet ﷺ Arise For Tahajjud Salat

The Holy Prophet ﷺ woke up in the night for Tahjjud Salat. Never in his life did he miss the Tahjjud Salat. But, Allah and His Messenger ﷺ made it easy for us and did not say that the Tahcjjud Salat was obligatory for us although it was so for the Messenger of Allah ﷺ. He never missed it. In spite of that we are told in a Hadith that whenever he got up for Tahajjud he was very quiet and never made a noise or let the door squeak lest the sleep of any of his wives be distrubed. The Qur'an and Hadith tell us that we must not cause the slightest difficulty to anyone.

Praying On the Thoroughfare

It is not proper to offer prayer at a place where people pass by. Some people do not heed this. Take for example the mosque. Although the front rows are vacant, some people pick up the very last row and offer their Salat there. The result is that those who have to go out of the mosque or come into it, find it difficult. Either they make a detour round such people or commit a sin by walking in front of them. To offer Salat in such a manner is not proper. Rather, it is a sin.

'Muslim' includes Security

The Hadith we are discussing may be repeated here {A Muslim is one from whose tongue and hand other Muslims are secure} المسلم من سلم المسلمون من لسانه ويده. The word Muslim is an Arabic word whose root is seen lam mim which is also the root word of the word meaning security. Thus implied security or safety is included in the word Muslim.

The meaning of as-salam 'Alaicum

When non-Muslims meet they greet each other with a 'hello', 'good morning', 'namstay' or 'adab'. They have different words of greetings. but, the Islamic form of greeting is {as-salam 'alykum} السلام عليكم meaning Peace be on you. Apart from greeting, these words offer a prayer for the safety of the person greeted whereas every other form of greeting does not include any prayer. The addressee receives no benefit thereby. But when a man greets the other with as-salam 'alay kum Wa rahmat Allah Wa barkatuhu he prays for three blessings as we see in the meaning of these words: Peace be on you and the Mercy of Allah and His Favours. This is a supplication and if it receives the approval of Allah even once, the person addressed benefits for the rest of his life from the blessings. Besides, by using these words the addressee is assured of safety and security at the hands of the speaker. The former is then confident that he will not suffer hardship through the latter. A Muslim, when he greets in this way, conveys to the other that he has brought the message of peace for him and will not torment him.

The Meaning Of Security From The Tongue

The Hadith describes a Muslim as one from whose tongue and hand other Muslims are safe. To be safe from the tongue is to be satisfied that he will not say anything that might dishearten the other, cause him difficulty or displease him in any way. So, even when that man is to be censored such words may be used as do not cause heart-burning. For instance, he must be told in simple terms that his action was not proper or that he must re-consider his behaviour or that it was not in line with Shari'ah. He must not be cursed or taunted. Anything said in an indirect manner that injures is taunt and it causes a deep wound. The Arabic couplet further explains:

جَرَاحَاتُ السِّنَانِ لَهَا الْتِيَامُ
وَلَا يَلْتَامُ مَا جَرَحُ اللِّسَانُ

"The wound caused by the sword heals sooner or later but when it is caused by the tongue it leaves a lasting impression".

It is better, therefore, to tell anyone plainly that he has wronged rather than taunt him. The Qur'an says:-

يٰٓاَيُّهَا الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوا اتَّقُوا اللّٰهَ وَقُوْلُوْا قَوْلًا سَدِيْدًا (سورة الاحزاب: ٧٠)

O you who believe! Fear Allah and speak words straight to the point (al-Ahzab. 33:70)

Indirect speech is neither desired nor liked. In the present times, we are used to oblique references and round about approach. The listener is hurt by that. People who speak in this manner gain the appreciation of the masses and are said to possess good sense of humour as an orator.

A Unique Incident Of Oblique Speech

Someone wrote an article in which he commented on one of the books of Maulana Mahmud ul Hasan رحمة الله عليه. while making the comments he called the Maulana an infidel or unbeliever. One of the sincere disciples of the Maulana retaliated by citing a literary persian poem which, by today's standards, was a high-ranking criticism with a taunting bent. The poem was

مرا کافر گر گفتی غمے نیست
چراغ کذب را نبود فروغے
مسلمانت بخوانم در جوابش
دروغے را جزا باشد دروغے

If you call me an infidel, it pains me not,
Because the light of falsehood never kindles.
You have called me an infidel. In answer, I call you a Muslim, Because falsehood can only be repulsed with falsehood.

This means that you have lied by calling me an infidel, so I lie by calling you a Muslim or that 'you are not a Muslim'. A poet or a literary person would applaud such a response because it is a biting literary reply. The second poet starts by calling him a Muslim but he clarifies his statement when he says that a lie is responded with a like lie. 'You spoke a lie by calling me an infidel so I speak a lie by calling you a Muslim'. When this man presented his poem to the Maulana, he commented, "You have composed an excellent poem but you have turned the table on him and called him an unbeliever which is not our approach. We do not call anyone a disbeliever." So, he did not send the peom to the man who had criticised him.

Then, the Maulana revised that poem and made an addition, too. He wrote

مرا کافر گر گفتی غمے نیست
چراغِ کذب را نبود فروغے
مسلمانت بخوانم در جوابش
دھم شکر مجائے تلخ دوغے
اگر تو مومنی فیھا وَ اِلّا
دروغے را جزا باشد دروغے

If you have called me an infidel, it pains me not because the light of falsehood never shines. In answer, I call you a Muslim and instead of the sour dose, I feed you sugar. If you are a believer it is indeed very good. But if you aren't then the recompense of falsehood is always falsehood.

Ponder over it! That man labels him an infidel, so consigns him to Hell. But, the Maulana could not tolerate even a sentence of biting language against that man which would transgress the limits. Such unseemly language would be used here in this world. We will have to account in the Hereafter for the tongue's utterance. "Why had we used such a word for another persons? Therefore,we must exercise care and speak plainly and say exactly what we mean.

An Incident About A biting Tongue.

My respected father, Maulana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه. used to say that some people have a biting tongue. Such people will always taunt or raise objections. Such behaviour causes heart burns. My father narrated an incident to support his point. A man visited a relative. When he went there he found the daughter-in-law of the house very angry. She was speaking rudely to her mother-in-law who was seated nearby. The man asked the elder woman what had angered her daughter-in-law. She said, "There's nothing, I spoke only two words of reproach and am being punished for that. She is running wild since then and is very angry." The man asked her what it was that she had spoken and she said, "I only said that her father was a slave and her mother was a slave. Since then she is wild with anger." Look at that! Those were only two words according to the elder woman.. But, they were such words as irritate a person. Taunting words ruin families and create hatred among family members. We must keep away from using them. We must always speak clearly and in a straightforward way.

We must think before we speak

Before we speak anything, we must ponder over the consequence and on how the other person would take it. We must also see how these very words we wish to speak to other people would be received by us if they were spoken to us. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has taught us the principle:

اَحِبَّ لِلنَّاسِ مَاتُحِبُّ لِنَفْسِكَ (ترمذی، کتاب الزھد، باب من اتقی المحارم فھوا عبدالناس)

"Prefer for other people what you prefer for yourself." (Tirmizi, Book of Az-zahd(piety)

The Prophet ﷺ has put an end to the setting up of two standards, one for ourselves and one for the others. If Allah grows this attitude in our hearts then we will be free of all the bickering and hatred that we see around us.

The tongue is a great Blessing.

The tongue that man has is one of the great blessings of Allah on him. We are enjoying its gratis and it works round the clock from birth to death. We can only understand its value if we imagine ourselves without it. Those who are down with paralysis and cannot speak they try their best but cannot utter a word. They wish to convey their inner feelings to their dear ones but cannot do so and it is then that they realise the value of the tongue. But, we use this blessing of Allah from morning to evening, day in and day out, like a sharp weapon without thinking for a moment what words we utter with it. This is very wong. The correct thing is to weigh out words before we speak. If we do that then instead of being a means to deliver us to Hell, the tongue will take us to Heaven and amass for us a wealth for use in the Hereafter, Insha Allah.

Let Us Accustom Ourselves To Think Before We Speak.

We are told in a Hadith that it is mainly the tongue that will be responsible for flinging its owner face down into Hell. Therefore, we must think before we speak. This does not mean that a man should wait for some time during which he thinks before saying something but when he accustoms himself to think before speaking then he will do it spontaneously. Allah then makes his tongue value its words before it utters them and it will only utter the correct words, never the wrong ones that displease Allah and hurt other people.

Maulana Thanavi's Case

There was an attendant of Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanavi رحمة الله عليه. He was called Bhai Niaz. He was a very cossetted servant and even visitors of the Maulana loved him. He made himself felt by exercising authority on visitors to the khanqah always giving instructions and he was aided in this behaviour by the strict system that ruled the khanqah. One of his disciples complained to the Maulana about this man's behaviour and told him that he was a rude man who scolds many visitors. The Maulana did not like that so he summoned Bhai Niaz and reproached him for his rude behaviour and wished to know why he did that. In answer, Bhai Niaz said, "Maulana, fear Allah. Don't lie!". He was not addressing these words to Maulana Thanavi but he had meant to refer to those who had brought about the complaint. They should fear Allah and not lie. On hearing him, the Maulana lowered his head and went away from there saying, "Astaghfir-Allah (I seek Allah's forgiveness.)" Those who saw this happen were surprised that a menial could speak in this manner to the Maulana who instead of taking him to task for that went away saying Astaghfir Allah. Later on, the Mawalana explained that he had erred in scolding Bhai Niaz without first giving him an opportunity to explain and that is why he had said Astaghfir Allah. The Shari'ah directs us to allow the accused to defend himself. The truth is that when Allah gives someone the power to recognise truth from falsehood he takes care not to exceed the limits. May Allah give us also such an understanding! Aameen.

It Is Not Proper To Hurt A Non-Muslim Too

Some people suppose that this Hadith excludes the non-Muslims from its application because it defines a Muslim as one who does not hurt another Muslim with his tongue or hand. They contend that the Hadith does not disallow us to hurt a non-Muslim. They are mistaken in thinking so. Muslims are mentioned in the Hadith because generally they live in a Muslim surrounding and have to deal with each other, otherwise the scope of the Hadith extends equally to Muslims and non-Muslims.It is not allowed to cause inconvenience to a non-Muslim too in times of peace. Nevertheless, when Muslims are at war with the infidels then it is a part of the activity to hurt them in pursuance of the objective to diminish their status; but it is not allowed to hurt those unbelievers who are not engaged in war with the Muslims.

Evidence In Support Of This Statement.

We find evidence to support our contention in the case of Hazrat Musa عليه السلام who lived under the rule of the Pharoah in Egypt where everyone was a disbeliever except Hazrat Musa عليه السلام. It happend that an Isra'ili and a Qubti (copt) were engaged in quarrel. Hazrat Musa عليه السلام slapped the Qubti who died because of it. Although the man was an unbeliever, Hazrat Musa عليه السلام considered himself a sinner because he had inadvertantly brought about his death.

وَلَهُمْ عَلَيَّ ذَنْبٌ فَأَخَافُ أَنْ يَقْتُلُونِ (سورة الشعراء ١٤)

And they have a crime against me; so I fear they will slay me.(ash-Shu'ara. 26:14)

Hazrat Musa عليه السلام considered the inadvertant killing of the unbeliever to be a sin. The question arises that the man was an unbeliever and slaying the unbelievers is an act of Jihad; then why did Hazrat Musa عليه السلام call it a sin and sought the forgiveness of Allah for that? The answer is that although the Qubti was a non-Muslim, in times of peace when Muslims and non-Muslims live together the rights enjoyed by Muslims and non-Muslims are similar so that just as it is wrong to hurt a Muslim so too it is wrong to hurt an unbeliever. It pertains to human rights and the first duty of a man is that he acts like a human being and thereafter he many become a Muslim and a Sufi. It is part of human behaviour that he refrains from causing inconvenience to anyone else without distinction of Muslims and non-Muslims.

To Retract On A Promise Is Like Hurting The Other Person With The Tongue.

There are certain things that are the same as hurting with the tongue but some people do not consider them in this way. An example is to go back on one's promise. If anybody assures another person that he will be with him at a certain time or do a certain task for him at the agreed time and then fails to do it then that person to whom the promise was made faces difficulty. The man who had given out the assurance commits the sin of failing to keep his promise and also the sin of causing inconvenience to the other man. This is a form of hurting someone with the tongue.

Greetings while the Qur'an is Recited.

Sometimes, we do not realise that we are hurting someone with our tongue. We suppose that we are being virtuous but actually we are being sinful because our behaviour is causing difficulty to someone else. For instance, to greet another person with as-salamu-'alay-kum is an excellent thing and rewarding too. But, Shari'ah has seen to it that when others are liable to be inconvenienced, the greetings must not be exchanged; it has given instructions on this matter. In fact, on some occasions instead of being rewarding it is sinful to offer greetings to another person. If a man is reciting the Qur'an then he must not be saluted. The salutation will interrupt him and he will have to stop the recital and turn towards the person greeting him which is an inconvenience to him. So, the greeting causes him difficulty with the tongue. In the same way, it is not allowed to salute those already sitting in the mosque because they are remembering Allah. and are engaged in devotional exercises. They have the name of Allah on their lips and they will be disturbed if anybody salutes them.

Greetings When A Meeting Is In Progress.

The jurists opine that when someone speaks to other people who listen to him attentively then a new-comer must not salute them even if they are talking about worldly matters. Those people were attentive to the speaker and their attention would be diverted if anyone interrupts them with the salutation. The interruption would be in bad taste. Thus, we are commanded that when we go to an Assembly and the proceedings are on then we must sit down quietly without offering the salams. A salutation at that time will be like hurting them with the tongue. It may be guaged from this principle how very particular Shari'ah is in forbidding us from inconveniencing other people.

Salutations To One Who Is Eating

Although it is not disallowed to salute a person who is eating his food, it is certainly a disliked behaviour to do so if that person is likely to be inconvenienced. That person is not engaged in worship but only eating his food so if anyone salutes him, the mountains will not fall down on him. However, there is a possibility of being disturbed and feeling bad when someone salutes at such a time. In the same way, if someone is seen to hurry along somewhere, it is not correct for us to salute him and extend the hand for a handshake. One must understand by the way he was walking he must be in a hurry. It was not a proper time to salute him and shake hands with him. He should have been allowed to go where he was going. The salutation at such times is like hurting other people.

Prolonging Conversation On The Phone.

My respected father رحمة الله عليه used to say that telephone is also an instrument through which other people may be harmed. Rather, it is a tool that may be used to create unlimited hardships to other people. Thus, if anyone rings another person and engages him in a long conversation without even considering that he might have been busy in some other task then he is causing him inconvenience. My father, Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه has commented in the Ma'ariful Qur'an that before the caller engages in a long conversation he must let the called person know his intention and ask him if he has that much time or should he call later. He, رحمة الله عليه has said that this is part of etiquettes of telephonic converstation, and he has defined the long conversation as spanning over five minutes! This is mentioned in the interpretation of surah an-Nur and my father was very particular in observing it.

Use of Loudspeakers

Another example of causing hardship by the tongue is the misuse of the loudspeaker in the mosque. If a few people are to be addressed within the mosque perhaps the internal loudspeaker would suffice. But, if the external loudspeaker is also used then the entire neighbourhood is compelled to listen to the address., Some of these people may be reciting the Qur'an or occupied in other tasks or resting. Someone may be ill, they are all subjected to hardship by the tongue.

An Incident Of The Times Of Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ

In the times of Hazrat Umar Faruq Sayyidna someone used to come to the Masjid Nabavi and deliver sermons. The abode of Hazrat Aishah رضی اللہ عنہا was just next to the Masjid Nabavi. Although there were no loudspeakers in those days yet this man's voice was loud and could be heard by Hazrat Aishah رضی اللہ عنہا in her room while she was occupied in different household chores or some form of worship like the recital of the Qur'an. She sent a message to Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ that this person delivered sermons near her house in a loud voice which disturbed her. She requested that this man may be asked to deliver his sermons elsewhere or subdue his voice. Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ summoned the man and explained to him that his behaviour annoyed the Mother of the faithful, Hazrat Aishah رضی اللہ عنہا so he must discontinue his preaching there. That man obeyed and discontinued his preaching for some days. After a few days, however, he again continued his sermons. When Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ was informed of that, he summoned him again and warned him that if he did not cease he would smash his rod on him. That is, he would beat him with the rod until it broke up.

Our Behaviour Today

If we look at our behaviour today we have set aside these principles. If someone is delivering an address in the mosque, he torments the locality around him. The loudspeaker blares at full volume and nobody in the eighbourhood is allowed to sleep or rest. If anyone asks them to lower the volume, they taunt him that he is preventing religious effort although it is the speaker in the mosque and the responsible men there who violate the principles of Shari'ah. They are responsible for the hardship other people suffer. The truth is that it is part of the etiquette of a religious scholar ('Alim) that he keeps his voice only that high as his audience can listen to him.

ينبغي للعالم ان لايعد وصوته مجلسه

The voice of an Alim must not go beyond his listeners.

Violation of these principles amounts to causing hardship with the tongue. Allah has blessed us with this tongue that we may remember Allah with it, we may convey the truth and we may soothe the hearts of other people but not that we may hurt them.

A Woman Of Hell

A Hadith tells us that the Prophet ﷺ was asked about a woman who fasted during the days and kept vigil in the night but she was rude to her neighbours. The Prophet ﷺ said that the woman would go to Hell. Maulana Thanavi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ says in explanation of the Hadith "People must not be put to difficulty unnecessarily and this is more important than individul worship." That is, fair dealing with other people takes precedence over worship. Maulana Thanavi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ then says that the question of mutual dealings has been shelved these days and no one even tries to explain what it means and what we are required to do in this regard.

Causing Hardship With The Hand.

The second thing that the Hadith under discussion calls for is to refrain from hurting anyone with the hand. Sometimes it is very obvious that we are putting someone to hardship, for example when we beat him. But sometimes we put him to hardship but our society does not think of that in those terms, although there are so many ways in which we may cause hardship to another person. By mentioning the hand, the Hadith includes all the deeds performed by man because he performs most of them by his hand. The Ulama include all the deeds performed by man whether he uses his hands for that or not.

To Put Something Out Of Place

We can give the example of people living together. There are many things of common use, for instance towel, utensils, soap and so on. If one member uses any of these things and then does not replace it at its proper place, the others are inconvenienced when they have to look for it here and there. The first peson is responsible for the inconvenience and it is a hardship to which the others are put which the Hadith forbids us to do.

A Grave Sin.

My father taught us even those things which we consider trifle. When we were young we too would commit such mistakes. We would use something and then misplace it and, not finding it at its proper place, he would have to search for it. He told us once that apart from being bad manners, it was a grave sin not to put something back at its proper place after use. This misdeed causes inconvenience to a Muslim and it is a grave sin to do that. Before that we had not known that it was a grave sin to put anything at a wrong place. This was an example of hurting anyone with the hand.

Causing Hardship To Family and & Relatives

It must be understood that the foregoing does not presuppose that those with whom we live together are strangers alone. They could be our family members and relatives too. Generaly, we do not feel that we are causing hardship to our close relatives like wife, children, brothers and sisters; some people say that it does not matter if these relatives suffer hardship because they are relatives, after all. This is a wrong approach. It is not the fault of those people that they are our relatives that we cause them hardship. We must remember that our beloved Prophet ﷺ woke up for Tahajjud Salat and was very quiet in eveything that he did lest he distrurb Hazrat Aishah رضی اللہ عنہا in her sleep. So, just as we are forbidden to cause hardship to strangers so too we must not cause hardship to the folk of our homes and our relatives.

To Stay away At The Times Of Meals

For instance, it is a grave sin for a man to be away from home at the times of meal after assuring his family members that he will be there and have his meal with them so they are kept waiting and wondering where he is. It often happens that such a man does not worry about his family members or his coommitment and eats out while they wait for him. He is committing a grave sin in this manner because he hurts someone whom Allah has joined to him in marital relations. Such a man must inform his family members if he is delayed so that they are at rest concerning him. But people do not think of it from this angle because a wife is supposed to be a subordinate and she may be put to inconvenience, although it is wrong and forbidden, and a grave sin to do so.

It Is Forbidden To Dirty The Thoroughfare

Another example of hurting someone by the hand is to throw something on a thoroughfare, a banana peel or any dirty thing. The passers-by will suffer because of that or someone may slip and fall down when he puts his foot on it. The person who is responsible for that will be answerable on the Day of Resurrection for his misdeed. Even if no passer-by is inconvenienced yet because of dirtying the thoroughfare the person throwing it will have committed a sin. We are told about the Holy Prophet ﷺ that whenever he was travelling and felt the urge to urinate, he would search for a proper place to do it in the same manner one looks out for a place to build his house. He did this to avoid dirtying a pathway and thus causing the passers-by an inconvenience. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said, "Faith has over seventy branches, the most excellent of these is to declare the kalimah

لا الـــه الاالله محمـــــد رســـول الله

There is no god but Allah and Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah.

And the humblest form is to remove offensive and injurious things from the thoroughfare." These things could be a thorn or a peel and their removal is the most minor form of faith. Thus when removal of injurious things from the road is a branch of faith the throwing of such things on the road could be a branch of disbelief.

It Is Forbidden To Cause Mental Agony To Any one

Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه has said that the Hadith under discussion refers to actions of the tongue and hand but it also includes any action by the tongue or hand that causes someone else a mental agony. For instance, if a man borrows money from someone and promises to return it at a certain date then he must return it by that day. If he cannot repay the sum borrowed on the promised day then he must request for more time but he must not try to fool the lender and cause him mental torture. Let not the lender keep waiting for the debtor to make an appearance so that the poor fellow cannot make a proper planning bacause he does not know when he will get back his money.

Agonising One's Servants

Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه goes so far as to say that a person must not atonce ask his servant to do more than one task in sequence. In this way, the master frees himself of remembering the tasks but shifts the responsibility of remembering them on his servant. If it is not necesary to do so then the servant must not be burdened with the responsibility to remember. He must be asked to finish a task and when he is through, he should be given the next task, and so on in this manner. The Maulana said about himself that he always followed this method. After his servant finished one task, he instructed him to do the other and then the next. The Maulana said, "I remember the duties my servant has to be instructed with and I do not shift the burden to his memory. He is thus not under a mental pressure. He knows that when he has completed one assignment, I will instruct him with the next." The Maulana رحمة الله عليه was a far-sighted man.

Where Should One Wait for a Worshipper Engaged In Salat

Continuing with examples of how one does inconvenience other people, we may cite the case of a man waiting for another who is offering his Salat. Such a man must not sit next to the worshipper so that he senses that the man is waiting for him and his attention is diverted into hurrying through the Salat. The worshipper feels he must not keep the man waiting so hurries through the postures of prayer. The proper thing for the man who is waiting is to wait at some distance so that the worshipper is not disturbed and offers his Salat peacefully. He may meet him after he finishes his Salat without knowing that someone was waiting for him. The first method of sitting next to the worshipper making him realise that someone waits for him is wrong. It causes him mental agony. Al Hamdulillah, our elders and teachers applied themselves equally to all branches of religion. They did not take up one or two branches and exclude the rest. the Qur'an says

يٰٓاَيُّهَا الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوا ادْخُلُوْا فِي السِّلْمِ كَآفَّةً (سورة البقرة: ٢٠٨)

O you who believe! Enter completely into Islam (al Baqarah. 2:208)

Let it not be that you, O Believers! pay attention to the branch of worship like Salat, Fasting and so on, but by-pass social conduct, fair dealing and good manners as prescribed in Islam.

Adab ul Mu 'ashirat

Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه has composed a small book in Urdu by the name of Adabul Mu 'ashirat. It is worth reading. The Maulana رحمة الله عليه has stated in the book that he could not write down all the social etiquettes in the book but he has nevertheless collected there in as many as he could récollect. He has suggested that the reader would read the book and go on behaving as the book wants him to behave and gaining knowledge of all the social etiquettes as prescribed by Islam. Allah will open up his mind for him. Thus it is a part of social manners that a man may park his car in such a way that no one else is obstructed; it is also part of religion. We have forgotten these things today and are, therefore, sinful. At the same time we present a wrong picture of religion. Anyone looking at us would say that we are regular at Salat but careless in cleanliness and quick at causing hardship to other people. We must try to think what picture of Islam our behaviour presents to a non-Muslim, would he be attracted to it after observing us? Or, would he be repelled? May Allah guide us! Instead of behaving as good specimens of Muslims, and inviting other people to Islam by our conduct, we have become instrumental in turning them away from Islam. We have paid scant attention to the branch of social manners.

May Allah cause us not to be neglectful in this regard–myself and everyone else. May He inspire us to comprehend correctly and to conduct ourselves fairly on all branches of religion.Aameen

And our concluding prayer is: "Praise be to Allah, Lord of the worlds!."

اما بعد

فاعوذ بالله من الشيطن الرجيم بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم

وَلِمَنْ خَافَ مَقَامَ رَبِّهٖ جَنَّتٰنِ (سورة الرحمن: ٤٦)

All praise belongs to Allah. We praise Him, beseech Him for help and seek His forgiveness. We believe in Him and trust in Him. We seek refuge in Allah from the mischief of our souls and from our evil deeds. He whom Allah guides none can mislead and whom He leaves to stray none can guide. And, we bear witness that there is no god except Allah who is Alone and has no partner, and we bear witness that Hazrat Muhammad is His Slave and His Messenger- May Allah bless him and his family and Companions. And may He favour him and give him peace, complete peace.

I seek refuge in Allah from the cursed devil. In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

And for him who fears the standing before his Lord, there shall be two gardens. (ar-Rahman. 55:46)

Assurance Of Two Gardens

As for the person who fears to stand before his Lord, and fears that one day he will have to stand before Him and account for each of his deeds, there will be two Jannahs for him. Jannah is Paradise or Garden (of Paradise).

In explanation of this verse, the well-known successor of the Companions Hazrat Mujahid رحمة الله عليه says that the verse refers to that person who gets an evil suggestion and intends to commit a sin but at the same time he thinks of Allah and remembers that he will stand before Allah one day so he gives up the idea and abandons the sinful thought. It is for such a person that the assurance is held out for two gardens in Paradise.

It Is Taqwa (Fear of Allah)

He then explains it in detail. A man is all alone and nobody is there to see him so there is no apparent obstacle to prevent him from committing a sin. It is there, in the loneliness, that he feels like doing a sinful act. But he tells himself, "although no man can know what I do but my Allah sees me. One day, I will stand before Him." He then abstains from the act. It is for this man that the two Gardens are promised, and for those like him. The behaviour of this man is called Taqwa (piety, righteousness, God-fearing). Taqwa is defined as "the awe of Allah that prompts man to abandon the most pressing demand of his base desire to sin." He thinks that although no one watches him the One Who sees all sees him too. The aim of all pious teachings and of Shari'ah is to grow in man the fear that he will have to stand before Allah.

The Graeatness Of Allah

Allah does not tell us in this verse that one should fear Hell, or the chastisement, or the Fire, but, He has said that he should fear the standing before his Lord.

In other words, he should recognise the greatness, the majesty of Allah and he should realise that Allah may or may not punish him against the sin. But, the real question is how would he stand before Him with the sin against his name? If anyone recognises the greatness of someone and esteems and respects him then, even if he knows that he will not punish him, he stands in awe of Him and will not do anything against his wishes lest he have to face Him after doing the wrong. This is taqwa when the attitude is in relation to Allah.

My Respect For My Father

Except for a couple of times, my father Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه never raised his hands over me. I remember he slapped me once or twice but I held him in such respect and awe that I would tremble when I passed near his room. Why was that? That was because of the fear that he might come to know of my deeds that would displease him. When a man can fear another creature in this manner then it is imperative that he fears and esteems the Creator of the Universe. He must fear and ask himself how he would stand before Him with the record of deeds marking his evils and sins. The verse of the Qur'an tells us about this very thing:

وَاَمَّا مَنْ خَافَ مَقَامَ رَبِّهٖ وَنَهَى النَّفْسَ عَنِ الْهَوٰى (النازعات: ٤٠)

(But as for him who feared the standing before his Lord and restrained (his) soul from caprices.) (an-Naziat, 79: 40)

The Thing To Fear Is The Wrath of Allah

Hell and Chastisement are feared because they are signs of the punishment of Allah otherwise we should really fear and esteem the grandness and the majesty of Allah Himself. He Himself is to be feared actually.

There is an Arabic poem.

لا تسقنی ماءَ الحیاة بذِلّة

بل فاسقنی بالعزّ کأس الحنظل

The meaning is:

Do not give me to drink the water of life while you debase me, but you may give me the bitter juice of the colocynth while you honour me.

Those people who have understood the Reality of Allah crave for His pleasure and keep away from His displeasure. So, they fear Hell and chastisement because they represent His displeasure which itself is really feared.

An Incident Of Mixing Water Into Milk

It is said about Hazrat Umar Faruq رضی اللہ عنہ that as a Caliph, he made rounds of the city at night to learn about the problems of his people. He helped the poor and needy and aided the grief-sticken. If he came across anyone doing something wrong, he reformed that person. One night, he was on his usual rounds at the time of Tahajjud, he heard two women in a house speak to each other and he pictured that one of them was an old woman while the other was young. The former said to the latter who was her daughter, "Mix some water into the milk to increase the quantity before we sell it." The young woman said, "Mother, the Commander of Faithful, Umar Faruq, has prohibited every milk-seller from doing so. We must not do it." "The Amir ul Muminin is not here. He cannot see you. No one can see you in this hour of the night if you put some water into the milk." The young woman replied, "Mother! It may be true that the Amir ul Muminin does not watch us but what about his Lord. Is He not watching us? We must not do the wrong thing." Hazrat Umar Faruq رضی اللہ عنہ heard all they had spoken and in the morning enquired about them. Then he sent a proposal of marriage of his son for the young woman and Abdullah bin Umar رضی اللہ عنہ was married to her. His grandson, Umar Bin Abdul Aziz رحمۃ اللہ علیہ was born from this family and became the fifth Caliph. Returning to the story, the girl was convinced in her heart that even though the Commander of the Faithful did not see, Allah does see everything whether one was all alone and it was pitch dark or not. This behaviour is known as Taqwa.

A Lesson-giving Event

Once Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ was travelling soewhere and on the way he exhausted his provision but he spied sheep grazing nearby. The Arabs were known for their hospitality to travellers whom they fed goat's milk free of charge, Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ approached the shephered and told him that he was a traveller and hungry and would like him to provide him milk of one of his flock. The shephered explained that he was not the owner of the sheep but an employee of the real owner who was not there so he could not oblige. This was a proper Shari'ah procedure. Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ then tried him out. He said, "I will show you something profitable that will benefit both of us. You sell me one of these sheep. You can keep the price I pay and will get the sheep and also its milk. You can tell its owner that a wolf gobbled it up. He will believe you because he knows there are wolves in the jungle. "The shephered was prompt with his reply یا ھذا! فاین اللہ؟ {"O Man! Then where is Allah?} He meant to say that he could fool his employer, the owner of the sheep. But, there is the Owner of his master to cope with. "How will I fare with him?" and he added that he was not willing to be an accomplice in the deal. When he heard the answer, Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ said, "As long as people like you live on this earth, no tyrant can oppress anyone." Thus, till so far as hearts fear Allah, people think of the Hereafter and fear the standing before Allah crimes and oppressions cannot go on. This too was an example of Taqwa.

The Best Way To Eradicate Crime

We must realise that unless we develop this way of thinking we cannot hope to eradicate crime or fraudulent conduct. We may call the police to help us but the, most any security and check can do for us is to work in day time and in cities only but they will be ineffective at night and in lonely remote places when only one thing can do it. It is the fear of Allah. Nothing else can eradicate crime and evil. When men do not have the fear of Allah in their hearts then their society plunges to lowest depths. We can observe that happening today. There is a police force and another one over it, and there are control centres and departments, one over the other. Laws are being enacted but nothing is happening. The law courts are functioning, the police force is active and the anti-corruption cell is at work. Much money goes into creating and maintaining these cells and forces but, on the other side, there is corruption at its peak so those who are there to stop it are corrupt themselves. How many of these checks and counter-checks will be applied? There is always a loophole in the law or a way out is always found out. So far, no one has discovered a method to stop cirme completely but awe and fear of Allah together with the Hereafter in mind is the only way to eradicate crime and oppression.

The Taqwa Of the Companions رضی اللہ عنہم

It was this behaviour that the Holly Prophet ﷺ had grown in his noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم. The result was that if anyone happened to commit a wrong, he would become restless and would not be peaceful until he had the prescribed Shari'ah punishment applied to him and until he had sought forgiveness of Allah sincerely and repented to Him. The wrong-doer would approach the Holy Prophet ﷺ and ask him to sentence him and get the mark erased from him. Therefore, only fear of Allah in the hearts, and the thought of the Hereafter and the presence before Allah can wipe out crime from the world. Every other plan will fail.

Proceedings In Our Courts

I have been associated with the courts for many years. The procedure is that cases of theft and robbery should come to us finally in appeal. But, during the first three years we did not hear any case of theft or robbery. I was suprised. I investigated the matter and learnt that during the time only three or four appeals were filed. I exclaimed that anyone who goes by these statistics will think that we live in a peaceful society full of Angels.Only three or four cases of theft and banditry were brought to the Supreme court in three years! But if the same man reads our newspapers, he will find that innumerable thefts and dacoities are committed every day. When I probed further, I learnt that all such cases are settled in the lower courts and there is no reason to take them to the higher courts.

An Eye-opening Event

After I had been in court for three years, I received a case. Someone had arrived from Kuwait and had hired a taxi from the airport to his home and he had his luggage with him. At the Bahdurabad roundabout in Karachi a police posse stopped the taxi and after learning that the passenger had arrived from Kuwait appropriated his entire luggage at gun-point. This was the first case I received for hearing in which the police that are deputed to wipe out theft and banditry themselves used the official gun to snatch the property of other people. The custodians of law and guardians of peace and security were responsible for committing crime and disturbing peace and security. The only reason for it is that the fear of Allah no more finds a place in our hearts. We have forgotten that we will have to stand before Allah. We do not remind ourselves that we have to die and will be brought to life again. The result is that we are overtaken by murder and killing, lawlessness and restlessness.

How The Devil Works

We do not come to behave in this manner all of a sudden. Rather, we do it gradually. The devil does not prompt anyone to commit a grave sin at once. No man will do that if he prompts him to do it. For instance, the devil will not whisper to anyone straightaway that he should commit robbery because the man will not agree to do it in that way. The devil first gets him to do small things. For instance, he gets a man to ogle at women in the beginning. Gradully, the devil gets him to commit graver sins. When man becomes a habitual sinner, the devil reminds him that he did not think of Allah when he committed sins in the past. So he may commit a grave sin too again. In this manner, he gets him to do a grave sin and the man becomes a criminal.

Television Spoils Our Youth

We see young people carrying about pistol. At pistol point they loot someone, kill someone or dishonour someone. Did anyone do that before? Never! Young boys were first invited to watch the television on the pleas that it was watched the world over. They were shown films and this led to graver sin. These boys were gradually brain washed. Then they became bolder and forgot Allah and the standing before Him when they committed a sin. This led themfurther into the labyrinth of crime and sin.

Minor sins Lead To Graver sins

It is always the minor sins that lead man to the major ones. The Devil makes man commit the minor sins. When he commits them regularly, he becomes bold and then dares to commit the major ones. Our youth think that they will live forever, they will never be called upon to account for their actions and they may commit the gravest of sins because the door is open for them. There is an Arabic verse

الشر يبدأه في الاصل اصغره

Evil always commences from minor, insignificant evils.

Therefore, let not anyone do any wrong howsoever minor, thinking it to be insignificant and of no consequence. In reality, that is the devil's net in which he entangles the sinner and then gains control over him. Thereby, he removes from the sinner fear of Allah and the Hereafter. Because of that, we must shun all sin-major or minor-fearing Allah, all the time.

Is a sin minor or major?

Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanavi رحمة الله عليه has said that many people ask with much interest, "Is that sin minor or major?" They ask because if the sin is minor they may go ahead and commit it; if it is major, they will feel some fear in doing it.The respected Maulana used to say that the two things are like a spark and a live coal. Is anyone ever known to have placed a spark in a case because it was a mere spark that would not do any harm? No sane person would do it. That spark would turn into a fire inside the case and burn everything inside and then the case itself. The fire may then engulf the suroundings. It is the same thing with a sin-minor or major, it is a spark. If a man wilfully commits a sin, it might devour all that the man had built up (of pious deeds). Therefore, let us not enquire whether a sin is major or minor. Let us see if any act is sinful or not, a deed is allowed or disallowed. Let us ask whether Allah has permitted us to do something or not. Once we know that Allah has disallowed something then we must remember also that we will have to stand before Him and account for our deeds. In this way we can be like those who are described in the verse of the Qur'an quoted above from Surah an-Nazi'at by remembering that Allah is there even when we are tempted and thus we may ward off the temptation.

Or, This Is What We Must Remember When Tempted

Maulana Doctor Abdul Hayy رحمة الله عليه used to say that often man does not imagine Allah when he thinks of Him as watching over him. This is because he has never seen Him and one can only picture that which he has already seen. The Maulana رحمة الله عليه suggested that when anyone is tempted to commit a sin, he must imagine that his father is watching him or that his children are present and seeing what he does, or he must think about his teacher or mentor. He may think of anyone else: his students, his friends. He may ask himself, "Would I do it if one of these is watching?

Maulana Doctor Albdul Hayy رحمة الله عليه asked "Suppose you are tempted to cast a wrong glance. At that moment just picture that your Shaikh is watching you. Or, your father; or, your children. Will you then glance in the forbidden manner? Of course not! Because if one of them catches you in the act, he will think of you as naughty. You will automatically cease to cast the wrong glance.

Thus, if you can desist from wrong-doing from fear of an ordinary creature, you should think that Allah, the Creator and Master of all, the King of Kings is watching. If you think that way everytime you are tempted then you will feel obstructed from committing sin.

Sweetness Of Sin Is Fleeting

When a man is accustomed to sin then, if he tries to, he will find it difficult to give up the habit initially. But that is the right time and he must force himself to give up the sinful habit. He should stiffle the desire to sin for the sake of Allah and once he does it for the sake of Allah, He will give him such a sweet taste of faith and belief that he will come to find sin a distasteful experience. May Allah grant all of us the sweetness that preserves us from sinful activity Aameen.

Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanvi رحمة الله عليه used to compare the enjoyment derived from sin to the persistent urge of an itchy person to scratch. He goes on scratching and derives pleasure from it. But, that pleasure is unhealthy. He will get little wounds on his skin which would pain and burn and so undo the pleasure he had derived from itching. Now, if he had refrained from scratching and told himself that it was better for him, and if he had applied an ointment instead, and taken the unpleasant medicine, then he would have saved himself from the after-effects. So, he realises that soundness of health is preferable to the enjoyment derived from itching. In the same way enjoyment derived from sin is misleading and unreal. Let us surrender it for the sake of Allah. Instead, we may choose taqwa. We will realise then how far Allah elevates our ranks. The base desires have been created for the sole reason that we smother them and obtain thereby the pleasure of Allah. May Allah by lHis Mercy cause us to realise the truth. Aameen.

Let the Youth Fear And The Aged Hope

It is a Believer's distinguishing mark that he fears Allah and at the same time places his hopes in Him. But, our elders have stated that it is better to overcome with fear of Allah in the youthful stages. This is because at that age a person is healthy, he is active in his movement and strong and he can do everything he wishes to do. He also is tempted easily and often, finds greater opportunities to sin and a greater urge too. So, it is more proper that he grows a fear of Allah at this age as it will preserve him from sinning. As for one who has attained old age, it is advisable that he hopes for the mercy of Allah in an intensified manner so that he does not despair.

Life Is Regulated By Fear

Some people argue that it is not necessary to develop the fear of Allah. They claim, "Allah is ours. Why fear Him? He is the One who creatred us and He says again and again in the Qur'an that 'He is Forgiving, Merciful.' Then why should we fear Him." If this is the way people think, how may we expect them to develop fear of Allah. It is the result of this sort of thinking that people live a carefree life, unmindful of the fear of Allah and deeply involved in sin. But,. the truth is that if there is no fear in the mind none of the tasks of this life can be accomplished, no affair can progress. If a student does not fear failure in examinations, he will not study. It is the fear that inspires to prepare and study. If an employee does not fear dismissal he will be derelict in the performance of his official duties, he would warm his chair doing nothing or look to his personal affairs. If a son does not fear his father, a subordinate does not fear his officer, people do not fear the law then there would be anarchy and lawlessness. Everyone's rights would be violated. Today, we find ourselves in an unruly atmosphere, no one is safe, life and property are insecure and meaningless, daylight robberies are committed. Man is worthless even in comparison with small insects. This is because we do not have the fear of Allah and we do not fear the law or authority. Money can buy law so anyone who is prepared to pay is above law. The result is lawlessness.

The Freedom Movement

In the Indian sub-continent, when the British ruled over it, Muslims and Hindus collaborated to drive them out of India, and launched a joint movement holding demonstrations and public meetings and calling for strikes. Sometimes the Muslims were asked to behave as Hindus and sometimes it was difficult to distinguish a Muslim from a Hindu. For instance, during the protest demonstrations, Muslims also marked their forehead in the Hindu fashion and went to their temples and took part in their rites. Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه did not like the manner in which the Movement progressed and not only did he not take part in the movement but he also advised his acquaintances and disciples against it.

The Red Cap Fear

At one time during the movement, a delegation of its leaders visited Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه to convince him to cooperate with them. He told them plainly that he was not in agreement with the way the movement was going on when they suggested that if he joined and supported it the British would soon be driven out. He also asked them what they had achieved in the past few years during which they had held demonstrations, organised public meetings and called for strikes? One of them remarked that although they had not gained independence they had succeeded in removing fear of the Red Cap from the minds of the people. The police then used to don the red cap and were known by it. "No one now fears the police. There was a time when on seeing the police the entire locality trembled with fear. This is a great success and soon we will drive the British out, too."

Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه told them that they had done a very bad thing by removing fear of the police from the minds of the people. He said, "By removing fear of the red cap you have given freedom to thieves and bandits. They will do the bad things without fear of the police. The least you could have done when you removed the fear of the red cap was to instill the fear of your green cap in the minds of the people. That would have been a great success. But, you have removed the fear of authoritry without replacing it with another fear with the result that society will face lawlessness and restlessness. People will be in constant danger of losing their lives, property and honour. You have not done a good thing and I do not praise you for that."

No Longer was there any Fear

These words were spoken by Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه about sixty years ago. We can see today that there is no longer fear of authority in the minds of the people and the consequences are apparent in the raging chaos and disorder our society goes through. It was seen in those times that if a murder took place in a locality, the entire country shook with the news and everyone called for an investigation into the murder. But, today, with our minds without fear, human lives are not even as worthy as mosquitoes and flies.

Instill Fear Of Allah

It is fear on which depends the conduct of the world. Without it there will be disorder, lack of peace, and terrorism. The Qur'an says frequently; adopt taqwa, be God-fearing, fear Allah - and as a consequence, refrain from disobedience. Just as the affairs of the world cannot be conducted without fear, so also religion depends on fear of Allah. If there is no fear or not much fear- then we will experience a sinful society: one which we find ourselves in today. The Qur'an tells us of Paradise, warns us of Hell and threatens us with its punishment. It describes the majesty and greatness of Allah and His powers so that Muslims think of it and ponder over it and implant in themselves the Fear of Allah.

Fearing Allah In Solitude

Fear of police, the law, the government or of imprisonment is one that bars a person from misbehaving in the presence of other people. But, when a man fears Allah then even if he is alone in the wilderness or in the dark of the night, he will not commit a sin- although there is no one else to see him. When a Believer in such circumstances keeps himself away from sin then there is nothing else apart from the fear of Allah that stops him from it.

Fear Of Allah When Fasting

We have the example of fear of Allah in these days too. A man may be a great sinner but if he Fasts in the month of Ramadan then inspite of a terrible thirst from severe heat and being all alone in his room he will not drink water. A person may have the water available to him while he is tempted to have a drink in private but in today's times too we will not find a Muslim who gives in to it and secretly has a glass of water. If he drinks water no one will ever know that he has cheated but he will not drink it.

What was it that stopped him from drinking water in private and continuing to pretend that he was Fasting? It was the fear of Allah in his mind. We are accustomed to Fasting and it is the habit that instills in us fear of Allah.

Let Us Be Fearful At All Times

Shari'ah calls on us to extend the fear of Allah to every department of life just as we apply it during Fasting. Thus, if we are tempted to cast a wrong glance, fear of Allah. must prevent us from doing so. We must do the same thing when we are tempted to backbite or tell lies. When fear of Allah is imbibed in us then we will never disobey Allah and it is this behaviour that Shari'ah wants us to develop.

Who will get Paradise?

The Holy Qur'an says:

وَاَمَّا مَنْ خَافَ مَقَامَ رَبِّهٖ وَنَهَى النَّفْسَ عَنِ الْهَوٰى ۙ۝ فَاِنَّ الْجَنَّةَ هِيَ الْمَاْوٰى (سورہ النازعات: ۴۰، ۴۱)

But as for him who feared the standing before his Lord and restrained (his) soul from caprices, surely the Garden shall be his abode.

(an Nazi'at. 79:40-41)

These are wonderful words. They are about the man who understands that he will one day stand before his Lord and asks himself how he will face Him, and his fear is so severe that he restrains himself from pursuing his base desires. Such a man will have his abode in Paradise that is prepared for such people alone.

Paradise Is Surrounded By Difficulties

A Hadith tells us that the Holy Prophet ﷺ said:

ان الجنة خفت بالمكاره

Surely, Paradise is surrounded by hardship. (Muslim)

That is, things that a man does not like surround Paradise–things that call for toil and hardship. He has to overcome them to attain Paradise. That is why man is asked to instill fear of Allah in such a manner that he is prevented from doing the prohibited things. When he keeps away from them then he is assured of Paradise. The awe and fear should be to such an extent that whatever a man says or does he is fearful lest he says or do anything that displeases his Master, his Creator. Nothing he does or says is against the wishes of Allah. The Companions رضی اللہ عنہم feared Allah to such a degree that they were restless until they presented themselves before the Holy Prophet ﷺ and asked him to pass a sentence over them for their wrong.

Seeking Forgiveness After Worship

As the degree of fear progresses, man does not merely fear the committing of sin but he also fears that his worship might not be upto the mark. He may not have put in enough effort in his act to bring it to the standard approved by Allah. In other words, a man does something to please Allah but fears that he may leave something out of it or perform it in a way that displeases Allah. Our righteous predecessors have advised us that man must carry on being pious and righteous but continue to fear Allah. The Qur'an has said :

تَتَجَافٰى جُنُوْبُهُمْ عَنِ الْمَضَاجِعِ يَدْعُوْنَ رَبَّهُمْ خَوْفًا وَّطَمَعًا.....

(السجدہ:١٦)

Their sides forsake their beds as they call on their Lord in fear and in hope (as-Sajdah, 32:16)

They get up during the night to worship Allah but are fearful all the while they pray to their Lord unsure if their effort is worth presenting before Him.

The Condition Of The Pious Men

Allah also says in the Qur'an in reference to the pious people:

كَانُوْا قَلِيْلًا مِّنَ الَّيْلِ مَا يَهْجَعُوْنَ o وَبِالْاَ سْحَارِهُمْ يَسْتَغْفِرُوْنَ

(الذریت:١٧،١٨)

They used to sleep but little at night. And in the mornings they would ask for forgiveness (az-Zariyat 51:17-18)

The slaves of Allah sleep a. They offer the Tahajjud Salat and at dawn they seek the forgiveness of Allah. We are told in a Hadith that Hazrat Aishah رضی اللہ عنہا asked the Holy Prophet ﷺ, "Messenger of Allah, There is no time at Dawn to seek forgiveness Forgiveness is sought after committting a wrong while they pious people have worshipped Allah at night and have not committed a sin." The Prophet ﷺ said, "They seek forgiveness for a possible lapse or shortcoming in their worship. They fear they may have not put in a proper effort as was necessary." These people say:

مَا عَبَدْنَاكَ حَقَّ عِبَادَتِكَ

We have not worshipped You as is the right of Your worships.

The pious people do not fear the commission of sin alone, they also fear they might commit a mistake in their worship which would earn the displeasure of Allah.

Fear Of Allah Depends On Closeness To Him

The more a person is close to Allah and the more he has recognised Him, the more he will fear Him. The more he is away from Him, the less he will fear Allah. The latter person is like an infant. If he faces a King, a minister, even a lion, he will not fear him. But he who recognises the King fears him. The Companions رضی اللہ عنہم were the closest to Allah after the Prophets علیہم السلام and they feared Allah accordingly.

Hanzalah رضی اللہ عنہ And Fear Of Allah

Once Hazrat Hanzalah رضی اللہ عنہ went to the Messenger of Allah ﷺ trembling with fear. He said, "O Messenger of Allah, Hanzalah has become a hypocrite." The Prophet ﷺ said, "How is that Hanzalah?" Hanzalah رضی اللہ عنہ said, "O Messenger of Allah ﷺ! when I am with you and you remind us of Paradise and Hell and of the Hereafter we almost see them and become soft-hearted and wish to neglect the world. But when we go away to our homes, to our family and occupation, we no longer have those feelings and get involved in the worldly affairs. We have one feeling here but quite the contrary when we are away from you. This is a sign of the hypocrite." The Holy Prophet ﷺ said in reply, يا حنظلة! ساعة ساعة "O Hanzalah do not worry! This happens.There is a time for everything. Sometimes the heart softens much and sometimes it is not so. That is not the standard with Allah. The true standard is measured according to deeds. Let not men do anything against Shari'ah " (Muslim)

Umar رضی اللہ عنہ and Fear of Allah

Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ had heard the Prophet ﷺ say, "Umar will enter Paradise." He had also heard him say, "When I was on Mi'raj and visited Paradise, I found a splendid palace. A woman sat on one of its corners and performed ablution. I asked to whom did that palace belong? and I was told that it belonged to Umar. I wished very much to go into it because it was very beautiful but, O Umar, I remembered your modesty. You have great sense of honour. That is why I did not enter it but returned." On hearing it Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ began to weep and said, "Will I prevent you on that account?"

This was the position of Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ who had heard the Prophet ﷺ give him the glad tidings of Paradise and of a palace for him there. In spite of that he approached Hazrat Huzayfah bin Yaman رضی اللہ عنہ after the death of the Prophet ﷺ and asked him to confirm that he was not included among the hypocrites whose name the Prophet ﷺ had revealed to him. The Prophet ﷺ had in his life time revealed to Hazrat Huzayfah رضی اللہ عنہ the names of the hypocrites in Madinah. Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ knew that the Prophet ﷺ had given him the glad tidings of Paradise but he was worried lest he had done something afterwards that might have obliterated the previous standing. Thus, the more a person is near to Allah and knows Him better, the more he fears Him. We must know that unless a person fears Allah to any extent, he cannot acquire taqwa.

How May We Develop This Habit

We may grow fear of Allah in our hearts by setting aside sometime during the day or night to meditate. We can do it after dawn prayer or just before sleeping. We may imagine we are dying, lying on the death bed, all relatives around. The soul departs from the body and it is being shrouded. Then the body is lowered into the grave after which the angels put their questions. We are then before Allah. Let us think along these lines. If a man thinks in this way everyday, then Insha Allah he will find that he is no more neglectful. We are neglectful because we do not think of death although we bury our dead relatives with our own hands. We do not think of death although we see many sudden deaths, we see people who are occupied day in and day out in amassing wealth die suddently and do not even turn back to glimpse at their wealth. In spite of seeing all this, we connect death only to the dying and the dead but never think that we would die too. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said,

اكثروا ذكر هاذم اللذات الموت

"Remember often that which will end all pleasent seeming things." (Musnad, Ahmad)

If we devote sometime every day to meditate in this manner, we will grow fear of Allah in our hearts to some extent at least.

Fate Overtakes

The Holy Prophet ﷺ said, "One of you conducts himself in a manner that qualifies him for Paradise until he is at a distance of one arm's length from achieving it when fate overtakes him and he begins to behave in a manner that leads him to Hell until he finally goes to Hell. As against this, one of you behaves in a manner that qualifies him for Hell but fate overtakes him and he begins to perform deeds that lead him to Paradise until he enters Paradise.

We Must Not Be Proud Of Our Deeds

We learn from this Hadith that none of us should boast that he performs certain deeds. We cannot rely on our deeds because reliance may only be placed on the final deeds of a person's life as we see in another Hadith:

انما العبرة بالخواتيم

"It is only the ending that is of consequence."

(Bukhari, Book 81, Ar-Riqaq Hadith: 6493)

The behaviour of a person in the last stages of his life is of consequence. That is what is seen. We must not, therefore, do things that take us towards Hell but we must do pious things and keep fearing Allah.

Inauspiciousness Of Evil Deeds

However, we must remember that no one will be compelled to perform evil deeds to despatch him to Hell. That person, in fact, does those deeds of his own accord without the least bit of compulsion. But, the inauspiciousness of the bad deeds that he does erases the reward accumulated against past good deeds. It also pulls him towards more bad deeds. Some sins are malignant so they drive the sinner deeper and deeper into sin. The result is that his past pious life is overshadowed. That is why our elders have advised us that we must not consider any sin insignificant; it could be that a minor sin might cause one to lose all his previous pious efforts. Besides, the mere commission of a sin on the presumption that it is minor makes it a major sin, and the danger is that it leads to other sinful activities and gradually the man becomes a habitual sinner.

Example Of Minor & Major Sins

Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه has cited the examples of minor and major sins as a spark and a large fire. No one will enclose a spark in his suit case on the assumption that it is a harmless thing. If he does that then the spark will burn the suit case and all its contents to ashes.

Result Of Rude Behaviour With Elders

To show disrespect to righteous men, to be rude to them or to pain them often causes adverse consequences. Even if anyone has a difference of opinion with a righteous person then he must let it remain at that because if he displays rudeness to him and is disrespectful then the rude man becomes involved in sinful activity. My respected father, Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه has written a booklet, Dars-e-Ibrat (Urdu) in which he has described a lesson-giving incident of a very righteous man. All his life he was a very pious and righteous man and regarded an eminent Shaikh and a man devoted to Allah. Suddenly he took an about-turn and did evil deeds. So, sometimes this is the punishment against minor sins. Therefore, we must not do anything sinful under the supposition that it is minor lest it be the one committed at the end of one's life. All religious elders make it a practice to supplicate Allah that He make their end a righteous one.

Blessings Of Piety

In juxtaposition to this a man is evil, immersed in sin, suddenly he is inspired by Allah and he becomes pious. This inspiration follows a good deed. For instance, he is inspired first to do a minor good deed through whose auspiciousness Allah causes him to do more good deeds, and, as a result, the doors of Paradise are opened up for him. This is why the Holy Prophet ﷺ has said:

لا يحقرن احد من المعروف شيئا

Let not anyone think little of a pious deed. (Muslim)

How can he know that very deed may bring about a revolution in his life and success with it? Allah may then forgive him. There are innumerable instances of righteous people who began the climb after doing a minor good deed. We must not belittle even a minor pious action. I have written a booklet in Urdu by the name Assan Naykiyan (Easy Good Deeds, in English) which is a collection of apparently small, and minor acts which are termed virtuous and excellent in the Ahadith. If a man performs them then he will add considerably to his pious deeds. Every Muslim must read that booklet and accustom himself to perform those pious deeds.

Reality Of Faith

Some people argue that since the fate of a man is already decided whether he will go to Paradise or to Hell, as pointed out in this Hadith, what then is the purpose of doing good deeds. We must understand that the Hadith does not mean to say that a man will do what is prescribed for him. On the contrary, the Hadith tells us that whatever he will do at his own option is recorded in fate. Fate is the knowledge of Allah who knows beforehand what a man will do of his own free will. That is recorded in the Preserved Tablet (Lauh Mahfuz). So, a man's entry into Paradise or Hell depends on his own actions, and it is not that a man will do what is predestined for him. It is actually the reverse, fate is what a man will do of his own accord. Allah has allowed man to choose and he acts according to his choice. Thus, it is wrong to sit idle because everything is predestined. When the Holy Prophet ﷺ narrated this Hadith, the Companions رضی اللہ عنہم asked him:

ففیما العمل یارسول اللہ صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم

What is the meaning of doing anything, then, O Messenger of Allah!

They asked him what was the purpose of being good or bad when it has been decided already whether a man will go to Paradise or Hell. The Holy Prophet ﷺ said :

اعملوا فکل میسر لھا خلق لہ

Go on performing deeds. Every person will have to do what he has been created for.(Therefore, let us use our discretion and perform our deeds)

Let Us Not Be Careless

The purpose of narrating this Hadith is to caution man from placing reliance on his personal voluntary devotional exercises. He should not be over-confident that if he treads the path of Shari'ah he is sure of Paradise. On the contrary, man must not be sure till the last moment of his life. He must always worry and fear lest he suffers a change of behaviour for the worse. Maulana Rumi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ has said

اندریں راہ ے تراش و ے خراش تادم آخر دے فارغ مباش

"There are always changes on this path, Till the last moment, one cannot be carefree."

One has to keep one's eyes open lest he goes on the wrong path. Many prominent people have erred through carelessness. Therefore, we must not be neglectful till the last moment of our lives.

The Lightest Punishment Of Hell

We are told of a saying of the Holy Prophet ﷺ in a Hadith: The lightest punishment a man will receive on the Day of Resurrection will be that two sparks will be placed below his soles. But they will be so severe that because of them the man's brain will boil and he will suppose that he is being given the severest of punishments." Some narrations state that this punishment will be awarded to the paternal uncle of the Holy Prophet ﷺ, Abu Talib because he had been very helpful to the Holy Prophet ﷺ but did not profess faith until his last breath. Allah knows best.

Nevertheless, we may imagine the condition of one who is awarded a very severe punishment when the lightest punishment will cause the recepient's brains to boil. Let us sometimes imagine the chastisement in Hell so that we grow in ourselves fear of Allah and gain taqwa.

Stages In Hell

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has described the condition of different dwellers of Hell. He has said that some will have the Fire upto their ankles. We have seen in the foregoing lines what will happen to those who have the fire below their soles and can imagine what will happen to him when the fire reaches the ankles. There will be some dwellers of Hell who will have the fire upto their knees, some more will have upto their backs, others will have it upto their Collar bones joining their shoulder blades to the breast bones. These are some of the stages of the dwellers of Hell. May Allah protect us by His mercy and benevolence. Aameen!

The Gathering Ground

This was a short description of what would happen in Hell. Before anyone is sent to Hell, there will be a Gathering Ground on Yaumul Hashr, (the day of gathering). What will happen there? The Messenger of Allah ﷺ has said, "People will stand before the Lord of the worlds. They will be covered with perspiration, some down into it upto part of their ears.". This means that it will be very hot and men will perspire so much that they will drown into it upto their ears. The words of another Hadith are: "On the Day of Resurrection, people will perspire so much that their perspiration will go under the ground upto seventy cubics, and it will drown people (above the ground) upto their ears."

The Expanse of Hell

There is another Hadith narrated by Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہ that they were seated in the company of the Messenger of Allah ﷺ when they heard a loud noise from something falling down. The Holy Prophet ﷺ asked his companions if they knew what that noise was and they said only Allah and His Messenger knew best. Then, the Holy Prophet ﷺ said, "A stone was dropped into Hell seventy years ago and, today, it has reached the bottom. This sound that you heard is from the stone touching the bottom of Hell, " Until recently men found it difficult to believe that a stone would take seventy years to travel to the bottom when it is dropped from the mouth but now science does confirm such a possibility. Thus science tells us that there are many stars that emanate light since the time they were created and although their light travels towards us it has not yet reached earth. When the creation of Allah is itself so large and spacious, then Hell too

(which is part of it) could be so large that a stone would land down seventy years after release. The aim of this Hadith is to impress upon us the expanse of Hell. May Allah protect all of us from Hell. Aameen

The gist of these Ahadith is that we must think of death and of Paradise and Hell. Gradually, this will grow in our hearts fear of Allah. It will then be easy to perform pious deeds and shun sin.

May Allah grow in our hearts fear of Allah and give us strength to restrain ourselve from sin. Aameen!

And our concluding prayer is that Praise belongs to Allah, Lord of the worlds.

Keep Good Bonds With Relatives

الحمد لله نحمده و نستعينه ونستغفره و نؤمن به و نتوكل عليه ونعوذ بالله من شرور انفسناومن سيات اعمالنا من يهده الله فلا مضل له ومن يضلله فلا هادى له و نشهد ان لا اله الا الله وحده لاشريك له ونشهد ان سيد نا و سندنا و نبينا ومولانا محمدا عبده و رسوله صلى الله تعالى عليه وعلى اله واصحابه وبارك وسلم تسليما كثيراً كثيراً

اما بعد !

فاعوذ بالله من الشيطٰن الرجيم بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم

عن ابى هريرة رضى الله عنه قال قال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم ان الله تعالى خلقِ الخلق حتى اذا فرغ منه قامت الرحم فقالت هذا مقام العائذبك من القطيعة قال نعم اما ترضين ان اصل من وصلك واقطع من قطعك قالت بلى قال بذلك لك۔

ثم قال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم اقرؤا ان شئتم: " فَهَلْ عَسَيْتُمْ إِنْ

تَوَلَّيْتُمْ اَنْ تُفْسِدُوْا فِى الْاَرْضِ وَتُقَطِّعُوْا اَرْحَامَكُمْ اُولٰٓئِكَ الَّذِيْنَ لَعَنَهُمُ اللّٰهُ فَاَصَمَّهُمْ وَاَعْمٰى اَبْصَارَهُمْ" (مسلم، كتاب البر والصلة، باب صلة الرحم)

All praise belongs to Allah. We praise Him, beseech Him for help and seek His forgiveness. We believe in Him and place our trust in Him. We seek refuge in Allah from the mischief of our souls and from our evil deeds. He whom Allah guides, none can mislead and he whom He leaves stray none can guide. And, we bear witness that there is no god but Allah Who is Alone and has no partner, and we bear witness that Sayyidina Muhammad is His Slave and His Messenger - may Allah bless him, his family and his companions. And may He favour him and give him peace, a complete peace.

I seek refuge in Allah from the cursed devil. In the name of Allah, the Compassionate, the Merciful.

We have it from Abu Hurayrah رضى الله عنه the Messenger of Allah ﷺ said, "Allah created the creations and when He finished from that ar-Rahm (ties of relationship) stood up and said: (O Allah) This is the place where I seek refuge with You from the severing of relations. He said: Yes! Are you not pleased that I will keep good relationship with one who keeps you united and I will sever relationship with one who severs you. It said: Certainly! Allah Said: That is how it will be for you.

Then the Messenger of Allah ﷺ said, "Recite, if you like:

فَهَلْ عَسَيْتُمْ اِنْ تَوَلَّيْتُمْ اَنْ تُفْسِدُوْا فِى الْاَرْضِ وَتُقَطِّعُوْا اَرْحَامَكُمْ ۝ اُولٰٓئِكَ الَّذِيْنَ لَعَنَهُمُ اللّٰهُ فَاَصَمَّهُمْ وَاَعْمٰى اَبْصَارَهُمْ (سورة محمد: ٢٣-٢٤)

If you turn away, then is it to be expected of you anything but that you would do corruption in the land and sever your ties of kinship? Those are they whom Allah has cursed, so He has made them deaf and blinded their sights."

(Surah Muhammad 47:22-23)

Keeping Good Relations Encouraged

We have read the Hadith narrated by Abu Hurayrah رضى الله عنه. In another version, it is stated that ties of relationship caught hold of the throne. Anyway the question arises how did it stand up? This is something that only Allah and His Messenger ﷺ know. We cannot describe it because ar-Rahm or ties of relationship is not something with a body that may stand up, but sometimes Allah will grant a body in the Hereafter and the heaven to such things as do not normally have a body.

Yet Another Verse

Actually, this Hadith is an explanation of all those verses of the Qur'an in which Allah repeatedly enjoins that rights of relatives be fulfilled and ties be maintained with them. Thus whenever he delivered the sermon of Nikah (marriage), the Prophet ﷺ recited the following verse of the Qur'an:

وَاتَّقُوا اللّٰهَ الَّذِىْ تَسَآءَلُوْنَ بِهٖ وَالْاَرْحَامَ ۚ (النساء: ١)

So fear Allah by Whom you demand (your rights) of one another, and fear (breaking) kinship of wombs. (an-Nisa : 1)

When everyone demands his rights from another person he demands them by Allah - on His Name and cautions him to fear lest he violates the rights of relatives and face Allah's punishment in the Hereafter. The Holy Qur'an and the Ahadith are replete with exhortations to meet the rights of kinship.

Shari'ah Is Another Name For Granting Rights Of Other People

The truth is that Shari'ah is actually another name for meeting the rights of others. There are rights of Allah and rights of the slaves of Allah, and the latter differ according to different people. There are rights of parents, children, spouse, kith and kin, neighbours, companions in journey, and in this manner, Shari'ah is a text defining rights of people. If anyone does not give even one of these rights then his following Shari'ah is faulty, his religion is incomplete. If any one meets the rights of Allah but does not meet the rights of fellowmen then his religion is blemished and he is not following the religion faithfully. Among the rights, Allah has given rights to relatvies too particularly.

All Human Beings Are Relatives.

If we think of it, all children of Hazrat Adam عليه السلام are one family related to each other as the Prophet ﷺ has said. All human beings have one, common father Hazrat Adam عليه السلام. We are descended from him, all of us. Later on human beings branched off into families and tribes. They settled at different places. Relations came to be known as distant and were then considered as such although actually all mankind are relatives of one another. Some people are closed relatives and some distant, but all are tied in kinship, all are relatives.

Giving Rights Results In Peace

Some people have special rights. They are close relatives and they include brothers, sisters, uncles-paternal and maternal - spouse, father and mother. In common, parlance, they are the ones who are called relatvies. If their rights are given faithfully, life will be peaceful and secure. What we see of mutual wrangling and disputes, hatred for one another and enmity, and lawsuits, are all results of neglecting mutual rights among close relatives. If everyone gives rights of his relatives, kith and kin, there will never be any dispute never squabbles and never disagreements, and never any lawsuit. That is why Allah has commanded us to give these rights and earn a peaceful life. The family is the base of a society. If a family is not united and its members do not love each other and do not have proper mutual relation then the whole society suffers. Its mischief spreads in the entire society and it soils it. Then the entire nation gets the stain. To avoid this, Allah and His Messenger ﷺ have laid great emphasis on giving rights of relatives and keeping good ties with them.

Keep Good Ties For The Sake Of Allah

It is every religion and every society that calls for giving rights of relatives and maintaining good relations with them but the principle taught by the Holy Prophet ﷺ in this regard is distinct from every other teaching. If we adopt that principle we will never lag behind in giving rights of relatives and dealing well with them. The principle he taught us is that we should never aim to please our relatives whenever we deal with them nicely but we should aim at obtaining the pleasure of Allah. Our intention in metting out fair treatment to our relatives should be to obey the command of Allah and thus please Him and we must tell ourselves that we do that for the pleasure of Allah. If we do it with the intention to please Allah, then we will not anticipate a return from the relatvie for our good behaviour with him. Our minds will be made up accordingly and if our relatives are happy because of our conduct and thank us or reciprocate then that would be a blessing for us. If they do not reciprocate and do not be grateful and do not show happiness at our conduct even then we have to continue our efforts as part of the obligation imposed on us by Allah.

We Must Not Expect Gratitude And Reciprocation

While everyone is agreed that the rights of relatives should be met, the problem arises because, once these rights are given, the giver expects a grateful gesture and a reciprocal move. The recepient is supposed to publicise the donor's conduct. But, if he does not thank or respond then the giver of rights is disappointed and feels hurt. He begins to think bad of his relative and disparages him with the result that he loses the reward he had earned. He harbours illwill for the relative and will never again show goodwill to him. When the time comes, he will hesitate to deal with him in a good manner because he does not even utter a 'thank you', to him. Not only does he cease to deal with the relative in a good way, he also surrenders whatever reward he had earned previously because the goodwill that he had shown was not for the sake of Allah but to get a 'thank you' and a return. The Holy Prophetﷺ has said, therefore, whenever we deal with other people in a good manner we should have the pleasure of Allah in mind and anticipate no return from the person to whom we are being good, nor may we expect him to show gratitude in words.

Who Is The One To Keep the bonds of Kinship Intact

There is a Hadith that we must remember always. The Holy Prophetﷺ has said:

لَيْسَ الْوَاصِلُ بِالْمُكَافِئِ لٰكِنَّ الْوَاصِلُ مَنْ اِذَا قُطِعَتْ رِحْمُهُ وَصَلَهَا

(بخاری، کتاب الادب، باب لیس الواصل بالمکافی)

"Al-Wasil - the person who keeps ties of relationship intact is not the one who reciprocates but he is the one who maintains good relations with those relatives who break bonds of kinship with him." (Bukhari Book of Adab, 78. Hadith 7991)

That person is not credited with having maintained ties of relationship who does it in a gesture of reciprocation, because the other person has maintained the ties. He reciprocates in equal measure to what his relative does in keeping alive the bonds. He says to himself, "If he keeps the ties of relationship, I will do likewise but if he severs them, I too will sever the ties." This person is not defined as one who joins ties of kinship. He will not be rewarded for joining ties of kinship. The person who really joins relationship is he who carries on his effort inspite of the fact that the other man violates the right and severs the relationship. This person ignores the other man's behaviour and keeps the ties intact for the sake of Allah and to gain his pleasure. He is the one who really joins bonds of kinship and who is entitled to reward on that account.

We Are Restricted By Custom

If we asked anyone today if our relatives have any rights, he will say promptly that they do have. But the question is how many give these rights and to what extent?

If we investigate, we will find that we are restricted by our custom and the bonds that we maintain with our relatives are limited by custom. We do not go beyond that. For instance, we take care to offer a gift on the occasion of a marraige of a relative because it is a custom although we may not be able to pay for it or not feel like giving the gift. If we do not make a present, the hosts may feel offended because they had given gifts when they had been invited. So the gift is given not because of love but to meet custom and to show off. The result is that the giver of gifts will not earn a reward but, on the contrary, is committing a sin because his intention is to show off and earn a name for himself.

It Is Unlawful To Give An Equal Return On Occasions

A custom is in vogue in our society whereby guests repay the host the gifts that they had given them when they had invited them earlier. This exchange of gifts in like value is known as Niyotah. People remember the gifts different people had given them in the shape of cash and know what they have to give. Some people maintain a proper record that is consulted when the occasion arises. This amount has to be paid at all cost even if he cannot afford it and has to leave his children hungry. If he does not give, he will be looked down upon by society members. The principle on which this works is the 'equal return' basis, and it is unlawful. The Qur'an has called it Riba and it says about it:

وَمَآ اٰتَيْتُمْ مِّنْ رِّبًا لِّيَرْبُوَا۟ فِيْٓ اَمْوَالِ النَّاسِ فَلَا يَرْبُوْا عِنْدَ اللّٰهِ ۚ وَمَآ اٰتَيْتُمْ مِّنْ زَكٰوةٍ تُرِيْدُوْنَ وَجْهَ اللّٰهِ فَاُولٰٓئِكَ هُمُ الْمُضْعِفُوْنَ (سورة الروم:٣٩)

And whatever you give in usury in order that it may increase upon people's riches, it increases not with Allah; but what you give in zakah, seeking Allah's Countenance (will increase), so those who (do this) shall have manifold increase

(ar-Rum. 30:39)

This refers to giving anything to other people in the form of Niyotah as an apparent gift (but with the intention of receiving back a like value or an increase). There will be no increase with Allah except when zakah is given, or Sadaqah, with the intention of obtaining the pleasure of Allah. In the latter cases, Allah does increase the wealth of the givers.

Why Is A Gift Given

If anyone feels that he should present a gift to one of his relative who is celebrating a happy occasion then he will earn a reward for that provided he is sincere and expects no return for it. His only motive is to fulfil the obligation of relationship and to please Allah. His gift will be bracketed with joining relationship.

How May The Intention Be Verified

How may one know whether the intention in giving the gift is to see the pleasure of Allah or to hope for a reimbursement from the recepient? It is verified very easily. If the giver of a gift looks out for a sign of gratitude from the receiver and waits for a return gesture when he invites the receiver to an occasion then these are clear signs that the gift was not given for the sake of Allah. It is also the same when the return gift is of a lesser value and, therefore, not appreciated. In these cases a gift is given, but it is wasted because the intention is blemish. On the other hand, it is a sign that the gift is given to secure the pleasure of Allah if the giver does not expect thanks from the receiver and forgets he had given a gift; he does not expect a return for that but tells himself that he has given the gift for the sake of Allah and expects no gratitude or a return gesture. "I will not mind if he does not reciprocate," he tells himself. This gift turns out to be a blessing for both the giver and receiver.

A Gift Is Lawful And Pure

My respected father Maulana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه used to say that the gift a Muslim gives to another willingly and with love with no ostentatious designs, is the most lawful and pure thing in the universe. This is because in what a man earns himself, he might have committed excess or erred somewhere so that the earning is not fully lawful but when a Muslim gives a gift sincerely with love and no ulterior motive, the only driving force being to please Allah then the gift is lawful without doubt. This is why my respected father valued a gift very much and Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه had set certain principles for giving gifts and he valued them. He was very particular in spending them because that was a lawful pure wealth of a Muslim given for the sake of Allah. That gift was full of blessings. In short a gift that is given for the sake of Allah is auspicious for the giver and the receiver, and that which is given with ostentatious designs is neither a blessing for the giver nor for the receiver.

A Gift That One Waits For Is Not Auspicious

The Hadith goes so far as to tell us that if we look forward to the visit of a certain person who will bring a gift along for us then that gift is inauspicious. But, a gift is auspicious if it is received without waiting for it or asking for it. Allah puts it into somebody's mind to give a present and he presents the gift then it is very auspicious. In other words, the auspiciousness wanes away if one waits for the gift, personal objective being behind the wait.

The Case Of an Elder Religious Man

There was a very devoted, righteous man. He was god-fearing and deeply religious. Such men often face difficult trials. Once he encountered hunger and remained without food for several days. He was delivering a sermon to his disciples but because of severe weakness could not convey his message well. His voice was very low and weak. One of his disciples in the gathering saw the condition of his mentor and understood that the weakness was due to hunger and perhaps he had not eaten for days. He went out with the intention of bringing food for his Shaikh. He came back after a little while with food laid down in a tray and presented it to his Shaikh. The Shaikh saw the food, thought about it for a moment and said, "No. Take it away. I will not eat it." So, the disciple took it away. He was not like the disciples we come across these days who would insist that their mentor should eat. This man knew that his Shaikh was a perfect mentor whose order must be obeyed without demur. He knew that he was not being pretentious in rejecting food but that there must have been a reason behind the refusal. So, he took away the food he had brought. Then, he came back after sometime again with the food and presented it before the Shaikh saying, "Do accept it now." The religious man said, "Yes, I will eat it now."

The disciple revealed later on,"When I first brought the food and the Shaikh refused it, I understood that he refused it because when I got up from the gathering and went out, he presumed that I had related his weakness to hunger. So, he anticipated that I would bring him food and he was waiting for that. When I did bring the food, he was in a state of anticipation and hope. He recalled the Hadith that if a gift is received after wait and hope it is not blessed. So he refused the food. I took away the food so that he may not wait and hope for it. When I brought it again after a while the hindrance to acceptance of the gift was removed so he accepted the gift."

If there is wait for the gift, or an ostentatious behaviour behind serving or expectation of reimbursement then the gift is without blessing.

Grow Love Through Gifts

The saying of the Holy Prophetﷺ is recalled in a Hadith:

تها دوا تحابوا (المؤطا فی حسن الخلق، باب ماجاء فی المهاجرة)

"Exchange gifts and grow mutual love."

(al-Muwatta - in Hasan ul-Haq. Chapter Ma ja fil Muhajirah)

Exchange of gifts grows mutual love provided the driving force is to see the pleasure of Allah, to give the rights of relatives, to improve one's lot in the Hereafter and attain success before Allah. But, we do not give gifts with this in mind. We can see what happens in marriage parties; gifts are given to follow custom. Gifts are not given to fulfil mutual obligations or to meet the rights of kith and kin. Even if some of the menfolk decide to give their relatives gifts, the women in the family stall their move saying, "What's the use in giving a gift now without an occasion. Let's wait for an occasion in their family when the gift would be given. Our burden will be removed then. "The truth, however, is that the correct time for giving a gift is when there was no occasion and the intention was sincere there being no desire to gain fame. The motive was to please Allah and one's relative or friend. That was the correct time to make a present, a gift should be made at such times always.

Do Not Look At The Gift But At The Spirit That Prompts It

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has also taught us that we should not look at the thing that is presented but we should look at the spirit with which it is presented. If a small gift is presented with sincere love then it is much better than a large gift that is given to earn a name and to show off. The Holy Prophetﷺ has said:

لا تحقرن جارة لجارتها ولو فرسن شاة(بخاری کتاب الادب، باب لاتحقرن جارة لجارتها)

"A female neighbour must not look down upon the gift of her lady neighbour even if it were the trotters of a sheep:"(Bukhari. Book of Manners. 78. Hadith 6017)

This is because we do not have to see what is presented, we must see the sentiments that prompted the person to make the gift. If it is presented because of love, the gift must be valued. It is a blessed gift. On the other hand, a very precious gift lacks blessings if ostentatious motives are behind it. Therefore, if a slave of Allah - no matter who the person is - presents us something howsoever small we must accept it as an auspicious gift. Normally, a small gift is not prompted by an ostentatious behaviour because it is an ordinary thing and what can one show off about it. But a precious thing may be accompanied by a display. Therefore, we must value a small gift more than a large one.

An Invitation From The Earner Of Lawful Means

My respected father, Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه used to narrate an incident of a righteous man in Deoband whose occupation was mowing the grass. He earned his livelihood through selling the grass. His daily income was six paisas. He divided his income in three. He spent two paisas on himself, two paisas on charity and the remaining two he set aside for a feast to which he invited prominent scholars of the Dar ul-Uloom which he did when he had collected a few paisas. The invitees included the Shaikh ul-Hind, Maulana Mahmud ul-Hasan رحمة الله عليه, Maulana Rashid Ahmad Gangohi رحمة الله عليه, and others. These scholars would look out for the invitation for the whole month while the very rich would also invite them but they never waited for their invitation - because that man's invitation was sincere only for the sake of Allah and from lawful earnings. They found much blessings in his feast, the like of which they did not experience in any other. They found their hearts glow with light for days together after they ate his meals and felt impelled to worship and engage in devotional exercises. This shows that a small gift is more likely to be sincere than a large gift and, therefore, we must value it.

Gift Must Not Be Given To Meet Obligations Of Custom

When we give a gift we must remember that a gift is given to provide comfort and to make someone happy. The gift that is given to satisfy custom will not provide comfort or happiness to the receiver because only customary things are given at such times like sweet meat, piece of cloth, and so on. If anyone gives something else as a gift that would look out of place and people would pass adverse comments on it, and the giver will feel ashamed. But, if anyone wishes to give a gift sincerely for the sake of Allah alone then he will search for something the receiver needs. He will give him that so that he benefits from it.

The Unique Gifts Of An Elder

There was a religious elder, Shah Abdul Aziz رحمة الله عليه. He was a well-known missionary worker and a member of the Tabligh Jamaat that is very active in the propagation of religion. He came frequently to my respected father رحمة الله عليه and was a good friend. When he visited my father at the Dar ul-Uloom he brought with him one or the other out-of-the-oridinary gift. These were unconventional gifts that were not normally presented on visits. Sometimes he brought a quire of paper and presented it to my father. No one gives such a gift but this man knew that my father wrote profusely and paper would be a useful gift for him. He hoped to be rewarded too through the pious writings on the paper. Sometimes he brough an ink pot. Naturally, anyone who hopes to make a display will not bring such things as gift. Only such a person who hopes to please Allah and bring comfort to the recepient will give gifts of this kind. If he had presented a box of sweetmeat, my father did not eat it and that would have gone to other people beside him.

A Gift Must Be Chosen Sensibly

In giving gifts, we have to choose sensibly. This ability is also given by Allah and sought sincerely. This does not apply to those cases where a gift is given with ostentatious designs when custom is followed and an ink pot would be a laughing stock but a box of sweatmeat would look beautiful and appropraite. Our society is entangled in customs and ties of relationship also follow dictates of custom and habit. On the one hand exhange of gifts is a very good thing which is encouraged by the Holy Prophet ﷺ but we have made that part of customs and lost the virtuous angle that brought us Allah's reward. We have lost its blessings and happiness and made it a sinful habit. Let us realise that these things, like niyotah, are unlawful and sinful. Reward accrues only if a recepient reciprocates of his own accord without pressure or hint.

Do Everything For The Sake Of Allah

There are other things too besides gifts that go a long way in cementing ties of relationship with kin. We may share their grief and sorrow, help them in their time of distress, and so on. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has advised us that even while helping a relative we must do it only for the sake of Allah and not expect him to laud us or show gratitude to us or reimburse us. If we do it with such motives we will not earn happiness although we may have put in an effort.

Relatives Are Like Scorpions

In keeping with the deterioration of our society, the Arabic language has an adage- الاقارب كا العقارب (relatives are scorpions. The first word means 'relatives' and the second is the plural of 'scorpion'. It says that, like scorpions, relatives always sting. They are never happy. This saying gained currency after our wrong expectations did not materialise. It happens that people behave kindly with their relatives in the expectation that they would reciprocate and be grateful but that does not happen so the relatives are likened to scorpions. But, the kind treatment should be shown on the understanding that it is a command of Allah and the example of the Holy Prophet ﷺ and, whether or not a return gesture is shown, the command of Allah will be obeyed. Whether the recepient responds or not Allah will surely respond. A person's true test is when he goes on treating his relatives well although they do not respond or give a rough treatment in return. He must go on maintaining good relations with the hope of geting a return from Allah for Whom he does the good work. We must remember that the Prophet ﷺ has said, "He is not the one to link relationship who expects a reciprocal gesture but he is one who joins broken relationships inspite of a negative response."

The Prophet's ﷺ Treatment Of His Relatives

We must look at the Prophet ﷺ, how he treated his relatives. With the exception of a few relatives, all were his staunch enemies and they did all they could to cause him hardship and trouble. These include the very close relatives, his paternal uncle and his cousin who put him to difficulty every now and then. But, the Holy Prophet ﷺ did not lag behind in giving the rights of his relatives. We see him at the conquest of Makkah when he had an opportunity to take his revenge but he forgave them all. He made it known that whoever entered the Haram was safe and whoever took shelter in the house of Abu Sufyan was safe, and he did not seek vengeance on anyone and he did not expect anyone to reciprocate his fair treatment of anyone. It is Sunnah, therefore, to respond to a relative's unfair treatment with good treatment.

Do Not Place Expectation With The Creatures

Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanav رحمة الله عليه has said something very wise from his experience. He said, "There is only one way to live in comfort in this world and that is to cease to have expectations with the creatures of Allah." We may not expect anyone to be good to us, to help us, to remove our problems and to share our griefs. All our expectations must be placed with One Being - Allah, Full of Glory and Majesty. If we have no expectation from anyone of the creatures of Allah and if we get anything from them by way of fair treatment or help then that will give us much joy and happiness, and if they torment us or are unfair to us then we will not grieve over that. This is because we had not expected any good from them and did not rely on them so if they are bad to us we would have expected that any way and if they do good to us that would please us. If, however, we expect good treatment at their hands and they deal with us unfairly then that would grieve us much.

Man May Expect Pain & Sorrow In This World

The reality of this life is that it always places hardship and pain in a man's path. If he finds happiness and joy in his life then he must understand that it is the blessing of Allah on him. If he is grieved then he must know that it was expected and he need not feel sorry for that. If we follow this advice then we will have no cause for complaint because a man complains only when he fails to get what he expects. Let him place his expectations in Allah and hope not for anything from fellow men then, Insha Allah, he will live in peace and comfort.

Lives Of Men Of Allah

Our elders gave us this prescription and I have passed it on to you but nothing is achieved from merely listening to sermons or reading good advice. We must understand it well and put it into practice. We must examine ourselves again and again and ask ourselves these questions. What do we expect from others? Why do we rely on them? Why have we not turned to Allah for these things? We must look at the men of Allah who are always happy. If they encounter an hardship, may be they are grieved momentarily but they do not let the grief engulf them nor are they restless because they have established a link with their Master. They never turn to fellow creatures, or expect anything from them, and they ask them not for anything. They only ask Allah for their requirement and they are always content and peaceful.

The Case Of A Righteous Man

Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه has written about a righteous man whom someone asked, "How are you?" He replied, "Al-hamdu lillah (Praise be to Allah)." The righteous then added, "My brother, you are asking me how I am although nothing in the universe goes against my wishes. Everything in the universe happens as I like. "If everything in the universe happens as one likes then who else is happier than that person and who is more luxurious than him. The person who had put the question was taken aback and asked, "This experience was not available to the Holy Prophets ﷺ too. They could not say that everything in the universe obeyed their wishes. Rather, things happened even against their wishes. How, then, can you say everything happens according to your wishes?"

The righteous man replied that he had made his wishes subservient to the wishes of Allah. "The will of my Allah is my wish and what my Allah chooses, I choose. Nothing in this universe goes against the will of Allah and His wish 'and I have surrendered my ego so everything happens as I wish because it happens as Allah wills. Therefore, I am very happy and live in luxury."

The Peace Of The Righteous

The men of Allah, the righteous men live a very comfortable and peaceful life. Hazrat Sufyan Thawri رحمة الله عليه has said about it that if the kings of the world learnt about the magnitude of peace and security these people enjoyed then they would fight them with their swords to snatch the comfort from these men. The peace that they enjoy is available to them because they turn away their sights from fellow creatures and because they expect nothing from them. We too can experience that. Let us refrain from hoping for something from fellow creatures and then see the peace we derive and enjoy. These things cannot be had by merely listening to somone narrate them or by reading about them. We must live in the company of devoted men and these things will come to us gradually and our lives-in this world and the next - will change for the better.

Summary

We may summarise this discussion by emphasising that the right of our relatives must be given to them together with a fair treatment for the sake of Allah and to gain His pleasure, not in an ostentatious manner and not to comply with custom.

May Allah be merciful to us and help us understand the facts, and to behave accordingly. Aameen

And the conclusion of our call is that praise belongs to Allah, Lord of the Worlds.

I seek refuge in Allah from the cursed devil. In the Name of Allah the Compassionate, the Merciful. Do Good that you may prosper.(Surah al-Hajj, 22:77)

(this verse calls for prostration)

Ibn Umar رضی اللہ عنہما has said that the Messenger of Allah ﷺ said, "A Muslim is the brother of another Muslim. He does not oppress the other and does not hand him over to the enemy (so that he does not leave him in the lurch). He who sees after the needs of his brother, Allah looks after his needs and satisfies him. And he who removes a Muslim's distress or hardship. Allah will remove a distress of the several he will face on the Day of Resurrection. And he who conceals a Muslim's secret, Allah will conceal his secret on the Day of Resurrection." (Abu Dawood. Kitab ul-Adab)

Do Good To Other People

It is not enough for a Muslim that he cause no hardship to another Muslim and oppress him not and preserve him from trouble, but he must go further and help him and be of service to him. He must do what he can, within his means, to satisfy his needs. He must try to remove an anxiety a Muslim brother might be facing. This is among the duties of a Muslim. Allah has said in the verse quoted above. "Do good deeds that you may be successful." To do good encompasses a wide range of goodness, for instance, it calls upon one to do good to another person, to give him good treatment, to be compassionate to him and to fulfil his needs.

A comprehensive Hadith

The Hadith that we have read above is narrated by Hazrat Abdullah bin Umar رضی اللہ عنہما. It tells us that a Muslim does not oppress another and does not desert him. It tells us that as long as he is engaged in fulfilling his brother's needs, Allah will fulfil all his needs and settle his affairs. It tells us further that on the Day of Resurrection, Allah will remove one of the hardships of the man who solves a Muslim's difficulty and removes his anxiety. The Hadith states furthur that on the Day of Resurrection, Allah will conceal the sins of the man who conceals the faults of a Muslim in this world, for instance, he does not publicise a major defect of a Muslim that he comes to know whether that is a major sin or shortcoming.

This is a very comprehensive Hadith and it comprises of several sentences. Each sentence calls for our careful attention.We must not only ponder over it but also put it into practice.

Muslims Are Brothers One Of The Other

In this Hadith, the first sentence that the Messenger of Allah ﷺ said is that a Muslim is the brother of another Muslim. Thus, each of them will deal with every other Muslim in the same way as he deals with his brother, even if the other Muslim is a stranger, and the two are not friends yet they are to treat each other as brothers. By speaking this one sentence, the Holy Prophet ﷺ cut at the roots of discrimination that is common in our society. There is no discrimination between residents of different nations, people of different tribes and speakers of different languages. A Muslim is the brother of another Muslim no matter what he speaks, what country he comes from,what his occupation is, to what tribe he belongs. In every condition, the two are brothers.

One Does Not Enjoy Excellence Over The Other

Allah has stated this fact in the following words in the Holy Qur'an:

يٰٓاَيُّهَا النَّاسُ اِنَّا خَلَقْنٰكُمْ مِّنْ ذَكَرٍ وَّاُنْثٰى وَجَعَلْنٰكُمْ شُعُوْبًا وَّقَبَآئِلَ لِتَعَارَفُوْا ۭ اِنَّ اَكْرَمَكُمْ عِنْدَاللّٰهِ اَتْقٰكُمْ ۭ (سورة الحجرات:١٣)

O mankind! Surely we have created you from a male and a female, and have made you into nations and tribes that you may know one another. Surely the noblest among you in the sight of Allah is the most pious of you.

This verse proclaims a manifesto for all mankind. It tells them that their line of descent originates from one man and one woman, Hazrat Adam علیہ السلام and Hazrat Hawwa علیہما السلام. They have one father, Hazrat Adam علیہ السلام, and one mother, Hazrat Hawwa علیہما السلام. They are descended from one father and one mother so they do not enjoy preference or excellence one over the other. A question arises because of this : "When all human beings are children of one father and one mother, then, O Allah, why did you divide them into different families and tribes?" Following our question, Allah let us know why; He said: لتعارفوا (that you may know one another). If all men spoke one language, resided in one country and belonged to one family then it would have been difficult to know one from other. For example, if three men are named Abdullah then to distinguish them their origin is attached to the name, Abdullah of Karachi, of Lahore, of Peshawar. This is why Allah created different languages and different cities. There is no excellence to anyone over the other (because of that) except on the basis of taqwa. A man who shows more taqwa - that is, is more God-fearing, devout, religious - enjoys greater closeness to Allah as a noble person even if he has a lower status by worldly standards.

Difference Between Islam & Disbelief

The Prophet ﷺ showed us by example that we have to make a distinction between Islam and disbelief and prefer the first in our dealings with others. Abu Lahab was his paternal uncle and a chief of his family but had not abandoned disbelief. Therefore, his position is that the Qur'an curses him, and this a position that will carry on till the Last Day. Every Muslim who recites the Qur'an sends a curse on Abu Lahab when he reads this verse:

تَبَّتْ يَدَآ اَبِيْ لَهَبٍ وَّتَبَّ ۝ (سورة اللهب:١)

Perish the hands of Abu Lahab and perish he.

(al-Lahab, 111:1)

Also, at the Badr, the Prophet ﷺ fought his paternal uncles, his father's elder brothers.

The abode of Bilal رضی اللہ عنہ in Jannah

On the other side, the Prophetﷺ embraced Hazrat Bilal رضی اللہ عنہ who was a black man from Ethiopia. Rather, he asks him. "O Bilal! Let me know that behaviour of yours on account of which I heard your soft footsteps ahead of me in Paradise in my dreams tonight." This question was put to the man who is black and a resident of Ethiopia whom the Arabs looked down upon. Hazrat Bilal رضی اللہ عنہ replied, "O Messenger of Allah! I do not do anything in particular except one little deed that I have observed regularly. Whenever I perform ablution during the day or night, I am sure to follow it up with voluntary Salat of two or four rakaat." (This Salat is known as tahiyat ul-wadu.) The Holy Prophet ﷺ confirmed that perhaps it was because of this that Allah granted him the high station. (Bukhari, Tahajjud)

Why Was Hazrat Bilal رضی اللہ عنہ Ahead Of The Messenger of Allah ﷺ

The question perturbs some minds: why did Hazrat Bilal رضی اللہ عنہ walk ahead of the Prophetﷺ when no one does that? The Ulama have asserted that Hazrat Bilal رضی اللہ عنہ was ahead of the Prophet ﷺ in Paradise not because of a higher station that he enjoyed over him but it was his practice in the world too to walk ahead as a sentry. He always carried a stick and walked ahead of the Holy Prophetﷺ removing stones and thorns from the way and looking out for an intruder. Because it was his habit in the world to walk ahead of the Prophet ﷺ, Allah has honoured him with that distinction in Heaven too, "You protected my friend in the world so I will keep you ahead of him in heaven too!" That is why the Holy Prophetﷺ heard his footsteps before him in Paradise.

Islam gathers its adherents together

This distinction was achieved by him who was known as a slave, considered a lowly black and had no standing in terms of blood and family. In comparison Abu Lahab has the Qur'an curse him تبت یدا ابی لهب وتب (May the hands of Abu Lahab perish and may he perish). Hazrat Suhayb رضی اللہ عنہ of Rome arrives and earns a high station. Hazrat Salman Farsi رضی اللہ عنہ of Iran arrives and earns such a noble distinction that the Holy Prophet ﷺ said about him سلمان منا اهل البیت "Salman is one of us - the people of the house!" In this way the Prophetﷺ broke down the icons of nationality, descent, colour and language and made known, "We are those who believe in one Allah Who has created all men from one man and one woman and all mankind are borthers."

اِنَّمَا الْمُؤْمِنُوْنَ اِخْوَةٌ

When the Prophetﷺ migrated to Madinah, the tribes of Aws and Khazraj were at loggerhead with each other. A father would instruct his son to carry on his war with the enemy and seek vengeance with him. They fought a war in the Days of Ignorance by the name of Harb Basus that was waged for forty years. The war had its beginnings in a simple incident. Someone's chick had annoyed another person when it strayed in that man's fields. The owner of the fields killed the chick in anger. This infuriated the owner of the chick and after an exchange of hot words they came to blows after which swords were picked up and their respective tribes came to their aid. This war lasted for forty years. But, the Messenger of Allahﷺ so engrossed them in the Kalimah: There is no god but Allah لا اله الا الله that their hostility for one another cooled down into friendship. It could not be guessed after that if they had ever been hostile to one another and at such a prolonged war. The Qur'an has pointed out to their cordial ties of fraternity

وَاذْكُرُوْا نِعْمَتَ اللّٰهِ عَلَيْكُمْ اِذْ كُنْتُمْ اَعْدَآءً فَاَلَّفَ بَيْنَ قُلُوْبِكُمْ فَاَصْبَحْتُمْ بِنِعْمَتِهٖٓ اِخْوَانًا (سورة آل عمران: ١٠٣)

And remember Allah's blessing on you when you were enemies (of each other), and He united your hearts in love, and you became brethren by His blessing... (Al Imran, 3:103)

Let it not be that the fraternal relations are forgotten and the ways of the Days of Ignorance are reverted to.

We Have Forgotten The Principle

The first thing that the Prophet ﷺ taught us through the Hadith is that all Muslims are linked together in bonds of fraternity irrespective of the language they speak, the tribe to which they belong and the nation they are associated with. They must deal with one another in brotherly fashion. A Muslim must not be driven away from his brother because of difference in genealogy, nationality or language. History tells us that Muslims suffered defeat every time they thought in these terms and they forgot the principle taught to them by the Prophet ﷺ that a Muslim is the brother of the other Muslim. There has been always an instigator who pointed out differences of nationality or ethnic variations and in this way brought the two factions to fight each other. May Allah inspire us to adopt the principle taught by the Prophet ﷺ. Aameen! We do say and assert the words that Muslims are brothers one of the other but do we match our words with our behaviour? When the time comes our conduct is much different from what we profess. Let all of us examine ourselves and resolve to reform our conduct so that we treat every other Muslim as our brother. May Allah be merciful to us and make us adopt this principle. Aameen!

A Muslim Helps Another Muslim

The Hadith says further ولا يسلمه "and he does not desert him." It is not merely that he does not be cruel to him but he also does not abandon him. If a Muslim is surrounded by an anxiety or a difficulty and is in need of assistance then no Muslim will leave him in the lurch. He will not tell himself that it is not his concern what the other has to cope with, and he does not separate from him saying that. This is not the trait of a Muslim. On the contrary, it is part of a Muslim's duties that when he sees another Muslim in distress or anxiety, he should do his best to help him out, to remove his anxiety without worrying about his time being spent and his tasks being delayed.

An Eye-opening Account Of Our Times

The times that we are passing through are times when human life is not valued. A human being is not respected as such. There was a time when men would rush to help a stumbling fellowman stand up and to support him until he was properly balanced on his feet. If there was an accident, people would run and come to his aid, trying to dress his worunds. But, the situation has changed in our times. Let me recall an incident that I saw with my own eyes. I saw that a man was hit by a car that raced away after the accident. The man fell down flat. After that between twenty and twenty-five cars passed, the driver of each car slowing down to satisfy his inquisitive nature, but none of those people stopped to help him. All the cars sped away after feeding their curiosity. In spite of that, the current generation call themselves civilised and cultured. We are not speaking of Islam here, but even as human beings, the drivers should have stopped, got down and seen what was wrong. They should have helped him as much as they could. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said in the Hadith that is the topic of our discussion that it is not expected of a Muslim that he would abandon the other Muslim in this manner. Rather, it is the duty of a Muslim that he should try as best as he can to remove the difficulty and trouble of another Muslim when he finds him in that.

The Practice Of The Prophet ﷺ

It was the behaviour of the Holy Prophet ﷺ that whenever he learnt that someone was in need of something, he would do his best to get him that thing. If anyone was in some difficulty, he would be restless and continue to be so until he had done his utmost to help out the other man. It was only at the time of the Peace Treaty of Hudaybiah that he was hindred from helping out the Makkan Muslims who sought protection in Madinah. In compliance with the Treaty, he had to return those Muslims to the unbelievers. The Treaty was signed with the idolators of Makkah at the command of Allah. He said, "I am helpless because of the Treaty and I have to return the refugees." Apart from this incident, it never happened that the Prophet ﷺ did not help a Muslim whom he found in difficulty.

May Allah help us to conduct ourselves in the manner we have been taught in this discussion. Aameen!

And the conclusion of our call is that all praise belongs to Allah, Lord of the worlds.

Praise belongs to Allah. We praise Him, beseech him for help, and we seek His forgiveness. We believe in Him and place our trust in Him. We seek refuge in Him from the mischief of our souls and from our evil deeds. He whom Allah guides none can mislead and he whom He leaves to stray none can guide. And we bear witness that there is no god but Allah, the Alone, Who has no partner, and we bear witness that Sayyidina Muhammad is His Slave and Messenger may Allah bless him, his family and Companions, and may He bestow favours and peace, a complete peace.

Hazrat Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہ has reported the Messenger of Allah ﷺ as saying: He who alleviates the suffering of a Believer out of the sufferings of the world, Allah will alleviate his suffering out of the several on the Day of Resurrection and he who makes easy the difficulties of the hard pressed, Allah will make his difficulties easy for him in this world and in the Hereafter, and he who conceals the secrets of a Muslim, Allah will conceal his secrets in the world and the Hereafter. Allah supports a slave as long as the slave supports his brothers, And he who treads the path in search of knowledge Allah makes that path easy leading to Paradise. And a group of people do not gather in a House of the Houses of Allah reciting the Book of Allah and learning it but that there descends on them tranquility, and mercy envelopes them, and angels surround them. Allah makes a mention of them to those close to Him. As for him who is slow in doing his deeds, his lineage prevents him from that. (Muslim. Book of Zikr Hadith 6518)

What is Jawami ul Kalim

This Hadith, as we have seen, is narrated by Hazrat Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہ. The Hadith is made up of many sentences each spoken by the Holy Prophet ﷺ. Each of the expression is a complete sentence, comprehensive in meaning. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has also said, "I have been given the Jawami ul Kalim" اوتیت جوامع الکلم Jawani'ul Kalim are such expressions as are comprehensive in meaning, although a few words are spoken they give a deep wide meaning. The sentences comprise of a few words and are brief but they convey a wide, rich meaning and they call for exhaustive deeds. Sayings of the Holy Prophet ﷺ which are made of small sentences but encompass a wide meaning are called Jawami ul Kalim (Comprehensive Brief Sayings). So, in the Hadith quoted Hazrat Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہ has narrated many Jawami ul Kalim that cover various topics.

Reward On Removing Someone's Anxiety

The first sentence is about the person who alleviates a suffering out of the several a believer faces in this world. He may do it manually or otherwise. His action is very rewarding so much that on the Day of Resurrection, Allah will alleviate one of his sufferings as reward for his deed in the world.

Excellence of Allowing Time To An Indigent

The second sentence is about the person who makes difficulties easy for the hard-pressed. His reward is that Allah will make his difficulties easy for him both in this world and in the Hereafter. Say, someone is in debt, having borrowed money to meet a need but when the promised time comes for repayment of the debt, he is unable to pay it although he wishes to repay it. Then if the lender. Allows him time until he is able to repay, although he has a right to demand repayment at the promised time. Allah will make things easy for him in this world and the Hereafter. The Qur'an has said about such men:

وَاِنْ كَانَ ذُوْعُسْرَةٍ فَنَظِرَةٌ اِلٰى مَيْسَرَةٍ ؕ (سورة البقرة: ٢٨٠)

But if the debtor is in difficulty, let there be respite till it is easy (for him). (al-Baqarah, 2:280)

It calls upon a Believer to allow the debtor time until he is able to repay the loan.

Allah Loves Mildness

Allah loves very much mild behaviour in a person. He loves very much the tender and soft treatment of his slaves by anyone. The man who has loaned any money has every right to demand back his money. He may even get him arrested for non payment. However, Islam requires of a Muslim that he should not look at money alone how much is lost and what is expected-but he should remember how much Allah loves him to be tender and mild towards one of His slaves. There is no limit to the pleasure of Allah at such times so He will recompense him on the Day of Resurrection with tenderness and mildness.

Virtue of Seeing To Another Muslim's Needs

We are told in another Hadith that the Holy Prophet ﷺ said:

مَنْ كَانَ فِيْ حَاجَةِ اَخِيْهِ كَانَ اللّٰهُ فِيْ حَاجَتِهٖ (ابو داود، كتاب الادب، باب المواخاة)

"The time a person spends in helping his brother get his needs fulfilled, Allah will go on fulfilling the helper's needs. (Abu Dawood, Book al-Adab)

Allah will get his needs fulfilled for him as long as he is occupied in helping his brother with his needs It is as though he says, "You go on helping My slave, I will continue to help you".

کار ساز ما بساز کار ما
فکر ما در کار ما آزار ما

There is one more saying of the Holy Prophet ﷺ

مَنْ فَرَّجَ عَنْ مُسْلِمٍ كُرْبَةً فَرَّجَ اللّٰهُ عَنْهُ كُرْبَةً مِنْ كُرَبِ يَوْمِ الْقِيَامَةِ (حوالہ بالا)

"As for him who alleviates a Muslim's hardship, Allah will remove for him a hardship out of the several on the Day of Resurrection"

(Abu Dawood, Kitab ul-Adab)

Show Mercy To The Creatures

The truth is that one can do both these things helping someone with his needs and alleviating his hardship only when he loves the creatures of Allah and shows mercy to them. If anyone does that to show off and earn fame then his deed is of no value. His deeds are of value only if he treats them well because they are the servants of Allah and His creatures, and his good treatment of them will please Allah Who will grant him reward for that. If a person hopes to love Allah, he must love His slaves too, and if he does not love them then it means that he does not love Allah. The following saying of the Holy Prophet ﷺ is reproduced in a Hadith

اَلرَّاحِمُوْنَ يَرْحَمُهُمُ الرَّحْمٰنُ اِرْحَمُوْا مَنْ فِىْ الْاَرْضِ يَرْحَمْكُمْ مَنْ فِى السَّمَآءِ (ابو داؤد، كتاب الادب، باب الرحمة)

"Those who are merciful have mercy shown them by the Compassionate One. If you show mercy to those who are on the earth He Who is in heaven will show mercy to you". (Abu Dawood. Kitab ul-Adab)

So, until we do not show mercy to the creatures of Allah, we will not be entitled to be called Muslims. How can we hope for the mercy of Allah if we do not show mercy to His creatures. It is a demand of faith that we love Allah's slaves and creatures.

Majnun Loves The Edifices Of Layla's City

If anyone loves someone dearly then he loves everything connected with his beloved. He, the Majnun, tells his beloved, the Layla

اَمُرُّ عَلَى الدِّيَارِ دِيَارِ لَيْلٰى
اُقَبِّلُ ذَا الْجِدَارِ وَ ذَا الْجِدَارِ

"When I pass by the houses, the city of Layla,
"I kiss this wall now, and that wall now".
Why is it so?

وَمَا حُبُّ الدِّيَارِ شَغَفْنَ قَلْبِىْ وَلٰكِنَّ حُبُّ مَنْ سَكَنَ الدِّيَارَ

"Love of the city will not kill the fire in my heart
But, I love her who lives in the city".

When this happens that a majnun loves a layla, then what stops one who loves Allah from loving His creatures. How is it that one claims to love Allah but does not have links with His creatures, does not show mercy to them and does not love them?

Can Love For Allah Be Less Than Love For Layla

In his Mathnavi, Mawlana Rumi رحمة الله عليه says that majnun loved layla to such an extent that he even loved the dog of her city. He argued, "It is the dog of my beloved's city. I love it too." He says:

عشقِ مولیٰ کے کم از لیلیٰ بود
گوئے گشت بہر او اولیٰ بود

O, the love of the Master became lesser than the love of Layla

The earthlings are mortal and not lasting yet one does fall in love with them to such an extent that one comes to love their dog too. If that is so, then Allah is the King of kings and He is the Most Beloved of all, it is the right of His love that all His creatures be loved even the animals. This is why Shari'ah has given rights to animals too. It has asked us to show mercy to them and should not be cruel to them.

A Dog Is Given Water To Drink

The Hadith Book of Bukhari has recorded an incident of a prostitute who had spent all her life in sin. She came across a dog who was very thirsty and tried to quench his thirst by licking at the mud. There was a well close by. The woman took out her leather socks and drew out the water from the well and watered the dog with it. Allah liked her deed very much and forgave her for that. "You loved my creation and showed mercy to it, then We are more entitled to show mercy to you". Therefore, we must deal mercifully with the creatures of Allah, even the animals.

Another Case Of Showing Mercy To The Creation

The respected Maulana Masih ullah Khan, my Shaikh, was blessed with a unique temperament in showing mercy to animals. Leave aside killing an animal, he never raised a hand to shoo away an animal. As a creature of Allah, it deserved that treatment and should not be mistreated. He was so particular about it that once he had a wound on his feet and flies sat on it. On the face of it, this is unhygienic and it intensifies the wound but my Shaikh did not drive away the flies. He carried on with his chores in the normal manner. Meanwhile, someone visited him and requested that he be allowed to drive away the flies from the wound. Quick was the reply, "Brother! They are doing their job. Let me do mine." The reason he did not unsettle the flies was that they were the creation of Allah, "Why should I make them uneasy by driving them away from here?" In other words, we can love Allah truly if we also love His creatures, and have mercy on them.

A Unique Case Of Compassion On A Fly

My Shaikh, Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayy رحمة الله عليه, often related this incident. There was a great religious man an eminent scholar and a recognized authority on Hadith and exegesis. He spent his life in teaching and writing and had vast knowledge. When he died, someone saw him in a dream and asked him how he had fared. He said, "I am grateful to Allah for bestowing His mercy on me. But, it has been very surprising with me! I had worked much for Islam, by the grace of Allah, had engaged myself in teaching, had delivered sermons and speeches, had penned down many looks and had diffused religious teachings with a missionary zeal. I had hoped that these things will be recalled at the time of reckoning and that Allah will reward me for these services. But, when I was brought before Allah, he said, 'I have forgiven you but do you know why?' I thought of all those things that I had done and supposed it was because of them. However, Allah said, 'No! I have forgiven you for another reason. One day you were writing down'. In those days the quill was used and it was dipped in ink before writing 'You put your pen in the ink but before you could bring it back a fly sat on it and suck the ink. You stopped yourself from bringing out the quill so that the fly, could quench its thirst. That was a sincere show of love for Me and My creature. You had no other motive. Go! In reward for that, I have forgiven you, today".

Tasawwuf Is Really Service To The Creatures

This is a very sensitive path. As long as one does not love Allah's creatures, he is not true in his claim that he loves Allah. Mawlana Rumi says about tasawwuf

زتسبح و سجاده و دلق نیست
طریقت بجز خدمتِ خلق نیست

"The rosary, the prayer rug and the darwesh's gown is not Tasawwuf, but service to His creation is!"

Allah has said, "If you really love Me then love My creatures. Serve them."

Allah Loves His Creatures

Allah loves his creation dearly. We can find that out easily. If anyone creates something by his own hands anything, even something carved out of stone-then the-creator loves what he has produced; he put in some time in fashioning it and laboured over it. It is his pride possession. In the same way, Allah created this creation and gave it life, so He loves it. We too must love His creation if we love Him.

A Unique Incident In The Life Of Hazrat Nuh (Noah) عليه السلام

When the flood came over the people of Hazrat Nuh عليه السلام and they perished because of that, Allah commanded him through a revelation that he should cast pottery utensils. So, he obeyed Allah and began to mould untensils of pottery and earthenware. He was occupied in that all the time, day or night. Many days passed in this manner, and a lot of untensils accumulated. He received a second command. "Now smash down the utensils, one by one". Hazrat Nuh عليه السلام pleaded before the Lord, "O Allah! I have taken great pains to create them. And I had done that at your command; now you command me to break them up!" Allah said, "My command now is that you break them all." So, Hazrat Nuh عليه السلام broke them up but was broken hearted that he had taken great pains to create them and was asked to undo his effort. Allah said to him, "O, Nuh, you fashioned the earthenware with your hands at My command. You became very attached to these untensils so when I commanded you to break them, it was a very difficult task for you to obey. So you wished to preserve them somehow because they were moulded by you and you loved them. But, you did not observe Me. I had created all the creation with My Hands but on your suggestion, I destroyed all of them My creatures! You had said:

رَبِّ لَا تَذَرْ عَلَى الْأَرْضِ مِنَ الْكٰفِرِيْنَ دَيَّارًا (سورة نوح: ٢٦)

My Lord, leave not of the disbelievers any dweller on the earth. (Surah Nuh, 71:26)

You said that much and I destroyed what I had created myself."

The implication was that Hazrat Nuh عليه السلام had moulded the utensils out of the earth that he had not created. Then, he had not fashioned the utensils of his own will but was commanded by Allah to do so. In spite of that he came to love them, so did he not realize that Allah loves His creatures dearly? If that is so then he too will have to love Allah's creatures if he loves Allah.

Maulana Doctor Abdul Hayy رحمة الله عليه Used to Say

Maulana Doctor Abdul Hayy رحمة الله عليه used to relate his experience about our supplication to Allah that He cause us to love Him. He said: At such times, I feel that Allah says: "you wish to love Me but you have not seen Me so you cannot love Me directly. You cannot have with Me a relationship that one has with what one sees. Yet if you wish to have a relationship with Me then I have created My slaves on earth to stand for Me and you must love them and show mercy to them. Be tender to them. You will grow love for Me, thereby. This itself is the way to love Me."

If we imagine that we love Allah but deride His creatures as despised and lowly and if we look at them with scorn and consider them evil and inferior then this is a sign that we do not love Allah really. Our so called love for Him is unreal. This is because if anyone loves Allah, he will surely love His creation. This is why the Holy Prophet ﷺ said, "If anyone is engaged in helping his brother get his needs, then Allah gets this man's needs fulfilled. If any person removes a Muslim brother's anxiety, Allah will remove his anxiety on the Day of Resurrection."

The Conduct Of Allah's Friends

It has been with all the Awliya (the friends of Allah) رحمة الله عليه that they were pained when they saw the creatures in a bad condition. When they saw these people in sin and corrupt behaviour they hated the sins because it is obligatory to hate sin. They hated their corrupt and evil deeds because it is obligatory to hate evil. But, they did not hate the sinful, evil man in their hearts and did not despise him.

An Incident With Junayd Baghdadi رحمة الله عليه

Junayd Baghdadi رحمة الله عليه was walking along the banks of the Tigris when a boat appeared in the river close to him. It carried some youngsters who looked like vagabonds. They were singing songs. In every situation when a group of young men sing and have fun, they do not fail to ridicule a religious man who happens to be there. Accordingly, these young men lived upto the reputation of naughty boys and they made fun of the respected Junayd Baghdadi رحمة الله عليه. They also passed some nasty remarks on him. There was another man with him who asked him to curse them because at the same time as committing a sin by singing and frolicking they made fun of Allah's friends. Junayd Baghdadi رحمة الله عليه immediately raised his hands in prayer, "O, Allah, you have granted happiness to these young men in this world. Make their deeds such that they get happiness in the Hereafter too." Observe! He did not despise them; they were creatures of his Allah.

Love and Compassion Of The Prophet ﷺ For His Ummah

The Holy Prophet ﷺ was described as mercy to the worlds. When the unbelievers rained rocks on him and hit him with stones, his feet bled profusely but he kept on saying

اَللّٰهُمَّ اهْدِ قَوْمِیْ فَاِنَّهُمْ لَا یَعْلَمُوْنَ

"O Allah! Guide my people for they know not."
"They do not know me and behave in this way out of ignorance, so, O Allah guide them."

As far as the deeds of the unbelievers were concerned, he hated them much but as far as the disbelievers were concerned themselves, he did not hate them. He seemed to say, "Their person in the capacity of a human being is the creature of my Allah. And, I love the creatures of my Allah."

Do Not Hate The Sinner

We must understand that if we do not hate morally corrupt behaviour and sinful activity then that itself is a sin. We must hate sin, and we must consider it bad. But we must not despise the person who is committing the sin. We must not hate him. Rather, we must have pity on him. It is just like a patient visiting a doctor. Now, the doctor will not get angry on him for becoming ill but he will have pity on him and he will treat him with medicine. He will also pray for him, "O Allah! Cure him of the illness.." We must deal in the same way with a sinner. While we hate and despise their behaviour, we must not look down upon them. Rather, they should be loved because they are creatures of Allah and we must pray for them that Allah guide them to the right path.

A Unique Incident Of Forgiveness Gained By A Merchant

A Hadith tells us that the Holy Prophet ﷺ said. "A person was brought before Allah." We may explain here that everyone will be brought before Allah on the Day of Resurrection when the reckoning will take place, but there might be an example of that which is depicted beforehand. Anyway, that man was presented before Allah. The Prophet ﷺ continued, "Allah instructed the Angels to look into the Record of his deeds and see what all he had done. The Angels found out that his Record deeds was almost without any piety and virtue. He had not observed Salat, Fasting or any other worship; he had occupied himself completely in his business transactions. Allah knows already the situation and the position of all His slaves but he asks the Angels that the reality may be known to other people, so he asked the Angels again to see well if there was at all any other pious deed in his Record of deeds. The Angles looked again and confirmed that he had performed a righteous deed. Although he had not performed any particular pious deed, he had instructed his slaves through whom he exported his merchandise that if they encounter anyone in hardship they should be tolerant with him. If they had sold the ware to such a man on credit then they should not be hard on him for payment. Rather, they should forgive him if necessary. Consequently, this was his regular practice all his life. He gave respite to anyone in straitened circumstances and he did not hesitate to forgive him if there was such a situation. Allah remarked to them that he forgave His slaves too! He said that if that was so, He was more entitled to forgive him, and He commanded the Angels to pardon him and send him to Paradise." Thus, Allah loves very much that we forgive and pardon His slaves.

Mercy Over-ruled Law

We must know that in the foregoing case mercy superseded the law. This case is not a precedent but it is an extra-ordinary case lest anyone suppose that he might neglect his duties of Prayer, Fasting, zakah, and not refrain from sin but go on forgiving people and hope for forgiveness on the Day of Resurrection. This is a wrong approach. In this case the mercy of Allah is dominant and His mercy is not bound by a procedure. He may forgive whom He will and show mercy to whom He will. The procedure for us to follow is that we must observe our duties, the fard obligations must be met and we must keep away from sin. It is wrong for anyone to neglect the fard and to go on sinning yet hope to attain Paradise on the basis of any one deed because that is not the law of Allah. The man who obtained forgiveness on the basis of only one deed may have been driven by deeply sincere motives which we do not know and cannot fathom but which attracted the mercy of Allah to him and got him His forgiveness. It is not a procedure for us to adopt.

A Child Abuses A King

In order to explain the likes of the foregoing case, Mawlana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه has narrated an incident of child using expletives against a king. He has recalled that there was a Nizam of Hyderabad Deccan. His minister once invited him to his house. When the Nawab entered the house, a son of the minister was playing there. It was the nawab's habit to tease children and play with them and he pulled the ears of the child. The child was very brave and, besides, how do children know what a king or nawab is? He cast a glance at the man who had pulled his ears and abused him. The minister heard his son useing the swear word on the Nawab and was terribly frightened for his son's safety. The Nawab's word was law. What will become of his son? So, to show his faithfulness to the king, the minister drew out his sword and announced that he would behead his son who had shown rudeness to the Nawab. But, the Nawab stopped him saying, "No! He is only a child. He is an intelligent child. He is self-respecting and one who will not give in if anyone pulls his ears. He can fight for himself and is confident too. Now, you will get a regular monthly scholarship for him." So, a scholarship was presented to the boy. The scholarship was called Wazifah Dushnam (scholarship for using expletives).

At this point, Mawlana Ashraf Ali Thanavi رحمة الله عليه has said. "If you go now and abuse the Nawab in the hope that you too will get a scholarship, that would be foolish. No one would do it. This was a peculiar situation; The Nawab had been impressed by the child and it was a display of the King's generosity in that situation. It is not a general procedure that everyone who abuses the Nawab gets a scholarship. If anyone does that, he may get a severe beating and may be imprisoned or may be beheaded."

It is the same thing with the benevolence and generosity of Allah. He gives someone on one pretext and someone else on yet another pretext. He approves a behaviour in a man and another behaviour in another man. His mercy knows no limits or conditions or procedure. He has said ورحمتي وسعت كل شيء "My mercy prevails over everything" (al-A'raf 7:157). Therefore no one suffers injustice but, sometimes, a man is blessed with mercy against a deed that Allah comes to like.

Do Not Underrate Piety

We can draw one conclusion from this discussion that no piety is too little. Allah may grant approval to any virtuous act the result of which would spell out tremendous success to the doer of the act. Therefore, we must not consider any act of piety insignificant but, at the same time, it is wrong to rest on hope alone neglecting obligations of prayer, zakah, and so on. It is wrong to cite an instance of Allah forgiving anyone for anything done out of the ordinary (although he may have been a sinner all his life). We have the Hadith of the Prophet ﷺ "The helpless man is he who has allowed himself to follow his desires and does what he likes. He does not wait to see if what he does is lawful or forbidden, proper or wrong but relies on hope that Allah is Forgiving, Merciful who will forgive all sins. We must draw a proper conclusion from these incidents."

Forgiven For Being Mild to the Slaves Of Allah

The Holy Prophet ﷺ is reported in a Hadith to have said, "Among the peoples who have passed away before you was a man given to softness in business transactions. He was not inflexible in his dealings. It was his habit that he quoted a price to his customer and if he requested for a reduction in price, this man obliged the customer saying to himself that he would do with a smaller profit margin. He was equally mild when buying something. When the seller quoted a price, he requested him just once to make a reduction and then paid the agreed price. He never argued with the seller and never insisted to give him a concession. He was again soft in asking for his rights. For instance, if he had to receive payment against a debt, he was soft and mild and often told the debtor that if he did not have the money then he might repay later. When this man was presented before Allah in the Hereafter, Allah said about him, 'Because he treated My slaves kindly so I too would treat him with kindness.' So, Allah forgave him." We see from this example too that Allah likes very much if anyone treats His slaves with kindness and if he gives respite to those in straitened circumstances.

The Practice Of The Holy Prophet ﷺ

It was the practice of the Holy Prophet ﷺ that all his life he gave more than whatever was due from him in buying and selling transactions. In those days, coins of silver and gold were in circulation and they were of various denomination. They were not counted but weighed and payments were made according to weight. According to a Hadith, the Holy Prophet ﷺ bought something from the market. When he paid for it in dirhams, he asked the man who was weighing the coins زِنْ وَارْجَحْ "Weigh till it tilts." In other words, "Give him some more dirham than are due on me." Yet another Hadith tells us خِيَارُكُمْ اَحْسَنُكُمْ قَضَاءً "The best among you are those who when they repay the rights of other people give them in a good manner," that is, they give a little more, not less. For instance, if someone has to repay a hundred rupees, he pays a hundred and ten. Further, the debtor, or giver of rights, must not bother the other person by making false promises. All these things tell us that we must be prompt at paying out debts and giving the rights of other people in a fair manner.

Instructions Of Imam Abu Hanifah رحمة الله عليه

Imam Abu Hanifah رحمة الله عليه is our leader in fiqh (jurisprudence). We follow his Rulings. He has left instructions for his students. He has written in his will,

"when you engage in a buying and selling transaction with anyone then pay him more than what is due to him. Do not pay less." This is the sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. It is with us that we have memorized a few particular practices on which we act although these things that we have narrated are also part of his sunnah and we must conduct ourselves according to them too. May Allah cause us to practice accordingly. Aameen. It is in connection with this sunnah that the Prophet ﷺ said:

وَمَنْ يَسَّرَ عَلٰى مُعْسِرٍ يَسَّرَ اللّٰهُ عَلَيْهِ فِى الدُّنْيَا وَالْاٰخِرَةِ

"As for one who makes things easy for the straitened, Allah will make it easy for him in the world and the Hereafter."

The removing of difficulties in the Hereafter is what matters really but we can say from experience that such man finds his anxiety removed for him in this world too.

Those Who Amass Wealth & Hoard It Are Cursed

We are told in a Hadith that an Angel makes the following supplication to Allah every day:

اَللّٰهُمَّ اَعْطِ مُمْسِكًا تَلَفًا

"Allah! Let his wealth perish who hoards wealth, counting and recounting it. And let his wealth perish who withholds his hands from spending."

Therefore, as a result of this curse, his wealth is destroyed. It falls into the hands of thieves or bandits or there is a loss of some kind or the other. If nothing like this happens, there is a withdrawal of blessing and a fall of curse on it. His wealth may be much in count but in terms of purchasing power it would be too little. He may have a lot of money but he may face illness of family members and consequent medical bills. He may face differences among family members so that he does not live a peaceful life.

Supplication For Those Who Spend Money

The Angel prays to Allah for one who spends money

وَاَعْطِ مُنْفِقًا خَلَفاً

" O Allah! Give him who spends something in place of it." He is the one who spends in Allah's way, gives charity, deals well with people or helps someone with his wealth. People like him get their reward in the world itself. Those people who spend in this way seem to others as growing less rich but the money they spend does not really lessen their wealth. In fact it brings to them blessings from Allah Who gives them something in its place. We have yet to see anyone become a pauper because he gives more in sadaqah (or charity) or treats other people kindly. It never happens in that way but Allah surely gives him a return. This is borne out by the Hadith: "Allah makes things easy for him in the world and in the Hereafter."

To Conceal The Secrets Of Other People

The third expression that we read in this Hadith is وَمَنْ سَتَرَ مُسْلِمًا سَتَرَهُ اللهُ يَوْمَ الْقِيَامَةِ

"He who conceals the secrets of a Muslim, Allah will conceal his secrets on the Day of Resurrection."

If anyone comes to know of a Muslim's faults, he should not go on publicising it everywhere but he should keep his secret to himself. He should conceal it and not reveal it to anyone else. This procedure is adopted when no one else is at risk of harm at his hands but when someone is liable to come to harm then the secret must be revealed. Thus, for instance, if one comes to know of a man conspiring to kill someone, he must not conceal the secret but he should let it be known because it is not correct for him to conceal the conspiracy. If no one is likely to come to harm then not only must he conceal the other man's secret but he must also pray for him: "O Allah! Bring this man out of his sinful habit by Your mercy."

It is necessary for us that we must not look for defects in other people and if we come to know of them then we must not attempt to make them known to other people. It is a failing in us that we cannot keep quiet about the things we come to know of other people. We think that we are justified in publicising another man's faults although the truth is that it is a sin to do that.

To Ridicule Another For A Sin

The Holy Prophet ﷺ is quoted to have said in a Hadith

مَنْ عَيَّرَ اَخَاهُ بِذَنْبٍ قَدْ تَابَ مِنْهُ لَمْ يَمُتْ حَتّٰى يَعْمَلَهُ (ترمذی، کتاب صفة القیامة، باب نمبر ٥٤)

"If anyone reviles his brother for a sin that he has already repented then he will not die before he has committed it himself." (Tirmizi. Book Sifatul Qiyamah. Chapter # 54)

Allah does not like at all the behaviour of a man who blames anyone naughtily for a sin of which he has sought forgiveness and repented for it. Allah says, "I have concealed the fault of the man and forgiven him. I have deleted the sin from his Record of deeds, then who are you to raise an objection and to revile him for that? If you will remind him of that scornfully then I will recoil it on you and you will commit the same sin." To publish a Muslim's faults is a grave sin.

Allah has not appointed you supervisors over other people that you point out their defects, rather, you are slaves of Allah.

Think Of Yourselves

You must think of yourselves and look at your own shortcomings. When Allah helps anyone look at his own defects then he does not observe the defects of other people. Only those people see the faults of other people who do not care to see their own faults and are negligent in reforming themselves. If anyone is ill himself, he will not worry whether someone else has a cold or catarrh. So, it is a grave crime to seek faults in anyone else, spy on him and publicise it. This is what the Prophet ﷺ said in the Hadith. It does not behove a Muslim to do it, and he must refrain from these sins. Unless he does so, he cannot be a true Muslim.

The Excellence Of Learning Religious Knowledge and The Good Tidings

The fourth expression is:

وَمَنْ سَلَكَ طَرِيْقًا يَلْتَمِسُ فِيْهِ عِلْمًا سَهَّلَ اللهُ لَهُ بِهِ طَرِيْقًا اِلَى الْجَنَّةِ

"And he who treads the path in search of knowledge Allah makes that path easy leading to Paradise."

This sentence brings good tidings for all of us. May Allah inspire us to be worthy of that. Aameen. If anyone covers a distance with the aim of gaining knowledge of religion then Allah makes for him the path to Paradise easy. This distinction will be available to anyone who walks to learn even one question about religion for instance, he may go to ask for a Ruling from a Mufti.

Our Predecessors Preserved The Knowledge With Labour

We cannot match the effort put in by our predecessors to seek knowledge. We sit in comfort of our homes and read a book and then deliver a speech on it. Our predecessors went without food, they had sparse comforts and they took great pains and sacrificed much to collect and preserve the knowledge for us. If they had not worked as hard, the sayings of the Prophet ﷺ would not have been preserved for us in this manner. They have gone away after preserving for us every little behaviour of our beloved Prophet ﷺ. This will be there for everyone who comes into this world until the Day of Resurrection. They have left for us a beacon light.

A Long journey Undertaken To Learn A Hadith

There is a report in Bukhari about Hazrat Jabir رضی اللہ عنہ a very close companion of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. He was an Ansar. One day after the death of the Prophet ﷺ he learnt about Hadith on the virtues of Tahajjud Salat that he had not heard himself but another companion had learnt it directly from the Messenger of Allah ﷺ. That companion رضی اللہ عنہ was residing at Damascus in Syria, at that time. He was not satisfied that he had Hadith through indirect sources but wished to get it direct from that companion. He enquired and found out that the companion he liked to meet was in Damascus. He himself lived in Madinah. The distance between the two cities was about 1500 kilometers. I have travelled by that road myself and the entire path is through a desert there being no tree or water throughout. Hazrat Jabir رضی اللہ عنہ called for a camel at that very moment and rode it all the way to Damascus. He located the man he had come to meet and knocked at the door of his house. The companion رضی اللہ عنہ opened the door and asked him why he had come. Hazrat Jabir رضی اللہ عنہ said, "I have learnt that you have heard a Hadith from the Messenger of Allah ﷺ directly and have come to you to hear it from you." He asked. "Have you come here from Madinah only to get the Hadith?." "Yes! I have come for no other purpose but that." The companion said, "I will narrate that Hadith to you but before that let me narrate to you another Hadith that I have heard from the Messenger of Allah ﷺ:

> If anyone treads a path to secure knowledge of the religion of Allah then Allah makes the path to Paradise easy for this man.

After relating to him this Hadith, the Companion narrated to him the Hadith about the Tahajjud Salat that Hazrat Jabir رضی اللہ عنہ came to learn. He then invited him into the house to rest awhile and have meal with him but Hazrat Jabir رضی اللہ عنہ said, "No! I will not eat because I wish to dedicate my entire journey to the Hadith of the Messenger of Allah ﷺ and do not wish to do anything else during this hourney. I have got the Hadith and my purpose is served. I go back to Madinah. As-salam alaykum."

Form An Intention To Learn When You Come Here

We have seen that he undertook a long journey for the sake of Hadith. This is only one example that I have told you about. The lives of the Companions, their successors and the successors of the second generation-the companions and the epigones-are replete with examples of the long journeys they undertook to obtain religious knowledge and collect the Ahadith. The result is that we enjoy the fruit of their efforts. These people spent their money, gave their lives and underwent hardships to preserve and disseminate the knowledge. It was through their effort and dedication that they achieved the task but if we had to do it then we would have failed miserably and knowledge would not have been preserved. It is the benevolence of Allah that He created those people in order that they might preserve religion for the generations following them. It is the grace of Allah, and His favour that the religion is safe. Books are available and teachers and students are engaged in disseminating knowledge of religious topics. All you have to do is to go to them and learn. You may ask them questions, too.

This Hadith gives glad tidings to those who seek religious knowledge. We too gather here to teach and learn the religion of Allah. Therefore when we leave our homes to attend such gatherings we must form an intention in our minds that we go to learn about religion. May Allah entitle us to the tidings offered by this Hadith.

Glad Tidings For Those Who Gather In The House Of Allah

The Hadith which is the centre of our discussion gives another glad tiding in the next expression. It says: "a group of people may choose one of the Houses of Allah that is, a mosque and sit there to recite the Qur'an or take lessons from it, talking about the religion of Allah. When they sit in this manner, peace descends on them from Allah and the mercy of Allah envelopes them. The Angels surround them from all sides" which means that the mercy of Allah turns on them and they are the Angels of mercy who pray for them. They seek forgiveness of Allah for them, "O Allah! These people have assembled for your religion. O Allah! Forgive them through Your mercy. Let your mercy descend on them. Pardon them their sins and cause them to progress in religion."

Remember Allah And Allah Will Remember You

The next expression in the main Hadith of this discussion is وَذَكَرَهُمُ اللّٰهُ فِيْمَنْ عِنْدَهٗ

"Allah makes a mention of them to those who are close to Him."

These people who are gathered in a House of Allah to remember Allah are remembered by Him in the presence of those who are near to Him. He says to them, "These! My slaves have given up whatever they were doing only for My sake and to remember Me, to talk about Me and to hear about My religion." He tells the Angels around Him about the assembly of His slaves. This is no ordinary thing. It is a great thing.

"My mention is better than Me because it is made in that Assembly."

Is it an ordinary thing that the Lord makes our mention? It is our duty to remember Him and He even commanded us to remember Him فَاذْكُرُوْنِيْ {So, remember Me (al-Baqarah, 2:152)} but immediately gave the response and reward for the remembrance اَذْكُرْكُمْ {I shall remember you, (al-Baqarah, 2:152)}. "You will make my mention, I shall mention you." This is being offered to us although we are not worthy of mention. It is the same for Him if he mentions us or ignores us. Nothing will add to His greatness if He mentions us and if we do not mention Him nothing will diminish from His greatness rather even if everyone in the world forsakes it, He will not lose a bit. We are like the tiniest piece of anything. How do we favour Him if we remember Him but if He remembers us then that is a great favour.

Ubayy bin Ka'b رضی اللہ عنہ Requested To Recite The Qur'an

Hazrat Ubayy bin Ka'b رضی اللہ عنہ was a well-known Companion. Every one of the Companions was distinguished in his own way and Ubayy bin Ka'b رضی اللہ عنہ was distinguished for his excellent recital of the Qur'an. Therefore, the Holy Prophet ﷺ used to say about him اقرئهم ابی بن کعب "Ubayy bin Ka'b is the best of them in reciting the Qur'an." One day, he was among the people seated with the Holy Prophet ﷺ, when the Prophet ﷺ addressed him and said, "Allah has instructed me through Jibril (gabrial) علیہ السلام to ask you to recite the Qur'an to me." When he heard the command, Ubayy bin Ka'b رضی اللہ عنہ asked, "Did Allah take my name and instruct you to ask Ubayy bin Ka'b to do that?" The Holy Prophet ﷺ said, "Yes. He took your name when instructing me to listen to your recital." The moment he heard that, Ubayy bin Ka'b رضی اللہ عنہ could not hold himself and wept ceaselessly. Amidst sobs he said, "I am not worthy enough that Allah remembers me and call me by name."

Glad Tidings For Those Who Make Mention Of Allah

If Allah remembers anyone then that is a great blessing for the man. It is such a great blessing and favour that it surpasses all the blessings and wealth of the world. The Hadith refers to this great blessing when it says that when people Assemble to learn and listen to the religion of Allah then Allah refers to them in His assembly with the Angels. There is a Hadith Qudsi – it is a Hadith in which the Prophet ﷺ quotes the words of Allah and it says that Allah has said:

مَنْ ذَكَرَنِيْ فِيْ نَفْسِهٖ ذَكَرْتُهٗ فِيْ نَفْسِيْ وَمَنْ ذَكَرَنِيْ فِيْ مَلَإٍ ذَكَرْتُهٗ فِيْ مَلَإٍ خَيْرٍ مِنْهُ

"If anyone remembers Me when he is alone, I remember him Myself. And if anyone remembers Me among others, I remember him among others more superior than them." (Bukhari and Muslim)

So, when a person remembers Allah to himself, Allah remembers Him by Himself and when a person mentions Allah to other people, Allah mentions him to the Angels who are better than those people. This remembrance of Allah is known as zikr and a great excellence is attached to it. This includes all people who are engaged in teaching or learning religion and assemble for that purpose. They are included, all of them, in this excellence. May Allah cause us to qualify for this distinction. Aameen. Those who assemble to learn religion do not do anything insignificant. It is a rewarding thing by the grace of Allah provided they are sincere and seek the religion of Allah.

High Lineage Is Not Enough For Salvation

The concluding sentence of the Hadith is the subject of our discussion is مَنْ بَطَّأَ بِهٖ عَمَلُهٗ لَمْ يُسْرِعْ بِهٖ نَسَبُهٗ

"As for him who is slow in doing his deeds, his lineage prevents him from that."

This is also one of the Jawami'ul kalim (comprehensive brief expressions). It refers to a person who lags behind in deeds and it says that he has lagged behind because his high pedigree prevented him from being active. His deeds are not good so he cannot go to Paradise and remains behind while other people took quick steps and reached Paradise, a poet has said:

یارانِ تیز گام نے منزل کو جالیا
ہم محوِ نالہ جرسِ کارواں رہے

Those people went ahead while he lagged behind because of his deeds. He could not reform his deeds because of his lineage.

He kept boasting about his descent and was left behind. The message is that we must not rely on our lineage for success in the Hereafter but we must give thought to correcting our behaviour. If descent was helpful then the son of Hazrat Nuh (Noah) عليه السلام would not have been sent to hell because Hazrat Nuh (Noah) عليه السلام was a glorious Messenger. He even prayed for the forgiveness of Allah for his son, but Allah said:

اِنَّهٗ عَمَلٌ غَيْرُ صَالِحٍ

"He is of unrighteous conduct." (surah Hud. 11:46)

"Therefore, your prayer for him will not meet My approval." This shows that the real thing that matters is deed, a good deed. Nevertheless, if good deeds are following up with links with a religious man, a mentor then Allah gives help. In spite of that, a man is required to make preparations himself - do righteous deeds, pay attention and be mindful. If anyone neglects these things then merely high lineage will not help. May Allah cause us to rectify our deeds. Aameen.

Summary

The summary of this discussion is that it is a corollary of love for Allah and a condition too that we love His creatures. It calls on us to show them mercy and compassion. Unless we do that our claim of love for Allah is without truth. May Allah grow in our hearts love for Him and for His creatures. Aameen

And our concluding remark is that all praise belongs to Allah, Lord of the worlds.

DO NOT DISGRACE THE ULAMA

الحمد لله نحمده و نستعينه ونستغفره و نؤمن به و نتوكل عليه ونعوذ بالله من شرور انفسنا ومن سيأت اعمالنا من يهده الله فلا مضل له ومن يضلله فلا هادى له و نشهد ان لا اله الا الله وحده لاشريك له ونشهد ان سيدنا و سندنا و نبينا ومولانا محمدا عبده و رسوله صلى الله تعالى عليه وعلى اله واصحابه وبارك وسلم تسليما كثيرا كثيرا

اما بعد!

عن عمر و بن عوف المُزَنى رضى الله تعالى عنه قال قال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم:

اِتـقـوا زِلةَ العـــالـمِ ولا تـقـطـعـوهُ وَانتـــظـرُوا فيئته (مسند الفردوس للديلمى جلد ١ صفحه ٩٥. كنزالعمال حديث نمبر ٢٨٦٨٢)

Praise belongs to Allah, we praise Him, beseech Him for help, and seek His forgiveness, we believe in Him and place our trust in Him. We seek refuge in Him from the mischief of our souls and from our evil deeds. He whom Allah guides none can mislead and he whom Allah leaves to stray none can guide. And we bear witness that no one is worthy of worship besides Allah, Who is Alone and has no partner. And we testify that sayyidina Muhammad is His slave and Messenger May Allah bless him, his family and Companions, and May He bestow favours and peace, a complete peace!

It is reported by Hazrat Amr bin Awf al Muzani رضی اللہ عنہ that the Messenger of Allah ﷺ said, "Fear the fault of a religious scholar, do not sever bonds with him and wait for him to return. (Musnad al Firdaus by Daylmi VI P 95, Kanz ul'umal Hadith # 28682)

This Hadith is weak as far as the chain of transmission is concerned but it has been unanimously approved in regard to meaning. A religious scholar an 'Aalim is one whom Allah has blessed with religious knowledge including knowledge of the Qur'an, Hadith and Fiqh. If you find such a man doing something that you know surely to be a sin, and he does it constantly, then you have to do certain things. The first of the things you have to do is that you must not commit the same sin on the plea that you are imitating a Scholor. Rather, you should refrain from that sin and protect yourself from that.

Do not Follow the Ulama in Sinful Deeds

This Hadith, in its first message, stops those people from committing a sin who insist on doing it because they have seen a religious scholar do it. They refuse to listen to reason and point out to the scholar who sins. The Holy Prophet ﷺ cut at the roots of the argument that a scholar is imitated ever in sinful activity. He said that a scholar should not be followed in his wrong behaviour but must be followed in the approved things he does. You must not find courage to commit a wrong on the plea that an 'Aalim is donig it. Will you follow in his footsteps if he is going on the path of Hell? Will you jump in the fire behind him? Certainly you will not conduct yourself in this manner, then why obey him in sinful activity?

The behaviour of an 'Aalim is not Necessarily Reliable

The Ulama (Plural of 'Aalim) have told us that if an 'Aalim is authentic in his field then we may rely on his fatwa (ruling), and what he says by the tongue, but it is not necessary that his deeds and his behaviour are reliable. If he does something wrong and you ask him if that behaviour is correct, the scholar will say that it is wrong. Therefore, you may follow the directions and instructions he gives, but not his behaviour. It is wrong to argue that you should do what authentic Ulama have been doing. This argument is tantamount to saying that if eminent people jump in the fire (by their behaviour) so you may also jump into it. Just as this statement is foolish so also the first one is wrong. That is why the Holy Prophet ﷺ said fear the following of that fault.

We Must Not Mistrust an 'Aalim

The seconnd thing that you have to do is not to sever relations with the religious scholar. Some people do that immediately they spy a scholar do something wrong or commit a sin. They begin to mistrust him. Some of them defame him and extend the defamation to all religious scholars and say that the present-day Ulama are like that. This is what the Prophet ﷺ is reported to have said in the second expression of this Hadith 'do not sever bonds with him' even if you find a religious scholar committing a sin. The reason for that is explained in the next paragraph.

The Ulama Also Are Human Beings

An 'Aalim or a Religious Scholar is a human being, after all, like any of us. He is created just as we are and he is not an Angel. He harbours the same sentiments as we do. The same desires tempt him as we face and he too has to cope with the evil like we have to. Neither is he innocent and sinless nor is he Prophet and Messenger or an Angel. Rather, he lives in the world and faces the same things as any other man here. There is no evidence that a Religous Scholar should be innocent and sinless and one who will never sin or do wrong. If he is human then it follows that he might err and sin. Therefore, it is wrong to reject him if he is. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said "do not sever ties with him immediately but wait for him to return". He has the true knowledge and there is hope that he will come back to the correct path Insha Allah.

Pray For the Ulama

If you pray for him you will get a two-fold reward. You will earn a reward for making a supplication and another for wishing well for a Muslim. Your prayer could be; "O Allah! This man is responsible for diffusion of religious teachings. We learn religious matters from him but the unfortunate man is involved in sin. O Allah! Be Merciful to him and get him out of this evil habit." If your prayer is answered then you will be held responsible for his reformation and every righteous deed that he does after that will be credited to your Record of deeds also. So, you should not publicise the man's faults and accuse him of being sinful. You will not gain anything by that.

An 'Aalim Who Lags behind in Doing Good Deeds Is Also Entitled To Respect

Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanvi رحمة الله عليه has said that it is the duty of a Religious scholar to be rightious . But, if an 'Aalim lacks in that field then too he is entitled to respect because of his knowledge. Allah has bestowed on him knowledge for which he enjoys a rank and that rank entitles him to rspect. It is like the respects due to parents which the Qur'an calls upon us to give them.

وَاِنْ جٰهَدٰكَ عَلٰٓى اَنْ تُشْرِكَ بِيْ مَالَيْسَ لَكَ بِهٖ عِلْمٌ فَلَا تُطِعْهُمَا وَصَاحِبْهُمَا فِي الدُّنْيَا مَعْرُوْفًا ۖ (سورة لقمان:١٥)

But if they strive with you to make you associate with Me that whereof you have no knowledge then obey them not, yet you keep honourable company with them in this world.

(Surah Luqman. 31:15)

If the parents are unbelievers or idolators then they must not be obeyed in religion but they are entitled to fair treatment in the world. They have the honour to be someone's parents and that itself calls for their children to respect them. It is wrong for any one to insult them. Similarly, if a religious scholar does not do good deeds, one must pray for him, "O Allah! cause him to be righteous." He should not be disgraced for his lack of righteousness. Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه has advised the Ulama "mere knowledge is nothing unless it is accompanied by deeds". But he also said, "when a religious scholar comes to me, and although I am aware of his shortcomings I honour and respect him because of his religious knowledge."

Maintain Ties with the Ulama

It has become a habit with people these days to pick up fault with the Ulama and publicise it. They accuse them of wrong and say that it is common with present-day Ulama. They say, "All Ulama are like that". Those people who are irreligious are occupied in this way because until they defame the Ulama and lower them in the eyes of the common man their objective is not served and they cannot mislead the Muslims. They know that once they succeed in breaking the ties of the common man with the Ulama they can play with his sentiments and mislead him. My respected father رحمة الله عليه used to say, "when the flock is separated from the shepherd, the wolf is free to molest them and devour them." So, this is what the irreligious men do and we are not surprised at their behaviour. However, what surprises us is that the men who are religious also indulge in such behaviour. They do not hesitate to blame the Ulama although they gain nothing out of it. They do not consider that once they lower the Ulama in the sight of people, who will teach them their religious duties? The evil will then mislead them into classifying the lawful and unlawful according to their whims and they will be misled. Therefore, although the Ulama are seen to lack righteousness, they should not be insulted. We should pray for them and because they are men of knowledge they will Insha Allah come back to the Right Path.

Bandit Turns into Man of Allah

Maulana Rashid Ahmad Gangohi رحمة الله عليه once asked his disciples "why do you follow me? I am just like the so called mentor who was a banit actually. He had observed people throng the haunts of pirs religious mentors paying them great respect and holding them in high esteem. They carried gifts along, kissed their hands and were deeply devoted to them. He said to himself that it was a lucrative occupation and that he unnecessarily risked his life and kept awake in the night to commit robberies. There was always the possibility of being caught and imprisoned. He also had to put in extra effort."

Maulana Rashid Ahmad Gangohi رحمة الله عليه continued. The bandit decided to quit banditry and become a holy man. He thought he would have a large number of disciples who would kiss his hands and bring him gifts. So he stopped committing robberies and built himsilf a Khanqah (a sort of sanctuary). He took a rosary and dressed himself like a holy man wearing a long shirt and making-up in the fashion of a mentor. He began to hold sessions of remembrance of Allah (Zikr) and chant His praises. People saw him and were much impressed by his appearance. One by one, they began to enrol as his disciples and gradually, he had a very large following. Gifts poured in, charities were brought. His hands were kissed and some even kissed his feet. He would prescribe a different set of recitals to every disciple. Naturally the recitals do have an effect and Allah raises the reciter's ranks. Because the disciples were sincere in their recital, Allah raised their ranks very high and they were able to meditate and look into the hearts of other people.

The Supplication of the Disciples Does work

The Maulana continued his narration: one day, the disciples commented to each other that Allah had granted them a rank and they should now meditate and see how much further it is to the rank of their mentor, how much more they have to travel? They began their exercise and set about to ponder on the status of their benefactor, their Shaikh. But they could not locate him when they meditated on that question. They thought that their Shaikh had attained such a high status that they could not see him in their meditation exercises. So, they approached him and submitted to him Sir! We tried to see your station through meditation but you are so very high that we could not find you. The bandit-turned-Shaikh realised then what he really was and he revealed to his desciples the true story. Weeping. he said to them, " How can I show you what my rank is? I am a bandit! And I have taken up this profession to earn a livelihood and amass wealth. Allah has granted you high stations through your recital Which I continue to wander in the lowest of the low ranks. How then can you find me in the high ranks? I am a bandit, a robber and I do not have anything so please go away from me. Find yourself another mentor?

When they heard the facts the disciples gathered together and prayed for their shaikh "O Allah! He may be a thief or a bandit. But Allah! whatever you have granted us is because of him. O Allah! Guide him and reform him. Raise his ranks, O Allah!"

These disciples were sincere and pious men. Through the blessings of their supplication Allah forgave him and gave him, too! a high station.

The narration of Maualana Rashid Ahmad Gangohi ends here.

So whenever you hear a derogatory remark passed on a religious scholar do not publicise it. Instead, pray for him. May Allah cause us to behave accordingly Aameen.

And our concluding remark is: Praise be to Allah Lord of the worlds.

عن ابى هريرة رضى الله عنه قال انّ رجلا قال لرسول الله عليه وسلم اوصنى ولا تكثر على قال" لاَ تَـغْـضَـبْ "(جامع الاصول الكتاب الثالث فى الغضب والغيظ)

Praise belongs to Allah. We praise Him, ask Him for help and seek His forgiveness. And, we believe in Him and place our trust in Him. And, we seek His protection from the mischief of our base souls and from our evil deeds. He whom Allah guides nobody can mislead and he whom

He leaves to stray none can guide. And we bear witness that there is no one worthy of worship besides Allah, Who is Alone and Who has no partner, and we bear witness that Muhammad is His Slave and Messenger, may Allah bless him and his family and companions, and may He shower favours and peace a complete peace, and plenty of it.

Hazrat Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہ has said that a man asked the Prophet ﷺ, "Give me some instruction but do not make it lengthy." He said, "Do not be angry." (Jami'ul-Usul, Book three-Anger)

According to Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہ a man presented himself before the Holy Prophet ﷺ and asked him to give him some advice but it must be brief. So while he wants an instruction, he also places a condition that it must not be a long advice but a short one. The Holy Prophet ﷺ acceded to his request and did not show displeasure at the condition the man had placed. The exponents of Hadith have commented, that it is not wrong for anyone who asked the Ulama for instructions to place a condition that they should be brief and it is not contrary to etiquette. It is possible that the man might be in a hurry and if he is given a long instruction, he might be delayed and repent having asked. The Holy Prophet ﷺ gave him a very brief instruction لاتغضب "Do not be angry."

Sin is prompted by two things Anger and Lust

If we think over it there are two forces that drive man to sin. They are anger and lust. Whether a sin pertains to violation of rights of Allah or of fellow men, one of these two things prompts man to sin. Lust stands for the Arabic word shahwah meaning desires of the soul. A man may wish to eat something, is a desire of his soul. He may wish to do something unreasonable, that is also a desire of his soul. Why does a man rob someone? He wants to collect wealth and possessions. For the same lust he ogles at women. These are things that his soul desires and makes him commit a sin. Many sins originate because of lust. Many others originate from anger. We will see as we read further that anger leads to innumerable sins. Thus, if we will obey the Prophet ﷺ when he instructs us not to be angry then we will save ourselves from fifty percent of the sins that we commit.

The first step to Self Reformation

Maulana Thanavi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ has said that the message of this Hadith "do not be angry" is an important lesson of Sufism, The first step for a man who takes the path of Allah and sets to reform himself is to curb anger.

Anger is Instinctive

As it is, anger is natural to man. There is no man without the instinct of anger. Allah has placed this quality in man for some reason. If man keeps it under control then he saves himself from many difficulties but if he is bereft of the quality of anger then he will never be angry and never defend himself when attacked by an enemy or an animal. So, man is allowed to show anger to protect himself and shari'ah has not placed any restriction on that., This quality of anger is given to man for the very purpose of protecting himself, his possessions, his family and his relatives. These are the times when anger is permitted.

Sins that result from anger

However, if a man does not control his anger then he is liable to commit innumerable sins. It is anger that gives rise to arrogance. Again, anger grows jealousy in man. An angry man bears malice and is hostile too. There are plenty of other undesirable traits in a man who is given to anger and who does not control his anger. For example, a man who does not check his anger may hit a subordinate when he is very angry; he will cause the poor fellow much difficulty and use abusive language. These are sinful acts that he commits when he is angry. To beat someone unnecessarily is a grave sin. Similarly, it is a grave sin to abuse someone and the Holy Prophet ﷺ has said about it:

سِبَابُ الْمُسْلِمِ فُسُوْقٌ وَ قِتَالُهُ كُفْرٌ (صحیح بخاری، کتاب الادب، باب مایہی من السباب واللعن)

"Abusing a Muslim is fusuq (an evil act) and killing him is kufr (disbelief)." (Bukhari, Book of al-Abad. Hadith # 6044)

These things happen when a man is angry. He abuses and taunts another Muslim when he loses his temper and in this way pains him and makes him sad. This is a very sinful behaviour. Thus anger led him to commit a sin.

Anger makes one Spiteful

If the person on whom a man is angry is not his subordinate then the angry man backbites him. This happens when, for instance, a man is angry at someone who is senior to him and he cannot let him know what he has in his mind so he will speak ill of him behind his back. It is thus anger that caused him to backbite. Sometimes, no matter how much he backbites the other man, his anger does not subside and he feels like slapping the man and hurting him but he cannot do it because of the other's seniority. This is being spiteful. This man is ever prepared to hurt the other and gets pleasure when the other is in difficulty. It is a sinful behaviour and a result of anger.

Jealousy grows from Anger

We have seen that the angry man derives pleasure from the other man's troubles but it also happens that this man sees comfort and happiness. The angry man, then, wishes for his comfort and happiness to be taken away from him. He wishes that whatever gain the other has by way of prosperous business or promotion may be lost to him. He cannot see him happy and prosperous. In other words, he is jealous of him, and we have seen that it is also a result of anger. Thus, a man commits many sins when the person he is angry at is his subordinate or junior and even when he is his superior or senior. Therefore, the sins that he commits are because he cannot control his anger; if he had a control over his anger then he would not have committed so may sins. The Holy Prophet ﷺ said for the very reason, "Do not be angry." We also find in the Qur'an, Allah describes the pious Muslims in these words:

وَالْكَاظِمِيْنَ الْغَيْظَ وَالْعَافِيْنَ عَنِ النَّاسِ (سورآل عمران: ۱۳٤)

And restrain their anger, and are forgiving towards mankind. (Al Imran, 3:134)

The pious Muslims do that because one who controls his temper preserves himself from many sins.

An angry person violates Rights of other People

We have stated earlier that two things prompt a man to sin anger and lust. Sins that are committed through lust are also grave but there is always a likelihood that Allah will forgive the sinner if he repents to Him and seeks His forgiveness from the sins. They are erased from his Record of deeds. On the other hand, sins that are committed in anger often involve violation of rights, of fellow men. This is apparent when an angry man beats the subject of his anger, abuses him or scolds him and causes him pain and grief. In other words he usurps the other man's rights. In the same way, an angry man backbites his victim, shows spite or becomes jealous of him and thus encroaches on his rights. The sin of violation of rights of fellow men results from anger. It is so grave a sin that even if the sinner repents and reforms, his repentance will not be perfect unless he is forgiven by those people whose rights he had violated. Allah says, "When you repent. I will forgive your violation of My rights but I will not forgive your violation of the rights of My slaves unless they forgive you." This thing becomes difficult. How many people will the violator go to and ask for forgiveness and get it? This is why the Holy Prophet ﷺ gave the instruction لاتغضب "Do not be angry."

When a man contorls his anger Allah says, "My slave has restrained his rage so I too will not be angry at him."

Excellent reward on controlling Anger

The gist of the Hadith is that a man will be brought before Allah on the Day of Resurrection as part of reckoning. Although Allah knows everything yet He asks for some details that other people may know it too. So, He will ask the Angels to let Him know what piety is recorded in his Record of deeds. The Angels will say, "O Alalh! There are not too many righteous deeds in his Record. He was not given to voluntary effort in worship but there is one thing very prominent in his Record. Whenever anyone trespassed his rights, he was quick to forgive him and if anyone told him that he could not repay his rights then he asked his subordinates to forgo their demand and pardon him because he did not have the means. In this manner, he gave up his rights." Allah will say, "As this man behaved in a forgiving manner with My slaves and gave up his rights too for them, today I too will deal with him in a forgiving spirit, and I forgive him." So, it is on this basis that Allah forgives the man.

The effort of the son of Shah Abdul Quddus Gangohi رحمة الله عليه

It is with this in mind that our religious mentors prescribed restraining anger as the first exercise after repentance to anyone who approached them for guidance and reforming. They asked the seekers to go through tremendous effort to restrain anger.

Shaikh Abdul Quddus Gangohi رحمة الله عليه was a very eminent man of Allah, a saint. People came to him from different places of the world to seek advice and to reform themselves at his hands. But, his own son did not regard him with esteem. Father is there at home and everyone visits him to seek his blessings but the son is unconcerned. He is occupied in idle pursuit. It happens often that an elder man in the family is valued only after his death. So, when he died, his son opened his eyes and realised his mistake. He said to himself. "I lost a great opportunity while everyone else took advantage of my father's blessings. I sought nothing."

He sought out someone who visited his father regularly and reformed himself and received blessings from him more than anyone else. He hoped to earn and regain some blessings for himself from that man. He learnt that a holy man who suited these qualifications lived in Balkh while he lived in Gangoh in the United Provinces (India). So, he decided to go there and informed the holy man that he would visit him. That man awaited the son of his Shaikh outside the city together with his retinue. He received him with a warm welcome and brought him home. He arranged exceptional meals for him and treated him very well, The guest son of his Shaikh said to him after a couple of days, "you have treated me with much love and affection and honoured me highly but truly I have come with some other purpose." He asked him to name the purpose of his visit. He said, "My respected elder, I want to receive from you some of the blessings you derived from my father because I failed to gain anything from him while he was alive." His father's disciple and his own mentor said, "O, so you have come for that purpose. Well, from now on there will be no hospitality for you. You will not be given special treatment and no choice meals will be served to you. From now on, you will stay next to the Hammam (bathrooms) situated near the mosque. You will have to sleep there. You will have to burn the fire and heat the water for the Hammam and collect the fuel for the fire-wood and garbage." It was the winter season and water had to be heated for the worshippers to perform ablution. The son was told that he had to do all that and nothing more. No recital was prescribed for him. What a fall from the honourable reception to the task appointed for him!

Remedy For Arrogance

Because he had come with a sincere intention, he followed the directions of his mentor and took up the duties at the bathrooms. For a period of time his duties included observance of the five daily Salats and looking after the bathrooms of the mosque. The holy man knew that such young men had in them nobility and purity of heart but they also had a semblance of pride and conceit, a drawback that was attached to them surely, it had to be cured. So, he was given a task that would remedy the ill. After some days, the mentor decided to find out whether he still had the germs of pride in him the-image of a prince-or not. To do this he chose to use the sweepress who cleaned his house. He instructed her that she should walk close to the man appointed at the baths when she had collected the garbage and let him know if he said anything to her. She did as directed. The moment she walked close enough to him, he exploded in anger, "How dare you walk close to me! I am not at Gangoh otherwise I would have taught you a lesson." She reported the reaction to the Shaikh who concluded that his student was yet raw and still had to improve so, his duties at the bath continued further.

The Second Trial

After some more days, the sweepress was again instructed to walk close to him with the garbage in her hands, and she was told to walk very close this time. She followed the instructions and walked very close to him. The young man stared at her in anger but uttered not a word. She reported to the Shaikh what had passed. He saw that the treatment was having its effect.

The Third Trial

When some more days had gone by, the Shaikh instructed the sweepress to walk close to him once again and keep close enough for the garbage basket to touch him and for some of the garbage to drop on him. She was very close to him, dropping a little garbage on him but he did not even glance at her. She told the mentor what had transpired and he commented that they were succeeding in the treatment.

The Fourth Trial

Once again, the Shaikh sent the sweepress to his disciple, the son of his own Shaikh. Some days had passed since he had been tried the third time. The sweepress was asked to repeat her performance with the added act that she should tumble down before him dropping the basket full of garbage on the young man. "Let me know how he reacts," the Shaikh said. The sweepress stumbled just as she was close enough to empty her basket on him. As she fell down, the young disciple did not bother about his own condition but aided her if she had hurt herself. She recalled before the Shaikh what happened and the Shaikh expressed hope of success in reforming the young man.

A Great Trial And Inward Reward

After that, another incident took place. The Shaikh was in the habit of going on hunting trips; he had hunting dogs with him. Naturally, he must have seen some wisdom in that from a religious point of view. Besides, it is permitted to hunt with the help of the hunting dogs. So, when he went on one such trip he took the young man along and appointed him to hold the chain of one of the hunting dogs. The dog was strong and fat, and this poor fellow was thin and hungry. When the dogs spied the hunt they ran but this young man could not keep pace and fell down. However, he did not let go of the chain because his master had forbidden him to release his grip on the chain. The result was that he was being pulled by the dog and he bled profusely but did not go against the command of his Shaikh. He did not release the chain.

After this incident, the Shaikh saw his own mentor, Shaikh Maulana Abdul Quddus Gangohi رحمة الله عليه in his dreams. He told him, "I had not put you to that much trouble." Only a father cares for his children! In the morning, the Shaikh summoned the young Gangohi and embraced him and he said to him, "I had received a wealth from your father and you had asked me for it. I had held it as a trust for you and have returned it to you. The way that I have followed was the only one to hand over the trust so I followed it."

Restrain Anger and overtake the Angels

We have seen that when the young man approached the Shaikh he was not asked to follow a recital pattern or pursue a set of devotional exercises but he was asked to menial work that removed pride from his mind. He was taught to deal fairly with the slaves of Allah and to restrain anger, the cause of pride. Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه has said that the first lesson in suluk and tasawwuf, and the first step to Sufism is to check anger and to give it up. When a man has a full control over anger, Allah raises him up to such stations that even the Angels envy him. The Angels never get angry because they lack the charactereistic of anger, and they are always engaged in worship. If they do not cause anyone any difficulty it is not something worth marveling. Allah says. "I have created them with that quality. But I have put in the son of Adam the quality of anger. So, if, out of My fear and love, he restrains his anger, he progresses ahead of the Angels."

An incident in the life of Imam Abu Hanifah رحمة الله عليه

Imam Abu Hanifah رحمة الله عليه is the jurist whose school of thought we follow. He is well-known and has a following all over the world. During his time there were many people jealous of him. Allah had blessed him with a high station, renown, knowledge and a large following. The result was that he also had many who were jealous of him, and because they were jealous they spoke ill of him behind his back and were rude to him also. One day while he was going home, someone walked along with him and abused him continuously. When they had walked some distance, they came to a crossing and their destinations stood on different paths. Imam Abu Hanifah رحمة الله عليه stood at the corner of the street and spoke his first words to the man, "My house is situated on this street while you have to go on the other side, so I will stop here for sometime to allow you to finish what you have to say. May be you still have to hurl more abuses on me. Please do that. After you have said all you want to say, I will go to my house. along this street." This incident is recorded in relevant books.

Ablution of Isha was intact
Upto Fajr a Period of forty years

My shaikh, Maulana Masih ullah Khan رحمة الله عليه told us that Imam Abu Hanifa رحمة الله عليه used to perform ablution for his Isha Salat and remained in the state of ablution until he had offered the Fajr Salat. This has an unusual begining. He was not used to do it always. In the beginning, he would get up in the last part of the night to offer Tahajjud but one day, while he was walking along, an old woman remarked, "He is the one who prays the Fajr and Isha with the same ablution. On hearing this, he felt ashamed and said to himself, "This woman holds an opinion about me that I offer the Isha and Fajr Salat with the same ablution but I do not do that. I am being praised for what I am not." He resolved that very day to qualify himself for those words the rest of his life. So, he made it a rule of his life to engage in worship after Isha until the Fajr Salat and in this way offer the two distant Salat with a single ablution.

This did not mean that he slept all day because he was engaged in worship all night. He had his own business to look after and he also conducted lessons on religious matters. People visited him to learn from him. He worshipped Allah all night, gave lessons on the Qur'an after Fajr Salat and then looked after his business. He kept himself occupied until the Zuhr Salat and then slept till the Asr Salat.

Yet Another Unique Incident In
The Life Of Imam Abu Hanifah رحمة الله عليه

As was his wont, he went home one day after Zuhr to rest. He lived in an upper storey. He went there and lay down on his bed. Just then, someone knocked the door below. How very infuriating it is for one who has not slept in the night and has been working all day to be disturbed just as he lays himself to rest! But, the Imam got down the staircase and opened the door. He found a man standing there and asked him what he wanted. He wanted to ask a question. Now, this was not the time to ask questions. The Imam had set aside a time when men put their questions and got the reply, they solved their problems. However the Imam did not rebuke him but invited him to ask his question. He said, "What can I say? When I was coming here. I knew what I had to ask but I have forgotten it now. I cannot remember it." Imam Abu Hanifa رحمة الله عليه said, "Well, you may ask me when you remember it." He did not tell him off, or scold him. Quietly, he returned upstairs to his quarters. He had just lied down when there was a second knock on the door. He came down again and opened the door to find the same man there. "What is it?" he asked and was told by that visitor, "I had remembered the question." "Go on, ask it." "O, I had remembered it until a short while ago but I forgot it again when you were half way down." Anyone else would have lost his temper but Imam Abu Hanifah رحمة الله عليه had sacrificed personal comfort and suppressed his ego. He said to him, "When you remember it, you may ask me." He went up stairs to his bed and prepared to sleep. The knock was heard a third time and he came down again to find the same man at the door. "I have recalled the question." The Imam said, "Go on, ask it." He said, "I wish to know if the faeces of man tastes sweet or sour?" (We seek the protection of Allah. What a question to ask?)

Limits of patience

It is difficult to say if any other man would have borne patiently so long but even if he had, this question would have thrown him into a rage. The Imam, however, was very cool and gave a polite answer, "If the human excretion is fresh then there is some sweetness in it but once it has dried up, it becomes sour to the taste." That man asked, "Have you learnt this after tasting it?" Imam Abu Hanifah رحمة الله عليه said, "You cannot know everything by taste alone. You can know something by intelligence and by seeing that flies infest fresh excretion. That shows that there is a difference in the two otherwise flies would sit on both."

Forbearing Man Of His Times

On hearing Imam Abu Hanifah رحمة الله عليه give this answer, that man said, "Imam Abu Hanifah, I apologise to you. I have troubled you too much. You have defeated me, nevertheless." The Imam asked him how was it that he was defeated? He said, My friend and I had argued about the most clement man among the Ulama. I said that Sufyan Thauri رحمة الله عليه was the most patient of the Ulama who does not get angry at all. But my friend said that Imam Abu Hanifah رحمة الله عليه was the most patient who never was angry. Then we decided upon this method to try you and to incite you. I decided to provoke you when it was time for you to rest and get you up and down a few times before putting to you a nonsensical question. If you had flown into a rage. I would have won but, as it is, I lost to my friend because I could not irritate you. You defeated me. And it is a fact that there is no one besides you as forbearing as you are and one who does not get angry at all."

This shows what the station of Imam Abu Hanifah رحمته الله عليه was. Why should the Angels not envy him? He had given up personal desires completely.

Forbearance Adorns

This is a prayer of the Holy Prophet ﷺ.

اَللّٰهُمَّ اغْنِنِیْ بِالْعِلْمِ وَزَیِّنِی بِالْحِلْمِ (کنزالعمال حدیث نمبر ۳۶۶۳)

"O Allah enrich me with knowledge and adorn me with forbearance." (Kanz ul-Ummal, Hadith # 3663)

It means decorate me with dignity. If a man possesses knowledge but is not forbearing or patient then in spite of knowledge he lacks polish and beauty.

The first step in walking this path and chaining one's soul is to restrain anger. That is why the Prophet ﷺ said, "Do not be angry" لا تغضب. That in itself is the first lesson and a brief advice and also a way to save oneself from the wrath of Allah.

Ways to Control Anger

It is not that we are just told that we must not be angry. We are also shown how to do that. The Qur'an has also shown us how, and the Messenger of Allah ﷺ has also shown us the method. The first thing we must know is that we are not called to account for involuntary and unintentional anger when one is excited suddenly. This is because it is not within one's control but the excitement and commotion that is aroused should not be allowed to influence one's actions. For instance, there is no sin if one loses his temper on someone and feels aroused but if he scolds him or hits him or abuses him because of the anger then he will be liable to answer for that and it will be a sin.

Recite The Ta'awuz When Angry

So, when you face such a situation and are excited, the first thing you must do is act a on the direction that Allah has given in the Qur'an:

وَإِمَّا يَنْزَغَنَّكَ مِنَ الشَّيْطٰنِ نَزْغٌ فَاسْتَعِذْ بِاللّٰهِ ۚ إِنَّهٗ سَمِيْعٌ عَلِيْمٌ (الاعراف: ٢٠٠)

If a provocation from Satan provokes you (O Prophet), then seek refuge in Allah.(al-A'raf 7:200)

That is, recite شيطان الرجيم (I seek refuge in Allah from the cursed devil). The devil provoked you but you sought the refuge of Allah, so Allah will preserve you from its evil consequences. Therefore, make it a habit to recite these words whenever you are faced with such a situation. It is not difficult and only needs a little practice.

When Angry Sit Down Or Lie Down

The next thing that you must do when angry is follow the advice of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. It is an unusual but psychological procedure. He said, "If you feel the rage of anger in you then if you are standing, sit down. If the feeling persists in that posture then lie down." It is the peculiarity of anger that it rises to the brains and when it is at its peak a man stands up. Thus if a man is lying down and he gets angry, he will sit down, if he is sitting at that time then he will stand up. So, to subside anger, you must behave the other way about. If you are standing you must sit down and if you are sitting down then you must lie down and you take yourself to a lower position. The Holy Prophet ﷺ showed us this method because he knew that we might get into much difficulty because of anger. (Abu Dawood, Kitab ul-Adab باب مايقال عند الغضب)

When Angry Think Of The Powers Of Allah

Yet another method to fight anger is to say to oneself, "Suppose Allah were to be angry at me in the same way as I am angry at this man then what will become of me." We are told by a Hadith that the Messenger of Allah ﷺ once came across Abu Bakr رضى الله عنه scolding his slave. He was blaming him harshly. According to a version, the Prophet ﷺ said to him, "Remember, Allah has more power and authority over you than you have over him. You use your authority to hurt him but Allah has more authority over you." لله اقدرعليك منك عليه

Forbearance of Allah

We must look at Allah, how very clement and forbearing He is! His slaves disobey Him. They disbelieve in Him and they associate partners with Him. They go to the extent of denying His existence. In spite of that he lets them have their provision. Rather, He lets some of the disobedient slaves have abundant worldly wealth. There is no limit to His clemency. It is said, تخلقوا باخلاق الله "Grow the manners of Allah in yourself." You must think, "when Allah does not lose His temper on His slaves and not on me too, then why should I use it on my subordinates."

Hazrat Abu Bakr رضی اللہ عنہ Scolds His Slave

Another version tells us that when the Holy Prophet ﷺ saw Abu Bakr رضی اللہ عنہ scold his slave harshly, he told him:

لَعَّانِيْنَ وَصِدِّيْقِيْنَ كَلَّا وَرَبِّ الْكَعْبَةِ

"By the Lord of the Ka'bah, it cannot be that you curse while you are truthful, too!"

Your status is of the Siddiq. This thing does not behove a Siddiq. In this way, he forbids him to scold a slave. Thus, when you get angry on someone you must remember that the power and authority Allah has over you is much greater than the power and authority you have over your slave. "If Allah calls me to account, I will be nowhere." These are some of the ways to restrain anger that the Qur'an and the Prophet of Allah ﷺ have shown us.

Hold back Anger In The First Instance

In the beginning when man takes the first step in reforming himself, he must not see into the justification of anything whether he is justified in showing anger or not.

Sometimes, a man's behaviour calls for anger to be shown to him but a novice who is in his first steps to reformation must not differentiate between the two situations and he must repress his anger. Once he has full control over anger then he will be discreet in showing anger and will always use it at the proper time. However, as we have said, a man must not show anger at the initial stages when he learns to control it even if he knows that the situation calls for it, then he will not exceed the limits when he is angry.

Reasonable Anger

Sometimes, it is necessary to deal with a situation in anger. This is necessary when a teacher copes with his students, a father with his children, a mentor with his disciples, but the limits must not be exceeded. One must scold only as much as is necessary. If one scolds more than is needed then one's own ego plays its part and it is a sinful act besides blessings.

Varying Temperament of Holy Men

Most of the awliya (the friends of Allah, the saints) treat their disciples with compassion and love. They do not get angry at them. But, it is not the same with all of them. These men of Allah vary in their temperament. Some are very merciful and show mercy and compassion in reforming their disciples. Some others are quick tempered and they reform their disciples with their wrath over which they have control and of which they use proper doses for treatment of their disciples, when people refer to a holy man as awe inspiring and wrathful, it does not mean that he is always in a rage, scolding every now and then but it means that he uses his anger according to the dose required to reform his disciple. For instance, it is known of Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanavi رحمة الله عليه that he was a temperamental man and he was a Faruqi that is a descendant of Hazrat Umar Faruq رضى الله عنه and, therefore, had a great sense of honour. However, he never exceeded the limits in being angry at his disciples. In normal circumstances, he was very clement and tolerant.

Do Not Scold When Angry

He used to say, "I advise other people and I also behave accordingly that I do show anger to one who is under my training but I am never angry at anyone who is not under my training. When you are angry and excited, do not scold anyone. At such times, keep quiet but when your anger has subsided, pretend to be angry and scold the delinquent. You will not then exceed the limits but you will exceed limits if you show anger when excited." He used to say, "By the grace of Allah, even when I punish someone to reform him, I remember at the time that he is at a higher level than I and more excellent. I punish him because I am duty bound to do so for Allah." He then compared it to a King's treatment of his son. It is like a king who is angry at his prince for doing something unreasonable so he asks his executioner to whip him. That man will obey the king and whip the prince but while whipping him he will be aware that his victim is a prince. So, I am the executioner and the other man is of a rank higher than I, I am helpless because of the duty imposed on me." He then continued, "Right at the time I treat my disciple I am aware that his rank is higher, but I am compelled to scold him because of the duty imposed on me by Allah."

Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه used to explain his behaviour, "On the one hand, I called for his explanation and examined him but on the other I would pray to Allah inwardly that He may not do the same thing to me in the Hereafter. And, as I scold him here, O Allah, do not do that to me on the Day of Resurrection. Whatever I do, O Allah, I do in pursuance of Your command."

So, Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه showed anger only when training his disciples and observed the etiquettes minutely not exceeding the limits. What is commonly known among people about his wrathful nature is without foundation.

An Incident In The Life Of Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه

Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه had an old servant with him, Bhai Niaz, He lived with him in the Khanqah at Thana Bhaun. He was with Maulana for a long time and was thus somewhat spoiled and touchy. Someone once complained to Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه that Niaz was very short tempered and often scolded his guests. The Maulana was worried about it because this was not a correct way to behave with visitors. So, he summoned him and said to him, "Niaz! What is it that I hear! You are rude to every visitor." Suddenly, Niaz erupted, "Maulana! Don't lie, fear Allah!" What he really wished to say was that those who have complained about him should not lie but fear Allah and what he said to the Maulana was not meant to refer to him. The words, however were addressed to the Maulana, his master, and he was his servant telling him not to lie but to fear Allah on that account. By our standards that servant was liable to further censure and punishment but Maualana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه lowered his gaze and saying astaghfirullah, astagahfirullah went away from there. (I seek the forgiveness of Allah).

The truth was that the Maulana realised that he had only heard the complainant's version and scolded Niaz without getting his side of the story. He said, "It was my mistake. I should have found out what he had to say. Therefore, I sought the forgiveness of Allah and walked out from there." It is about this man that it is circulated that he was quick-tempered and scolded other people.

Certain Things Must Be Considered Before Telling Off Others

My respected father, Maulana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه used to say, "We found with Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه nothing but compassion and love. When he found it necessary to reprimand someone as part of reforming him then he kept in mind certain considerations before giving him a piece of his mind. If anyone has to be scolded and he is young then he must consider some thing. For example, he must not aim to take out his steam but his aim should be to reform the other man. Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه described the method for that "Do not take any step when you are excited or in a rage. When you have cooled down, think over what you must do then pretend to be angry and give the man a scolding to the extent it is necessary, not less than that and not more. If you scold him while you are excited then you will lose control and commit excess."

The Proper Time To Show Anger

What is the proper time to show anger? The first and most correct time to show anger is when Allah is being disobeyed and sin is being committed. You must hate these things and you must show only that much anger as is necessary to eradicate the evil things. This is the first place to be angry.

Four Signs Of Perfect Faith

The Messenger of Allah ﷺ is quoted in a Hadith:

مَنْ اَعْطٰى لِلّٰهِ وَمَنَعَ لِلّٰهِ وَاَحَبَّ لِلّٰهِ وَ اَبْغَضَ لِلّٰهِ فَقَدِ اسْتَكْمَلَ اِيْمَانَهٗ

(ترمذی، ابواب صفة القيامة، باب نمبر ٦١)

"He who gives, gives for Allah, and he who denies, denies for Allah, and he who loves, loves for Allah, and he who hates, hates for Allah, then surely his faith is perfect." (Tirmizi, Chapter Signs of Qiyamah No. 61)

The Prophet ﷺ testified that the faith of such a man is perfect.

The First Sign

The Holy Prophet ﷺ showed us four things in this Hadith as signs of a perfect faith. The first sign is that when anyone gives something to someone else then whatever he gives, he gives for the sake of Allah. It means that a man always has this in mind that when he spends on a pious cause, he spends for Allah. Again, he spends for the sake of Allah when he spends on himself or his family, or in charity. He has the pleasure of Allah in mind. When he gives sadaqah or in charity, he should tell himself, "I give the sadaqah that Allah may be pleased with me and may reward me thorough His beneficence." He should never aim to make a display of his charity or to earn fame.

The Second Sign

The second sign is مَنَعَ لِلّٰهِ. "If he denies, it is for Allah. "If a man stops someone, he has the pleasure of Allah in mind. For instance, if he prevents spending money, he does so because Allah and His Messenger ﷺ have said, "Do not spend unnecessarily." So, he must tell himself that he saves the money for the sake of Allah. This is also a sign of faith.

The Third And The Fourth Signs

The third sign is وَاَحبَّ لِلّٰہِ "He loves for the sake of Allah." Thus, if a man loves a holy man, his love is not to fetch worldly gains but to progress in faith and gain advantage in religious knowledge and practice and so to please Allah. This love is for Allah alone and is a sign of faith. In this way, he always loves for Allah Whose pleasure he seeks.

The fourth sign is وَاَبغَضَ لِلّٰہِ "if he hates or scolds anyone, he should do it for the sake of Allah." A man scolds another, or hates him, it is not against this person but it is for the wrong he does and for his behaviour that displeases Allah; in such cases, his action is for the sake of Allah, and is proper.

Do Not Hate The Person

Our religious mentors have told us something that we must remember. The hatred or the animosity that we bear must be against the disbelief but not against the unbeliever himself, against a sin but not the sinner and against immorality but not the immoral person. The subject of our anger is the immorality or the sin not the person involved in it because he is worth having mercy on, he is sick. He is ill with disbelief or with immorality. Our hatred is with the illness not the ill or sick because if we come to dislike the ill then who will treat him: this is why if he refrains from disbelief and immorality, he is entitled to be embraced because we have no quarrel with him and no argument.

The Method Of The Holy Prophet ﷺ

Let us see at the behaviour of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. Hazrat Hamzah رضی اللہ عنہ was his beloved paternal uncle. He was martyred in the Battle of Uhud and his body mistreated. Wahshi killed him and Hindah had eaten the martyr's liver but when both of them embraced Islam, they became the Prophet's ﷺ brother and sister in Islam and when their names are called out Muslims say رضی اللہ عنہ or رضی اللہ عنہا (May Allah be pleased with him, or her). No malice was borne with their persons but their behaviour and their belief were detestable. When their behaviour improved and their belief was corrected there remained nothing in them to loath.

An Incident In the Life Of Khwajah Nizam ud-din Auliya رحمۃ اللہ علیہ

Khwajah Nizam ud-din Auliya رحمۃ اللہ علیہ enjoys a high station among the saints. In his times, lived an eminent scholar and jurist, Maulana Hakim Ziauddin رحمۃ اللہ علیہ. The one was a well-known Sufi while the other was a well-known scholar and jurist. Khwajah Nizam ud-din Auliya رحمۃ اللہ علیہ considered sama to be persmissible. Many Sufis observed it. Sama is to recite poetry of hamd or na't (praise of Alllah or His Messenger) without the accompaniment of a musical instrument in a melodious voice or in a nice sgtraightforward prose reading while the audience listen to it religiously with love. Some Sufis allow it but most of the juirists disallow it calling it bid'a (an innovative practice). So, Maulana Hakim Ziauddin رحمۃ اللہ علیہ was also one of those who disallowed it and, as we have seen, it was in the times of Khwajah Nizamuddin Auliya رحمۃ اللہ علیہ. The former issued a fatwa (a religous legal opinion) against it while the latter listened to it.

When Maualana Hakim Ziauddin رحمۃ اللہ علیہ. was on his death bed, Khwajah Nizamuddin Auliya رحمة الله عليه went to see him. He asked someone to inform the Maulana that he had come to see him. The Maulana sent the messenger back with instructions to stop him from coming to him, saying, "I don't wish to see a perpetrator of bid'a. while I am dying." Khwajah Nizamuddin Auliya رحمة الله عليه sent the message that the perpetrator of bid'a had come to repent from bid'a. Maulana Hakim Ziayuddin رحمة الله عليه immediately sent his turban with instructions that it should be laid down and Khwajah Nizamuddin Auliya رحمة الله عليه be asked to walk on it to him with his shoes on. "He should not remove his shoes". Khwaja Nizamuddin Auliya رحمة الله عليه picked up the turban and placed it on his head saying it was an honour awarded to him. He went inside with that grace, shook hands with the Maulana and sat down next to him. He turned in attention to Maulana Hakim Zia ud-ddin رحمة الله عليه who died soon after in his presence. The Khwaja commented, "Praise be to Allah! Allah has granted approval to Hakim Ziauddin رحمة الله عليه who died while progressing in ranks."

We have seen that he was not prepared to meet him but after a moment only, he sent his turban to walk on!

Anger Must Be Shown For The Sake Of Allah

Anger that is for the sake of Allah does not ever create personal enmity, hostility or mischief because the one who is shown anger or hostility knows that it is not against his person but against his behaviour. People do not mind it because they know what he says is for the sake of Allah. He is the one who qualifies for the saying:

مَنْ اَحَبَّ لِلّٰهِ وَاَبْغَضَ لِلّٰهِ

"He who loves, loves for Allah and who despises, despises for Allah."

That is the right time to show anger provided it is within limits set by shari'ah. May Allah bestow on us His favour whereby we love anyone for His sake and hate anyone for His sake.

Anger should be properly chained. One should be angry when it is for the cause of Allah but one should pull the chain when it is wrong to be angry.

An Incident Of Hazrat Ali رضى الله عنه

A Jew spoke derogatory words about the Holy Prophet ﷺ in the presence of Hazrat Ali رضى الله عنه who was not one to let him go unpunished for that. He got hold of him at that very instant, raised him high and dropped him to the ground and sat down on his chest. The Jew finding himself no match for Hazrat Ali رضى الله عنه spat on his face, but the latter let go of his hold on the Jew and came down from his chest. When someone asked him why he set the Jew free while he had continued to be disrespectful and should have been punished, he said, "The first time I attacked him was for the love of the Messenger of Allah ﷺ because he had been disrespectful to him. When he spat on me, I became more angry and if I had revenged myself that would not have been for the Prophet ﷺ but for my own self because he had spat on my face. If I had hit him any more that would not have been for the sake of Allah, so I allowed him to go." In fact, this was the Hadith:

مَنْ اَحَبَّ لِلّٰهِ وَاَبْغَضَ لِلّٰهِ

"He who loves, loves for Allah and he who hates, hates for Allah."

Put into practice. In other words, a chain is tied to anger so that one is angry only when it is allowed by shari'ah, otherwise the chain is held tight. One should refrain from being angry and show that he has nothing to do with anger. It is about these very people that it has been said كَانَ وَقَّافًا عِنْدَحُدُوْدِ اللهِ "They are the ones to stop within the limits of Allah."

An Incident In the Life Of Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ

One day, as he entered the Masjid Nabavi, Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ observed a conduit on the house of the Prophet's ﷺ uncle, Hazrat Abbas رضی اللہ عنہ directed over the Masjid Nabavi. Rain water etc. dropped into the mosque from it because its direction was over the mosque. He concluded that the mosque was the House of Allah and a conduit from any private house should not fall over it. So he ordered that the conduit be removed and that was done. He had ordered the removal because he was angry that the etiquettes of the mosque were flouted. Hazrat Abbas رضی اللہ عنہ learnt that the conduit was removed so he appreached Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ to know why it was done. He told Hazrat Abbas رضی اللہ عنہ that it was removed because it brought water into the mosque that was not anyone's personal property and it was in violation of the rules of shari'ah. Hazrat Abbas رضی اللہ عنہ informed that it was there from the times of the Prophet ﷺ whose permission was obtained before fixing it. "You should have known that and you had no authority to remove it". Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ asked him, "Did you have the permission of the Prophet ﷺ for that?" Hazrat Albbas رضی اللہ عنہ confirmed that he had the Prophet's ﷺ permission for that. Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ said to Hazrat Abbas رضی اللہ عنہ, "Come with me for God's sake!" So, they went where the conduit was and Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ bent down in the posture of Ruku' and asked Hazrat Abbas رضی اللہ عنہ to stand on his back and refix the conduit. Hazrat Abbas رضی اللہ عنہ said, "I will get someone else to fix it. "Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ said, "How can Umar dare remove the conduit allowed by Muhammad ﷺ. I have committed a great crime. The minimum punishment I should get for it is that I bend down and you stand over my back to fix the conduit." So, Hazrat Abbas رضی اللہ عنہ stood on his back and fixed the conduit back at its original place. That conduit still stands in the Masjid Nabavi, May Allah reward those people who have built the Masjid Nabavi, they have retained the conduit at its original place although it has no utility now. It only remains as a memory-refresher. It is an example of putting into practice the Hadith مَنْ اَحَبَّ لِلّٰهِ وَاَبْغَضَ لِلّٰهِ {He who loves, loves for Allah. and he who hates, hates for Allah}. The anger that Hazrat Umar رضی اللہ عنہ displayed the first time was for the sake of Allah. Then the love that he displayed was again for Allah. He who behaves in this manner, perfects his faith because this is a sign of a perfect faith.

Pretend To Be Angry & Scold

As we have seen, sometimes it becomes necessary to show anger for the sake of Allah. This is more true when dealing with those who are under one's care as a teacher with his students, a father with his children, a Shaikh with his disciples. However, one must not fly into a rage going beyond what is necessary to correct one's word. We have seen earlier that a man must not scold when he is excited and angry. If a teacher gets angry over his student and gets excited as a result then he must not scold the student or beat him as long as he is angry and worked up. When his anger has subsided and he has cooled down then he must create a pretended anger and scold him so that he does not go beyond the limits. 'This procedure is somewhat difficult because a man generally goes out of control when angry. So,unless he practices this behaviour, he will not get rid of the disadvantages and evils of anger.

Consequences Of Excess On Subordinates

If one exceeds the limits in showing anger to those in one's care, like children, students and disciples, then sometimes the consequences are very detrimental. If it were an elder or equal whom one scolds and rebukes beyond limits, he would not hesitate to show his displeasure and may even seek vengeance. He may tell him that he did not approve of his behaviour. But, junior person will not say so. He will not even seek vengeance because he is not able to do that. A son will not tell his father, a student his teacher or a disciple his mentor that he had been too rude to him. The result is no one will know how much he was hurt by the excess they had committed. When it is not known, how can anyone ask to be pardoned. 'This is a very delicate matter. Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه has said particularly about teachers who teach young children that their case is verty sensitive because they are minor. It is with the minors that even if they forgive, the pardon is not valid. When a minor forgives it is not authentic because he is not authorised.

Summary

The summary of what has been written so far is that we must try to suppress our anger. If we do not do that we must realise that anger is the root cause of many ills and gives rise to innumerable evils. When trying to suppress anger, we must begin by curbing the tendency whenever we feel the urge. Once we have it under control then we may use it discreetly and express anger only when it is permitted by shari'ah but then again within prescribed limits.

The Wrong Use Of Anger

We have seen the Hadith tell us بُغض فی الله "Express anger for the sake of Allah. Some people use it in a very wrong manner. Although they declare that they show anger for the sake of Allah, their anger is for their personal ends, to serve their pride or to lower the other man in the sight of people. For instance, if anyone is favoured by Allah. and he becomes religious and takes part in some religious exercises he considers every other person below him. He goes so far as to belittle his father, his mother, his brother, his sister, every member of his family. He looks down upon them and regards them as destined to Hell while he is worthy of Paradise. He takes it upon himself the responsibility of reforming the other people so he rebukes them and scolds them and refers to them in derogatory terms. He debases the other people and begins to usurp their rights. Then the devil teaches him that whatever he does is in terms of hatred for the sake of Allah while actually he may be doing that for his personal ends.

These people are raw on the path of Allah. The devil tempts them that they should deal with the other people in terms of the Hadith بغض فی الله (Hatred for Allah) and gets them to despise the other Muslims. As a consequence, they quarrel with them and never see eye to eye with one another. They get angry on flimsy grounds and they rebuke other people every now and then. The result is outright mischief

An expression of Allamah Shabbir Ahmad Usmani رحمة الله عليه

One expression of Allamah Shabbir Ahmad Usmani رحمة الله عليه is worth remembering for ever. He used to say, "If a true word is said with a sincere intention in a faithful manner then it is never ineffectivce. It never gives rise to mischief and corruption." There are three conditions that he has stated. They are (i) the word is true, (ii) the intention is sincere and (iii) it is delivered in a faithful manner. For example, if someone does something evil then the reformer must pity him and try to advise him in a polite and mild manner so that he gives up the evil practice. This should be his intention and he must not seek personal fame and should not aim to debase the other man and his method should be faithful, that is he be soft-spoken and loving. If these three conditions are met then normally there is no mischief done. If you find that mischief has erupted after saying the true words then you must realise that one of the three conditions was not met either the words were untrue, or the intention was faulty or the method employed was incorrect.

You are Not Supervisors on Behalf of Allah

We must remember that we were not sent to the world as policemen of Allah. The work entrusted to us is only to convey to other people truth with a sincere intention in a faithful manner. We must go on doing this in a reasonable way. While we must not tire of doing it, we should not do any thing that gives rise to mischief and corruption.

May Allah have mercy on us and favour us and cause us to observe what we have read. Aameen!

And our concluding remark is that praise belongs to Allah Lord of the worlds.

عن ابى هريرة رضى الله عنه قال قال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم

اَلْمُؤْمِنُ مِرْاٰةُ الْمُؤْمِنِ (ابو داؤد، كتاب الادب، باب فى النصيحة)

Praise belongs to Allah. We praise Him, ask Him for help and seek His forgiveness. And, we believe in Him and place our trust in Him. We seek His protection from the mischief of our souls and our evil deeds. He whom Allah guides, none can mislead and he whom He leaves to stray none can guide. And we bear witness that there is none worthy of worship besides Allah, who is Alone and has no partner, and we bear witness that Sayyidina Muhammad is His Slave and Messenger, may Allah bless him and his family and companions, and may He bestow favour and peace, a complete peace and plenty of it.

Hazrat Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہ has said that the Messenger of Allah ﷺ said, "The Believer is the Believer's mirror."(Abu Dawood, Kitabul-Adab)

A Believer Is A Mirror For Another Believer

The Hadith reproduced above is very brief and it contains only three words (in Arabic). In spite of that it contains a world of knowledge for us. The apparent meaning of this Hadith is that a Believer is as a mirror which reflects the image of the man facing it. The man sees his countenance in the mirror which faithfully reflects its beauty and ugliness. Without the mirror a man cannot see his drawbacks, the ugly spots on his face. The mirror tells him that he must pay attention to his countenance and it needs cleaning. In the same way, a Believer is a mirror for another Believer. He tells him if he sees any shortcoming in him he removes it and reforms himself. Once the Second Believer learns from the first of any wrong in himself he sets himself to remove that wrong and corrects himself. This is what is meant by the Hadith: "A Believer is the mirror of another."

One Who Points Out Wrongs Is Truly A Well-Wisher

This Hadith is lesson-giving to both the Believers-the one who points out a drawback and the one to whom his shortcoming is pointed out.

The man to whom his mistake is pointed out should not feel offended by the one who points it out because the Holy Prophet ﷺ has compared a Believer with a mirror-a Believer is a mirror for another. If anyone stands before a mirror and it reflects the dirty spots on his face that he should clean then that man is not offended with the mirror for pointing out his deficiencies. Rather, he is pleased that the mirror afforded him an opportunity to remove the spots. In the same way, a Believer is a mirror for another Believer and if he tells the other that he has certain defects in him-whether in his observance of Salat or mutual dealings-then he shoud not get angry on him. Rather, he should be pleased that he has pointed out to him the dark spots and he must assure him that he would rectify his defects as far as possible.

Why Is Objection Raised On The Ulama Who Point Out A Mistake?

People often express anger at the Ulama because "they call every other person an unbeliever or a sinner. They issue an edict that so-and-so is an unbeliever, a sinner or a bidati (an innovator in religious matters). They spend their lives turning other people into disbelief." Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanavi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ has given a reasonable reply to these people. He has said, "The Ulama do not make other people unbelievers but say that they are practicing disbelief." If anyone does an act of disbelief then actually he is the one to perpetrate it. It is then that the Ulama point out that his behaviour smacks of disbelief in the same way as a mirror points out the dark spots on the face. The mirror does not put the spot on the face nor stains it. The Ulama merely tell us that a behaviour borders on disbelief, sin or bida'h so they cannot be blamed for the behaviour of a person just as a mirror cannot be blamed for the spots or stains on a face. The Ulama do not make anyone an unbeliever or a sinner. So we must not express anger at them for our defects. On the contrary, we must be grateful to them that by telling us of the wrong they enabled us to correct ourselves.

A Doctor Diagnoses, Does Not Give The Disease

We may take the case of a man who does not know the nature of the disease he is suffering from. He goes to a doctor for a treatment but is told that he is afflicted with a serious illness. Naturally, the doctor will not be blamed for causing the illness. The illness was there already but the patient was unaware of it and the doctor cautioned him by pointing it out so that he may now begin the treatment.

An Incident Worth Learning From

My respected father Maulana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه narrated to us an incident concerning his father's-my grandfather's-illness. He lived in Deoband. There was a Hakim (a doctor of eastern medicine) in Delhi and he was blind and a very expert Hakim. He treated my grandfather. My father said, "I travelled to Delhi to relate the symptoms to the Hakim and get his medicine for my father. I went to his clinic and told him about my father and requested for the medicine. The Hakim was blind but when he heard me, he told me that he would give the medicine for my father later but first I must treat myself. I protested that I was not ill and was healthy but he insisted that I take my medicine. He gave it to me and prescribed the doses for different times of the day. He told me to report how I was, when I returned after a week for my father's medicine. So, I got medicine for myself and my father and when I arrived home I told my father about it and how he had given me medicine for myself too. My father advised me to follow the directives of the Hakim and to take the medicine as prescribed. When I went to the Hakim again after a week I told him that I had not been able to understand why he gave me medicine and I could not find any illness in myself. The Hakim told me that he had heard me last week and feared that my lungs were infected and I might get tuberculosis so he gave me the medicne. He told me that by the Grace of Allah I was cured of the infection." The patient does not know his illness but the Hakim or doctor diagonises it for which the patient should be thankful to him. Thus, we will not say that the doctor brought about the illness; rather, he warned the patient on time so that he may treat himself but not take out his rage on the doctor.

We Must not show Anger to the Doctor.

However, there are different ways of pointing out the shortcommings. Someone gives a timely warning in a gentle and polite manner but someone else is careless in telling us about our faults. However, even if anyone is rough in giving us the warning, we must be grateful to him for pointing out our illness. There is an Arabic poetry meaning: "My greatest well-wisher is he who presents to me a gift of my defects, who tells me about them. As for him who praises me highly, exaggerating imagined qualities, he leads me to pride and arrogance. He seems to be great but he really hurts me. As for him who points out my defects, I must thank him. "The Hadith, nevertheless, teaches us that we must not be angry at anyone who points out our defects but we must take it as an opportunity to correct ourselves.

The Person who Points out Mistakes Must not Curse

The second lesson the Hadith teaches us is that the person who points out to the other his mistakes or defects must not curse him. Again, he is compared to the mirror. The mirror reflects an image faithfully without adding or diminishing anything and without passing any comments. It does not curse the one whose image it reflects but it merely shows what it sees including any spot or stain. In the same way, the believing man must merely point out the stains and spots in characters, the defects and the shortcomings in behaviour without passing comments adverse or favourable. He does exaggerate but is faithful in reflecting what he sees. It is not a believer's task to curse or criticise or publish anyone's faults or to debase him. He is just a mirror and must say exactly what he finds and not blame or censure.

Pity Him who Errs

When a Believer tells another of his faults, he truly has pity on him for being involved in the mistake. It is just like the pity we show when one is ill. We do not show our anger. No one will scold him for being ill but everyone will pity him and advise him to get a treatment. Similarly, if a believer commits a mistake or a sin then he is entitled to be shown pity and not anger. He must be told politely and softly with a display of love that he suffers from a defect so that he may treat himself. No one should be angry at him and no one should curse him or blame him.

Do not Degrade Anyone who Commits A Mistake

We are not aware these days of our duty to caution a believer when he does something wrong. If a Muslim offers Salat in a wrong manner, it is our duty to show him the correct method because that is part of commanding the approved and forbidding the disapproved. It is obligatory on every Muslim. Today, no one cares to correct anyone. On the contrary, if they see anyone do a wrong they say to themselves that they must let him commit the mistake. However, there are some who are prompted to point out the error but then they behave like policemen of Allah so they reprimand and ridicule the wrong doer and they debase him on the face of other people. This is not in accordance with the Prophet's ﷺ advice "you are a mirror" do not curse or scold or debase anyone. Tell him in such a way that he is not hurt and understands you.

A Incident in the Lives of Imam Hasan and Imam Husain رضی اللہ عنہما

It is said that once both Hazrat Hasan رضی اللہ عنہ and Hazrat Husain رضی اللہ عنہما were walking along the banks of Euphrates when they saw an old man performing ablution at the shores of the river. He was not doing it correctly. They realised that it was their duty to correct him but he was older than them. How should they tell him? They did not wish to hurt him or he might feel offended. They thought of it and together went and sat near the man. They kept talking to each other and with him. They said, "you are older than us. When we perform ablution we are always in doubt whether we observed the Sunnah procedure or not. Therefore, we will perform ablution before you and you tell us if we err or omit a Sunnah." They both performed the ablution and afterwards asked him if they had correctly performed the ablution. The old man had realised, meanwhile, that he had committed mistakes himself in performing the ablution and that the boys were right. He said, "The truth is that I had actually performed ablution in a wrong manner and have realised my mistake by seeing you do it. Insha Allah, I will now perform in a correct way. This is the approach the Qur'an wants us to adopt when it says:

اُدْعُ اِلٰى سَبِيْلِ رَبِّكَ بِالْحِكْمَةِ (سورة النحل ١٢٥)

(O Prophet) Call to the way of your Lord with wisdom and goodly exhortation.(An Nahl 16:125)

You are not appointed by Allah to act as strongman to force people with stern language and insulting words to correct them. You are a mirror. Just as a mirror gives only a faithful reflection and does not rebuke or scold so you too have to behave in like manner. This is a lesson we derive from the Hadith:

المؤمن مراة المؤمن

"The Believer is the Believer's mirror".

The Shortcoming of One Should Not Be told to Another

Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanvi رحمة الله عليه has commented on this Hadith in this manner. It is the characteristic of a mirror that it casts the reflection of the man who stands before it and the reflection goes to him alone. The mirror will not cast anyone's reflection to someone else. If he carries a stain or spot only he will see it and no one else. The mirror will not tell anyone else that such-and-such has these stains on his face. It will not publicise the defects. A believer is also a mirror. If he sees a defect in someone then he must tell him in private and quietly that he has that defect. It is not a believer's characteristic that he tells other people of some one's defects. Such a behaviour is selfishness. If he is sincere in his intention that he reveals to a man his defects for the sake of Allah then he will not let anyone else know of it. If on the contrary, he is selfish and hopes to please himself, he will try to debase the man because of his defects. We must know that it is unlawful to insult and belittle a Muslim.

Our Ways of Life

If we look round at our society, we will find only a very few people who show goodwill in pointing out to a Muslim his shortcomings. Very few people today tell a Muslim that his behaviour is not upto the mark or against Shari'ah. Yet, we will find many who relate a Muslim's defects to other people with the result that they are guilty of backbiting, slander and falsehood. They also commit the sin of defaming a Muslim. The best method for such people is to tell the wrong-doer in private that he has that defect which he must correct. The Hadith under reference also teaches us that when we find a drawback in a Muslim we must not publicise it but tell only that man about it and none else.

Do not feel Disheartened After Pointing out A Mistake

The Hadith tells us that a mirror will tell the person facing it what defects it sees in him. If that man comes before it a second time, it will again tell him what is wrong with him. If he comes a third time, it will again point out to him his defects. But it will not pester him to remove his shortcomings. If that man does not remove his shortcomings, the mirror will not show displeasure or separate from him. It will not insist the man to remove his defects and it will not tell him that because he does not correct himself it will not cast his reflection if he comes before it. Rather, the mirror will faithfully reflect his image as many times as the man appears before it. It will not cease giving the reflection and it will not express displeasure or take upon itself the role of a policeman and impose upon him its will.

The Method of the Prophets عليهم السلام

It was the approach of the Holy Prophets عليهم السلام that they never gave up and never separated from their people and never conceded defeat. Rather, whenever they got a chance they conveyed their message but never imposed themselves upon their people. The Qur'an says:

لَسْتَ عَلَيْهِمْ بِمُصَيْطِرٍ (سورة الغاشية: ٢٢)

You are not a warder over them. (al-Ghashia 88:22)

The Qur'an says "while you will not impose your will over them you are there only to convey the message". Tell him who errs, and caution him. After that, it is his duty to reform and correct himself. If he does not reform, you may tell him again but do not lose heart and become aloof. Tell him a third time but do not give up hope. The Prophet ﷺ was very much compassionate on his people so he lost heart when the unbelievers and idolaters rejected him. The following verse of the Qur'an consoled him.

لَعَلَّكَ بَاخِعٌ نَّفْسَكَ أَلَّا يَكُونُوا مُؤْمِنِينَ (الشعراء:٣)

It may be that you (O Prophet) will kill yourself with grief, because they believe not (ash-Shuara, 26:3)

It is not your duty, the Qur'an tells the Prophet ﷺ to make them believe. Your task is merely to convey the message. It is not your responsibility that they believe.

Why Did You Do That?

My respected father Maulana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه used to say that those who are engaged in propagation of Islam and in enjoining the right and forbidding the wrong must persevere in their efforts and never give up. They must not lose heart if people do not pay heed. They should not be angry at them and give up their effort because of the failure of the people to pay heed to them. They must ask themselves for whom they do the work. Is it not to please Allah? They must resolve to do it again and again for Allah. They may hope for reward each time they try. So, their effort is not in vain even if the people do not listen to them. It is not their direct concern whether people pay heed or not. It is Allah Who guides and Who keeps away guidance from anyone.

The Best Way To Reform Society

The truth is that Allah gives guidance to the defaulter when a Believer points out to him his fault sincerely and repeatedly and at the same time makes a supplication to Allah to help him. He supplicates Allah in these words: "O Allah, my brother is involved in sin. Do guide him. Show him the right path." If we persist in doing this work then it is something whose blessings will surround the atomophere around us and reform the society. My respected father used to say that it is an automatic self-working system that if a Believer keeps correcting another Believer observing these conditions and following these etiquettes then Allah will reform the society thereby.

Summary

This is a summary of our discussion on this Hadith a Believer is another Believer's mirror.

It is a Believer's task to remind again and again.

He should not lose heart and concede defeat if his reminders fail to draw a response.

If a Believer is sincere and keeps drawing attention to the wrong repeatedly then some day his efforts will surely bear fruit.

A Believer must play the part of a mirror. If another Believer acts as a mirror and points out to anyone his wrongs then he must not grieve or get angry at him for pointing out his mistakes.

May Allah grant us the urge to behave accordingly. Aameen.

And the concluding part of our remarks is that praise belongs to Allah, Lord of the worlds.

امابعد!

فاعوذ بالله من الشيطٰن الرجيم بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم

لَقَدْ مَنَّ اللّٰهُ عَلَى الْمُؤْمِنِيْنَ اِذْبَعَثَ فِيْهِمْ رَسُوْلاً مِّنْ اَنْفُسِهِمْ يَتْلُوْا عَلَيْهِمْ
اٰيٰتِهٖ وَيُزَكِّيْهِمْ وَيُعَلِّمُهُمُ الْكِتٰبَ وَالْحِكْمَةَ (سورة آل عمران: ١٦٤)

Praise belongs to Allah, Lord of the worlds. And blessings and peace be on His Noble Messenger and his family and Companions, all of them.
I seek refuge in Allah from the cursed devil. In the Name of Allah, the Compassionate, The Merciful.
Certainly Allah has conferred a favour on the Believers when He sent among them a Messenger from themselves, who recites to them His revelations, and purifies them, and teaches them the Book and Wisdom... (Aal Imran, 3:164)

Two Approaches.

Allah launched a two-pronged approach for the guidance of humanity. One of them is through a sequence of His Books. The Books of Allah are His heavenly Books and include the Torah, the Zabur (Psalms), the Injeel (Bible) and, finally, the Qur'an:

وَاَنْزَلْنَـآ اِلَيْكَ الذِّكْرَ لِتُبَيِّنَ لِلنَّاسِ مَا نُزِّلَ اِلَيْهِمْ وَلَعَلَّهُمْ يَتَفَكَّرُوْنَ (النحل: ٤٤)

And we have (now) revealed to you (O Prophet) the Admonition that you may make clear to mankind what has been revealed unto them, and that they may reflect. (an-Nahl, 16:44)

The second approach is through men of Allah. They are the Prophets عليهم السلام. These men of Allah were sent together with the Books of Allah so that they could explain the Books, give a practical training of its doctrines and expound its meaning by their sayings and behaviour.

Allah had said in the Holy Qur'an:

لَقَدْ مَنَّ اللهُ عَلَى الْمُؤْمِنِيْنَ اِذْبَعَثَ فِيْهِمْ رَسُوْلاً مِّنْ اَنْفُسِهِمْ يَتْلُوْا عَلَيْهِمْ اٰيٰتِـهٖ وَيُزَكِّيْهِمْ وَيُعَلِّمُهُمُ الْكِتٰبَ وَالْحِكْمَةَ (سورة آل عمران: ١٦٤)

Men of Allah are sent that they may expound the Book, explain it and train the people. The verse of the Qur'an quoted in the begining is about this topic itself:

The basic purpose of sending a Prophet to a people is to teach the Book of Allah because they are not capable by themselves of deriving gainful knowledge from the Book without the guidance and explanation of a teacher.

A perusal by itself without a teacher is not enough. And this does not apply to the Books of Allah alone. It is the same with every science and art taught in the world. If anyone hopes to gain profitable knowledge and excellence in any subject by simply reading and studying the books on the subject he cannot do so unless he submits himself to the guidance of a teacher. He cannot become an expert in any field unless he learns from a teacher.

Will Populate The Graveyard

There are several books available on medical science. They may be had in different languages - Urdu, Arabic, Persian, English, etc. But, if anyone hopes to study them in the comfort of his home and attain proficiency in medicine, he is wrong. Suppose he is very intelligent and capable and he has tremendous grasping power, so he sits down to study from the books. He is also able to understand what the books say. What can he do after that? Will he treat people? He will send them to the graveyard if he does so. Even if he knows what is in the books and understands what they convey, he cannot be a doctor unless he has a teacher to train him. No government, anywhere in the world, will permit him to work as a doctor because he has not pursued the method necessary to adopt a medical profession. Allah has made man in such a way that unless a teacher teaches him and trains him he will not gain mastery over any science or art.

Difference Between Man & Animal

Allah has created man and animal with different charecteristics. The animals do not need a teacher or trainer as much as a man does. The young of a fish for instance, begin to swim immediately on birth. As the eggs hatch, no one teaches the young how to swim and they do not need a teacher for that. They are created with inborn instincts that tell them how.

If a man takes the example of a fish and throws his new-born baby into the water hoping that it would swim by instinct like the young of the fish, then this man is mad. There is a vast difference between a man's child and the young of a fish. Allah has fashioned the latter in a way that it does not need a teacher while the former - the man's young - needs a tutor to teach him to swim.

Take the new-born chick, the moment it hatches out of the eggs, it nibbles at food without being taught but a human baby will not eat unless taught. It needs a teacher.

Allah has fashioned man so that he needs to be taught. He cannot do anything in the world without a teacher and so cannot learn a science or technique or craft.

Make A Cupboard From A Book

Look at a carpenter! If there is a book that instructs how to build a table or chair, it also says what tools are required. Can anyone read the book and follow its directions to carve out a cupboard? He will never do it. But, if a man does not read any book but keeps in the company of a carpenter for a few months watching him all the while how he uses his tools then he will soon build a cupboard by himself.

One Cannot Cook Food By Reading Books

There are several cook books available. They tell us how different items of food may be cooked. They tell us what ingredients to use and in what proportion. The books have everything in them. If a man who has never cooked anything sets about to cook some kind of food, he will never do it unless he is taught by an expert cook.

Man Goes By Practical Example

So, it is the nature of man that he cannot acquire knowledge merely from books unless he has a teacher and mentor to train him. He needs to live in the company of the teacher and mentor. It applies to every science, art and craft. The same pattern and procedure governs religious studies. If anyone attempts to acquire religious knowledge merely through books then he will never succeed. He needs to have a solid base in the company of a teacher and mentor and to have studied his life to be able to understand religious philosophy.

Just The Book Alone Was Not revealed

This is the secret behind a Book of Allah never being revealed without a Prophet to explain it. There are cases of Prophets عليهم السلام who had no Book revealed to them by Allah but there is not a single case of a Book of Allah descending on mankind without a Prophet carrying it. Why is it so?

This is because a Book by itself would not have been understood by man who does not possess enough capability to reform himself by that. Of course, it was not difficult for Allah to send the Book by itself. The idolators also made similar demands:

لَوْلَا نُزِّلَ عَلَيْهِ الْقُرْآنُ جُمْلَةً وَاحِدَةً ۚ (الفرقان: ٣٢)

Why has not the Qur'an been sent down on him all at once? (al-Furqan. 25:32)

Was it difficult for Allah to have the Book before every man when he woke up in the morning? A beautiful, well-bound Qur'an could have been placed at the head of every bed. A voice from the heavens would have decalred, "This is the Book. Obey what it says." It was not difficult for Allah to do so. But, He did not do it. He did not send a Book by itself. He sent the teacher along too, to impart training Why was that?

Two Lights Help In Reading The Book

This is because a Book cannot be understood unless accompanied by the light of a Messenger's teachings. The Book is very eloquent and perfect but I sit in darkness, I have no light with me. Can I then benefit from it? No! Not until I have two lights. First, I have to have with me the light of the eyes and secondly, I must have the light of the sun or an artificial electric light. If even one of these lights is missing then I cannot derive benefit from the Book. There may be sunlight but my eyes may lack radiance, then how will I read the Book?

Or, if my eyes have the light but there is no outward light of the sun or the bulb, then too I will not be able to take advantage of the Book. To read the Book I must have both lights - a light within me and a light outside me. It is an inward light and an outward light. When both the lights are available only then can one benefit from the Book. Therefore, Allah let us have two opportunities-the Book of Allah and the Men of Allah.

The Slogan The Book of Allah Suffices us

This is where man wavers and goes into the labyrinth of error. so, a sect arose and said about itself:

حَسْبُنَا كِتَابُ اللهِ

It is a very appealing slogan: The Book of Allah suffices us. On the face of it this is a very good thing to say. The Book of Allah Tells Us of Everything. تِبْيَانًا لِكُلِّ شَيْءٍ

But, let someone ask him who raises this slogan that if he has a book of medicine at home and the book says all one wishes to know about medicine but the light of the teacher is not there is not then the book of no use? Then why pick up the Book of Allah and say "We are not in need of a Messenger's training?" This is nothing but blindness and decption.

So, there is a group of men who embraced the Book of Allah but kept away from the men of Allah, the Prophets علیهم السلام. They went down the labyrinth of error. Actually, if the men of Allah are overlooked, it is like overlooking the Book of Allah because the Book itself says, "Look at Our Men whom We have sent as your teachers. We have sent them as our Prophets." Now, if anyone says that he holds the Book and does not need the men then he actually casts aside the Book. The books of medicine say: "administer medicine as directed by the physician." Then, what will happen if anyone forgets this directive but takes medicine according to his own whims claiming to have knowledge of the books? He will hasten his death. Exactly the same thing is done by those who raise the slogan. حسبنا کتاب اللہ The Book of Allah sufficies us. They incite people against the men of Allah.

The Men Alone Too Are not Enough

There is another group of men who sought the men of Allah to such an extent that they neglected the Book of Allah. They say that they are satisfied with the Men of Allah alone and they do not know what the Book of Allah is. Thus, they picked up the Men who they thought were enough for their thinking and they came to adore them. They paid no heed to what the Book said but decided to go along with the Men. They are also on a wrong path.

The Middle Course

The reasonable course is to hold the Book of Allah and the Men of Allah in conjunction with each other. The Book of Allah must be read in the light of the teachings of the Men of Allah. It is then that we will receive guidance. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said about holding both these things:

مَا اَنَا عَلَيْهِ وَاَصْحَابِىْ

"What I am on (that is the Book) and my Companions."

That is, the Book and the Men, The Book of Allah is what the Prophet ﷺ was on, and the Companions are the Men of Allah, and we are asked to hold to both of them. Anyone, who follows both these at the same time, will be on guidance. If we understand this then there will be an end to error and possibility of going astray whether technically, ideologically or practically. Many people have studied books and upgraded themselves as religious guides and leaders. They have studied books So they bracket themselves with Imam Abu Hanifah رحمة الله عليه and call out:

هُمْ رِجَالٌ وَنَحْنُ رِجَالٌ

"They are Men of Allah so are we men (of Allah)." (We will do what they have done.)

They raise themselves at par with the real Men of Allah. Just as they observed Ijtihad to answer a problem through Qur'an and Hadith, these men also appropriate the authority to themselves to observe Ijtihad. These men are misled. It is just like a raw medical student comparing himself to a surgeon and appropriating to himself the right to operate patients, saying هم رجال They are Men so I am also a Man!" Those people who raise this slogan هم رجال (They are Men so are we) after reading books on religion without going through a teaher's eyes, are people of the third type on error.

Let us suppose a man has studied medical books and learns from them the different medicines for different illnesses. He opens up a clinic and preseribes medicine to his patients. Let us also suppose that his initial patients recover and he becomes famous. People throng his clinic without knowing that even one patient could be administered wrong medicine and die. So, it is foolish to visit an uneducated quack just because his prescriptions seem to bring relief. There is always the possibility of someone suffering adversely.

In the same vein we often hear people say, "many people became religious after reading a certain book although they were irreligious before that. They never offered Salat or remembered Allah before but have come to do that after reading the book. The author is a great man. The Ulama tell us unnecessairly that we must not follow him and not read his books. But, we have met him and read his books. We have benefitted much." It is the same with this author as with the quack. If he could cure a few people it does not qualify him as a doctor. He can err any time and cause a terrible loss. In the same way this man who appropriates to himself the task of a religious teacher or mentor just by studying books should not be allowed to cheat Muslims.At any time he will present a theory that will mislead the layman.

How did the Companions رضى الله عنهم learn the Religion

Allah has said about this religion that it will go down from one to another, generation to generation. It does not progress by just reading the books with the eye. It is transferred to the student's heart from the teacher's heart. Did the Companions رضى الله عنهم read any book? Did they obtain a degree? Did they get a certificate? They did nothing of the sort but studied at Sufah, for instance, where they had no syllabus and no fixed periods of classes.

What did they do at Sufah? They studied the behaviour of the Holy Prophetﷺ. They examined his deeds and actions, and what he said. They obtained the light of the teachings of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. The same method was adopbed by successors of the Companions and the epigones after them, and so it goes on to this day.

We read in the Hadith books:

قَالَ حَدَّثَنَا فُلاَنٌ قَالَ حَدَّثَنَا فُلاَنٌ

He said that:

So-and-so narrated that so-and-so narrated to him....is the line of transmission of a Hadith, a pure chain that connects us directly to the Holy Prophetﷺ.

Grants Through A Means

There are two ways of studying a book. You read it yourself with the aid of a dictionary from which you get meanings of difficult words. Or, you read it under the eyes of a teacher. There is an ocean of a difference between the two methods. It may be that the reader understood the same thing what the teacher explained but when a teacher says something it is like a light and that light brings blessings and radiance of the knowledge from Allah. This is never received from direct reading of the book. The teacher is nothing and has no reality and it is only Allah Who grants - but, He gives through a means (not directly). The question arises : Can Allah not grant directly? Could He not reveal to the Prophet ﷺ without a means? But, He did not do it and He made Jibril (gabrial) عليه السلام the means. Even when He spoke to Hazrat Musa عليه السلام, He did it through the means of a tree, the Tur. What is the wisdom behind it? Only Allah knows that, but it is His practice that He gives through a means. The means could be a living person or a lifeless thing, like the tree. He wished to display His Self then he did it via the Mount Tur although it has no standing otherwise. In the same way a teacher has no standing if he is not made a means. This is the practice of Allah. He showed us how He gives and if anyone wants to take it, he may take it in the manner He gives. If we look at a window that lets in sunlight, will we say that the window creates the light? The light comes from another source and the window is only the means of letting it in. In the same way, a teacher is a means and his person has no say in giving the light of knowledge yet he is helpful to us in conveying this light. This is why a teacher is respected and honoured. Allah has made him a means for us.

The gist of what has been said is that although the Book of Allah ranks first and Hadith follows it as second yet from the point of view ot observance the sequence is to pass forward through Hadith to arrive at the Book of Allah. Without Hadith, we canot comprehend the Book of Allah. Therefore, knowledge of Hadith is the root of every other Science and learning.

May Allah inspire us to learn and teach sincerely and make us observe all etiquettes in our study. Aameen!

The Four Signs of Perfect Faith

الحمد لله نحمده و نستعينه ونستغفره و نؤمن به و نتوكل عليه ونعوذ بالله من شرور انفسناومن سيأت اعمالنا من يهده الله فلا مضل له ومن يضلله فلا هادى له و نشهد ان لا اله الا الله وحده لاشريك له ونشهدان سيد نا و سندنا و نبينا ومولانا محمدا عبده ورسوله صلى الله تعالى عليه وعلى اله واصحابه وبارك وسلم تسليما كثيرا كثيرا

اما بعد !

من اعطى لله ومنع لله واحب لله وابغض لله فقد اسكتمل ايمانه (ترمذى ابواب صفة القيامة، باب نمبر ٦١)

Praise belongs to Allah. We praise Him, ask Him for help and seek His forgiveness. We believe in Him and place our trust in Him. We seek refuge in Allah from the mischief of our souls and from our evil deeds. He whom Allah guides, none can mislead; and he whom Allah leaves astray, none can guide. And we bear witness that there is no one worthy of worship except Allah, who is Alone and Who has no partner. We bear witness, too, that Sayyidina Muhammad is His slave and His Messenger, may His blessisngs be on him and on his family and companions, and may He favour him and give peace, a complete peace.

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said, "If anyone gives something to someone else for the sake of Allah, forbids something to someone for Allah, loves someone for the sake of Allah and hates someone for the sake of Allah, then he will have perfected his faith." (Tirmizi, Sifat ul Qiyamah, Chapter 61)

The First Sign

The first sign of a perfect faith is that the Believer gives someone something for the sake of Allah. Thus, if he spends some money, he has the pleasure of Allah in mind. Whether he spends on himself, his family or in charity, he forms an intention at the time of spending that he wishes to please Allah. This condition is more emphatic when he gives in charity that he has the pleasure of Allah in mind and harbours no ostentatious designs but hopes for a reward from Allah alone.

Form the same intention when buying or selling

A man who spends money on any head other than charity must also form a similar intention and aim at the pleasure of Allah. For example, when he buys something and pays for it to the seller, it is, on the face of it, a mere worldly transaction. But, when he buys it he has in mind the responsibilities placed on him by Allah towards his family members and hopes to discharge these responsibilities thereby. At the same time, he must form the intention to undertake this transaction in accordance with the lawful method prescribed by Allah and he should shun the forbidden transaction. In that case, the two intentions will make the transaction an effort to seek the pleasure of Allah although it may look like a worldly dealing.

It depends on the angle of seeing

Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayyi رحمة الله عليه would say often that the only difference in mundane and spiritual matter is the angle of sight. What is worldly from one angle becomes religious when seen from another angle. The method to do it is to carry on whatever one does in this life but look at it from a different perspective - whether he sleeps, arises, eats or drinks. For instance, to eat is apparently a worldly matter, but he is religious if he thinks that he eats to comply with the Holy Prophet's ﷺ directive:

ان لنفسك عليك حق (صحيح بخارى جلد ١ صفه ٢٦٤، ٢٥٦)

Surely, your body has a right over you (Sahih Bukhari, Book 19, Chapter 20, Hadith# 1153)

Let him think that when food was presented to the Messenger of Allah ﷺ, he took it as a blessing of Allah and thanked Him for that while he ate it. Now, if this man intends to follow the Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ in eating, the seemingly worldly exercise will become a religious effort. In this way, there is nothing of the actions of the world that cannot be seen from a religious angle. One can see whatever he does from morning till evening from a different angle and turn it into a religious task.

Every piety is charity

People suppose generally that charity is to give money to the needy or to feed him. They suppose it not to go beyond that. However, according to the Holy Prophet ﷺ "every pious deed done with a pious intention is sadaqah". He went so far as to say that the morsel a man feeds his wife is also sadaqah. It is so because he does it to fulfil the responsibility imposed on him by Allah and hopes to earn a reward from Allah for what he gives is given for the sake of Allah.

The second sign

The second sign that tells us that a Believer has perfect faith is that he withholds or forbids for the sake of Allah. For instance, if he does not spend on something, he restrains himself for the sake of Allah because Allah and His Messenger ﷺ have forbidden us to spend unnecessarily. Or, if he does not pay anyone to spend on an unlawful cause, he meets the demand of Shari'ah and gains the pleasure of Allah.

Giving a gift to meet custom

Many inexplicable customs are in vogue in our society and they call upon us to present gifts on different occasions. If anyone fails to comply with the custom, he is looked down upon although there is no precedence in the behaviour of the Holy Prophet ﷺ for that and Allah has not asked us to do so. For instance, niyota is paid on weddings. Whether a man be able to afford it or not, he has to pay it otherwise people will look at his behaviour with contempt; he will have to borrow or earn in an unlawful way. On the other hand, a man may be able to afford to pay for it but he withholds payment unmindful of the custom or censure simply because he wishes to please Allah then what he does is for the sake of Allah and his behaviour is a sign of perfect faith.

The third sign

The third sign that a Believer's faith is perfect is that he loves anyone for the sake of Allah. A person loves someone for no other reason but simply for the pleasure of Allah as, for instance, his attachment to a man of God. Obviously, he does not expect any worldly benefit from that man and loves him only for the sake of Allah and he hopes to progress in spiritual matters and to please Allah. This is a very blessed love and provides much benefit to the beliver who attaches himself to the pious man.

Attachment With A Pious Man To Obtain Worldly Benefits

Sometimes a man is tempted by the devil or his own base desires and seeks mundane advantages from the spiritual attachment to a pious mentor.

For instance, he hopes to raise himself in the eyes of other men by attaching himself to the pious man. He hopes to be counted as close to the love merely for Allah becomes a means of furthering his worldly gains.

Some people attach themselves to the pious man because men from different walks of life visit him and they include influential men, men of high office, and rich affluent men. They will thus gain contact with these people and be able to further their ends thereby. The love that was meant to be for the sake of Allah gave way to worldly interest. In contrast, anyone who maintains a contact with a pious man to gain religious and spiritual advancemet is said to be doing so for the sake of Allah and his love is regarded as love for Allah for which Allah has given assurance of great reward.

Turn every love for the sake of Allah

There is a form of love in the life of every man. There is love between mother and child, father and child, and husband and wife. There is fraternal love and love between relatives. If the angle of view is aligned properly, these forms of love can be described as love for the sake of Allah. For instance, if anyone heeds the directive of Allah and His Messenger ﷺ that one should love his parents then his love for his father and mother is regarded as love for the sake of Allah. We are told that if anyone casts even a glance towards his parents with love, he is rewarded as though he has performed a Hajj and an Umrah (pilgrimages to Makkah). On the face of it, the man fulfils his natural tendencies in loving his parents but with proper alignment of his intention, he is credited with doing that for the sake of Allah.

Let a husband love his wife for the sake of Allah

A man's love for his wife is part of his sexual instincts. However, he can gain credit for loving her for the sake of Allah if he forms an intention of obeying Him and His Messenger ﷺ and if he tells himself that he follows the sunnah of the Prophet ﷺ in doing so. Thus, if we have the case of a man who loves his wife because of his sexual instincts and another man who loves his wife for the sake of Allah, the two of them seem to be doing the same thing but actually, there is a wide difference in their respective behaviour. The Ahadith are replete with examples of the Prophet's ﷺ show of love to his wives. He missed no opportunity to please them. People like us are sometimes surprised at some of the examples of his behaviour with his wives. For instance, we read in a Hadith that the Holy Prophet ﷺ narrated to Sayyidah Ayshah رضى الله عنها the story of eleven women. These women sat together and decided that each should relate her husband's behaviour to the others. "The first woman said.... Then the second said..... and the third woman said.... and the fourth related....." The man who receives revelation from Allah and who is in constant contact with Allah - this man finds time to tell his wife the story of eleven women! Another Hadith tells us of an occasion when the Prophet ﷺ asked Sayyidah Ayshah رضى الله عنها if she would compete with him in a running and she consented. The two ran a race on an open ground where there was nobody else and no likelihood of the veil being violated.

Our behaviour is influenced by sexual instincts

On the face of it, this behaviour seems to have nothing to do with worship and it seems to be no different from a similar behaviour of any of us with his wife. But there is much difference between our behaviour and that of our Holy Prophet ﷺ. We follow our sexual insticts in showing love to our wives while the Prophet ﷺ came down from his high station to do it because Allah has directed that a husband pleases his wife.

Who is An 'Arif

An 'Arif is one who recognises Allah and the Shari'ah as well as the path and knows them well. According to the Sufis, an 'Arif is a collection of paradoxes. His pesonality and his deeds seem to be contradictory for he is in constant link with Allah and remembers Him all the time, he mixes along with his family and other people talking to them and laughing with them. This is why such a man is called a "collection of paradoxes."

Difference between the beginner and the graduate

Among the Sufis, one who is in the incipient stages is known as a Mubtadi, a Beginner, and one who has passed through all stages is a Muntaha, a Graduate we may say. The former has set his foot on the road to Tariqah, the Sufi Path in search of inner reality of religious and spiritual life. The obvious status of both of them is similar and their behaviours look alike, while one who is between them seems different.

For example, there is a man like us who is a Mubtadi, a novice, just beging to tread the religious path. He does everything that is worldly. He eats, drinks, converses with other people, buys and sells, spends his time with his wife and children. At the other extreme is the Holy Prophet ﷺ who buys and sells in the market, does manual labour and spends his time with his wives but he is a Muntaha, in the Final stage, the Teacher. The apparent condition of the Mubtadi and the Muntaha is alike but there is much difference between the two. There is a third man who is a little ahead of the tyro, the Mubtadi, and in-between the two stages. His behaviour is different. He does not go to the market and does not spend his time with his family but he is ever occupied in remembering Allah and in seeking His forgiveness. He has nothing else to do from morning to evening and he is on a third and middle stage.

The example of a Mubtadi and a Muntaha

Mawlana Ashraf Ali Thanavi رحمة الله عليه has explained the three categories through an example. There is a river and a man is standing at its bank while another has crossed over it and is at the other side of it while a third is crossing over it and is swimming in its midst using his hands and feet in the exercise. To one who sees them, the two men at either side of the river are alike; each is standing at the bank of the river although the one has yet to cross over the river and to endure the waves while the other has gone through the river and the tests involved in swimming before arriving at the other side. The third man is grappling with the waves and going through the tests in his attempt to arrive at the other side. To one who sees them the third person who is swiming through the river seems the bravest because he is fighting the waves but in fact, the second man who is at the other side of the river is the bravest because he has endured the test successfully. He is now on dry land and in the same state as the one who has not yet had a dip in the water. This is why the mubtadi and the muntaha seem alike but there is a wide difference between the two.

One needs to practice to achieve love for Allah

In order that a person convert his worldly loves for the sake of Allah, he must practice for sometime before he achieves that. When he approaches a religious mentor or a Sufi, that pious man will make him undergo ritual exercises that will enable him to change the angle of his existing love so that they become for the sake of Allah while the love remains as devoted as it was. Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayyi رحمة الله عليه used to say that it took him years together to change the angle of his love and form the intention for it to please Allah. Thus, for example, when he returned to his home and was hungry and food was brought before him, he restrained his hand a while although it would draw towards food instinctively. He first formed an intention in the light of the sunnah of the behaviour of the Prophet ﷺ who would express gratitude for the food and his own dependence on it before he began to eat it. In this way the Mawlana changed the angle of sight, remembering also that Allah has imposed on him a duty to his body.

Love children for Allah's sake

Likewise, when he entered his house, he saw his child playing and the sight pleased him and he felt like picking him up and kissing him. But, he stopped himself from doing so until he had formed an intention to emulate the Prophet ﷺ who showed love to children. Once, the Prophet ﷺ was delivering a sermon in the Masjid Nabawi when he saw Sayyidina Hasan or Sayyidina Husayn رضی اللہ عنہا comeing towards him; he got down from the minbar (pulpit) to receive him and placed him on his lap. Once, while he was offering his prayer, Sayyidah Umamah رضی اللہ عنہا, a young child then somehow climbed to his shoulders; when he was going into the Ruku' (bowing posture), he picked her up and placed her on the floor gently but when he was in the sajdah (the prostration posture), she again climbed onto his back! Anyway, to love children and to play with them is the sunnah (practice) of the Holy Prophet ﷺ we must contemplate ourselves observing this sunnah when we love our children. In the beginning it seems to be done with particular concentration but gradually one does it automatically. It comes naturally after some time so that every love becomes love for the sake of Allah whether it is shown to a child, wife or parents.

This is a very easy method and there cannot be an easier method that allows one to do whatever he does only with a change in the angle of perspective and intention. But this can only be done after one puts in some effort for it. All it needs is practice and a time will come when every love will be for the sake of Allah.

Token of love for Allah

What will tell one that his love is really for Allah? The sign is that when the cause of Allah demands he will be prepared to give up the love without the least bit of demur and he will not feel an unbearable pressure on himself.

An incident in the life of Hazrat Thanavi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ

Once Mawlana Thanavi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ told his audience that he had gone through an unusual test one day. His wife had spoken to him in a harsh tone and he told her that he was not used to that adding, "If you say, I will transfer my lodgings to my khanqah where I will live the rest of my life because I cannot endure the tone used by you." He told his audience that he had thrown the challenge but the next moment wondered if he could do that at all. He wondered what if she asked him to go ahead with his threat? Would he spend the rest of his days in the khanqah, or was it just an idle burst of words? When he thought of it, he realised that he was able to carry on his threat because his love was for Allah and if he had to give up love of someone against his love of Allah then he would do it. He would not undergo an intolerable situation because his love was for the sake of Allah. Khanqah is a recluse where disciples undergo training.

This stage can be achieved after strenuous effort which is not impossible for a person to do. The result of the effort is that Allah grants a station which is worth achieving.

The fourth Sign

The fourth sign is to hate someone or be angry at him for the sake of Allah. The hatred or anger that a person feels for another is not on his person but it is because of an evil deed he performs that earns the displeasure of Allah. Such anger and displeasure is then for the sake of Allah.

Do not show hatred to the Person

The religious elders have taught us a lesson that we must remember always. They have told us not to hate the unbeliever but to hate disbelief, not to hate the sinner but to hate the sin, not to hate the transgressor but the transgression. If anyone is involved in immorality and sin, he is not the one to be hated but it is his deed that is detested. His person is worthy having pity because the poor man is ill -- he is ridden with the illness of disbelief, vice or sin. One does not hate the sick man but he detests the illness. If we hate the sick man then who will care for him?This is why when a person gives up sin and disbelief then he is worth embracing.

The method of the Holy Prophet ﷺ in this regard

Let us look at the behaviour of the Holy Prophet ﷺ in this regard. The person that chewed the liver of his paternal uncle, Sayyidina Hamzah رضی اللہ عنہ- sayyidah Hindah رضی اللہ عنہا- and the one who made it possible for her - Sayyidina Wahshi رضی اللہ عنہا - when they embraced Islam, they became his brother- and sister-in-faith. When their names are recalled now, the prayer رضی اللہ عنہ or رضی اللہ عنہا (may Allah be pleased with him/her) is spoken after their names. The truth was that their persons were never despised but their behaviour and their deeds were despised and their belief was hated. When they repented sincerely and gave up the evil deed and belief, there was no cause to hate them.

An incident in the life of Khwaja Nizam-ud-din Awliya رحمۃ اللہ علیہ

Khwaja Nizam-ud-din Awliya رحمۃ اللہ علیہ was a great saint. In his times, there lived a great religious scholar too, Mawlana Hakim Zia-ud-din رحمۃ اللہ علیہ who was an eminent jurist too. While the former was a well-known Sufi, the latter was noted for his mark in jurisprudence and so as a Mufti (one who gives judgement in religious matters). Khwaja Nizam-ud-din Awliya رحمۃ اللہ علیہ regarded sama as proper as indeed, many Sufis allow it. Sama is the recitation of Hamd (praise of Allah) and naat (eulogy of the Prophet ﷺ) in a sweet, melodious voice without the accompaniment of musical instruments. It may be in a singing style or a simpe melodious recitation but is delivered and heard with rapt attention and religious devotion. While the Sufis generally held it as proper many jurisprudents disallowed it and termed it as a bidah (an innovative practice). Thus, on the one hand Hakim Zia-ud-din رحمۃ اللہ علیہ had issued a religious edict that sama was disallowed and improper while, on the other hand, Khwaja Nizam-ud-din رحمۃ اللہ علیہ permitted it and listened to it.

It happened that Mawlana Hakim Zia-ud-din رحمة الله عليه was taken ill and death seemed near. Khwaja Nizam-ud-din Awliya رحمة الله عليه paid him a visit to enquire after his health. When he arrived at his house, he let it be known that Nizam-ud-din Awliya had come to enquire about the health of Zia-ud-din. The latter sent the messenger back with instruction not to allow him in because he was not willing to see a bidati (an innovator) but Khwaja Nizam-ud-din رحمة الله عليه sent message that the innovator had come to repent on his bidah, on his behaviour. At that very moment Mawlana Hakim Zia-ud-din رحمة الله عليه sent his turban with instructions that it may be spread on the floor and Khwaja Nizam-ud-din Awliya رحمة الله عليه be asked to step on it with his shoes on - not bare foot - and be brought in to him. However, Khwaja NIzam-ud-din رحمة الله عليه picked up the turban and tied it on his head, saying, "It is like my graduation, an honour for me!" And he was shown in with respect! He shook hands with the Mawlana and remained attentive to him. It was in his presence that death approached Mawlana Hakim Zia-ud-din رحمة الله عليه. Khawja Nizam-ud-din Awliya رحمة الله عليه remarked that Allah had granted approval to the Mawlana whose station was elevated as he died.

Even anger must be shown for the sake of Allah

Anger that is for the sake of Allah does not grow personal hatred and enmity because the other man knows too that the first person shows anger not on him but on his behaviour and conduct. He understands that the anger is displayed for the sake of Allah. It comes under the purview of :

من احب لله وابغض لله

Love and enmity is shown for the sake of Allah

The anger must not exceed the limits set by shari'ah. May Allah inspire us to show love and anger to anyone only for the sake of Allah. May He give us the strength to control our anger so that we show it only where it is to be shown for the sake of Allah and we check it where it has to be restrained for His sake.

An incident in the life of Sayyidina Ali رضى الله عنه

A Jew spoke ill about the Holy Prophet ﷺ in the presence of Sayyidina Ali رضى الله عنه who seized him at the very moment and lifting him high threw him on the ground. He then placed himself on his chest. The Jew, finding himself helpless, spat on the face of Sayyidina Ali رضى الله عنه. When the Jew did so, Sayyidina Ali رضى الله عنه released him immediately and got down from his chest. People around expressed surprise that he let go of the man while he had shown greater rudeness. Sayyidina Ali رضى الله عنه said, "The first time I threw him down and intended to give him a beating was because he was rude to the Prophet ﷺ and my anger was for the sake of Allah. Then, he spat at me and it provoked me much but if I had beaten him that would have been for my own sake and not for his rudeness to the Prophet. That is why I left him alone."

This behaviour was really putting into practice the hadith "من احب لله وابغض لله" loves some one for the sake of Allah and hate someone for His sake." In other words, it shows that anger is held in check. It is shown only when Shari'ah calls for it but restrained when Shari'ah disallows it. These people then behave as if they had nothing to do with it. It is about these people that it is said: كان وقافا عند حدود الله "These were men who stopped within the limits set by Allah."

And incident in the life of Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ

Sayyidina Umar Faruq رضی اللہ عنہ once observed that the conduit over the house of the paternal uncle of the Prophet ﷺ, Sayyidina Abbas رضی اللہ عنہ, lay on the side of the Masjid Nabawi. It meant that the conduit would drop rain-water and other waste water within the mosque. He believed that the mosque was the House of Allah and the condnit of anyone's house should not lie over the mosque so he instructed that the conduit should be removed and that was done. He did it out of anger because the sanctity of the mosque was violated. When Sayyidina Abbas رضی اللہ عنہ learnt the removal of the conduit over his house, he complained to Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ about it and wished to know why that was done. The latter explained to the former that the conduit dropped waste-water into the Masjid Nabawi which was not a private property and such a thing was against Shari'ah and that he had instructed it be removed. Sayyidina Abbas رضی اللہ عنہ said to him "Do you know how this conduit came to be erected here ? It was fixed in the time of the Prophet ﷺ with his permission. Who are you to demolish it?" Sayyidina Umar Faruq رضی اللہ عنہ asked, "Had you obtained the permission of the Prophet ﷺ to fix it there?" Sayyidina Abbas رضی اللہ عنہ confirmed that he had the Prophet's ﷺ permission for that. Umar رضی اللہ عنہ requested Abbas رضی اللہ عنہ to accompany him to the site for the sake of Allah. There, he took the bowing posture (Ruku) and asked Sayyidina Abbas رضی اللہ عنہ to stand on his back and re-fix the conduit. Sayyidina Abbas رضی اللہ عنہ said that he would get it fixed by someone else. Sayyidina Umar Faruq رضی اللہ عنہ said, "how dare Umar break the conduit allowed by Messenger of Allah ﷺ? I have committed such a grave crime, the minimum punishment it invites that I bow down and you stand over my back to fix the conduit." So, Sayyidina Abbas رضی اللہ عنہ stood over his back and re-fixed the conduit. That conduit graces the Masjid Nabawi to this day. May Allah reward those people who have constructed the Masjid Nabawi and have let the conduit remain at its original place although there seems no real purpose for it to be there; it is there as a reminder of the days gone by. This behaviour of Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ was in accordance with the hadith "من احب للہ وابغض للہ" love and hate anyone for the sake of Allah." He had expressed anger in the first instance for the sake of Allah and then he displayed love, again for Allah's sake. He who does so perfects his faith and this is a sign that the man's faith is perfected.

Pretend to be angry and scold someone

It becomes necessary sometimes to scold someone for the sake of Allah. It is more marked when dealing with those who are being trained by someone. For instance, a father has to scold his children, a Shaikh has to discipline his disciples and a teacher has to train his students. They must limit their censure to the extent it is necessary to correct their juniors and must not exceed the limits. When a man is in a rage then he must not scold anyone. Thus, if a teacher is angry over a student but has built up a temeper then he must not scold him or beat him in such a state of rage. When he has cooled down then he must pretend to be angry and scold the pupil so that he may not exceed the limit. This is a difficult proposition because a man is generally out of control when angry. Unless a man practices it, he cannot escape the ills of anger and its evils.

Result of excess on Juniors

It becomes dangerous sometimes to show excessive anger to a junior like one's child, student or disciple. If the one who is shown anger is older than one showing anger or of the same age then he will let him know of his displeasure and might seek revenge. But, a junior and younger persons will not be able to seek revenge or to express displeasure. A son will not tell his father that he is displeased with what the father says to him, a student will not tell his teacher the same thing and a disciple will also not let the mentor know about his displeasure. The result is that the senior will not know what is going on in the mind of his junior and how much he has suffered. He will not thus seek forgiveness for the excess committed or make amends. This thing is very sensitive and Mawlana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه has said that the position is more marked in the case of the teacher who teaches very young children because they are minors and their forgiveness is not valid even if they forgive the teacher.

Summary

We must try to check our anger because it is the root cause of innumerable evils. It grows many latent ills. In the begining a novice must try to suppress anger completely. When he has achieved control over it then he may show anger only when it is necessary to show it and he must keep himself within limits in showing anger.

The wrong use of anger

As we have seen بغض فی الله (anger should be shown for Allah alone.) However, some people use it very wrongly and although they claim that they are angry for the sake of Allah, they express anger for personal ends and in haughtiness. They aim to belittle their victim. For instance, if anyone becomes a little religious then he considers everyone else low and has a poor opinion about them. He includes his father, mother, brothers and sisters and all family members in a lower bracket. He consigns all of them to Hell and believes that he alone will go to Paradise and that Allah has chosen him to reform everyone else. So, he scolds them, belittles them and uses derogatory terms for them in order to reform them and he also violates their rights in the process. The devil prompts him that he is doing all that for the sake of Allah although whatever he does is to satisfy his own ego.

Those people who just begin to be religious are assured by the devil that they are showing hatred for the sake of Allah and he tempts them to ridicule and insult other Muslims. Such behaviour gives rise to quarrel and mischief. The novice shows anger to other people on slight pretext and they rebuke them every now and then. This causes unrest.

Words of Allamah Shabbir Ahmad Usmani رحمة الله عليه

We must always remember the words of Allamah Shabbir Ahmad Usmani رحمة الله عليه. He used to say that if truth is uttered with true intention in a true way then it will never be wasted and it will never cause mischief. There are three conditions, as it were. The first what we say must be ture. The second, hour intention must be genuine, true. And the third condition is that it must be said in a true way. For example, if someone is doing something evil then the reformer must have pity on him and try to make him understand gently and in soft words with compassion so that he may cease to do the evil. The intention must be true and there should be no personal ego involved in it to show oneself as a superior man or to belittle the other. The method is true too; mild words and love prompt the advice. When the three conditions are thus met then there is no likelihood of mischief being committed. But, if it is found that unrest is created on giving the advice of reformation then one of the three conditions must be missing. It could be that the word of advice is not true, or the intention is faulty or the approach is wrong.

We are not appointed by Allah

We must remember that we are not sent into this world as policemen of Allah. Our task is only to convey to other people the Truth with a true intention in a True way. We must carry on doing that in a reasonable way and not get tired of doing it. But, we must not do anything that gives rise to mischief.

And our concluding remark is that all praise belongs to Allah, Lord of the worlds.

May Allah be merciful to us and help us behave in the manner set out in the above lines. Aameen.

فاعوذ بالله من الشيطٰن الرجيم بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم

وَابْتَغِ فِيْمَآ اٰتٰكَ اللّٰهُ الدَّارَ الْاٰخِرَةَ وَلَا تَنْسَ نَصِيْبَكَ مِنَ الدُّنْيَا وَاَحْسِنْ كَمَآ اَحْسَنَ اللّٰهُ اِلَيْكَ وَلَا تَبْغِ الْفَسَادَ فِى الْاَرْضِ ط (سورة القصص:٧٧)

امنت بالله صدق الله مولانا العظيم وصدق رسوله النبى الكريم ونحن على ذلك من الشاهدين والشاكرين والحمد لله رب العالمين

Praise belongs to Allah. We praise Him and ask Him for help and seek His forgiveness.

We believe in Him and place our trust in Him. We seek refuge in Allah from the mischief of our souls and from our evil deeds. He whom Allah guides no one can mislead and he whom Allah leaves astray no one can guide. And we testify that there is no god but Allah, the Alone, Who has no partner, and we testify that Sayyidina Muhammad is His slave and His Messenger. May Allah bless him and his family and companions and may He favour him and give him peace, a complete peace.

I seek refguge in Allah from the accursed devil. In the Name of Allah, the Compassionate, the Merciful.

"And seek the abode of the Hereafter by means of what Allah has given you, and forget not your portion of this world, and do good (to others) as Allah has done good to you, and seek not corruption in the land." (al-Qasas, 28:77)

I believe in Allah, our Great Protector Who has spoken the truth. And His noble Messenger and Prophet has spoken the truth. And we are among the witnesses over that and among the grateful, and praise belongs to Allah, Lord of the worlds.

Introduction

My Respected Listeners! It is an honour and pleasure for me that I have the opportunity to speak before you on a religious topic. This august house of yours is the Chamber of Commerce and Industry and normally those who come to speak here delve on the subject of trade and commerce or politics. As for me, I have no practical connection with politics non practical ties with commerce.

I am a student of religion and whenever I get an opportunity to speak, I pickup a religious subject. Accordingly, I will submit before you today a few words on this very topic. Religion is a subject that encompasses every field and every department of life.

The Topic

The religion that Allah has blessed us with is not restricted to the mosque or any place of worship but it encompasses us in every field of our lives. So, our discussion will centre round the duties of a Muslim merchant in today's life. May Allah help me to say the right thing sincerely in a true way with a true intention. Aameen.

Religion is not restricted to the Mosque alone

The point is that we have shelved religion to a few forms of worship like people of other religions ever since the turn of tide towards social and political downfall in the Muslim life. We remember the commands of Allah and His Messenger as long as we are in the mosque or engaged in worship at our homes. However, we forget the commands of religion and its teachings the moment we take up our day-to-day activities and enter the hub of life – political or social activity or any other business.

Recital of the Qur'an

One of the very good customs prevelant among us is that at the commencement of every ceremony we listen to the recital of the Holy Qur'an. It applies to the beginning of the session of an assembly, a ceremony at the government level or commercial level. But, is it very cruel that we remember to respect the Qur'an only as long as the words are recited and just as the recital is over and our practical life commences we do not remember the Qur'an.

The complaint of the Qur'an

An Urdu language poet who has lived in our very days has composed a poem on the complaint of the noble Qur'an. He has shown the Qur'an in his poetry as a complainant. The late Mahirul Qadri, the poet, depicts the Qur'an as saying:

طاقوں میں سجایا جاتا ہوں
خوشبو میں بسایا جاتا ہوں
جب قول و قسم لینے کیلئے
تکرار کی نوبت آتی ہے
پھر میری ضرورت پڑتی ہے
ہاتھوں میں اٹھایا جاتا ہوں

I am made to adorn the niches And to remain in fragrance. But when it's time to take an oath . To settle a score orally, It's then that I am needed .And I am raised with the hands! That is, "I am always kept in corners and insat here (niches where scent is applied and) every ceremony begins with my recital. So that blessings may accrue through me. When people quarrel then they pick me up in their hands to take oaths. This is how I am treated: although it is said that I am loved and respected yet the way they live and the laws they enact, they seem to say, O Qur'an! We do not need your guidance!" (May Allah forbid!)

Enter Islam whole-heartedly

The verses of the Qur'an recited at the commencement of to-day's gathering before my address are very apt. The recital includes the following verses:

يٰٓاَيُّهَا الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوا ادْخُلُوْا فِي السِّلْمِ كَآفَّةً ص (سورۃ البقرہ: ۲۰۸)

O you who believe! Enter completely into Islam.

(al- Baqarah, 2:208)

Let it not be that you are a Muslim only as long as you are in the mosque but when you are out of it into the market you do not behave as one. Rather, you must be a Muslim everywhere in your behaviour.

The topic of our discussion today is The Duties Of A Muslim Merchant In Today's Life. The verse of the Qur'an quoted by me at the beginning is relevant to our discussion and I will explain it now in a few words but before I do that let me delve somewhat on the present era. When the verse is explained in the background of the current era perhaps it will be more beneficial.

The two Ideologies

The age we live in considers means of livelihood as the basic problem before man. It is on this basis that the two ideologies of economics clashes with each other; first on the theoretical platform and then on their practical working. Capitalism is one of them and Socialism is the other. For more than the last fifty years there has been a continuous clash in the two ideologies and both had a philosophy behind them. But after seventy-four years Socialism died its death allowing every one to see the futility of its ideas. It failed as a revolutionary ideology.

Why was Socialism brought about

It is worth considering what causes called for the introduction of Socialism. Those who have studied economics know that Socialism is actually a reaction to the unjust distribution of wealth in the Capitalist economy and the wide wall between the poor and the rich that Capitalism promotes; the reaction brought about a competitive Socialist economy. Capitalism allows an individual unlimited freedom to earn and amass wealth. No restrictions are placed on him. Free trade gives him full liberty so there is an unequal distribution of wealth and a harsh division between the rich and poor. The rights of poor are violated which gave rise to Socialism which took away the rights on the indiviual and placed everything under the control of the State.

Drawbacks in a Capitalist Economy

It is correct that Socialism failed-are the defects of Capitalism that had encouraged Socialism removed? Is the injustices found in Capitalism remedied? The answer is in the negative. The defects in Capitalism are found today as they were before.

Those who earn the most

The following news is worth regarding as an admonition. The day the Time magazine carried the news of the dismemberment of the Soviet Union and its own comments, it also carried in the same issue a report on the American life style. It pointed the people who earned the most in the American society against their personal effort. The report revealed that the model girls were top earners in American society, earning their money from modelling. It said that some of the model girls receive twenty-five million dollars against one day's modelling. No one else earned more than that. Who pays the 25 million dollars? Obviously, it will be recovered from the consumers ultimately. As pointed out in the foregoing lines, the two reports were carried in the same issue of Time and I drew a lesson from reading the magazine. On the one hand, bugles were played on the dismemberment of the Soviet Union claiming credit for the demolition of Socialism but, on the other, no heed was paid to the factors responsible for the birth of Socialism. They may have split up Socialism but they had not eradicated the reasons and motivating factors that originated it. Another form of Socialism may yet come up any time. The first Socialist economy caused injuries to man and its next form may cause deeper wounds.

The main defect of Capitalism

The truth is that the defect in the Capitalist society lies not in unbridled liberty it allows to an individual to earn or in its recognition of individual ownership. The drawback lies in its failure to differentiate between the lawful and unlawful, the permitted and forbidden. Indeed, the religion that Allah has preferred through His Messenger, Sayyidina Muhammadﷺ and the conduct of economy it prescribes although they allow liberty in trade and occupation yet they in the unbridled liberty bind the individual to the command of his Creator and Master. Thus, his business and his industry, and economy are tied to the principles of what is lawful and unlawful conduct. Unless the principles of what is lawful and unlawful are observed in business and economy, man will continue to face immoderation and failure.

A meeting with an American Officer

At the time when the Federal Shari'ah Court had announced its decision on interest ,an enconomist in the American Embassy visited me to enquire the background of the ruling. The failure of Socialism had, occured just then. I took the opportunity to ask him some questions. I said to him, "Surely, you people have achieved success in many fields and you are regarded as a super power and there is no other power besides you. However, have you realised that although Socialism has failed yet the factors that gave birth to it are there as they had been. Should you not look at those foctors? Is it not a fact that if anyone says that he has a solution to the problems of the capitalist economy and suggests the adoption of the Islamic principles, you will categorise such a man as a fundamentalist? If he asks you to consider the principles dividing the lawful and the unlawful, you will call him a fundamentalist? Such a man would be critised and it would be said about him that he does not understand the needs of time. Why are you not prepared to concede that at hird system of economics is viable?" He said to me after listening to me attentively, "The truth is that our media has presented Islamic teachings in a very garbled way and they have corrupted Islamic injunctions and teachings. I have heard these views on interest in such detail for the first time and I think it is essential to consider them carefully. Unfortunately, our media does let such proposals to be circulated. Theirs is not a correct approach."

Only the Islamic Principles are Just

If non-Muslims allude to Islamic teachings in this way, they are helpless because they are non-Muslims and do not know what Islam is. They have not studied Islam and are not interested in what Islam teaches them and they have no faith in it. But, we who call ourselves Muslims have no excuse to ignore the teachings of Islam after we confirm the Kalimah - La ilaha il lal lahu Muhammadur Rasu lul lah (There is no god but Allah and Muhammad ﷺ is His Messenger) and recite the Qur'an at the commencement of every meeting. It is not proper that we refuse to learn what Islam teaches us in the field of economics. We must remember that Socialism has failed and Capitalism has its drawbacks just as they were. If any ideology presents a moderate approach for mankind it is only in the teachings of Sayyidina Muhammad, Messenger of Allah ﷺ.

If we place full faith in this statement while considering the verse that I have quoted from the Qur'an it will help us much in receivng guidance from the verse.

Qaroon (Korah) and his Wealth

The verse that I have quoted earlier in this discourse is from the surah al-Qasas. The verse is addressed to Qarun (Korah), a very rich man who lived in the times of Sayyidina Musa عليه السلام. His wealth is proverbial. He was so rich that the Quran says about his wealth.

إِنَّ مَفَاتِحَهُ لَتَنُوٓأُ بِالْعُصْبَةِ أُولِي الْقُوَّةِ ق (سورة القصص:٧٦)

the very keys of them would have weighed down a company of men endowed with strength (al-Qasas, 28:76)

The keys of those times used to be very heavy and his wealth was spread over a large area. The verse tells us of the instructions Allah gave him through Sayyidina Musa عليه السلام. Although the said verse addresses Qarun directly, its instructions are for every person whom Allah has bestowed wealth.

Four-point guidance to Qarun (korah)

To repeat the verse :

وَابْتَغِ فِيمَآ اٰتٰكَ اللّٰهُ الدَّارَ الْاٰخِرَةَ وَلَا تَنْسَ نَصِيبَكَ مِنَ الدُّنْيَا وَاَحْسِنْ
كَمَآ اَحْسَنَ اللّٰهُ اِلَيْكَ وَلَا تَبْغِ الْفَسَادَ فِي الْاَرْضِ ط (سورة القصص:٧٧)

> And seek the abode of the Hereafter by means of what Allah has given you, and forget not your portion of this world, and do good (to others) as Allah has done good to you, and seek not corruption in the land.(al-Qasas, 28:77)

There are four clauses in this verse. The first tells him to seek success in the Hereafter through whatever Allah has granted him (wealth). The second clause says : Let it not be that you spend all your wealth aiming success in the Hereafter and leave nothing of it for use in this world. Do not forget the portion Allah has given you for this world (keep it with you and use it in the proper way). In the third clause he is advised to remember the good Allah has done to him (by giving him the wealth) and he too must do good to other people and deal with them generously. The fourth instruction is that he must not use his wealth to make mischief in the land (or try to spread mischief in the land). These are the four points of guidance this verse gives to Qarun. But, if we think over it, a complete charter is presented in these four instructions for a merchant, an industrialist and a Muslim whom Allah has granted something in this world.

The First Guiding Principle

The first guidance tells a Muslim that the difference between him and a non-Muslim lies in the latter's belief that the wealth with him is amassed through his own effort and acumen. He, therefore, assumes himself as the sole owner of his wealth and tolerates no outside interference. He supposes that just as he is at liberty to choose how he earns his wealth, he is at liberty to spend it as he wishes.

The people of Sayyidina Shuayb عليه السلام and their Capitalistic minds

The people of Sayyidina Shuayb عليه السلام had said to him :

> اَصَلٰوتُكَ تَاْمُرُكَ اَنْ نَّتْرُكَ مَا يَعْبُدُ اٰبَآؤُنَآ اَوْ اَنْ نَّفْعَلَ فِيْٓ اَمْوَالِنَا مَانَشٰٓؤُا ط (سورة هود:٨٧)
>
> Does your prayer command you that we should forsake that which our fathers have worshipped or we should not do what we will with our riches? (11:87)

That is, you forbid us to give less weight and measure, you ask to be just and fair, to be careful about the lawful and unlawful - why is it that you interfere in our economics. If you wish to offer prayers, you may do so in the privacy of your home.

Actually, this thinking is prompted by a capitalistic thinking. It prompts the possessor of wealth to claim ownership and right to spend as he wills and earn as he chooses. The people of Sayyidina Shuayb عليه السلام had the same mentality. This approach was rejected and they were told that the wealth that they possessed was not entirely their own because Allah has said :

> وَلِلّٰهِ مَافِى السَّمٰوٰتِ وَمَا فِى الْاَرْضِ (سورة النساء:١٣١)
> And to Allah belongs whatsoever is in the heavens and whatsoever is in the earth. (4:131)

However, Allah has given it to them and that is why He said: وابتغ فى مآلك ما اتاك الله "And seek with what Allah has given you the home of the Hereafter."

Wealth & Possessions are given by Allah

The first thing we must understand is that whatever we have- cash in hand or at the bank, industry or business is all given to us by Allah. Surely, we may have worked and endeavoured to receive that but our effort and endeavour is not the real reason why we have the wealth. There are many people who work very hard and try very much but do not gain wealth and possessions. Many have the wealth and work hard too but they do not receive extra wealth. So, the wealth is a grant from Allah and we must get it out of our minds that the wealth we have belongs to us. It belongs to Allah who has granted it to us by His favour and mercy. This is one guidance that we receive from the verse.

There are three distingishing featurs of a Muslim & a Non-Muslim

A Muslim and a non-Muslim are distinguished by three features. A Muslim realises that his wealth is a grant from Allah while a non-Muslim does not think so believing that he has gotton that through his own effort. The second difference is that a Muslim must use his wealth to gain success and reward in the next world and he must adopt such means and methods in gaining wealth and spending it that he does not displease Allah or violates any of His commands. This world becomes for him a means to religion and to success in the next world. It is this worldly life which becomes religious if a man's intention to further it is proper and he observes the commands of Allah distinguishing the lawful from the forbidden, and his life becomes a step to (success in) the Hereafter. The third difference between a Muslim and a non-Muslim is that while both of them eat and earn, the non-Muslim does not heed Allah or obey His commands.

A Muslim worships Allah and obeys Him. That is why Allah has turned the worldly living religious for us. A merchant must engage in business for two reasons. One, he must know that Allah has imposed certain duties on him - towards his own self and body, his children and his wife and he must intend to engage in business to fulfil those duties. Secondly, he must intend to be a means to provide something to society through his business and to distribute that by reasonable means. If he has these two intentions in mind when doing business and observes the lawful methods and refrains from the forbidden then his business activity becomes a form of worship for him.

Two types of Merchants

The Messenger of Allah ﷺ is quoted in a Hadith as saying, التاجر الصدوق الامين مع النبيين والصديقين والشهداء (ترمذی، کتاب البیوع، باب ماجاء فی التجارة)

"The trustworthy, truthful merchant is associated with the Prophets, the upright and the martyrs (on the Day of Resurrection)."

(Tirmizi, Book of Sales, Chapter on Business Transactions)

However, if intentions in business transactions are not worthy and the lawful and forbidden are not differentiated then another Hadith reports a saying of the Holy Prophet ﷺ

التجار يحشرون يوم القيامة فجاراً الا من اتقى وبر وصدق

"The merchants will be raised on the Day of Resurrection as fujjar (that is, corrupt, transgressors, disobedient, sinful) except the merchants who fear Allah and are pious and truthful." (Tirmizi)

If he fulfils the three conditions then he will be in the row of the Prophets, the truthful and the martyrs. Allah has granted to such a merchant to that station.

So, the first step is a proper intention and the second step is on the practical grounds to distinguish between the lawful and unlawful dealings. Let it not be that he acts as a Muslim as long as he is in the mosque but once he gets out of it he does not care whether his business transactions respect the injunctions of Allah or not. His conduct at that stage allowed no distinction between a Muslim and a non-Muslim. A non-Muslim engages in interest transactions and such a Muslim also does so. A non-Muslim gambles so does this Muslim gambles. When these things are found in a Muslim then he is included in the admonition of the second Hadith but when they are not found in him then he is the one described in the first Hadith above.

The second guiding principle

On looking at the first instruction and the guidelines to it, a man could complain that Islam had sealed his path to trade by asking him to work for the next world. He could say that it calls upon him to ignore his life in this world and his necessities here. However, the very next clause in the Qur'anic verse rejects this idea by giving the second guidance :

وَلَا تَنْسَ نَصِيبَكَ مِنَ الدُّنْيَا (القصص ٧٧) and forget not your portion of this world

We do not ask you to give up the wordly necessities but you must adopt the lawful and proper approach.

The world is not all there is to work for

The style of the Qur'an has made it clear that the earning of livelihood is not a man's basic problem. Undoubtedly, the Qur'an and the Ahadith recognises that earning livelihood is a task before man but it is not the basic question. This is a difference between an unbeliever and a Believer that the former regards it as his basic task all his life. Until he dies an unbeliever worries about how he will earn a livelihood and he does not think beyond that. But, the Qur'an and Ahadith permit a Muslim to occupy himself in that pursuit without regarding it as his basic aim. No one knows how long he will live. He may die any moment. No human being has denied that he will die one day. There are those who deny the existence of Allah but there is not anyone who rejects death. Everyone has to bid farewell to this world some time. And a Muslim believes that there is a life after death and that life is unending.

Is man a materialist Animal?

Anyone with a little sense can see the futility of labouring incessantly for the life of a few days and making it his goal. He can see that he should work and prepare for the next, everlasting life. A Muslim as a believer in the Commands of Allah and His Messenger ﷺ cannot have as his goal mere eating and drinking and making money in this life. To have that goal is to behave like an animal. Man has been described as a materialistic animal (an economic animal, in the Urdu original) but this description is faulty because that would place him in the same bracket as a cow, donkey or dog whose life is nothing beyond eating and drinking. If man is also created for that purpose then there is no difference between him and the animals. Allah has left open door of livelihood for all animals so that they eat and drink freely. He has distinguished man from animals by blessing him with intelligence. He must use it to understand that his next life is permanent and that next life supersedes his current life and must be preferred over it.

In short, Allah tells man in the second clause that he should not forget his share in this world remembering that the true aim of life is the Hereafter. The economic activities are the stages of the journey, not the end in itself.

The third guiding principle

The third clause contains this instruction :

وَاَحْسِنْ كَمَآ اَحْسَنَ اللّٰهُ اِلَيْكَ (القصص ۷۷)

And do good (to others) as Allah has done good to you

This verse thus tells us that we must distinguish between lawful and unlawful dealings and not earn livelihood through unlawful means. It then tells us that whatever we have earned lawfully we must not consider ourselves as outright, sole owners of it but we must use it to do good to other people. Good may be done to others through zakah and voluntary charity. (Zakah is a fixed proportion of wealth at 2.5% obligatory on the wealthy to be paid to the needy Muslims.)

The fourth guiding principle

The guidance in the fourth clause is :

وَلَا تَبْغِ الْفَسَادَ فِى الْاَرْضِ ط (القصص ۷۷)

And seek not evil in the land.

Do not spread evil or corruption in the land. Do not violate the rights of other people on the strength of your wealth and do not appropriate to yourself the due of other people.

If one accepts these four guiding principles, his wealth and his economic activities become auspicious for him. He will be bracketed with the Prophets, the upright and the martyrs. But, if he rejects these instructions then his efforts in the economic field are of no benenfit to him and he will face punishment in the next world.

Present an example before the world

It is a foremost responsibility of the Muslim merchants to bear in mind the guidance provided by the Holy Qur'an in the four clauses and let the world have an example in their conduct. Both Capitalism and Socialism have caused injury to the people, and the Muslim merchants must provide such an example that other people are attracted. Those who do it will fulfil the greatest need of the hour.

Can one man bring about a change in Society

Certain people put forward the excuse that one man by himself cannot bring about a change unless the system is altered and everyone else obliges. They aslo say that a man by himself cannot act on the four-point guidance. We must remember that the system and society is a collection of individuals. If every individual says that he will not change himself until society reforms then there never will be a change in society. Change is brought about only after an individual steps forward and his example is emulated by others, and so on. When individuals reform, society reforms itself. It is the individual who builds nations. Therefore, the excuse that a man by himself cannot do anything is not a valid excuse.

How did the Prophet ﷺ bring about a change

When Prophet Muhammad ﷺ arrived, evil and vice had reached their peak in society. The Prophet ﷺ did not tell himself, "How can I correct such a big society that goes the wrong way?" He was not over-awed and did not lose heart. If he had given up, we would not have been Muslims. He went against the current of the world and presented a fresh approach, a new path. And, he walked on that road. It is correct that he had to make sacrifices on that path and he faced difficulties too; but, he endured them. The result is that one-third of the world's population today is following the path of Muhammad ﷺ. They are his slaves. But, if he had given up on the excuse that he could do nothing unless society changed itself then we would not have witnessed this situation.

Let every individual bring about a change in himself

Allah has placed responsibility one every man. So, it is his duty to reform his action without waiting for anyone else to do the same. The least that each of us must do is to seek out the injunctions ordained by Allah and His Messenger ﷺ in the fields of economics, trade and industry. We must see how we can follow those injunctions. If we become aware of those injunctions and feel an urge and resolve to act on them then this discourse will have been auspicious and beneficial. If not then there are many gatherings where people sit, talk and depart.

May Allah grow in us through His mercy the urge and the resolve to know and follow the injunctions in this regard. It is the gravest need of the hour. May He reform us in this world and improve our chances in the Hereafter and may He prompt us to act goodly.

Praise belongs to Allah. We praise Him and beseech Him for help and seek His forgiveness. We believe in Him and place our trust in Him. We seek refuge in Allah from the mischief of our souls and from our evil deeds. He whom Allah guides, none can mislead and he whom Allah leaves astray, there is no one to guide him. And we bear witness that there is no god except Allah, the Alone, who has no partner, and we bear witness that Sayyidina Muhammad ﷺ is His slave and Messenger, may Allah bless him and his family and companions, and may He favour him and give peace, complete and abundant.

And I seek refuge in Allah from the accursed devil. In the Name of Allah, the Compassionate, the Merciful.

I have believed in Allah, and Allah, our Great Protector, has spoken the truth, and His Messenger, the noble Prophet has spoken the truth, and we are over that grateful witness. Praise belongs to Allah, Lord of the worlds.

"O You who believe! Devour not your possessions among yourselves by false means, but let there be trading between you, by mutual agreement." (an-Nisa, 4:29)

Fair dealings - An important Religious duty

The verse that has been quoted above concerns an important religious obligation, to be fair in one's dealings with other people. A man must be good to others when dealing with them and give them courteous treatment. It is very important part of religion. However, it is sad that we have totally neglected it in our lives. We have limited religion to a few forms of worship, for example Prayer, Fasting, Hajj, Zakah, Umrah and rituals. But, we consider monetary dealings as not a part of religion as if these are not part of our religious obligations. However, if we examine the injunctions of Islamic Shari'ah then we will find that one-fourth of them pertain to worship and three-fourth concern dealings and way of living.

Three-fourth of religion concerns dealings with others

There is a very famous book on Fiaq (Islamic law). It is taught in all our madrasahs (religious schools) before our students can become Ulama (religious scholars). The book is called hadayah. It contains every law of Shari'ah from purification to inheretance. This book is divided into four volumes and the first volume deals with worship and contains injunctions on Purification., Prayer, *zakah, F*asting and Hajj. The remaining three volumes concern laws on mutual dealings and social living. We can see from it that the one-fourth of the religious laws pertain to worship and three-fourth to mutual dealings.

Unfair dealings influence Worship

Allah has given such importance to mutual dealings that if anyone does not distinguish between the lawful and unlawful, and the proper and improper monetary transactions then his worship is affected. He may have fulfilled his obligations in worship but the reward thereagainst and their approval become uncertain. His supplications are not answered. A Hadith quotes the Holy Prophet ﷺ as saying, "There are many people who demonstrate much humility before Allah. Their hair is dishevelled and untidy. They implore and cry much while calling out Allah : O Allah! Let me have that, and that! They beseech Him in their supplications very deeply but the food they eat is unlawfully acquired, their drink is likewise unlawful, their clothes are unlawful and their body is fed with unlawful income. فانى يستجاب له الدعاء Then how can the supplications of such a man be granted? Supplications of such men are not granted.

It is difficult to rectify wrong dealings

As far as different forms of worship are concerned, when anyone defaults on them it is easy for him to make amends. If prayer is neglected, for instance, he can redeem in his lifetime The number of prayers he has missed and if he cannot do so, he may leave instructions in his will to pay fidya against the omitted prayers from his legacy and he may make a repentance. Allah will accept the redemption, if He wills. But, if he has appropriated to himself someone's wealth then it is only possible to make amends if the owner forgives him, otherwise he may repent thousands of times and offer optional prayers innumerable times amends will not be made. Therefore, the department of dealings is very important.

Mawlana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه on this subject

It is thus that Mawlana Ashraf Ali Thanavi رحمة الله عليه laid most emphasis on this subject when teaching tasawwuf (Mystic path containing knowledge leading to purification of the human soul) and tariqat (path in search of inner reality of religious and spiritual life). He used to say, "If ever I learnt of a disciple that he lagged behind in offering optional prayers or observing the rituals, I was sad on that account and I asked him to observe that. But if I learnt of a disciple who defaulted in a monetary dealing then I felt hatred for him."

An exemplary incident

Mawlana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه had a disciple whom he had bestowed his khilafah so he was authorised to take pledge from a fresh disciple and to exhort him on the Path. Once he travelled by train from his native place to visit the Mawlana and he brought his young son with him. He greeted the Mawlana on arrival and presented himself before him, saying, "This is my son. Please pray for him." Mawlana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه blessed the child and asked him how old he was. He said that he was thirteen years old. The Mawlana asked him whether he had paid half fare or full fare for the child when he travelled by train; he said that he had paid half fare. The Mawlana said to him, "Why did you pay for half the fare for the child when the fare for a child over twelve years is to be paid in full?" He said, "That is the law alright but my son looks a twelve-years old so I paid half fare." The Mawlana said, "We belong to Allah and we are to return to Him. It seems that you have no inkling of tasawwuf and tariqat. You have not yet realised that the journey on which you took your son has been unlawfully accomplished. Anyone over twelve years old has to pay a full fare by train and you paid half the fare for your child so you deprived the Railways of half the fare and that is theft. Anyone who commits theft knows nothing of tasawwuf and tariqat. So, as from today, I withdraw my permission to you to act as my Khalifah (deputy) and to obtain pledge from anyone." So, he withdrew the Khilafah from him although the man was perfect in observance of rituals, routine exercises and voluntary prayer including tahajjud and ishraq. He made the mistake of paying only half the fare and that cost him his Khilafah.

An incident with Mawlana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه

Mawlana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه had instructed his disciples and admirers to be sure to pay for excess baggage when they travel by train. They were instructed to get their luggage weighed and pay for what was in excess of the allowed limit. It is known of himself that once he arrived at a Railway Station with intent to travel. The time of departure was drawing near. He took his luggage to the relevant office and stood in the queue. Incidentally, the guard of the same train recognised the Mawlana while he was standing in the queue and asked him why he was standing there. The Mawlana told him that he was there to get his luggage weighed.The guard told him that he need not undergo the exercise because he was in the same train as the Mawlana and he need not worry about excess weight and payment against that. The Mawlana asked him, "How far you will travel with me?" The guard said that he would go up to a certain station. The Mawlana said, "What will happen after that?" The guard said, "Another guard will take over from there and I will tell him about it." "How far will that guard travel?" The guard replied, "He will go beyond your destination." The Mawlana said, "But, I will go much further (meaning beyond this world) and I will go in my grave. Which guard will accompany me there? When I will be questioned in the Hereafter that I had travelled in the State Railways without paying for the luggage and I committed theft, which of the guard will help me there?"

Unlawful living because of unfair dealings

So, it was understood that if anyone had his luggage weighed in the office of Railways, he was travelling to Thana Bhon. He must be an admirer of Mawlana Thanavi.

Many of the teachings of the Mawlana are well known among people but it is forgotten that he taught also that we should not acquire even the least amount of money in contravention of the Shari'ah prescription. Many people are involved today in such dealings but they do not even realise that they violate the Shari'ah and behave in an improper manner. If anyone saves some money by doing somthing wrong, that money is unlawful which makes the rest of his money evil too. The food that he buys with that money is unlawful and, in the same way, the clothes that he buys are unlawful and his whole living is like that. But, he realises it not and does not see the evil effects of the unlawful money he has on his life. His life is corrupted badly and he is unaware. But, those people whom Allah has given the ability to realise understand what an unlawful thing it is.

Mawlana Muhammed Yaqub رحمة الله عليه on eating a few doubtful morsels

Mawlana Muhammad Yaqub Nanotvi رحمة الله عليه was the renowned teacher of Mawlana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه and the President of Darul-uloom, Deoband. He said that he had accepted an invitation from a man once and had food there but he later learnt that the man's income was from doubtful sources. He said, "I felt the repercussions of the few morsels for months together and felt the urge to sin. I was tempted frequently to commit one or the other sin." Unlawful wealth causes such evil repercussions.

Two types of unlawful wealth

The mingling of the unlawful in our wealth is the main reason why we do not despise sin any longer and do not consider sin as a sin. There is the unlawful that is apparent and everyone knows it as such, like bribery, interest, gambling, cheating , theft, etc. There is another kind of the unlawful that we do not realise as unlawful. This unlawful mixes with our assets and this second type we will discuss here.

Ownership must be defined

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has taught us that dealings must be very clear and transparent even if they are between brothers, father and son, or husband and wife. Ownerships should be defined. A father's things must be known from his son's, a husband's from his wife's and a brother's from his brother. These things must be known clearly. There is a Hadith:

تعا شروا كا لا خوان تعا ملوا كالا جانب

"Live like brothers but deal with each other like strangers."

For instance, if a debt is taken the transaction must be reduced to writing specifying the time after which it would be returned.

Combined business among father and sons

It is very common among us today that nothing is clearly defined. If father and sons do business together, it is done without proper defination. It is not defined whether the sons are partners in business with their father, his empyees or just helping him without remuneration. They keep expanding their business and adding factories or shops one after the other but their respective offices and positions are not defined. The share of each is not known. When they are advised to define their shares and make dealings clear among themselves, they say that would be shameful and there was no need to do that among family members. The result is that when they are married and beget childern, they begin to complain against each other's behaviour because someone spends more on marriage, or builds a house for himself while the other has no house of his own. Then they begin to quarrel. If their father dies, then the quarrel knows no end and there seems to be no solution to that.

Inheritance must be distributed immediately on a father's death

When the father dies Shari'ah calls upon us to distribute the inheritance without delay. It is forbidden to delay distribution of inheritance. However, what happens is that intheritance is not distributed promptly. The eldest son takes over father's business and the daughters keep mum.They do not know what their rights are. This situation goes on for tens of years when someone else dies or one of the brothers adds his capital to the business. Years later when their children grow up they quarrel with each other and there is utter confusion. They then turn to a Mufti (jurist on religious matter) who cannot do anything because it is difficult to find out how the sons had joined their father and in what capacity they were working with him.

Share of Co-owners in Construction of Joint Home

It also happens that a joint home is constructed and during the construction different family members put in various sums of money at different times. The proportion according to which they put in the money is never specified. It is also not known whether each contributor puts in the money towords his share or gives a loan or just helps out. Finally, the house is built and they begin to stay in that. When the father dies or different other problems crop up they approach the Mufti for a solution. But, they cannot answer him when he asks them on what basis they had contributed money during construction. They want a solution, anyhow. The Mufti naturally cannot solve the problem confused as it is. These things happen because the teachings of the Prophet ﷺ are not heeded. People observe voluntary forms of worship- at tahajjud and ishraq- but they ignore proper dealings among themselves. They know nothing about this subject. This behaviour is unlawful. If they do not know their shares then whatever they consume cannot be said to be lawful with any degree of certainty.

Mawlana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه and defining ownership

My respected father, Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه (may Allah elevate his rank)had a separate room for him self. He had a bed there on which he rested and did his writing. His visitors also came to that room to meet him. I had observed that when anything was brought into that room from outside he sent it back immediately. For instance, if he asked for water, he wanted the glass to be taken back immediately after he had drunk the water. Or, if any other utensil was taken into the room he would ask that it be taken back to its original place. If there was delay in complying with his command, he would become angry. One day I asked him to forgive me if there was delay in complying with his command. He said, "You do not understand what I say. The point is that I have observed in my will that whatever is found in this room is my property. Whatever is in other rooms and the house belongs to your mother. So, I fear that if anything from other rooms remains in my room and I die then you will think that it belongs to me while it is not mine. That is why I do not let anything remain in my room when it does not belong to me."

The caution exercised by Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayyi رحمة الله عليه

When my respected father died, my Shaikh, Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayyi رحمة الله عليه visited us to condole his death. He had a great attachment to my respected father such as we cannot imagine. Because he was old, weakness had overtaken him and I observed that he was very weak and sad. So, I brought my father's medicine from the house and offered a spoonful to him. On seeing it he asked me how I had brought it because it was then part of the inheritance and legacy and it was not proper that I pick it up and offer it to anyone just like that. I submitted to him, "Respected Mawlana! All the heirs are major and present here and they are all agreed that you take the medicine." He then took the medicine.

Make the settlement the same day

In this way Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayyi رحمة الله عليه taught us that it was not something that could be delayed. Suppose, even one of the heirs was a minor or was not present and his permission had not been obtained then even one tablespoon of the medicine was unlawful. Therefore, it is a command of Shari'ah that when anyone dies, his legacy must be distributed immediately or, at least, a settlement must be made of the shares of the different heirs. Sometimes the distribution takes time, some of the things need to be valued and some have to be sold. But, the settlement should be made on the same day. One of the basic reasons for the disputes in our society today is that we are not upto-date in accounts and mutual dealings.

Imam Muhammad and the book on Tasawwuf

Imam Muhammad رحمة الله عليه was a student of Imam Abu Hanifah رحمة الله عليه. He is our benefactor who wrote down the juristic rulings of Imam Abu Hanifah رحمة الله عليه for us in his various books. He has thus been very kind to us and we cannot repay his goodness in our lifetime. His writings were equal to many camel loads. Someone asked him why he had not written on tasawwuf and Zuhd (mysicism, asceticism) and he answered, "How is it that you say so. The book Kitab ul-buyu that I have written is a book on tasawwuf." He meant to say that the laws of buying and selling and mutual dealings are really laws of tasawwuf because zuhd and tasawwuf really mean a correct observance of Shari'ah and obedience of laws of buying and selling and mutual dealings implies a correct observance of Shari'ah.

Using something belonging to another person

In the same way it is unlawful to use something belonging to another person without his permission. However, it is proper to use it if one is confident that he will be happy if his thing is used and will give the permission happily. However, where one has the least bit of doubt about the permission forthcoming it is not proper to use his thing, even if it belongs to a real brother or to a son. The Hadith of the Prophet ﷺ tells us :

لا يحل مال امرئ مسلم الا بطيبِ نفس منه (كنز العمال، حديث: ٣٩٧)

"The property of a Muslim is not lawful for you unless he gives it to you willingly."(Kanz ul-Ummat, Hadith 397)

This Hadith does not use the word 'permission' but uses the word 'happily' or 'willingly'. It means that a mere permission is not enough but the permission must be given happily; then that thing is lawful. If anyone is using something that belongs to another person but he does not know if the owner is happy over it then it is not proper for him to use it.

The subscription is not lawful

Mawlana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه used to say that it was not lawful to invite and receive subscription from anyone for madarasahs or anjumans (welfare associations) in such a way that he feels compelled to donate. For instance, if donations are collected in a gathering and someone feels that he should give something because everyone else was giving something otherwise he will be ridiculed then it is not lawful for the receiver because he did not give it willingly. A complete booklet has been written by Mawlana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه on this subject and all rulings are found in it specifying under what conditions donations are properly received.

Property of everyone must be clearly defined

We must bear it in mind that it is not lawful to use anything belonging to someone else unless he permits that happily even if it is a son, father, brother or sister, wife or husband. If we forget this principle, we mix the unlawful in our wealth. If anyone believes that his wealth is lawfully acquired because he has not done anything wrong- no bribe or interest, not committing theft or robbery- then he must know that unless he goes by this principle he cannot claim to have lawfully acquired wealth. And if anything is received unlawfully it renders the rest of the wealth unlawful too, its blessings are wiped out. The reverse happens and that man is tempted towards sin because of the unlawful thing he collects, and he suffers a spiritual downgrade. Therefore, we must keep our dealings honest and clear without any complications. Everything must be clearly explained and it ownership must be well-defined. However, keeping ownership well-defined, people must live together in fraternal ties. If anyone needs something from us, we may give it to him but ownership must be clearly defined.

Land was not accepted for Masjid Nabavi

When the Holy Prophet ﷺ arrived at Madinah from Makkah following what is known as Hijrah (the migration), the first thing before him was the building of a mosque, the Masjid Nabavi where the reward of one prayer is equal to that of fifty thousand prayers. He selected an open plot of land for that. He enquired into the ownership of the land and learnt that it belonged to the Banu Najjar who, when they learnt about the Prophet's intention, came to him and said, "Messenger of Allah! It is our good fortune that our land has been selected for the Masjid. We give it to you as donation that the Masjid be constructed on it." The Prophet ﷺ said, "No! I will not take it free of cost. Let me know the price of the land and I will buy it." Although it looked that they considered it their good fortune that the Masjid was being constructed on their land but the Prophet ﷺ did not agree to get the land free of cost.

Pressurising for Mosque - Building

The Ulama have explained this Hadith in these words. While it was proper to receive the piece of land free from the Banu Najjar who had offerred it willingly, the Prophet ﷺ did not accept their offer because this was the first mosque in Madinah - although one was already built at Quba - and it was destined to enjoy the second place after the Haram at Makkah. It would have been a precedent for people later on to receive a free piece of land for building a mosque instead of buying it. The Prophet ﷺ did not accept a free land that in future people might not pressurise others for donation of land for building a mosque, or that they may keep an eye on the property of other people. That is why the Prophet ﷺ paid the price of the land before building the Masjid so that there should be no complication and the dealing should be fair and clear.

Paying personal expenses for the year

The wives of the Prophet ﷺ were truly his life partners. Allah had caused them to give up love for this world and put in their hearts love for the next world. But, it was the habit of the Holy Prophet ﷺ that he paid them at the beginning of the year money for a full year's expenses and he told them that was against their yearly expenses and they were at liberty to spend as they chose. They too were not ordinary women but they were wives of the Prophet ﷺ. They were used to giving charity so they kept with themselves only that much as covered their necessities and spent the rest in charity. The Prophet ﷺ set the example that he gave them a year's allowance in one go.

Treatment of wives at Par

Allah had not placed a condition on the Prophet ﷺ that he should treat his wives equally. Allah had given him authority to pay more to whichever of his wives he chose and less to whichever he wished. Allah had assured him that He would not question him about that. Thus, it was not obligatory on the Prophet ﷺ to treat his wives equally. But, it is obligatory on his ummah to treat their wives equally without distinction. However, the Holy Prophet ﷺ did never take advantage of the waiver all his life. Rather, he treated them at par in all matters and defined their properties clearly and he respected their rights faithfully all his life.

Summary

In short, the basic principle shown in these Ahadith and verses of the Qur'an is 'fair dealing' which we continue to neglect. We are asked to have our mutual dealings clear and explicit without confusion and complications or doubts. This is equally essential for man and woman. If that is not done, income and expenditure cannot remain within the limits of Shari'ah.

May Allah cause us to understand this command and to behave accordingly. Aameen.

"O you who believe! Enter completely into Islam, and follow not the footsteps of Satan. Surely he is an open enemy to you." (al-Baqarah. 2:208)

I have believed in Allah. Allah, our Great Protector has spoken the Truth, and His Messenger, the noble Prophet, has spoken the Truth and we are witnesses over that.

Introduction

My respected listeners, I wish to congratulate you, first of all, for your interest that has prompted you to find time to listen to a religious sermon and for which you have assembled here. You will listen to the Commands and teachings of Allah and His Messenger ﷺ. May Allah accept your attendance and may He prompt the speaker and listeners to act on what is said. Aameen! I have recited a verse of the Qur'an before you and I hope to present a brief explanation of the verse. Allah addresses the Believers saying, "O you who believe, enter completely into Islam, and follow not the footsteps of Satan....."

Are belief and Islam two separate things

The first thing that we must observe is that Allah addresses in these words in the verse : "O you who believe!" The address, therefore, is to those who have believed, who have expressed their belief through recital of the kalimah tayyibah and the kalimah shahadah (I bear witness that there is no god but Allah and I bear witness that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah). It is they who are told, "O you who believe! enter into Islam." It is worth pondering over that these people have believed already. What then is implied by asking them to enter into Islam? It is supposed generally that if anyone has believed then he has joined the folds of Islam; belief and Islam are regarded as the same thing. But, Allah says, "O you who believe! Enter into Islam" which means that belief and Islam are different things, and it is necessary to enter into Islam after believing.

Meaning of entering Islam

The first thing we have to understand is to know what Islam is. What is the meaning of asking the Believers to enter Islam and what is Islam? Islam is an Arabic word. It means to submit oneself before someone. That is, to bow oneself completely before some great Power and to surrender oneself to His obedience so that he does exactly as He commands. This is what Islam calls upon its adherents. The meaning is that to enter into Islam, it is not enough to profess the kalimah by the tongue, and unity of Allah, the messengership of the Prophet ﷺ and the Last Day. To enter into Islam it is necessary for one to submit and surrender oneself completely before the Commands of Allah and the teachings of His Messenger ﷺ. Unless he does so, he has not entered into Islam in the true sense of the word.

The Command to sacrifice his son was not consonant with sense

Allah has used this very word, Islam, in the case of Sayyidina Ibrahim عليه السلام in surah as-saffat. Allah had commanded Sayyidina Ibrahim عليه السلام to sacrifice his son, Sayyidina Ismail عليه السلام, which incident we remember every year on the Eid ul-Adha. He was the son for whom he had waited a long and prayed much, "O Allah! Grant me a son." When he grew up and was able to go here and there and help out his father a little, he was commanded to use the knife on his throat and finish him. If we were to find a sensible reason for this command and a wisdom behind that we will not see any logic, sensible reason or wisdom behind this command asking a father to rub the knife on his son's throat. No father can do it and no one can say that such a thing is sensible or just.

Even the son was put to test

However, when he received the Command of Allah, Sayyidina Ibrahim عليه السلام said to his son, Sayyidina Ismail عليه السلام

إِنِّيٓ أَرَىٰ فِي ٱلْمَنَامِ أَنِّيٓ أَذْبَحُكَ فَٱنظُرْ مَاذَا تَرَىٰ ۚ (الصافات:١٠٢)

I have seen in a dream that I shall sacrifice you, so consider what you think. (as-Saffat, 37:102)

What shall I do? The question was put not because he was wavering himself, but because his son too should be put to test; and it may be seen what he said. That son was no other than the son of Khalil ullah (the friend of Allah) and one from whose loins the noble Prophet ﷺ was to be born. The son also did not ask why he was being punished or what crime he had committed or why he was being killed. But he gave a firm reply

يَٰٓأَبَتِ ٱفْعَلْ مَا تُؤْمَرُ ۖ سَتَجِدُنِيٓ إِن شَآءَ ٱللَّهُ مِنَ ٱلصَّٰبِرِينَ (الصافات ١٠٢)

O my father, do as you are commanded; if Allah will, you shall find me one of the persevering (as-Saffat, 37:102)

Sayyidina Ibrahim عليه السلام also did not ask Allah to let him know the wisdom behind the command to sacrifice his son. Both of them saw the command as from their Creator and Master and forthwith submitted wholeheartedly before it.

Lest the moving knife stop

The Qur'an has described this incident in a very beautiful way. These are the words it uses to tell us how father and son proceeded to comply with the command, the father had the knife in his hand and the son was lying down and the knife was about to be moved on the throat terminating the life of the son.

فَلَمَّآ أَسْلَمَا وَتَلَّهُۥ لِلْجَبِينِ (الصافات:١٠٣)

Then, when they had both submitted and he had flung him on his brow. (as-Saffat, 37:103)

He made him lie down on his brow not straight on his back so that he might not observe his son's face and the signs of pain on it and thus slow down the knife and fail to comply the Command of Allah. He made him lie on his back. The word used by Allah is aslama meaning both of them submitted to the Command of Allah.

Submit yourselves to the Command of Allah

This shows that in the terminology of the Qur'an, Islam means that one should submit himself and his whole being to the Command of Allah and when he receives a Command of Allah, he should not ask to be informed of the wisdom and reasoning behind command. Rather, he must set himslef to fulfil the command as he receives it. This is Islam and it is this Islam that we are commanded to enter in the verse of the Qur'an:

يٰٓاَيُّهَا الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوا ادْخُلُوْا فِي السِّلْمِ كَآفَّةً ص

"O you who believe! Enter completely into Islam."

You may have recited the kalimah tayyibah and the kalimah shahadah but it is now necessary to enter into Islam and this is done by submitting your whole being to the Command of Allah and by accepting every Command you receive from Him, bowing down before it and acting on it.

If not, you will become slaves of your Intelligence

Why should one submit to the Command of Allah without the least bit of demur? The answer to the question is that if anyone does not accept the Command of Allah without demur and uses his intelligence to argue that the Command is senseless, unmeanful and unjust, then he will become a slave of his mind giving up the slavery and worship of Allah.

Means of receiving Knowledge

Allah has blessed man with some means of acquiring knowledge. He learns through these means. The first of these means is the 'eye'. He sees things through the eye and learns about them. The second means is the 'tongue'. He tastes many things by it and gets knowledge about them . The third means are his 'ears' through which he hears and gains knowledge thereby. His 'hands' are also a means through which he touches many things and obtains knowledge about them. For instance, I see the microphone before me with my eyes and observe that it is an instrument and it is round shaped and I learn that it is solid by touching it with my hand and my ears tell me that it relays my voice to a distance. So, knowledge is gained through the eyes, the ears and the hands.

The working of these means is limited

Allah has limited the spheres of working of these means. They work within these spheres. If anyone tries to use these means outside those spheres, they will not work. For instance, an eye will provide knowledge through sight but it will not teach through listening because it cannot hear and that the ear does. The ear can hear but not see and the tongue can taste but is unable to hear or see. If anyone closes his eyes and tries to see what is ahead through his ears then he is foolish because the ear cannot show anything and he is trying to use it beyond its sphere of activity. The ears are not placed to see. If anyone shuts his ears and tries to listen with his eyes then he too is foolish because an eye cannot listen. But, this does not mean that the eye is unnecessary. It is very useful only as long as it is used within its range to see but it will not work if it is employed to hear.

Another means of acquiring knowledge — the "Intelligence"

There is a stage beyond which these five senses cease to function—the eye, the ear, the nose, the tongue and the hand cease to provide knowledge beyond a point. At that point, Allah has blessed man with another source of knowledge —his intelligence. It provides man with knowledge that the eye cannot provide. For instance, one sees with his eyes and feels with his hands that before him is a solid microphone made of steel but he cannot know through his eyes, ears and tongue who made it and how it came into existence (by seeing it, hearing it or tasting it). Allah has blessed man with his intelligence to find that out. His intelligence tells him that the beautiful tool that is very useful in relaying his voice to a distance did not come up by itself. Someone made it and he must have been an expert technician who knew his art. So, where the five senses fail to work, Allah has blessed man with intelligence to obtain knowledge.

The limits of Intelligence

Just as the eye, ear and tongue and the other senses are limited in their scope of activity and they cannot do anything beyond that so too intelligence is not unlimited in its scope of activity. Its shpere is also limited. It cannot help man beyond its limits. There is a limit where the mind stops helping man and does not guide him beyond that.

Wahi* "Revelation from Allah" is another means of acquiring knowledge

When intelligence stops helping man at its limits, Allah has granted him yet another means of Knowledge called "Revelation from Allah". It is the Revelation that Allah bestows on His Prophets عليهم السلام. It guides man exactly where his intelligence alone is not enough for him. So, those things that could not be fathomed with the mind were revealed by Allah through Revelation on the Prophets عليهم السلام and it told man how things were.

Revelation compared to intelligence

We may see this example. The knowledge that the world will end and man will die and these things will be followed by another life could not be conceived by the mind alone. It is through the Revelation of Allah which sent to the Prophets عليهم السلام that we know about life after death when man will be brought before Allah and he will have to account for his deeds and we know too about Paradise and Hell. We could not have conceived these things only by our intelligence and could never have known about life after death, the reckoning before Allah and the situation at that time. It is only through the third means of knowledge granted to us by Allah that we know these things—the Revelation.

Revelation cannot be evaluated by intelligence

Revelation is received when intelligence gives up and cannot guide man. Revelation takes over at that point and guides man. So, if anyone says that he will not believe in Revelation until he understands it then he is being as foolish as the man who will accept a fact only when he sees it by his ear.The latter is foolish because intelligence cannot understand what Revelation reveals to us. Revelation is received only when intelligence stops being helpful. This can be seen from the example of Paradise and Hell. People say that they cannot understand Panadise and Hell, although these things cannot be understood because they are outside the sphere of intelligence. That is why Allah sent revelation to the Prophets عليهم السلام to reveal these things.

Revelation decides what is good and bad

It is Revelation that decides what is good or bad, what is lawful or forbidden, what is proper or improper and what pleases Allah or displeases Him. It is not for man to decide through his intelligence. Man's intelligence cannot decide by itself what is good and what is bad and what is lawful and what is unlawful.

Man's intelligence misguides him

All the grave evils and the worng ideologies that are found in this world are the products of the mind. For instance, as Muslims we believe that pork is forbidden but if ignore the teaching of Revelation and rely solely on intelligence then we will get a wrong guidance. It will tell us that there is nothing wrong in eating pork just as non-Muslims eat it because it tastes good to them. The same argument is presented in favour of wine by those who do not believe in Revelation while as Muslims we regard it as evil and forbidden. They argue that they find no evil in it and millions of people drink it without any serious harm. Their intelligence tells them of no wrong in it. Some people have gone so far as to say that there is no harm in illicit relations between an unmarried man and women if they are both willing to enjoy that relationship. They say that they find no intelligent reason against that and if the two have sex willingly why should a third person object to it?

It is on the strength of intelligence that the worse of evils is considered proper. This is because if intelligence is used beyond its scope then it will return wrong answers. So, if man uses his intelligence at the point where Revelation has taken over then he will get wrong answers from it. He will then go on the wrong path

Socialism was Intellgence

For seventy four years Socialism and Communism were synonymous with Russia. The slogan of equality and sympathy with the poor was raised very prominently and it was claimed that Socialism will spread all over the world. If anyone had said then that this ideology was based on intelligence alone and was wrong then he would have been called a Capitalist, a Feudalist or a Conservative. But, the truth stands revealed today after seventy four years when the idolizers of Lenin themselves topple his ideology. This is the consequence of an ideology that is based only on intelligence in utter disregard of Revelation from Allah.

Submit to what Revelation says

Allah has said that man must submit himself to the Command of Allah and of His Messenger ﷺ and follow the Revelation in order that he may live peacefully and on the correct path. He must bow down before it and not use his intelligence against it even if it seems to him to be against common sense, his desires or reasoning. The only thing open to him is to bow down in submission when he receives the Command of Allah. This is what is meant by entering Islam which is found in the first clause of the verse recited by me : "O you who believe! Enter into Islam", that is, submit yourself wholeheartedly before the Command of Allah and His Messenger ﷺ.

Enter completely

The second clause says "enter completely." It says, in other words that it should not be that a man enters into Islam only as far as belief, faith and worship is concerned. He recites the kalimah, observes Prayer and Fasting, pays zakah and performs Hajj, but no more. It should not be that when he enters the mosque, he is a Muslim but when he is in the business arena, his office, or at home, he does not behave as a Muslim. This, in spite of the fact that Allah has said that Islam does not encompass mere worship and a man may not suppose that he is absolved of responsibility as a Muslim if he has performed whorship. Rather, Islam is to mould one's whole life according to the dictates of Allah. So, a Muslim is one who behaves as one in the practical field of everyday business at his office and at his home with his wife and children and with his companions and friends.

The five sections of Islam

Allah has divided the religion of Islam into five parts. The religion is based on these five parts :

1.Belief: Belief must be along proper lines
2.Worship: Prayer, fasting, pilgrimage and zakah must be observed diligently.
3.Dealings: Buying and selling transactions must respect the Commands of Allah Improper and unlawful means must be shunned.
4.Mutual Living: One must observe the Commands of Allah in day to day living and mutual, social affairs.
5.Character: One's personal character and morals, feelings and thinking must be correct.

Today, we are Muslims in our behaviour only as long as we are in the mosque but when we step into the practical field, we hasten to cheat other people, we betray trusts and cause inconvenience to other people and hurt them. This is not entering into Islam because while one-fourth of it is made up of worship, as much as three-fourth of Islam concerns rights of other people, the creatures of Allah. So, if anyone does not respect their rights, he has not entered into Islam completely.

An Eye-opening Event

Once while Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ was travelling, he exhausted his provision but he spied sheep grazing in the wilderness. It was the custom with the Arabs that they received travellers with hospitality and presented to them milk. So, he approached the shepherd and informed him that he was a traveller whose provision was exhausted and requested him to let him have milk to drink. The shepherd, however, excused himself saying, "I would have presented milk to you surely but the problem is that I am not the owner of these sheep and the owner is someone else. He pays me to graze the sheep which are a trust with me and their milk is also a trust. So, I am not permitted by Shari'ah to give their milk to anyone."

Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ put the man to a test. He said to him, "Listen to something of benefit to you. It will benefit both of us. Sell one of these sheep to me and you will get the money for it and I will get the sheep. I will milk it whenever I feel hungry on the journey and you may keep the money. As for the owner, tell him that a wolf devoured one of the sheep. He will believe you becuase that does happen in the wilderness. In this manner, both of us will be satisfied. On hearing this, the shepherd was prompt to reply, یا ھذا فاین اللہ؟ "O man! Where then is Allah?" He meant to say that if he would do it, he might convince the owner but there is a Master of the owner too, what reply would he give Him when he is brought before Him? "I am not prepared to do it." Obviously, Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ had put him to test. So, when he heard him, he said; "As long as people like you are found in the world, no tyrant can oppress another person. So as long as there is fear of Allah in the hearts of men, and they have in their minds the Hereafter and the standing before Allah, crime and oppression cannot take place."

This is an example of entering into Islam completely. Even in solitude, he remembered that he must not do anything that displeases Allah.

This is an essential part of religion. If a man does not observe it, he is not a Muslim in the true sense of the word. A Hadith quotes the Messenger of Allah ﷺ as saying, لا ایمان لمن لا امانة له "He who betrays trusts, does not believe."

A surprising incident with a Shepherd

A shepherd presented himself before the Holy Prophet ﷺ during the Battle of Khyber. He used to graze the sheep of the Jews. He had seen that the Muslims had encamped outside Khyber and he said to himself that he should go and learn what the Muslims said and how they behaved. So, he led his sheep towards the Muslim camps and sought their leader. He was told where their chief Sayyidina Muhammad ﷺ could be found. But, he could not believe that a chief would occupy an ordinary tent built of date leaves. He imagined that a king would live in pomp and extravagance. However, he went into the tent and met the Holy Prophet ﷺ. He asked him what Message he had brought for mankind and to what path he invited them. The Prophet ﷺ placed before him the message of Islam and he asked what will become of him if he embraced Islam and what position he would enjoy in life. The Holy Prophet ﷺ said to him:

"You will be our brother when you join Islam and we will embrace you."

The shepherd said, "You are joking with me. I am not your equal. I am an ordinary shepherd, a black man, my body stinks - how can you embrace me in that condition? The Prophet ﷺ said to him :

"We will embrace you surely. Allah will turn your blackness into brilliance and the stench into fragrance."

On hearing this, he joined Islam and became a Muslim. He recited the Kalimah shahadah :

اشهد ان لا اله الا الله واشهدان محمدا عبده ورسوله

"I testify that there is no god but Allah and I testify that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah."

He then asked the Prophet ﷺ "O Messenger of Allah! What may I do now?" The Prophet ﷺ said,

"You have embraced Islam and the time of prayer has not yet come that I may ask you to offer prayers. It is not the month of Fasting that I may ask you to Fast and you are not liable to pay zakah. At this time only one form of worship is being performed and it is under the protection of the sword - jihad in the cause of Allah!"

The shepherd said, "Messenger of Allah! I do join the jihad. One of the two things may happen to the participant of jihad - he may become a Ghazi (an heroic warrior) or a shahid (a martyr). Then, if I become a martyr in this jihad, do offer me a guarantee."

The Prophet ﷺ said to him, "I assure you that if you become a shahid in this jihad, Allah will send you to Paradise and change the bad smell of your body into a fragrance and the blackness of your face into whiteness."

Go, return the sheep

The shepherd had walked over to the Prophet's ﷺ camps while he was grazing the sheep of the Jews, so the Prophet ﷺ asked him to return the sheep to them because they were a trust with him.

This is indeed a lesson for all of us. A battle was being fought with those people and they had been surrounded by the Muslims. Enemy porperty is war booty but here the property - the sheep - were an agreement. Therefore, the Prophet ﷺ ordered him to go and return the property and then come back and join the jihad. The shepherd did as he was told and participated in the jihad on his return. He attained the shahid (martyrdom) in that battle. This is what is called Islam.

Sayyidina Huzayfah bin Yaman رضی اللہ عنہ

Sayyidina Huzayfah bin Yaman رضی اللہ عنہ is a well-known Companion of the Prophet ﷺ, and an intimate one. When he and his father became Muslims, they travelled towards Madinah to meet the Holy Prophet ﷺ. On the way they met Abu Jahl and his army who were on their way to fight the Prophet ﷺ. Abu Jahl caught hold of him and asked him where he was going. He told him that he was going to meet the Holy Prophet ﷺ at Madinah. Abu Jahl said, "Then I will not spare you because when you go there you will join the forces against us." He said, "Our purpose is only to meet the Prophet ﷺ and to see him. We will not take part in the battle." Abu Jahl said, "Alright then promise me that you will have only a meeting with the Prophet and will not take part in the battle." He made the promise so Abu Jahl let him go. When he reached Madinah, the Prophet ﷺ had already left it with his companions to fight the Battle of Badr. So, they met the Prophet ﷺ on the way.

The first clash between Truth and Falsehood, The Battle of Badr

The Battle of Badr was Islam's first combat between Truth and falsehood. It is the combat which the Qur'an has called the يوم الفرقان (yaum ul-furqan) the combat to decide between Truth and falsehood. It was the combat the participant of which was called a Badri. Among the Companions, those who are Badri are regarded very highly. The asma Badriyin (names of the Badris) are recited as a routine practice in the hope that Allah grants supplications if they are read. The Holy Prophet ﷺ had given the tidings that all those who took part in the Battle of Badr have been forgiven by Allah and rewarded by Him. It was this combat of which Sayyidina Huzayfah رضی اللہ عنہ had promised Abu Jahl that he would not participate in it.

A promise that is extracted after placing a sword on the throat

When they met the Holy Prophet ﷺ, Sayyidina Huzayfah bin Yaman رضی اللہ عنہ related to him what had transpired when they had encountered Abu Jahl and now he had made them promise not to take part in the the Battle of Badr. He then requested the Messenger of Allah ﷺ to allow them to participate in the Battle that was indeed a memorable one in which the Prophet ﷺ himself took part. He said further "As for the promise, it was extracted by force placing the sword on our throat. If we had not promised as we did then he would not have let us come to you. So, do permit us to join you and thus gain honour and excellence." (al-Asabah, Vol: 1 P 316)

You have given your word

However, the Holy Prophet ﷺ said, "No! You have made a promise and he has released you on the condition that you will see me but not join me in the Battle. So, I do not permit you to participate in the Battle."

This was one of those times when a man is put to test and it is seen how he keeps his word. One like us would have put forward many excuses. He might have said that he had not given the assurance with a sincere heart, he had been compelled to make the promise. He might have put forward the excuse that he had to join the Prophet ﷺ in the Battle against the unbelievers and so he was permitted to break his promise. Further, each man was very important to the Prophet ﷺ at that time becuase the Muslim army had only 313 unarmed men. They had only seventy camels, two horses and eight swords. The others had a baton, a stick or a stone. They were pitted against one thousand well-armed men. Therefore, each man was important to them. But, Sayyidina Muhammad ﷺ said, "What has been held out in assurance and a promise given will not be violated."

That is called Islam.

Jihad is fought to uphold the Truth

The Jihad was being waged not to acquire territory or to gain control over leadership but it was waged to uphold Truth and yet engage in Jihad? How may one commit sin and work for the religion of Allah at the same time? It can not be done. We are being unsuccessful today because we seek to propagate Islam while we sin at the same time and to enforce Islam while we continue to sin. We have thousands of pretexts in our minds all the time. We say very easily, "Expediency demands of us to do this ot that so let us overlook the demand of Shari'ah this time,"or "Expediency calls on us to do it, so let us do it."

Faithfulness

But, there was only one thing before the eyes: Gain the pleasure of Allah. There was no other aim-not to gain property, win the Battle no to be called brave. The only aim was to please Allah. It is Allah's wish that one must be faithful to one's promise. Thus, both Sayyidina Huzayfah and Sayyidina Yaman رضی اللہ عنہ were deprived of the honour of participation in the Badr Battle. They had given their word that they would not take part in Jihad. That is the Islam which we are asked to enter completely.

Sayyidina Mu'awiyyah رضی اللہ عنہ

Sayyidina Mu'awiyyah رضی اللہ عنہ is one of those companions about whom wrong reports are in circulation among the people and they speak ill of him. Let us see an incident about him.

War tactics to gain victory

Sayyidina Mu'awiyyah رضی اللہ عنہ was the Governor of Syria. There were constant skirmishes between the syrian and Roman forces. Rome was a Super Power of those days and was a very strong nation. However, Sayyidina Mu'awiyyah رضی اللہ عنہ once drew a ceasefire agreement with them. The two agreed not to fight one another for a specified period. Before the period was over, Sayyidina Mu'awiyyah رضی اللہ عنہ said to himself that the period was yet not over and some time was left before it ended. He thought he could alert his forces through positioning them on the borders to launch an attack immediately after the period ended hopes to gain much success because the Romans would not expect him to be in a state of preparedness before the ceasefire ended.

That is a violation of the Agreement

So, Sayyidina Muawiyyah رضی اللہ عنہ put forces on the borders and even let some of them position themselves into the borders of enemy territory. He was ready to attack. Just as the sun set on the last day of the agreement he ordered his army to advance. This move proved very successful because the enemy had not anticipated the attack. The army of Sayyidina Muawiyyah رضی اللہ عنہ moved ahead rapidly overcoming city after city and settlement after settlement and in their intoxication of victory the whole army moved ahead into enemy territory. Suddenly they observed a horseman approaching them from the rear and Sayyidina Mu'awiyyah رضی اللہ عنہ paused for him when he saw him coming towards him. Perhaps he had a message from the Amir ul-Mumineen (the Commander of the Faithful). As he neared them, the horse-rider called out,

اللہ اکبر اللہ اکبر قفوا عباد اللہ قفوا عباد اللہ

"Allah is Great! Allah is Great! Stop, O slaves of Allah! Stop, O slaves of Allah!"

When he was near enough, Sayyidina Muawiyyah رضی اللہ عنہ recognised him as Sayyidina Amr bin Abasa رضی اللہ عنہ - and he asked him what message he carried. He said, وفاء لا غدر وفاء لا غدر

"Faithfulness, not treachery. Faithfulness, not treachery."

Sayyidina Muawiyyah رضی اللہ عنہ said that he had not deceived anybody and that he had attacked after the period of ceasefire was over. Sayyidina Amr bin Abasa رضی اللہ عنہ said, "Although the agreement to ceasefire had now expired yet you had lined-up your forces on the borders before the expiry of the agreement and some of them had encroached across the border. That was against the covenant and I have heard with my own ears the Prophet ﷺ say,

من كان بينه وبين قوم عهد فلا يحلنه ولا يشدنه الى ان يمضى اجل له اوينبذ اليهم على سواء (ترمذی، ابواب السیر، باب فی الغدر، حدیث نمبر ۱۵۸۰)

"When anyone has a covenant with a people then he must not loosen or strengthen it till its term comes, or he lets them know (first) that he ends it".(Tirmizi, abwab us-Sayr, Bab fi Gadar Hadith # 1580)

Therefore, it was not proper to ready the army at the borders before the expiry of the agreement of ceasefire or before announcing termination in the light of the Prophet's ﷺ saying.

Returned the captured territories

Imagine an army that has made in-roads and occupied a large piece of enemy territory and continues to gain further unchecked, fully intoxicated with victory. Now, the words of the Holy Prophet ﷺ are brought to their notice that Muslims must be faithful to their covenant and at that very time Sayyidina Mu'awiyyah رضی اللہ عنہ gives the order that they must hand over the occupied territory to the vanquished and retreat. The territories were returned and they all retreated to their own land. We do not find a similar example in the history of the world that a people returned the won-over lands merely to honur their covenant. In this instance, the advance was not prompted by a lust for territory or leadership but by a desire to please Allah. Thus, when they learnt of the Command of Allah that they should be loyal to their covenant and they had possibly been wrong, they returned to their own lands.

This is the Islam which we are commanded to enter completely.

Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ and the Covenant

When Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ conquered Bayt ul maqdas (Jerusalem) he made an agreement with the Christians and Jews that the Muslims will protect them and their properties in return for the Jizyah received from them. Jizyah is a tax that is received from non-Muslims. Thus, in terms of the agreement they paid the Jizyah annually. It transpired later that Muslims faced confrontation with an enemy so that the army stationed at the Bayt ul Maqdas was required at the battlefield. There was a suggestion that this unit of the army may be called upon to reinforce the main body. Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ agreed with the idea but he also ordered that the Jews and Christians must be told that the army had to be called at the warfront so they could not offer them protection. The Jizyah that they had paid that year would be refunded to them and after that the army would be withdrawn and they may arrange their own security measures.

This is Islam. It is not merely an observance of prayer and Fasting that qualifies one as a Muslim. A man becomes a perfect Muslim only when he resigns wholly to the will of Allah - submitting his tongue, his eyes, his ears and his living to the pleasure of Allah.

It is unIslamic to hurt anyone

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said about a Muslim that he is one from whose hand and tongue other Muslims are safe and it is a grave sin to hurt other Muslims and it is forbidden. It is as grave a sin as consuming wine, being immodest or eating pork. Every kind of hurting another or causing him inconvenience is a grave sin. It is the duty of a Muslim that he should not hurt anyone. For instance, if anyone parks his car in a way that blocks people's passage and he thinks of it as no more than a traffic offence then he is really offending religion and committing a sin. It is not merely bad manners but also a grave sin similar to drinking wine because the Messenger of Allah ﷺ said that a Muslim is one from whose hand and tongue other Muslims are safe, that is they are safe from him in all ways. By parking his car at a wrong place, he has been a nuisance to other people. Our position today is that we have restricted religion to worship, like prayer and Fasting, and to the mosque and the daily routine of glorifying Allah and praising Him. We pay scant respect to rights of fellow-men that Allah has placed on us.

Who is the real Indigent

A Hadith tells us that the Prophet ﷺ once asked his Companions رضی اللہ عنہم "Who is an indigent?" They said, "Messenger of Allah, we consider that person an indigent who has no money with him." The Prophet ﷺ said, "An indigent in the true sence of the word is not one who has no money on him but he is one who is brought before Allah on the Day of Resurrection while he has plenty of pious deeds to his credit in the Record of Deeds like Fasting, prayers, chants of zikr and supplications. But, he would have devoured somebody's property, cheated someone, caused heartache to another and hurt someone else. He would have in his Record of Deeds violations of the rights of other people. Those people will complain to Allah about this man that he had wronged them and that Allah should get him to make amends. Currency as we know it in this world will not be valid there are he might have paid it in compensation. The legal tender there would be pious deeds. So, those people will be credited with this man's pious deeds - his prayers and his Fasts and so on. Each of them will thus be compensated and satisfied. This will go on until all his pious deeds are exhausted. This man will become empty-handed. The piles of his piety, whether prayers or Fasts, will have been given away. But, the claimants would not all have been compensated. Allah will order then that the sins of the remaining claimants must be transferred to this man's Record of Deeds. As a consequence the man may have brought piles of piety but, having exhausted them, will carry away piles of sins. This is the real indigent."

We are not fully entered into Islam

This is enough to tell us how grave the matter of rights of fellow-men are. But, we do not even consider it to be part of religion. The noble Qur'an calls upon the Believers to enter into Islam completely - with all of our existence, our living, our worship, our dealings, our social Life our manners, every part of us must enter into Islam. . Only then will we be true Muslims and it was only this thing that spread Islam. Islam did not spread by propagation but through the example and character of men. Whereever they went, Muslims were distinguished by their example and character and this attracted men to Islam. However, today other people observe our living and character and are repulsed from Islam.

Let us resolve to enter into Islam Completely

Let us derive some benefit from the foregoing discussion and resolve that we shall let Islam enter our lives- into every department of it whether worship, mutual dealings, social life or manners. Our every action should be in terms of Islam. Let us try to do it.

We must obtain knowledge of Religion

Finally, I request that all of us must spare some time out of the twenty-four hours to obtain some knowledge of religion. Reliable religious books are available. We must have them with us and make it a habit to read them in our homes so that we will benefit by religious teachings. Our problem today is that we do not know about religion. This discussion will be deemed to have borne fruit if we are able to benefit and observe and follow the religious teachings in our lives. If not, there are many occasions when something is said and heard (but not heeded).

May Allah be merciful to us and cause us to behave on these teachings. Aameen.

(التوبة: ٣٤.٣٥)

امنت بالله صدق الله مولانا العظيم وصدق رسوله النبى الكريم ونحن

على ذلك من الشاهدين والشاكرين والحمدلله رب العالمين

Praise be to Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and ask Him for His forgiveness. We seek refuge in Allah from the evil of our souls and from our sinful deeds. He whom Allah guides, no one can mislead and He whom He leaves astray none can guide. And we bear witness that there is no god except Allah who is alone and who has no partner and we bear witness that Sayyidina Muhammad is His servant and Messenger, may Allah bless him and his family and companions and may He favour him and give him peace a complete peace abundantly.

I seek refuge in Allah from the accursed Satan. In the Name of Allah the Compassionate, the Merciful.

"And those who hoard up gold and silver and expend it not in the way of Allah,so give them the glad tidings of a painful chastisement,on the day when it shall (all) be heated in the Fire of Hell, and there with their foreheads and their sides and their backs shall be branded, (saying), This is what you hoarded up for yourselves, so taste you now what you used to hoard up." (at-Tawbah, 9: 34-35)

I have believed in Allah. Allah, our Great Protector, has spoken the Truth and His Messenger, the noble Prophet, has spoken the Truth and we are witnesses over that and grateful. Praise belongs to Allah, Lord of the worlds.

Introduction

The gathering today has before it the subject of Zakah. There are a few days to the month of Ramadan and Muslims generally pay Zakah in this holy month. So, the time is opportune to discuss the importance of Zakah, its virtues and the necessary procedure and rules. This will enable us to pay Zakah properly.

Admonition for not paying Zakah

It is for this reason that I have quoted two verses of the Holy Qur'an. These verses speak of the serious warning that Allah has given to those people who do not pay Zakah on their assets as prescribed. Very strong words are used to warn them of the punishment. So, the Qur'an says, "Those who hoard up gold and silver and expend not in the way of Allah so (O Prophet ﷺ) give them tidings, of a severe punishment." These are the people who continue to hoard their wealth, gold and silver and do not spend in the cause of Allah and do not fulfil the duties imposed on them by Allah so let them have the glad tidings of a painful punishment. Then, the next verse describes the kind of the painful punishment. This punishment will be awarded on the day when the gold and silver will be heated in the fir of Hell and with it the man's forehead, and his sides and back will be branded. And it will be said to him:

هٰذَا مَا كَنَزْتُمْ لِاَنْفُسِكُمْ فَذُوْقُوْا مَا كُنْتُمْ تَكْنِزُوْنَ (التوبة: ٣٤-٣٥)

This is what you hoarded up for yourself so taste now what you used to hoard up.

May Allah preserve all Muslims from this punishment. Aameen!

The fate of the people is described who store up wealth but fail to discharge their duties correctly. The warning is given not merely in these verses but it is given in other verses of the Qur'an too. For instance, we are told tn surah al Humazah.

وَيْلٌ لِّكُلِّ هُمَزَةٍ لُّمَزَةٍ O الَّذِيْ جَمَعَ مَالاً وَّعَدَّدَهُ O يَحْسَبُ اَنَّ مَالَهُ اَخْلَدَهُ O كَلاَّ لَيُنْبَذَنَّ فِي الْحُطَمَةِ O وَمَآ اَدْرٰكَ مَا الْحُطَمَةُ O نَارُ اللهِ الْمُوْقَدَةُ O الَّتِيْ تَطَّلِعُ عَلَى الْاَفْئِدَةِ O (سورة الهمزة: ١ تا ٧)

Wo to every slanderer, defamer, who amasses wealth and counts it. He thinks that his wealth will make him live forever! Certainly not!He shall be thrown into the Hutamah. And what the Hutamah is? It is the fire kindled by Allah, which roars over the hearts. (al Humazah, 104:1-7)

He will be punished because of his wealth against which he did not pay the dues. The Hutamah is a fire kindled by Allah not by any man whose kindled fire can be extinguished by water or sand. The fire kindled by Allah will burn man's heart and liver (that is it will reach upto his heart and liver). This is a very grave warning. May Allah protect every Muslim from it. Aameen!

From where is the wealth coming

Why is such a strong warning given for not paying zakah ? It is to be considered first where one gets one's wealth from? Whether he is engaged in business, employment, agriculture or in other occupation, does he think that he amassed the wealth by his own effort? In fact, it is a system drawn up by Allah through which He provides livelihood to different people.

Who sends the customers

A shopkeeper supposes that he has opened his shop and sells his merchandise and so earns wealth but he does not consider who sends customers to his shop. Suppose if no customer had visited him, would he have earned money? It is Allah who sends his customers and who has formed a system whereby each fulfils the need of the other. He prompts one to set up a shop and another to visit his shop.

An eye-opening event

I had an elder brother, Muhammad Zaki Kayfi رحمة الله عليه, may Allah elevate his rank. He had a bookshop in Lahore, Idara Islamiyat. That shop is still in business. He told me once that very unique acts of Allah are witnessed in business. He cited an example of a morning when he woke up to see it rain heavily. Water had flooded the streets. He thought that it was better to stay home rather than open the shop because no one would buy a book especially a religious book. People generally put a religious book last on their list till everything else is bought and there is a spare money. This is because books do not satiate the hungry nor do they quench the thirst. When one's needs are fulfilled and he has some money on hand he will prefer to buy a fiction or a novel.

However, my borther had lived with the religious-minded and had been with Mawlana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه so he said to himself, "It is okay if no customer visits my shop but Allah made it a source of my livelihood so it is my duty to open it and wait. To get a customer to visit my shop is not my task; it is on someone else to send him to me. I must not lag behind in my duty whether it rains or there is flood." So, he took his umbrella and waded through water to his shop. He opened it and waited for his customers. Not expecting one, he opened the Qur'an and began reciting it. Hardly had he begun the recital when he saw some men in raincoats and holding umbrellas enter his shop to buy books and he wondered what had made them brave in the rain and floods to visit a bookshop. This happened all day and his sale that day was the same as his sale on a normal day. He then realised that the customers did not come on their own but were sent by someone because He has appointed his livelihood through his shop.

Distribution of labour is by Allah

It is a system organised by Allah that He sends customers to different people. No one else has distributed different tasks and business to different people. It is Allah who has put in the hearts of men that they should do different tasks and take up different occupations and businesses. Someone sells cloth, someone shoes, someone rice, someone utensils and so on. In this way everyone sees to the needs of the other. There has never been an intentional worldwide distribution of labour whereby everyone was asked to do something or the other. It has been an automatic, unplanned distribution of tasks. The result is that everything that is necessary is available in the market and there is a buyer for everything sold. In other words, a means of livelihood is available to different people. This system is orginised by Allah and it provides livelihood to different people.

Who grows food from the land

Whether one is engaged in a business, in farming or in an employment, He is Allah who really provides sustenance. Let us take agriculture for example. The farmer tends to the land and sows the seeds. He then irrigates the land but He is Allah alone who causes the seed to sprout. A seed which really is lifeless and weightless but it pierces the tough earth to make itself known. Its roots are very delicate, so much that even a child may undo them with his fingers but they are strong enough to tolerate the severity of the varying seasons and the winds. Passing different stages, the seed finally grows the fruit that is consumed by the people the world over. Allah alone brings these things to happen.

Man is not capable of producing anything

Therefore, whatever the means of income, man is on the earth to do a limited task and he does that but he is not able to cause anything to grow. He is Allah alone who produces what is necessary and grants it to mankind whatever man has is a blessing from Allah

لِلّٰهِ مَافِي السَّمٰوٰتِ وَمَافِي الْاَرْضِ (البقرہ:۲۸٤)

To Allah belongs whatsoever is in the heavens and whatsoever is in the earth. (Al-Baqarah, 2:284)

The real master is Allah

After giving things to man, Allah also said to him, "You are the owner." Thus, He has said in Surah Yasin.

اَوَلَمْ يَرَوْا اَنَّا خَلَقْنَا لَهُمْ مِّمَّاعَمِلَتْ اَيْدِيْنَآ اَنْعَامًا فَهُمْ لَهَا مٰلِكُوْنَ

(یٰسین:۷۱)

"Have they not seen that we have created for them - among the things which our hands have fashioned-cattle that they own." (Surah Yasin, 36:71)

"I was the Real Owner but I made you the owners. So in the things that have come to your possession true right belongs to Me. Then spend in the way, I have commanded you." If a man spends in accordance with the commands of Allah then the rest of his possessions are lawful for him and blessings of Allah are on those possessions. If he does not give from his wealth what Allah has asked him to give then all of it is fire for him and he will experience the fire on the Day of Resurrection when he will be branded with it and told, "This is the wealth that you had amassed."

Only 2 1/2% is to be paid

If Allah had said, "Keep to yourself the 2 1/2% and spend in His way the rest 97 1/2% then that would have been just because all really belongs to Him and is granted by Him. But He is Merciful to His slaves and asked them to retain the bulk share of 97 1/2% and spend in His way only 2 1/2% because man is in clind towards possession. The 97 1/2% will then become lawful and pure; it may be spent on his lawful personal needs.

Emphasis on Zakah

The 2 1/2% is zakah. The Qur'an has said about it.

وَاَقِيْمُوا الصَّلٰوةَ وَاٰتُوا الزَّكٰوةَ

And establish the Salah, and pay the Zakah

(al-Baqarah, 2:43)

At the same time as prayer is mentioned, Zakah is also mentioned. This is the importance attached to *Zakah.*If that is the case and the wealth also is a grant from Allah then a Muslim must, at least, make the 2 1/ 2% payment in accordance with the Command of Allah. He will not suffer anything if he pays this small amount.

Zakah* must be calculated and paid

Many people just neglect payment of Zakah. They simply do not pay it.There are some others who pay Zakah but do not bother to calculate the correct procedure is to assess the wealth and possessions and pay the 2 1/ 2% on it. They shy away from counting their stocks and possessions and estimate the Zakah payable on that. This could lead to an error and a lesser amount could have been estimated and even if an insignificant amount as low as one rupee is underpaid then it is enough to ruin the rest of the wealth. If an over payment is made then, Insha Allah, there will be no questioning on that.

When Property causes Ruin

We are told in a Hadith that the Messenger of Allah ﷺ said, "When zakah becomes part of a wealth - that is, when full zakah is not paid but something of it remains unpaid - then that wealth becomes a means of ruin for the owner." Therefore, we must be careful in evaluating our wealth and pay the full zakah due on it otherwise the obligation remains unobserved. By the Grace of Allah, a majorty of Muslims pay zakah but they are not careful in making a proper calculation before paying it with the result that something of zakah remains included in their wealth. That becomes a cause of destruction and ruin.

Benefits of Zakah in this life

Zakah must be paid with the intention that the command of Allah is being observed, it is the demand of His pleasure and a form of worship is being fulfilled. Whether benefit from that payment or not, our aim should be to obtain the pleasure of Allah. This is the true aim of zakah. It is the mercy of Allah on us that when anyone pays zakah, Allah lets him have its benefits too. His possessions and wealth are blessed as we are told in the Qur'ani

يَمْحَقُ اللّٰهُ الرِّبٰوا وَيُرْبِى الصَّدَقٰت

Allah blots out usury and augments charity

(al-Baqarah, 2:276)

A Haidth quotes the Holy Prophet ﷺ as saying, "When a slave of Allah pays zakah, the Angels of Allah pray for him in these words :

اللهم اعط منفقا خلفا واعط ممسكا تلفا (بخارى كتاب الزكاة بابك قول الله تعالى: فاما من اعطى واتقى)

"O Allah! Grant abundance to him who spends (in Your cause) and destroy him who does not spend and restricts to himself his wealth."

(Bukhari Book of Zakah)

That is why, he said :

مانقصت صدقة من مال

Charity does not diminish wealth

So, it happens sometimes that as a Muslim pays Zakah, Allah opens for him fresh avenue of income so that he receives more than he has paid in zakah. It happens sometimes that although payment of zakah seems to reduce wealth to the extent of payment, Allah blesses the remaining wealth so it provides more benefit than expected from it.

Consequences of lack of blessings in wealth

Today, everyone believes in numbers. No one understands what one means by blessings. It is the name given to benefit beyond expectation from something. For example, someone earns a lot of money someday and takes his earnings home only to find a child ill and only one visit to a doctor costs him all his day's earnings. This means that there was lack of blessings in his earnings. Or, he encounters bandits on the way who disown him of his earnings. This is also an example of lack of blessings in his wealth. Or, the man buys food from his earnings and eats it only to get an indigestion. This again is an example of lack of blessings in his earnings. On the other hand, blessings in a man's earnings allow him to reap more benefit from his little earnings than he had expected. Allah showers blessings on him who does what Allah has commanded him to do. Therefore, we must pay zakah on our wealth in the manner Allah and His Messenger ﷺ have instructed us to pay and make a correct calculation, not a mere conjecture.

The Nisab of Zakah

Allah has prescribed a Nisab (standard) for Zakah. Nisab is the minimum amount of property liable to payment of zakah. If anyone owns property less than the Nisab then he is not liable to pay zakah but when he possess the nisab he becomes liable to pay zakah on it. The nisab is : fifty two and a half tolas of silver or its value in cash or jewellery or commercial merchandise. The person who has this much wealth is known as Sahib Nisab (owner of the property liable to zakah).

It is not necessary that each rupee should have been owned for a year

Zakah is payable by the Sahib Nisab when he has the nisab in his hands for a year. Zakah is then wajib on him. There is a misconception generally that a man should have every part of his money or wealth for a year to be called a Sahib Nisab and only then will zakah be wajib on him. It is not so. Rather, if a man becomes a Sahib Nisab at one time say the 1st of Ramadan and then again on the next 1st Ramadan he is a Sahib Nisab. He is liable to pay zakah even if during the year he did not constantly have that much wealth. On the 1st Ramadan when the first year is over and the next begins he will pay zakah on what he owns even if he may have had some of the wealth only for a day.

Zakah is payable on the wealth one owns on the date of Zakah

For example, a man had a hundred thousand rupees on the 1st of Ramadan. Next year two days before this date he received another fifty thousand rupees so on the 1st Ramadan he had a hundred and fifty thousand rupees. It is now fard (absolute obligation) to pay zakah on this amount of a hundred and fifty thousand rupees. He cannot argue that he has had fifty thousand rupees for only two days so he will not pay zakah on that amount because that money has not been with him for a year. Rather, he will consider the date of payment of zakah, the date when he became a Sahib Nisab, and value his assets and pay zakah on these assets. The value may be more than the last year's value or it may have become less. For example, he had a hundred thousand rupees last year and he may have a hundred and fifty thousand in the current year so he will pay zakah on the current value of a hundred and fifty thousand rupees. Or, he may have only fifty thousand rupees this year then he will pay zakah on the amount of fifty thousand rupees only. The amount of money spent during the year is not calculated and no zakah is paid on the money so spent. Allah has spared man from the intricacies of accounting and has prescribed an easy method so that he has not to worry about the money that he has spent and used up. In the same way, whatever money is received during the year has not to be recorded separately. It is so simple that whatever money and assets a man has on the date of zakah, he will pay zakah on that amount. This is the meaning of the words 'passing of a year.'

On what heads is Zakah payable

It is one of the several favours of Allah on us that He has not made it fard (obligatory) on us to pay zakah on every item we possess, for there are different heads of assets a man may own. The items on which zakah is fard are:

(1) Cash in any form like currency notes or coins.

(2) Gold and Silver whether jewellery or coins. Some people suppose that jewellery used by women is not liable to zakah which is a wrong notion. The truth is that zakah is payable on the jewellery that is worn or used and made of gold or silver; however, zakah is not applied on jewellery made of any other metal such as platinum. Similarly, zakah is not paid on pearl or jewel as long as they are in personal use and not for business purposes.

We must not apply reasoning in these matters

We must remember that zakah is a form of worship and a duty imposed on us by Allah. Some people try to reason out the wisdom behind different rulings and ask why zakah is applied on some things and not on others. To pay zakah is to perform a worship whether we understand the reason behind it or not. Thus, we cannot ask why zakah is payable on gold and silver and not on pearls, jewels, and platinum. It is like asking why the Maghrib prayer is not reduced during a journey while the Zuhr, Asr and Isha prayers are reduced to the Qasr. Qasr for these three prayers two is rakaat each instead of four while one is travelling. Or, it is like asking why a passenger who travels luxuriously by first class in an airline is allowed to offer Qasr prayers while another travelling with great difficulty in a local bus within his city not allowed to offer Qasr prayers. The answer to all such questions is the same that these are rules of worship prescribed by Allah and these rules must be respected otherwise the worship will be meaningless.

To offer worhsip is to obey the Command of Allah

It is also like asking why Hajj is observed on 9th Zul Hajjah and not on just any day convenient to a pilgrim, and why stay just one day at 'Arafah and not three days. Obviously, if anyone stays at 'Arafah for three days instead of one day his Hajj will not be valid because he does not follow the method prescribed by Allah. Again, a man cannot say that he will perform the Rami of the Jamarat all together on the fourth day instead of the three days of Hajj. Rami is the casting of pebbles on the Jamarat, the pillars marking places where Satan tried to tempt Sayyidina Ismail عليه السلام. This also is a form of worship and a worship should be performed in its prescribed manner otherwise it is invalid and meaningless. Thus they raise an objection on the levy of zakah on gold and silver and not on pearl is to question the philosophy of worship. Nevertheless, Allah has prescribed zakah on gold and silver whether in use or not, and on cash money.

Method of valuing merchandise of trade

Zakah is also paid on merchandise of trade. For instance, if someone has stock-in-trade at his shop then he will have to pay zakah on all his stock. However, at the time of valuation the shop-keeper is at liberty to value his stock at the price his good would fetch if sold in bulk. There is a retail price, a wholesale price and a price that would apply to the entire stock sold together. So, there is a scope to price the stock at such a price and then pay zakah at 2 1/2%; however, it is safer to use the wholesale price.

What is stock-in-trade

Everything that a man buys with intent to re-sell is stock-in-trade. Thus, if anyone buys a piece of land to re-sell at a higher price, or a house or car, then these things are his trading merchandise. Zakah is wajib (obligatory) on all these things because he had acquired them with intent to sell. Many people buy a piece of land as an investment intending to sell it later at a higher price and making a profit in the process. Zakah is payable on the value of this land. However, if anyone buys a piece of land with the hope that if he has an opportunity he will construct a house thereon for his personal use, or give it on rent or alternatively, sell it off so having no definite intentions; he has not made a choice of the three options then zakah is not payable on that piece of land. Zakah is only wajib when the intention at the time of buying was clearly to re-sell. Even if anyone buys a piece of land with intent to construct a house for himself but later on he changes his mind and decides to sell it, a mere change of intention does not involve any liability on him to pay zakah; only after he actually sells the land and receives the sale proceeds will he have to pay zakah on that.

So, everything that is bought with intent to re-sell is stock-in-trade and attracts zakah at two-and-a-half percent.

The date of valuation

It must be remembered too that the date of valuation is the date of calculation of zakah. If a piece of land was purchased for a hundred thousand rupees and values a million rupees on that date then will zakah be paid, on the latter value and not on one hundred thousand rupees.

Zakah* on share certificates

Share Certificates are also stock-in-trade. There are two possibilities : a man may buy shares to receive annual profit from the company and another may buy them to sell them at a higher price.

In the second case where a man buys shares with intent to do business and sell them at a higher price then zakah is wajib on the full market value of the shares. For instance, if the purchase price was Rs.50 and the current market value is Rs.60 on the day of calculating zakah then the shares will be valued at Rs.60 and zakah is to be paid at 2 1/2%.

However, in the first case where the man did not intend to re-sell his shares at the time of purchase but hoped to receive annual profit on them he is allowed to find out the fixed assets of the company and its liquid assets and he may pay zakah on the proportion of liquid assets in his shares. The fixed assets include building, machinery, cars, etc. while the liquid assets comprise of cash, stock-in-trade, raw material and finished goods. Suppose, the fixed assets form forty percent of its overall assets and the liquid assets form sixty percent, the share-holder will value his share holdings at the market value and pay zakah on sixty percent of that value. Thus, if the market value of each share is Rs.60 and the assets on which zakah is payable comprise 60% of the assets while the remaining do not attract zakah then the value of each share liable to zakah is Rs.36. If this data cannot be found out from any company then zakah will be paid on the full market value.

Every other financial instrument apart from shares will be categorised with cash whether they are bonds or certificates. Zakah will be paid on their face value.

Factory Assets that attract Zakah

The finished product in a factory is liable to be valued for zakah. In the same way, zakah is payable on the merchandise at different stages of production and on raw materials. However, zakah is not payable on factory machinery, building, cars etc.

In the same way, if anyone is a partner in a business then he will be liable to pay Zakah on the market value of his share in business.

In short, zakah is payable on cash which includes cash at bank and financial instruments, on stock-in-trade that includes finished products, raw material and merchandise under different stages of production, on share certificates which are also included in stock-in-trade, and on everthing else that is classified as stock-in-trade which anyone has bought with intent to re-sell.

At the time of paying zakah the gross value of all these things must be found out and zakah paid on that value.

Zakah on Loans Receivable

Apart from these, certain sums of money are receivable from other people. Either loans are given to them or sales are made to them on credit. So, when one calculates the gross value on which he has to pay Zakah, he must include sums receivable from all such sundry debtors. Although Shari'ah tells us that until sums receivable are not actually received Zakah is not payable on them yet when they are received Zakah is paid for every past year it was payable on them but not paid. For example, if anyone had loaned another person a sum of a hundred thousand rupees and he receives it back after five years then although it was not Wajib for him to pay Zakah on this sum of money for the five years yet once he had received it back then he will have to pay Zakah for each of those five years. Now, since it becomes very difficult sometimes to pay previous dues of Zakah all together so it is better to pay it each year regularly on the loan receivable.So, when a man calculates the Zakah payable to him, he may include sums receivable in the gross value.

Debts be deducted

The debts payable must be added up and their total deducted from the gross value of possessions on which Zakah is payable. On the net value, Zakah is paid at 2 1/ 2%. It is better to keep apart the Zakah payable and disburse it among those entitled to receive it from time to time.

Loans are of two kinds

We must understand that loans are of two kinds. The first kind is that loan which one ordinarily borrows for personal meeds or to meet contingencies. The second type of loans are those which the capitalists take to finance their commercial projects for expansion. For instance, they borrow to set up a factory, buy machinery, import trading merchandise or to set up additional factories, etc. Now, if this second kind of borrowing is deducted from the gross value of possessions to arrive at the net wealth that attracts zakah, then not only will these capitalists find themselves not liable to pay zakah but also in fact, some of them might find that they are entitled to receive zakah. This is because they borrow from the financial institutions more than what they possess of zakah leviable wealth. They are poor people from this point of view. Therefore, Shari'ah has distinguished the different borrwoings when the question of duduction arises.

When are commercial borrowings duducted

The first kind of loans will be deducted from the gross value and zakah will be paid on the nett value. As for the second kind of borrowings, if anyone borrows money for commercial purpose to finance anything on which zakah is levied (for instance, raw material) then the borrowings will be deducted from the gross value. But, if the borrowings are to finance such things as do not attract zakah then the loans will not be deducted from the gross value.

Examples of brrowings

Suppose someone borrows from a bank ten million rupees to buy machinery. Since zakah is not levied on plant and machinery, the loan will not be deducted from the gross value of his assets on which zakah is payable. But, if he purchased raw material from the borrowed money then the value of borrowings will be deducted from the gross zakah leviable value because the raw material itself attracts zakah, and is already included in the gross value.

In short, normal borrowings are deducted from the gross value but commercial borrowings are not deducted if used to finance something on which Zakah is not paid, but deducted if used to finance anything on which Zakah is paid. These were rules concerning payment of Zakah.

Zakah is paid to the entitled

Let us now see the rules concerning disbursement of zakah. My respected father, Mawlana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه used to say that Allah has not asked us to just give out zakah but He has commanded us to pay it carefully واتوالزكوة and distribute it to the proper entitled people, not give it out injudiciously. The directions of Shari'ah should be heeded while distributing zakah. Some people pay zakah but do not care to distribute it to the right people and do not care if it is put to proper use. They hand over the zakah money to someone without ensuring that he uses it for proper causes. There are many institutions that collect zakah and there may be many among them who do not make sure that money under this head is put to proper use. Therefore, zakah must not just be handed over but must be paid out with care.

Who is entitled

Shari'ah has prescribed the principle that zakah must be paid to only those who are not themselves Sahib Nisab. Even those people, who have in their possession anything more than their needs and which is worth as much as the value of fifty two and half tolas of silver, are not entitled to receive zakah. Such people are entitled to it who do not have anything equal to the value of fifty two and a half tola of silver after meeting their needs, whether cash or anything of that value.

The entitled must be handed over ownership

The Shari'ah commands us that the person entitled to zakah must be made owner of it when the amount is paid over to him. This means that he should have a free say in his property. This is why zakah cannot be used to construct a building and cannot be paid as salary of the employees of an institution. If it was allowed to use zakah to build and establish institutions then it would have been misused, the buildings require much money and the institutions pay heavy salaries. Therefore, one who is not a Sahib Nisab must be paid zakah and transferred ownership over it. Zakah must be paid to only such people and only then is zakah validly paid.

The relatives who may be paid Zakah

The duty to pay zakah encourages the Muslim to spend the money under this head in a proper cause. He looks out for the right people and makes out a list of those entitled to receive it. He then disburses the amount to these people and it is one of his responsibilities to do so. One must pay zakah to those who are entitled and who live in his neighbourhood, who are his acquaintances, relatives and friends. The most excellent act in the payment of zakah is to pay it to those of one's relatives who are entitled and this secures him a dual reward - against payment of Zakah and against strengthening ties of relationship. Zakah may be paid to every relative who is entitled to it except two the relationship of father and son so neither father nor son can pay it to the other, and the marital relationship so the spouses cannot pay of zakah to one another. All other relationship do not bar payment of zakah, for example, one can pay it to a brother and a sister, an uncle or an aunt whether paternal or maternal, the only condition is that they should be entitled to it.

The command to pay Zakah to a widow and to orphans

Some people suppose that a widow must be paid zakah preferably but the condition stands here too that she must be one who is entitled to it and not a Sahib Nisab. If she is thus entitled then it is excellent to pay zakah to her. But, if she is a widow but not entitled then being a widow does not qualify her to receive zakah. In the same way, it is excellent to pay zakah to an orphan provided he is entitled to it but if he is not entitled being a Sahib Nisab then it does not qualify him to receive the zakah, although he is an orphan. These rules must be borne in mind while paying zakah to anyone.

Deduction of Zakah from Bank Accounts

For some time now, zakah is collected by the government and the financial institutions do it for the government as also some companies who deduct zakah and pay it to the government. This calls for some comments.

As far as banks and financial institutions are concerned, zakah of a person stands paid when deducted by them and he is not required to pay that again. However, he may form an intention on the 1st of Ramadan as a precautionary measure that he is paying the zakah so that his duty in this regard is discharged and he may not pay it again. Some people are in doubt that before the full year passed on their entire wealth, zakah is being deducted on all of it. I have stated earlier in this discourse that it is not necessary that a full year should pass on every part of the wealth. If anyone is a Sahib Nisab then even the wealth he gets a day before the year ends will be added to the gross value and the zakah deducted on it is correctly charged because zakah is wajib on that wealth.

Deduction of loan from the Bank Balance

However, someone may have all his wealth in cash in a bank account and not have anything else with himself. Then, he may also be a debtor and have to pay to other people, the bank will deduct zakah on the due date and he will not be able to deduct the "payables" from his gross wealth. There is one solution for that. He may withdraw the money from his account or transfer it to a current account before zakah is deducted because zakah is not deducted from a current account. Let me mention here in passing that everyone must maintain a current account and not a savings account becuase interest is paid on the savings accounts and that is unlawful. When he withdraws his money from the savings account, or transfers it, he will be able to take into account the "Payables" while calculating zakah. Alternatively, he may write to the Bank that he is not a Sahib Nisab and not liable to pay zakah. According to law, the Bank will not deduct zakah from his account when he writes to them in this way.

Deduction of Zakah on Shares by the Company

There is also the question of shares. When the company pays the annual dividend, it also deducts zakah but it calculates zakah on its face value while it should have been on the market value. So, while the zakah has been duly paid to the extent of the face value, the shareholder must calculate the difference between the market value and face value on the basis of the explanation under the head "Zakah On Share Certificates". For instance, the face value of a share is fifty rupees on which the company deducts zakah but the market value is sixty rupees, so the share-holder must pay zakah on ten rupees by himslef. This applies to share certificates and N.I.T. Units. Thus, whenever zakah has been deducted on face value, the difference between the market value and face value must be calculated and zakah paid thereon.

The date of Zakah

Shari'ah has not fixed a date for calculating zakah nor any period or date for its payment. In fact, every person may have his own date. In the eyes of Shari'ah the true date begins when anyone becomes a Sahib Nisab. If anyone becomes a Sahib Nisab on the 1st Muhurrum then his date for zakah is that date and in future, he will calculate his zakah on the 1st of Muhurrum. But, often people do not remember when they became Sahib Nisab so they may fix any date when it is easy for them to calculate their liability. They may follow that date every year in future and it is good to pay a little more as a precautionary measure.

Can one fix a date in Ramadan

Normally, people pay zakah in the month of Ramadan because a Hadith tells us that observance of a fard (absolute obligation) in Ramadan entitles to a reward equal to seventy times. Thus payment of zakah will also fetch them a reward seventy times the normal reward. This is a correct thinking and commendable too but if anyone remembers his date when he became a Sahib Nisab then it is wrong for him to seek a date in Ramadan. He must calculate his zakah on the date he remembers; however, if he pays the calculated zakah in small amounts then he may pay the remaining in the month of Ramadan. If he does not remember his date then there is an excuse for him to fix a date in Ramadan. But he must pay a little more so that he may make up for any shortage because of difference in date.

Then He may go by that date every year and calculate his wealth accordingly. He may add up his wealth on that date, cash, gold holdings, shares, stock-in-trade, etc. and get their values on that date. He may not then change the date again.

This was a little comment on zakah. May Allah cause us to observe the commands that call on us to pay zakah. Aameen.

Do Thoughts Disturb You

الحمد لله نحمده و نستعينه ونستغفره و نؤمن به و نتوكل عليه ونعوذ بالله من شرور انفسناومن سيأت اعمالنا من يهده الله فلا مضل له ومن يضلله فلا هادى له و نشهد ان لا اله الا الله وحده لاشريك له ونشهدان سيد نا و سندنا و نبينا ومولانا محمدا عبده ورسوله صلى الله تعالى عليه وعلى اله واصحابه وبارك وسلم تسليما كثيرا كثيرا

اما بعد !

Praise belongs to Allah,we praise Him and seek His help and ask Him for His forgiveness. We believe in Him and place our trust in Him. We seek refuge in Allah from the mischief of our souls and from our evil deeds. He whom Allah guides there is none to mislead him and he whom He leaves astray there is none to guide him.We bear witness that there is no god but Allah, the One, Who has no partner and we bear witness that Sayyidina Muhammad is His Slave and Messenger, may Allah bless him and his family and his companions and may He favour him and give him peace, a complete peace,plentifully.

Evil thoughts, sign of faith

According to Sayyidina Abdullah Bin Masud رضی اللہ عنہ the Messenger of Allah ﷺ was asked about evil promptings that incite one to disbelief and polytheism and wickedness and sin. He said in answer to the question.

ذاك محض الايمان

"They are signs of faith.".

That is, one should not be worried on their account or feel sad and deterred because they are signs of faith.

A Companion رضی اللہ عنہ asked the Prophet ﷺ. "Messenger of Allah! Sometimes I get such thoughts that rather than get them on my lips, I may better be reduced to charcoal." He meant to say that to speak of these thoughts was worse than burning in fire. In answer to that the Messenger of Allah ﷺ said, "These are truly signs of fatih."

Satan robs faith

Haji Imdadullah Muhajir Makki رحمۃ اللہ علیہ explained this by saying that evil promptings came from the devil because he alone puts them into the hearts of men. He is the thief who steals faith. A thief and a robber will strike only where there is wealth, but where there is none they will not even look. Thus, the fact that the devil whispers in anyone's heart and enters it shows that there is wealth of faith in that heart. If there was not that wealth in the heart, the robber would not have entered it. So, he should not worry because of whispers. The fact that one prefers to burn himself than revealing the promptings shows that he has faith in his heart. If there was no faith in the heart, he would not have said that. Therefore,the Holy Prophet ﷺ said,."It is a perfect sign of faith."

One is not answerable for his evil thoughts

A Hadith quotes the Messenger of Allah ﷺ saying :

الحمد لله الذى رد كيد الشيطان الى الوسوسة

Praise belongs to Allah who has restricted the devil's designs to no more than evil promptings." He did not let it go further. It is the favour of Allah that He did not allow the devil's designs to influence them more than that.

Another Hadith quotes the Holy Prophet ﷺ

ان الله تجاوز عن امتى ماوسوست به صدورها

"Allah forgives my people the evil thoughts that arise in their hearts." He will not hold them responsible for that. However, they will be questioned if they act upon them.

Thoughts about belief

Evil promptings are of two types.One of them concerns belief. The devil grows evil thoughts in a man's heart about the Being of Allah or about the Hereafter whether it is a reality or not. About such thoughts the Holy Prophet ﷺ has said that as long as you keep your belief correct then no matter how evil the thoughts you receive there will not be questioning on that, Insha Allah, and neither will he who experiences these thoughts become an unbeliever because of that. Some people who get such thoughts suppose themselves to have become like the devil or an unbeliever. They must remember that nothing happens by getting these thoughts as long as they are believers in their hearts, through their tongues and by their deeds.

Sinful thoughts

The other type of thoughts call man to commit sin and be immoral. He feels like doing something sinful or is inclined towards a sin. Allah has said about them that if anyone merely gets such thoughts then he will not be questioned about them as long as he does not act on them. Once a person does what his thoughts prompts him to do then he becomes liable to be questioned about his behaviour. Thus, a person becomes answerable for his actions once he puts his thoughts into shape. When anyone receives an evil thought he must immediately seek refuge in Allah , "O Allah ! I experience the evil thought and I seek Your protection. Protect me from this sin." In this way the evil promptings will be checked.

Turn to Allah when you receive anm evil prompting

The noble Qur'an relates the event of Sayyidina Yusuf عليه السلام. He was put to a trial and he too received an evil prompting because , after all, he too was human he made this supplication to Allah:

وَإِلَّا تَصْرِفْ عَنِّي كَيْدَهُنَّ أَصْبُ إِلَيْهِنَّ وَأَكُنْ مِّنَ الْجٰهِلِيْنَ

"And if you turn not away their guile from me then I shall incline towards them, and become one of the ignorant." (Surah Yusuf, 12:33)

So,whenever one receives evil thoughts, he must immediately turn to Allah and seek His protection. "O Allah, protect me from this sin by Your mercy." And, he must redouble his resolve not to commit the sin. Then, the promptings will not harm him in the least.

Thoughts that distrub during Prayer

A third type of prompting is tolerated because it does not incline one towards sin. However, it does preclude one from concentrating on the worship one is engaged in. For instance, the moment a man forms an intention to offfer his prayers he begins to experience a wide range of wanderings from thoughts of food and drinks and the family to one's occupation etc. By themselves, these thoughts may not be sinful but they stop one from having his heart in prayer and from being humble and attentive. As they are involuntary thoughts not brought about intentionally one will not be answerable for them and will be forgiven. However, one must not purposefully bring such thoughts to oneself while one is engaged in prayer or set one's attention to them. A person who begins his prayer must keep his mind to it. When he recites , he must be attentive to his recital and if inspite of his efforts his mind keeps wandering then, Insha Allah, he will not be called upon to explain his behaviour but, as he recalls himself, he must return his attention to his prayer and his recital therein. If he persists in his efforts then his wanderings will come down and Allah will bless him with humility and humbleness.

Do not disesteem Prayers

Many people underestimate their prayer because of the wide range of thoughts they get while praying by saying, "Our prayer is nothing but an exercise." They must not underrate prayers in this way. It is the favour of Allah that He has inspired us to offer prayers and we must be grateful to Him for that. They must not let their stray thoughts cause them to belittle their prayers whose regular observance is indeed a blessing of Allah. Insha Allah, they will not be asked to explain their thoughts but they must not intentionally let their minds to think in this manner.

An incident in the life of Imam Ghazali رحمة الله عليه

Imam Ghazali رحمة الله عليه was an eminent scholar and Sufi and Allah had raised him to a very high station. He had a brother who had a purely Sufi bent of mind. Whenever Imam Gazali رحمة الله عليه led prayers this brother of his did not follow him in prayers. Someone complained to their mother of his conduct. She summoned him and asked him why he did not offer prayers behind his brother. He answered, "Where does his prayer stand? How can I offer my prayer behind him? When he leads the prayers, his mind and heart are occupied in questions of menstruation and lochia so his prayer is dirty and I will not pray behind him." That woman was none other than the mother of Imam Gazali رحمة الله عليه. She retorted, "While your brother solves juristic questions when engaged in prayers and it is permitted to think of them, you are occupied in finding his faults and examining the correctness of his prayer. These things are surely unlawful and forbidden in prayer. So, tell me who is better, he or you." The mother of Imam Ghazali رحمة الله عليه also made it clear that it is not sinful to think of juristic questions in prayer. So, if anyone intentionally brings to his mind thoughts that are part of worship and obedience then he is not acting contrary to the demand of prayer on one's humility.

Command to think over Qur'anic verses

We are required to ponder over the verses of the Qur'an when we recite.Thus, if anyone obeys this command and thinks over what is recited from the Qur'an when he prays then he is allowed to do so and it is a part of worship. He can intentionally think of anything when he prays that is part of obedience to a command and a form of worship. He should not think of worldly matters when he is offering prayers, but if these thoughts come to his mind on their own then it does not deter from his humility in prayer in the least. Of course, once he realises that he is wavering in his thoughts then he must check himself and return his concentration to prayers because he is not allowed to carry on with those thoughts when he is conscious of them.

The Prostration is for Allah Alone

Someone visited Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayi رحمة الله عليه and complained, "Mawlana, I am very worried because my prayers are of no use. When I prostrate I get very dirty sensual thoughts. My prostration is not sincere and I am worried that my prayers are not correct. I do not know how I may rescue myself from this." The Mawlana asked him what he thought of his prostration and he answered that it was very dirty and impure. The Mawlana said, "One must not offer an impure and dirty prostration before Allah. So, you offfer that prostration to me because Allah is pure and only a pure prostration must be offered to Him. Let the dirty prostration be offered before me, I am impure myself." That man said "May Allah forgive me! How can I prostrate before you? The man asked "The Mawlana said, "That's enough. It tells us that one can only prostrate before Allah. The forehead cannot bow down before anybody no matter how dirty thoughts one while prostrating. The forehead will only bow down before Allah. So, your prostration is for Allah and if the thoughts are involuntary they will not harm you in the least. Allah will surely forgive you and overlook them.

There is wisdom in promptings and thoughts

If ordinary people like us do not experience such thoughts in prayer and go through prayer with great humility and we do not think of anyone else but Allah then we will swell with pride and egoism. We will then think of ourselves as great men. Someone has said. صل الحائك ركعتين والنظر الوحى "A weaver once prayed two rakaah and then waited after the prayer for Wahi (revelation from Allah.)" Maybe one of us would also lay claims to prophethood or the promised Mahdi if our prayers were undisturbed and sincere. Allah bestows the high station only to the deserving. There is wisdom in the thoughts that disturb one engaged in prayers.

Reward on pious and evil intention

In brief, the Hadith gives us the tidings that Allah will not hold anyone responsible for the thoughts he gets involuntarily. His mercy is very unique. As far as sins are concerned, His principle is that a person will not be taken to task for it if he gets the thought, shows a little interest and seems to form something like an intention but stops at that and does not make a firm resolve to commit it. In fact, if he gets the thought again and again and he goes on rejecting the idea and refuses to commit the sin then he will get a reward for not committing the sin. Then, as far as piety is concerned, the principle of Allah is that if anyone gets the thought and forms an intention to do it but does not make a firm resolve to do it actually then too he will earn a reward from Allah. For instance, if anyone intends to give something in charity if he gets some wealth then he will be rewarded for that intention. Again, if anyone hopes to participate in Jihad if the opportunity arises and to gain Shahadah (martyrdom) through it then, according to a Hadith, Allah will grant him the rank of a Shahid (martyr)

من سئل الشهادة بصدق قلبه كتب من الشهداء وان مات على فراشه

"If anyone seeks martyrdom with a sincere heart, The will be classified among the martyrs even though he may die on his bed".

Anyway, the procedure for a pious intention is that even before a firm resolve is made Allah will grant the reward, and for a sinful intention no punishment is awarded as long as a firm resolve is not made.

The most apt example of thoughts

A man must keep himself from making a firm resolve to commit a sin but he must not worry about the evil thoughts that he receives and must carry on with his duties. He must not stop fulfilling his obligations. A very apt example of this is given to us. It is like an ordinary man receiving an invitation from a King or President of a State. He will hurry along to the palace. On the way, he comes across different people, someone tries to hold his hand, and some tries to get a few words with him and so they all irritate him. Will this man stop and mix up with those people or carry on with his mission? If he obliges, those people then he will never make it to the palace but if he thinks of them as foolish people and resolves to earn the honour of a meeting with the king then he will pay no attention to those people.

It is sinful to bring the thoughts intentionally

Someone wrote a letter to Mawlana Thanvi رحمة الله عليه that he got different thoughts in his mind when he stood in prayer. He was worried about the validity of his prayer. The Mawlana wrote back to him that it is"not sinful if thoughts come by themselves but it is sinful if thoughts are invited."

The Remedy

The remedy of the thoughts and promptings lies in ignoring them and not paying attention to them. If this advice is followed then gradually the thoughts and promptings will disappear. One must carry on with one's duties and when he stands in prayer he must keep his mind on that. Mawlana Thanvi رحمة الله عليه has said in one of his sermons that the real thing desired of a man is prayer. Thus, if a worshipper gets involuntary thoughts then he must not belittle prayer for that reason. Often worshippers complain that they do not derive pleasure from prayer although they observe them or that they used to derive pleasure earlier but do not get it any more. They must know that prayer is not made obligatory that the worshipper may derive pleasure but it is a form of worship and devotion to Allah. If a worshipper derives pleasure while praying then it is a blessing from Allah but if he does not get it then this thing does not render prayer defective in any way. If a man pays due attention to the various postures of prayer and fulfils all the conditions and etiquettes of prayer and observes the sunnah method in offering prayer then even if he does not derive pleasure for the rest of his life, it does not matter because he will suffer nothing. He has to offer prayer whether he derives pleasure from it or not.

Prayers must be offered even if the worshipper is distracted

In fact, if one offers prayer although he does not derive pleasure from it and feels a burden over him, then he will fetch a higher reward for his effort. He could not coax his heart to it and his base self would have him avoid it but he forced himself into praying in order to worship Allah and obey Him. So, he will get a greater reward. Mawlana Rashid Ahmad Gangohi رحمة الله عليه used to say. As for the man who offers prayers all his life although he never derives pleasure from it, I congratulate him for two things. First, that he gets a greater reward for observing prayer in spite of the fact that he gets no pleasure from it and second, that if he had derived pleasure it may have been presumed that he offered prayer for the sake of pleasure but, in the absence of that, it is clear that his prayers are for the sake of Allah alone. He will get additional reward for that." Therefore, one must not worry himself that he gets no pleasure from prayer.

Man is responsible for deeds

Some people write that there was a time when they experienced a unique conditions when they prayed and. They remained unaware of their surroundings when they were in their prayer but they did not get the same experience any more. They were worried lest the devil had gained the better of them. Let them realise that these experiences are beyond the powers of man. He may or may not derive pleasure and this is not within his powers to derive pleasure and man is not responsible for that. He is responsible only for his deeds. What concerns him is whether he performs his deeds or not and whether he follows the sunnah of the Holy Prophet Muhammad ﷺ in their performance or not. If his deeds are according to sunnah then it does not matter whether he experiences a condition or not, he is, nevertheless, absolved of his responsibility. His deeds receive approval. The underlying point is that receipt of approval does not depend on what conditions the worshipper experiences, nor does salvation depends on it. The only thing is that if Allah inspires him to perform his deeds then he must be thankful to Him for that.

Experiencing a condition is neither the aim nor within one's powers

Those people who perform pilgrimage generally experience different conditions. It is well known that when one sees the Bayt Allah {the K'abah the, House of Allah} for the first time, he gets a weeping condition over him, or he begin to laugh or he experiences some other condition. The same thing happens at the Multazim. These experiences are involuntary and cannot be brought about intentionally. If anyone experiences them, it is the blessings of Allah on him but if he does not experience them, he need not worry. Some people worry too much if they do not experience an unusual condition and blame it on themselves. They must know that Allah will not reject them simply because they did not get an unusual experience that was not within their powers. The only condition is that their deeds must be performed correctly and in accordance with sunnah of the Messenger of Allah ﷺ. In which case, their efforts will gain approval irrespective of whether they get the weeping or any unusual condition or not.

Deeds must be according to Sunnah

Mawlana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه has explained it very well. The dependance is not on a condition or state but on the deed. If the deed is according to sunnah, then Insha Allah, the worshipper will attain his station.

بر صراطِ مستقیم اے دل کے گمراہ نیست

If your step is on the Right Path, then, O heart!
you are not misled.

This is so even if the worshipper gets different thoughts or promptings, whether he experiences conditions or not ,whether he derives pleasure or not.

The prayer of a Retired Officer

My Shaikh, Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayyi رحمة الله عليه may Allah elevate his ranks, gave us one day the example of two different prayers. He said, "There is a man who has retired from active life but he is well-off and in no need to earn a living. He has no worry concerning livelihood. He spends his time freely at home. When he hears the azan (call to prayer), he goes to the mosque, performs the ablution very correctly and takes his time over it, offers two raka'at tahiyat ul Masjid (the prayer offered voluntarily on entering the mosque) and the sunnah prayer and then waits patiently for the congregation, occupying himself in zikr or recital of Qur'an. Then he offers the prayer with the congregation and is very careful to every detail and shows great humility. After that he offers the remaining sunnah and then makes a long supplication very humbly. Then, he goes home and waits for the next prayer and its azan."

The prayer of a hawker

Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayyi رحمة الله عليه then continued with the narrative. "There is another man, a hawker with a family to look after. He works hard for a livelihood. He has innumerable other responsibilities over him. He moves his merchandise on his cart, calling out loudly praise of his wares. People stand around his cart examining his wares. Just then the azan is called out. He tries to hurry the people around him but by the time he finishes with them, it is time for the congregational prayer. Hurriedly, he pushes his cart to a corner, covers it with a cloth and rushes to the mosque. There, he performs ablution quickly and joins the congregation. All the while, his mind is with the customers waiting for him. In spite of that, he stands before Allah and offers the congregational prayer. Then he prays the sunnah and brings out the cart." This was the second example.

Which of the two prayers is more devoted

The Mawlana then asked, "Tell me, which of the two prayers is more devoted?" On the face of it the prayer of the first man seems to be more punctilious. Not only did he do all that with great humility and pay attention to little details, but he also observes the various optional and recommended things, like Tahiyatul Masjid, and elaborate supplications and so on. But, in the sight of Allah the prayer of the hawker is more spiritual although he is neither attentive nor mentally present in his prayers. The reason for this is that the first man has no responsibilities on him and he has plenty of time available so he derives pleasure from prayers. On the other hand, the second man has a lot of responsibilities on his shoulders and his cart is literally the source of his and his family's livelihood yet when it is time for prayer he leaves it aside to respond to his duty of Allah and join the congregational prayer. His deed requires more effort and is more approved and so more rewarding. Although he do not derive pleasure from his prayer, and experiences no exceptional condition like the other man, yet that does not mean that Allah will reduce his reward.

Do not lose heart

Today people generally worry about involuntary matters. Soon they become disenchanted and then give up the deed on the prompting of the devil. The devil tells them that if their effort is not acceptable why must they bother,why must they not give up. Therefore, we must not worrry about involuntary affairs. As for prayers, we must offer them in the manner the Holy Prophet ﷺ has taught us and we must try to concentrate in prayers. We must also realise that it makes no difference if we experience something unique or not, if we find pleasure in prayers or not because the prayer gains acceptance with Allah.

We must be happy on receiving the whispers

As we have seen, this Hadith recalls the saying of the Prophet ﷺ that receiving whispers are signs of faith and Allah has not listed the receiving of faith as sinful. Mawlana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه has explained this Hadith. He has said that according to the two Ahadith the involuntary affairs of anyone will not be questioned and, in fact, he should be pleased on receiving evil whispers. If one gets the promptings but he does not act on them then he should feel happy because that is a sign of faith. An unbeliever does not receive these promptings only a man with faith gets them. So one who gets them must feel happy. The Mawlana went on into say, "The only deliverance from them is not to heed them except being pleased on receiving them." A religious man has said, "Satan does not tolerate the happiness of a Believer. When he sees him happy on receiving the promptings, he ceases to prompt him anymore."

Definition of promptings

However,we must remember that a prompting or a whisper is what comes to one's mind by itself. But, to bring it to oneself intentionally to think of a sin or to intend to do it is not the same thing; rather, it is a behaviour and excess of it is sinful. So, one must not picture or contemplate a whisper intentionally and must not heed what comes unintentionally.

Another way to protect oneself from promptings

Another way to deliver oneself from the intentional promptings is to busy oneself in some task when one gets them. One cannot get them away by simply desiring them to go away, so one must take up something to occupy oneself in, and the supplication recommended by the Holy Prophet ﷺ for removing them must be made often. May Allah accept that supplication on behalf of all of us Aameen.

اللهم اجعل وساوس قلبی خشیتك وذكرك واجعل همتی وهوای فیما تحب وترضٰی

"O Allah ! Make Your fear and remembrance the obsession of my mind and divert my will and courage to the performance of deeds that please you."

The Prophet ﷺ taught us such supplications as are comprehensive and beyond our imagination. It is disposition of man that his mind is always occupied and never without thoughts. His hands may be doing something but his mind is thinking of something else and he continuously receives diverse thoughts. So, we must pray to Allah that the idle thoughts that we receive may be replaced by His remembrance and fear. "Whatever we think must be about You or fear of Yourself. We may remember You and of the moment when we shall stand before You, of the blessings of Paradise and torment of Hell. We may remember the commands of your religion. O Aallh ! Divert my thoughts to such things as please you, and my desires to that which pleases you." This is the supplication the Holy Prophet ﷺ taught us. May Allah accept it in our favour. Aameen.

The Damage That The Sins Cause

الحمد لله نحمده و نستعينه ونستغفره و نؤمن به و نتوكل عليه ونعوذ بالله من شرور انفسناومن سيأت اعمالنا من يهده الله فلا مضل له ومن يضلله فلا هادى له و نشهدان لا اله الا الله وحده لاشريك له ونشهدان سيد نا و سندنا و نبينا ومولانا محمدا عبده ورسوله صلى الله تعالى عليه وعلى اله واصحابه وبارك وسلم تسليما كثيرا كثيرا

اما بعد

فاعوذ بالله من الشيطن الرجيم بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم

عن ابى عباس رضى الله تعالى عنهما انه قال له رجل :

"رجل قليل العمل قليل الذنوب اعجب اليك او رجل كثير العمل كثير الذنوب قال لا اعدل بالسلامة " (كتاب الزهد ابن مبارك، باب ماجاء فى تخويف عواقب الذنوب)

Praise belongs to Allah. We praise Him and ask Him for help and seek His forgiveness. We believe in Him and place our trust in Him. We seek refuge in Allah from the mischief of our souls and from the evil of our deeds. He whom Allah guides, there is no one to mislead and he whom He leaves astray, there is no one to guide. And we bear witness that there is no one worthy of worship except Allah, the Alone, Who has no partner and we bear witness that Sayyidina Muhammad is His Slave and His Messenger. May Allah bless him and his family and companions, and may He favour him and give him peace, a complete peace, plenty of it.

It is reported by Sayyidina Ibn Abbas رضی اللہ عنہما that a man asked him : There is a man whose deeds are few but his sins are few too. Would you prefer him or another man whose deeds are plenty but his sins are plentiful too. He answered : "I do not equate anything with safety from sins". (Kitab uz Zahd, Ibn Mubarak)

Sayyidina Abdullah Ibn Abbas رضی اللہ عنہما

He was the paternal cousin of the Prophet ﷺ. Sayyidina Abbas رضی اللہ عنہ was the uncle of the Prophet ﷺ and the father of Sayyidina Abdullah رضی اللہ عنہما who was very young during the times of the Prophet ﷺ. He was about ten years old at the time of the Prophet's ﷺ death. But Allah had blessed him with abundant knowledge which was the answer to a prayer of the Holy Prophet ﷺ in his favour.

اَللّٰهُمَّ عَلِّمْهُ الْكِتَابَ وَفَقِّهْهُ فِي الدِّيْنِ

" O Allah! Grant him knowledge of the Qur'an and understanding of religion. "

Although he was about ten years old when the Prophet ﷺ died, he had preserved in his memory the words and behaviour of the Holy Prophet ﷺ and the events of his life. Besides, after the death of the Prophet ﷺ he met the eniment Companious رضی اللہ عنہم of the Prophet ﷺ he met his eminent companions and learnt from them the sayings and the Ahadith of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. He would undertake tiresome journeys and face much ordeal to meet the Companions رضی اللہ عنہم. He gained knowledge from them and earned a high station in the knowledge and exegesis so that he is known as the Imam of the exegetists. His word is the most reliable in the commentary of the Qur'an. The Hadith that has been quoted in the beginning is reported by him.

Which man is preferred

So, someone asked Sayyidina Abdullah bin Abbas رضی اللہ عنہما to tell him which of the two men is better? There is one who performs few deeds of a voluntary nature keeping himself to the obligatory duties (fard and wajib) but the sins against his name are also few. There is a second man who has many optional deeds to his credit but, at the same time, many sins too against his name. Sayyidina Abdullah Ibn Abbas رضی اللہ عنہما said that he did not value anything as much as preserving oneself from sin. If a man protects himself from sin then it is such a great blessing and favour on him that no deed is equal to that, and if he keeps himself away from sin then voluntary worship is nothing compared to it.

The real thing is to abstain from sin

This Hadith tells us that although the voluntary acts of worship are very excellent exercises but a worshipper must not rely on them to such an extent that he does not keep away from sinful deeds. If he does, then he is under an illusion. The real thing is abstain from sin and, if after he keeps himself away from sin he does not perform a reasonable amount of voluntary worhsip then he does not suffer or lose anything. Insha Allah, he will achieve salvation. If, On the contrary, helperforms many voluntary forms of worship but also commits many sins then there is no guarantee he will come out safe and achieve salvation because what he does is very risky.

We must concentrate on giving up the sins

It has become a custom in our society that if anyone turns to religion somewhat he thinks that he must take up certain optional practices like Zikr, regular recital of some supplications, or routine devotional exercises like wazifah, etc. These are a few apparent routine practices in which he occupies himself. But he does not look at the innumerable sins committed in his daily life and at the many things that displease Allah. There are many religious-minded people who pay careful attention to their worship, prayers and optional exercises but do not turn to the sins committed in their homes. They do not worry about correcting the situation there. They do not distinguish between the lawful and unlawful in the market when they go there. When they converse with somebody they do not refrain from backbiting and they do not care to remove the unlawful things from their homes. Films and television are watched in theare homes and songs are played but they do not worry about that. All they do is repeat the wazifah that they are taught although the other sinful things are destructive to them so they should worry about them.

An excellent example of voluntary worship and sins

We may explain this by example. Suppose that voluntary worships - be they prayer, recital of the Qur'an or glorifying Allah - are like a tonic that provide strength. And suppose that sins are like poison. If anyone takes the tonic in large measure but also consumes the poison then while the tonic will be ineffective the poison will do the damage and the man will be destroyed. Then, there is the example of another man who does not use any tonic but eats simple food refraining from harmful diet that might play with his health. This man will keep healthy although he does not take a tonic. The first man who takes a tonic but does not avoid harmful diet will necessarily keep unwell and sickly. It is the same thing with optional worhsip and sins. So, we should strive to do away with sin in our daily life and unless we do that we will not benefit from optional worship.

The first task for those who aim at reformation.

It is a procedure now-a-days with religious mentors that when anyone visits them to seek their help in reforming themselves, they prescribe a series of recitals and rosaries to be observed at fixed times daily. However, it was the practice of Mawlana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه that when anyone came to him to get himself reformed, he never prescribed an assignment of a set of recitals but he required him to shun sin. The first task was perfection of repentance. The disciple should seek the forgiveness of Allah, "O Allah, forgive my past sins and I resolve not to sin in future." He must then do his best to keep away from sin of every kind and not just a few known sins because every sin is abhorrent. Allah has said in the Qur'an :

وَذَرُوْا ظَاهِرَ الْاِثْمِ وَبَاطِنَهٗ

And forsake the open sin, and the secret there of (al-Anam, 6:120) and again, in the same verse :

اِنَّ الَّذِيْنَ يَكْسِبُوْنَ الْاِثْمَ سَيُجْزَوْنَ بِمَا كَانُوْا يَقْتَرِفُوْنَ (سورة الانعام: ١٢٠)

Surely those who earn sin shall be recompensed for what they used to do. (al-Anam, 6:120)

Forsake every sin

Therefore, there is not any sin that may be taken lightly whether it is an open sin or a secret commission. One must not think it enough to give up some grave sins and care not for the minor ones. Thus it is not enough to give up some of the sins but continue to backbite and slander, to hurt someone or to behave arrogantly. Everything must be given up which Allah and His Messenger ﷺ have described as sinful.

Protect the family from sin

There is one more thing to think of. A man cannot hope to give up sins unless he corrects his surroundings. If anyone hopes to reform himself but does not pay heed to his family who are on the wrong path, he can never give up sins. If his family members are on the wrong path then no matter how much he tries to set himself on the right path; without worrying about them, one day or the other they will lead him astray. Therefore, it is as much important to get one's family members on the right path as it is to correct oneself. One must always be cautious about one's wife and children that they do not fall off the right path.

Women's behaviour is significant

In this regard, women play a significant role. If they decide to mold their lives according to the Commands of Allah and His Messenger ﷺ then the atomosphere in the house becomes very ideal because a woman is the main character in a house. If she is obedient to Allah and His Messenger ﷺ, the entire household stands reformed, but if she pays no attention to it and does not observe the veil, keeps her hair uncovered and leads a sinful life then the atmosphere in the house becomes very bad. Therefore, women must keep themselves away from sin.

Disobedience and sin

What is sin? And, what are the consequences and repercussions of sin? We must understand these things first. Sin is a disobedience. Suppose, an elder tells someone to do something but he refuses to do it, or if he forbids him to do something but he insists on doing it then he is being disobedient to the elder. If anyone is disobedient to Allah and His Messenger ﷺ then he is committing a sin. The results of being disobedient to Allah are grave to an unimaginable extent.

Damages of sin - first, selfishness

The first damage caused by sin is that the sinner is selfish, ungrateful and usurper of the rights of his Benefactor. His Benefactor who has created man who is always drowned in His blessings. Allah's favours cover him from head to foot. Each organ of a man's body is valuable and significant but becuase he enjoys them gratis, man does not appreciate them. It is only when anyone loses one of these organs, or has a defective one, that he realises the significance and the loss. Look at the eye or the ear or the tongue. Look at sound health or the sustenance one gets morning and evening - how great a blessing each one of these are! The Great Benefactor who has covered us with so many blessings asks us to desist from only certain things. But, we cannot obey Him even in the little He asks us and are thus involved in the first defect of sin, selfishness, ungratefulness and usurption of the rights of our Benefactor.

Second damage, rusting of the hearts

The second damage caused by sin is described by the Prophet ﷺ in a Hadith. He said, "If a man commits sin for the first time a dark spot shows itself on his heart. What this spot is, Allah alone knows! When that man sins again, a second spot appears on his heart and if he sins the third time, a third spot comes up on his heart. However, if he repents, meanwhile, then the spots are effaced but if he does not express repentance and persists in sins then the spots keep multiplying and cover up his heart as marks of rust and his heart becomes corroded. When a man's heart is corroded, it no longer can listen to the Truth and it becomes inattentive and indifferent so that it will not recognise sin and he does not sense the repurcussious of sin. It is as though he is bereft of intelligence.

Difference in a believer's and a transgressor's idea of sin

Sayyidina Abdullah bin Mas'ud رضی اللہ عنہ reports a Hadith which describes a Believer who has never sinned as one who sees it as a mountain overhead about to crush him while a transgressing sinner holds sin very lightly like a fly that he drives away which means that he does not feel sorry after committing sin. A Believer, on the other hand, who fears it as he fears a mountain overhead,if he happens to conunit a sin,indulges himself in sorrow and remorse.

A Belivers condition on missing a pious opportunity Commission of a sin apart, a Believer becomes sad on missing an opportunity to do a pious deed. He becomes very upset and regrets the lost opportunity. Mawlana Rumi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ has said about it:

بر دلِ سالک ہزاراں غم بود
گر ز باغِ دلِ خلالے کم بود

"A mystic behaves as though he has lost too much when he misses an opportunity to do a little good." When these are his feelings on missing an opportunity to do good how would he feel if he commits a sin. May Allah protect us from the condition that sins cause spots on our hearts and we begin to consider them insignificant. So, this is one of the damages that sins cause. They make the sinner become inattentive and in different to sins and his heart becomes covered with a veil, as it were.

Third damage, darkness

The point is that we have become accustomed to the environment of sin so we do not notice the darkness and abhorrence. There is somuch darkness from sin and excessive abhorrence to it that a man blessed by Allah with perfect faith cannot tolerate it. Mawlana Muhammad Y'aqub Nanotawi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ once ate a morsel of food from unlawful income which upset him for two months and he was tempted to commit one or the other sin. He ate the morsel when he was invited to a meal by someone and learnt after eating it that the man's income was unlawfully acquired.

Example of being accustomed to sin

We do not become upset of the darkness and do not feel abhorrence for it because we have become accustomed to sin. Our behaviour may be compared to a bad-smelling house offensive to the mind. If any outsider enters it, he will find it difficult to stay even a while in the house, but anyone already staying in it will not sense the difference because he is accustome to the smell. He will not understand why anyone should rebuke him for staying in the offensive atmosphere. The other man whom Allah has protected from the bad-smelling house and kept in a fragrant atmosphere will be repulsed from a distance when he gets the bad smell. In the same way, Believers whose hearts are devoted to Allah and are clean like a shining mirror are replused from the darkness and abhorrence of sin. This then is the third defect of sin; darkness and abhornce.

Fourth damage is to intelligence

The fourth damage from persistent sin is that the sinner suffers loss of intelligence. His intelligence quotient drops and his thinking and comprehending powers toe an evil path. He regards good as evil and vice versa. He will not receive sound advice even if given politely. He is the one of whom Allah has said: "He whom Allah leaves astray cannot find guidance."Allah does not let anyone go astray unless he insists on sinning and disobedience so that he cannot understand Truth.

Sin caused the devil to suffer intellectually

The example of Satan is before us. He is the fountain head of sin and its originator because he was the first one to commit a sin. Not only did he sin himself but he tempted the eminent Messenger Sayyidina Adam عليه السلام to sin. The consequences were that his mind became weak. When Allah asked him to prostrate before Sayyidina Adam عليه السلام he did not obey the Command but presented excuses. He said that he was created out of fire but (sayyidna) Adam(عليه السلام) out of dust. On the face of it, his reasoning appeared sound because fire is superior to dust. He could not see that the Creator who created fire also created dust and if He Commands fire to bow down before dust then no superiority rests with fire and dust is not then inferior. He could not understand that and was thus exiled from the Heaven, accursed a nd dis-honoured. The opportunity to repent is always present not only for mankind but also for the devil. If he had used his senses correctly he could have said to Allah, "I have erred. Forgive me. I will do what You say." But, he is not prepared to say that, even today.

A lesson-giving incident with the Devil

I have heard a story from my Shaikh. Although it seems to be an Israili fabrication, it does give a lesson. It runs: when Sayyidina Musa عليه السلام was going to the Mount Tur to receive the honour of a conversation with Allah, the devil met him on the way. The devil said to Sayyidina Musa عليه السلام, " You will have a conversation with Allah, do a little thing for me." "What is it?" Sayyidina Musa عليه السلام asked. "I have been rejected and accursed and there is no way I can be forgiven. Do recommend me to Allah, perhaps I may receive deliverance. " Sayyiddina Musa عليه السلام agreed to speak for him and when he arrived at the Mount Tur, he did have a conversation with Allah but he forgot to convey the message of Satan. As he was returning, Allah Himself reminded him if he had brought a message from anyone. He said, "O yes! I did forget. I met Iblis on the way and he seemed very worried and requested to be shown a way to salvation. O Allah! You are Most Merciful. You forgive everyone. He repents so do forgive him. "Allah asked him, "When did I say that the door through repentance is shut? I am willing to forgive. Let him know that his repentance will be granted. He had disobeyed me when I had asked him to prostrate before Adam and even now it is very easy. He may go to his grave and prostrate himself there. I will forgive him. "Sayyidina Musa عليه السلام said, "This is a very easy thing." So, he returned with the message and met the devil again and he asked what had become of his petition. "Your case is very easy. You had made a mistake when you did not prostrate yourself before Sayyidina Adam عليه السلام but Allah has said that He will forgive you if you go and prostrate yourself before the grave of Adam عليه السلام." In reply the devil said, "How astonishing! I did not bow myself before a living creature, how do you expect me to prostrate before a dead man? How may I bow before his grave? I cannot do it." His reply was prompted by his lower intelligence.

It is sin that lowers the sinner's intelligence so that he cannot see the right thing.

One cannot ask to be told of the Wisdom behind everything

There are certain sins that the Qur'an and Hadith have clearly defined as unlawful. Those people who commit these sins present their reasoning and arguments when they are reminded that the sins are unlawful. They ask why these sins are declared unlawful and they enumerate the benefits of the sinful act. These people must realise that they are not masters but slaves of their Creator and they must place themselves in the place of their servants who cannot ask them why they give a command and what is the wisdom behind it. Just as a servant must do what he is told to do whether he fathoms the wisdom behind the command or not, so too must Allah's creatures do what they are told whether they know why or not.

We are creatures not servants

A servant whom we employ is only our servant and not a slave, and we have not created him so he is not our creature. Yet, we will not allow him to ask us for the reasons behind our orders to him. But, we are creatures of Allah Who has created us yet we seek to know the wisdom behind His Commands. Our behaviour is as foolish as that of our servant who might ask us the same question, rather our behaviour is more foolish - because our servant is a human being like us and his intelligence is at par with ours but our intelligence cannot grasp the wisdom of Allah in giving a Command. The reason we ask that question is that our intelligence has grown low from committing excessive sins.

The eye-opening account of Mahmud and Ayyaz

My Shaikh Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayyi رحمة الله عليه, had narrated an event that shows a lesson. He said that the famous conqueror and King, Mahmud Ghaznavi, had a very favourite slave, Ayyaz, whom he loved much. Since Ayyaz was the King's favourite slave, other people observed that he was given preferance over eminent men and it was correct that Mahmud Ghaznavi did not heed the advice of his ministers and governors as much as he did the advice of Ayyaz.

Mahmud Ghaznavi decided to demonstrate to his governors and ministers why he gave Ayyaz a preferential treatment. Once the King received an expensive diamond as a gift. It was a beautiful piece of jewel. At that time the King's court had assembled and everyone saw the expensive, valuable diamond. They all praised it, too. The King called the Prime Minister to him and asked him about the diamond and the Prime Minister sang its praises and said that it was a unique piece, unmatched anywhere in the world. The King then asked him to hurl the diamond on the ground and break it into pieces! The Prime Minister was taken aback at the order and he pleaded with his King to rescind his decision and retain the diamond, putting forward a number excuses..... The King asked him to take his seat, and gave the same command to another of his Ministers who too made similar excuses and then the King asked every other Minister to do it but all of them excused themselves from executing the King's command to break the diamond.

A diamond may break but not a command

Finally, Mahmud Ghaznavi called Ayyaz and asked him to do what he had asked his Ministers to do, namely, smash the diamond! Ayyaz picked up the piece and hurled it on the ground and it broke down into fragments, small pieces. When the King saw that the diamond was broken, he scolded Ayyaz for having broken the diamond. "Did you not see the great Ministers before you, very intelligent people, how they dared not break the diamond when I asked them to do it. Are all of them insane? You did not hesitate to break it, why?" Ayyaz appologised for his action first, "Your Majesty! I have made a mistake." The King asked him, "Why did you break it?" Ayyaz submitted to him, "I said to myself that after all it was a diamond and no matter how valuable, if it breaks it is not a great loss and not very bad but your command should not be broken. Your command is more valuable than the diamond so I thought it would be worse if the diamond was preferred over your command. That is why I broke the diamond."

Slave of the Command

Mahmud Ghaznavi then told the Ministers and dignitaries that the difference between them and Ayyaz lay in the fact that while they sought wisdom behind a command, Ayyaz was 'slave of the command' and did what he was told to do.

What is the reality of the Command of Mahmud Ghaznavi? His intelligence was limited as was his Ministers and Ayyaz's intelligence. It behoves the Creator who created everything. No matter what breaks-a diamond, a heart, the sentiments of someone-His Command should not be disobeyed. It is foolish to try to find wisdom in the Commands of Allah; anyone who is senseless does it and his condition results from sinning. The more a man sins the more insensible he becomes. Thus we see that sins lower the sinner's intelligence.

Enlightenment follows giving up of sins

Let anyone repent before Allah for some time at least and give up sins for a few days. Blessings will flow his way from Allah and he will receive Light. He will begin to understand what he never understood before. The Qur'an says:

إِنْ تَتَّقُوا اللَّهَ يَجْعَلْ لَكُمْ فُرْقَانًا (سورة الانفال:٢٩)

If you fear Allah, He will give you a criterion

(to judge between right and wrong). (Al-anfal, 8:29)

If one fears Allah, he will keep himself away from the unlawful, disobedience and sins. Allah will give him the ability to judge between right and wrong. Today, we do not distinguish between right and wrong because we have stained our intelligence after persistent sinning.

Fifth damage, it stops raining

The punishment to the sinner will be awarded to him in the Hereafter truly but the inauspiciousness of sin is apparent on him in this world too, and he suffers a fifth damage. A Hadih tells us that when Muslims deny zakah, Allah stops rainfall over them.

Sixth damage, Illnesses

The sixth damage is seen when men involve themselves in immorality, vulgarity and lewdness. Allah afflicts them with illnesses which were unknown to their forefathers. We have the example of Aids which is threatening everyone in the world. The Holy Prophet ﷺ had said fourteen hundred years ago that such illnesses will afflict men. Every sin has a peculiarity and Allah reveals that to us in this very world and the punishment against the sin comes to be awarded.

Seventh damage, Killing

A Hadith tells us that towards the final times a period will come when يكثر الهرج "Killings will be rampant." Man will be killed and neither he nor his heirs will find out why he was killed or who killed him. Also لايدرى القاتل لم قتل وه المقتول فيم قتل "The murderer will not know why he kills and the murdered will not know why he was killed." If we look at this Hadith in relation to what is happening today, no one knows why a murder is committed. In the earlier days, when a murder was committed, it was soon found out why it was committed; either there was an enmity or some other reason. Today, the reason is not known and the murderer is not traced out. It looks as though the Holy Prophet ﷺ had seen fourteen hundred years ago the situation as it exists today and reported it to us. This is happening because of our deeds and our sins. Excess of sining has brought about this situation.

The only solution to killings

Everyone tries to find out a remedy to the killings. Someone suggests a political solution and others want different people to talk together and compromise. We do not accept that the real cause for the unrest is commission of too many sins. If a people are given to sinning, Allah inflicts on them punishment in this manner. So, we must pay attention to it. May Allah grant us perfect intelligence to give up sins. Let us first repent before Allah for our sins and seek His protection from the consequences of the sins. "O Allah! remove the punishment from us!"

We must worry about sins more than about Wazifah

While it is excellent to involve oneself in optional worship, it is better than that to refrain from sinning. I receive many telephone calls every day, especially from women, and the callers ask me to recommend to them a supplication for their peculiar predicament. Some of them suppose that there should be a different supplication for their problem or a different wazifah (a set of repetitious religious exercises). Let them know that the supplications and wazifahs are excellent where they are concerned but what is more important is to avoid and shun all sins. We must shun sins ourselves and get our family members to shun sins too. Unless we do this, we will not reap the benefits of the repetitious exercises. They can only be helpful if we are prepared to shun sins. Once we make the effort then the supplications and wazifahs give strength in our hearts to fight temptation. But, if we do not care to give up sin then it does not matter if we offer voluntary worship and recite wazifah, we will not benefit from them.

Review sins

In short, we must work to save ourselves from sin. We must review our daily life and make a list of the sins that we commited. We must investigate in what ways we have displeased Allah. Then, we must see which of the sins we can give up immediately, and we must stop doing those. As for the sins that we can give up after some changes in our life, we must begin to work in that direction. Also, we must repent from our sins and seek the forgiveness of Allah and we must turn to Allah. May Allah give us the strength to keep away from sins. Aameen!

How to get ahead of one who offers Tahajjud Prayers

Sayyidah Ayshah رضی اللہ عنہا has reported a Hadith, "If anyone desires to overcome a devoted worshipper who offers tahajjud then he must protect himself from sin." Thus, we read from great religious men that they kept vigil in the night worshipping Allah, offered voluntary prayer in large numbers and recited the Qur'an profusely. If we wish to overtake them in piety then we must give up the sinful life completely. This will secure us salvation just as those religious men obtained salvation for themsleves because they too kept away from sins. The only difference will be that their ranks would be higher than ours. If anyone of them was involved in sin then we will overtake him because of our abstinence from sin.

Example of a Believer and his Faith

Sayyidina Abu Said Khudri رضی اللہ عنہ has reported the Holy Prophet ﷺ as saying, "The example of a Believer and his faith is seen in the example of a horse tetherred to a peg. The horse can move around but not beyond a limit. The tether does not allow him beyond that. The horse moves around within the limit and then comes back to the corner where it is tied up. Thus the tether serves two purposes - it does not allow the horse to go beyond a certain limit and it serves as its refuge too when the horse comes to the corner and sits down."

After citing this example, the Holy Prophet ﷺ said, "A Believer's tether in his faith. It restricts him within a certain limit and if he tries to exceed it, the tether of faith will pull him back. After moving about, the Believer will return to rest at the corner." It means that a Believer has such a strong faith and belief that it does not allow him to sin. If he lapses into sin by mistake sometimes, he returns to his tether, the faith. The Holy Prophet ﷺ gave a very beautiful example. May Allah help us to strengthen our tethers.

Recording sins is delayed

A Hadith teaches us that there are two angels with every man. One of them records his pious works and the other his evil deeds. My Shaikh, Mawlana Masihullah Khan, told me that the angel who records good deeds has the instructions to record them that very instant he performs the good deeds. The other angel who is in-charge of recording evil deeds has the instructions to consult the first angel before recording the man's evil deed. The first angel tells him not to record and allow him time to repent and seek forgiveness. If he sins again and does not repent from his first sin, the second angel asks the first one again, "Shall I record it?" "No. Not yet." If the man sins a third time, he asks again whether he should record it. He answers, "Yes. Write it down." The sin is recorded in the man's Deed of Records. Allah has shown leniency to His creatures by recording piety on the very instant but recording of evil is held in abeyance, perchance the sinner might repent.

Repent at the very instant a sin is committed

Our religious elders have advised us to repent and seek forgiveness the moment we happen to commit a sin so that the sin is not recorded in our Record of Deeds. They have also advised that we should repent and seek forgiveness immediately on the very place the sin is committed so that on the Day of Resurrection when that piece of land testifies to our sin, it also bears witness to our repentance.

"This man had committed a sin when he stood over me and then repented over it while he still stood over me." This is in conformity with the saying of the Holy Prophet ﷺ that faith is the tether of a Believer, when he moves about, he returns back to the peg to which he is tied.

Keeping away from sin

We must first of all endeavour and resolve to shun sin. Without an endeavour and a resolve we cannot keep away from sin. If inspite of our endeavour and resolve we happen to commit a sin by mistake, then we must immediately repent over it and seek forgiveness for that. We must turn to Allah. If we do that, we should hope to be forgiven by Him. But, the greatest tragedy is that instead of repenting and seeking forgiveness and thinking about it, we strive to justify our behaviour.

May Allah save us from the burden of sins. Aameen!

Praise belongs to Allah. We praise Him, and ask Him for His help and seek His forgiveness. We believe in Him. We seek refuge in Allah from the mischief of our souls and from our evil deeds. He whom Allah guides,none can mislead and he whom He leaves astray, none can guide. We bear witness that there is no god but Allah, Who is Alone and has no partner, and we bear witness that Sayyidna Muhammad ﷺ is His Slave and Messenger, may Allah bless him and his family and Companions رضی اللہ عنہم , and may He favour him and give him peace, a complete peace.

Sayyidina Abu Sa'id al Khudri رضی اللہ عنہ has said: I heard the Messenger of Allah ﷺ say, "If anyone amongst you sees something disreputable, he should correct it with his hand; but if he is not able to do it then he should do it with his tongue; if he cannot do it (with it) then he should (abhor it) in his heart. And this is the least form of faith." (Sahih Muslim, Book of Faith Chapter XX Hadith#79)

Three steps to forbidding the Disreputable

In this Hadith, the Holy Prophet ﷺ is quoted as saying that if anyone of you sees something wrong being done, he must not only stop it with his hand but also correct or modify it. If he does not have the strength to stop it and correct it, he must prevent it with his tongue and ask the perpetrator to modify it. "Brother! What you are doing is not right. Instead of that do it this way.....". This is the second stage. If he cannot even use his tongue then the least he should do is think it wrong and correct it in his mind. About this third stage the Ptrophet ﷺ said that it is the weakest sign of faith.

Four ways to prevent loss

Allah has shown us in Surah al-Asr, a general rule to prevent loss:

وَالْعَصْرِ ○ اِنَّ الْاِنْسَانَ لَفِیْ خُسْرٍ ○ اِلَّا الَّذِیْنَ اٰمَنُوْا وَعَمِلُوا الصّٰلِحٰتِ وَتَوَاصَوْا بِالْحَقِّ وَتَوَاصَوْا بِالصَّبْرِ ○

By the time, surely man is in loss, except those who believe and do righteous deeds, and exhort one another to Truth, and exhort one another to perseverance. (al-Asar. 103:1-3)

The four ways shown in these verses are to believe, to be righteous, to exhort one another to Truth and to exhort one another to perserverance. 'Truth' implies meeting obligations (the fard) and 'perseverance' means to keep away from sin. Thus, Allah has not said that belief and doing righteous deeds are enough to protect oneself from loss but He has said that it is also necessary to exhort one another to Truth and Perseverance.

A righteous man overturned

The Holy Prophet ﷺ narrated the case of a people who were involved in sin, disobedience and disreputable behaviour. Allah, therefore, Commanded His angels to upturn their settlements so that the top went down and the bottom came up. Sayyidina Jibril علیہ السلام asked whether anyone was to be spared because he knew of a righteious man in that settlement who was never known to have disobeyed and had devoted himself to worship all his life, never having sinned. Allah said to him that the whole settlement was to be destroyed including that man who was pious as far as his own life was concerned but he never frowned on seeing sins being committed and never considererd it evil. There never was a change on his face and he never took any steps to stop sins from being committed.

Even the sinless will suffer punishment

It is towards this thing that Allah refers in another verse:

وَاتَّقُوْا فِتْنَةً لَّا تُصِيْبَنَّ الَّذِيْنَ ظَلَمُوْا مِنْكُمْ خَآصَّةً (۸:۲۵ سورۃ الانفال)

> And fear the trial which shall not afflict in particular the evildoers alone among you (al - Anfal, 8:25)

That is, it will afflict the sinless too because, though they may be without sin to the eye, they took no steps to resist evil. They did not even speak against it. So, they too will be punished. In short, one of our significant duties is to command the reputable, the righteous behaviour and to forbid wrong or the disreputable behaviour. But, today we turn our eyes away from this duty. We see wrong being done and we do save ourselves from that but do not advise other people or try to save them from evil.

The first stage in resisting evil

We have seen in the very first Hadith quoted in this discourse that the Prophet ﷺ described three stages of resisting evil. The first of these is to stop it by the hand. If anyone had the strength to stop it by his hand and he does not do so then he too commits a sin. For instance, if the head of a family who has authority over it should stop his family members, his dependants, from doing a wrong if he sees them perpetrating it; if he knows that he will be obeyed and there will be no uprising because of his action. It is fard (an absolute obligation) on him to do so in such circumstances by his hand and authority. It is wrong of him not to resist evil merely not to displease someone or break someone's heart. In relation to a Command of Allah, breaking someone's heart is not a thing to worry about.

An incident with poet Fayzi

In the times of king Akbar, there was a poet with a pen-name, Fayzi. Once he was having his beard shaved by a barber. A righteous man passed by and said to him

آغا ریش مے تراشی ؟

"Agha! Are you having your beard shaved?"

Fayzi was not only a poet but he also had claims to religious learning and was regarded as a scholar. It was he who had written a commentary on the Qur'an without any dotted letter (like ب ث ض..... etc.). So, the righteous man meant to tell him, "You are a scholar and know that beard is the sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ yet you have it shaved? Fayzi retorted, "Sure, I am having the beard shaved but not breaking anyone's heart." In other words Fayzi taunted him that he was only committing a sin, while the pious man had broken his heart. The elderly man replied,

ولے دلِ رسول اللہ مے خراشی

> "Right, (you are not breaking anyone else's heart) but you are breaking the heart of the Messenger of Allah ﷺ".

The Messenger of Allah ﷺ has disallowed us to do something and he was doing it in spite of that.

Do not care if a heart breaks

People do say that we must not pain anyone or cause heart burning. It is true but if we do something politely without degrading someone yet he takes it to heart then let him take it to heart because the injunctions of Allah and His Messenger ﷺ are more important. Of course, the reformer must not adopt a style that breaks other's heart or is insulting to him or degrades him. Rather, he must advise the other man politely when he is alone and if in spite of that he takes it to heart, let him do that.

Those who neglect the Fard

Thus if a head of family, who has authority over it and who is obeyed, sees a family member doing a wrong or committing a sin but he does not stop him and correct him, then he is committing a sin. It is a fard (his duty) to correct the wrong-doer by his hand. In the same way if a teacher does not stop his pupil from wrong-doing, a Shaikh does not stop his disciple or an officer does not forbid his subordinate -although each of them has authority over his junior - then they are guilty of neglecting a fard and are thus sinning.

If there is fear of mischief then resist with the tongue

However, sometimes there is fear of mischief being created when anyone is stopped or that person might become rebellious. He might then commit a graver sin. In such a case, the reformer may not use his hand but may resist with the tongue. Mawlana Ashraf Ali Thanavi رحمة الله عليه has said that when the Hadith says, "if he is not able to do so by the hand then he should do it with the tongue," it includes this situation where rebellion or mischief is possible. For example, vulgar pictures are hung outside cinema halls. Now, if anyone has the ability and takes along a few men who all of them bring down the vulgar picture then as a result a mischief will be created and all those who pulled down the picture will find themselves in hot waters. So, their physical ability does not come under the purview of strength and ability that the Hadith calls on and they are advised to resist only by the tongue.

Head of family must stop these things

The basic reason for the wrong that is rampant in our society today is that the heads of our families join their family members in doing wrong instead of resisting the sins and correcting them. This can be seen also in the marriage functions. Innumerable wrongs are committed in these functions, and these range from the minor wrongs to the very grave evils. It is now becoming very common to hold these functions without separate arrangements for men and women; there is now a combined gathering in these functions. This is happening because the head of a family does nor object to the evil and he neither stops it with his hand nor with his tongue and in fact, he participates without demur. The excuses such heads of families present for their own participation is that they cannot help it and they have to join because it was a family affair. Rather, it ought to have been the other way and the views of the head of family should have been respected and he should have refused to attend unless separate arrangements were made for men and women. If the family members insist on their stand then they should not object to his absence from the function. If the heads of families will not adopt this attitude then, on the Day of Ressurrection, they will be called to account for their behaviour. They could stop the evil by hand by refusing to attend themselves.

A marriage function or dance party

Today, we are surrendering ourselves before evil at every step. Most of these evils were unknown in the past but gradually, one evil after another came to be adopted so that there is a plethora of evils in our marriage functions. Not one family member ever resisted an evil, thus allowing more to be taken up. The mixed gatherings have led to young boys and girls dancing together. The head of the family has surrendered on this issue too and willingly sees his daughters and daughters-in-law dance. He willingly participates. Surely! How long will this go on? Unless a few people who matter refuses to participate in these functions these things will not stop. They must say, "If these things continue, we will not attend." They will have to give them up or they shall cease to have relations with these people.

We do find that some people refuse to attend marriage functions because of an insult they had suffered in the past or an improper treatement metted out to them. They will compromise only when amends are made and they attend the ceremony only after, apologies, are offered for past misdeeds. This could serve as a precedent and on the basis of this approach some important people must adopt a similar attitude that they would attend only when the evil practices are abolished.

Consequences could be dangerous

However, sometimes a situation is very delicate and instead of reforming things a stern attitude brings about unforseen reactions. Therefore, one has to be very careful in adopting an attitude. A proper time must be chosen and the circumstances must be considered before taking a stand. There are no hard and fast rules to tell us when this should be done or not. But as far as mixed gatherings of men and women are concerned a strict decision should be taken against it. If we do not stop it now, it might be too late and the consequences of our indifference could be dangerous. There is still time. We must have pity on ourselves. We must remember the questioning we will go through in our graves and we should realise that we will have to face Allah. Let us reconsider our attitude and give up the indifference. May Allah guide us to act correctly Aameen !

The second stage in resisting evil

The second stage taught to us in the Hadith under discussion is to use the tongue if we cannot use the hand. To use the tongue implies to speak to the evil-doer compasionately and tell him politely, "Brother, what you are doing is not correct. Please do not do that." When using the tongue, the principle should be remembered that speaking the Truth is not the same thing as throwing a stone. Neither is inviting other people to Truth or missionary work like hurling stones. These duties are done with goodwill, love and compassion. Allah has instructed us clearly:.

ادْعُ إِلَىٰ سَبِيلِ رَبِّكَ بِالْحِكْمَةِ وَالْمَوْعِظَةِ الْحَسَنَةِ (سورة النحل: ١٢٥)

(O Prophet) Call to the way of your Lord with wisdom and goodly exhortation.... (an-Nahl.16:125)

Sayyidina Musa عليه السلام advised to speak gently

My respected father, Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه used to remind us that when Allah asked Sayyidina Musa عليه السلام to go to the Pharaoh, He cautioned him and Sayyidina Harun عليه السلام to speak gently to him.

قُوْلًا لَهٗ قَوْلًا لَيِّنًا (سورہ طٰہٰ:٤٤)

Yet speak to him a gentle word....(Ta Ha. 20:44).

It must be noted that Allah advised them in this manner concerning Fir'awn (the Pharaoh) of whom He knew that the unfortunate man will never believe but remain adamant in his disbelief. My father used to say, "You are not a reformer higher than Sayyidina Musa عليه السلام and your subjects cannot be more misled than Fir'awn. So, when He asked Sayyidina Musa عليه السلام to speak softly to Fir'awn the Command applies to you more strongly. Let not your tongue move like a sword when you resist evil."

Manners of resisting by the tongue

In fact, there are certain manners of resisting wrong by the tongue. The reformer must not tell the wrong-doer of his wrong in the presence of other people, he must not insult or belittle him and must not use a style that disheartens him. Rather, The must speak to him when they are alone and must show love and compassion when correcting him. Some people put forward the excuse that gentle words have no effect on the wrong-doers. These people must know that if they do not pay heed to their advice then the reformers are not supervisors. Allah has not placed upon them the duty to compell others by their tongue to reform. The only duty they have is to be true in intention and use a true method to tell the Truth. Thus, the intention must be to reform. When someone is ill, the doctor will not scold him for being ill. He will treat him kindly and have pity on him. In the same way, the wrong-doer is actually ill and entitled to be shown pity. Therefore, The must not be scolded but advised with love and compassion.

The case of a young man

A young man presented himself before the Holy Prophet ﷺ and requested to be allowed to commit adultery because he could not check himself. Observe it, the young man seeks the permission of the Prophet ﷺ for such an act as is forbidden by every religion. If anyone asks a Shaikh or mentor for such permission, the religious man will run wild with anger. But may we be ransomed to him–the Prophet ﷺ did not display the least bit of anger. He knew that the man was sick and his condition is pitiable. So, he called the young man to him and placed his hand on his shoulder and said, "You have put a question to me. May I also ask you a question? " The young man said, "O Messenger of Allah! What is your question?" He said, "Tell me, will you agree to some other man wishing to do the same thing with your sister?" He said, "No! Messenger of Allah" Then the Prophet ﷺ asked "With your daughter? Or, your mother?" Certainly not, I will not like that." "Then, the woman with whom you will do it is also someone's sister, someone's daughter or someone's mother. And, how will those people agree for this thing to be done to their sister, daughter or mother?" The young man then said, "O Messenger of Allah ﷺ, I have now understood you. I will not do it again and I begin to detest this thing from now." This is how the Prophet ﷺ corrected the young man.

The case of a villager

A villager entered the Masjid Nabawi and hurriedly offered two raka'at prayer and then made the following supplication

اَللّٰهُمَّ ارْحَمْنِیْ وَمُحَمَّدًا وَلَا تَرْحَمْ مَعَنَا اَحَدًا

O Allah! Have mercy on me and on Muhammad ﷺ and do not have mercy on anyone else besides us.

The Holy Prophet ﷺ heard his supplication and told him that he had restricted Allah's great mercy. After a little while this man urinated in the courtyard of the Masjid Nabawi. When the Companions رضی الله عنهم saw him in the act they rushed towards him to stop him and they began to reprimand him but the Prophet ﷺ prevented them from that. He said "Do not stop him from urinating. Let him finish it." After he had finished, the Prophet ﷺ asked the Companions رضی الله عنهم to wash the place and purify it. He then called the man and explained to him that the mosque was a house of Allah that must be kept clean and pure. He was kind and loving to him. But, if anyone were to behave in this way before us, we would teach him the lesson of his life. The Prophet ﷺ did not even scold him.

Our method of inviting to Religion

In this Hadith, the Prophet ﷺ showed us the manners of propagation of religion and teachings. Today, we are not interested really in propagating religion but if anyone of us is moved in that direction he becomes a menace for the rest of the people. If he sees anyone committing some mistake in the mosque, he will fly into a rage over the poor fellow. This is not the sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. There is a way for everything to be said and done. We must understand that the other man is also a slave of Allah and is somehow involved in the mistake; he needs to be told what is right that he may correct himself. The reformer must not be driven by the urge to publicise his knowledge or superiority because that mars the results of missionary effort.

Only the message be conveyed

A doubt arises in certain minds that if people are stopped with soft words they will not listen and stop. The answer to this is that it is not our responsibility to make them listen. The Qur'an tells us of a people who were disobedient to a great extent and there was no hope of their reforming. Allah's punishment was about to descend on them but some pious people talked to them mildly before the punishment overtook them. They were admonishing them gently when one of those people said:

لِمَ تَعِظُوْنَ قَوْماً ِ اللهُ مُهْلِكُهُمْ (سورة الاعراف: ١٦٤)

"Why do you admonish a people whom Allah is about to destroy...."(al- A'raf. 7:164)"

"What hope is there that they would reform?." But, these people gave a wonderful reply مَعْذِرَةً اِلٰى رَبِّكُمْ."To be able to offer an excuse to your Lord (that we did our duty)...."(al A'raf.7:164) "We know that they are a stubborn people who will not listen but we instruct them, advise them, that we may be able to say to Allah when He would call us to account for our behaviour that we did try to advise them when they committed the sin before us and we were not one of them." Thus, anyone engaged in preaching must keep this answer in mind while he preaches; whether other people then pay heed or not, he stands absolved of his responsibility. Sayyidina Nuh عليه السلام preached for nine hundred and fifty years during which time only nineteen people became Muslims. He will not now be taken to task because he was not responsible to convert all of them to Islam. Therefore, we must also say the Truth with a True intention in a True way with soft sentiments and goodwill. Insha Allah, we will be absolved our of responsibility. Besides, if one persists in this mission with these principles then Allah causes his efforts to bear fruit.

The third stage in resisting evil

The Hadith under discussion tells us that the third stage in resisting evil also the last is to think of it as evil. This is arrived at after one does not have the strength to stop evil by his hand or by his tongue. The question does arise that the second stage is to resist by the tongue and if one does not have the strength to use it only then the third stage arrives but there is always the strength to use the tongue, then how can one say he does not have the strength? The meaning is that there may be fear that by resisting with the tongue the consequences may be serious and mischief may be created. In such cases, it is better to keep quiet. For instance, if there is a possibility that someone is violating a sunnah may make fun of it if he is admonished then it is better not to tell him anything because until then he was violating the sunnah but after being admonished he makes fun of it so he may enter into disbelief. It is then better to think it bad in the heart.

How is evil corrected with the heart

If the Hadith is translated literally it will run, "if a man has not the strength to correct an evil with his tongue then he must change (correct) it with his heart." It is not said merely that "he consider it bad in his heart, he is asked to change it with his heart. How can that be done? The Ulama have explained that if anyone could not use his hand and his tongue to modify a wrong because he did not have the strength to do it then he should feel so much hatred and uneasiness for it in his heart that his feelings should be apparent on his expression and he should knit his brows. He should look out for an opportunity to use his hand and his tongue to correct the evil. If a man gets it in his heart that something is wrong then he is occupied in finding ways to correct it with his hand and tongue. Thus, if such a man's children are spoil and he tries to correct them with his hand by beating them and using force but it has no effect on them and he also gets no results by trying to hammer sense into them by his tongue then this man is constantly occupied in thinking of ways to correct them and he loses sleep and is very uneasy on that account.This uneasiness and restlessness finally shows him how and when to get one's message across and there shall come the day when his efforts bear fruit.

Must grow uneasiness within ourselves

We see around us many disreputable things happening, many evils and sins being committed. Suppose we do not have the strength to change them with our hands or with our tongues so we are left with the third choice. Then let every one of us grow into himself an uneasiness concerning what is happening around us and worrry about how to correct the atmosphere. This uneasiness and restlessness should grow to such an extent that it is comparable to stomachache that causes one to be uneasy as long as the pain lasts. Ultimately, these evils and sins will end and a way will be found out to do that.

The uneasiness felt by The Prophet ﷺ

The Prophet ﷺ had found himself in a society where sin, associating with God, disbelief, idolatry, open rebellion with God and disobedience were common and everyday affairs. No soul was ready to listen to him. It was then that he was commanded that he must reform the people. For three years after he was made Prophet ﷺ, he was not allowed to preach and invite other people to the Religion. During these three years he watched the evil going on in society and secluded himself in the cave Hira beseaching Allah all the while. He felt much uneasy and restless watching the evil around him and thinking how it could be remedied. Finally, his uneasiness found for him a solution and, after that, he was allowed to preach and invite other people to the Religion and he was able to bring about a revolution through his call. The Qur'an describes his restlessness.

لَعَلَّكَ بَاخِعٌ نَّفْسَكَ اَنْ لَّا يَكُوْنُوْا مُؤْمِنِيْنَ (سورة الشعراء:٣)

It may be that you(O Prophet) will kill yourself with grief, because they believe not. (Ash-Shu'ara. 26:4)

Allah encourages the Prophet ﷺ and tells him: ان عليك الا البلاغ "Surely you are responsible for nothing but the (delivery of the) message." (Ash-Shu'ara. 42:48)

"You should not worry yourself too much or place a burden over yourself!" Yet he was so worried that he would wish to rescue everyone he met from Hell and to convey the message of religion to him.

We have given up arms

Today, however, we lack the zeal and spirit. We do not consider evil to be as such. If any of us do not do a wrong ourselves, we consider ourselves safe fromit. We use the excuse of old age or that we are ashamed to change our life-stlye at such an add age. Like wise, we do not regard the wrongs of our children to be evil, otherwise we would be worried and restless about it. We let our childern live as they do and argue that we have spent our lives as we chose too. There fore, they should do the same. This is why we do not stop them from doing wrong. nor do we feel uneasy and restless on their behaviour.

How may words have the desired result

If anyone feels worried on account of society then Allah makes his words effective. Mawlana Nanotawi رحمة الله عليه used to say, "That person is entitled to preach and invite who has the desire to do that work in a manner one desires to accomplish something very necessary and basic. For instance, if someone is hungry he will be restless until he gets something to eat and unless the same spirit moves the missionary he is not entitled to preach and call." Shah Isma'il Shahid رحمة الله عليه was an example. He had such a spirit of missionary zeal that in each of his sermons hundreds of men repented from sin at his hands because he spoke from the core of his heart and his words pierced the hearts of his listeners.

An incident in the life of Shah Isma 'il Shahid رحمة الله عليه

Once he delivered a sermon at the Jami Masjid, Delhi and spoke for about two hours. After having delivered the sermon, he was descending the steps of the mosque when someone came running to the mosque and asked Shah Isma'il رحمة الله عليه him if the sermon of Shah Isma'il was over. He answered, "Yes, brother it is over". He remarked, " I am very sorry. I have come from very far to listen to him." "From where have you come?" He gave the name of his village in reply and said, "I had come to listen to him. How sad that my effort is useless and his sermon is over." The Mawlana said, "Don't you worry. I am Isma'il myself. Come sit here." He made him sit there on the steps and said that he himself had delivered the sermon and would repeat it for him. He repeated every word of the sermon for him there on the steps. Someone then remarked to him, "Mawlana, you were wonderful. You repeated the sermon for the sake of just one man." He said, "I had delivered the first sermon also for just One and I did it the second time for just One. The gathering has no reality. I had spoken for Allah the first time and I did again for Him alone." This was the spirit that Allah had created in his heart. May Allah show mercy to us and create a portion of this spirit,motivation and restlessness in our hearts so that on seeing the disrepute we would be moved to end the disreputable in some way.

We must remember that when we grow this behaviour and become uneasy and restless for this cause we will reform our household at least. If we cannot reform our family then it means that the uneasiness and restlessness is lacking and we are merely wasting time.

Summary

In short, individual preaching is fard'ayn (absolute direct obligation) on every person. If he sees a wrong being done, he must endeavour to stop it. He must try to stop it with his hand, first. If that is not possible then he must try to stop it with his tongue. If that too is not possible, then he must know in his heart that thing is evil. May Allah inspire us to obey these instructions. Aameen!.

Praise belongs to Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and ask Him for forgiveness. We believe in Him and place our trust in Him. We seek refuge in Him from the mischief of our souls and from our evil deeds. He whom Allah guides, no one is there to mislead; and he whom He leaves astray, no one is there to guide. And we bear witness that there is no god but Allah, who is Alone and has no partner and we bear witness that Sayyidina Muhammad is His Slave and His Messenger, may Allah bless him and his family and Companions and may He favour him and give him peace, a complete peace and in abundance.

I seek refuge in Allah from the accursed devil. In the Name of Allah, the Compassionate, the Merciful.

And this is the Garden, you have been made to inherit because of what you used to do. For you therein is abundant fruit, whereof you may eat (Az-Zukhruf, 43:72-73).

I believe in Allah, our Great Protector who has spoken the Truth and His Messenger, the noble Prophet ﷺ has also spoken the Truth. We are grateful witnesses over that. Praise belongs to Allah, Lord of the worlds.

How to find out the conditions in The Hereafter

Man has no way to know the conditions after death. No science or technique can tell him of that life. He who goes to that world from here knows what happens there but then we lose touch with that man.

The case of a Saint.

My father, Mawlana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه, often related the story of a saint whose disciples complained to him that whoever dies in this world does not turn back or inform the living where he reached, what happened with him and what he saw. "Do reveal to us some knack whereby we may have the answers to these questions." The saint said, "Alright, when I die leave a paper and pen with me in the grave. If I have an opportunity, I will write to you." His disciples were satisfied that they could hope for a report.

When the saint died, the instructions in his will were obeyed and a paper and pen were placed besides his body in his grave. He had also written down in his will that the paper be collected the next day from his grave; they would find his message thereon. The disciples visited the grave the next day and sure enough they found a paper placed over the grave. They were happy that they had received what they had long desired, the news of the next world. But when they picked up the paper, they found this message on it:

"The conditions here are worth seeing but not worth revealing."

Allah knows best whether this case is true or false. It is within the powers of Allah to do this thing so it could be true. But, it may also be a lie and a fabricated story. Yet, it is a fact that the situation there is not one to reveal but one to observe. That is why Allah has kept it a secret and not let anyone know about it. There is no way for anyone to know about that world beyond what Allah has revealed in the Qur'an and the Prophet ﷺ in the Ahadith. We will narrate here from the Qur'an and the Ahadith the conditions of the next world.

The lowest ranking dweller of Paradise

It is reported by Sayyidina al Mughira bin Shu'bah رضی اللہ عنہ that Sayyidina Musa علیہ السلام asked Allah, "Lord! Who among the people of Paradise will have the lowest rank and which of the dwellers of Paradise will be the humblest?" Allah said, "All the dwellers of Paradise will have entered it and all the dwellers of Hell will have gone into it. One man will have missed entry into Paradise and would be sitting in its surrounding. I will ask him to name four of the Kings of whom he had heard on earth and as many of their dominions as he could remember. He would name the four Kings one by one pointing out that he had a great dominion and enjoyed many blessings, and he would add that he had wished for a similar empire for himself. I will then ask him to recount the blessings that those Kings enjoyed and the luxury they lived in and to name which of those blessings he would like to have. So, that man will enumerate the favours and luxuries enjoyed by those Kings and will wish that he had the same.

I will then ask him if he would be happy if he received those very favours and luxuries that he had named as being enjoyed by the four Kings. He will exclaim 'O Allah! What blessing can exceed, that! I will surely be happy'. I will let him know that I grant him whatever dominions and the favours and luxuries the Kings had ten times over." Allah then said to Sayyidina Musa علیہ السلام "That man will be the lowest ranking man in Paradise and he will have the Paradise of the lowest order. "Sayyidina Musa علیہ السلام then said, "O Allah! If this is the lowest ranking man then what will be the position of the men who are Your chosen ones who will be granted the superior-most ranks? Allah said to him, "O Musa! As for My chosen slaves, I have fashioned their belongings with My hands and preserved them in, treasures duly sealed.

ما لم ترعين ولم يسمع اذن ولم يخطر على قلب احد من الخلق

No eye has seen as yet no ear has heard of it as yet and no heart has imagined it as yet.

The Paradise of yet another Low-Ranking Inhabitant

In another Hadith, the Holy Prophet ﷺ himself said about a man who will be the last to enter Paradise. He will be the one who will be sent to Hell first to atone for the bad deeds he had committed on earth because even a Believer will first receive punishment in Hell for his evil deeds. So, that man will burn in Hell and he will pray to Allah, "O Allah! The heat and fire of Hell have burnt me down. Show me Your mercy and get me out of Hell for a little while and place me on the top at the edge that I may have a short respite from burning."

Allah will say to him, "If I get you there then you will ask to be taken a little further." He will promise that if he was placed on the top he will not ask to be moved further. Allah will say to him, "Well, I grant you your wish" and he will be taken out of Hell and placed at the top. After a while when he will have revived somewhat, he will say again, "O Allah ! You did get me out of Hell but even here I can sense the heat of Hell. Do place me a little further for a while."

Allah will remind him that he had promised a short while ago that he would not ask to be moved ahead and that he was breaking his promise. He will say, "Move me a little ahead, O Allah! I will not then ask for anything." So Allah will have him placed a little ahead. From that place, he will be able to observe Paradise. After a little while, he will say, "O Allah! You did get me out of Hell and I can now see Paradise. Do grant me Your permission that I may see a little of Paradise. Let me go to its gate and see what Paradise is like." Allah will remind him that he was again being false to his promise and he will say, "O Allah! When you have been kind to me in allowing me to be here, do let me have a glimpse of Paradise." Allah will say to him, "If I let you have a glimpse of Paradise, you will ask to be allowed inside for a while." He will say, "No, O Allah! Just let me have a glimpse of Paradise. I will not want anything after that".

So Allah will let him have a glimpse of Paradise but on spying it, he will say to Allah, "O Allah! You are the Most Merciful of those who show mercy! You have brought me to the gate of Paradise so now let me in by Your Grace and Favour." Allah will remind him, "I had told you already that you will not be sinere to your promise. Come now, while I have brought you upto here by My mercy so I will now let you enter it. I will grant you so much area in Paradise as is equal to the earth." He will exclaim, "You are the Most Merciful of all mercifuls but are you laughing at me? How am I entitled to that big on area of Paradise?" Allah will assure him that he was not being laughed at and that he was really getting that big area in Paradise.

Hadith of Continuous Biddahak (بالفحک)

It is reported in the Hadith that the Prophet ﷺ laughed as he narrated this Hadith. The Companions رضی اللہ عنہم who heard this Hadith also laughed when they narrated it to their students. Those students also laughed as they narrated it before their students. So everyone who had narrated this Hadith from the Prophet ﷺ down to this day has laughed while narrating it and those who listen to it also laugh. That is why this Hadith is known as Hadith Musalsal Biddahak (Hadith of continued laughing).

Paradise equal to the Planet Earth:

That was the story of the man who will be the last to enter Paradise. We may imagine what those enjoying ranks higher than him will get when this man, the last entrant into Paradise, gets a portion of it that is equal to the earth. The truth is that we are on earth and have no idea of what that world will be like and so cannot imagine the expanse of that world. Therefore, we are surprised that a man could get anything equal to the area of the earth and what he would do with it. We get these doubts because we have no inkling of the next world.

Example of the next World

Our example in relation to the next world is like a child in its mother's womb. The child has no idea of the outside world so it cannot guess its size and it does not suppose there is anything beyond its mother's womb. When it is born, however, it learns that its mother's womb was nothing compared to the world. May Allah show us the next world with His pleasure. We will then know what it is and how spacious it is. We will know that it is created for the Believers.

Paradise is for the Believers

Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayyi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ used to say, "Al-Hamud lillah, Paradise is prepared for the Believers. It is readied for those who have believed. If you believe in Allah then be sure that it is created for you. Of course, you will have to do something to get to it and to overcome the obstacles on its path. If you do that then, Insha Allah, Paradise is yours and is readied for you. May Allah be merciful and kind to us and grant everyone of us Paradise. Aameen.

The thought of the Hereafter in the mind of Sayyidina Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہم

Sa'id Bin Musayyib رحمۃ اللہ علیہ was an esteemed Taba'i (epigone) and a high-ranking Wali (friend of Allah). He was a pupil of Sayyidina Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہم. He recalls that once on a Friday he went with his teacher, Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہم, to a market because the latter had to buy somethings. When they had bought what they wanted and were returning from the market, Sayyidina Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہ said to him, "I pray that Allah bring the two of us together in a market of Paradise."observe the greatness of the Companionos رضی اللہ عنہم that they refer to the Hereafter on the smallest pretext and refresh their minds with its thought so that they do not get involved in the business of this world and forget the next. He was occupied in a worldly task in the market buying something but made the supplication in the presence of his student.

Markets in Paradise

Sayyidina Sa'id bin Musayyib رحمۃ اللہ علیہ said that he asked Sayyidina Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہ whether there will be market places in Paradise because he had heard that everything will be available in Paradise free of charge while in markets, things were bought and sold. Sayyidina Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہ confirmed that there would be markets in Paradise. He said that he had heard the Messenger of Allah ﷺ say, "A market will be opened for the inhabitants of Paradise every Friday." The prophet ﷺ then gave the details and said, when the inhabitants of Paradise enter Paradise and arrive at their respective places they will live happily and luxuriously. They will enjoy so many blessings that they will not think of going any where else from their station. Suddenly, they will hear a call, 'All dwellers of Paradise are invited to emerge from their respective places towards the market. So they will move towards it. They will find a market with such unique merchandise that they had never seen before. Shops will be adorned with these wares but there will be no buying and selling. It will announced that whatever ware a dweller of Paradise desired, he may pick it up and take it away. The inhabitants of Paradise will go through the market from one end to the other and look at the display, each unique, and if anyone wished for anything, he would pick up that thing and carry it along.

The court of Allah in Paradise

When the shopping will be over, an announcement will be made, all the people will assemble in the court of Allah. It will be announced, 'It is the day that was a Friday when you lived on earth and you people used to get out of your homes to offer the Friday Prayer at one place together. So, instead of the Friday assembly, you are granted this assembly in Paradise. The court of Allah is assembled and you are invited there. "So, all the dwellers of Paradise will assemble there. A chair will be laid for everyone over there. Some will have a chair of pearls. Some a chair of gold, some a chair jewels, and some a chair of silver. The chairs will be according to their ranks in Paradise; the more high a person's rank, the more splendid his chair. They will be made to sit on these chairs. Each one of them will regard his chair so excellent that he will not crave for another's chair because the concept of grief and longing will be unknown to them in Paradise. They will not long for the better. For the humblest of the dwellers of Paradise there will be mounds of musk and camphor around the chairs and they will sit on these mounds. When all of them will be seated, the Divine Court will commence its proceedings. Sayyidina Jibril عليه السلام (who will blow the trumpet on the Day of Resurrection) will be asked by Allah to sing His praises and he will do it in such a melodious voice that the melody and music of all the world will be nothing in comparison.

It will rain musk and saffron

After the hymn, clouds will cover up the sky and it will seem as though it is about to rain. All of the inhabtants of Paradise will look towards the clouds when they will be sprinkled with musk and saffron from the clouds spreading fragrance in the assembly. No one will have had smelled such a fragrance before nor imagined it.

Then a wind will blow at the Command of Allah and everyone will feel fresh and active so that in doing so, he will get more beautiful. His countenance and his head will be much more beautiful than before. Everyone will then be given the drinks of Paradise. These drinks will be such as cannot be compared to any drink of this world.

The greatest blessing of Paradise - The Vision of Allah

Then Allah will ask: "O dwellers of Paradise! Tell me have you received all that I had promised to give you if you believed and did good deeds on earth. Or is anything unreceived as yet?" They will say with one voice, 'What greater blessing may we wish for after all that you have given us. You have fulfilled all Your promises. We have received the reward against our deeds. We have received all the favours and we cannot think of any other favour besides and we have all the luxuries we could wish for. What other blessing could there be?" But, the Ulama will be helpful to the people here again. The people will ask the Ulama to advise them if any blessing could yet be had and they will let them know that they yet have to receive a favour and they must ask Allah for His Vision. So, all the dwellers of Paradise will say to Allah with one voice. "O Allah! We yet have to receive a great blessing. We yet have to see you." Allah will tell them that they indeed had to receive that favour, and they will then see Him. Allah will let every inhabitant of Paradise see Him and all of them will realise that every benefit that they had before that was insignificant compared to the Vision of Allah. There could not be a greater favour. After that the proceedings will come to an end and everyone will return to his respective place.

Increase in beauty

When the inhabitants of Paradise return to their dwellings, their wives and Houris will exlaim, "What is it that has happened today that you have come back with more excellent beauty than you had when you had gone." They will say in reply, "We find you more beautiful than you were when we left you." The Prophet ﷺ has said that both of them will increase in beauty because of the pleasant wind that Allah will blow.

In short, this was a brief account of the assembly on Friday and the Vision of Allah in Paradise. Allah will grant this to His slaves through His mercy. May Allah grant it to all of us. Aameen.

The blessings of Paradise cannot be imagined

The truth, however, is that one cannot describe or draw a pen picture of the conditions in Paradise in a correct manner. A Hadith Qudsi reproduces the words of Allah:

اعددت لعبادى الصالحين مالا عين رات ولا اذن سمعت ولا خطر على قلب بشر

I have prepared for My upright slaves what eye has not seen and ear not heard, nor has it occurred to the human heart. (Bukhari and Muslim)

The Ulma tell us that although the names of the blessings of Paradise will be similar to those in this world yet they will be different and beyond our imagination and perception. We will come across the same fruit, like pomegranate, dates etc. but we do not know what pomegranate or dates they will be.

We are also told that there will be neighbourhoods in Paradise. Sitting here in this world, we have an idea of the neighbourhoods as we know them but we cannot say what they are in Paradise. In the same way, we are told that there will be rivers of wine, milk and honey and we do not think much of that because we imagine them as we know them in this world but we cannot really perceive them as they are in Paradise.

Fear and grief will be unknown in Paradise

The greatest of the bounties of Paradise that we cannot even hope for on earth and no man can imagine a life without these things is that there will be no fear and no grief. There will not be any grief over the past nor fear for the future. This is a bounty that can never be received on earth. Allah has made the world such that no happiness can be perfect and no luxury complete and unimpaired.

There is sorrow with happiness and difficulty with every luxury. For example, when one eats food there is always the possibility of indigestion from over-eating, or over indulging in a pleasant drink may have its repurcussions. There is always fear that one may face a difficulty, a sorrow or pain. But Allah has kept Paradise free from grief, pain and apprehension. There will be no regrets in Paradise that a desire remained unfulfilled because every desire will be achieved there.

A glimpse of those blessings

We know from a Hadith that every desire of the people of Paradise will be accomplished. For instance, if anyone there wishes for a juice, he will not have to work for that or prepare it but he will have the juice before him the moment he wishes. Allah has let us see glimpses of some of the blessings of Paradise right here in this world. When the bounties of Paradise were described in earlier days, it was not very easy to picture them. People thought of them as imaginary and found it difficult to believe in them. Today Allah has let us have a glimpse of that. Man with his limited intelligence and experience has done something which a hundred years ago was unimaginable. If anyone was told of that then, he would have thought the informer was mad. As little as twenty years ago no one would have believed that a letter could be transmitted to a distant land in a minute because even by an aeroplane a letter could not be delivered from Pakistan to the U.S. in less than twenty hours. Allah let us realise this through the telex and fax. When man with his limited capacity can achieve this, then Allah with His perfect power and complete mercy can surely let man have such means whereby he can get what he wishes for at the very moment he thinks of it.

Paradise is for the God-fearing

The point is that man only believes when he has the facts before him. But the Holy Prophets عليهم السلام were blessed with the knowledge which no one in the world had and they have conveyed to us definite information about the bounties of Paradise and told us that there cannot be more definite news than that. Therefore, their reports are all true. Paradise is a reality and its blessings are real. Allah has said about them:

وَسَارِعُوْٓا اِلٰى مَغْفِرَةٍ مِّنْ رَّبِّكُمْ وَجَنَّةٍ عَرْضُهَا السَّمٰوٰتُ وَالْاَرْضُ اُعِدَّتْ لِلْمُتَّقِيْنَ (سورة ال عمران: ۱۳۳)

And vie with one another, hastening to attain forgiveness from your Lord, and to the Garden whose breadth is as the heavens and the earth, prepared for the God-fearing.(Al Imran, 3:133)

The God-fearing are the rightenous, who fear Allah and obey Him.

Paradise is encompassed by forms of hardship

However, the Paradise which is great and whose bounties are great is a place about which the Prophet ﷺ has said:

ان الجنة حفت بالمكاره

"Surely, Paradise is surrounded by disliked things".

That is, Allah has encompassed Paradise by such things which seem to be unpleasant to man and he dislikes them. For example, a glorious palace is surrounded by a fence of thorns; to enter it one has to go over the fence and unless one does so the luxuries of the palace cannot be enjoyed. Thus, Allah has surrounded Paradise with a fence made up of various duties and obligations (called fard and wajib) which a man finds burdensome. For instance, he has to give up his work to go to the mosque to offer prayers, or there are many things he would like to do but they are forbidden and sinful. He has to keep his gaze lowered and not to look at stranger women, not watch film, and so on. These things are difficult for him to keep away from. He wishes to do certain things but he is disallowed from doing them. This is the thorny fence around Paradise. To backbite is also disallowed and so a fence again. To gain access to Paradise one must get over the fence otherwise it is impossible to get there. This is the way with Allah.

Hell is surrounded by desires

The same Hadith has this first clause :

حجبت النار بالشهوات

Allah has placed a fence of base desires around Hell. Beautiful things and attractive, tempting desires surround Hell. A man is tempted to go towards these things. But, it has Fire inside.

The thorny fence becomes rosy

As we have seen, Allah has placed a thorny fence around Paradise but Allah has made it such that if anyone braves it with determination then it turns into flowers. As long as one sees the fence from a distance it seems to be thorny and it will seem so as long as one thinks of them as such-and it will appear difficult to get over. However, once anyone shows determination in crossing over the fence, and going over to the other side where the garden is, then Allah turns the thorns into flowers for him.

The sacrifice offered by a Companion

A Companion was participating in Jihad and he found that the enemy had attacked the Muslim force with full strength and there seemed to be no way of safety from them. Suddenly these words came on his tongue:

غدا نلقى الاحبة محمدا و صحبه

"The time has come for us to meet our dear ones, Muhammad ﷺ and his Companions" (In the Hereafter). At a time when they were surrounded by fire and blood, death was all around and it was not easy to give up one's life, this Companion was happy to give up his life in the fight. We are told in a Hadith that when a warrior in the cause of Allah attains Shahadah (martyrdom), he does not undergo the travails of death not even to the extent of the feeling an ant-bite. It was actually the thorny fence surrounding Paradise which he had to go over and when he was determined to return his life to Allah, Allah turned it into flowers.

جان دی دی ہوئی اسی کی تھی

حق تو یہ ہے کہ حق ادا نہ ہوا

The life that you gave was given by Him.

The truth is that you have not given His right to Him.

If anyone dies on one's bed, may be he had to go through severe pangs of death but Allah has made the death from killing as simple as the bite of an ant.

Tolerate the taunts

So, the thorns look like that from afar but if anyone makes up his mind and goes forward with determination, Allah turns the thorns into flowers. But, the trouble is that we fear we will have to undergo much stress and listen to people call us orthodox and ridicule us. But, these are the thorns, and the fence that delays us from approaching Paradise is made up of such obstacles too. If we tell these people only once that although we may be orthodox and backward yet we are those who look towards the sunnah of Sayyidina Muhammad ﷺ then the thorns will become flowers for us.

It is the Religious-minded who are really respected

It is with Allah that in this very life, He causes those who criticise to cease criticising and He causes them to respect those who obey Allah and the Prophet Muahmmad ﷺ. Even in the times of the Holy Prophet ﷺ the hypocrites claimed to be honourable and called the Muslims debased and they asserted that when they go to Madinah they would drive out the Muslims from there. Thus, they ridiculed the Mulims as debased. Allah said about them :

وَلِلّٰهِ الْعِزَّةُ وَلِرَسُوْلِهٖ وَلِلْمُؤْمِنِيْنَ وَلٰكِنَّ الْمُنٰفِقِيْنَ لَا يَعْلَمُوْنَ

And might belongs to Allah, and to His Messenger and the Believers, but the hypocrites know not. (Al-Munafiqun, 63:8)

Worship will bring pleasure

It is true that there are thorns around Paradise but they are really trials. When one approaches them, Allah turns them into flowers. These very obligations which one finds difficult to meet become then a source of happiness and one is drawn towards worship instinctively. Thus, we have the saying of the Prophet ﷺ قرة عينى فى الصلوة "I find the coolness of my eyes in prayer." In other words, "though prayer is a form of worship, Allah has given me pleasure in it which overshadows every worldly pleasure."

The difficulty faced in fighting sin

In the same way, one certainly finds it difficult to forgo sin. It requires great determination. In spite of that if anyone convinces himself that he is giving up sin for the sake of Allah and that he forgoes his desires for the pleasure of Allah though he might undergo untold self-control, yet he will find pleasure in the end in overcoming his desires. He gets pleasure in fighting sin if he does it for the sake of Allah.

Why does a mother face suffering for her child

Imagine it is a cold, wintery night. A mother is cuddled with her child in a warm blanket when it urinates. She does not mind the weather but casts the blanket aside and changes the clothes of her child, washes the bed covers in cold water and gets the child to sleep again. In fact she gets pleasure in doing these things for her child although these things are not easy to do otherwise. If anyone were to suggest to the woman that if she gave away her child she would save herself the trouble, she would certainly say that she was ready to suffer much more trouble for the sake of her child but she was not prepared to give it away. Why should she say so? It is because she loves her child and she can go through graver hardship for her love, and she would draw pleasure from it. In the same way, if a person loves Allah, he is prepared to give up his desires and he gets more pleasure through giving up his desires than he would have had in getting them.

Think of paradise and the Hereafter

The holy Prophet ﷺ has enumerated the blessings and bounties available in Paradise and the Qur'an has described them throughout its passages. They have been enumerated and described that man may try to get them and that he may overcome the thorny fence surrounding it. Therefore, our religious mentors have prescribed a method to achieve them by imagining the blessings and thinking about them. Mawlana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه has said, "Every Muslim must sit down every day for a while and think about the Hereafter and let his imagination picture life particularly in Paradise. He must imagine, death and burial in the grave: "People have buried me and return to their homes. I am in the Barzakh (the life in the grave before the Hereafter), then it is the Hereafter, the reckoning takes place, the sirat is being crossed over, Paradise on one side and Hell on the other." He must then think of the bounties in Paradise, the punishment in Hell. Let him do it a little while every day." This is necessary because we are occupied in our worldly pursuits and neglect the thought of the next life. It is our belief that we have to die one day and there is a next life. It is not enough to believe, but we have to keep ourselves aware of that and prepare ourselves for that. It is the awareness and preparedness that prompts man to obedience and to shun sin. So, we must devote some time everyday to contemplate and picture ourselves in the next world.

If we think of the Hereafter occupied as we are in worldly pursuits, and ready ourselves for that life, we will be inclined to be obedient and to avoid sin. This was the purpose of recounting the blessings of Paradise whose bounties are found mention in the Qur'an and Hadith. May Allah cause us to prepare ourselves for the next life. Aameen!

وآخر دعوانا ان الحمد لله رب العالمين

Introduction

On 14th March 1988, Mawlana Mufti Muhammad Taqi Uthmani مدظلهم spoke at the Jami' Masjid Haqqaniyah, Sahiwal, Sargodha after the 'Isha prayer. The occasion was the second great assembly of the siyanatul Muslimeen. The Mawlana is the teacher of Hadith at, and vice President of, Dar ul-Uloom, Karachi and Justice of the Shari'ah bench of the Supreme court of Pakistan.

He spoke on the subject of the "Thought of The Hereafter" and Hafiz Abdul Ghafur Tirmizi and Hafiz Ghulam Rasul, honorary workers of the Majlis were instrumental in getting the Mawlana's address printed (in Urdu).

Thought Of The Hereafter

الحمد لله نحمده و نستعينه ونستغفره و نؤمن به و نتوكل عليه ونعوذ بالله من شرور انفسناومن سيأت اعمالنا من يهده الله فلا مضل له ومن يضلله فلا هادى له و نشهد ان لا اله الا الله وحده لاشريك له ونشهدان سيد نا و سندنا و نبينا ومولانا محمدا عبده ورسوله صلى الله تعالى عليه وعلى اله واصحابه وبارك وسلم تسليما كثيرا كثيرا

اما بعد !

فاعوذ بالله من الشيطٰن الرجيم بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم

بَلْ تُؤْثِرُوْنَ الْحَيٰوةَ الدُّنْيَا وَالْاٰخِرَةُ خَيْرٌ وَّاَبْقٰى (سورة الاعلى: ١٧٠)

امنت بالله صدق الله مولانا العظيم وصدق رسوله النبى الكريم ونحن على ذلك من الشاهدين والشكرين والحمد لله رب العلمين

Praise belongs to Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and ask for His forgiveness. We believe in Him and place our trust in Him. And, we seek refuge in Allah from the evil of our souls and mischievous deeds. He whom Allah guides there is no one to mislead him and He whom he leaves astray there is no one who can guide. And, we bear witness that there is no one worthy of worship except Allah, the One by Himself and the One who has no partner, and we bear witness that Sayyidina Muhammad is His slave and His Messenger. May Allah bless him and his family and companions and may He favour him and give him peace, a complete peace in abundance.

I seek refuge in Allah from the accursed devil. In the Name of Allah, the Compassionate, the Merciful.

"Nay, but you (O mankind) prefer the life of this world, while the Hereafter is better and more enduring." (Al-A'la 87:16-17)

I have believed in Allah, our Great Protector who has spoken the Truth and so has His Messenger, the noble Prophet, spoken the Truth, and we are over that grateful witness. All praise belongs to Allah, Lord of the worlds.

Our weakness

The verse that I have quoted is from surah Al-A'la. It is the distinction of the Qur'an that the smallest of its verses though few in words is deep in meaning. The smallest of its verse is enough to guide man all his life. and this is a small verse in which Allah tells man that although he prefers the life of this world, the Hereafter is better and more enduring.

In this verse Allah points out to the basic weakness of mankind.

It is a weakness that may cause destruction in every field of man's life. Allah named the weakness and its remedy too. He did all that in two small sentences. He showed the defect in man and He also showed how it is repaired. The first clause is:

بَلْ تُؤْثِرُوْنَ الْحَيٰوةَ الدُّنْيَا ۝ وَالْاٰخِرَةُ خَيْرٌ وَّاَبْقٰى (سورة الاعلى ۱۷۰)

"Nay, but you (O mankind) prefer the life of this world."

The basic weakness in man is that he gives preference to the life of this world in every field and in every affair. He thinks in the limited sphere of this life and he is always concerned with betterment, success and happiness in this life. Over what does he prefer this worldly life? It is over the life of the Hereafter after his death. This is his weakness and what is the cure?

Cure of the weakness

He must ponder over it a while. His thinking is restricted to the life of this world. He wishes to have a beautiful home, a lot of wealth, prestige, name and fame and high office. He does not distinguish between the lawful and the forbidden for the sake of these things and he also quarrels, fights and kills his fellow man to acquire these things. But, he does not consider how long this life will last. He does not realise how good the next life could be-better than this life and lasting.

No happiness is perfect

Man must know that no happiness of this life can be perfect. There is always sadness with happiness, or worry with grief is attached to happiness. A man may have delicious food before him and he may be hungry too but he has a worry on his mind so he loses his appetite. Similarly, there is no happiness in the world that can be perfect.

Man supposes that if he amasses large wealth, he will live peacefully and be content. Let him look around. Let him peep into the lives of millionaires. They may have prosperous businesses, large factories, a fleet of cars, palatial houses, a retinue of servants, in short, every means of comfort. But, sleep alludes them and they use sleeping pills to get a night's sleep.

They may lie on comfortable beds in luxurious, air-conditioned rooms but they cannot get sleep. In comparison a labourer or a farmer who lacks these luxuries lies down on his cot using his hands instead of a pillow and gets sleep at the very moment he lies down and wakes up after eight hours. Let man compare which of the two spends a better night, the millionaire or the labourer? Thus, it is the work of Allah that no pleasure in this world is perfect, no luxury unimpaired. Every happiness has with it a sorrow and every grief has with it a pleasure.

Three worlds

Allah has created three different worlds. In one of these, there is pure happiness, nothing but luxury, and taste of sadness is unknown there, sorrow is not found. That place is Paradise. It lacks grief and sorrow and has no room for worry and anxiety.

Another of the worlds created by Allah is the place of sadness. It has nothing but sorrow and pain. There is worry all round and grief everywhere. Happiness is unknown there as is comfort lacking. It is Hell. May Allah be merciful to us and preserve us from it. Aameen.

The third of these three worlds is the earth. Here sorrow and happiness are mingled. We can find here sorrow as well as happiness. There is luxury here, comfort in abundance but also pain and difficulty. This world has both the things. Anyone who hopes to be safe here from grief and sorrow and for nothing to go against his wishes lives in a fool's paradise.

He cannot get these things in this life. Ordinary people aside, The noble Prophets عليهم السلام had to endure difficulties, pain and grief, and these people were the nearest to Allah!

If anyone were to receive only comfort and happiness in this world, then it would surely have been the most beloved of Allah, the Prophets عليهم السلام. But, they too had grief and they too faced difficulties. Rather, the Holy Prophet ﷺ said:

اشدالناس بلاء الانبياء ثم الامثل فالا مثل

"Of men, the severest of trials fall on the Prophets. Then on those who toe their line and then on those who are like them."

Thus, no happiness in this life is perfect and no pleasure either. Whatever happiness befalls one it is not enduring. No one knows if his happiness will last until the next moment. He could be without it after an hour, a day, a month, or a year. Neither happiness nor grief is prefect.

Happiness in the Hereafter will be Perfect

Allah has said that the life of the Hereafter is better which means it is perfect. Therefore, its luxuries are also perfect and its blessings are also perfect and the happiness there also perfect and enduring. It will never end. The bounties once received will be at the receiver's disposal for ever.

It is the synopsis of a Hadith that if anyone gets something to eat here in this life and he likes the food, he will eat it until he is satiated. After that, he will not be able to eat it even if he is induced to eat or is offered a prize if he does eat. He will dislike the food then. This is because he has reached the limits of his stomach and there is no possibility he can put in more. But there will be no such thing in the Hereafter. The taste for food will be lasting and perfect while the life of this world is not only worse it is also fleeting. In spite of that, man prefers this life and occupies himself day and night in its affairs neglecting the Hereafter.

If we ponder over this verse, we will see that Allah has shown us the cause of our weaknesses and the cure for that. What is the cause?

Death is certain

Nothing in this life is as certain and as agreed upon as the certainty of death and the consensus on it. There is nothing else more certain. It is such a thing that not only a Muslim but even an unbeliever agrees upon that some day he will die. No one has proposed so far that man will not die. There are men who deny the existence of God and there are those who do not believe in Him but there has not been anyone so far who denied that death is certain. The greatest of athiests, the staunchest of deniers of Allah have not dared say that death is not certain. There is a difference of opinion in every other belief or idea but this is something on which all are agreed. Everyone subscribes to the fact that death is certain, that he will die. Everyone is also agreed that the time of death is unknown. There has been progress in scientific knowledge, man has travelled in space and been to the moon, he has invented the computer, built the robot but no scientist can say when a man will die.

Science and all knowledge have ceded on the question of the time of death. But, it is very surprising that in spite of the certainty of death and the ignorance of the time of death, man continues to ignore and neglect death. Let us all examine ourselves. Is it not that day in and day out each of us is occupied from the time we awaken to the time we go to sleep, we are in various worldly pursuits: business, employment, labour farming, and a variety of thoughts all about worldly pursuits. Does one ever concentrate on being buried and what will happen thereafter?

The case of the Saint Bahlul

There has passed a saint by the name of Bahlul. He was called Bahlul Majzub. He was a majzub (deranged in a benign way, presumably from an overpowering perception of Divine Reality; mad in some way but possesses an aura of sanctity-the Concise Encyclopaedia of Islam). His words were full of wisdom and that is why people called him Bahlul (the wise).

He lived in the times of Harun al Rashid. Sometimes. Harun al-Rashid laughed at him, and he had given standing instructions that whenever Bahtul Majzub wished to see him he should be allowed to walk in and not be stopped. One day, he did come in directly to Harun al-Rashid as was his wont and the latter pulled his leg as was his habit. He had a staff in his hand which he gave to Bahlul saying, "I give it to you as a trust and ask you to pass it on to anyone you meet in this world who is a greater fool than you telling him that it is a gift from me." He meant to tell him that there was no one in the world more foolish than him (Bahlul). Bahlul kept the staff with him. Much time passed away, months and years went by. Harun al-Rashid fell ill and was bed ridden. His doctors disallowed him to get up from his bed.

Bahlul went to see him. He asked "Commanders of the Faithful, how are you?" He said, "Bahlul, what shall I say? I forsee a lengthy journey ahead." "Journey to what place O Commander of the Faithful?" "To the Hereafter." Bahlul asked, "So, how many of the forces have you sent there before hand, and what equipment?" Harun al-Rashid said, "Bahlul, what kind of words you utter? That is a journey where you do not send an equipment ahead nor any soldier or guard." He asked "Then tell me when will you come back?" "Again you talk nonsense. That is the journey to Hereafter. No one returns from there."

Bahlul then said, "O! It is a long journey from which no one returns and no force is sent ahead!" "Yes, Bahlul! That is such a journey." "Commander of the Faithful! I have got a trust placed by you with me for a long time. You had asked me to give it to anyone more foolish than myself and today I do not find one more entitled to the staff than you. I had observed that even when you undertook a small journey you sent an advance party to prepare the road ahead and set up stations for you, but now you will set foot on a long journey for which you have made no preparation although you will not return from there! So, I find only you more foolish than I am. This staff is for you alone."

Harun al-Rashid wept on listening to this and said, "Bahlul I used to think of you as mad. But, I find none wiser than you."

Remember Death

It is a fact that we make huge preparations for an ordinary journey and talk a lot about that. However, as for the final journey of which we know beforehand and which we will undertake all of a sudden, we make no preplanning. We may wonder how things will progress without us-what will become of our families and our business? Yet we are not willing to think of that and make preparations beforehand. We shoulder so many funerals, lower our dear ones into the graves and throw dust on them but we suppose that we are not concerned with what has happened to them.

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said,

"Frequently remember that which eliminates pleasures."

We must examine ourselves how much time we spend out of the twenty four hours in remembering death.

In short, the Holy Prophet ﷺ has told us in this Hadith that our fundamental weakness is that we neglect the Hereafter in our minds but have it before our eyes. We worry about this life all the time till all the difficulties of our lives will vanish. It is because our minds revolve round this life alone that every crime is committed, there is restlessness and corruption all over. Our minds do not look at the Hereafter. We play foul only that our lives may improve but we do not worry about what will happen after we die.

The Holy Prophet ﷺ led us to this thought and the examples of peace and contentment during his lifetime were the result of this thinking. Everyone had the thought of Paradise in his mind and the standing before Allah. With such reflections whatever man does are pleasing to Allah and he does not waver.

An incident with Sayyidina Umar Faruq رضی اللہ عنہ

Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ was the second righteous Caliph and he ruled over half the world. The Greak Emperors like Chosroes stood in awe of him. He was once travelling somewhere and was dressed in ordinary clothes and no one could recognize him. As he travelled, he felt hungry and there were no restaurants or inns in transit in those days. However, he saw a shepherd tending sheep so he asked him for some milk to satisfy his hunger and charge him for it if he liked.

The shepherd said, "I would have fed you milk surely but the sheep do not belong to me. These are a trust with me and as long as I do not have the owner's permission I cannot give you the milk.

Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ was not only a Ruler but also a teacher and guardian. He looked after his people and examined them too. So, he put the shephered to test and suggested to him to sell him one of the sheep so that he may drink its milk and slaughter it if necessary while the shepherd may keep the agreed price. "When the owner asks, you may tell him that a wolf devoured it and he will believe you. This way you will stand to benefit and I will get the milk to drink and the sheep also."

As Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ finished speaking, the shepherd exclaimed loudly, "O man! Where then is Allah?" 'Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ said, "As long as people like you are found in this Ummah, it will continue to prosper."

It is the thought of the Hereafter that persuaded the shepherd in the loneliness where he grazed sheep to remember that he will have to face Allah. If he had done wrong and agreed to sell the sheep then he might have earned some money but he would have had to answer for that in the Hereafter.

Another incident with Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ

It was the practice of Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ that he made rounds of the city at night. Once, on one of his rounds he stopped near a house where he overheard a mother and daughter speaking to one another. The mother said, "It is time to milk the cow but since it gives less milk these days you must add water to it." The daughter said, "Mother, I will not do that because the Commander of the Faithful has prohibited one from doing that."

The mother said, "He may have passed the order but he is not here at the moment. He must be sleeping now. He will never know if you added water to milk."

"Yes mother, he may not know. Yet the Amir of the Amir ul Mu'mineen does see us. If He does see us then how may I do what you say?

Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ heard this conversation. In the morning he enquired about the girl. He then called her and married her to his son. It is from this couple that later a Commander of the Faithful, Umar bin Abdul Aziz رحمۃ اللہ علیہ was born.

Thought of the Hereafter

This is the mind that knows that والاخرۃ خیر وابقی "the Hereafter is better and more enduring." When this thing is well grasped then the hand will not stretch to commit a wrong. Everyone will do such things as lead to Paradise and shun those things that displease Allah.

This is the purpose of the verse. It wants us to know that our efforts are directed towards the furtherance of this world and it wants us to observe how many people die and are buried in their graves. One day, it is going to be our turn. What will happen inside the grave has been described by the Holy Prophet ﷺ and he has told us also what will happen after that. The Qur'an frequently tells us about the Hereafter and the Ahadith of the Holy Prophet ﷺ explain in detail what will happen in the Hereafter. This has been done so that we may prevail over the thought of the Hereafter, yet we do not set aside any time to ponder over it.

How may we develop this thought?

How is that we may suppress the desire for this life? How may we develop thought for the next life? How may we think on the same lines as the shepherd? How may we see as the young girl saw?

There is only one way for that. It is to join the company of one who has the Hereafter in mind and who fears the standing before Allah. We must adopt his company, keep ourselves with him, sit with him and listen to him. He will instill in us the reflection of the Hereafter.

It was this very companionship that changed the lives of the noble Companions رضی اللہ عنہم. They were the very ones who fought each other on flimsy worldly matters. They were those who fought a war for forty years over the young of a chicken. They had fought for the sake of wells, land, sheep and animals. They slit each other's throats for these petty things and they chased each other for these things. But, once they gained the company of the Holy Prophet ﷺ they gave up the worldly life to the extent that they left their belongings in Makkah and migrated to Madinah bare handed.

The condition of the Companions رضی اللہ عنہم

The Ansar (Helpers) of Madinah offered half of their properties to the Muhajireen (migrators) from Makkah telling them that they were their brothers. But, the Muhajireen said that they would not take that. They said that they would work on their lands and were willing to accept a share in the produce. Where had their craving for the world gone?

Picture this scene. It is a battlefield. Jihad is in progress. Death is being witnessed. Someone recalls a Hadith that the Holy Prophet ﷺ said, "If anyone is martyred in the cause of Allah then he will grant him high ranks of Paradise." Someone asked, "Did the Messenger of Allah really say so?" The narrator confirms that indeed he had heard this with his own ears the Prophet ﷺ had said that and that he had remembered it, the enquiring Companion says, "Well, now it is forbidden for me to live without Jihad." He dashes among the enemies, sword in hand. An arrow pierces his chest and he sees blood spring out of it and exclaims فزت ورب الکعبہ "By the Lord of the Ka'bah, I am victorious, today!" (I have attained the goal!).

These were the people who had craved for the world and loved it but the company of the Holy Prophet ﷺ put the desire for the Hereafter in their hearts and minds.

The firm Faith of the Magicians

The Qur'an tells us about Sayyidina Musa علیہ السلام. When he invited Fir'awn (the Pharaoh) to believe, he showed him a sign by throwing his staff on the ground and it turned into a serpent. The Pharaoh ordered that his magicians must be summoned to counter the miracle. Magicians were called from all over the country and told that they would compete with a great magician and they must defeat him by displaying their craft. The chosen magicians came and although they were among the closest to Fir'awn yet the terms were agreed upon

قَالُوْا لِفِرْعَوْنَ اَئِنَّ لَنَا لَاَجْرًا اِنْ كُنَّا نَحْنُ الْغٰلِبِيْنَ (الشعراء: ٤١)

They said to Fir'awn, "Will there be a reward for us if we should be the victors?" (Ash-Shu'ara, 26:41)

The time of the competition drew near. The magicians stood before Sayyidina Musa عليه السلام and threw down their ropes which turned into serpents moving about. Allah inspired Sayyidina Musa عليه السلام to throw down his staff and as he did it, it swallowed up all the serpents. The magicians knew their magic and they understood that what they had seen was not magic. They knew that he was a Messenger of Allah. As they believed in him and saw him, they benefited from the company of the Prophet. They said all in one voice:

قَالُوْٓا اٰمَنَّا بِرَبِّ هٰرُوْنَ وَمُوْسٰى (طه: ٧٠)

"We believe in the Lord of Musa and Harun." (Ta Ha, 20:70)

Fir'awn, who observed all this, said:

اٰمَنْتُمْ لَهٗ قَبْلَ اَنْ اٰذَنَ لَكُمْ

"Have you believed in him before I gave you leave." (Ta Ha, 20:71)

He then threatened them with dire punishment

لَاُقَطِّعَنَّ اَيْدِيَكُمْ وَاَرْجُلَكُمْ مِنْ خِلَافٍ وَّلَاُصَلِّبَنَّكُمْ فِيْ جُذُوْعِ النَّخْلِ وَلَتَعْلَمُنَّ اَيُّنَآ اَشَدُّ عَذَابًا وَّاَبْقٰى (طه: ٧١)

"So I will certainly cut off your hands and your feet on opposite sides, and I will certainly crucify you upon the trunks of the palm-trees, and you will certainly know which of us is severer in chastisement and more abiding." (Ta Ha, 20:71)

These were the same magicians who had demanded and settled terms with Fir'awn before the competition and who had stood up against Sayyidina Musa عليه السلام, who no longer demanded their wages but were now faced with the hangman's noose. Fir'awn threatened to cut off their hands and feet. In spite of that they said:

قَالُوْا لَنْ نُّؤْثِرَكَ عَلٰى مَا جَآءَنَا مِنَ الْبَيِّنٰتِ وَالَّذِيْ فَطَرَنَا فَاقْضِ مَآ اَنْتَ قَاضٍ (سورة طه: ٧٢)

"We shall not prefer you over what has reached us of the clear proofs, nor over Him who has created us. So decree what you will (like to) decree." (Ta ha, 20:72)

"We cannot prefer you or your wealth and kingdom over the miracles we have seen and you can only decree concerning the life of this world." You may cut off our hands or feet, or you may send us to gallows-your decision will be limited to the life of this world but what we have seen concerns the Hereafter, the everlasting life.

This was the behaviour of a people who were overtaken by change in a moment-a little while ago they demanded wages but soon thereafter they were ready to go to the gallows. How was the change brought about? It was faith coupled with faithful company.

Advantages of good company

Therefore, when believing persons get the right company, it brings about a revolution in the hearts. It eliminates craving for the world and replaces it with the thought of the Hereafter. As this happens, the qualities of man are brought out and highlighted until then he is not a man but an animal. His only aim, until then, is to amass worldly favours even at the cost of human lives. There is no other way to derive human qualities except by thinking of the Hereafter and this is achieved only by keeping the company of those who reflect on the next life. The only way to be religious and to fill our lives with religion is to remain in the company of men devoted to Allah, who meditate on the Hereafter. Their company will inspire us to reflect on the next life. May Allah, through His mercy, grow this conduct in us and solve all our difficulties. Aameen.

The situation today

Today, we are faced with difficulties all round. There are the police, the courts and other forces to solve our difficulties, but these government offices do not move without being bribed. To fight that an anticorruption force is established. The result is that the rate of bribe is doubled because a new partner joins the bribe receivers. Does this mean that a force upon force, a check upon check, a supervisor over a supervisor should be established? Instead of bribery being eliminated, it would be increased. The reason is that those who are appointed to overlook have before them–like those whom they are to watch–the life of this world. All of them hope to better their lives–each wishes to have a better house, a better car, better clothes, and so on. I can assure you that without the fear of Allah and without the fear of the day of reckoning, no amount of police force, anticorruption forces, law-enforcement men and courts can solve our problems. The U.S. is said to be the most civilized country, most educated, wealthiest, most advanced in science and technology, a centre of learning, their police is always alert and cannot be bribed, their police arrives within three minutes of being called–yet when I visited there I was advised not to wear my watch or keep much money with me. There is always a risk of someone snatching a watch or robbing you! To do that he may even kill his victim. The alert police is helpless! The courts and other government agencies are mere witnesses. On the one hand, they raise the American flag on the moon but their President admits that the biggest problem before them is to fight crime. Iqbal has said:

ڈھونڈنے والا ستاروں کی گزر گاہوں کا
اپنے افکار کی دنیا میں سفر کر نہ سکا

جس نے سورج کی شعاعوں کو گرفتار کیا
زندگی کی شب تاریک سحر کر نہ سکا

(The one who discovers the path of the stars, cannot Journey through his own thoughts. He who subdues the rays of the sun, cannot light the darkness of the night of his life.)

We observe this picture and will go on observing it. We will continue to observe it as long as we do not place our brow on the feet of the Holy Prophet ﷺ, as long as we do not follow his guidance and let the thought of the Hereafter overshadow our minds.

Our problems will never be solved no matter how many laws we enact or how many departments we set up to enforce the laws. The only solution is to sit with the men of Allah, to listen to them and learn about the Hereafter from them.

May Allah cause us to realise the truth, to meditate on the Hereafter and to give up the race for the things of this world.

May Allah let us enjoy the company of pious, religious men, Aameen!

اما بعد !

فاعوذ بالله من الشيطن الرجيم بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم

عن عبدالله بن عمر رضى الله عنهما قال قال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم احب الاعمال الى الله سرور يدخله على مسلم (المعجم الكبير، حديث نمبر: ١٣٦٤٦)

Praise belongs to Allah. We praise Him and ask Him for help. We seek forgiveness from Him and we believe in Him and place our trust in Him. We seek His protection from the mischief of our souls and from our evil deeds. He whom Allah guides, no one can mislead and he whom He leaves astray, none can guide. We bear witness that there is no god but Allah, the one who has no partner and we bear witness that Sayyidina Muhammad is His Slave and Messenger, may Allah bless him and his family and his companions and may He favour him and give him peace, a complete peace in plenty.

Sayyidina Abdullah bin Umar رضی اللہ عنہ said that the Messenger of Allah ﷺ has said: "The best of the deeds in the sight of Allah is to please the heart of a Muslim." (Al-Mu'ajjim al Kabir, Hadith # 13646)

Although the line of transmission of this hadith is weak, its text is supported by other Ahadith. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has emphasized in many of his Ahadith, sayings and deeds that it is very dear to Allah to make a believer happy.

Keep My Slaves happy

Maulana Doctor Abdul hayyi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ used to say that when a worshipper turns to Allah and expresses his love for Him then he seems to hear Allah tell him, "I am not going to meet you in this world but if you love me then you must love My slaves." Those who love Allah must love His creatures and the demand of that love is to make them happy and keep them happy.

To please anyone is like performing The Hajj Akbar

Our society goes to the extremes as far as this behaviour is concerned. We do not exercise moderation. On the one hand, there are some people who attach no importance to making another Muslim happy, nor do they know that it is a from of worship. If anyone pleases another Muslim, or any other person, Allah awards a very great reward for that but we do not realise it. Our elders have said:

دل بدست آور کہ حج اکبر است

"To take the heart of a Muslim in one's hand (that is, to please him) is like performing the great pilgrimage (Hajj Akbar)." It is not without reason that our elders have compared it to Hajj Akbar but it is because to please the heart of a Muslim is a deed liked by Allah.

The result of pleasing other people

If all of us were to obey the teachings of this hadith and each one of us were to make someone else happy then this world will be an example of Paradise. There will be no quarrel, no jealousy and no one will be hurt by another person. Therefore, we must make it a point to make someone else happy even if we have to undergo a little trouble. We must let him be comfortable and happy. The consequence of the little trouble we take will be a large reward in the Hereafter and it will be much pleasing to us then.

It is Sadaqah to meet someone happily

According to a hadith, the Prophet ﷺ has enumerated the different kinds of sadaqah. He has said of somethings that they were sadaqah (charity). To call something sadaqah, is to say that the reward against that deed is equal to the reward against sadaqah. The final words of the Prophet ﷺ in the same Hadith are:

وان تلقى اخاك بوجه طلق

And if you meet your brother with a smiling face (that is sadaqah).

When we meet someone we must feel that he is happy on meeting us. The meeting must cool his heart and this is counted as sadaqah.

Therefore, those people who keep themselves aloof when they meet others are the ones who neglect the Sunnah. Those who are reserved do not observe the Sunnah. The Sunnah method is to meet a Muslim brother with happiness and to make him happy too.

Do not make anyone happy by Sinning

We saw people at one extreme who attach no significance to making anyone happy but there are some others at the other extreme who concede that it is a form of worship to please another Muslim and they do it even if they have to commit a sin for that. They will please him and go to the extent of doing something improper. They claim to observe the worship by pleasing someone else in this manner. This is to follow a wrong path because we must please other people in an approved and proper manner. If anyone pleases someone else in an unapproved and improper way then he is displeasing Allah by committing the sin in order to please that person; this is not a form of worship. If out of regard for him, someone sins to please him then he is not following religion and is not observing worship.

The case of the Poet Fayzi

Fayzi was a great poet and writer in the times of the Emperor Akbar. Once he was having his beard shaved at a barber's. Someone passed by and saw Fayzi having a shave, so he said to him:

آغا ریش ے تراشی

"Agha! Are you having your beard shaved?"

Fayzi replied:

بلے! ریش ے تراشم ولے دِلے کسے را نے خراشم

"Sure! I am having my beard shaved but I am not hurting anyone's heart."

He meant to say that he was concerned with what he did and he did not cause ill feelings to anyone else. However. By rebuking him that man had caused him ill feelings. That man said:

دلے کسے نمی خراشی ...ولے دلے رسول ﷺ ے خراشی

"Right, you are not hurting anyone else but you are hurting the heart of the Messenger ﷺ."

Men of Allah keep other people happy

So, it is with some people that they say, "We are making others happy and if we have to commit a sin we will not hesitate." How can they hope to make anyone happy by causing anger to Allah, by disobeying Him and by disregarding His command. It is not a worship that causes Allah to be displeased. The Hadith means to say that we must try to please a Muslim through lawful means. Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه explained this Hadith in these words:

"This is a practice like the natural habit of Sufis. "

The Sufis are regarded as friends of Allah. They always think of pleasing every Muslim and this comes naturally to them. Anyone who visits them returns happy, never depressed. This is because they are inspired by Allah to observe the Sunnah to please the creatures of Allah.

Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه says further:

Do not involve in sin

"There is a condition attached to it. That is: to give pleasure do not do evil yourself."

It means that a man is engaged in giving pleasure to other's and making them happy but because of this he is engaged in evil, disobedience and sin; he must not do this.

The Maulana goes on to say:

"as is the way with those who say that their path is sulah kul (everything is right)."

Some people say they believe that 'everything is right' and they will never stop anyone who errs, will not call an evil 'evil' and will not condemn a wrong. This is not correct.

The Maulana says further:

Do not cease to command the approved

"Some people cease to command the approved and forbid the disreputable for this reason."

They fear that if they ask someone to offer prayers, he might be hurt or if they forbid someone else from doing wrong, he may not like it. And they say, "we should not cause ill feelings to anyone."

Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه says further:

"Have they not read the command in the Holy Qur'an:

وَلَاتَأْخُذْكُمْ بِهِمَا رَأْفَةٌ فِي دِيْنِ اللهِ

And let not tenderness for the twain seize you in regard to the law of Allah" (An-Nur. 24:2)

If someone is disobeying the law of the religion and commits a sin then let not compassion for him stop you from censuring him.

Forbid the disreputable gently

However, we must use such an approach to forbid a wrong that causes the wrong doer a minimum of heart burning. We must not use a method that breaks his heart. Instead we must adopt a mild approach. We must be tender, loving, compassionate, well wishing and sincere. It must not be our aim to be spiteful. However, it is not correct to cease forbidding him for fear that he might feel hurt no matter how mild an approach because it is our first duty to please Allah even if it displeases the entire creation.

Therefore, both the extremes are wrong–to neglect altogether and to indulge even if one has to sin.

We must try to please a Muslim. Where the limits of Allah are concerned, and the forbidden and improper are touched, we must prefer to obey the commands of Allah whether the other person feels hurt or is happy. We must obey only Allah and His Messenger ﷺ and not care for anyone else. Nevertheless, we must do our best to adopt a mild and gentle approach.

May Allah cause us to do good. Aameen!

عن ابى ذرالغفارى رضى الله عنه قال قال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم خالقوا الناس باخلاقهم اوكما قال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم (اتحاف السادة المتقين، ٦: ٣٥٤)

Praise belongs to Allah. We praise Him, seek His help and ask Him for forgiveness. We believe in Him and trust in Him. We seek the protection of Allah from the mischief of our souls and from our evil deeds. He whom Allah guides, no one can mislead and he whom He leaves astray no one can guide. And, we bear witness that there is no god but Allah, the One, who has no partner and we bear witness that Sayyidina Muhammad is His Slave and Messenger. May Allah bless him and his family and his companions and may He favour him and give him peace, a complete and abundant peace.

It is reported by Abu Zarr al-Ghifari رضی اللہ عنہ that the Messenger of Allah ﷺ said: "Deal with people according to their disposition."

It is also part of religion that a man allows for the temperament of those people whom he come across. He must not do anything that offends them even if what he wishes to do is proper and not forbidden. He must refrain from doing this because it is against the temperament of the other person who might feel uneasy otherwise.

According to social manners as taught by religion allowances for the temperament of people is an important chapter. May Allah elevate the rank of Maulana Thanavi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ who explained and highlighted this chapter as a Sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ.

Allowance for the temperament of Sayyidina Uthman رضی اللہ عنہ

Thus, we learn from a Hadith that once the Holy Prophet ﷺ was sitting in his home. He had a tahband (a sheet of cloth) on his waist down and it was raised rather high upto his knees, according to a version. Perhaps, this may have happened before the knee was included in the prescribed satr (The portion that must be covered before other people). Some versions tell us that the knees were covered.

Someone knocked at the door. It was Sayyidina Abu Bakr رضی اللہ عنہ and the Prophet ﷺ gave his permission to him to enter the house. He came in and sat down with the Prophet ﷺ who did not alter his posture but remained seated as he had been, his legs were uncovered. After a while there was another knock and it was Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ. He too was asked to enter and he sat down with the Prophet ﷺ who continued to sit as he had been making no changes in his position. There was a third knock after some time. "Who is it"? It was Sayyidina Uthman رضی اللہ عنہ. The Prophet ﷺ immediately covered his legs lowering the tahband over them and then said that he may be allowed in. So, he too came in and sat down.

Even the Angels are modest

Someone had observed all this and he asked' "Messenger of Allah, when Abu Bakr رضی اللہ عنہ came in you did not lower your tahband but remained seated as you were. You did the same thing when Umar رضی اللہ عنہ came in but when Uthman رضی اللہ عنہ came in, you changed your posture. Why is that?" The Prophet ﷺ said, "Why should I not be modest before a man, before whom the angels also show modesty?"

Perfect in modesty and Faith

The peculiar characteristic of Sayyidina Uthman رضی اللہ عنہ was modesty. Allah had granted him a very high station in this characteristic. He was known as Kamil ul-Haya wal-Eiman (Perfect in modesty and faith). The Prophet ﷺ was aware of the temperament of all his Companions and he knew that Sayyidina Uthman رضی اللہ عنہ was extremely modest. It was not improper to have the legs uncovered upto the knees and that is why he did not cover his legs when Sayyidina Abu bakr رضی اللہ عنہ came and later when Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ came, but when Sayyidina Uthman رضی اللہ عنہ came he covered up his legs as he knew that he would feel uneasy because he was very modest. The Prophet ﷺ covered his legs before Sayyidina Uthman رضی اللہ عنہ was asked to enter.

The Prophet ﷺ allowed for the temperament of his Companions رضی اللہ عنہم who were ever prepared to lay down their lives on a mere hint from him. Suppose the Prophet ﷺ had not stirred when Sayyidina Uthman رضی اللہ عنہ had come and remained in the same condition as he was, he would not have raised an objection but the Prophet ﷺ meant to teach us that we must accommodate those with whom we are acquainted. We must make allowance for their temperament. How careful was the Prophet ﷺ in this regard!

Care for the temperament of Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ

Once Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ presented himself before the Holy Prophet ﷺ and he said to him, "Umar, I have seen a surprising dream tonight. I saw Paradise and a very splendid Palace therein. I asked to whom the Palace belonged and was told that it belonged to you. It appealed to me so much that I wished to enter it and see what the Palace of Umar was like but then, O Umar, I remembered your sense of honour. Allah has granted you with a great sense of honour. I felt that it was not in keeping with Umar's sense of honour to enter it and see it before he does it himself. So, I did not enter it." As Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ heard it, he began to weep and said:

اوعليك يا رسول الله اغار

"O Messenger of Allah! Will I do that for you? Will I not like that you enter the Palace before me?"

Consideration for every Companion

This shows that the Holy Prophet ﷺ cared for the temperament of his Companions رضی اللہ عنہم in a very particular manner. He never felt that he was their leader and they his followers, their mentor and they his disciples, their teacher and they his pupils so he could overlook on this point. Rather, he was considerate for the temperament of each of his Companions.

Consideration for the temperament of the Mothers of the Faithful Including Sayyidah Ayshah رضی اللہ عنہا

Once the Prophet ﷺ intended to seclude himself in I'tikaf (observed in the last ten days of Ramadan when one devotes oneself to meditation and worship in seclusion).

Sayyidah Ayshah رضی اللہ عنہا also said that she would like to observe I'tikaf with him. While it is not proper for women to observe it in a mosque, they must observe this in their homes, it was different with her because the door of her house opened into the mosque. She hoped to seclude herself next to the door and if the Holy Prophet ﷺ performed his I'tikaf next to the door within the mosque, she would not violate the veil. She could always enter her house when it became necessary and return to her place after attending to her needs without marring the sanctity of the I'tikaf. So, she sought the Prophet's ﷺ permission and got it.

However, on the 20th Ramadan the Prophet ﷺ had gone out somewhere and when he returned he found some tents raised in the Masjid Nabavi. He asked the people what they were for and was told that the Mothers of the Faithful had erected them. When they learnt that Sayyidah Ayshah رضی اللہ عنہا was observing the I'tikaf, the other wives of the Prophet ﷺ decided that they should also seize the opportunity to perform the auspicious worship. So, they got the tents erected for themselves to observe I'tikaf in those tents. The Holy Prophet ﷺ felt that the case of Sayyidah Ayshah رضی اللہ عنہا was different from the others because her house was attached to the Masjid Nabawi while the houses of his other wives were at some distance from the Masjid. If they also observed I'tikaf then they would have to travel to their homes and back, again and again and that might violate the veil. It was not thus proper for woman to observe the I'tikaf within the mosque. So, he said on seeing the tents,

البر یردن ؟

"Do these women hope to do some pious work?"

He meant to say that it was not piety that women seclude themselves in I'tikaf in a mosque.

I too will not observe I'tikaf this year

However, he had already given permission to Sayyidah Ayshah رضی اللہ عنہا to observe I'tikaf. The reason for giving the permission was very obvious. The same did not apply to his other wives. If he now allowed her to go ahead with the I'tikaf and disallowed his other wives, they would feel hurt that he had let her complete the I'tikaf. So, he asked Sayyidah Ayshah رضی اللہ عنہا to forgo the idea of observing I'tikaf. Later, however, he felt that since he had permitted her earlier to observe I'tikaf next to the mosque, she would feel bad if the permission was withdrawn. Under the circumstances, he made it known that he would not himself observe I'tikaf that year.

Redemption of the I'tikaf

We have seen, therefore, that to give consideration to the temperament of the other Mothers of the Faithful, the Prophet ﷺ stopped Sayyidah Ayshah رضی اللہ عنہا from observing the I'tikaf. Then to allow for her temperament, he revoked his own decision to perform the I'tikaf himself although he had been doing it all his life during the month of Ramadan.

He gave up his regular practice merely to give regard to the temperament of Sayyidah Ayshah رضی اللہ عنہا. This was the first time in all his life that he did so and he redeemed it the following year by observing I'tikaf for twenty days instead of the usual ten.

This too is Sunnah

This behaviour of the Prophet ﷺ tells us how many concessions he offered to his juniors. Even in explaining a rule of Shari'ah he adopted a method that did not offend anyone. He explained the rule, behaved in accordance with its dictates and made sure that no one felt hurt. At the same time, he made it very clear that if a deed is not fard or wajib (degrees of obligatory duties) but merely mustahab (recommended) then one may postpone or forgo observance if it is likely to hurt someone. This behaviour is according to the sunnah of the Prophet ﷺ.

The routine of Maulana Doctor Abdul Hayyi رحمة الله عليه

It was the practice of Maulana Doctor Abdul Hayyi رحمة الله عليه that every year throughout the month of Ramadan he observed I'tikaf between the 'Asr and Maghrib prayers. He spent the time reciting the Qur'an, remembering Allah through Zikr, glorification and supplications. If he had any time after that, he made a long supplication to Allah that ended with the time of Iftar (breaking of Fast) at Maghrib. He always advised those under his influence to do the same. In this way, a man could spend his time in the mosque, gain the excellence of I'tikaf and continue to observe his routine too. Finally, he could make a long supplication to Allah. This supplication is the essence of Ramadan because the day ends at that time and the moment of breaking Fast draws near when the worshipper seems to have lost strength. In such a situation, prayers are granted as they are made. The Maulana frequently asked those under his influence to follow this practice and many of them continue to observe it to this day.

Spend the time at home instead of at the mosque

Once, one of his disciples said to the Maulana, "Maulana! I followed your directions and spent my time between 'Asr and Maghrib at the mosque reciting the Qur'an, occupied in Zikr and glorifying Allah. One day my wife complained to me that while I was away from home all the day except this period between 'Asr and Maghrib, I had come to spend this time too away from home. She said that it was during this period that we could talk and have Iftar together which she missed ever since I had taken up the new practice. Maulana, now I am confused what I should do:

continue with what you have suggested or please my wife." Barely had he finished speaking when the Maulana said, "Do as your wife says. Spend the time at home. Recite as much of the Qur'an as you can and go through some of the routine, speak to your wife and have Iftar with her."

You will get a full reward for that

Then, the Maulana added, "The practice that I have suggested is at best a recommended procedure that is called mustahab. But, what your wife has said is included in her rights over you (her husband). You must keeping your self within limits, let her have enjoyment and contentment of heart. Sometimes, it is wajib on you (the hasband) to do so. Thus, if you omit the practice I have suggested in order to give your wife her rights, Insha Allah, you will not be deprived of the blessings of that practice too. This is because you have given up the practice to allow for her temperament and please her. Insha Allah, you will get the same reward that you would have received if you had continued with the practice.

Visiting the sick instead of observing Zikr

Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayyi رحمة الله عليه spoke about a man who was given to observe routine practice of Zikr at a particular time when he sat alone by himself and indulged in the thinking of Allah. Once, someone in his family–his father, mother, wife, or a child suddenly fell ill. He could not then devote his time to his routine and had to look after the patient. As a result, he felt very bad about it because all his time was spent with the sick.

The Maulana said, "He must not feel bad about it because to look after the sick is also a form of worship."

Heed the demand of the moment

He goes on to say that religion is really the name for behaving in accordance with the demand of the time. "You must see what you are expected to do. At that time when there was illness in the family it was expected of you that you give up your devotional exercises and nurse the sick. Likewise, while looking after the sick, do not feel deprived of the Zikr and remembrance that you were used to do because Allah does not deprive anyone and you have suspended that exercise for a valid reason."

Will not be deprived of blessings of Ramadan

In the same way, Maulana Doctor Abdul Hayyi رحمة الله عليه spoke about a person who becomes ill during the month of Ramadan or goes on a journey. He cannot Fast because of that reason so he is required to redeem the Fasts he missed after Ramadan when he recovers from his illness or returns from his journey. When he redeems the Fasts, the day he keeps the Fast will be as though it is Ramadan for him. He will get the same blessings that are associated with Ramadan. Allah had allowed him to postpone Fasting because he had a valid reason and it does not go with the mercy of Allah to deprive him of the blessings of Ramadan.

Therefore, if anyone suspends his regular devotional exercises for a valid reason then, Insha Allah, he will continue to receive its blessings and favours. So, to behave according to the needs of the moment is to observe religion. Let it not be that he says that he set aside a particular time to recite the Qur'an or to observe any other form of worship and so will not attend to the dying or the sick. Such behaviour is contrary to religion. Religious conduct is to behave according to the dictates of time and to attend to one's duties.

Do not compell anyone unnecessarily

Therefore, we must allow for variations in temperament and when dealing with anyone we must see that our conduct does not hurt him. This conduct is an important part of social education although it is not heeded now-a-days. For instance, if someone is not prepared to do something and we compell him to do it and he agrees to it under compulsion then the poor fellow undergoes much inconvenience because of our insistence. It is possible, we may have sinned in this manner.

How to recommend

Recommendation is very common these days. If we have some relations with anyone then we take it for granted that he will recommend us to someone while this verse of the Qur'an is very clear on that:

مَنْ يَّشْفَعْ شَفَعَةً حَسَنَةً يَكُنْ لَّهٗ نَصِيْبٌ مِّنْهَا

Whosoever intercedes with good intercession, his shall be a share of it. (An-Nisa 4:85)

There is great virtue in making a good recommendation, in interceding for a good cause. However, people do forget that a recommendation is virtuous when it is not a burden on the one to whom it is made. If anyone makes a recommendation for a person, he allows for the disposition of this person and pleases him. But, he does not allow for the temperament of the man to whom he recommends. That man will be in a dilemma, not knowing whether to accede to the recommendation coming from an important person or observing his own principles in this regard; if he does not accept the recommendation he fears he might hurt the person who brought him. So, this is not recommendation; it is a pressure. We must keep in mind the disposition of the other person before making a recommendation.

Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه had a way to make recommendations. He would add to his recommending words, "If this thing is not against your principles and procedure, then you may oblige this man." Sometimes, he also added these words, "If it is against your procedure and you do not do it then I will not mind it in the least." He wrote these words that the person to whom the recommendation was sent need not feel compelled.

Someone visited me and on the basis of our ties he told me that he wanted me to do something, I asked him what it was? He said, "First you must promise that you will do it for me." I told him that I can only promise after I know what I have to do. But he insisted that I must assure him that I will do what he wants before knowing what it is. I asked him, "Suppose that task is beyond me, what shall I do then?" He said, "The task is within your ability." I again asked him to let me know what the task was, but he harped on the same string that I must first promise him that I will do what he wants me to do before knowing it.

I tried to explain to him that a promise can only be made after knowing the nature of the task and not before that. He said, "If you refuse to do as I say then it is against our mutual relationship."

Is that the correct approach? It is the same as applying pressure on someone and insisting that unless he promises to oblige he will not be told what he has to do. Thus, it has become part of our relationships that we intercede for them although it is contrary to the Islamic social etiquettes. It places someone under mental agony and to do that is sinful.

Ties have become customary

In the present times, ties have become mere custom. If one meets the custom then he is said to be upholding demands of relationship. If he does not follow custom then he is guilty of not maintaining the ties. For instance, if anyone invites another man then the invitee must accept the invitation and oblige the inviter even if he has to go a long way and face great difficulty. His circumstances and engagements may not allow him but he is expected to accept the invitation.

The invitation of Maulana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه

Maulana Idris Kandhalwi رحمة الله عليه was an esteemed religious leader. He was one of the close childhood friends of my father, Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه. Once when he came to Karachi from Lahore, he visited the Dar-ul-Uloom to meet my father. The time when he had come was not anywhere near lunch time. My respected father was much pleased with his arrival and he received him very warm heartedly. As the time of his departure drew near, my respected father said "Brother, Maulana Idris! I wish very much that we have lunch together but you stay very far and you have very little time with you. You are going away tomorrow. Now, if I insist that you have lunch with me then that will not be an invitation but an ordeal for you. You do not have enough time and it would cost you at least four to five hours to come all the way here from your lodgings. This will be very troublesome to you. So, I do not invite you although I long to invite you, since I cannot let you go without inviting you, hence I wish to make a small gift to you. The money that I would have spent on inviting you, I present to you as a gift." Maulana Idris رحمة الله عليه took the gift and placed it on his head saying, "This is a great blessing for me. Honestly, I too wished to have a meal with you and come here for that but I do not have enough time on hand. You have helped me find a way out!"

Ponder over it. If my father had invited him to lunch or dinner, he would have presented an excuse. Then, if my father had insisted that he should come to him, he would have had to spend about five hours for that, and as a result, he would have been unable to attend to the work he had come from Lahore to accomplish. This would not have been an invitation, but an ordeal.

'Love' is to provide comfort to the 'Beloved'

These customs have not only ruined our society today but they have also distanced us from the fine points of religion. Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه has said something very opt and proper. If we get it into our hearts, Allah will cause all our difficulties to be solved. He said, "Love is the name of providing relief to the beloved. " One does see that he whom one loves gets all the comforts. It is not love to impose oneself over the beloved and satisfy one's own wishes. If the lover is senseless and foolish then his love will cause hardship to his beloved. However, the respected Maulana رحمة الله عليه proposes that it is senseless to suppose that love can cause hardship and "if you love someone then do not make things difficult for your beloved but make them easy and give relief. You will have to forgo your desires and you must give relief."

Whatever is being said is an explanation of the saying of the Holy Prophet ﷺ:

خالقوا الناس باخلاقهم

"Deal with people according to their disposition."

When we go to deal with someone, we must first examine what his temperament is. We must weigh whether he will be burdened with what we have to do with him. Will he be put to inconvenience? We cannot get these things into ourselves unless we let ourselves have the company of pious men, of religious mentors and eminent elders. This is my personal experience. Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه trained his disciples in his Khanqah (recluse) how they may allow for variations in temperament of different people. He kept an eye on every action of his disciples and he taught them how they should conduct themselves on different occasions and in different situations.

This Hadith was the last of the Ahadith on social etiquettes and it tells of the basic points of all rules and all etiquettes. It calls on us to ensure that we do not cause inconvenience through our conduct to anyone. We must be careful about that and pay heed to this behaviour. Before we do anything, we must ensure that our performance does not cause hardship to anyone. We must make allowances for the temperament of other people.

Jigar Muradabadi was a noted poet. He too had the honour to be in the company of Maulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه. He has said something very useful and if we adopt that poem as our guiding principle then it is a summary of the entire social etiquettes of Islam. He has said:

اس نفع و ضرر کی دنیا میں یہ ہم نے لیا ہے درس جنوں
اپنا تو زیاں منظور سہی اوروں کا زیاں منظور نہیں

In this life of gain and loss, we have learnt this lesson. We may endure pain and inconvenience to ourselves, but we cannot tolerate harm or inconvenience to others.

He means to say that we cannot hope for everything to go as we choose in this world. We must be prepared to make a sacrifice with ourselves and endure if things take a turn against our interests and we must endure difficulties. But, we should not be the cause of financial, physical, mental or psychological loss to anyone.

This is what religion teaches. This is the essence of social manners. May Allah help me and all of you to behave accordingly. Aameen!

(ترمذى ، كتاب الصلوٰة ، باب ما جاء فى صلوٰة الحاجة)

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and His forgiveness and we believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Allah from the evils of our selves and the vices of our deeds. There is no one to misguide whom Allah guides and there is no one to guide whom Allah lets go astray. I bear witness that there is no god but Allah Alone. He has no partner. I also bear witness that our authority, our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad is His servant and His Messenger. May Allah have mercy on him, his household and on his Companions and bless them and send peace on them in great abundance.

INTRODUCTORY WORDS

This Hadith is narrated by Abdullah bin Abu Aufa رضى الله عنه who was a jurist companion of the Prophetﷺ. He quotes the Messenger of Allah ﷺ as saying. "If anyone needs something from Allah, or from a fellow man then he must first perform ablution punctiliously and offer two rakat prayer[1]. Then he should praise and glorify Allah and invocate blessings on the Prophet ﷺ[2]. Then he must make a supplication in these words:

" لا اله الا الله الحكيم الكريم سبحان الله رب العرش العظيم الحمد لله رب العلمين اسألك موجبات رحمتك وعزائم مغفرتك والغنيمة من كل بر والسلامة من كل اثم لا تدع لنا ذنباً الا غفرته ولا هما الا فرجته ولا حاجة هى لك رضى الا قضيتها يا ارحم الرحمين "

There is no one worthy of worship except Allah, the element, the Bountiful. Glory be to Allah,

1. Rakat is plural of rakat, a unit of prayer. Prayer is used for salah, (Namaz in Urdu).
2 Known as durood in urdu but salah on the Prophetﷺ, in Arabic.

Lord of the Magnificent. Throne! I do seek all causes of the (grant of) Your mercy, and the purposes of (securing) Your forgiveness, a full share of all virtuous deeds, a safety from every sin. Leave none of our sins unforgiven, no anxiety unrelieved and no need, wherewith you are pleased, unfulfilled. O you, the Most merciful of those who show mercy!"

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has described the method of a prayer which in common parlance is called Salah Al Hajah or 'prayer for fulfilment of a need' whenever a Muslim has a need or faces an anxiety or desires something which seems difficult to achieve then he must follow the advice of the Holy Prophet ﷺ and offer the salah Al Hajah, and make the supplication of his Hajah, then he may present his need or desire before Allah in his own words. If there is good for him in that, the merciful Allah will surely fulfil his Hajah, or need. Thus, it is the sunnah, (practice) of the Holy Prophet ﷺ to offer the Salah Al-Hajah, at the time of need.

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN A MUSLIM AND A DISBELIEVER

When a man needs something. He employs the worldly means available to him and there is no bar in Shariah to use such means. However, a Muslim and a disbeliever differ in their faith, for an unbeliever relies wholly on the means he employs to achieve his end.

SEEKING A JOB

Let us take the example of a man who is unemployed and tries to get himself an employment. He would look out for job opportunities and submit his applications there and he would request someone to recommend him. These are the apparent means that he uses to achieve his objective. An unbeliever places all his reliance on these means and sees to it that his application is well written and the recommendation worthy.

On the other hand, a muslim also sends in an application and gets someone to recommend him in a proper way but he does not rely entirely on these means. He knows that his application and the recommendation are meaningless unless Allah makes them effective. He uses the means available and then begs of Allah and says to Him, "O Allah! It is your command, so I have adopted the means but only you can make them effective. I ask you alone to fulfil my desire."

THE CONTRIVANCE OF THE SICK

Let us take another example. A person gets sick. The apparent means that he will adopt are to get the advice of a doctor and follow his prescription. Again, a disbeliever who does not believe in Allah will place reliance on the doctor and the medicine he has suggested. However, the advice of the Holy Prophet ﷺ to a believer is that although he may adopt all the means available to him yet he must not depend on them to cure him. He must place his faith in Allah who is the one to cure. If he will not make the medicine and other means effective then these will not cure him. We know that a medicine cures a sick person but the same medicine is detrimental to another patient who suffers the same sickness as the first. This is because only Allah makes the medicine effective. If he wills, he may put cure in a pinch of dust, and if he wills he may render the most costly medicine inefficacious.

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has taught us, as we have seen, that while we may employ the means, we must not count on them to help us out but we must have full faith in Allah. We must pray to Him:

> "O Allah! I have done the best I could by contriving as I could. O Allah! Only You can give efficay to my efforts. Only You can make me successful. O Allah! Make them efficacious and make me successful."

EFFORT COMBINED WITH SUPPLICATION

A very appropriate and brief phrase of supplication is known from the Holy Prophet ﷺ which he made after employing available means or even if those means were in the form or even if those means were in the form of supplications.

اَللّٰهم هـذا الـجـهد و عـلـيـك التُّـكلان (ترمذی ابواب الدعوات باب نمبر ۳۰)

> "O Allah! This is the effort but reliance is placed in You alone"

VIEW POINT MUST BE CORRECTED

Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayy رحمة الله عليه used to say that religion is actually to correct one's angle of observation. Change the angle a little bit and that is religion, otherwise it is materialism. For instance, every religion requires a patient; to get treatment; even Islam tells us that if we are ill, we must get a doctor to treat us. However, it depends on how we observe it. While we must treat ourselves when we are unwell, we must not put faith on the treatment but we must trust in Allah to cure us.

HE IS THE CURER

This is what had prompted earlier Muslim physicians to write هوالشافی [1] on the prescriptions they wrote down. It is a practice of the Muslim. In those times, they were very careful to observe minutest details of Islamic belief and teachings in all their actions and in what they said. A physician when he begins to write down his prescription with هوالشافی, actually confides that the treatment he prescribes would not give the results unless the one who cures gives the cure. The believing doctor thus confesses his inability on the very first step. Besides, by writing هوالشافی he is also credited with an act of worship of Allah.

THE CURES OF WESTERN CULTURE

However, ever since we have imposed on ourselves the standards of western culture, we have forgotten our Islamic identity. The physician, today, does not trouble himself to write the words بسم الله (In the Name of Allah) before writing down the prescription, neither does he need to write هوالشافی. He examines his patient and prescribes the medicine. The reasons for this attitude is that our knowledge of science is taught to us by the unbelievers who have no concept of Allah as the one who cures. They rely on the medical means and their theories, and they only employ their ideas.

PROTECTING ISLAMIC VALUES

Allah has not disallowed us to acquire knowledge of science. Knowledge is not the property of any people or religion. Muslims too must learn science, but they must preserve the Islamic values and symbols. They must prote protect their faith and creed and reflect Islamic belief in their lives. A man who qualifies as a physician is not forbidden to begin writing the prescription with هوالشافی and it is not improper for him to concede that Allah is the only one who cures. He should also not fear being classed as a backward person if he writes هوالشافی on the prescription, neither is it against medical ethics to do so. Rather, he must realise that he is a Muslim doctor who believes in Allah, so he must make it known beforehand that whatever he does is not helpful if Allah does not make it efficacious.

1. Huwa Ash shafi, He is the one to cure.

ANYTHING AGAINST A PLAN IS COINCEDENCE!

Almost every day recognised physicians come across cases which go against their expectations. They concede that the treatment that they were giving to their patients brought results quite contrary to what they had expected. Their plans go haywire but they term what happens in this way as a 'coincidence.'

NOTHING IS EVER COINCIDENTAL

My respected father, Mawalana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه used to say, "It is wrong to say - as people often exclaim - that it was a coincidence because nothing in this world was a coincidence." Everything happens, as Allah desires it to happen. It is our habit to describe anything that we do not expect as a coincidence. The fact is that He who is the Master and the Creator of this universe maintains and sustains it and every thing happens as He wishes. Nothing can happen against His wish. So, the truth is that the medicine has no curing power by itself. Only when Allah gives it that power does it provide relief but when He does not give it the curing ability. It is not advantageous. What then is the meaning of "coincidence?"

REMEMBER THE PREPARER OF MEANS

We must not , therefore, count on our strategy or the means available to us but we must put faith in Musabbib al Asbab[1]. Not only has He allowed us to plan and employ means but He has actually ordered us to use them. He is the one Who has created them for us. He examines us and sees whether we depend on our plans and the means available to us. Or we depend on their Creator, too. The Prophet ﷺ had trained the companions رضی الله عنهم in such a way that they always counted on the Musabbib Al-Asbab. They used the means only because Allah had commanded them to do so and when anyone evinces perfect faith in Him and unflinching reliance. He displays unique miracles to them.

KHALID BIN WALID TAKES POISON

Sayyidina Khalid bin Walid رضی الله عنه had once laid siege to a strong fort in Syria. When the people inside the fort had grown exhausted of the siege, they sent their chief to Khalid bin Walid رضی الله عنه to negotiate peace. He carried a small phial in his hands which Khalid bin Walid رضی الله عنه observed and asked him about its contents. He said that there was a very strong poison inside the phial and he would consume it and commit suicide if the talks failed for he could not return to his people with the bad news.

1. Musabbib Al-asbab is an epithet of Allah which means Appointer or Preparer of Means or causes, or causer of causes. (Lane's Dictionary)

The foremost aim of all the Companions رضی الله عنهم was to preach Islam and Khalid bin Walid found an ideal opportunity to further the objective. He asked the chief of the enemy, "Are you confident that you will die immediately you swallow the poison?" He replied, "I am sure of that. This poison is so strong that no one has so far described its taste because the moment anyone sips it, he dies. He does not live long enough after that to say how it tastes. So, I am very sure that I will die immediately after I put it on my tongue".

Khalid bin Walid رضی الله عنه requested him to let him have the vial. Taking it into his hands he remarked, "Nothing in this world is efficacious unless Allah provides it with efficacy" He took the name of Allah and made this supplication:

بِسْمِ اللهِ الَّذِیْ لاَ یَضُرُّ مَعْ اِسْمِهٖ شَیْئٌ فِی الْاَرْضِ وَلَا فِی السَّمَآءِ وَهُوَ السَّمِیْعُ الْعَلِیْمُ

"In the name of Allah with which nothing on earth or in the heaven can harm. And he is All hearing, All-knowing".

And he said, "I swallow this poison and you observe whether I die or not. "The chieftain exclaimed, "You are tormenting yourself. The poison is so strong and rapid that if a little of it is placed on the tongue. The man will perish, while you intend to swallow all lof it. "Sayyidina Khalid bin Walid said, "Insha Allah[1], nothing will happen to me. "So saying he washed down his throat the contents of the vial and Allah revealed His Power. The chieftain observed the miracle of Allah's Power and submitted himself before Allah, that is, he embraced Islam.

1. Insha Allah: if Allah wills.

EVERYTHING DEPENDS ON THE WILL OF ALLAH

The companions رضی اللہ عنہم had a firm belief that whatever happened in this world happened because Allah willed it to happen. Nothing happens without His will. They had grown such a strong faith that the means and strategies were meaningless in their eyes. When any one shows this degree of faith then Allah lets him observe. His marvelous Power. It is the way of Allah: "the more you depend on the means and agencies, the more He will leave you tied to them, and the more you rely on Him the more He will relieve you of those things and show you the marvels of His Power". "The lives of the Holy Prophet ﷺ and his companions رضی اللہ عنہم were a practical demonstration of this fact.

AN INCIDENT IN THE LIFE OF THE PROPHET ﷺ

Once the Prophet ﷺ had returned from a battle and had broken journey in transit. There, he rested himself in the shade of a tree and no one was with him. An unbeliever happened to find him alone and with his sword drawn he stood over the Prophet ﷺ head, he said, "O Muhammad who will save you from me today? " He had imagined that the Prophet ﷺ would be alarmed on seeing him with the sword and finding no one around. But, there was no sign of alarm on the Prophet's countenance and he replied calmly. "Allah! He will save me". The unbeliever was taken aback and Allah caused him to be overwhelmed by the Prophet's composure. His hands shook and the sword fell down from his hand. The Prophet ﷺ picked it up and asked him, "Tell me now, who will protect you?"

In this way, the Prophet ﷺ let him realise that while he relied on his sword, the Prophet relied on the Maker of the sword who provides it with its potency. It was this way of life that the Prophet ﷺ presented before his companions رضی اللہ عنہم. The result was that every companion although he employed the means available to him yet relied on Allah.

MEANS BEFORE RELIANCE

One of the companions asked the Prophet ﷺ, Messenger of Allah! I go to the forest on my camel. When the time of prayer approaches, should I tether the animal or leave it to itself, placing trust in Allah? The Prophet ﷺ said:

اِعْقِلْ سَاقَهَا وَتَوَكَّلْ

"Tie its legs with a rope and trust in Allah."

Once, the animal is tied, rely on Allah and not on the rope which might snap. Mawlana Roomi has expressed this idea in his poetry.

با توکل پایۂ اُشتر ببند

That is bind the legs of the camle on tawakkal[1] A believing man, therefore, adopts available means as well as placing reliance on Allah. He uses the means and says to Allah:

اللهم هذا الجهد وعليك التكلان

"O Allah! I have adopted the means and put in the efforts as far as I could but beyond that I trust in You."

1. Tawakkal is reliance (on Allah)

RELY EVEN WHEN THE MEANS ARE AVAILABLE

Mawlana Ashraf Ali Thanavi رحمة الله عليه used to say, "People suppose that one relies on Allah only when the chances of his wish being fulfilled through apparent means are equal either way - he might or might not get what he wants. In that case, he may adopt the means and pray to Allah. But, they imagine that when anyone is confident of getting what he wants then he need not pray to Allah for his wishes or rely on Him. For instance, when food is laid before anyone, he is sure that he would eat that and so he does not pray to Allah to feed him and he does not rely on Him."

THAT IS THE REAL TIME TO RELY ON ALLAH

However, Mawlana Thanvi رحمة الله عليه has said that was the real time to place reliance on Allah and the true opportunity to pray to Him. Such an attitude will confirm that he does not rely on apparent means that are within his grasp. He would seem to be saying, "I have faith in You as a Sustainer and Nourisher, as a Creator and in Your Power and Mercy. "When food is before anyone, he should make this supplication, "O Allah! Feed me and give me health through it". For, although it seems possible to consume food easily yet it will be possible to eat it only if Allah so wills. There have been innumerable instances of men who were about to partake of food before them but failed to do so because of one or other obstacle or accident. So, even when food is ready one must pray to Allah to feed him.

In short one must always pray to Allah to help him out even if it seemed obvious what he would get what he wants.

ASK ALLAH TO FAVOUR IN EITHER CASE

We have read the words of the Prophet ﷺ in the every first hadith "If you need something from Allah or from a fellow man". There are times when there is no intermediary and we get something from Allah directly, children, for instance. Be that as it may, whether we require something from Allah or from a fellow man, we must ask Allah for it, in either case.

PERFORM ABLUITION PUNCTILIOUSLY

If we have enough time with us and that task we desire is not very urgent then we must offer Salah Al Hajah, for that. The Prophet ﷺ has instructed us to perform ablution, and perform it very carefully paying attention to every detail. We must not perform ablution merely to discharge an obligation but we must realize that it is the first step to an important form of worship. The Prophet ﷺ has recommended certain etiquette's and sunnah, procedures in ablution which we must take care of. Often, we perform ablution in a hurry and although the obligation is discharged, we miss the blessings that accrue from a carefully performed ablution.

SINS ARE OBLITERATED THROUGH ABLUTION

We learn from a Hadith that the Prophet ﷺ said, "When a servant of Allah performs ablution and washes his face, the sins committed by him through the face are washed away. When he washes his right hand, the sins committed by him with his right hand are washed away and when he washes the left hand his sins with the left hand are washed away. Similarly on washing the other limbs, his minor sins perpetrated by that limb are washed away".

My mentor, Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayy رحمة الله عليه used to say, "When you perform ablution, imagine to yourself: I am washing my face and the sins attached to it are washed away according to the glad tidings of the Prophetﷺ. I wash my hands now and their sins are obliterated. Imagine in the same manner when you wipe your head and then wash the feet. There is a gulf of a difference between an oblution performed in this manner and one which is performed without such imagination. You will sense the blessings of the former kind."

SUPPLICATIONS DURING ABLUTION

Anyway, we must perform ablution very carefully and observe its sunnah and etiquettes. For instance, we must sit facing the Qiblah, wash each limb three times carefully, and make the recommended supplications during ablution.

اللّٰهم اغفرلی ذنبی ووسع لی فی داری وبارك لی فی ما رزقتنی (ترمذی، کتاب الدعوات، باب دعاء یقال فی اللیل)

"O Allah, forgive me my sins and make my home spacious for me and bless what you provide me of sustenance.

اشهد ان لا اله الا الله واشهد ان محمدا عبده ورسوله

I bear witness that there is no God but Allah and I bear witness that Muhammad ﷺ is the warshipper and His Messanger.

اللهم اجعلنی من التوابین واجعلنی من المتطهرین (ترمذی، کتاب الطهارة، باب فیما یقال بعد الوضوء)

"O Allah, cause me to be among those who repent and cause one to be among those who purify themselves."

NO SET PATTERN FOR SALAH AL-HAJAH

The Prophetﷺis then quoted in the hadith as advising us to offer two rak at prayer called Salah Al-Hajah, which is no different than any other prayer in observation. Some people have suggested methods of observing it and prescribed surah, that should be recited in different rakaat, but this is no more than their own innovation. The Prophet ﷺ has not prescribed any distinct method of its observation or any surah, to be recited.

Nevertheless, some of our righteous elders have suggested from their experience that certain chapters (surah) of the Quran produce extra blessings. But, we must not consider that as sunnah, and follow it because if we adopt it as sunnah, then we will be guilty of innovating a practice. Thus although Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayy suggested surah Al-Inshirah, for the first rak`at and Az`Zilzal for the second yet he made it clear that it was not sunnah, to do so it was only the experience of elders that they are more beneficial. If anyone recites these chapters without believing that to be sunnah, or he recites any other chapter then he is not violating the sunnah.

In short, there is no special procedure to offer the Salah Al Hajah, and one may begin it by forming an intention.

THE INTENTION

It is common notion these days that the intention differs from prayer to prayer and unless particular words are repeated the prayer is not valid. This is why they ask often how they may form an intention for each prayer. They regard the intention as part of the prayer. It must be understood that intention is not repetition of a set of words, but it is the resolve in the heart to offer prayers. When anyone goes out of his home to offer the Zuhr, (afternoon) prayers, for instance. Then that is his intention, and when he prepares to offer the Salah Al Hajah, then that is his intention. To repeat the words by the tongue is neither Wajib, (obligatory) nor sunnah, or mustahabb, at the most one can say is that it is allowed to do so. Thus, not only is there any particular procedure to offer the Salah Al Hajah, there is also no prescribed intention to be repeated.

PRAISE AND GLORIFICATION

After the two rak`at are offered, we must make a supplication. The Prophetﷺ, has taught us the etiquettes of making a supplication. It is not that the supplication is made straightway after completing the prayers. We must first recount the praises of Allah and glorify Him,"O Allah! All praise belongs to You. Thanks are due to You and we are indebted to You for Your favours."

WHY PRAISE & GLORIFY HIM?

The question arises, why must we praise and glorify Allah? The scholars point out to us that when anyone presents, a petition to an authority in the world. he begins by lauding him in the hope that he would be pleased and approve his petition. Thus, when this is done for a mortal, it must also be done for the most just of the judges. "O Allah! Praise belongs to You. I am grateful to You for your favours. Grant me my wish!".

Another reason for praising Allah is that man is selfish and a slave to his own desires. What he needs is all he thinks of and he asks Allah for that. There is the risk that he might become ungrateful and show that in his supplication. At that time, therefore, he must remember the blessings of Allah which have submerged him deeply.

Anyway, we have the advice of the Prophetﷺ that we must ask Allah to give us what we need. But before we ask Him, we must look about and see how many of His bounties He has showered upon us which we cannot count. We must acknowledge them before we present our supplication, "O Allah! I am grateful for Your bounties and favours, which you have bestowed on one through Your mercy. I praise You for that. I have one more need, one more desire! O Allah! Be bountiful to me and grant me my desire". This will offset possibility of our being ungrateful.

GRIEF AND DIFFICULTY IS ALSO A BLESSING

Haji Imdadullah Muhajir Makki رحمة الله عليه said to a gathering of his disciples that the sorrow, grief and hardships which a man encounters are - if he thinks about that - actually blessings of Allah. Sickness is a blessing from Allah and so is poverty and need. If man observes with an examining eye, he will realize that these things are blessings of Allah.

We are told in a hadith that when, on the day of judgement, Allah will reward without limit and without reckoning those people who were patient in the face of affliction then those who had not suffered much difficulty and hardship in the world would wish that their skins were peeled off with scissors in the world and they had endured that patiently. They would then have received the reward which the patient would get on that day. So, the hardships are a blessing in disguise which our weak sights do not distinguish.

A STRANGE SUPPLICATION OF HAJI IMDADULLAH

When he was delivering this sermon, a handicapped man arrived in the assembly. The unfortunate man was afflicted with a number of maladies. He appealed to the honourable Mawlana to pray to Allah to relieve him of his affliction. Mawlana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه who was one of those who were listening to the sermon said that they were all surprised that while Haji Imdadullah رحمة الله عليه had spoken about the blessings of affliction this man asked him for his affliction to be removed. "If the mentor prays for the removal of his hardship, it would be tantamount to be asking for removal of blessings." But, the mentor raised his hands in prayer and made this supplication,"O Allah! These hardships and afflictions are truly blessings, but, O Allah, we are weak, look at our weakness and change this blessing of hardship into a blessing of health!"

RECALL BLESSINGS WHEN IN DIFFICULTY

It is the nature of man that when he is in difficulty, he forgets the bounties he enjoys. For instance, if he has a stomach-ache, he will complain loudly about it but will not be grateful for the blessings he enjoys for he has no difficulty with his eyes, his ears, his tongue, his teeth - nay, the entire body. He has only a stomach ache. He will surely pray for the pain to be removed but he should remember to praise and thank Allah before making the supplication, "O Allah! You have granted me innumerable blessings. I am thankful to You for that. And, O Allah, there is this pain now. I beg of You to remove it."

GRATITUDE FOR FAVOURS

My respected father, Mawlana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه had a teacher, Mian Asghar Husayn رحمة الله عليه. He was a born wali (friend of Allah, a man of Allah). He was a very marvelous religious man. My respected father recalled an incident about him. "He was taken ill once, and had a fever. I paid him a sick-visit and found him burning with high temperature. He was restless because of the high fever. I greeted him and asked how he was. He replied, 'Praise be to Allah! My eyes are sound, my ears can hear well, my tongue is faultless. "And he recounted all things that were sound in him. He said that he only had fever and asked me to pray that Allah cure him of fever."" This is how a grateful slave of Allah remembers His favours even in difficulty and because of this attitude the pain mitigates.

THANKFULNESS FORBLESSINGS RECEIVED

Hence, the Prophet's ﷺ advice that we must praise and glorify Allah before we make our supplication means that we must recall His blessings on us that we continue to enjoy and we must thank Him for those.

INVOKING BLESSINGS ON THE PROPHET ﷺ

After we have offered praise to Allah, we must invocate blessings on His Messenger ﷺ. The wisdom in invocating the blessings is that the Prophet ﷺ is very compassionate and kind to his Ummah and he wishes that the supplication of anyone of his people is not rejected. Of all the supplications, it is only the invoking of blessings on the Prophet ﷺ that is assured approval at all times. What do the words of invocation mean when we say:

اللهم صل على محمد و على ال محمد النبى الامى

They mean:

"O Allah, shower blessings on Muhammad and on the family of Muhammad, the unlettered Prophet."

There is no possibility of this prayer being rejected. Allah has given assurance of approving it. Mercy is already being showered on the Holy Prophet ﷺ and they continue to be showered so he is in no need of our efforts in this regard.

SUPPLICATION ACCEPTED WITH INVOCATION OF BLESSINGS

The Prophet ﷺ wishes that his people invocke blessings on him before they make their supplication. When the invocation of blessings will gain approval, the supplication of the person will also be approved. It is not expected of Allah that He grant a part of anyone's supplication and reject another. Hence, the supplication that is made after the invocation of blessings stands more chance of approval.

RECIPROCATE A GIFT

Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayy رحمة الله عليه used to say that it was the life long practice of the Holy Prophet ﷺ that he reciprocated a gift in some way. Then, the invocation of blessings on him is also a gift. A hadith tells us that the Prophet ﷺ said:

"If anyone invokes blessings on me from a far off place, that blessing is brought to me. If anyone comes to my grave and offers one salutation and invokes blessings on me then I hear him.

The invocation is a gift of the person that the Prophet ﷺ receives. So, when it had always been the practice of the Prophet ﷺ to reciprocate a gift, it is hoped that when he receives the gift in the Barzakh[1] he will reciprocate as was his habit. It will be in the form of a supplication for the person concerned. He will pray to Allah to grant the person his desire. So, we must praise Allah and invoke blessings on His Prophet ﷺ before making our supplication.

WORDS OF THE SUPPLICATION

Then, the substance of the supplication begins with:

لا اله الا الله الحكيم الكريم

The names of Allah have within them tremendous glow and mysteries. Only Allah and His messenger know about them and we cannot fathom their secrets which Allah has concealed in them. Therefore, the Prophet ﷺ has not asked us to recite them without purpose, and we must repeat only those words to get what we want. They mean: "There is no one worthy of worship besides Allah, the Clement, the Bountiful. "The attributes of Allah - clemency and benevolence - are recounted as a confession from the supplicant that he is not worthy of getting his supplication approved by Allah because of the number of his sins and lapses but Allah Himself is Clement. He overlooks the sins when He judges and it is expected of

1. Barzakh : the intervening period between death and resurrection.

Him that he will forgive. Allah is also bountiful and benevolent. Not only will he forgive but He will also grant (blessing and favours). The supplicant, therefore, beseeches Allah on the basis of these two attributes.

He then says:

سبحن الله رب العرش العظيم

"Allah is without blemish, the Lord of the Great Throne."

والحمدلله رب العلمين

"And all praise belongs to Allah, Lord of the worlds".

These were words of praise. He then makes the supplication:

اللهم اسئلك موجبات رحمتك

"I do seek all causes of the (grant of) Your mercy,

وعزائم مغفرتك

"and the purposes of (securing) Your forgiveness:

والغنيمة من كل بر

"a full share of all virtuous deeds:

والسلامة من كل اثم

"a safety from every sin"

لا تدع لنا ذنبا الا غفرته

"Leave none of our sins unforgiven," ولا هما الا فرجته

"No anxiety unrelieved"

ولا حاجة هى لك رضا الا قضيتها يا ارحم الرحمين

"and no need, wherewith You are pleased, unfulfilled. O You the Most Merciful of all"

This supplication can be found in books of supplications. Every Muslim must memorise it. After making this supplication, the supplicant must present his petition in his own words. We hope Allah will grant him his request.

OFFER SALAH AL-HAJAH, FOR ALL NEEDS

A Hadith, tells us:

كان النبى اذا حزبه امر صلى (ابو داؤد، كتاب الصلوٰة باب وقت قيام النبى ﷺ من الليل)

The Prophet ﷺ, when he faced a worrying situation, would hurry, first of all, towards prayer. He offered the Salah Al Hajah, and made the supplication. "O Allah! There is this problem. Do remove it." Thus a Muslim must offer this prayer often.

IF THE TIME IS SHORT

The foregoing procedure is recommended when a person has enough time on hand to offer prayers and decide but if he is pressed for time and cannot offer the two rak`at, then he must only make the supplication and ask of Allah. Nevertheless, he must present all his needs before Allah, minor or major. The Prophet ﷺ has said, "Ask Allah for all your needs even for the thong of your sandal when it is cut." Thus, we must ask Allah for our major needs often. The fact is that something is minor or major in our perspective, the thong of the shoe is minor, Kingdom is major. But, in the sight of Allah, there is no difference and everything is minor. Our most major demand is small in His eyes ان الله على كل شيئ قدير (surely, Allah is Able to do all things). His ability, His power is uniform and nothing is difficult for Him.

OUR WORRIES AND OUR REACTION

Our city (Karachi) is going through difficult times these days. Every one is worried and restless. Almost every house faces a problem either directly or indirectly. In spite of that our position is that we only discuss the situation and comment on it. But, are there any among us who are really concerned and who turn to Allah and pray to Him to correct the situation? "O Allah! We are faced with difficulty. The consequences of our sins have overwhelmed us. O Allah! Be merciful to us and remove the worrying condition from us".

NO POINT IN COMMENTING

In 1971, East Pakistan was lost and Pakistani Muslims suffered an unparalleled disgrace. Ninety thousand of their army were taken captive. They surrendered arms before the Hindus. All Muslims were sad because of that. At that time, I had the honour to visit Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayy رحمة الله عليه with my elder brother Mawlana Muffti Muhammad Rafi Usmani مدظله العالی. We found there that people who were present discussed the situation and passed comment blaming someone or other. When they had discussed the situation for some time. Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayy رحمة الله عليه asked them if they had arrived at a decision. Did the discussion provide them any advantage in this world or the next?

INSTEAD, MAKE A SUPPLICATION

He said to them, "You could have spent the time making a supplication to Allah - O Allah! We face a difficulty because of our misdeeds. O Allah! Foregive us! Remove this difficulty from us! Remove the consequences of our misdeeds from us! Convert the ignominy into an honourable situation - If you had made the supplication, it is not unexpected of Allah that He would have approved your petition. Even otherwise, you would have earned reward for making the supplication, and a blessing for the Hereafter. You only wasted your time."

It was then that we realised that we are involved in this wasteful behaviour every day. We only discuss and comment. We have forgotten to pray to Allah for our needs. How many of us can we count who turned to Allah and implored Him to remedy the situation, how many offered the Salah Al Hajah, the prayer for fulfilment of need, and petitioned Him:

"O Allah! I offer my prayers. Let your Mercy remove the punishment from us."

Perhaps, someone may have done that. Most of us are involved in commenting and in backbiting and slander. As a result, we are being more sinful.

TURN TO ALLAH

In such circumstances, we must all turn to Allah and make our supplications. If anyone has any means in his power and authority then he must employ that. If he does not have authority over the means then let him pray to Allah. That is within the ability of all of us. We are forgetting to turn to Allah. We must recall that when Pakistan was being created, there was much turmoil and mischief in the land. At that time, in every house in Deoband and other cities people recited the verses of the Quran (the āyate Karimah)[1] without any one having appealed to them to do so. Every Muslim did it on his own finding it necessary to do that. Women recited the verses and made supplications within their homes, "O Allah! Let the Muslims come out of this difficulty!"

1. Noble verse: Lāilāha illā anta subhānaka inni kuntu min Az Zālimeen.

The result was that Allah rescued the Muslims from their predicament.

WE DO NOT OPEN OUR EYES

We see today turmoil in our city. Dead bodies lie before our eyes. But, we are unmoved. We do not turn to Allah. We do not know of people reciting the verses of the Quran within their homes or making supplications to Allah. On the contrary, dead bodies are every where, death is before us, but our Muslims are in their homes, ties down before their television sets.

Under the circumstances, are we not inviting punishment from Allah? We are unwilling to stop sinning, and reluctant to give up disobedient behaviour.

BE MERCIFUL TO YOURSELVES AND DO IT

For the sake of Allah, have mercy on yourselves. Turn to allah, every Muslim can do it. Let each of them offer two rak`at, prayer for the fulfilment of needs'. It will not take much time, say two minutes. Then, it will take another three minutes to make the supplication. Let us give these five minutes for our people, our nation and stand before Allah. If we cannot do that, why do we say that we are saddened by the situation?

Let us resolve to continue praying two raka`at Salah Al Hajah, and making supplication to Allah as long as this situation lasts. Further, let us be merciful to ourselves and remove the instruments of disobedience from our homes and save ourselves from sin. Let us stop disobedience and sin, and pray to Allah humbly weeping. Let us recite the noble verse of the Quran:

لا اله انت سبحنك انى كنت من الظلمين

O Allah, there is no god but You. You are without blemish. I have been of the wrong doers.

Let us, repeat again and again,

"O Peace" "يـا سـلام"

Instead of wasting our time on discussing the situation and commenting on it, let us turn to Allah.

May He grant us that ability! Aameen!

HOW TO BEHAVE IN RAMADAN

الحمد لله نحمده و نستعينه ونستغفره و نؤمن به و نتوكل عليه ونعوذ بالله من شرور انفسناومن سيات اعمالنا من يهده الله فلا مضل له ومن يضلله فلا هادى له و نشهد ان لا اله الا الله وحده لاشريك له ونشهدان سيد نا و سندنا و نبينا ومولانا محمدا عبده ورسوله صلى الله تعالىٰ عليه وعلىٰ اله واصحابه وبارك وسلم تسليما كثيرا

اما بعد !

فاعوذ با لله من الشيطن الرجيم ـ بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم

شَهْرُ رَمَضَانَ الَّذِیْٓ اُنْزِلَ فِیْهِ الْقُرْاٰنُ هُدًی لِّلنَّاسِ وَ بَیِّنٰتٍ مِّنَ الْهُدٰی وَالْفُرْقَانِ ۚ فَمَنْ شَهِدَ مِنْكُمُ الشَّهْرَ فَلْیَصُمْهُ ؕ (سورة البقرة:۱۸۵)

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and His forgiveness and we believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Allah from the evils of our selves and the vices of our deeds. There is no one to misguide whom Allah guides and there is no one to guide whom Allah lets go astray. I bear witness that there is no god but Allah Alone. He has no partner. I also bear witness that our authority, our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad is His servant and His Messenger. May Allah have mercy on him, his household and on his Companions and bless them and send peace on them in great abundance.

RAMADAN — A MONTH OF BLESSING

The month of Ramadan is a great blessing from Allah, the Exalted. We cannot realise the gravity of its blessings because we are occupied in worldly affairs all the time. We are engrossed in materalism day in and day out so we cannot comprehend the significance of the month. But, those whom Allah has blessed with His favours recognise the blessings and glow which Allah showers during the month and they truly value the month. When the Prophet ﷺ sighted the moon heralding Rajab, he would say:

اَللّٰهُمَّ بَارِكْ لَنَا فِيْ رَجَبَ وَ شَعْبَانَ وَ بَلِّغْنَا رَمَضَانَ

"O Allah bless us during Rajab and Sha'ban and cause us to see Rama'zan "

He meant to say ,"Prolong our lives that we may live through Ramazan" We must observe two months before the month of Ramazan, he began his watch for it, and showed eageraess who recognises the value of the month will make this supplication and wait for it.

SUPPLITCATION FOR LONGEVITY

This Hadith confirms that a man may pray to Allah to give him a long life if his intention is to spend it in a way that pleases Allah, so he may accumulate pious deeds for the next world .He may pray, "O Allah! Increase my life that I may live to seek Your pleasure and come to You as one entitled to receive Your pleasure ". However, some people pray to Allah to take them away from this world. The Prophet ﷺ has forbidden us to make such a supplication and he has said that we must not yearn to death. Some people pray for death hoping that they would be relieved from the problems the face in this world but, do they examine themselves and see what they have amassed for the next world? Have they ensured that they would find peace there? Rather, we must pray for security and for ability to spend the rest of or lives in a way that pleases Allah . Aameen

THE PROPHET'S SUPPLICATION FOR LIFE

The prophet ﷺ used to make this supplication:

اَللّٰهُمَّ اَحْيِنِيْ مَا كَانَتِ الْحَيَاةُ خَيْرًا لِيْ وَتَوَفَّنِيْ اِذَا كَانَتِ الْوَفَاةُ خَيْرًا لِيْ (مسند احمد جلد ٣ صفحه ١٠٤)

"O Allah! Let me live as long as life is a blessing for me and cause me to die when death is good for me".

The fore - going prayer of the Prophet ﷺ automatically asks that we may live until Ramazan.

WHY WAIT FOR RAMAZAN?

The question arises why was the Prophet ﷺ anxious to live till Ramazan ? The answer is that Allah has said about this month that Ramazan is His month. We are however, short - sighted and we only see the superficial that we will fast and offer taraweeh prayers during this month. The fact is whether we fast or offer taraweeh, or worship Allah in any other way, Allah has called it His month . He allows opportunity to those who have been slack in religion for eleven months of the year to gain nearness to Him in this month. It is as if He tells them ," you have strayed far away from Me . You were immeresed in worldly pursuits and were lost in negligence, We give you this one month. Come to Us . Spend it in the right way and you will receive nearness to Us "

WHY WAS MAN CREATED

Allah has created mankind that they should worship Him . He has said in the Qura'n.:

وَمَا خَلَقْتُ الْجِنَّ وَالْإِنْسَ إِلَّا لِيَعْبُدُوْنِ ٥ (الذّٰريٰت، ٥٦:)

And I have not created the Jin and Mankind but to worship Me. (Az-zariyat 51:56)

That is they are cerated for only one purpose to worship Allah and that is why mankind was sent to earth.

ARE NOT ANGELS ENOUGH?

Some minds might wonder why should another species be be created to worship Allah when the angels were there already, the truth is that the angles are created solely for that purpose and they have no choice but to worship Allah. Their nature is moulded in that manner and they have no inclination to sin or disobey. Man is created with to sin and disobedience , and he is commanded to worship Allah. It is easy for the angels to worship Allah but man is commanded to save himself from disobedience and sin, and control himself, and worship Allah.

TWO KINDS OF WORSHIP

We must stop here and understand two things because failure to comprehend them leads many to the wrong path. We are told that whatever a believer does is worship if his intention is sincere and he lives according to sunnah. In that case, every act of his is worship including eating and drinking, meeting others engaging in business and living with wife and children. Then, when he offers prayer that also is worship. Then, how to distinguish between two forms of worship. It is imperative that we understand the difference else we may stay on the wrong path.

FIRST TYPE, DIRECT WORSHIP

The difference lies in the fact that the worship of one kind is a direct worship whose objective is nothing more than obeying Allah . Examples are , prayer, Fasting, zakah remembrance of Allah (zikr), recital of Quran, charity, Hajj and Umrah. All these things are done exclusively for Allah and they are direct forms of worship.

THE SECOND TYPE, INDIRECT

In contrast, there are some deeds which are personal or worldly needs but Allah has assured the believer that if he does them sincerely with an honest intentin observing the limits of Allah and the sunnah of the Prophet ﷺ then Allah will reward the believer in like manner to the first kind . This kind of worship is not a direct kind but an indirect worship.

TO MAKE A LAWFUL LIVING IS INDIRECT

If anyone earns livelihood to meet the rights of his wife and children and observes the limits of shariah with the intention of making a lawful living then Allah regards the effort as a worship. In its essence the effort is not worship; hence, this worship is of the second kind, an indirect worship.

DIRECT WORSHIP IS SUPERIOR

Obviously, direct worship is superior to indirect worship, thus when Allah has said that he created the jin and men to worship Him, He refers to the first kind of worship the direct one. He does not mean to include the second kind.

THE CASE OF A DOCTOR

A lady once told him about her hsusband who is a physician. She said," My husband runs a climic where he attends to the patiants . But he does not offer prayers at their proper time when he is in the clinic. When he returns home at night, he offer the missed prayers of three times all together. I advise him to offer them at their proper times when he is the clinic but he argues that there he attends to his patients and that is serivce to humanity while the prayers are his indindual concern; so he prefers the former over the latter." The womam asked me how she may convince him to offer prayers at the right time.

ONE IS NOT EXCUSED PRAYERS UNDER ANY CIRCUMSTANCES

The fact is that her husband did not distinguish between the two kinds of worship. Prayer is a direct form of worship. Allah has said that the warriors in a battle are not exempt from observing prayer even if the enemy is before them. It is another thing that the procedure is some what easier, but the obligation is not set aside.

Allah has said:

إِنَّ الصَّلٰوةَ كَانَتْ عَلَى الْمُؤْمِنِيْنَ كِتٰبًا مَّوْقُوْتًا۝

Surely the salah is prescribed for the believers at appointed times.(an-Nisa,4.103)

We know that there is no deed superior to jihad but the command is to observe prayer even during Jihad.

SERVICE TO HUMANITY IS THE SECOND TYPE

A patient who is unable to do anything is also not excused from offering prayer. He is commanded to pray even though he is allowed to sit down if he cannot stand or lie down if he cannot sit or simply pray through gestures. If he cannot perform ablution, he may preform tayammum (dry ablution.) Prayer is not forgiven, anyway, because it is a direct form of worship. The treatment that the said doctor metes out to his patients is , of course, service to humanity and a great kind of worship but it is of the second type and not direct worship. Hence, if anyone faces a choice between the two kinds, he must prefer the direct kind. The physician had not recognised the difference so he had misunderstood his option.

PRAYER IS MORE IMPORTANT

The physician must realise that if he has to, he leaves his patients for some time, like when he has to go to the toilet, or when he has to eat, so, he can also get up for prayers and it will not harm the patients much, for prayer is more important than those other tasks. Of course, everything a believer does is worship if he has a pious intention but it is of the second type and second level . The first ranking worship includes prayer, fasting , Hajj, zakah remembrance of Allah and so on. These are the direct kind Man has been created for this kind of worship.

MAN IS PUT TO TRIAL

Allah has created man for worship and he examines him by giving him emotions of desires, potential of doing right and worng and an inclination to sin. He is examined to see whether he shuns those tendencies and turns to Allah or follows them to distract him.

THE COMMAND WOULD NOT HAVE BEEN CRUEL

Once we know that man was created to worship, we must realise that Allah could have commanded us to worship him all day and do nothing else. He may have allowed us a short interval to attend to urgent needs food in the afternoon and at nightfall. If that was the command, it would not have been cruel on us, because we are created for that purpose.

WE ARE MERCHANDISE DISPOSED OF

He has created us to worship him and he has also said:

إِنَّ اللّٰهَ اشْتَرٰى مِنَ الْمُؤْمِنِيْنَ اَنْفُسَهُمْ وَاَمْوَالَهُمْ بِاَنَّ لَهُمُ الْجَنَّةَ ع (التوبه: ١١١)

Surely Allah has bought from the believers their lives and riches for theirs shall be the garden (in return)(At-Tawbah9:111)

Thus our lives and possessions have been bought and the buyer has quoted a high price for them, Paradise. The width of that place is equal to the heaven and earth. Now, the buyer has a right to restrict us to worship alone allow us only a limited time to eat and drink enough to keep us alive. However this buyer has bought us and paid a high price yet returned our lives to us . He has allowed us to reap advantage from our lives as long as we live, we may eat, do business, work and attend to our needs and desires. The only demand is that we present ourselves before him five time a day, and there is a small other demand there are certain do's and dont's .

MAN HAS FORGOTTEN THE PURPOSE OF HIS CREATION

Allah, on his part, has allowed man to engage in business, labour, cultivation and so on . But, man, in his turn, lost himself in these pursuits to such an extent that he frogot why he was created. What was the purpose behind his crection?

Who has bought him? He is so engrossed in these occupations that he makes a lot of money and is occupied day and night in these things . Suppose if anyone does think of offering prayers, he goes to the mosque but his mind is elsewhere and hurries through the exercise. He hastens back to his occupation. Some times, he does not even go to the mosque, but offers his prayers at home. At other times, he misses the prayers altogather. The pursuits of the world overwhelm him.

PECULITARITIES OF WORSHIP

The peculiarity of worship is that it joins man with Allah in a relationship. It grows a link between them so that man may draw near to Allah.

PECULIARITIES OF WORLDLY AFFAIRS

The peculiarity of worldly affairs is that even if one stays within proper limits he gradually becomes disobedient and move away from spiritualism.

When man is busy with worldly tasks for eleven months he is so conditoned with materialism, that the relationship that should have been established with Allah remains weak. He cannot attain the nearness.

THE MONTH OF MERCY

Allah , of course, knew that man will forget Him once he occupies himself in the affairs of the world . He will not pay as mcuh attention to worship as he will be immersed in his worldly pursuits. So, he said to man, "We will give you one more opportunity. Every year you will get one month . You will spend eleven months running after the material things and We will give you one month of mercy. If you come us in this one month, you will regain the lost spiritual blessings and you will again come near Us. We guide you in this months that the rust that has come over your heart you may remove and may you come out of negligence. You may take up Our remembrance." To obtain these things fasting is very important. The other forms of worship prescribed in this month are also helpful in achieving nearness to Allah. The aim of Allah is that those who have gone far away may regain nearness to Him.

REGAIN NEARNESS

Allah has said,

يٰـاَيُّهَاالَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْا كُتِبَ عَلَيْكُمُ الصِّيَامُ كَمَا كُتِبَ عَلَى الَّذِيْنَ مِنْ قَبْلِكُمْ لَعَلَّكُمْ تَتَّقُوْنَ ٥ (سورة البقرة:١٨٣)

"O you who believe! Fasting is prescribed for you as was prescribed for those before you that you may be God fearing. (al-baqarah.2..183)

It is as though Allah says: The eleven months that you have been spending away from Us have weakened your taqwa (fear of Alalh) You can regain that by fasting this months." So, it is not enough that we fast and offer taraweeh prayers but we must regain what we have lost in that past eleven months. We can do that by keeping ourselves attached to worship as much as possible right from the first day of Ramazan because we can do other things in the remaining eleven months. In the month of Ramazan, we must bring down the other tasks as much as we can. Let us keep this month aside for worship.

WELCOMING RAMADAN

My respected father Mawlana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه used to say that the way to welcome Ramadan is to review beforehond what work, or part of it , may be held in that task and devote oneself to worship in the time available.

WHY ANNUAL VACATIONS IN RAMADAN

The annual vactions in our religious institutions, known as Madrasah (p1. Madaris), commence from 15 th shaban and continue upto 15th shawwal when the new academic year begins. This has been the practice since a very long time and our elders have begun it. Some people object to this and say that our ulama teach students to remain idle in the month of Ramadan while the companions رضی الله عنهم took part in Jihad and other work during Ramadan. They must know that if the need arises they may participate in jihad during Ramadan . In fact, the battle of badr was faught in Ramadan and Makkah was taken over in Ramadan. But when there is to be a time for vacation then why not in Ramadan so that more time may be devoted to worship.

Nevertheless, whatever is done in these Madaris all over the year is also religious, the Quran and Hadith are taught. Fiqh or Juristic science is taught. But that is all indirect worship and Allah wishes that in Ramadan, Muslims engage in direct worship. That is why our elders had set aside Ramadan for direct worship. Instead of summer vacations they set aside the month of Ramadan for vacations.

So, Those who can take vacations in Ramadan may seize the opportunity but if they cannot then they may devote as much time as they can to worship. That is the aim of Ramdan .

THE PROPHIT ﷺ ASKED TO WORSHIP

My respected father, Mulana Mufti Mahammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه once pointed out to the following verses of the Quran.

فَإِذَا فَرَغْتَ فَانْصَبْ ۝ وَإِلَىٰ رَبِّكَ فَارْغَبْ ۝ (سورہ الم نشرح)

So when you are free (from your public duties) exert in worship, and let toward your Lord be your entire quest. (al - inshirah,94.7,8)

What worship? Offering prayers , standing before Allah prostrating before him . My respected father used to ask us to consider who was addressed in these words. The Holy Prophet ﷺ He was asked to exert himself after he was free! Was he busy in the affairs of the world? No! Rather, whatever he did was worship , He was engaged in teaching, preaching, training or purifying his people, or Jihad against the enemy. He had no other work but serving the religion of Allah. In spite of that, he is told that when he finishes with them, he must stand before Allah and exert himself. So, in obedience to this command, the Messenger of Allah ﷺ used to stand all night in prayer and his feet would swell because of that. This shows that the tasks in which he was busy were indirect and he was called upon by these verses to engage himself in direct worship.

THE DEVIL OF THE SCHOLAR IS A SCHOLAR

My respected father used to tell us that the devil misguided the ulama in a scholarly way. He tells them that it is the common man who is reminded that they are engaged in worldly pursuits for eleven months of the year (and they may devote themselves to Allah for the month of Ramadan). The devil continues telling the religious scholars, "but you are occupied those eleven month in religious duty. You teach, preach religion and deliver sermons. You write and issue verdicts. These are religious duties." In truth ,this is a temptation of the deceiving devil because the eleven months the scholars are occupied in indirect worship while Ramadan is the month of direct worship. May Allah inspire us to occupy ourselves in the month of Ramdan in worship of the direct kind.

FORTY OPPURTUNITIES

Let us now chalk out a programme or a time table for this month. Let us see what work we can postpone. We have to fast and offer the taraweeh prayers. Mawlana doctor Abdul Hayy رحمة الله عليه used to say a very interesting thing about taraweeh. He would day, "It is a marvellous thing. Through it, Allah allows man to attain nearness to Him through forty more opportunities. There are tweney raka'at in taraweeh comprising of forty prostrations each of which is an opportunity of the best kind to gain nearness to Allah the forehead rests on the floor and the tongue repeats, سبحان ربی الاعلیٰ (Glory be to my Lord, the High.)

THE MI'RAJ OF THE BELIEVER

This opportunity was brought to us by the Prophetﷺ from the Mi'raj. When he was given the high honour, he wondered what gift he should give to his people and Allah said to him that he should present them the prostration, each of which will be a believer's mi'raj. The Prophet said:

الصلوٰة معراج المؤمنين

Prayer is the ascension of the believer.

He will attain nearness to Allah when he rests his forechead on the earth .

NEARNESS IN PROSTRATION

The surah al- Iqra tells us how beautifully Allah has described it:

وَاسْجُدْ وَاقْتَرِبْ ۩

Prostrate yourself and draw nigh(to Allah)
(al alaq 96..19)[1]

It means that every prostration draws us near to Allah and we have forty More) opportunities in Ramadan, every 1: This verse calls for prostration so we must prostrate ourselves on reading it.

one of us has that, every day! It was given because we were involved in worldly pursuits for eleven months which kept us away from Allah and these forty opportunities are available to us in Ramadan, to regain the lost time and draw near to Allah. So, we must not take the taraweeh lightly. Some people offer only eight raka'at taraweeh, not twenty, which means that though Allah offers them forty opportunities they consider sexteen as enough for them . They have not understood the singnificance of these opportunities and have thus lost them.

EXCESSIVE RECITAL OF QURAN

As we have said, we have to observe fasting and offer taraweeh in the month of Ramadan and whatever time we have, we must spend in worship of Allah, for instance, we must pay particular attention to reciting the Quran because the month has a special relationship with the Quran . Imam Abu Hanifah رحمة الله عليه used to recite the whole Quran during the day time in Ramdan and again once in the night, and yet again in the taraweeh prayers over the month which means that he recited the Quran from cover to cover sixty one times in Ramadan. Allamah Shami رحمة الله عليه recited the Quran in its entirety once every day and night .Recital of Quran is part of the ron time of our religious elders. So, we must also increase the recital of the Quran in Ramadan compared to our normal recital during other days.

EXCESS OF OPTIONAL WORSHIP

We must try to offer those supererogatory prayers which we do not observe in other days. For instance, the tahajjud. We may also offer the ishraq ,chast and awwabeen[1].

1: Respectivley, post sunrise optional prayer, midmorning optional prayer, and post Maghrib optional prayer.

EXCESSIVE CHARITY

A part from Zakah, we must give voluntary charity as much as we can in the month of Ramadan. A Hadith tells us that the Prophet ﷺ was known to give away charity very generously at all times but in Ramadan he was extra-ordinarily generous. He gave to whoever came to him.

INCREASE ZIKR

Apart from that, we must mention Allah all the time, whether we are sitting, or walking about . our hands may be busy but our tongue must be occupied in remembering Allah:

سبحان الله والحمد لله ولا اله الا الله و الله اكبر

سبحان الله وبحمده سبحان الله العظيم

لا حول ولا قوة الا بالله العلى العظيم

We may also invoke blessings on the Messenger of Allah ﷺ frequently and seek forgiveness of Allah often.

KEEP AWAY FROM SIN

In the month of Ramadan, we must pay particular attention to keep away from sin. Let us resolve to keep our eyes in check in the Holy month so that they do not rest on wrong places. We must control our tongue and not speak anything wrong, neither tell a lie nor backbite anyone. We must not hunt anyone with our behaviour that while we refrain in the Holy month from the permitted eatables but do not stop eating carrion because the quran has said that to backbite anyone is to eat a dead brother's flesh. We must avoid falsehood and keep away from unnecessary talk, unnecessary gatheerings and any unnecessary work .

INTENSIFY SUPPLICATIONS

In addition to that, we must make supplications to Allah frequently. The doors of merey are wide open. Mercy is being showered in plenty. Allah is looking for excuses to forgive. A crier cries out, " is there any supplicant that I may grant him," we must beg, beseech and implore in the morning evening or night at all times. Allah says, " you ask Me at the time of iftar, I will give you ask at night, I will grant ,ask while you are fasting, I will bestow, ask in the last part of night and I will give." Allah has let us know that the doors are open , so ask at all times! Maulana Doctor Abdul Hayy رحمة الله عليه used to say that Ramadan is the month to ask. He used to restrict himself in the mosque between Asr and Maqhrib prayers during Ramadan. During this time, he recited from the Quran, recanted tasbeeh (rosary), supplicated from the Munajat maqbool and them presented his petition, his supplication to Allah upto the time of iftar (breaking of fast). We must also make plenty of supplications, for ourselves, our country and people, all the muslims . Allah will surely opprove that.

May Allah cause us to follow what we have read and respect the month of Ramadan and spend its hours correctly. Aameen.

EXERCISE MODERATION WITH FRIENDS & FOES

الحمد لله نحمده و نستعينه ونستغفره و نؤمن به و نتوكل عليه ونعوذ بالله من شرور انفسناومن سيات اعمالنا من يهده الله فلا مضل له ومن يضلله فلا هادى له و نشهد ان لا اله الا الله وحده لاشريك له و نشهد ان سيد نا و سندنا و نبينا ومولانا محمدا عبده ورسوله صلى الله تعالىٰ عليه وعلىٰ اله واصحابه وبارك وسلم تسليما كثيراً كثيراً۔

اما بعد

عن ابى هريرة رضى الله عنه قال قال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم احبب حبيبك هونا ما عسىٰ ان يكون بغيضك يوماما وابغض بغيضك هوناما عسىٰ ان يكون حبيبك يوماما (ترمذى شريف، كتاب البر والصلة ، باب ماجاء فى الاقتصاد فى الحب والبغض، حديث : ١٩٩٨)

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and His forgiveness and we believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Allah from the evils of our selves and the vices of our deeds. There is no one to misguide whom Allah guides and there is no one to guide whom Allah lets go astray. I bear witness that there is no god but Allah Alone. He has no partner. I also bear witness that our authority, our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad is His servant and His Messenger. May Allah have mercy on him, his household and on his Companions and bless them and send peace on them in great abundance.

PRINCIPLE OF ESTABLISHING FRIENDSHIP

The Hadith quoted above is narrated by sayyidina Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہ and is a sound transmission. it is a marvellous Hadith and it teaches us a splendid lesson and it contains excellent principles on which we may live.

Sayyidina Abu Hurayrah رضی اللہ عنہ quotes the Messenger of Allah ﷺ as saying "Make friends after deliberation, that is, exercise restraint, because your friend might become your foe tomorrow. And, if you bear enmity with anyone, be cautious in showing your displeasure, because your enemy might turn into your friend tomorrow."

A very interesting lesson is taught in this Hadith: be moderate in displaying friendship and love to your friends, and in displaying enmity to your enemies. We must remember that friendships in this world are not lasting and the enmities and hatred are not lasting. Friends may turn into foes anytime, and foes may become enemies any moment so we must exercise restraint.

THE CASE OF OUR FRIENDSHIP

The Hadith imparts a golden principle for those people who go head over heels in making friends with those whom they encounter and establish some sort of a relation, or they express a mad love for them. they know no limits after that, and they find no defects in their friends and they spend all their time with them. They are all praise for the new found friends. Suddenly, the ties are snapped, they cannot bear to see each other or hear about them. This is going to extremes. the shari'ah does not permit us to exceed limits of moderation and the Holy Prophet ﷺ has disallowed such behaviour. He has advised us to show moderation in our dealings with others.

ONE BEING WORTHY OF FRIENDSHIP

We must remember that there is really no such thing as friendship and love in this world. True friendship and love is reserved for only one Being and that is Allah. He is the one whose love must make home in our hearts. It is for that reason that Allah has placed a heart in man's body. It is the receptable of His glow and it does not behove a believer to allow anyone else a place in his heart for it is reserved only for Allah.

ABU BAKR رضی اللہ عنہ A TRUE FRIEND

If there could be a true friend in this world, who else could be a true friend for the Messenger of Allah ﷺ besides Sayyidina Abu Bakr رضی اللہ عنہ ? We cannot find an example of the friendship evinced by Abu Bakr رضی اللہ عنہ for the Prophet ﷺ . He came out with flying colours at every time of trial. There was not a slight wavering from the very first day when he expressed his belief آمَنَّا وَصَدَّقْنَا (we believe and we confirm), all his life.

IN THE CAVE THAUR

He was with the Prophet ﷺ in the cave Thaur and the Quran has recalled that incident in these words:

.....اِذْهُمَا فِی الْغَارِ اِذْ یَقُوْلُ لِصَاحِبِہٖ لَا تَحْزَنْ اِنَّ اللّٰہَ مَعَنَا

.....When they were both in the cave (of Thaur for three nights), when he said to his companion, "grieve not surely Allah is with us"

(at -tawbah 9..40)

He entered the cave before the Holy Prophet ﷺ to clean it and to plug the passages within the cave leading to the hideouts of the snakes, He shut them with pieces of cloth and when he had no more he shut one remaining hole with his heel.

AN INCIDENT DURING HIJRAH

We learn from a Hadith that when the Prophet ﷺ was migrating to Madinah, Sayyidina Abu Bakr رضی اللہ عنہ observed signs of hunger on his face. He got a bowl of milk from somewhere and presented it to him although he himself was hungry Sayyidina Abu Bakr رضی اللہ عنہ reported later on that when the Prophet ﷺ drank the milk, he was the one who was also satiated. Although the Prophet ﷺ drank it, he drank it in such a way that Abu Bakr رضی اللہ عنہ also had a fill! Thus, he set an example of friendship and sacrifice which no one else can present.

FRIENDSHIP WITH ALLAH ALONE

In spite of that the Holy Prophet ﷺ has said:

لو کنت متخذا خلیلا لاتحذت ابابکر خلیلا (بخاری شریف، کتاب الفضائل، باب قول النبی ﷺ "لو کنت متخذا خلیلا")

" If I were to take a friend, I would take Abu bakr for a friend."

It means that he had not made friends with him because there is no one in this world to make friends with. Friendship is reserved only for Allah. A friendship that rules the heart and dictates it with its commands does not behove anyone except Allah.

FRIENDSHIP WITH ANYONE MUST BE SUBSERVIENT TO ALLAH'S FRIENDSHIP

Friendship among human beings would be subservient to the friendship with Allah and love for Him. They would not sin and disobey under the cover of friendship. So, the first lesson is that all friendships in this life will be next to the love and friendship for Allah

SINCERE FRIENDS ARE MISSING

The second lesson is that we do not find such a friend in this world whose friendship follows the friendship of Allah. We cannot find anyone whom we can call a true friend whose friendship is subservient to Allah's and who proves true in trying times. It is difficult to find such a one. When my elder brothers spoke about their friends in the presence of our respected father, he would remark that they had made many friends in life while he, at the age of sixty, could not make any friends. All his life, he had only a friend and a half. One could not find anyone easily who would measure correctly to the standards of friendship.

Nevertheless , even if we make friends on terms of subserviency to Allah, we must make sure that our friendship does not exceed limits. We must not spend all our time with him or let him know all our secrets. If the friendship ends, he may reveal your secrets. So, let the friendship prosper with in moderate limits.

MODERATION IN ENMITY

In the same way, if we bear a grudge against anyone, we must not let it exceed the limits and try to find fault in every thing he does. If Allah has placed faults in anyone, he has also given him certain good qualities. We must not overlook his good side. The Qura'n tells us :

وَلَا يَجْرِمَنَّكُمْ شَنَاٰنُ قَوْمٍ عَلٰٓى اَنْ لَّا تَعْدِلُوْا ۚ (المائدہ:۸)

Let not hatred of a people incite you not to deal justly (al- Maidah 5.8)

We may be on antagonistic terms with people but that should not cause us to confirm their commendable qualities, But generally, we do not remember the Prophet's ﷺ saying in this regard so we surpass the limits in love and in hatred.

BACKBITING HAJJAJ BIN YUSUF

We all know this man, Hajjaj bin Yusuf. He unleashed cruelty, killing many ulama, innumerable hafiz[1] of the Quran and he even attacked the Ka'bah. Muslims feel repelled when they hear of his misdeeds. However, once someone recounted his tyrannous acts before Sayyidina Abdullah bin Umar رضی اللہ عنہ and even backbited him, Abdullah bin Umar رضی اللہ عنہ stopped him, saying:

"Do not suppose that if he was curel, it is lawful to backbite him or slander him. Remember that when Allah will take an account of his cruelty from him on the day of Resurrection, he will ask you to account for the backbiting or slander against hajjaj bin Yusuf ". We are not allowed to accuse anyone who has earned a bad name for himself, or backbite him, but we must exercise moderation in such cases too.

1. Those who have memorised .

POLITICAL ATMOSPHERE OF PAKISTAN

The political conduct in our country is such that when a politician is in favour, he is praised to dizzy heights, and is presented as if he is free from blemish. Anyone who criticizes him is not tolerated. But , when he falls in the bad books of the people then he seems bereft of all good qualities. In either case, limits are exceeded, The Prophet ﷺ has disallowed us to behave in this way. Religion is not only prayer and fasting, but it also calls upon us to show moderate conduct in friendship and in dislike. Men of God understand this thing. We must keep at a safe distance from those in authority, the politicians and leaders. We should let our connections become very intimate with them.

A LESSON- GIVING CASE OF QADI BAKKAR BIN QUTAYBAH رحمۃ اللہ علیہ

Qadi Bakkar bin Qutybah رحمۃ اللہ علیہ was a well-known Qadi (a gudge) and a scholar of Hadith . He was the student of the author of Tahawi which is a course book in religious institutions. The king of his times was much impressed by him and not only consulted him in all affairs but summoned him often and invited him to all official functions. He even appointed him Qadi and he decided all cases of the state. It soon transpired that he was seen with the king at all times of the day. He became the king's favourite.

However, he was a scholar and a Qadi , not the king's servant. Once, the king did something wrong and he decided against the king and said that the king had violated shari'ah . This displeased the king who complained that he had pampered him all the time and granted his recommendations, Yet he issued an edict against him.

The king not only displaced him from the post of Qadi but also sent a messenger asking him to return all the gifts he had given him in the past. These gifts were presented to him over a number of years and were of an assorted nature, yet when the king's messenger arrived he took him to a room and opened a cupboard which told the man that whatever the king had been giving him was found in the cupboard and they were intact, the bags bore their original seals and were unopened. "Take away all these bags. The day I had met the king, I had recalled the saying of the Prophet ﷺ:

احبب حبيبك هونا ما عسىٰ ان يكون بغيضك يوما ما

Make friends after proper deliberation for your friend might become your foe tomorrow.

Be caution in showing displeasure to anyone for your enemy night become your friend tomorrow. I had thought I might have to return these gifts. By the grace of Allah, I have not used even a bit from the king's gifts.

This was a practical demonstration of the Prophet's ﷺ advice. He did not take advantage of the king's friendship so he did not have to worry when their relations strained.

MAKE THIS SUPPLICATION

We must, first of all, love Allah alone, and make the supplication taught to us by the Prophet ﷺ for this purpose.

اللهم اجعل حبك احب الاشياء إلَيَّ

O Allah! Let my love for You be greater than love for all else.

Man is weak and is bound to human tendencies. He will love his wife and children, parents and friends and relatives. He cannot get over these relationship. But, he must go on praying to Allah to make his love for all of them subservient to love for Him.

IF LOVE EXCEEDS THE LIMITS THEN MAKE THIS SUPPLICATION

If we find that our love for someone exceeds the limits then we must make this supplication:

O Allah! You put that love in my heart, but O lord I have exceeded the limits in showing this love. O Allah! put me not in a trial, preserve me from that.

Besides, we must also conduct ourselves carefully. A friend today can be an enemy tomorrow,. You must assure from your side that you will not turn the tables.

That is the Prophet's ﷺ advice and if we follow all his advice we will be led aright in all our affairs.

FRIENDSHIP LEADS TO SIN

Often we fall into sin because of our friendships. We do not like to displease our friend and we do not displease our friend and we do not mind committing a sin for his sake and violating shari'ah. Actually, it should have been otherwise – shari'ah should not have been violated even if the friend is displeased. However, if there is a laxity in the commands of shari'ah we may please our friend for we are advised not to hurt a Muslim.

AVOID EXAGGERATION

Mawlana Ashraf Ali thanavi رحمة الله عليه has said that this Hadith forbids one to exaggerate one's connactions with other people. We should not exaggerate any affair, whether it is a relationship or a dealing with someone. The meaning is that we should not exceed the limits and we should remain in a reasonable limit.

My Allah cause us to behave according to this Hadith. Aameen.

" يا عائشة.. انها كانت تأتينا زمان خديجة (رضى الله عنها) وان حسن العهد من الايمان" (بيهقى فى شعب الايمان)

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and His forgiveness and we believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Allah from the evils of our selves and the vices of our deeds. There is no one to misguide whom Allah guides and there is no one to guide whom Allah lets go astray. I bear witness that there is no god but Allah Alone. He has no partner. I also bear witness that our authority, our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad is His servant and His Messenger. May Allah have mercy on him, his household and on his Companions and bless them and send peace on them in great abundance.

SUMMARY OF HADITH :

Sayyidah Ayshah رضى الله عنها has said that once an old woman visited the Holy Prophetﷺ. He received her with great respect and gave her honour and served her well. When she had gone, sayyidah Ayshah رضى الله عنها asked the Messenger of Allah ﷺ:"who was this woman whom you received so honourably? " He said:

انها كانت تأتينا زمان خديجة

" She had visited us when khadijah was alive, she had relations with khadijah she was her friend and that is why I honoured her."
Then, he added:

ان حسن العهد من الايمان

To treat anyone well is also part of faith

TRY TO BE CONSTANT IN RELATIONSHIPS

It is a believers sign that he does not break ties of relationship as far as possible. He works to constantly maintain them even if that taxes him mentally. He does sever the tiess on an unpleasant note. However, if things become very unharmonious, the most he does is cuts down on meeting the other person but he does not stop speaking with him or sever relations altogether.

MAINTAIN RELATIONSHIPS OF DEAD RELATIVES

This Hadith gives two lesson. The first is that we must maintain our relationship and those of our dead relatives . For instance, the ties of our dead parents must be kept alive. Some one came to the Holy Prophet ﷺ and said to Him," Messenger of Allah, my father has died and I feel a sense of remorse, for, I have not been able to give him his rights as was his due. (Those who are derelict in their ties of parents feel remorse after they die and this man had the same feeling)

What shall I do, now?"

The Prophetﷺadvised him to maintain good relationship with the friends and companions of his father. In that way, his father's soul would be pleased, and Allah would compensate him in some way for his omission of duty. We should not behave in such a way that with the death of a person we close. Thus, it is part of faith to keep alive ties of our dead relatives.We should not behave in such a way that with the death of a person. We close the chapter on his friends and companions, but we should carry on ties with them. We have seen that sayyidah Khadijah رضى الله عنها had died quite some time earlier but the Prophet ﷺ was constant in maintaining her ties, we also find in the ahadith that the Prophetﷺ used to send gifts to the friends of Sayyidah Khadijah رضى الله عنها .

IT IS SUNNAH TO CARRY ON TIES

The second lesson in the Hadith is in the words:

ان حسن العهد

to maintain them well. When ties have been established then we must keep them alive and, as far as possible, sever them not from our side. For instance, if the other person is being rude, we must endure his attitude and be constant in the ties telling ourselves that it was the sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. We may regard that as sunnah and an act of worship.

MY OWN CASE

My respected father Mawlana Mufti muhammad Shahfi رحمة الله عليه had a companion. He was very pious but he had the habit, as some people have, of raising objections. He was sure to criticise or taunt whoever he met or complain. Naturally, other people were very uneasy before him. Once, he behaved in the same way with me and it was too much for me to endure but I did not react spantaneously. I realised then that he regarded other people with disdain because he had authority and riches. Perhaps that was the reason that he behaved with me in that manner. When I came home, I wrote down a strong letter to him and wrote that he had that temperament which people dislike, and I reminded him that he had done the same thing to me. Hence, I did not wish to keep alive the ties with him.

DO NOT BE THE ONE TO SEVER TIES

However, I am thankful to Allah that I always discussed important matters with my father, so. I showed him the letter and told him what had happened. My father realized that I was upset at that time so he kept the letter with him and said, to me that he would speak later. After one day had passed, he called me and said," I have read your letter, What do you wish to gain by that ?" I said that with that letter I hoped to sever ties with that person. My respected father spoke to me words of advice, "Listen, to sever ties with anyone is not difficult, you may do it anytime. You need not wait for it. But to preserve ties and to join them cannot be done always. So, what is the hurry wait for a few days. But, if you do not wish to meet him, do not go to him, writing this letter means that you are severing ties from your side,"

EASY TO SEVER, DIFFICULT TO JOIN TIES

Then he said to me, "Once you have established bonds of friendship with anyone, you must retain them as far as possible. It is easier to snap them but difficult to cement them. If you cannot reconcile yourself with him then it is not necessary that you meet him everyday but he showed me another letter that he had written and asked me to compare the two. His letter also complained against that man's attitude and conveyed to him my displeasure but it did not speak of ties being snapped, his letter was written in the light of the sunnah of the Prophet ﷺ. It conveyed the essence of the matter but did not call for severing bonds of friendship.

He then said to me:

"listen these are old connections. His father and mine were friends and we cannot just snap old relations in a moment".

IT IS EASY TO DEMOLISH A BUILDING

The words of my respected father that it was easy to sever ties of relationship but difficult to join them is now etched on my heart, A building that stands before us may be razed down in two days but it takes very long to raise it. Therefore, we must give plenty of thought before taking shch a drastic step of severing ties. The Prophet ﷺ has advised us to retain them very well.

IF RELATIONSHIP HURTS

Let us suppose that we are put to difficulty because of the bonds of friendship, then we must assure ourselves that our ranks are being raised. We will earn reward for that. The Prophet ﷺ has said that if a thorn pricks a believer then it increases his reward and his rank. If we bear hardship patiently, we will gain reward against patience. Further, if we do that with the intention of obeying the words of the Prophet ﷺ then we will get the added reward for following the sunnah.

REWARD AGATNST PATIENCE

The hardships that we face in this life are ephemeral. We will leave them here when we die but the reward that we will carry with us in the grave and in the hereafter will more than to offset the difficulties we face here. The Prophet ﷺ has quoted in a Hadith:

> "when Allah will bestow his mercy on the patient His mercy in and persevering on the day of Resurrection, and He will reward them, those people who had led a life of comfort and ease in the world would wish that their skins were peeled off with scissors instead of comfort, > has they enddured that with patience." Thus we must bear the little difficulties we encounter.

WHAT IS IT TO BE CONSTANT

We must, however, understand what it means to keep alive the bonds of connection. It means that we must go on giving the rights of the other person., and not snap the ties with him. However, it does not imply that the heart should be reconciled to it to accept him and that we cannot feel uneasy about it. We are also not required to move about with him. These things are not necessary to maintain ties of friendship. It is enough to give his rights as nominated by Shari'ah. We are not compelled to keep anyone's company if our heart does not harmonise with him, nor are we required to meet him. We must, however, go on giving him his rights, and we must not sever ties with him.

THE RESULT OF IGNORING THE SUNNAH

We often see that our mutual relationships are marked with disagreements and disputes. This is really because we have given up the sunnah of the Prophet ﷺ and ignore his teachings and guidance. If we stick to the Hadith we had learnt in the previous chapter and the Hadith which we have learnt in this chapter and we understand and lead our lives according to both of them most of our misunderstandings and disputes will be removed.

The teachings are repeated here. If we love anyone, we must exercise monderation, and if we dislike anyone, we must again exercise moderation. The teachings of Shariah revolve round moderation and refraining from surpassing the limits. Next, once bonds of companionship or friendship are established, we must be faithful to them as fajr as possible,

May Allah, through His mercy and benevolence, cause all of us the readers and my self to act in accordance with these teachings. Aameen.

اعوذ بالله من الشيطن الرجيم۔ بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم

عن مغيرة بن شعبة رضى الله عنه قال قال رسول ﷺ لا تسبوا الاموات فتوذوا الاحياء (ترمذى، كتاب البر، باب ماجاء فى الشتم)

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and His forgiveness and we believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Allah from the evils of our selves and the vices of our deeds. There is no one to misguide whom Allah guides and there is no one to guide whom Allah lets go astray. I bear witness that there is no god but Allah Alone.

He has no partner. I also bear witness that our authority, our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad is His servant and His Messenger. May Allah have mercy on him, his household and on his Companions and bless them and send peace on them in great abundance.

DO NOT CALL THE DEAD "BAD PEOPLE"

Sayyidina Mughira bin Shabiah رضی الله عنه has quoted the Messenger of Allah ﷺ as saying:

"Do not call those who have died as bad people because to speak ill of the dead will hurt the living".

Also, Sayyidina Abdullah bin Umar رضی الله عنه has said that the Messenger of Allah ﷺ said:

اُذكروا مَحاسنَ مَوتٰكُمْ وَكفُّوا عن مساويهِمْ - (ابوداؤد، كتاب الادب، باب فی النهی عن سبّ الموتی)

"Speak of the good things of those of you who have died and refrain from speaking ill of them".

Both the foregoing ahadith have a similar subject-matter. We must mention the good things but not mention the bad things of anyone who has died, even if the dead man was evil.

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE TO GET A DEAD MAN'S FORGIVENESS

It is wrong, anyway, to seapk ill of the living persons and to backbite them. Rather, we must speak well of the living too. For, backbiting is forbidden. Then, why do these ahadith specify the dead alone? The answer is that backbiting the lliving is forbidden but to backbite the dead is forbidden twice over. There are many reasons for that when anyone backbites the living, he stands the chance of apologising for his wrong behaviour and he may be forgiven. In this way, his sin will be erased. Backbiting is a violation of the rights of fellowmen, and if the victim forgives, the sin stands removed. But, one cannot seek forgiveness of the dead, So, that sin cannot be erased and is, therefore, dual.

OBJECTIONS RAISED AGAINST ALLAH

The second reason why a dead man must not be criticised is that he has gone to Allah. It is possible that Allah may have forgiven him. So, if we recall his bad nature then it means that we object to Allah's decision. It is as though we tell Allah, "You may have forgiven him but I will not pardon him." It is very sinful.

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE LIVING AND THE DEAD

The third reason is that under certain circumstances it is allowed to backbite the living. For instance, there is possibility of other people falling victim to an evil man; in such cases, it is allowed to caution them that this man is likely to cheat because of his nature. The purpose of this backbiting is to save other people from loss. On the other hand, a dead man cannot harm anyone, or cheat them. So it is not permitted to backbite him under any circumstances. This is why the dead man is specified in these ahadith which prohibit us to speak bad about them, or backbite them.

IT WILL HURT THE LIVING

The Fourth reason is mentioned by the Prophet himself ﷺ. When we backbite a dead man, we suppose that we cannot hurt him by our speech because he is not alive, and he will not know. But, we overlook the possibility that there may be alive those who love him and they would feel offended by the criticism. If we had backbited one who is alive, we could have approached him and sought forgiveness but by backbiting a dead man we will have offended all his relatives and friends and fans. It would not be easy for us to locate each of them and ask to be forgiven. This is more difficult than seeking pardon of one who is alive. That is why, the Prophetﷺ has disallowed us to remember the bad things of the dead man, but speak only of his good nature.

BACKBITING THE DEAD IS PROPER IF ----

Only under one condition is it allowed to backbite the dead. That situation is when anyone has written down misleading ideas in books before he died. The books are well circulated and have a wide readership. Therefore, it is proper to inform the public that this man had misleading beliefs, which he has publicized so that they may not be miscarried by them. We are allowed to mention only this much of his evil nature. We are liable to respect the limits and not speak ill of him more than necessary. We are not allowed to decide or curse him. We do not know that, though he had written misleading things, he may have been inspired by Allah to repent before he died, and Allah may have forgiven him. We cannot decide on his fate or call him as one consigned to Hell. Only Allah decides whether anyone will be sent to Hell or Paradise. We can only tell the people that his views expounded in books are irreligious and misleading and they be wary of that.

THE DEAD BENEFITS IF WE SPEAK GOOD OF HIM

We must remember the advice of the Prophetﷺ that the dead man should be remembered with his good qualities, not bad. The Hadith does not merely ask us to refrain from recalling his bad nature but also asks us to mention his good things. I have learnt from my elders that the wisdom behind it is that when a Muslim speaks well, or recalls a good characteristic of a dead man then it is a testimony in favour of the dead man. Sometimes, it is on the basis of such a testimony that Allah bestows on the dead man His favour saying: "My pious slaves speak well of you, so I forgive you!"

To speak well of him is better for him and, on the basis of that, it is not unexpected of Allah that He might forgive you too, saying:

> You caused my slave to benefit, so I will benefit you! And I forgive you too!"

Hence, we must refrain from speaking ill of the dead, but we must remember him with good words.

PRAY FOR THE DEAD

There is yet another Hadith of the same import but its words are different:

"لا تذكروا هلكاكم الا بخير"

(سنن النسائی، کتاب الجنائز، باب النهی عن ذکر الهلکی الابخیر)

> "Do not remember your dead except with good words".

To speak of anyone with good words also calls upon us to pray for him:

> O Allah! Forgive him. Be kind to him. O Allah! Save him from Your punishment.

This way we will gain a double reward. First, to make a supplication which is a form of worship and rewarding, no matter why it was made. Secondly, to cause another Muslim to benefit brings us reward for ourselves too.

Therefore, if we pray for him, not only he stands to gain but we will also be benefitted.

May Allah grant us the ability to act on whatever we have read and thus show us His favour and benevolence. Aameen.

عن ابى هريرة رضى الله تعالىٰ عنه قال قال رسول الله ﷺ لا يؤمن العبد الايمان كله حتى يترك الكذب فى المزاحة و يترك المراء وان كان صادقاً (مسند احمد ، جلد ٢ صفحه: ٣٥٢)

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and His forgiveness and we believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Allah from the evils of our selves and the vices of our deeds. There is no one to misguide whom Allah guides and there is no one to guide whom Allah lets go astray. I bear witness that there is no god but Allah Alone. He has no partner. I also bear

TWO SIGNS OF PERFECT FAITH

Sayyidina Abu Hurayrah رضی الله عنه has said that the Messenger of Allah ﷺ said:

"No one can be a perfect believer unless he gives up falsehood even when joking, and unless he shuns argument even though he may be on the right."

This Hadith tells that two things distinguish a true believer who gives them up he does not lie even as a joke and he does not argue even if he is right.

FALSEHOOD AS A JOKE

The Hadith tells us, first, that we must not lie, not even when we joke. Many people believe that falsehood is unlawful when spoken seriously but not when said as a joke. Thus, when we remind anyone that he had lied when he said a certain thing, he retorts that he had only joked with us. As if to say, that is it not wrong to lie when joking. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said that a believer is one whose tongue does not utter what is not true, not even in a light-hearted speech. He is allowed to joke and speak in a light-hearted vein if he respects the limits. Shariah has not only allowed that but also recommended it a little. It is not correct that a man may always be serious and never smile. The Prophet ﷺ himself is known to have spoken in a light vein and with a pleasant nature.

AN EXAMPLE OF THE PROPHET'S LIGHT HEARTEDNESS

Someone asked the Prophet ﷺ for a camel which was regarded then as a very valuable possession. The Prophet ﷺ said to him I will give you the child of a she-camel".That man said, "what will I do with the child of a she camel? I want a camel to ride on." The Prophet ﷺ remarked:

"Every camel is a child of a she-camel!".

The Prophet made a joke and showed a good nature but he did not lie.

ANOTHER EXAMPLE

A woman requested the Prophet ﷺ to pray to Allah that He admit her into Paradise. He said, "No old woman will enter Paradise." When he saw that she was disturbed, he said, "I mean that no woman will enter Paradise as an old woman but all of them will enter as young women."

He did not say anything false but only amused other people. To joke in this manner is the Prophet's sunnah, if anyone jokes in this way to follow his practice then he will earn a reward for that.

HAFIZ ZAMIN'S LIGHT HEARTEDNESS

He was one of the three well well-known Qutubs[1] of Thana Bhawan. Hafiz Zamin Shaheed was a great saint. Some religious elders disclosed that the jihad, against the British in 1857 was decreed by Allah to receive his sacrifice. However, if anyone, visited him, he would always find him in a light-hearted mood among his people. To every new visitor, he would say. "If you have come to receive a religious opinion, you may see Mawlana Shaykh Muhammad Thanavi, sitting opposite us. If you wish to learn about Zikr, or become a disciple then you may see Haji Imdad Ullah Muhajir Dehlavi, who is also here. If you wish to smoke the huqqah then join us. Behind this harmless talk he had hidden his high station.

1. A rank in Sufi religious order.

MUHAMMAD BIN SEEREEN رحمة الله عليه AND LAUGHTER

Muhammab bin Seereen رحمة الله عليه was a tabaéen[1] of high order. It is said of him:

كُنَّا نَسْمَعُ ضَحْكَهُ فِي النَّهَارِ وَبُكَاءَهُ بِاللَّيْلِ

"We used to hear laughter from his quarters during the day but sobbing during the night."

When he prostrated himself before Allah, he sobbed much.

GOOD NATURE EXHORTED

Anyway, it is not wrong to joke if we stay within limits. We should not make it a habit to joke all the time. We must display a moderate light heartedness sometimes. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said:

رُوحُوا الْقُلُوبَ سَاعَةً فَسَاعَةً

Let your hearts rest after every little while.

When we are occupied in serious work, we must take time out for a little amusement because that is also necessary. It is the sunnah, of the Prophet ﷺ. However, we must not speak anything wrong.

If it is wrong to lie when joking then it should be wrong to a greater degree to lie when serious. One of the basic signs of a Believer is that he does not utter anything

1. An epigone, successor of the companions رضوان الله عليهم اجمعين.

false. Even when he is faced with difficulty he does not lie although Shariah has permitted us to lie if it is necessary to save a life. The pious slaves of Allah do not lie at such times too.

SAYYIDINA ABU BAKR رضى الله عنه KEEPS AWAY FROM LIE

He was travelling with the Prophet ﷺ during the hijrah. The infidels of Makkah had sent men to trace them out. They had offered a hundred camels to anyone who brought the Prophet ﷺ to them. That was a highly great reward. Everyone in Makkah was eager to trace him out. In this race, one of them managed to track down the Prophet ﷺ. He knew Abu Bakr Siddiq رضى الله عنه but he did not know who the Prophet ﷺ was. He asked, "Who is this with you?" If he told him the truth, there was a risk to life, otherwise he would be lying. Those people who are particular in speaking the truth find that Allah helps them out, and he was siddiq. He said in reply to that man's question:

هَادٍ يَهْدِينِي إِلَى السَّبِيلِ

He is the guide, directs me on the path.

He spoke words that contained no lie at all. The Prophet ﷺ was truly a guide who showed the path to religion. In this way, the life of the Prophet ﷺ was saved. He did not utter falsehood although we are permitted to speak a lie to save a life.

MAWLANA MUHAMMAD BIN QASIM رحمة الله عليه NANOTWI ABSTAINS FROM LYING

He was the founder of Dar ul Uloom, Deoband. In 1857 when jihad, was waged, the Britishers issued a warrant of arrest against him. The situation was that at every crossing scaffolds were erected to hang those who did not support the government. Everyone, who was known to participate in jihad, was hunted down and hanged. Mawlana Muhammad bin Qasim Nanotwi رحمة الله عليه was sitting in the mosque and he was clad in a very simple dress. A stanger could not recognise him as a great scholar. The police came to arrest him and entered the mosque but could not find anyone. They had imagined that he would have a turban on his head and a heavy cloak on his body, and he would be sitting in a majestic fashion. They found this man dressed in very ordinary garments and took him to be a helper or servant of the mosque. They asked him. "Where is Mawlana Qasim Nanotwi?" If he disclosed himself they would arrest him and if he said anything else that would be false. So he moved a little to the side and said. "He was here a while ago." That was a very difficult time, if they took him away they would have sent him to the gallows, but he did not lie even then. It was for that reason that Allah saved him and the policemen went away. A believer does not tell a lie even when death smiles on his face.

THE RAMPANT LIE

Therefore, we should not tell lies. Shariah has emphasised that we speak the truth and not lie, not even as a joke or in war. Today all of us lie and this includes educated, religious scholars and those who keep company of the sanitly persons. Among them are those who submit false medical certificates, facititious statements and documents or give false testimonies. The situation has come to such a pass that people have given up hope and they say. "We cannot live in this world if we speak the truth." May Allah protect us! However, the Messenger of Allah ﷺ has said:

الصدق ينجي والكذب يهلك

Truth salvages while falsehood destroys.

One may gain temporarily by telling lies but there is no success in the end. There is success in truth and in obeying Allah. We know of many things that are clear lies and there are many varieties of it. The flase certificates and statements are the worst kinds of lies. Educated people are involved in it. May Allah enable us to keep away from it. Aameen, and may we realise that the Prophet ﷺ has said that a perfect believer does not tell llies even when he jokes and amuses.

REFRAIN FROM ARGUMENTS

The next thing that we are told is that although we may be on the right, we should not argue or dispute. Of the mischiefs of the tongue is argument and dispute. It is a great occupation of our people. When a few sit together, they begin to argue and debate on an issue. But, they gain nothing in this world or the next. It destroyes man's unseen nature. Imam Malik رحمة الله عليه has said:

المراء يذهب بنور العلم

"Arguments and debates destory the light in men."

The scholars are more prone to this habit, because each of them regards himself as more knowledgeable. They spend hours together in argument which may be oral or written down.

ONLY GIVE YOUR OPINION

The simple thing to do is that if we have a different opinion we must just give it and hear what others say. If we are convinced then we must agree otherwise we must say that we do not understand what they say and we must make it clear to them that they may do what they believe while we would do what we believe. There is no point in arguing, for everyone would try to over rule the other. The result is that there is no distinction between truth and falsehood. The Hadith cites the Prophet ﷺ as saying, "Even if you are right and the other is wrong, do not dispute." Merely give your opinion and let the other know that they may follow it if they agree otherwise it was their outlook.

SURAH "AL KAFIROON"

The Surah Al Kafiroon was revealed to state this very idea. The Prophet ﷺ gave his message of unity of Allah to the idolators of Makkah and he explained it. However, when they began to argue and dispute, these verses were revealed.

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ ط

قُلْ يٰٓاَيُّهَا الْكٰفِرُوْنَ ۝ لَآ اَعْبُدُ مَا تَعْبُدُوْنَ ۝ وَلَآ اَنْتُمْ عٰبِدُوْنَ مَآ اَعْبُدُ ۝ وَلَآ اَنَا عَابِدٌ مَّا عَبَدْتُّمْ ۝ وَلَآ اَنْتُمْ عٰبِدُوْنَ مَآ اَعْبُدُ ۝ لَكُمْ دِيْنُكُمْ وَلِيَ دِيْنِ ۝ (سورۃ الکافرون)

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

Say, "O disbelievers! I shall not worship those whom you worship, nor are you the worshippers of Him whom I worship; and I have not been a worshipper of those whom you worshipped, nor are you the worshippers of Him whom I worship. To you your religion and to me my religion." (al Kafiroon, 109-1-6)

He made it very clear that he did not wish to argue and debate. He explained the salient features of religion and if they had agreed that would have been for their own benefit. Unnecessary debate was not good for any one.

TAKE IT OR LEAVE IT

We must see that even in the question of disbelief and Islam., Allah made it clear that there should be no disputing. Therefore, it is more essential that we keep away from debate and dispute in other matters. In contrast, our malady is that we are continually involved in argument and dispute. This habit is disadvantageous to our inner self. If we have to discuss an issue with anybody then we must state our point sincerely to convey the truth and then we must listen to their point of view. If that is sound, we must concede to their view otherwise we may leave it but not argue after that.

AN UNENDING ISSUE

Many people write to me, saying that they had a disagreement with someone on some issue and certain arguments were presented by both sides. They ask me for advice on how they may give more arguments. Now, if I were to suggest an argument and they were to present another, the issue would never end. The simple answer is that we should not indulge in argument. The only way out is to declare our idea and if the other person agrees, well and good otherwise we should leave him to his ideas. We may make it clear that we will pursue the course we are on. There is no point for further argument. The Prophet ﷺ taught us exactly this thing, "If you are on the right then, too, do not dispute."

DEBATE IS NOT ADVANTAGEOUS

Therea is a tendency these days to enter into a debate and dialogue, and defeat the other side. When Mawlana Ashraf Ali Thanavi رحمة الله عليه had qualified from Dar ul Uloom, Deoband, he was much interested in entering into a dialogue with the polythiestic groups. For sometime, he engaged himself in these debates and he always had an upper hand. Allah had blessed him with an excellent art of speech and delivery. However, he himself said, after some days, that he was no more inclined to argue in this manner. He said that whenever he debated with anyone, he sensed a darkness in his heart. So, he never again participated in such a dialogue all his life. He disallowed other people too from debating an issue with anyone because there was no advantage in that. If there is really a need for it to further the Truth then it is a different question. But, it is not correct to make it a regular affair. Since it is not proper for the ulama, then it should also not be proper for the ordinary person to argue on religious question.

ONLY THOSE WITH EXECESSIVE INTELLIGENCE ARGUE

Akbar Allahbadi, the great Urdu poet, had composed an excellent couplet on the question of arguments and debates.

مذہبی بحث میں نے کی ہی نہیں
فالتو عقل مجھ میں تھی ہی نہیں

I never argued on religion,
I never had excessive intelligence.

Every person should pay heed to this advice. However, if anyone does not know something, he may ask a knowledgeable person about it. If he cannot understand something let him ask, but let no one argue.

ARGUMENT GROWS DARKNESS

Mawlana Thanavi has explained this Hadith thus:

> "It shows that argument and debate grow darkness (in the heart), because an imperfect faith is (a sign of) darkness. That is why you will find that the mystics greatly detest debates and arguments".

This means that men of Allah, who tread the path of Tasawwuf[1] and Sulook[2] detest intensely argument and debate.

A DEBATE WITH MAUDUDI

Baba Najm Ahsan رحمة الله عليه was one of our religious elders who had been blessed with the company of Mawlana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه . He was a marvellous man of religion. One day, he said to me:

> "Maududi has cast aspersion on some of the companions in his book, Khilafat wa Mulookiyat, you must write on the subject".

Hence, I wrote an essay on it and I got a letter from the respected Maududi in answer. So, I wrote another piece as a rejoinder. In this way, I wrote an answer twice. When Bab Najm Ahsan رحمة الله عليه read my second answer, he wrote to me a letter which I have with me todate. He wrote:

> I read your essay and was much pleased. May Allah accept it.

---

1. Tasawwuf, is the mystic path leading to purification of soul.
2. Sulook, conduct, it is a sufi path.

He then added:

Now, bury the debating.

He meant to say, further arguments must now cease. The truth has been declared. Do not respond if you get any argument from the other side, otherwise the process will go on.

Anyway, the men of Allah do not like to involve themselves in such arguments. They detest it because there is no advantage in it. We do not know of anyone accepting the Truth after being convinced through a debate. It is only a waste of time.

The men of Allah despise debates and arguments and disputes because the Messenger of Allah ﷺ has said:

"It is a sign of the believer that he shuns debate and argument".

May Allah enable us to keep away from argument, debate and disputes and from speaking lies and falsehood. Aameen.

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and His forgiveness and we believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Allah from the evils of our selves and the vices of our deeds. There is no one to misguide whom Allah guides and there is no one to guide whom Allah lets go astray. I bear witness that there is no god but Allah Alone. He has no partner. I also bear witness that our authority, our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad is His servant and His Messenger. May Allah have mercy on him, his household and on his Companions and bless them and send peace on them in great abundance.

THE HADITH

Sayyidina Malik bin Huwayrith رضی الله عنه was a Companion of the Prophet ﷺ. He was from the tribe, Banu layth who lived in a settlement far from Madinah. These people were blessed with the faith of Islam, and they had travelled to Madinah as Muslims to meet the Prophet ﷺ. Sayyidina Malik narrates the story of their meeting with the Prophet ﷺ. "We presented ourselves before the Holy Prophet ﷺ. We were all young men of about the same age and we stayed with him for twenty days. At the end of that period, the Holy Prophet ﷺ presumed that we were desirous of returning to our people. So he asked us about the people we had left behind in our homes, and we informed him of our relatives who were at home. The Messenger of Allah ﷺ was very kind and considerate with every man, so he said, Now you go to your families and teach them religion and command them to pursue it. And offer prayers as you have seen me pray. When it is time for prayers, one of you should call the azan, and the oldest of you should act as Imam. After giving us this advice, he bade us farewell."

LEARN RELIGION THROUGH COMPANY

The lengthy Hadith has many lessons for us. The first thing that Malik bin Huwayrith رضی الله عنه said was, "We presented ourselves before the Prophet ﷺ. We were young people and stayed with him for about twenty days." This was the method of learning religion and there were no organised religious institutions, colleges or universities in those days, and there were no books, either.

The only method of learning religion was that those who intended to learn stayed in the company of the Prophet ﷺ and observed how he spent his life and what he did from morning to evening. They studied how he dealt with other people and how he lived at home. They learnt of these things and observed them and thus knew the Seerah, of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. In this way they learnt religion.

WHAT IS COMPANY

The original method of learning religion is to stay in company of the teacher. That is because only the literate can learn at the madrasah and from books. Besides, one cannot learn from books alone. Allah has created man in such a way that he cannot acquire knowledge and arts only through books. No science can be learnt merely from books. We have to stay in someone's company for that. It is to stay with one we know for some days and observe his behaviour. This is how one acquires knowledge. A novice doctor or engineer even a cook, will have to stay for some days with a doctor, engineer or cook to study these sciences and acquire professional knowledge in the respective fields. The same procedure applies to religion.

HOW DID THE COMPANIONS ACQUIRE KNOWLEDGE?

This is why Allah always sent a Messenger with a celestial book. He did not send a book alone. The Messenger or Prophet gave practical knowledge and demonstration of the teachings of the book. The noble Companions رضی الله عنه did not go to any University or Madrasah and did not read any book. They were not prescribed a syllabus of studies yet each of them is worth a thousand religious institutions and a thousand books because they stayed in the company of the Holy Prophet ﷺ and closely studied every detail of his life. Then, they tried to emulate the example. This is how they became a companion.

KEEP GOOD COMPANY

Company is what forms man. Our elders have said that to learn religion we must keep the company of religious men. Their company will grow in us the significance and love of religion gradually. If we are in bad company then its influences will be apparent on us. This is how the religion has come down to us from the Holy Prophet ﷺ. The Companions رضی الله عنهم were trained through the company of the Prophet ﷺ, and their company prepared the tabaéen-their successors. The taba ta baéen, or the generation following them, were trained in the company of the tabaéen. The entire religion has come down to us in this manner.

TWO SOURCES

My respected father, Mawlana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه, has stated in the Ma`riful Quran that Allah has guided man through two sources, His book and his men. He has created such men who give practical shape to His Book. Thus if anyone relies on both these sources then he understands the realities of religion. If he relies only on one of these sources the book or the men, and ignores the other then he may be misled. Therefore, it is necessary to follow both of them.

Our religious elders have advised us that the easiest way to practically observe religious duties is to acquire the company of the men of Allah who understand Allah's religion and act on it. The more we keep their company, the more we will progress in religion.

Returning to the Hadith, these people were living at a distant place, so they stayed with the Prophet ﷺ for twenty days. During this period, they acquired the basic knowledge of religion from the Prophet ﷺ, learnt religion and benefitted from the noble company.

CARE FOR THE YOUNG

The Prophet ﷺ himself realised that the young people might be homesick. So, he asked them about the relatives they might have left behind and he found out that some of those young men were newly married. He advised them, therefore, that they should return to their homes.

STAYING AWAY FROM HOME

In explanation of this Hadith, the Ulama have given their ruling that a married man must not stay away from home for a long period. There is safety in it for him and his family. The religion of Allah considers all aspects of life and there is moderation in its demands. That is why it is called اُمَّةً وَّسَطًا (Justly balanced community). The balance is visible in this direction - seek good company to acquire religious knowledge but, at the same time, be careful of giving the rights of other people. Strike a balance between the two. Hence, the Prophet ﷺ said to his visitors after twenty days. "You have learnt the essentials of religion. Now, you have the rights of your family over you and your own rights, so go home to your families."

RIGHTS OF OTHERS

We must pause and think here that obviously they could not have learnt everything about religion in twenty days and the Prophet ﷺ could have asked them to stay with him longer. But, he knew that they had learnt what was necessary to know so he sent them away that they might give the other people their rights.

IT IS AN ABSOLUTE OBLIGATION TO LEARN THAT MUCH

We must know that knowledge of religion is divided into two kinds. The first comprises the knowledge that a man needs to fulfil his obligations - the fard and the wajib. These include knowledge about Prayer, Fasting, Zakah, Hajj, and what things are lawful and what are unlawful. For instance, it is forbidden to tell lies, to backbite anyone, to take wine, to eat pork, and so on. It is called fard ayn[1] And is in absolute obligation for all Muslims, men and women, to know his duties and the things he must avoid. The following Hadith speaks of this knowledge when it says:

طلب العلم فريضة على كل مسلم و مسلمة

It is obligatory for every Muslim man and Muslim woman to acquire knowledge.

Every muslim must set aside all other things and give his time and effort to gain this much knowledge. If he has to go away from his parents, wife and children, brothers and sisters to learn this much, he must not

1. Fard Ayn is an individual duty on every muslim hesitate but he must leave them. If they stop him from going then he must not obey them.

THE FARD KIFAYAH[1]

The second kind of knowledge is to acquire full knowledge of religion and become a scholar. It is not a duty on every Muslim but it is a fard kifaya. If some people become religious scholars all the others are absolved of the obligation. For instance, if there is a scholar in a small township and he is enough to look after the religious needs of all the people there then the other people's obligation in this regard is removed from them. Similary, in a large city, its inhabitants are absolved of their obligation to become religious scholars once there are enough of them to oversee their religious duties.

IMPART RELIGIOUS KNOWLEDGE TO HOUSEHOLD MEMBERS

At the end of the twenty days, when the Prophet ﷺ sent them home to look after the rights of their families, he cautioned them against being careless at home. He commanded them to teach their family members whatever they had learnt with him. We learn from this command that it is an obligation for everyone who learns something of religion to teach it to the members of his family. They must be told enough to be able to live as true Muslim. It is fard`ayn (An absolute individual obligation) for every Muslim to impart this much education to his family. The obligation is just like the duty to offer prayers, to fast in Ramadan, to pay zakah, or to perform Hajj. It is as essential to teach household folk as it is to observe these duties.

1. Fard Ki fayah, is a collective duty.

NEGLECTING CHILDREN

There is much carelessness in our society in regard to upbringing of our children. Educated intelligent and religious-minded people also are derelict in imparting religious knowledge to their children. They do not teach their children to recite the Quran correctly or to offer prayers in the right way and they do not even give them the basic instructions in Islam. These children grow up well educated in worldly sciences but they are unaware of the difference between fard and sunnah. We must be as dutiful in imparting basic religious knowledge to our children as we are in observing prayers ourselves.

The Prophetﷺ said thereafter, "Go home and command the folk of your household". That is, command them to observe religious duties.

HOW MAY WE PRAY

He then said:

صَلُّوْا كَمَا رَأَيْتُمُوْنِى أُصَلِّى

Offer prayer.

When they reach their homes they must pray as they had seen him pray. It is worth considering that the Prophetﷺdid not merely ask them to offer prayers but he asked them to pray as he prayed. Prayer is a pillar of religion so we must be particular in observing it in the manner known from the Prophetﷺ. It is very imperative that our people pay attention to it. Although many people offer prayers, yet most of us merely discharge their duties without caring to observe the correct procedure. We hurry through the prayers merely to get it off our heads and we do not pay attention to the Prophet's command that we pray as he did pray.

OBSERVE THE SUNNAH, WHEN PRAYING

If we pray in the way the Prophet ﷺ prayed, neither do we have to give more time to it nor does it call for extra effort. In the same time and with the same effort as we are used to in our inadequate prayers, we will offer our prayers according to sunnah; only a little attention is necessary. However, if we persist in offering prayers as we do now, we may be discharging our obligation and keeping away from the sin of omitting prayers, but we miss the inner light associated with prayers according to sunnah. We miss the blessings and other advantages. I had once spoken on the subject and a booklet has been published with the title perform salah correctly. In this booklet, readers are cautioned against the mistakes that are made generally. This booklet must be read and prayers must be offered in the correct method it outlines. We will find out that it does not take much time to observe prayers in the method outlined in this booklet.

THE ATTENTION PAID BY MUFTI A`ZAM

My respected father, Mawlana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه lived for eighty three years. He received religious education at a very early age in his life, and all his life he imparted religious education and issued fatawa (rulings) on religious questions. He was appointed Mufti Azam (The chief jurist) at Dar-ul-uloom, Deoband. In Pakistan, too, he was known by that name. He answered queries and issued hundreds of thousands of fatawa, Once he said, "I have spent my life learning and teaching but it happens even now when I offer prayers that I feel unsure of what I should do. So, after I have offered the prayer, I look up in the books whether I was correct or had committed an error." But, I see that people do not even care if they have observed the etiquette's of prayer or not, whether they have observed prayer correctly or not. It is enough for them that they have gone through the formality of prayer.

PRAYER BECOMES INVALID

We often see worshippers showing unconcern in prayer and they scratch their heads or stroke their faces with both hands. They must know that if they activate their hands and they are engaged in that for so long as it takes to recite سُبْحَانَ رَبِّيَ الْأَعْلَى three times then their prayer becomes void. The obligation is not discharged, but they are unconcerned about that. Sometimes, they use both their hands to set their clothes right or wipe sweat but if they spend a little more time doing that, their prayer is invalid. Also, if we adopt a posture during prayers, which makes an onlooker wonder whether we are engaged in prayers or not, then our prayers are not valid. If anyone uses one hand to do something three times, in a single posture and an onlooker think that he is not engaged in prayers then the prayer is invalid. Similarly, some people do not rest their toes on the floor when they prostrate. If their feet do not touch the ground even for a little while during a prostration and remain air-borne then that prostration is not performed, and if a prostration is not valid, the whole prayer becomes invalid.

CORRECT INTENTION ALONE IS NOT ENOUGH

These are a few examples. We do not pay attention to them and do not care to rectify the shortcomings. We spend our time to offer the prayers but we do not pray in the correct manner with the result that the effort bears no fruit. To cap it all, there is a tendency these days that when the shortcoming is pointed out to anyone, he retorts promptly:

انما الاعمال بالنيات

Deeds depend on the intention behind them.

This answer is on our lips to offset our shortcomings and silence our critics. Indeed, Allah looks at the intentions behind efforts but if that was enough then why should we be required to undergo the exercise. We could have done everything in the comfort of our homes by merely forming intentions. The fact is that our deeds should also conform with our intentions. Suppose, anyone intends to go to Lahore but he boards a train that is bound for Quetta, will his intention take him to Lahore? In the same way, mere intention will not correct anyone's prayer. We have to offer prayer in the correct manner shown to us by our beloved Prophetﷺ. This is why the Prophet ﷺ said when he bid farewell to the young men, "Offer prayers as you have seen me pray." May Allah make us observe the niceties of prayer. Aameen!

SIGNIFICANCE OF AZAN

The Prophetﷺalso advised those young men:

فاذا حضرت الصلوٰة فليؤذن لكم احدكم

When it is time for prayers, one of you should call the azan.

The azan, is masnoon. If anyone is not offering prayers in the mosque but offers them in the wilderness of the desert then, too, it is sunnah to call the azan. Even if one offers prayers all alone then he must call the azan.

before he offers prayers. This is because it is a sign and symbol of the religion of Allah. Some ulama, were asked what was the point in calling the azan, in the wilderness or desert when there is no likelihood of any man hearing it or coming to prayer in response? Or, what is the point in calling it in the land of the infidels where no one is expected to join the congregation? The ulama, have suggested that the creatures of Allah are many and innumerable. It is possible that men may not hear the azan, and respond but there are the jinn, or the angels who might join the worshipper who calls out the azan, in his prayers. Anyway, we are commanded to call the azan, before establishing prayers.

LET THE ELDEST LEAD PRAYERS

The Prophet ﷺ then said to them that:

ولیؤمکم اکبرکم

The oldest among them must lead the prayers (in congregation).

The original command is that when a number of people are gathered for the congregational prayers then the most knowledgeable among them is to act as an Imam and lead prayers. However, in this particular case all the young men were equally knowledgeable in religious affairs and all of them had come to the Prophet ﷺ together and received like teaching. When such is the case then the oldest among them serves as the Imam. Allah has honoured the old in this way. It is incumbent upon the young to respect the oldest among them and request him to lead them.

TO EXALT THE ELDER IS PART OF ISLAMIC ETIQUETTE

It is related in a Hadith that in the times of the Prophet ﷺ a Muslim was killed by the Jews in Khyber which was a Jewish locality. The dead man had a brother who inherited him. He came to the Prophet ﷺ with his paternal uncle to find out how he might avenge his brother. The brother was naturally closer to the dead man while the other was his uncle. The former began to present his petition while the uncle kept quiet. The Prophet ﷺ remarked to the young man كَبِّرِ الْكُبْرَ "Elevate the old!" He meant to tell him that when the older man is present with him then he should not take precedence in speaking, but he should ask his uncle to take precedence. He may put in his word later on, if necessary.

This is part of Islamic etiquettes to exalt the aged even if he has no other distinction. Age itself is sufficient distinction.

Hence, the Prophet ﷺ had instructed the young men to let the oldest among them lead the prayers. The functions of the Imam are exercised by the most learned or, at least, by the oldest.

May Allah give us the strength to behave according to what we have read. Aameen.

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and His forgiveness and we believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Allah from the evils of our selves and the vices of our deeds. There is no one to misguide whom Allah guides and there is no one to guide whom Allah lets go astray. I bear

MEANING

Sayyidina Abdullah bin Umar رضی اللہ عنہ has said, "Sometimes man seeks from Allah guidance wishing for that thing to happen which holds goodness for him. But, Allah lets that happen for this man which is better for him and since he cannot recognize it, he becomes displeased with Allah saying to himself that he had asked for something while Allah had given him another thing. He does not see it better for him at that moment but at a later moment he will realise that it was in his own interest and Allah had given him the right thing. Sometimes, this realisation of the correctness of Allah's decision dawns upon man in this world and sometimes in the next world".

We must understand a few things in the foregoing narration. Firstly, whenever a slave of Allah seeks the guidance of Allah, He selects the best thing for him. What is Istikhara, (seeking Divine guidance)? There are many wrong notions about it in the minds of people. Normally, they believe that it involves a complex action culminating in a dream in which the guidance is received. Nothing of the sort is taught to us by the Prophet ﷺ.

THE METHOD AND THE SUPPLICATION

The Masnoon method of Istikharah is to offer two rakaat prayer. An intention is formed:

I have two choices, O Allah! Select the one that is better for me.

Then, he must offer two rakaat optional prayers and make the supplication which the Holy Prophet ﷺ has recommended. This is a very interesting and marvelous supplication, which only a messenger can teach his people and it is beyond our abilities to compose such a supplication no matter how much we may try:

اَللّٰهُمَّ اِنِّیْ اَسْتَخِیْرُكَ بِعِلْمِكَ وَاَسْتَقْدِرُكَ بِقُدْرَتِكَ وَاَسْئَلُكَ مِنْ فَضْلِكَ الْعَظِیْمِ، فَاِنَّكَ تَقْدِرُ وَلَا اَقْدِرُ، وَتَعْلَمُ وَلَا اَعْلَمُ ، وَاَنْتَ عَلَّامُ الْغُیُوْبِ، اَللّٰهُمَّ اِنْ كُنْتَ تَعْلَمُ اَنَّ هٰذَا الْاَمْرَ خَیْرٌ لِّیْ فِیْ دِیْنِیْ وَ مَعِیْشَتِیْ وَ عَاقِبَةِ اَمْرِیْ اَوْ قَالَ فِیْ عَاجِلِ اَمْرِیْ وَ آجِلِهٖ فَیَسِّرْهُ لِیْ ثُمَّ بَارِكْ لِیْ فِیْهِ، وَاِنْ كُنْتَ تَعْلَمُ اَنَّ هٰذَا الْاَمْرَ شَرٌّ لِّیْ فِیْ دِیْنِیْ وَمَعِیْشَتِیْ وَعَاقِبَةِ اَمْرِیْ اَوْقَالَ فِیْ عَاجِلِ اَمْرِیْ وَ آجِلِهٖ فَاصْرِفْهُ عَنِّیْ وَاصْرِفْنِیْ عَنْهُ وَاقْدُرْ لِیَ الْخَیْرَ حَیْثُ كَانَ ثُمَّ اَرْضِنِیْ بِهٖ ۔ (ترمذی، کتاب الصلوٰۃ، باب ما جاء فی صلوٰۃ الاستخارۃ)

O Allah! I seek from You the good through Your knowledge, and I seek from You the ability through Your power. And I ask of You (favours) out of Your unlimited favours. For, surely, You have power and I have none and You have knowledge and I have none, and You are the best known of the hidden and unknown. O Allah! If, in Your knowledge, this matter be good for my faith, my livelihood and the consequences of my affairs - in this world and the next - then ordain it for me and make it easy for me and bless me therein. But, if, in Your knowledge, this matter be bad for my faith, my livelihood and the consequences of my affairs then remove it away from me and remove me from it, and ordain for me the good wherever it be and cause me to be pleased with it.

"It means that "if the matter is not good for me then leave it aside and instead decree for me whatever is better for me, making me pleased with it and satisfied".

If this supplication is made after offering two rakaat, prayer then the istikharah is over.

NO TIME IS FIXED

Some people imagine that this procedure is followed always before sleeping at night, or after isha prayers. This belief is without foundation. In fact, istikharah may be made at any time suitable - at night, during the day, before sleeping or while fully awake.

RESPONSE NOT NECESSARILY SEEN IN DREAM

People also imagine wrongly that they would get the reply in a dream. That does not necessarily happen. Sometimes the guidance is forthcoming in a dream but sometimes one does not get it in a dream.

THE RESULTANT GUIDANCE

Some people contend that after making istikharah, they generally feel inclined to one action. So, they must follow that inclination. However, sometimes the confusion persists and a man cannot decide on a course of action. He should not worry in such cases, because the purpose of istikharah, is served, and Allah alone does what is good for the petitioner so the situation takes such a turn that thereafter only what is good for him happens but he does not realize it. It is possible that a man may imagine a course of action to be suitable for him but suddenly he encounters hindrances and he turns away from that. In short, Allah creates certain means, after istikharah, whereby the man gets what is good for him. It is not necessary that he will recognise the action in which good lies for him.

IN THAT REALLY LIES GOOD

It sometimes happens that man is not happy with the results, and he complains to Allah, "O Allah! I had sought your guidance through istikharah, but the results are not what I had hoped for and I do not think they are ideal".

Sayyidina Abdullah bin Umar رضی اللہ عنہ comments on this reaction of man in these words, "O foolish one! Your limited intelligence fools you into imagining that the result is not ideal for you but He Whose knowledge encompasses everything, knows what is good for you and what is harmful. Only that what He has done is good for you. You might realise at some stage in this life that it was good for you, or you might never learn that all your life. Only in the Hereafter will you know the truth!

YOU ARE LIKE A CHILD

We may compare the supplicant to a child who demands vociferously to be given something that is harmful to him. When he sees that his parents do not let him have it, he supposes that they are cruel to him. However, when he grows old and Allah grants him intelligence and the power to recognize good from bad, he will realise that he was seeking poison while his parents were trying to give him health. In comparison, Allah is more merciful and compassionate to His slaves than parents are to their children and He guides His slaves to the right path that is beneficial to them. It is another thing that they do not always recognize it in this life.

THE CASE OF SAYYIDINA MUSA عليه السلام

My mentor, Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayy رحمة الله عليه, related an incident which I have not read in any book although some of the books may definitely contain it. He related that sayyidina Musa عليه السلام was going towards the mount Tur to receive the honour of a conversation with Allah. He met a man on the way who said to him. "Musa! You are going to have a conversation with Allah. You will not find a better opportunity to present your petition - full of your wishes and desires - before him. Hence, when you go there make a supplication for me too, because I am facing many problems and a mountain of difficulties. I am deep in poverty and worries. Pray for me that Allah may grant me comfort and safety. "Musa عليه السلام assured him that he would present his supplication before Allah.

GO WE HAVE GRANTED HIM PLENTY

At the Mount Tur, Sayyidina Musa عليه السلام talked with Allah and after the talk was over he remembered the man. He presented that man`s supplication before Allah and made a strong recommendation for him adding, "He is also one of Your slaves. Give him comfort through Your mercy and remove his difficulties. "Allah asked him whether he should grant him small favours or large bounties. Musa عليه السلام thought that if anyone asks of Allah, he should ask for plenty so he said to Allah, "O Allah! Since You are favouring, bestow an him plenty. "Allah said, "Go! I have given him plentiful! Musa عليه السلام was satisfied and stayed at Mount Tur as long as he had to Stay.

ALL THE WORLD IS NOT ENOUGH

When he came down from the Mount Tur, Musa عليه السلام went to the house of that man and knocked at the door. However, someone else opened the door and when Musa عليه السلام asked him about the man, he informed him that he had died on such and such day. Now, Musa عليه السلام made a mental calculation and found that he had died shortly after his supplication to Allah. So, he protested to Allah that he could not understand why he had caused him to die after having assured him that he would give him plentiful. Allah reminded Musa عليه السلام that, he had asked him to bestow much on the man and if he had given him all the world then that would not have been enough. "I have now bestowed on him bounties of the Hereafter and Paradise which, indeed, reflect correctly on My promise. He now has plentiful which he never could have received on earth.

Man cannot understand the decision of Allah with his limited intelligence. Only He knows what is better for His slaves. Man looks at the visible and pours out his complaints and he regards the decisions of Allah as against his interests but he should realise that no one can see better than Allah what is good for His servants.

BE COMPOSED AFTER MAKING ISTIKHARA

This is why Abdullah bin Umar رضى الله عنه has advised, "When you have sought Divine guidance, be confident that Allah will only decide what is good for you. It may not seem good to you on the face of it but as far as the consequences are concerned it will be to your advantage. It may reveal its good to you in this life, or else it surely will become apparent to you in the next life that Allah has given you what was really good for you."

A SEEKER OF GUIDANCE NEVER FAILS

Another Hadith quotes the Prophetﷺ as saying:

ماخاب من استخار ولا ندم من استشار (مجمع الزوائد، جلد ۸ صفحہ ۹۶)

One who seeks Divine guidance never fails and one who seeks advice never repents.

He will never reproach himself for taking any course of action or doing anything because he had followed counsel. The Hadith assures us that one who makes istikharah, never fails because the final result is always favourable to him even if he does not see that immediately. As for him who has taken counsel, he will never repent because even if things go against him he will have the consolation of having taken advice. He had not followed his own whims.

A BRIEF SUPPLICATION FOR ISTIKHARAH

The mathod of istikharah-seeking Divine guidance-described above is applicable when the seeker has ample opportunity available to him before he presents his petition. He will offer two rakaat prayers and make the supplication. However, often man has to make a spontaneous decision so he does not have enough time with him in which he may offer two rakaat prayers and make the recommended supplication. The Holy Prophetﷺ has exhorted us to make the following supplication at such time:

اَللّٰهُمَّ خِرْ لِیْ وَاخْتَرْلِیْ (کنز العمال، جلد ۷، حدیث نمبر ۱۸۰۵۳)

O Allah! Select for me what I should do.

There is also this supplication:

اَللّٰهُمَّ اهْدِنِیْ وَسَدِّدْنِیْ (صحیح مسلم، ابواب الذکر والدعاء، باب التعوذ من شر ما عمل)

O Allah! Guide me and set me on the right path.

Again one more supplication:

اَللّٰهُمَّ اَلْهِمْنِیْ رُشْدِیْ (ترمذی، کتاب الدعوات، باب نمبر ۷۰)

O Allah! Put in my heart what is right.

The supplicant must make any one of these supplications. If he cannot remember these supplications in Arabic, he may make them in his own language. He may even simply reflect on these supplications in his mind, "O Allah! I am facing this diffuculty. Do put in my heart the right path which is pleasing to you and which is good for me."

THE PRACTICE OF THE MUFTI AZAM

I have observed my dear father, Mufti Azam of Pakistan, Mawlana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ. Whenever he had to make an urgent decision and select one of several options, he would shut his eyes for a while and turn to Allah for guidance. To a stranger it would not be apparent why he shut the eyes. When he shut the eyes, he would make a mental supplication to Allah, "O Allah! I cannot decide which course to adopt in this complex situation. Do guide me to what is right in Your eyes. "This is a brief istikharah in the heart.

TURN TO ALLAH BEFORE DOING ANYTHING

My mentor, Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayy رحمة الله عليه used to say, "If anyone turns to allay before doing anything then Allah surely helps him because he does not realize what he has achieved in the moment he turned to Allah. He has linked himself to Allah in that moment and has asked for goodness from Him and the right path. This means that he gets the straight path and the reward for establishing a link with Allah and yet another reward for making a supplication to Him. Allah loves the slave who turns to Him at such times and He rewards him generously for that. Therefore, man should make it a habit to turn to Allah for there are innumerable times every day when he has to make a decision. If he turns to Allah every now and then and asks for guidance from Him then He will surely help.

MADE A SUPPLICATION BEFORE HE REPLIED TO ANYONE

Mawalana Ashraf Ali Thanavi رحمة الله عليه used to say that he never stayed behind in turning to Allah when anyone visited him and wished to ask a question. He turned to Allah not knowing what sort of a question the visitor would ask. "O Allah! Let me give this man the correct answer to his question." He never failed to turn to Allah. This is what it is to have a relationship with Allah. We must also make the same habit.

Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayy رحمة الله عليه used to say, "Talk to Allah, seek his help in every matter. Ask Him to guide you. Make it a habit and soon your relationship with Him will be strengthened. Then, you will always have Him in mind. "He used to say that we will not do what the sufis used to do in times passed but if you act on my advice then you will establish a relationship with Allah.

May Allah help us to act on whatever we have read. Aameen.

TRANSLATION

Sayyidina Jabir bin Abdullah رضی اللہ عنہ has said that the Holy Prophet ﷺ said:

If goodness is shown to someone and he has the means to reciprocate then he must reciprocate. But if he does not have the means to return the favour then he must at least make mention of the favour shown to him and praise the benefactor. He who praises in this manner, in fact, shows gratitude, but if he conceals the favour then he shows ingratitude. As for him who appropriates what was not given to him is like one who dons two gaments of falsehood.

REWARDING GOODNESS

The Prophet ﷺ has taught us in this Hadith that if any one shows another person a favour or does some good with him, then the recepient must reciprocate in some way to the benefactor. The reciprocation is referred to in another Hadith by the word mukafat[1]. The Prophet ﷺ reference to reciprocation means that the beneficiary returns the goodness with the thought that the benefactor has been good to him. It is the sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ that he always rewarded one who presented him a gift or did a favour with goodness. Therefore reciprocation entitles one to reward from Allah.

1. Requital

NIYOTA IS DISALLOWED

There is a form of reciprocation in our society which is imposed on a person against his will. He fears that if he does not reciprocate, other people will look down upon him. Or, a person gives a gift on the assumption that he will get a return for it. This form of give-and-take is called niyota. A list is made out of the persons who give gifts so when those people in the list have an occasion they will receive a like gift. In fact, if the return gift is lesser than what was given, there is a hard-feeling and bitterness. The sort of a return is disallowed. The Quran has compared it to interest:

وَمَا اٰتَيْتُمْ مِنْ رِّبًا لِّيَرْبُوَا فِيْٓ اَمْوَالِ النَّاسِ فَلَا يَرْبُوْا عِنْدَ اللّٰهِ وَمَآ اٰتَيْتُمْ مِّنْ زَكٰوةٍ تُرِيْدُوْنَ وَجْهَ اللّٰهِ فَاُولٰٓئِكَ هُمُ الْمُضْعِفُوْنَ ۝ (سورۂ روم:۳۹)

And whatever you give in usu ry in order that it may increase upon people's riches it increase s not with Allah, but what you give in zakat. Seeking Allah's countenance, (will increase), so those who (do this) shall have manifold increase.(Ar-Rum, 30:39)

This verse defines niyota as interest. If anyone gives somethings to someone because he had given him on an occasion then it is sinful to give with that intention. We must never give-and-take in this manner. There is no gain in this world or the next to those who indulge in this practice of gift-against-gift or favour against favour.

LET LOVE BE THE CRITERION OF GIVE AND TAKE

There is one reciprocation which has been recommended to us by the Prophetﷺ. The giver may not expect a return but he gives only out of love and affection to seek the pleasure of Allah. The Prophetﷺhas said about it:

تَهَادَوْا فَتَحَابُّوْا

Exchange gifts and grow mutual love.

Therefore, if anyone gives with this saying of the Prophetﷺin mind and he has not even a distant expectation of receiving return then his giving is a source of blessing. The receipient also holds no such idea (like niyota) and feels not compelled to show a return gesture but wishes to be able to reciprocate brotherly feelings. Such a reciprocation is Mukafat which is applauded and recommended by the Prophet ﷺ.

DO NOT TRY TO EQUAL RETURN GIFT

The mukafat implies that no attempt is made to equal the return gift in terms of value. The one who reciprocates will believe that the gift was given to him according to the means of the giver and he would return the gesture according to his own means. Thus, if some one gives us a precious gift, it is not necessary for us to return a gift equally precious but we may give a gift which we can afford that person will not mind because he had given the gift to please us, and our intention in reciprocating is also to please him. We must stay within our means and not borrow money for that or resort to unfair means like bribery, etc.

TO PRAISE IS ALSO A FORM OF RECIPROCATION

In fact, the Hadith tells us that if anyone cannot give a return gift then it is open to him to praise the benefactor and reveal his favour to other people. He may speak highly of that man and thus please him.

THE WAY OF DOCTOR ABDUL HAYY (رحمة الله عليه)

My mentor, Doctor Abdul Hayy رحمة الله عليه used to say that if any one brought a gift in expression of his love then the recepient must, at least, display pleasure so that he is convinced of approval. It was the habit of my mentor that he accepted a gift with deep pleasure and used to say. "Brother" this is what I like and what I needed!" or , "I like it very much. In fact, I was thinking of byuing it." The giver naturally felt elated at his gift being accepted, and at the same time it also showed his observance of the directions of the Hadith. To conceal the gift or not appreciate is to be ungrateful.

TO PRESENT A GIFT IN SECRET

Once someone brought gift for Mawlana Doctor Abdul Hayy رحمة الله عليه, but gave it to him quietly while shaking his hands, because this is one way to present something. The Mawlana asked him what it was and he said that it was a gift he liked to give him. The Mawlana remarked then why give it stealthily for neither you nor I have stolen it but you are following a saying of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. Why then conceal it? There is no harm in giving it in the presence of other people. For it is an expression of love. Anyway, a gift is an expression of love whether it is small or large and when anyone gives you anything you must reciprocate, or at least shower praise on the giver.

WHY INVOKE BLESSINGs ON THE PROPHET FREQUENTLY IN TIMES OF DISTRESS?

Once Mawalana Doctor Abdul Hayy رحمة الله عليه advised us that if anyone is in some difficulty then he must frequently invoke blessings on the Prophet ﷺ. He then told us why this should be done. He said, we find in a Hadith, that when anyone invokes blessings on the Prophet, the angels convey them to him and submit to him the name of the man of his Ummah who had invoked the blessing. Now we know that it was the practice of the Prophet ﷺ in his life time that if anyone gave him a gift, he was sure to receiprocate. If we take these things into account, we can conclude that it is not possible that he will receive the gift of the blessing but not give a return gift. He will give a gift surely. He will reciprocate by making a supplication for this man. "O Allah! This man of my Ummah who is invoking blessings on me is in difficulty and distress. O Allah! Remove his problem from him."

Then, by granting this supplication, Allah will relieve him of his difficulty. Therefore, whenever anyone is trapped in anxiety or hardship, he must invoke blessings on the Prophet ﷺ frequently.

SUMMARY

The gist of our discussion is that the Prophet ﷺ has given us instructions in this Hadith that if any one favours us then we must try to reciprocate with the intention of observing the Sunnah of the Prophet ﷺ who definitely made a return gift or favour. But, we must not return it as though we are returning a debt or we are following the custom niyota. Our reciprocal gesture must be to please Allah and observe the sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ.

May Allah give us strength and ability to put these lessons into practice. Aameen.

اِنَّمَا يَعْمُرُ مَسٰجِدَ اللّٰهِ مَنْ اٰمَنَ بِاللّٰهِ وَالْيَوْمِ الْاٰخِرِ (التوبه ۱۸)

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and His forgiveness and we believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Allah from the evils of our selves and the vices of our deeds. There is no one to misguide whom Allah guides and there is no one to guide whom Allah lets go astray. I bear witness that there is no god but Allah Alone.

He only shall inhabit the places of Allah, worship who believes in Allah and the last day. (At-Tawba, 9:18)

FIRST WORDS

Honourable President, Respected Guestes. As-Salam alaykum wa rahmatAllahi wa baraktuh!.

It is a very auspicious moment for us that we are about to take part in the foundation of a mosque. It is very fortunate for a Muslim to be able to build a mosque or to take part in its construction. The verse of the Quran recited before you tells us that only those people inhabit mosques who believe in Allah and the last day. Thus, the building of mosques is the sign of a person's faith as also. The first demand on his faith.

THE PLACE OF THE MOSQUE

Every Muslim is aware of the position of a mosque in Islamic Society. The Holy Prophet ﷺ has termed as Salah (regular prayer) as a pillar of religion and he said "One who established prayer, in fact, establishes religion. And one who abandons prayers, breaks the founding pillar of religion.

The prayer that is truly approved in the sight of Allah is the one offered with the congregation in the mosque. As for the prayer that is offered at home, the jurist call it an incomplete offering, meaning that it is imperfect. The perfect offering of the prayer is to offer it with the congregation in the mosque.

MUSLIMS & THE MOSQUE

Mosque has been a distinguishing mark of the Muslims for, to whichever region they have gone, the first thing they did was build the house of Allah whether they had their own home or not. It is known of them that they discharged this obligation in very serious and dangerous conditions too when their lives were at stake, when they did not have enough wealth and faced extreme poverty.

AN EXAMPLE OF SOUTH AFRICA

It was about seven years ago that I visited South Africa. I went to Cape Twon and found that many malaysians lived there. Of the total number of Muslims there, Malaysians formed an eighty percent majority. I was anxious to know how they reached South Africa and was told of an interesting historical fact which, indeed, is worth learning from.

THE MALAYSIANS REACH CAPE TOWN

These people were of the stock of those Malaysians who had fought the British Colonisers unsuccessfully and had failed to drive them out of their country because of inadequate weapons of war. The Britishers took them as captives and put them in fetters and brought them to Cape Town as slaves. These white people talk of democracy to day but they had subjugated innumerable people and chained them at their feet. They disallowed them to offer prayers in accordance with their religion not even in their homes. They whipped anyone found offering prayers.

PRAYERS IN THE DARK OF THE NIGHT

These people were made to labour hard and oppressed cruely. When their masters prepared to sleep in the night, they unchained thes e Malaysians so that they could go to their barracks and sleep. But they would sneak out one by one to the nearby mountains and offer they day's prayers all together in congregational form.

LET US OFFER PRAYERS

Allah decreed that the Dutch attacked Cape Town to seize it. The Britishers had known that the Malaysians were very good fighters and worriors. They were very brave. So, they asked them to drive away the Dutch but the Malaysians said that it made them no difference whether the Britishers had authority of the Dutch, for they were slaves any way. However, they were willing to fight the Dutch on condition that they be permitted to offer prayers in Cape Town and allowed to build a mosque.

ONLY THE DEMAND TO BUILD A MOSQUE

We must heed this fact- these people did not demand monetary remuneration. They did not ask to be set free, and they did not put forth any material condition. Their only demand was that they be allowed to build a mosque. Accordingly, they fought the Dutch very bravely and compelled them to retreat. The Malaysians then reminded the Britishers of their demand and were allowed to build a mosque. These poor people built the first mosque in Cape Town in very trying conditions. They lacked proper tools and material and money. They even could not determine the qiblah[1] with the result that it is off the mark by 20 degree or 25 degree. Today, the prayer mats are spread at the proper angle which leaves disalligned with the walls.

These brave people did not ask for a house to live in and they did not demand money. They did not seize the opportunity to demand proper food and drink. Their demand was that they should be allowed to construct a mosque. This is the history of the Muslim people. They preferred a mosque over everything else and did not omit the duty of building it in their pitiable condition, too.

THE SAVOUR OF FAITH

In fact, it is such people who receive the savour of faith. We are the ones who have received the religion without effort. We are born to Muslim parents and had to make no sacrifice for Islam. We have spend no money and put in no effort. The result is that we do not realise the worth of Islam. Only those who have worked for it, made sacrifices and undergone trials, know the real worth of it.

WE MUST BE THANKFUL

I have narrated this event so that we may be thankful to Allah that we face no restriction on building mosques. We are able to build a mosque whenever and wherever we like. Hence, it is our great fortune that we build this mosque and everyone who takes part in it, in whatever way, is indeed worth congratulating.

1. The direction in which Muslims pray, facing the ka'bah at Makkah.

MOSQUE IS INHABITED BY THE WORSHIPPERS WHO PRAY

I must state here that a mosque is built not with its walls, the bricks and building material. The first mosque which the Prophetﷺbuilt in Islam at Madinah- the Masjid Nabawi- did not even have a solid roof or firm walls but it walls were made of leaves of date palm. In spite of that there is no mosque more meritorious than it besides the Masjid Al-Haram at Makkah. A mosque is not the area within the walls with towering minaret and the riche. Rather, it is the name of those who prostrate[1]

We may build a very large mosque, beautiful in all respects and its walls well adorned, but it is bereft of worshippers. That mosque is deserted. A mosque is inhabited with the worshippers who offer prayers.

MOSQUES WHEN THE HOUR WILL APPROACH

The Holy Prophetﷺdescribed the Last Day and the Day of Resurrection and he said a time will come:

مَسَاجِدُهُمْ عَامِرَةٌ وَهِيَ خَرَابٌ

It would look that the Mosques are occupied and they will be well built, very beautiful to look at, but deserted within.

There will be very few worshippers inside. Very few people will use them for the purpose for which they are built. Iqbal has said about it that mosques are built overnight by the believers but their hearts are sinful and they could not become worshippers in ages.

1. A mosque is a masjid, and prostration is sajdah both words are derived from the same root

مسجد تو بنادی شب بھر میں ایماں کی حرارت والوں نے
من اپنا پرانا پاپی ہے برسوں میں نمازی بن نہ سکا

CONCLUSION

Anyway, all those who are participating in building this mosque are very fortunate. May Allah make their task easy. Aameen.

We must remember, however, that our task does not end with the erection of the mosque. In fact, our duty begins after putting the edifice up. We have to inhabit it with worshippers who offer prayers, who recite the Qur'an in its. Precincts and remember Allah often.

The Mosque occupies a central position in Islamic society. It is here that life is fashioned, character built and manners shapped. Mosques are built for these purposes. It is, then, occupied in the literal sense and the figurative sense.

May Allah make this mosque a source of goodness and blessing for the people of the neighbourhood. May He cause these people to fulfil their obligations and may they inhabit this mosque and keep it occupied. Aameen.

فاعوذ بالله من الشيطن الرجيم بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم

عن عبدالله بن مسعود رضى الله عنه ان رسول الله ﷺ قال:

" طَلَبُ كسب الحَلالِ فريضةٌ بعد الفريضةِ "

(كنزالعمال جلد ٤، حديث نمبر ٩٦٣١)

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and His forgiveness and we believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Allah from the evils of our selves and the vices of our deeds. There is no one to misguide whom Allah guides and there is no one to guide whom Allah lets go astray. I bear witness that there is no god but Allah Alone. He has no partner. I also bear witness that our authority, our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad is His servant and His Messenger. May Allah have mercy on him, his household and on his Companions and bless them and send peace on them in great abundance.

TO SEEK LAWFUL LIVELIHOOD IS THE NEXT IMPRORTANT OBLIGATION

Sayyidina Abdullah bin Mas'ud رضی اللہ عنہ has said that the Messenger of Allah ﷺ said, "to seek lawful livelihood is next to the first rank obligations of religion."

The scholars of Hadith have termed this Hadith as weak in its line of transmission but the ulama have accepted it because of its implication, and they unanimously regard it as sound on that basis.

The Holy Prophet ﷺ has said that to work and toil and earn lawful livelihood is second only to the basic obligations, the pillars of Islam-Prayer ,Zakah, Fasting and Hajj, etc Trying to earn a lawful livelihood is and obligatory duty next to the basic obligations. This is a brief saying and a brief teaching but it is very comprehensive in meaning.

SEEKING LAWFUL LIVELIHOOD PART OF RELIGION

The first thing this Hadith teaches us is to seek a lawful livelihood is not alien to religion. We may try to earn a livelihood through business, agriculture, employment or labour. It is a part of religion and not merely commendable but also an obligatory duty second only to the basic obligations. Thus, if anyone avoids this duty and remains idle, not trying to earn a livelihood then he commits a sin because he neglects an obligation. Shari'ah calls upon us not to remain idle and lazy or depend on others for our livelihood. Man is asked not to beg from anyone besides Allah. The Prophet ﷺ has shown us a way to save ourselves from that by endeavouring, according to our capacities, to earn a lawful livelihood. Allah has not only placed on us certain duties concerning Himself and religion but he has also placed on us rights of our bodies and souls and of our families. These rights cannot be given to them without trying to gain a lawful livelihood.

ISLAM DISDAINS MONKERY

This Hadith cuts at the roots of a monastic way of life. The Christians claim that one must forsake worldly pursuits to gain nearness to Allah, not only pursuit of lawful livelihood but also natural inclinations. Christianity advocates seclusion in the wilderness to remember Allah. However, Allah tells us that he has created mankind and put in him human desires. He feels hungry and thirsty and needs garments to cover his body and a house to live in. Then, man is called upon to satisfy these needs and, at the same time, meet the rights of Allah. When he strikes a proper blance only then will he be a perfect human being. But, if he sits idle then, no matter how highly he is engrossed in remembering Allah, he can never attain nearness to him.

THE PROPHET'S ﷺ WAYS TO LAWFUL LIVELIHOOD

Allah required all the Prophets علیہم السلام to earn a lawful livelihood. Everyone of them worked to end. There were among them labourers, carpenters, and shepherds. The Holy Prophetﷺ also tended sheep against remuneration worked as a labourer and engaged in business. He travelled to Syria twice in connection with business on behalf of sayyidah khadijah رضی الله عنها. He cultivated land at gurf a place at a short distance from Madinah. We find him occupied in every way of earning a lawful livelihood, so that they are all sunnah. Thus, if in pursuing them we form an intention of following the sunnah then our endeavour will become part of religion whether it is labour, business or farming.

A BELIEVER'S WORLD IS ALSO RELIGION

This Hadith has removed a misconception that religion and worldly life are two different things. But the fact is that a believer's world is also his religion like earning a livelihood, is part of his religion, provided he acts correctly in conformity with the teachings of the Prophetﷺ. If we understand it correctly then we can keep ourselves away from being misguided in many ways.

SOME SUFIS LEAVE EVERYTHING TO GOD

It is reported about some of the sufis that they did not adopt means of livelihood and did not work for a living. They spent a life of tawakkal[1].

They thanked Allah for whatever he sent them and showed contentment on what they received. If he did not send them anything, they patiently persevered.

This depended on one of two situations. They could not have been in the world of normal senses but may have been in the world of the lost. When that is the case, the injunctions of shari'ah do not apply on such people. If the sufis were so lost then it was their individual condition and their way of life not apply on all the Ummah.

1. Reliance on Allah.

The second possibility is that their tawakkal was of very high degree and the were resigned to living without food for months on end. They never extended their hands before anyone else, and they nevere complained to anyone. These sufis were very strong people and had attained a very high station in life. They had thought it enough for them to spend their lives in zikr (Remembernece of Allah) and did not mind if they faced hunger for long periods of time. They had no obligations concerning rights of other people, for they had no wives or children. Hence, this attitude to life was peculiar to them and weak people like us should not imitate them. We must follow only what the Prophet ﷺ has prescribed for us . To seek livelihood is an obligation second to the basic duties of a Muslim.

WE MUST SEEK THE LAWFUL

To seek livelihood is an obligation if it is the lawful that we seek. It is not merely food, clothing and money that we should seek in any way whatever proper or improper through lawful means or unlawful means. If we do not pay attention to this condition then our effort loses its merit and does not form part of religion. There is then no difference in the effort for livelihood by a Muslim and a disbeliever. A believer examines every part of his earnings and ensures that he receives according to the pleasure of Allah. Anything against that, he leaves away.

ALL LABOUR IS NOT LAWFUL

Some people have adopted means of earning which are not lawful. Shariah disallows such efforts. For instance, some people live on interest earnings. If they are reminded of the evil, they are quick to indicate that they labour over it and invest their monies for that, and put time into it.

They must know that only that earning is lawful and that labour or effort is proper which are sanctioned by Allah. If man puts in strenuous efforts and labour in ways not shown by the Prophet ﷺ then his earnings are unlawful. Even a Call girl can say that she works hard but her earnings are clearly unlawful.

IS THE OCCUPATION LAWFUL?

Hence, when we have a means of earning before us, we must first examine whether it is lawful or unlawful. If shari'ah does not allow it then we must forsake it no matter how much wealth we see in it. We must take up only that occupation which has the approval of Allah no matter how little it holds for us.

WHAT SHOULD A BANK EMPLOYEE DO?

Many people are employed in banks whose business rests on interest. In other words, the employees of a bank abet in the crime of interest dealings. Their employment is illegal and unlawful. The ulama have ruled that if any of the bank employees are guided by Allah and they come to realize that they are pursuing an unlawful course then they must begin their search for a lawful means of employment. They must look out for that with such a strong effort and zeal as they would if they had been unemployed. When they find out a lawful occupation they must immediately quit the bank employment even if they will get a smaller income at the other place.

BLESSINGS OF LAWFUL EARNINGS

Allah has blessed lawful livelihood but not the unlawful, a little of the lawful provides more benefit than much of the unlawful. The Prophet ﷺ made this supplication after performing ablution:

اَللّٰهُمَّ اغْفِرْلِیْ ذَنْبِیْ وَ وَسِّعْ لِیْ فِیْ دَارِیْ وَبَارِكْ لِیْ فِیْ رِزْقِیْ (ترمذی، کتاب الدعوات، باب دعاء یقال فی اللیل، حدیث نمبر ۳۴۹۶)

"O Allah! Forgive me my sins, and make my house spacious for me and bless me in my livelihood."

These day's people do not appreciate the worth of blessings. They merely count money and think in monetary terms. They do not evaluate the normal returns of their wealth in terms of comfort and peace. Blessings cannot be bought and many rich people lack that but it is only they on whom Allah farows it who enjoy it. Blessings are found in lawful livelihood not in the unlawful. Therefore, we must pay attention to our earnings and ensure that we feed our family members only the lawful, shari'ah sanctioned.

PART OF THE SALARY THAT IS UNLAWFUL

There are some sources of income which we all know are unlawful, like interest, bribery, etc. But some other source we do not know as unlawful. For instance, hours of work are fixed and the employment is also proper and lawful. But the employees are slack in observance of these hours of work. The salary for the number of hours they absent themselves on purpose is their unlawful earning; similarly the hours they waste at work are also unlawful. But, most of us do not realise that.

VOLUNTARY PAY CUT OF TEACHERS OF MADRASAH

At the Madrasa at Thana Bhawan attached to the khanqah[1] of Mawlana Ashraf Ali Thanavi, every teacher and employee had a register with him. The procedure is explained here. The teacher for instance, had to teach six hours a day. If during this time they received a guest, they wrote down in the register the time when he departed. They, maintained the register in this manner. At the end of the month, they informed the accountant the ember of hours during which they had entertained their guests. They voluntarily asked him to deduct the salary for those hours from their total salary of the month. Further, they did not merely calculate the hours spent with the guests, they also took into account the time they used to attend to their personal affairs.

Their thinking was that they had sold those hours to the institution and the salary against the hours not delivered become unlawful for them. Today, we do not think in these terms and we only consider interest and bribery as unlawful. Our minds do not see that our earnings are unlawful in various respects.

CHEATING THE TRAIN

We are also used to cheating the railways. We purchase the ticket for a lower class but travel in a higher class and save the difference in fare. The saving is unlawful and mingles with our lawful wealth.

EXCESS BAGGAGE

Those who were associated with Mawlana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه were known to get their luggage weighed before they travelled by train. They duly paid the fare against excess baggage if that was more than the allowed weight.

1. Retreat, recluse.

MAWLANA THANAVI'S JOURNEY

Once the Mawlana was about to travel by train. He went straight to the counter where luggage was weighed. The guard was there by a coincidence and he knew the Mawlana. He said to the mawlana:

"Why do you trouble yourself to get the luggage weighed?. Board the train straightaway for I am the guard on the train and no one will ask you during the journey, or demand penalty for concealing excess baggage."

Mawlana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه asked him:

How far he would accompany him and he named the place. " what, after that?"

He said:

"I will instruct the next guard to let you travel with the excess baggage,"

The Mawlana asked:

"How far will that guard see me through?"

"He will accompany you to the end of the journey."

But, Mawlana Thanavi said to him:

"I have to go further down."

He asked the Mawlana:

"How far?"

"I have to go beyond that to Allah, the High, which guard will accompany me there and help me get through the reckoning ?"

After that the Mawlana advised the guard that the train was not his property and that he had no authority to allow anyone carry extra baggage without paying the fare, "I may get through the authorities in this world because of your abatement but the little unlawful money I save thereby will become part of my wealth. I will be questioned by Allah about the unlawful savings and I do not know of any guard who will save me there."

The guard realised his mistake and the Mawlana paid for the excess baggage and boarded the train.

THE UNLAWFUL MINGLES WITH THE LAWFUL

Therefore, if anyone who travels by any means and does not pay against the excess baggage he carries then his savings thereby are not lawful. It becomes part of the lawful livelihood he had earned and corrupts it.

LACK OF BLESSINGS

Everyone of us is in anxiety today. The rich and the super-rich all are uncomfortable and worried. Their expenses are mounting high and their problems are multiplying. The reason is that we do not distinguish between lawful and unlawful. We only know of a few prominent things as unlawful and do try to keep ourselves away from them, but we pay no attention to the various ways in which we earn unlawful money.

CHEATING ON TELEPHONE AND ELECTRICITY

Some of us combine with the realted people in the telephone department and misuse our telephone to make unpaid calls, local or overseas. This is a way to deprive the department of its due and our savings in this manner are unlawful.

Similarly, the electric meter is tampered with and savings are made on electric consumption. Here again the unlawful adulterates our lawful earnings, and we have shut our eyes to that.

There are many other such ways in which we cheat. The result is that we have deprived ourselves of blessings.

WE MUST THINK ABOUT IT

It view of this situation, it is imperative upon us that before doing anything we must ask ourselves if what we hope to do is correct or not. If anyone spends his life in this manner, sifting the wrong from the right and refraining from earning the unlawful then must rest assured that though he may lag behind in supererogatory worship and remembrance of Allah yet he will go straight to Paradise, if Allah wills that. On the contrary, if he does not refrain from the unlawful and fails to distinguish between the lawful and the unlawful then though he may get up in the middle of the night to pray and offer all kinds of optional prayers yet these exercises will not protect him from chastisement against unlawful earnings. May Allah guide all Muslims. Aameen.

MEN ARE MOULDED HERE

Mawlana Ashraf Ali Thanavi رحمة الله عليه used to say that people visit the recluse (Khanqah) to practice zikr (Rembrance of Allah). If that is in their minds, there are many such khanqah around for them to go. But, at my place, we mould man, we teach him to act according to shariah. Thus, if any bearded man stood at the ticket counter to buy a railway ticket, the ticket seller would know him and ask him if he wanted a ticket of Thana Bhawan.

Mawlana Thanvi رحمة الله عليه was known to say that it did not upset him very much if anyone associated with him missed the rota of worship but he abhorred one who did not separate the unlawful from the lawful and cared not in his dealings to distinguish between the two.

A LESSON- GIVING CASE OF ONE OF HIS DEPUTIES

Mulana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه had appointed someone as his khalifah to look after his affairs with the disciples. Once, he journeyed upto the Mawlana and had his child with him. During the converstation the mawlana asked him if he had come to him by train and he confirmed that. The Mawlana asked him:

> If he had paid the full fare for the child or half?.
> He did not ask him if he was regular in performing the rota of worship but he asked him about the child's fare.
> He said:
> What he had paid half fare for the child."How old is he?"
> "Mawlana! He is truly thirteen years old but looks like a twelve year child. So, I paid a half fare."

This response pained the Mawlana very much and he removed him as his khalifah, saying:

> "I had made a mistake. You are not worthy of that responsibility.You do not know the difference between the lawful and the unlawful. If the child was over twelve years even by a day, you should have paid full fare."

If anyone came to him and said that he had lagged behind in observing the routine schedule of woroship the Mawlana would advise him to seek forgiveness of Alalh and recommence the exercise and resolve not to be lax ever again. He never relieved anyone as khalifah for lagging behind in the schedule of worship. But, he relieved that man from the responsibilities of khalifah because he could not distinguish between the lawful and the unlawful and thus was not moulded into a man. This is in line with the Prophet's ﷺ saying that seeking lawful livelihood is an obligation second only to the basic obligations .

THE UNLAWFUL DEVOURS THE LAWFUL

Each one of us must take an account of his earnings and the work he does. He must make sure that there are no gaps through which he gets unlawful earnings. I have presented some examples of unlawful incone but there are many ways in which one receives unlawful money, knowingly or unknowingly. Our elders have told us that when the unlawful becomes part of the lawful then it destroys it. The blessings are lost and the man, whose wealth it is, loses peace and comfort thus, it becomes necessary that we examine our deeds and incomes, and preserve ourselves from unlawful earnings.

AIM OF LIFE IS NOT TO SEEK LIVELIHOOD

This Hadith also tells us that while it is not irreligious to seek lawful livelihood, it is not a top priority to seek lawful livelihood. It has become the objective of everyone, today, to strive after social well-being and uplift. All of us have one thing on mind: how to multiply our wealth? We aim to achieve progress monetarily, the Holy Prophet ﷺ has said to us that to seek lawful livelihood is an obligation, no doubt, but it is next to the other obligations. It is not the main purpose of human life but it is a necessity. It is because of the necessity that man is not only allowed to search for a livelihood but also encouraged to do nevertheless, the purpose of life is something else. It is to establish a relationship with Allah and to worship him .

OBLLIGATIONS MUST NOT BE OVERLOOKED

Hence, when one is faced with a choice between livelihood and obligations to Allah, he must prefer the obligations imposed on him by Allah. Some people go to the extremes. They have learnt that it is an obligation to seek a livelihood so they go to extremes in showing it as an obligation and overlook prayers, fasting, etc. if they are reminded of their duty, they argue that what they were engaged in a religious duty and their religion has allowed them to do that.

A DOCTOR'S ARGUMENT

A lady once told me that her husband was a doctor who did not offer prayers at their proper times when he was in his clinic. He redeemed the three times prayers when he returned home at night. The lady said that she did advise him to offer the prayers at the right time but he pleads that Islam has taught us to serve humanity and he was engaged in that. He argued that there was nothing wrong in giving up prayer to serve humanity.

This man abandoned the first rank obligation to pursue a secondary obligation, seeking a livelihood. If there has to be a selection between the two then the first religious obligation must be perferred.

THE CASE OF A BLACKSMITH

My respected father Mawlana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه related about Sayyidina Abdullah bin Mubarak that he was a high ranking man of Allah, a great scholar of Hadith and a sufi. When he died, someone saw him in a dream and asked him how he fared with Allah. He said that he was rewarded very well but he found that a blacksmith who lived in a house opposite his own had overtaken him in the honour and favour he received.

When this man awoke, he traced the house of the blacksmith who had also died, and he asked his wife about him. She could only say that he was engaged in his trade all day. However, this man told her about the dream and asked her to tell him what deed of his could have brought him that honour which shadowed a man like Abdullah bin Mubarak رحمة الله عليه.

REGRET AT NOT BEING ABLE TO OFFER THE TAHAJJUD

The wife of the blacksmith told the man that her husband used to see Abdullah bin Mubarak رحمة الله عليه offer the tahajjud prayers long in the night on the roof of his house and regret that he did not have as much free time with him to offer the late night optional prayers. He repented that after his day-long work he got tired and felt sleepy so could not offer the tahajjud prayers.

STOPED WORK AT PRAYER-TIME

Another peculiarity with him was that whenever, during his work, he heard the azan, he ceased work. If the hammer was raised aloft and the first words of azan sounded, he did not bring it down to strike the iron but cast it aside, he said that it was not proper to keep working when the calll for prayer was heard. He turned towards the Mosque at that. The man who had seen the dream remarked, " No wonedr Abdullah bin Mubarak envies him."

IF ONE OF THE TWO IS TO BE SELECTED, GIVE UP THE SEARCH

The blacksmith was engaged in search of a lawful livelihood but when he heard the Azan, he stopped his effort and preferred the first ranking obligation. As a result, Allah elevated him to a lofty rank. We must follow suit and in every case of deciding on one of the two, we must prefer the basic obligation and forsake the secondary one of seeking lawful livelihood.

A COMPREHENSIVE SUPPLICATION

The Prophet ﷺ has taught us a supplication for such situations:

اللهم لا تجعل الدنيا اكبر همنا ولا مبلغ علمنا ولا غاية رغبتنا (ترمذی، كتاب الدعوات، حديث نمبر ٣٥٦٩)

"O Allah let not the world be the greatest of our sorrows- lest we keep worrying about receiving its riches and splendours, and, let it not be the zenith of our knowledge lest our knowledge be limited about it. And, let not the extremes of our desires be about it lest we cherish only its things and crave not the Hereafter."

We must, therefore, remember that to seek lawful livelihood is a secondary obligation, but not the purpose of our lives.

SUMMARY

This Hadith teaches us three lessons:

1: To seek the lawful is also a part of religion.

This hadit teaches us three lessons.

2: Man must seek the lawful and take care to avoid the unlawful.

3: He must not make it the objective of his life .

May Allah through his Mercy and favour help us to understand this fact. And, may He cause us to live accordingly. Aameen

(صحيح بخارى، كتاب الاعتكاف، باب " هل يخرج المعتكف لحوائجه الى باب المسجد")

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and His forgiveness and we believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Allah from the evils of our selves and the vices of our deeds. There is no one to misguide whom Allah guides and there is no one to guide whom Allah lets go astray. I bear witness that there is no god but Allah Alone. He has no partner. I also bear witness that our authority, our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad is His servant and His Messenger. May Allah have mercy on him, his household and on his Companions and bless them and send peace on them in great abundance.

LIST OF HADITH

This is a lengthy hadith in which the Prophet ﷺ has narrated an incident. The Prophet ﷺ used to observe I'tikaf every Ramadan. Once when he was observing I'tikaf, the mother of the believers, Sayyidah Safiyah رضی الله عنها, came to meet him in the Mosque. Because, he could not leave the mosque, she came to visit him and stayed with him for some time. When she was going. The Prophet ﷺ walked with her upto the door of the Mosque to see her off.

A WIFE VISITING HER HUSBAND IN THE MOSQUE

Let us observe the sunnah of the Holy Prophet ﷺ. The first thing we know from his life is that it is proper for a wife to visit her husband in the Mosque while she is duly covered.

THE WIFE MUST BE RESPECTED

The second thing we learn is that the Prophet ﷺ did not see her off at the place he was confined in I'tik`af[1]. He came up to the door of the Mosque, and he gave her due honour. In this way, he taught us to behave with the wife on equal terms. It is her right that we show her honour;

1. Seclusion or confinement in the Mosque as a devotional exercise.

and to see her off is also to give her that right.

DOUBTS OF OTHER PEOPLE MUST BE REMOVED

While he was going to see her off, he noticed that two of his companions were coming towards him. In order that his wife may not be seen without a veil, he requested the companions to wait a while for her to go away. Thus, sayyidah Safiyah رضی الله عنها went away to her home. Then, he invited the two men to come to him and he revealed to them that she was his wife, Sayyidah Safiyah رضی الله عنها.

According to another version, the Prophet ﷺ also said to them, "I have identified her to you lest the devil make mischief and put a wrong idea in your hearts. The companions had seen the Prophet ﷺ with a woman in the Masjid Nabavi and they could have had a wrong idea of the identity of the woman and the reason for her visiting him. That is why he made it clear to them that she was his wife, Safiyah. This incident is reported in Bukhari and Muslim and other books of hadith

PROTECT YOURSELF FOR BEING SLANDERED

The Ulama, in explaining this hadith tell us that no companion could ever imagine a wrong idea about the Prophet ﷺ. They could never have thought ill of him that he would stay alone with a stranger woman specially in the month of Ramadan, its last ten days in the Masjid Nabavi and, further, while he was observing the I'tikaf. it is difficult to imagine such an evil thought about an ordinary Muslim, let alone the messenger of Allah ﷺ

However, the Holy Prophet ﷺ used this incident to teach his Ummah that they should protect themselves fro being slandered. They must not let anyone entertain a wrong idea about themselves. The hadith ascribes one phrase to the Prophet ﷺ.

اِتَّقُوْا مَوَاضِعَ التُّهَمِ

"Keep away from the possibility of being slandered."

Although, the attribution of this phrase to the Prophet ﷺ is not supported by a true line of transmission, it refers to the incident narrated above. Hence, just as a person is expected to protect himself from sin and proper behaviour, so also he is required to Prophet himself from being accused of sin or improper behaviour. He should not do anything which might prompt other people into supposing that he is committing a sin.

TWO ADVANTAGES OF THIS BEHAVIOUR

There are two advantages of saving oneself from being slandered.

The first is one may not unnecessarily subject oneself to being accused. Just as other people have a right over us, our own selves too have a right. Our own right is that we must not unnecessarily let other people imagine wrong things about us.

The second advantage is the onlooker. If anyone entertains a wrong idea about some one without ascertaining it then he will be guilty of sin. The clarification saves him from that.

PRESERVE YOUSELF FROM OPPORTUNITIES OF SIN

It is wrong to allow ourselves opportunities of sin even if we do not commit it because an onlooker might get a wrong impression. For instance, we must not use the passage of a cinema hall as a short cut; we may not have seen the posters hung there but other people might doubt the purpose of our going there. This thing could have been avoided and possibility of doubt averted. If such a thing happens, we must immediately make a clarification just as the Holy Prophet ﷺ had done.

THE SUNNAH OF THE PROPHET ﷺ

It is a very delicate question. On the one hand, it is not advisable that we show ourselves as pious and God-fearing. On the other, it is also not advisable to let any one think of us as sinners. However, it is a Sunnah of the Prophet ﷺ that we save ourselves from being slandered.

THE STYLE OF THE BLAMEWORTHY

There has been a sect that called itself 'blame worthy' and came to be known as Malamati firqah (blameworthy sect'). Members presented themselves to other people as sinners, transgressors and immoral, for instance, they never attended mosques to offer prayers and never worshipped in the presence of other people or engaged in devotional exercises. They kept themselves in the garb of immoral people. Their contention was that they shunned ostentatious behaviour in this manner. If they grew beard or went to the mosque for prayers the people would think of them as very religious and they would honour and respect them. In that way they feared that they would become arrogant. Their behaviour and attitude was not in accordance with sunnah.

COMMITING A SIN TO AVOID ONE

It is possible that someone may have originally behaved in this manner. Obviously, he may have been excused by Allah but his behaviour ought not to have been imitated because it is not correct in the eyes of shari'ah. Can anyone commit a sin to preserve himself from the sin of arrogance and and ostentation. Arrogance and ostentative behaviour are sinful and to avoid this he commits the sin of not going to the mosque. If Allah has declared anything unlawful then it is unlawful. Besides, the plea that if anyone goes to the mosque to offer prayers many people will consider his behaviour a showing off is untenable.

PRAYER MUST BE OFFERED IN THE MOSQUE

It is the devil who misguides men. It is the Command of Allah that prayers must be offered in the mosque, so we must go there. It cannot be ostentatious to do that. It is only the devil who prompts such thoughts in our minds. If we get any idea of boasting then we must seek the forgiveness of Allah:

اَسْتَغْفِرُ اللّٰهَ رَبِّیْ مِنْ کُلِّ ذَنْبٍ وَاَتُوْبُ اِلَیْهِ

It is the command of shariah that the fard (absolute obligations) must be performed publicly but we are allowed to offer voluntary prayers at home. But, men must offer their prayers in the mosque. The behaviour of the blameworthy sect' is against the Quran and sunnah. The correct method is the one shown by the Prophet ﷺ preserve yourselves from being scandalized.

PRESENT YOUR EXCUSE

Suppose someone cannot join the congregational prayers because of a valid shariah approved exemption. And a visitor to his house sees him at home. Now, it is no sin on him if he lets the visitor know why he did not go to the mosque for otherwise the visitor might suppose that he never goes to the mosque. Actually, this is an example of protecting oneself from slander for the visitor might accuse him of willfully not joining the congregation. By presenting the excuse, he made it clear to the guest why he did not join the congregation. This explanation is not a show of ostentation.

MAWLANA THANAVI'S EXPLANATION OF THE HADITH

He explains that the hadith guides us to keep away from such doubtful things as might create an impression of some disagreeable things. Say, it might appear that someone has committed a sin like remaining with a stranger woman while he was with his own wife. At such times he must exercise cautoin and adopt a defensive attitude. As for those things that are not doubtful, we should not worry about being blamed and this attitude is praised.

One must clear himself of the doubtful which appear to others as sinful but one should keep himself aloof when those things are correct by themselves, it is not proper that he delay them for fear of being censured.

IT IS NOT NECESSARY TO EXPLAIN A PIOUS DEED

Suppose, some one does something that is sunnah but, at the same time disliked by people, like growing a beard. Now, it is not necessary for him to reason out his behaviour to forestall being censured. If he has grown the beard to please Allah and follow a sunnah of the Prophet ﷺ then he should not fear the attitude of people. Even if anyone criticises or blames him who follows a sunnah then he should feel blessed. This is what the Prophets عليهم السلام faced and endured. So he should not worry about it.

SUMMARY

In short, it is not only allowed but is also appreciated if any one indicates himself of an accusation of doubt that he has sinned. Besides, it is also a duty of Muslim to save another from bearing doubt and suspicion.

May Allah help us to act on the sayings of the Prophet ﷺ.

عن ابن عمر رضى الله عنه قال قال رسول الله ﷺ :

"اذا اتاكم كريم قوم فاكرموه"

(ابن ماجه، كتاب الادب، باب اذا اتاكم كريم فاكرموه، حديث نمبر ٣٧١٢)

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and His forgiveness and we believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Allah from the evils of our selves and the vices of our deeds. There is no one to misguide whom Allah guides and there is no one to guide whom Allah lets go astray. I bear witness that there is no god but Allah Alone.

He has no partner. I also bear witness that our authority, our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad is His servant and His Messenger. May Allah have mercy on him, his household and on his Companions and bless them and send peace on them in great abundance.

"When a respectable man of a people comes to you, you should honour him". That is, if the chief of a people or one well placed with them, comes to you, you must respect him.

ONE WAY TO SHOW RESPECT

Of course, shari'ah has asked us honour every Muslim. When a Muslim brother comes to you, you must honour and respect him. A hadith tells us that if we are sitting somewhere and a Muslim comes to meet us, the least we should do is move a little bit for him. We must not sit motionless like a statue, for that is not a way to honour him. The visitor must feel that he is respected and honoured.

TO STAND UP

One method of showing honour to someone is to stand up for him. The instructions of shari'ah in this regard are that if the visitor expects other people to stand up for him then we must not stand up because his desire indicates that he is arrogant and thinks that he is arrogant and thinks little of other people. However, if the visitor does not expect anyone to stand up for him then there is no harm to stand up to honour such a man for his knowledge, piety or the high office he holds. It is neither a sin to stand up nor necessary to do so.

HADITH CONFIRMS THE STANDING UP

The Prophet ﷺ instructed his companions رضی الله عنهم on some occasions that they should stand up. Accordingly, when sa'd bin Muaz رضی الله عنه arrrived to judge the case of the Banu Qurayzah, the Prophet ﷺ commanded them:

قوموا لسيدكم

"stand up for your chief."

Thus, it is proper to stand up on such occasions, but if anyone does not stand up then there is no harm. Nevertheless, we are definitely urged in a hadith that we should at least move at our places and not remain rooted like a statue when someone comes to us, and we must display pleasure on his coming so that he may feel that he is honoured.

TO HONOUR A MUSLIM IS TO HONOUR HIS FAITH

In fact, the honour and respect given to a Muslim is directed to the faith he holds in his heart. It is the demand and right of the Kalimah tayyibah[1]:

لَا إِلٰهَ إِلَّا اللّٰهُ مُحَمَّدٌ رَّسُوْلُ اللّٰهِ

He believes, that we honour him. It may be that the man appears weak in faith and his deeds and appearance may not conform fully to religion, but we do not know the status of the faith Allah has placed in his heart, or how far he has received Allah's approval. Hence, we must honour the visiting Muslim.

1. There is no God but Allah and Muhammad is His Messanger.

A LESSON-BEARING CASE OF A YOUNG MAN

A young man came to me once in my office. He had no sign of Islamic spirit on him. From head to foot he had a western appearance and his dress was western too. One could not say on looking at him that he had religious feelings within him. He said to me that he had come to ask a question. This young man was an Actuary- one who calculates risks involved and premium chargeable. In those days there was no opportunity in Pakistan to study in this field. He had qualified in England and when he returned there were only two or three people in Pakistan who were qualified as Actuaries. Naturally, they were in great demand by the Insurance companies who paid them handsome salaries and offered them lucrative benefits and facilities , further, such a person cannot be accomodated at any other place.

However, after he was qualified and had received an employment, someone told him that the insurance business was unlawful. He said," I have come to you to confirm if it really is unlawful,"

WHAT SHOULD AN EMPLOYEE DO?

I told him that all forms of insurance available then in pakistan were unlawful. They were based on interest or gambling. Therefore, it is not allowed to be employed in an insurance company, however, our elders have suggested that an employee of a bank or an insurance company should look out for another employment and he must seek it with all earnest as if he was unemployed. As soon as he gets the other employment, he must give up the service in a bank or an insurance company. The reason they do not ask to quit the job forthwith is that living conditions of a person may not warrant cessation of income , and if anyone becomes unemployed then the devil may prompt him against religion and suggest to him that his problems were caused by it.

I HAVE NOT COME TO SEEK ADVICE

The young man told me firmly that he had not come to seek advice on whether he should give up his employment or not but he had come only to ask whether it was lawful or unlawful to work there. I reminded him that I had explained to him the question of its legality in Islam and I had also told him what our elders suggested on the subject of employment. The young man said to me, "do not give me an advice on whether I should keep my job or not but let me know in clear terms if the employment is lawful or not." I said to him, "It is unlawful." He asked," tell me whether Allah has decreed it unlawful or is it you who declares so? "I confirmed to him that Allah had disallowed it . he said, " Allah who has declared it haram (unlawful) will not leave me without livelihood. Hence, I will not return to that office anymore. Allah will not close the doors of livelihood on me. I give up the employment now!"

DO NOT GO BY APPEARANCES

It is very clear from this that we must not go by appearances. It did not look by see-ing him that this young man had a very strong faith concealed in his heart. He had great faith in Allah and Allah did bestow on him avenues of lawful livelihood. He is living in the United States these days. His words are engraved on my heart till now!

Hence, we must not let appearances deceive us. We cannot say what light of faith Allah may have kindled in his heart and what kind of trust he may have placed in him for him. Therefore, we must not condemn anyone. One who is a believing man blessed with the wealth of the kalimah shahad`ah :[1]

اشهد ان لا اله الا الله محمد رسول الله is worth respect. Every believer must be honoured. Shaykh sa`di رحمة الله عليه had sad :

هر بیشه گماں مبر که خالی است
شاید که پلنگ خفته باشد

Do not suppose that every forest will be empty who knows how many lions and tigers may be sleeping in it. Our duty is to honour one who is blessed by Allah with faith.

HONOURING A RESPECTABLE DISBELIEVER

We are, of course, commanded to honour all Muslims. But, the above hadith asks us to honour even a disbelieving chief of his people. Islamic manners demand of us that we honour him. His disbelief is what we hate but because his people hold him in esteem we must also show courtesy. We must not treat him roughly lest he despise us and our religion.

BEHAVIOUR WITH THE DISBELIFVERS

The Prophet ﷺ has shown us how we may behave with the disbelievers. Many chieftains of the infidels visited him but they never got the impression that they were maltreated. Rather, the Prophet ﷺ received them well and was polite and courteous with them, and this is his sunnah.

1. I bear witness that there is no God but Allah and I bear witness that Muhammad is His Messanger.

THE CASE OF ADISBELIEVER

Once, the Prophet ﷺ was seated in his house and sayyidah Ayshah رضى الله عنها was with him. He observed a man comming towards him and he said to the mother of the faithful that the man was am evil person of his tribe. When he came, the Prophet ﷺ got up and received him and conversed with him courteously. When he departed, sayyidah ayshah رضى الله عنها said," Messenger of Allah, why is it that you gave this man great honour and talked to him very mildly." The Prophet ﷺ said that the man was every evil and he was honoured to keep safe from his mischief.

BACKBITING IS ALLOWED

This hadith gives rise to two questions. Before that man could come, the Prophet ﷺ criticised him before sayyidah Ayshah رضى الله عنها saying that he was an evil man. On the face of it, looks like backiting. But, really it is not so, for, one can reveal a man's evil nature so that others may be cautious of him it is allowed to let a man know that he must beware of someone's mischief lest he harms him. Warning anyone in this way is not backbiting. Rather, in some cases it is obligatory to inform the victim who is being cheated and may suffer bodily harm or monetary loss at the hands of the evildoer.

Hence, the Prophet ﷺ warned sayyidah Ayshah رضى الله عنها that she may be careful and other Muslims may also be cautious.

WHY HONOUR THE EVIL MAN

The next question that arises is why, after describing him evil, did he honour him? Why did he show him courtesy? It shows that that the Prophet ﷺ behaved with him in one manner in his presence but spoke of him when he was not there in a different way. The truth is that the Prophetﷺ set the limit of everything so, he did reveal that the man was evil in order to caution others but when he came as a guest he gave him the rights of guest. This explains his behaviour.

THAT MAN IS VERY EVIL

The hadith also explains the wisdom behind the Prophet's ﷺ behaviour that the evil man could cause hardship if he was ill treated. So, there is no harm in honouring an evil man if we happen to meet him. It is a man's duty to protect himself and his property and honour from him. He is not honoured because he is honourable but because he could cause trouble or harm. However, honour must be shown to him within certain limits being careful not to perpetrate a sin.

There is a lesson for us to derive from every act of the life of the Prophet ﷺ. He defined backbiting and he told us that there is no harm in showing honour to anyone. Rather, we are commanded to honour our guest no matter how evil, immoral or disbelieving he be. This is not hypocrisy.

AN INCIDENT WITH SIR SYED

I have heard this story of Sir Syed from my father. He is now dead and his case rests with Allah. The truth, however, is that he corrupted the Islamic beliefs to a dangerous extent. However, he had initially enjoyed the company of the elders and he was also a proper scholar so his manners were good. He was once sitting with his intimate friends in his house when he saw a man coming towards him from a distance. That man was attired in regular Indiam dress. When he came closer, he stood by a pond and he carried a basket in his hand. He took out an Arab gown from the bag and he also took out the ring that the Arabs wear on the head. He wore both the things and approached them. Sir syed, meanwhile, was watching his movements. He told one of his friends that the man who was coming was a fraud, because until then he had the Indian dress on, but as he neared he put on the Arab gown.

"He will come here and pretend to be an Arab and beg for money".

Shortly, he knocked at the door and Sir Syed invited him inside politely. He asked him from where had he come. He said," I am a disciple of Shah Ghulam Ali رحمة الله عليه." He was a great Sufi. Then, he requested Sir Syed to help him in his needs. Accordingly, Sir Syed gave him a good reception and gave him more money than he needed.

WHY DID HE DO IT?

When he had departed, the friends of Sir Syed said to him, "you are a funny man. You knew that this man was a fraud but you gave him a good reception and helped him monetarily. Why?"

Sir Syed said, "I was cordial to him because he came as a guest. As for monetary help, I did not give it to him because he was a cheat but because he took the name of a very great saint and I could not dare refuse help after that. Shah Ghulam Ali رحمة الله عليه was one of those high ranking men of Allah that anyone having a distant connection and link with him is also worthy of honour. Perhaps Allah will forgive me because of my honouring his connection, that is what made me give him money!"

HONOURING RELIGIOUS LINKS

I had heard this story from my father who had heard it from his Shaykh, Mawlana Ashraf Ali thanavi رحمة الله عليه.

Mawlana Thanavi remarked, "Sir Syed honoured his guest and he also honoured the relationship in religion. For ,we cannot doubt that Allah would bestow plentifully on him who honours anyone who claims even the slightest link with a man of Allah a Wali. May Allah grow in us such habit. Aameen. This was in explanation of the Prophet's ﷺ words that we must honour a leading man of people when he comes.

HONOURING THE GREAT IN A COMMON GATHERING

It is a procedure in public gatherings or mosques that when a person sits down anywhere he is more entitled to that place and no one can ask him to give up that place. For instance, if a person sits in the frist row of mosque, he cannot be made to surrender his place to anyone else. However, if a respectable person of those people comes to that place then it is permited to offer him the front place in the light of this hadith. This has been the practice of our elders that when all people are seated in their places and a respectable guest arrives, he is made to sit next to them even if it means that someone has to be moved aside. There is no harm in that.

THE HADITH IS FOLLOWED

Some people seem to suppose that our elders act contrary to the procedure that every person sits where there is a space to sit. The first comer should sit in the front rows and the late comers in the last rows." Then why do the elders violate the rights of other people and invite the late-comers to the frist row?" the fact is that these elders follow the hadith:

اذا اتاكم كريم قوم فاكرموه

"when a noble man of a people comes to you, honour him".

In fact, Mawlana Masihullah Khan رحمة الله عليه (may Allah exalt his ranks, Aameen) paid great attention to this etiquette. He went so far as to encourage the occupants of the first rows to provide space to a respectable man when they did not give him space voluntarily. He would say, "brothers, what is this behaviour? you must give up your place to a respectable man when he comes and you must not think of that as unjust. Rather, it is in accordance with the hadith.

THERE IS REWARD IN HONOURING OTHER PEOPLE

The comments of Mawlana Thanavi رحمة الله عليه on this hadith are worth remembering. He said, "Whether a disbeliever or an immoral person visits you, and you honour him keeping this hadith in mind then, Insha Allah, that will fetch you reward and blessings, because, that is the command of the Prophet ﷺ However, if you honour him that he might help you later that is you hope to get a worldly objective served through him then it is not proper to honour him.

. Therefore, our intentions must be genuine when showing respect to anyone. Our intention must be to obey the command of the Holy Prophet ﷺ.

May Allah through His mercy cause us to act on these instructions. Aameen

و قال رسول الله ﷺ:

خَيْرُكُمْ مَنْ تَعَلَّمَ الْقُرْآنَ وَ عَلَّمَهٗ

(بخاری، فضائل القرآن، باب خیرکم من تعلم القرآن وعلمه)

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and His forgiveness and we believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Allah from the evils of our selves and the vices of our deeds. There is no one to misguide whom Allah guides and there is no one to guide whom Allah lets go astray. I bear witness that there is no god but Allah Alone. He has no partner. I also bear witness that our authority, our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad is His servant and His Messenger. May Allah have mercy on him, his household and on his Companions and bless them and send peace on them in great abundance.

INTRODUCTORY WORDS:

Respected elders! We are honoured today to be here on the founding of a madrasah. Qur'an will be taught here, and we are present here on the laying of its first brick. Insha Allah, it will prove to be a source of reward for all of us here, may Allah shower on us its lights and blessings, Aameen.

EXPLANATION OF THE VERSE

In keeping with the opportunity, I have recited a relevant verse of the Quran and a hadith. I will present a brief explanation in the limited time with us. The Qur'an has said:

اَلَّذِيْنَ اٰتَيْنٰهُمُ الْكِتٰبَ يَتْلُوْنَهٗ حَقَّ تِلَاوَتِهٖ اُولٰٓئِكَ يُؤْمِنُوْنَ بِهٖ

Those to whom we have given the book (and who) recite it as it should be recited, those believe therein (al baqarah ..2..12)

It is not enough to merely speak out that we believe in the book but we must give its right due by reciting it. Allah tells us that anyone may say with his tongue that he believes in his book but he is not true in saying that unless he recites it.

THREE RIGHTS OF THE QUR'AN

There are certains rights of the Qur'an on us, and they are three in number.

(i) To recite it correctly in the manner it was revealed and as the Prophet ﷺ recited it.

(ii) To try to understand it and to comprehend its truths and knowledge.

(iii) To act on its teachings and guidance.

If anyone gives it the three rights then he will be said to have given it all its rights. However, if he fails to give any one of these rights then he will not have given the rights of recital of the Quran.

RECITAL ITSELF IS THE OBJECTIVE

The first right is to recite it in a correct manner. Certain people suggest these days that there is no point in reciting the Quran like parrots. They say that we must understand its meaning otherwise there is no use in reciting it. (may Allah protect us from such ideas) This is a deception of the devil which is being introduced among the muslims. The Prophet ﷺ was sent for different purposes and the Quran mentions it frequently but two things it mentions distinctly:

يَتْلُوْا عَلَيْهِمْ اٰيَاتِهٖ shall recite to them his verses

وَيُعَلِّمُهُمُ الْكِتٰبَ وَالْحِكْمَةَ

And shall teach them the book and the wisdom.

Thus, to recite the Qur'an is a distinct purpose, a pious deed and reward receiving. It is the same thing weather we understand what we recite or do not understood. It is one of the purposes of the Prophet's ﷺ mission.

TAJWEED, THE SCIENCE OF RECITAL

The recital of the Quran is not something to be taken lightly that one may read it as one likes. Rather the Prophet ﷺ had taught his companions the science of recital. Each letter is pronounced in a particular way and articulated in a prescribed manner. To teach it of tajweed and the science of recital, the former teaches us how each letter is pronounced and what care is to be taken. It is based on the Prophet's ﷺ method. Many books are written on this subject. We cannot find an example like it with any other people. This science is intact today and the Quran is recited exactly as the Prophet ﷺ used to recite. There has been no change whatever.

THE SCIENCE OF RECITAL

The science of recital includes different methods of recital which Allah revealed at the same time as revealing the Quran . Certain words may be recited in different ways. This knowledge also is preserved as it was from the beginning.

THE FIRST STEP

Anyway, recital in itself is a goal. It is the devil deceiving us if we say "what may be gained by reciting without understanding? To recite without understanding is the first step. Only after climbing it can we go to the next step.

TEN VIRTUES PER LETTER

The Prophet ﷺ has said," when anyone recites the Quran, he gets ten virtues written down for him against each letter ." He then explained that الم was not one letter but alif was a letter, lam was a second letter and Meem a third letter. One who recites الم gets thirty pieties credited to him in his record of deeds. Some ulama have suggested that he gets ninety pieties credited because each of these letters is not one but three letters. That adds up to nine and ten pieties are credited against each.

VIRTUES ARE CURRENCY OF THE HEREAFTER

We do not value the virtues ecorded in the Record of Deeds but if we are told that we would get ninety rupees for a piece of work, we will understand it. However, the truth is that it is these pieties that are the currency of the Hereafter. As long as we are alive, we cannot understand the worth of piety and virtue. After death in the Barzakh, and the Hereafter, we will realise that money is worthless. The only question that will be asked will be can cerning our virtues and piety. Then shall we know the worth of our pious deeds.

WE HAVE FORSAKEN RECITAL

Nevertheless, the Quran is, by itself, a means of reward and excellence. This is why Muslims have continued all along from the beginning of Islam to recite something of the Quran early worning before doing any thing else. In the early morning, we could hear the sound of recital from every muslim house, it was the sign of a Muslim neighborhood . it is very sad that though we have received freedom from disbelief and polytheism, we have also freed ourselves from the Commands of Allah and His Messenger ﷺ and the teachings of Islam. We celebrate the independence day but with our political independence we have become independent of religion too. The result is that neither our lives are safe nor our wealth. Our honour is at stake and we are amidst corruption, mischief and immodesty. The entire nation is paying for it.

PROTECTION FROM THE CURSE OF THE QURAN

We do not find people who recite the Qur'an. If anyone does recite it then he does not follow the correct method. The Prophet ﷺ is quoted in a hadith as saying that sometimes a man recites the Quran but its letters curse him because he spoils them and recites wrongly. A person who has embraced Islam recently and he recites worngly then he is excused by Allah but one who is a Muslim by birth yet cannot even recite surah al fatihah correctly after all those years then what excuse will he present before Allah. Therefore, it is the responsibility of every muslim that he should recite the Quran as taught to us by the Prophet ﷺ otherwise he is not giving the Quran even its first right what to speak of the second and third.

THE CASE OF A COMPANION

There was a time when the Muslims made great sacrifices and underwent much trouble and difficulty to learn to the words of the Qur'an. It is transmitted by Bukhari that Amr bin Salmah رضی اللہ عنہ said that when the Messenger of Allah ﷺ migrated to Madinah he was a young child and his village was very far from Madinah. He said," some people of my tribe had become Muslims and I too had embraced Islam. The biggest assest after belief is the Quran. I wished to learn the words of the Quran and its science but there was no one able to recite the Quran in the entire village,. So, I used to haunt the caravan route outside the village and wait for the caravans from Madinah. When I met a caravan from Madinah, I asked them to teach me from the Quran if anyone of them knew it. In this way, I learnt something of the Quran from them. This had become a daily practice with me. In a few months, I came to know more of the Quran than anyone else in our village, and I had memorised more chapters than anyone had. Thus, when a mosque was built in the village and an Imam was to be selected, the people put me forward because I knew more of the Quran than other people in the village"

THE QURAN IS THUS PRESERVED

The Muslims learnt and memorised the Quran in this way. It is the result of their efforts that the Quran is preserved to this day. It is not merely the words but also by the meaning that is preserved. By the grace of Allah, the entire exegesis of the Quran is intact today as it was explained to the Companions رضی اللہ عنہم by the Prophet ﷺ and to their successors by the change in it. Allah has not only assured us that He will preserve the Quran but He has also assured us that He will preserve its meaning.

A WAY TO PRESERVE ARABIC LANGUAGE

Here is an example of how its meaning is preserved. Allamah Hamavi رحمۃ اللہ علیہ has written the Muajjim Al buldan describing the conditions of all well- known cities until his time, and their history. He has mentioned that there were two tribes in the Arabian peninsula the Akkad and Daraib. It was known about them that they did not allow a stranger from another city or tribe to stay more than three days with them, although the Arabs are known for their hospitality. When they were asked to explain this behaviour, they said that if an outsider stayed with them more than three days then he would corrupt their language, and he would influence delivery and pronunciation of words. They said, "our language is the language of the Qur'an. We have to preserve it," in this way, Allah preserved the words and meanings of the Quran.

'DONATE' STUDENTS

Today, we have received the Quran and its sciences in a ready, prepared state, it is upto us now that we learn the Quran and its sciences and mould our lives according to that. There are many madrasah in our city to impart the knowledge, and this madrasah is an addition to those numbers. Naturally, the question of donation arises, and I remember the words of my respected father Mawlana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله عليه in this regard. "People make generous donations to madrasah but that is not very important, because it is my experience that if it is started sincerely then Alalh sends His help from unknown sources and it is run smoothly. We can verify this by looking at the running of the different religious institutions. They make no appeal for donations but they manage to progress. If there is sincerity, Allah helps us. However, the real donation is the to donate the children. If the building is erected, teachers are appointed and other formalities are observed but students do not come forward then what can be done. Muslims are unwilling to send their children where they earn piety and virtue but they send them where they hope to amass wealth.

MADRASAH IS NOT AN EDIFICE

Nevertheless, this madrasah is being established, but it is not just the building we need. It is not the piece of land or the institution. In fact, it is the teachers and students who make up a madrash. We have all heard of the Darul-uloom at deoband. It is a very large religious institution, but when it was established, it had no building to house the classes, no place of its own, and no rooms. Rather, it had its beginning under a pomegranate tree where a teacher and one student began their first lesson. It soon became Darul-Uloom, Deoband. This itself is the sunnah of the Prophet ﷺ. He began the first Madrasah on a raised level of ground, and his companions رضی الله عنهم collected together on a Suffah (a platform). That was the most excellent Madrasah of the world.

On the other hand if we have the building and other things for Madrasah but the people of the neighbourhood ignore it and neither do they come to learn nor do they send their children to it then we cannot derive benefit from it.

Therefore I request you people that you should not only get donations for the Madrasah but you should also exhort people to learn the Quran and recite it and send their children to this institution. Older people who do not know well how to recite the Quran, may take an interest in learning correct recital. Insha Allah, this Madrasah will then be successful.

May Allah grant the Madrasah His approval and may He accept the efforts of those people who have taken part and interest in establishing it. May He cause this Madrasah to progress and may He cause the Muslim to take full advantage from it. Aameen.

عن جابر بن عبد الله رضى الله عنه قال قال رسول الله ﷺ من تحلى بما لم يعط كان كلابس ثوبى زور- (ترمذى، كتاب البر والصلة، باب ما جاء فى المتشبع بما لم يعطه)

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and His forgiveness and we believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Allah from the evils of our selves and the vices of our deeds. There is no one to misguide whom Allah guides and there is no one to guide whom Allah lets go astray. I bear

WORD OF THE HADITH

Sayyidina Jabir رضی الله عنه has said that the Messenger of Allah ﷺ said:

"He who bedecks himslef with what he is not given is as though he wears a pair of garments of lies."

That is, if anyone describes himself with qualities which are not found in him then he has wrapped round his body falsehood.

IT IS FALSE & CHEATING

If a person cheats others by claiming for himself qualities which he does not have then he has dressed himself in lies. Thus, he may claim to be a scholar while he really is not, or he may say he holds a particular office although he does not, or he relates himself to a high lineage but that is not true. A person may declare himself to be wealthy man but he is poor. These are the ways in which one may fool other people. The Hadith calls such men as liars.

TO CLAIM TO BE FAROOQI OR SIDDIQI

We find many people in our society who relate themselves to such lines and families with which they are not really connected. Some people who do not deserve it yet call themselves, 'Siddiqi' or 'Farooqi'. Or 'Ansari'. This practice is very sinful. The Hadith describes people who indulge in that as liars.

WHY COMPARE TO GARMENTS

There is a sin which someone commits and it is over after sometime, but if anyone relates himself wrongly or describes himself in qualities he does not possess then he is involved in a perpetual sin. It is thus like a garment which lies on his body.

WEAVERS DESCRIBE THEMSELVES AS ANSARI AND BUTCHERS AS QURAYSHI.

My respected father, Mawlana Mufti Muhammad Shafi, رحمة الله عليه has written a booklet on this subject, entitled Ghayat An-Nasab because some people attach relationships to their names quite wrongly. It was very common in India that weavers called themselves Ansari, and butchers attached the word Qurayshi to their names. My respected fatehr explained in the boolket that it is a grave sin to relate oneself wrongly. There are many Ahadith that forbid us to claim false relationship. When my respected father wrote that booklet, these people raised a strong protest against my father but the truth is what the Prophet ﷺ has said.

LINEAGE & FAMILY ARE NOT MERITORIOUS

The truth is that a person's line of descent or his family give him no excellence from the religious point of view. No matter to what family a person belongs he is better than any of the relationships only if Allah has granted him taqua, a high degree of God-fearing attitude. The Quran says:

يٰٓاَيُّهَا النَّاسُ اِنَّا خَلَقْنٰكُمْ مِّنْ ذَكَرٍ وَّاُنْثٰى وَجَعَلْنٰكُمْ شُعُوْبًا وَّقَبَآئِلَ لِتَعَارَفُوْٓا اِنَّ اَكْرَمَكُمْ عِنْدَ اللّٰهِ اَتْقٰكُمْ ۔ (الحجرات:۱۳)

O mankind! Surely we have created you from a male and a female, and have made you into nations and tribes that you may know one another. Surely the noblest among you in the sight of Allah is the most pious of you.(Al-Hujurat, 49 : 13)

All men and women are born from one father and mother, Sayyidina Aadam عليه السلام and Sayyidah Hawwa عليها السلام. The different nations and tribes are only to distinguish one from another but they have no excellence over one another. Thus if anyone belongs to a family whom people do not regard as worthy, he should not mind that for if he perfects his behaviour, deeds and manners then he will excell the best known family. Thus why should anyone wrongly claim relationship with a family and perpetrate a sin? Let everyone describe himself with the lineage he belongs to though that too is not necessary. He may not mention it at all. If he must make mention of it then it is not correct for him to claim a wrong lineage and confuse other people.

RELATE THE ADOPTED SON TO HIS REAL FATHER

The Quran has devoted half a ruku' (section) to this subject. Sometimes, people adopt children. Someone may not have a child so he adopts another person's child. Shari'ah has allowed us to adopt another person's child and to nurture and raise him as our own, but under no circumstances, will he be regarded as the child of his adopting parents, in the eyes of Shari'ah. So the child must be properly described by his real father. All directives and injunctions concerning relationship shall apply to him with his real family. Thus, the woman who has adopted him as a son will have to observe veil before him if she is not a mahram.

THE CASE OF ZAYD BIN HARITHA رضى الله عنه

The Prophet ﷺ has adopted Sayyidina Zayd bin Harithah رضى الله عنه as his son. He was the slave of a man in the days of Ignorance. Allah caused him to go to Makkah where he became a Muslim at the hands of the Prophet ﷺ. His parents and relatives had been searching him for years until someone told them that he had become a Muslim and lived with the Prophet ﷺ at Makkah. His father and uncle came to Makkah and met the Prophet ﷺ and introduced themselves. They narrated their tale saying that they had searched Zayd for long and now that they had found him, they wished to take him with them. The Prophet ﷺ told them that they could take him away if he wished to accompany them. They were happy that they got the permission to take him along very easily. They found Zayd in the Haram and while he was happy to see them. He did not consent to go with them. He said, "Father, I will not go with you because I am a Muslim and you are not. Besides, I enjoy the company of the Prophet ﷺ and I cannot give up this company. " His father tried to convince him but to no avail. He refused to go with them and to forsake the company of the Prophet ﷺ.

When the Prophet ﷺ learnt that, he told Sayyidina Zayd bin Haritha that he adopted him as his son from that day. The Prophet ﷺ treated him like a son and people began calling him Zayd bin Muhammad ﷺ. At that. Allah revealed a verse:

اُدْعُوهُمْ لِاٰبَآئِهِمْ هُوَ اَقْسَطُ عِنْدَ اللّٰهِ (سورة الاحزاب:٥)

Call them by (the names of) their fathers, that is more equitable in the sight of Allah. (Al.Ahzab 33:4)

And again:

مَّا كَانَ مُحَمَّدٌ اَبَآ اَحَدٍ مِّنْ رِّجَالِكُمْ وَلٰكِنْ رَّسُوْلَ اللّٰهِ وَخَاتَمَ النَّبِيّٖنَ (سورة الاحزاب:٤٠)

Muhammad is not the father of anyone of your men but he is the Messenger of Allah and the last of the Prophet. (Al-Ahzab, 33:40)

Hence, people were asked not to call anyone as his son. This became a directive for the future, too. No adopted son will be called the son of his adopted parents.

Besides Sayyidina Zayd bin Haritha رضی الله عنه there was another companion, Sayyidina Salim رضی الله عنه the freed slave of Sayyidina Huzayfah رضی الله عنه. He too was adopted. The Prophet ﷺ had said about him too that he would not be related to the father who has adopted him and when he entered the house of his adopted parents, the women would observe veil before him.

These instructions of Shari'ah ensure purity of the line of descent so that there may not be a confusion and wrong attribution. Those who describe themselves with wrong connections attract the warning of this Hadith on themselves.

TO CALL ONESELF MAWLANA

In the same way, if a person is not learned in the religious sciences then he should not present himself as a scholar. People use the word Mawalana with their names although the words Mawlana and Allamah are used for those people who have acquired a proper knowledge of religion. Thus, if anyone who is not a religious scholar calls himself by these epithets then he calls upon himself the warning of this Hadith.

TO CALL ONESELF PROFESSOR

It is the same with the world Professor. This word denotes a particular significance and one who qualifies for that may use this word before his name. But, today, everyone who is a teacher calls himself a Professor. In this way, he claims to possess a distinction which he really does not have, and so he lies and confues other people. He too attracts the warning of the Hadith on himself.

THE WORD DOCTOR.

Again, a man who is not a qualified physician cannot call himself a doctor. Some people work with a physician or medical practitioner in junior capacities but soon appropriate the title doctor for themselves. They then dispense medicine and treat patient. They also come under the purview of this Hadith.

Whoever presents himself in a way and in a capacity that he is not then he is one of those of whom the Hadith tells us that he wears two garments of lies.

STAY JUST AS ALLAH HAS MADE YOU

These are not those sins which are related to the number of times they are committed but they are recurring sins. He commits them all the time as long as he lives. That is why they are compared to garments.

What does one get by describing oneself by any epithet. We must live in the exact way as Allah has created us. We must describe ourselves only with the quality. He has bestowed on us. He gives a quality because he sees wisdom in that. He has a purpose behind this life and he does not like that we disturb the system.

PRETENDING TO BE RICH

It is the same thing with people who pretend to own more wealth and riches than they actually do. They live an ostentatious living that people may be deceived into calling them wealthy, and respect them. This is a sin of the same kind of which the Hadith warns us.

DISPLAY BLESSINGS OF ALLAH

The Prophet ﷺ has taught us every little thing and has been very comprehensive. He has instructed us two different things.

(i) Do not describe yourself with a quality that you do not possess so that other people are not cheated.

(ii) But, he had also said:

إن الله يُحِبُّ ان يَرى اَثَر نعمته على عبده (ترمذی، ابواب الادب،باب ما جاء "ان الله يحب ان يرى")

"Allah loves to see the effects of His blessings on a slave."

For instance, He has bestowed riches on someone. Now, it is the demand of Allah's blessings that this man lives and maintains himself in such a way that Allah's blessings are apparent. He must wear clean garments and live in a clean home. If he lives shabily and miserly in spite of his wealth then he is showing ingratitude to Allah. The effect of Allah's blessing must be seen on us and in our living. We must live as we really are, not showing off and not miserely.

A SCHOLAR MUST DISPLAY HIS KNOWLEDGE

It is no different with knowledge. If Allah has bestowed knowledge on anyone then it is not humbleness on his part to sit in a corner and conceal Allah's blessings. It is wrong to do so fearing that people might think of him as a scholar. In fact, he must use that knowledge to benefit other people.

Allah does not bestow knowledge on anyone that he may sit arrogantly in a corner, or that he may impress other people, but He wants the scholar to benefit other people.

Therefore, we must strike a proper balance in our affairs. These thing are part of religion.

May Allah cause us to act on these teachings

Aameen

حدثنا سعيد بن سمعان قال سمعت ابا هريرة رضى الله عنه يتعوذ من امارة الصبيان والسفهاء فقال سعيد بن سمعان:

فاخبرنى ابن حسنة الجهنى انه قال لابى هريرة ما آية ذلك؟ قال ان يقطع الارحام ويطاع المغوى ويعصى المرشد۔ (ادب المفرد باب، قاطع رحم کی سزا)

All praise is for Allah. We praise Him and seek His help and His forgiveness and we believe in Him and rely on Him. We seek refuge with Allah from the evils of our selves and the vices of our deeds. There is no one to misguide whom Allah guides and there is no one to guide whom Allah lets go astray. I bear witness that there is no god but Allah Alone. He has no partner. I also bear witness that our authority, our Prophet and our Master, Muhammad is His servant and His Messenger. May Allah have mercy on him, his household and on his Companions and bless them and send peace on them in great abundance.

TO SEEK REFUGE FROM BAD TIMES

Saeed bin Sam'an رضی الله عنه was a taba'een (successor of Companions). He said that he heard Sayyidina. Abu Hurayrah رضی الله عنه seek protection from the governance of children and stupid people.

This is an indication that the times would be very bad when young and inexperienced and foolish people will become chiefs and rulers. This is why he sought refuge. "O Allah! Save me from such times and let not the times come when I have to face such rulers.".

THREE SIGNS OF BAD TIMES

Sa'ad bin Sama'an رضی الله عنه said that when Sayyidina Abu Hurayrah رضی الله عنه sought refuge in that manner, he was asked, " what are the signs of those bad times?" People wished to know how they would recognise the era of foolish rulers.

Sayyidina Abu Hurayra رضی الله عنه said about the signs.

ان تقطع الارحام و یطاع المغوی ویعصی المرشد

"There are three signs of this period:
The first is that people will violate the rights of relatives and sever ties of relationship.

The second sign is that they would obey those who mislead.
The third sign is that those who guide and lead will be disobeyed.

When these three signs are found at anytimes. It will mean that the foolish and stupid and young people run the government."

A SIGN OF THE QIYAMAH

The portents of the Hour that the Holy Prophet ﷺ has revealed include the following

ان تَرَى الْحُفَاةَ الْعراةَ الْعَالَةَ رِعَاءَ الشاء يَتَطَاوَلُوْنَ فِي الْبُنْيَانِ

"One of the signs of final hour is that bare-footed, naked people, who are dependant on others and who tend sheep, will boast and he vie one another for lofty buildings."

These people do not have a favourable past and their habits and moral character is not noble. They are ordinary people with a poor training and they lack religious knowledge. These people will become rulers over men and they will boast of lofty castles.

LIKE DEEDS LIKE RULERS

We learn from this saying of Sayyidina Abu Hurayrah رضی الله عنه that we must seek refuge in Allah from governors of the kind who are incapable of governing the affairs of the nation. However, if such incompetent men become rulers over a people - as we find over us these days- then, according to a saying of the Prophet ﷺ, it is the consequence of their own deeds. The words of the Prophet ﷺ:

كَمَا تَكُونُونَ يُؤَمَّرُ عَلَيْكُم

"As you are, so shall rulers be imposed over you."

Another version is:

انما اعمالكم عُمّالكم

"Your deeds will mould your rulers."

Deeds appear as rulers. If their deeds are good then Allah causes good men to rule over them but if their deeds are bad then evil men rule over them. The Prophet ﷺ has narrated this fact in many ahadith.

WHAT SHOULD WE DO?

The Prophet ﷺ has also said in a hadith that when evil men become rulers over a people they should not curse them and criticise them. Rather, they should turn to Allah. "O Allah! These evil men rule us because of our evil deeds. O Allah! Be merciful to us and forgive us our misdeeds and reform us. Appoint pious and righteous people over us."

This is the method shown to us by the Holy Prophet ﷺ. Hence, we will gain nothing by condemning our rulers. Instead we must turn to Allah.

OUR APPROACH

Let us review our approach to the situation. From morning to evening, day in and day out, we are given to speak ill of our rulers and we curse them. But do we ever really turn to Allah sincerely? Do we confess our misdeeds and do we seek His forgiveness? Do we pray to Him to give us pious rulers? We offer prayers five times a day and make our supplications to Him in the end but do we also petition Him to forgive us and replace our rulers with pious people? If we do not make this supplication then it means that we do not pursue the method shown to us by the Holy Prophet ﷺ. We must seek refuge in Allah and at the same time reform ourselves.

TURN TO ALLAH

The Prophet ﷺ is quoted in a hadith as saying. "Allah the kings and all the rulers have their hearts in the Hand of Allah. If we please Allah and turn to Him then He will turn the hearts of these rulers and grow goodness in them. But if they are not destined to be good then Allah will replace them with others."

Hence, instead of cursing them we must turn to Allah and please Him. There are few of Allah's slaves who really feel grieved at the situation and who make supplications to Allah imploringly. If we commence to act on these lines then Allah will surely have mercy on us and reform our condition.

THE FIRST TWO SIGNS OF A BAD GOVERNMENT

One of the signs of the era of bad government is that people will sever bonds of kinship. The second sign is that those who mislead will be obeyed. The more a man is on the wrong path, the greater following he has. We can witness this fact today. The masses pursue those politicians who mislead them and have no knowledge of religion but who make tall promises to them. When anyone is blinded to truth, he takes rank of wrong - doers as his leaders and he does not verify whether their deeds and character match the Qur'an and Sunnah. May Allah guide us. Aameen.

THE PALACE OF THE AGA KHAN

In one of visits to Switzerland, one of my hosts pointed out to me on the way a palace saying that it belonged to the Aga Khan, what a palace! It seemed like a Paradise on earth. In these countries, people generally have small houses but, in comparison, this palace was spread over about three kilometers. It had gardens, castles, ponds and an army of servants. It is well known that these people do not look down upon immodesty and luxurious living and they are used to bouts of wine drinking.

A QUESTION TO THE AGA KHAN'S FOLLOWERS

Suddenly, it dawned upon me that his followers see with their own eyes that their leaders live a life of luxury and perpetrate what even an ordinarily educated Muslim knows to be unlawful yet they continue to believe in them. One of my hosts confided to me that he had said the same thing to one of the Aga Khan's disciples and asked him how he could continue to consider him his Imam after knowing of these things about him.

THE DISCIPLE'S REPLY

His reply was, "our leader has generously offered a great sacrifice for his true worth was Paradise but he agreed to have these palaces in this life." He continued. "He has forsaken those bounties for our sake, to guide and lead us. Actually, the favours of this life are nothing in his eyes, and he is entitled to larger bounties."

It is, this attitude to which the hadith points out:

ان يطاع المغوى

"Those who mislead. Will be obeyed."

A man sees with his eyes the luxurious living style of the other yet, says, "He is my leader, my mentor!"

THOSE WHO MISLEAD ARE OBEYED

In the same way ignorant mentors rule the roost. These people live in a very sinful manner and consume opium. A very luxurious style is apparent and they do not mind to commit the worst of sins but their followers shut their eyes to these realities. Their mentor is the representative of Allah to them on the land. The hadith tells us that such people are the ones who mislead, but the masses pursue them. The truth is that these people master some form of jugglery or by sleight of hand deceive their disciples. Someone's heart stirs, another sees a strange dream, yet another is consigned to the ka'bah. Once they are deceived, people obey all their commands even if that means disobeying shari'ah.

THE THIRD SIGN OF BAD GOVERNMENT

The third sign is that people will not be prepared to visit a pious man of Allah who would sincerely wish to reform them. Naturally his pres cription would entail a Certian amount of effort on their part. They would have to observe a strict rota of worship including prayers, fasting and so on and they would have to abstain from sin and disapproved behaviour. This is the gist of what Sayyidina Abu Hurayrah رضى الله عنه had said, "Those who mislead will have a large following and those who lead will be disobeyed."

If the reformer stops them from doing the unlawful, they would demand from him the wisdom behind the prohibition. They cast aspersion on the reformers saying, "

The ulama have made religion difficult to follow." These are the trials we face in this era.

HOW TO PRESERVE ONESELF FROM TRIAL

The way to save ourselves from being misled is to examine the mentor we visit. We must see whether he follows the sunnah but we must not be impressed by the jugglery he performs because that has nothing in common with religion.

WHAT A SHAYKH SAYS

I happened to read a pamphlet of a mentor. I said, " He is not worthy of the rank of Shaykh , who cannot have his disciples offer prayers in the Masjid Al-Haram while they are there."

This is the standard set by the mentor, will anyone ask him if this standard is set by the Qur'an or hadith?

THE METHOD OF THE PROPHET ﷺ

In fact, when the Prophet ﷺ migrated to Madinah, he often remembered the Bayt Allah (House of Allah) and longed to be there. Sayyidina Bilal رضى الله عنه who had high temperature wept bitterly on remembering Makkah and Masjid Al-Haram. He made this supplication, "O Allah, when will I see the mountains of Makkah again."

In spite of that never did the Prophet ﷺ said to him. " I will cause you to offer prayer in the Masjid Al Haram."

Today, the people only look at the apparent and when they see some such thing in anyone, they go mad on him. But, they do not see whether he is pious, devoted and God-fearing. What these so-called mentors display does not even require them to be Muslims, anyone may do that with a little practice. But, our masses take these things to be religious.

THE CORRECT ONE OF THE SEVENTY-TWO SECTS.

The Prophet ﷺ has set a standard for us. He said. "My Ummah will be divided into more than seventy sects. They will invite them to different ways and will claim different things to be true. These sects will lead them to Hell, to destruction. Only one will lead them to salvation - it is the path that I follow and on which my companions tread. Hold fast to it."

SUMMARY

Before we choose a leader we must ask ourselves how religious the man is. Does he follow the Qur'an and the sunnah? If he comes upto that mark, we must surely follow him. But, if he falls short of it then he is not worth emulating, and we must stay away from him even if he shows sleight of hand.

May Allah guide us on the Right Path. May He keep us away from the wrong path. Aameen

THE ANSWER GOT ALL THE REWARD

Sayyidina Anas رضی اللہ عنہ has said that when the Muhajirs emigrated to Madinah from Makkah, they said to the Prophet ﷺ, "O Messangr of Allah ﷺ! It seems that the Ansar of Madinah have earned all the reward leaving nothing for us". The Prophet ﷺ answered " No! As long as you pray for them and thank them, you will not be deprived of reward".

They faced the great problem of accommodating the emigrants of Makkah when they came to Madinah. A multitude of people had come from Makkah to Madinah which was the small settlement at that time. They needed homes to live in, employment to earn livelihood, and they required food supplies. They had come empty handed to Madinah leaving all their belongings in Makkah where they had property and wealth.

SELFLESSNESS OF ANSAR:

Allah had grown in the Ansar a high degree of selflessness, the example of which we cannot find in pages of history. They offered all the wealth they had to the Muhajirs. They made the offer and showed the generosity on their own. The Prophet ﷺ had not given them such a command. They opened the doors of their homes to the Muhajirs, and assured them of food and drink. Seeing their sentiments, the Prophet ﷺ established a fraternal relationship between them, known as Muwakhāt whereby each Muhajir had an Ansar brother with whom they stayed and ate and drank. In fact, some Ansar went to extent of offering one of their wives - if they had two - to their Muhajir brother by divorcing her so that he could marry her. However such a thing did not happen though offers of the kind were made.

AGRICULTURE

The Ansar Companions said to the Prophet ﷺ " O Messenger of Allah! The Muhajir Companions who stay with us keep worrying that they do not have a regular source of livelihood. So, we have agreed to hand over them half of our Properties keeping half to ourselves. The Prophet ﷺ sought the advice of Muhajir companions but they were unwilling to accept the offer.

Accordingly, the Prophet ﷺ decided that the Muhajir should work on the lands of Ansar and then the two of them should divide the produce between them.

THE SPIRIT OF THE COMPANIONS

We cannot find a comparison of the spirit of selflessness shown by the companions, both the Ansar and Muhajirs. The Ansar did all they could and Muhajirs felt deprived of the reward and they even expressed their sense of loss to the Prophet ﷺ.

YOU TOO CAN GET THE REWARD

The Prophet ﷺ assured them:

"Do not think in that way. You too may get such reward. As long as you pray for them and thank them, you will not be deprived of like reward".

THIS LIFE IS FLEETING

These people were not moved by rivalry to create opposing associations for the protection of their rights, the Muhajir of theirs and the Ansar of theirs. But, it was the other way about. Each of them was moved by desire to do good to the other. It was because they were concerned with the Hereafter and knew that this life was ephemeral and would pass away somehow. What is important was to worry about the next life, how would they fare after death? That was why every one of them unselfishly looked at interest of their brother.

IF HEREAFTER IS BEFORE US

If the Hereafter is not before the man then he does not fear Allah and does not think of having to stand before Him .He only thinks of this life .He competes with his fellow-men to amass worldly possession and always worries that the other person will collect more than him, and he worries that he should overtake him.

If the Hereafter is before him then man fears his fate and worries over what will happen to him. He knows that real comfort and happiness lies not in wealth and possession but in peace and contentment. He will know that he has ample stock of good deeds. True happiness lies in seeing a smile on a brother's face and in removing his discomfort. When a man moves with these sentiments then he treats other people generously without a selfish attitude.

PEACE LIES IN SELFLESSNESS

Islam does not teach us to merely give the rights of other people but it also requires us to display genuine altruism. We must be willing to offer a little sacrifice. If we sacrifice something for our Muslim, brother Allah will give us peace, security and comfort. Material possession and richness are meaningless before those blessings of Allah. We have become hard-hearted and have no usage to offer a sacrifice for the other man so we cannot imagine the value of selflessness.

THE CASE OF AN ANSAR

Allah has landed the selfless attitude of the Ansar when he says in the Quran:

وَيُؤْثِرُوْنَ عَلٰٓى اَنْفُسِهِمْ وَلَوْ كَانَ بِهِمْ خَصَاصَةٌ ۚ (الحشر:٩)

(.....preferring them above themselves even though poverty was their lot...) (Al - Hashr:59:9) .

This story is well known. A guest of the Prophetﷺ come to an Ansar companion who did not have enough for both of them. Only one could eat with the guest he would feel bad about it so he switched off the lamp. He hoped that the guest would not know that he did not eat really but only pretended to eat. The foregoing verse of the Quran was revealed in this connection and it stressed that these people preferred others even in state of personal poverty and need.

Let us develop this attitude and see what we gain of comfort and peace. We will find that it cannot be had with any amount of world's wealth. This is why the Prophetﷺ established a fraternal link between his Ansar and Muhajir companions. May Allah grow in us altruistic attitude. Aameen!

THE SUPERIOR DEED:

The next hadith is transmitted by Sayyidina Abu zarr Ghaffariرضی اللہ عنہ. He said "Once someone asked the Prophetﷺ "which of the deeds is the best in the sight of Allah."

He said:

"Faith in Allah and Jihad in the cause of Allah."

Then someone asked:

اى الرقاب افضل؟

"which slave is best to set free?"

People had slaves during that period and the Prophet ﷺ encouraged them to set them free. He said that it was better to set free the slave who was more precious and more capable .

Someone asked him again. "Messenger of Allah Suppose I cannot do either of these then what shall I do? The Prophet ﷺthen said to him. "The best way for you to earn reward is that you help one whose state of affairs is in a bad shape."

HELP OTHER PEOPLE

The Prophetﷺadvised his questioner that he could help one who was in difficulty or anxiety or who was in a bad shape, or do something for a tactless person. The Prophet ﷺ used the word 'tactless' meaning one who does not know any one. Or is handicapped. "There is for you in that a great reward from Allah." The Prophet ﷺ thus said that the reward for helping anyone was equal to the reward of participation in jihad.

IF YOU CANNOT HELP

We must note that the companion asked the Prophet ﷺ what he should do if he could not help a helpless person what an encouraging advice the Prophet ﷺ gave him that he must not despair of the mercy of Allah. He showed every one a way out. He gave them an alternative-if they could not do one thing, they may do another, and so on.

PROTECT PEOPLE FROM YOUR MISCHIEF

Nevertheless, the Prophet ﷺ advised him that it he could not help others because of his own weakness then he should:

تَدَعُ النَّاسَ مِنَ الشَّرِ

"Protect other people from your mischief."

His advice was that he should ensure that he does not cause hardship to other people. In a way it will mean he is good to himself because he is protecting himself from cmmitting a sin which he would have committed if he had harmed other people.

WHO IS A MUSLIM?

The fact is that Islamic social teachings require us not to cause hardship to others. The Prophet ﷺ said in very clear terms.

اَلْمُسْلِمُ مَنْ سَلِمَ الْمُسْلِمُوْنَ مِنْ لِسَانِهٖ وَ يَدِهٖ

"A Muslim is one from whose tongue and hands other Muslims are safe"

He does not cause difficulty to any one with his tongue or hands. Only he who has these things engrained in his heart can understand and act on this advice.

DO NOT BURDEN OTHER PEOPLE.

My respected father, Mawlana Muft Muhammad Safi رحمة الله عليه used to refer to this couplet in urdu frequently.

تمام عمر اسی احتیاط میں گزری
آشیاں کسی شاخ پہ بار نہ ہو

Let not others face difficulty by any one your actions or words. Mawlana Thanwi رحمة الله عليه was a great teacher and it would not be an exaggeration if I say that the gist of most of his teachings was that we should not be the cause of hardship or inconvenience to other people. It is not only that he advised us not to beat other people but he emphasised that we must ensure that we do not inconveience them with our tongue or deed.

MUFTI A'ZAM

I have narrated to you earlier the last wishes of my respected father, Mawlana Muft Muhammad Shati رحمة الله عليه. He had suffered heart trouble before Ramadan and the month of Ramdan began in this manner. Often if seemed that the attack he suffered would cause his death. In this way, the month of Ramdan passed away. He said, "Every Muslim cherishes that he die in the month of Ramdan because the doors of Hell are closed in the month of Ramadan. I also wished that my death take place in this month. I often wished for death in Ramadan but could not bring myself to make this supplication. The reason was that if I died in the month of Ramadan, the people who attended me would face great difficulty in looking after my last rites and burying me while they would by fasting. They would be grieved and face much difficulty in a fasting condition. Therefore, I could not bring myself to make that supplication." Then he read this cou plet

وَيْلٌ لِّكُلِّ هُمَزَةٍ لُّمَزَةٍ (١) ٱلَّذِى جَمَعَ مَالاً وَعَدَّدَهُ ۥ (٢) يَحْسَبُ أَنَّ مَالَهُ ۥٓ أَخْلَدَهُ
(٣) كَلَّا ۖ لَيُنۢبَذَنَّ فِى ٱلْحُطَمَةِ (٤) وَمَآ أَدْرَىٰكَ مَا ٱلْحُطَمَةُ (٥) نَارُ ٱللَّهِ ٱلْمُوقَدَةُ (٦)
(٩) إِلَّتِى تَطَّلِعُ عَلَى ٱلْأَفْـِٔدَةِ (٧) إِنَّهَا عَلَيْهِم مُّؤْصَدَةٌ (٨) فِى عَمَدٍ مُّمَدَّدَةٍ

This is Surah Al-Humaza , which I recited in front of you and the details of its commentary were started last Friday. For refreshing our memories let me present the translation of the Surah once more, and it is:

[104:1] Woe to every backbiter, derider

Humaza here refers to the person who is accustomed to backbiting meaning that he describes the bad qualities of people behind their back, describes their faults behind their backs for the sake of self enjoyment and to become a star in gatherings, considers himself superior (due to pride).

And Lumaza here refers to the person who derides, mocks and jeers others to their face; one is to inform someone of their shortcoming so that they may rectify and correct themselves and this is being benevolent and sympathetic towards someone but to deride and mock someone (to their face) and to hurt their feelings is a major sin and Lumaza is such a person.

So Allah (SWT) is saying that indeed there is destruction to everyone who is a backbiter and the one who is derider (to their face).

[104:2] who accumulates wealth and counts it.

[104:3] He thinks that his wealth has made him eternal.

This man thinks that his wealth will deliver him from death and he will become immortal on account of his wealth.

[104:4] Never! He will certainly be thrown into the Crushing Fire.

Allah (SWT) proclaims that man is in sheer deception. The person who is a backbiter and the one who is derider (to their face) and the one who continues to hoard wealth disregarding the responsibilities placed upon him due to his wealth, such a person will definitely and surely be placed into the fire which will smash his bones!

It will smash and destroy the bones!

[104:5] And what may let you know what the Crushing Fire is?

Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) is being addressed here, "What do you know about this fire which will smash and destroy the bones?"

[104:6] It is Allah's kindled fire

[104:7] that will peep into the hearts.

[104:8] It will be closed on them,

[104:9] in outstretched columns.

This is the translation of this Surah and as I explained last week that this Surah was revealed when during the Makkan period of Dawah the opposition to Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) reached a stage where people crossed all bounds of decency and they use to backbite Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) and also deride and mock him to his face.

Wal 'Iyadhu Billah!
What was their mocking and derision to the face of Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam)? They had derogatory nicknames for Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam)!
Wal 'Iyadhu Billah!
The name of Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) was Muhammad meaning the one who is praised, and it was given to him by his Parents. A person who is praised by everyone. In fact this name was assigned to him by Allah (SWT).
This is such a name which contains the praise (of his stature) within it.
The disbelievers of Makkah in their spite, enmity, jealousy and hatred used to say Mudammam which means the exact opposite of Muhammad meaning derogatory rather than praiseworthy.
The disbelievers of Makkah held the upper hand while those who believed in Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) were few in number so the disbelievers used to associate Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) with the word Mudammam in their gatherings.
Wal 'Iyadhu Billah!
And they used to curse Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam)! Once Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) explained to his companions as to how he has been protected by Allah (SWT) from their curses for they used to pronounce curses upon Mudammam while he was Muhammad and that he has not been give the name Mudammam!
In short they (the disbelievers) had tried to pursue all means of mocking Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) and this method was one of them i.e. backbiting (behind his back) and mocking to his face. Therefore, this Surah was revealed. And this methodology has continued to this day.
Such despicable, pathetic, low-life individuals existed during the lifetime of Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) who when couldn't refute prophethood through rational and logical arguments and how could they when the honesty and trustworthiness of Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) was well established beyond doubt and it could not be refuted and indeed they had no way to refute it. Moreover the message of Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) was of Tawheed and he (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) challenged the idol worshippers to prove the divinity of their idols which they had created from their own hands, how can they worship something and consider it divine which they had created them from their own hands? So not only they couldn't refute the personality Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) they had no answer to the fact that they were worshipping idols which they had created from their own hands. They had instigated false Aqaid (beliefs) in idols and assigned them specific duties i.e. that such and such idol provided them sustenance and such and such idol provided them with benefit etc, so they had gathered together all of these false notions while Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) questioned their set of Aqaid (beliefs) and asked for an explanation as to how can an idol be responsible for providing sustenance when they had created it (from their own hands) and placed it for worship.
How can this idol provide them with sustenance?
How can this idol provide them with progeny?
The one who created the Heavens and the Earth and raised the clouds He (SWT) is Al-Khaliq and He (SWT) alone is worthy of worship.
They had no answer for this.
They had no refutation for the evidence provided by Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam). And when a stubborn fool cannot refute an argument then he resorts to ad hominem attacks, resorts to bad language and cursing, resorts to mockery and derision.
And that's what the disbelievers of Makkah resorted to i.e. ad hominem attacks. When Allah (SWT) gave Islam the upper hand in the lifetime of Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) and afterwards then the people who were subjugated to Islam (by argument and by force) then they also resorted to such lowly and despicable tactics i.e. ad hominem attacks behind the backs and sometimes in front.

In our times, the flag bearers of culture and decency, those who blow the trumpets of their superior culture and traditions, and those who proudly proclaim that they are the guardians of human rights there is no difference (not even an iota) between them and the despicable, pathetic, low-life disbelievers of Makkah. They have no evidence today (against Islam), they have been defeated in argument for the truthfulness of Islam is being accepted worldwide so they have no choice but to issue profanities regarding the personality of Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) and their attempts are nothing but trying to spit at the beautiful full moon.
They have adopted this tactic, today!
Their tactic is evidence of this lowness, their defeat and their subjugation. Since they have nothing to present in terms of a good argument, they resort to these despicable and pathetic tactics e.g. sometimes they blaspheme Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) and something they try to produce caricatures of Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) and now they have on a worldwide scale given invitation to all enemies of Islam to create caricatures of Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam). All of this is evidence and manifestation of their defeat in the field of arguments.
The one, who can soundly and squarely refute, doesn't use ad hominem attacks.
The one, who can soundly and squarely refute, doesn't resort to mocking and derision.
He speaks with sound argument and presents his case in a logical manner.
But the one who can't, resorts to lowly despicable tactics of blasphemy and creating caricatures.
This is an admission from them that they have no refutation of the evidence of Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) and they have no choice but to try to satisfy their rage with lowly despicable tactics.
On one hand it is a tactic to try to satisfy their rage and on the other hand it is a challenge to the honour and dignity of the Muslims.
Those who proclaim faith in Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam)!
Those who proclaim love for Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam)!
Let's see what they do in response to these lowly despicable tactics. It is a challenge.
And I believe that the Muslim Ummah should accept the challenge with full dignity and honour of their Eemaan (faith).
Let the Muslim Ummah display that it is ready to sacrifice even its life upon the honour and dignity of Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam).

حدثنا محمد بن المثنى وابن بشار قالا حدثنا محمد بن جعفر حدثنا شعبة قال سمعت قتادة يحدث عن أنس بن مالك قال

قال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم لا يؤمن أحدكم حتى أكون أحب إليه من ولده ووالده والناس أجمعين

It is reported on the authority of Anas Ibn Malik (RA) that the Messenger of Allah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) said, "None of you is a believer till I am dearer to him than his child, his father and the whole of mankind." [Muslim] Umar (RA), said to the Prophet (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam), "You are more beloved to me than everything except myself." Messenger of Allah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) placed his hand on the chest of Umar (RA) and said, "You will not have complete faith till I am dearer to you than your own self."
When the answer was given and the hand was placed upon the chest of Umar (RA) immediately a change occurred within Umar (RA) and he said, ""However, now, by Allah, you are dearer to me than my own self."
The Sahaba (companions) proved their love and devotion to Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) in a manner which is unsurpassed and cannot be matched by any other nation or group. No one can give such examples of love and devotion to their leader, to their chief or to even to their prophet.

Sayyidina Abu Mahzura (RA) is a companion upon whose head the Prophet (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) placed his blessed hand. He did not cut the hair from the area which had touched the blessed hands of Prophet (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) for those were the hair which were touched by Prophet (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) and he refused to part with them.
My brothers, today you have been confronted with a small challenge.
You celebrate Al-Mawlid in the month of Rabiul-Awwal.
You proclaim the love for (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam).
Your challenge is to see your response towards those are extending their hands upon the honour of Prophet (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam).
Would you continue to have friendly relations with them?
Would you continue to provide financial benefits to them?
Today, I have been informed that Facebook which has instigated this filthy competition has been banned (in Pakistan). At least we praise Allah (SWT) that they have a little bit of conscious but I don't know how long this blockage will last?
But for anyone who has any love for Prophet (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) even after Facebook has been unbanned then his dignity should not permit him to use this filthy site. The filthy site which has blasphemed Prophet (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam).
I don't know but I have been informed that young boys and girls have been befriending each other through this site and the moral teachings of religion are being stampeded and trampled upon. So this site should be blocked and banned!
But if you were to leave (FaceBook) then do so now due to the Love and Honour of Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam). Know that these people are worshippers of money, their survival is in wealth, look at what the Qur'aan has said about their accumulation of wealth:
[104:1] Woe to every backbiter, derider
[104:2] who accumulates wealth and counts it.
[104:3] He thinks that his wealth has made him eternal.
So they are the same, their god is money! And when they experience a loss in their wealth then their minds comprehend the reality.
I have been informed that for every visitor FaceBook earns $2.50. Brothers! Would you reward the filthy site which is guilty of blasphemy with $2.50 with each of your visit? Would you benefit them?
There are more than a billion Muslims on the globe and if they make a determined effort to boycott such sites then within a few days they will learn their lesson. They will see the results of committing blasphemy to the personage of Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam).
Know that Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) is no need of our praise and our eulogy. Allah (SWT) has clearly stated in the Qur'aan:

وَرَفَعْنَا لَكَ ذِكْرَك

[94:4] and We raised high for you your name.
The name of Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) has been raised to an extent that not a moment goes by without someone raising the proclamation somewhere on the globe:

. . . اَشْهَدُ اَنَّ مُحَمَّد . . .

I testify that Muhammed (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam)...
Not a moment goes by in 24 hours, every moment, every second someone proclaims and testifies to the Prophethood of Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam). And the proclamation is done openly and candidly. Their blasphemy amounts to nothing when creations in the universe testify to the Prophethood of Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) and sings his praises.

إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ وَمَلَٰٓئِكَتَهُۥ يُصَلُّونَ عَلَى ٱلنَّبِيِّ يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ صَلُّواْ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلِّمُواْ

تَسْلِيمًا

[33:56] Surely, Allah and His angels send blessings to the Prophet. O you who believe, do pray Allah to bless him, and send your Salam (prayer for his being in peace) to him in abundance.
Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) is in no need of mine or your praise.
Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) is no need of mine or your eulogy.
Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) is no need of any praise from these despicable, pathetic, low-life individuals.
Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) is above and beyond any need for our praise. He (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) was declared Muhammad (the praiseworthy) from his birth.
His (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) praise is on Earth.
His (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) praise is in the heavens.
His (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) praise is in the creation.
He (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam) is in no need of our praises but it is an honour for a believer to take steps in protecting the honour, dignity and stature of Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam), steps which will harm these decayed individuals.
At least they should be made to feel it in their pockets. They should be shown that Muslims havn't lost their dignity and self-respect.
I would particularly like to appeal to my young ones about this "Internet phenomenon" which has caught them and sweeping them along and it has become their favourite past time. Can you not make a small sacrifice? Can you not abandon one of your pursuits for protecting the honour of Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam)?
Nobody is asking for your life! Nobody is asking for your wealth! You are being asked to sacrifice a favourite of yours for the sake of honour and dignity of Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam).
And if you can do so then at least your name will be written amongst those who love Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam).
At least you will be say on the day of judgement that you at least boycotted those who blasphemed Rasul-ullah (Sallaho Alaihe Wassallam).
If such a tactic is started then you will see the results of it, Insha'Allah and may Allah (SWT) give us the ability of it (Ameen).
So brothers, Allah (SWT) has announced destruction for such people in Surah Al-Humaza. They may be happy that their plans have come to fruition but their end result is:
[104:4] Never! He will certainly be thrown into the Crushing Fire.
[104:5] And what may let you know what the Crushing Fire is?
[104:6] It is Allah's kindled fire
[104:7] that will peep into the hearts.
[104:8] It will be closed on them,
[104:9] in outstretched columns.
This not my proclamation. It is a pronouncement from Allah (SWT). Those wretched ones who have planned for this will face repercussions. They can announce their success in this world but in the hereafter thy will face severe repercussions and it will happen!
But we also have responsibility in this world and may Allah (SWT) give us the ability to fulfil our responsibilities in this world (Ameen).

Wiseman of the ummah

The above Hadith is reported by Sayyidina Abu a d-Darda رضي الله عنه. He was a high ranking Companion and Wali (friend) of Allah. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم had described him as حكيم هذه الامة (the wise man of this Ummah). Allah had granted him wisdom.

Question creates interest

He reported that once the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم asked his sahabah رضي الله عنهم, "Shall I not disclose to you something that is

[1] Venue: Jami' Masjid Baitul-Mukarram, Gulshan-e-Iqbal, Karachi.

www.peopleofsunnah.com

more excellent in degree than salah, fasting and sadaqah?" This was the Prophet's صلى الله عليه وسلم style of speech. Whenever he had to bring out the importance of something, he put a question to the Companions رضى الله عنهم. This created in them an interest and the information or disclosure had an effect on them. But, without an urge to know, the best of disclosures and teachings are fruitless. So, the interest or craving is very significant.

Create an interest in religion

This is why our religious elders have prescribed that success lies in a craving for religion and practice on it. Once that interest is created, Allah bestows blessings and that is His way of doing things. Mawlana Rumi describes it thus:

آب کم جو تشنگی آور بدست تا بجوشد آب از بالا و پست

Do not search for water much, create a great thirst. When that is created, it is Allah's practice that He bestows water and it springs from everywhere. The craving is very significant. May Allah grow it in us, Ameen!

The urge makes you restless

Once the interest is created, it does not let man rest. He is restless till he gets what he wants. When a man is hungry-that is, he craves for food - he is restless till he gets something to eat. When he is thirsty he craves for water and will not cease to be restless till he has water.

May Allah grow in us a craving for religion. Once we have that, it will keep us restless till we get religion and we will crave for more (knowledge and practice).

Religious urge in sahabah

It was with each one of the Sahabah that they were worried how they would fare after death. They would be presented before Allah and there is Hell or Paradise. What is the destination? The result was that in every little thing they did from morning till evening, they wondered if it was according to Allah's pleasure or not. They worried lest their mistake sent them to Hell.

Hanzalah's رضى الله عنه thought of hereafter

Sayyidina Hanzalah رضى الله عنه went to the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم and submitted, "O Messenger of Allah! "يا رسول الله نافق حنظلة" Hanzalah has become a hypocrite." He said that about himself. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم asked him how was that and he said, "When I am with you, I think of the Hereafter and seem to see paradise and Hell before my eyes. I feel tender and mild at heart and an inclined to obey Allah. But when I am away with my family, this condition is not found in me. I have become a hypocrite because when I am away from you, I am in a state different from the one when I am here."

The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم comforted him, saying, "Hanzalah, these are different moments. Man is overpowered by sentiments of a differing nature. So, do not worry. Rather, keep doing what Allah has asked you to do. Insha Allah, you will succeed." The thought that one has become a hypocrite is really the craving for the Hereafter that has made one restless.

Umar's رضى الله عنه thought of the future.

Sayyidina Umar رضى الله عنه was a great sahabi. He was the second Khalifah (caliph) of whom the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said, "If there were a prophet after me, he would be Umar." He also said about him," The devil does not go by the path, Umar walks on. The devil takes a different path." And he also told Sayyidina Umar رضى الله عنه that he had seen his palace in paradise. In spite of these things about him, his anxiety was so intense that he adjured Sayyidina Huzayfah رضى الله عنه to say on oath whether his name was on the list of hypocrites, which the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم had mentioned to Huzayfah رضى الله عنه.

Help follows the urge

When a man shows a deep interest then Allah who is Merciful bestows. Mawlana Rumi رحمة الله has said:

آب کم جو تشنگی آور بدست تا بجوشد آب از بالا و پست

Do not look for water much but first create the thirst in you.

We must always be eager and restless to have the correct knowledge. Once that craving is created, Allah grants it through His Mercy and Benevolence. It is His Sunnah that till today. He has never let down a true seeker who has a sincere desire in his heart.

www.peaceofislam.com

The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم first created an interest in his Companions رضى الله عنهم and he did that by asking them a question, "Shall I not disclose to you something that is more excellent in degree than salah, fasting and sadaqah?" They became interested.

Salah takes one nearer to Allah

The Sahabah رضى الله عنهم said, "O Messenger of Allah! Certainly! Do tell us." They were always eager to know how they could gain nearness to Allah and earn His pleasure. They had already heard of the virtues of fasting, salah and sadaqah. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم had told them that salah is a pillar of religion.He also told them that Allah says, "A slave gains nearness to Me through the supererogatory. The more optional salah he offers, the closer he gets to Me till I become his eyes with which he sees, his ears with which he hears and his hands with which he holds." In short, by observing plenty of optional salah, he gets so near to Allah that from head to toe he is an example of Allah's pleasure. The Companions رضى الله عنهم had heard of this merit of salah, so they wondered what could be more excellent than salah?

Merit of fasting

They had also heard about the reward for fasting which Allah had said that while it was ten times for a kind of worship and so-many times for another kind, but:

الصوم لي وأنا أجزى به

"Fasting is for Me and I will reward it." (Nasai,Kitab us,Si'am)

In other words, He will give the reward for fasting, which is uncountable, unmeasurable and unweighable by us. "Fasting is for Me, so I will reward according to My Greatness and Glory." The Companions رضى الله عنهم were aware of the merits of fasting, so they wondered what could be more meritorious.

Merit of sadaqah

They had also heard the merits of Sadaqah that the reward for giving charity for Allah's sake is seven hundred times. Besides, the measure is not what we know of but it is the one used in paradise. What could that be?

Most excellent deed is to reconcile warring groups

The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم had offered to disclose to them something more excellent than salah, fasting and Sadaqah whose excellences they had known. So, an interest was aroused in their hearts and they submitted, "O Messenger of Allah! Do tell us what it is that we may pursue it and Allah may grant us more reward than we get from these forms of worship." He said, "It is "صلاح ذات البين" (to put things right between two Muslims who are at loggerheads with one another." They may have quarreled, disputed or not be on speaking terms with one another. We may bring them together, make them friends.

This deed is more excellent than salah, fasting and sadaqah. This is how the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم taught his Sahabah.

Reconciling people is more excellent than optional salah and fasting

The salah and fasting mentioned in this Hadith are the supererogatory deeds, the optional worship. A man may engage in optional salah all night, observe optional fasting during the day and give away much of his wealth in charity. These things are very meritorious and rewardable but, if two Muslims are indifferent to one another and stranged because of that then you will get more reward for putting things right between them. You will give a little time and reunite them, bringing them harmony, but we will reward more than you can get by night long worship and day-long fasting and abundant charity.

What a great thing the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم disclosed to them!

Disharmony shaves off

After emphasizing that to establish mutual love and harmony among Muslims is more excellent than optional worship the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said in the next sentence,

"وفساد ذات البين هى الحالقة"

"But spoiling them, in-fighting and mutual hatred are the 'shavers'."

www.peopleofsunnah.com

This is explained in another Hadith, "I do not say that they shave off the hair, but mutual fighting shaves off your religion." When there is disharmony and hatred among people then they commit many sins like back biting, scandalising, hurting and accusing each other.

Evil influence

The mutual wrangling and quarrels have an evil influence on the people who become alienated from religion. They lose light of religion and a darkness penetrates their hearts. This is why the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم emphasized very often that disharmony and discord must be avoided.

He missed the congregation to arrange a patch up

The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم led the congregational salah in the Masjid Nabawi and obviously, as long as he was alive no one else led the salah in this mosque. In all his life, he could not come to this mosque at the time of salah just once and Abdur Rahman Ibn Awf رضى الله عنه led the congregation. The reason why he did not come was that he learnt of a dispute between two groups of a Muslim tribe. So, he went to put things right between them. He was delayed there and, in his absence, Sayyidina Abdur Rahman Ibn Awf رضى الله عنه led the congregational salah.

This was the only time in his life that though he was healthy he would not reach the Masjid Nabwi. The Qur'an and Ahadith instruct us that we must not tolerate fighting between Muslims. We must do our best to bring them to a compromise because disputes and in-fighting are what shave off (religion).

Assurance for a house in center of paradise

The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said

أنا زعيم بسط الجنة لمن ترك المراء وهو محِقّ

I give an assurance of a house in the center of paradise to one who in spite of being rightful ceases to dispute.

He could have claimed his right legally or in some other way but he surrenders it so that the dispute should end. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم assures such a man that he would get him a house in the center of paradise. This is a great thing, indeed!

No other deed gets this assurance

The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has not taken this responsibility for any other deed. In this way, he has taught us to refrain from disputes and to live as Allah's slaves and brothers of each other. We must remove every such thing that might lead to disputes and quarrels because Allah has placed a light in unity, fraternity and love. This light brightens a man's life in this world and the next. If, on the other hand there is mutual quarreling and mischief then darkness pervades this life and the next and it spells unhappiness.

Murderer and murdered in hell

The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم also said:

اذا التقى المسلمان بسيفيهما فالقاتل والمقتول كلهما فى النار

If two Muslims confront one another with their swords then the murderer and the murdered both will go to Hell.

Someone asked him. "O Messenger of Allah, the murderer will go to Hell because he killed a Muslim unrightfully but why will the murdered go to Hell?" He said:

على قتل

Indeed, he also intended to kill his opponent.

He too had raised a sword. If he had aimed correct, he might have killed the other. By a coincidence, the other overtook him. So, both will go to Hell. Therefore, he said that Muslims must not quarrel.

Obey the ruler even a black slave

The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said, "Even if a black slave becomes your ruler then do not raise your sword at him, unless he perpetrates disbelief." If you raise your sword against him then some people will take your side and some his. As a result Muslims will be divided into two groups and hatred will grow between them. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has not tolerated differences and disorder among Muslims at any cost. He has said:

كونوا عباد الله إخوانًا

O slaves of Allah, become brothers, one of the other.

www.nemeofsunnat.com

A miserable life

At the mention of worship, our mind turns to salah, fasting, sadaqah, zikr, recital of Qur'an, and these things, indeed are excellent forms of worship. However, the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said that to reconcile Muslims is more excellent than these forms. But, today, our society has gone very far away from this instruction of the beloved Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم. Envy, disputes, quarreling, discord-these things are found at every step in our society. Life has become miserable. We have ignored the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم warning that these things shave off religion. They have shaved off our religion so that we do not perceive their ugliness and evil.

Doing what promotes disputes

If anyone does not offer salah, drinks wine or commits a sin then our society classifies him as evil. But if he does something that sets people against each other then no one regards him as a criminal and evil, as the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said that he is. No one thinks about eliminating mutual discord and quarrels. Indeed, the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has taught us a great thing by saying that setting things right between Muslims is more excellent than salah, fasting and sadaqah.

He is not a liar

The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said:

ليس الكذاب الذى ينمى خيرًا

If anyone says something that is not a fact in order to create love in the heart of a Muslim for another and to remove hatred then he is not counted among those who lies. Suppose someone learns of a quarrel between two Muslims who hate one another and he wishes to grow love between them, so he goes to each and says that the other speaks highly of him and prays for him. Though he did not hear him take his name and make a supplication yet, he knows that the man surely makes supplication to Allah thus:

ربنا اتنا فى الدنيا حَسَنَةً و فى الأخرة حسنةً وقنا عذاب النار

Our Lord give us good in this world and good in the Hereafter and save us from the punishment of the fire.

The word "us" includes all Muslims!

Supplication for all Muslims

Similar, he knows that the man recites the prayer at-tahiyaat in salah and comes to the words:

"السلام علينا و على عباد الله الصالحين"

Peace be on us and on Allah's righteous slaves.

These words include prayer for security of all Muslims Again, he concludes his salah with the words:

"السلام عليكم و رحمة الله"

Peace be on (all of) you and the mercy of Allah.

The jurists say that it includes all Muslims the angels and jinns to his right and to his left.

Hence, he is not wrong if he tells the other man that he prays for him, for, in these prayers all Muslims are included. In this way the two men will strike a compromise, and come close to one another.

In fact, some jurists have said in explaining this Hadith that if one has to tell a clear lie to get two Muslims together then he may tell the lie. Nevertheless, the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said that discord between two Muslims is so bad that if one has to speak something not a fact to get them united then it is allowed to him.

If we try to get two disunited people together then that is a great thing and highly rewarding. It is more rewarding than offering optional salah all night, fasting every day of one's life and giving away all wealth in sadaqah.

Some people are the very converse. They cannot see two people united. They instigate each of them till enmity and hatred grow in their hearts. There is no sin greater than that.

Successor of Iblis (satan)

Iblis, the devil, has an army of smaller devils. They are spread all over the world their task is to lead people on the wrong path. According to a Hadith, Iblis sometimes sets up his assembly on the ocean. He calls for a report from other devils One of them reports that he induced a worshipper not to offer salah. Iblis commends him. Another reports that he prevented a worshipper from fasting and Iblis applauds him. A third

www.peopleofsunnah.com

reports that he tempted a person to not give sadaqah. Which he was about to give. He also is applauded. Another reports that he created dissension between a husband and his wife so that they hate one another. Iblis stands up from his throne and embraces this devil and says, "you are my real successor. You did the right thing just as I wished to do."

Grower of hatred is a greater criminal

The most serious attack of the devil and his most successful play is to sow seeds of dissension. Hence, in the light of this Hadith, those people perpetrate a very dangerous crime who grow hatred between two friends or between loving couples. If anyone prevents a worshipper from offering salah or from fasting then he also plays the part of the devil but to grow dissension is so bad that Iblis is very pleased with it. Hence, we must concentrate on keeping away from it.

How to avoid discord

The question arises, how may we keep away from quarrel and discord? How may we grow love? How may we remove dissension?

The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has instructed the Ummah with a deep insight. Each of these instructions is helpful in growing mutual love and eliminating quarrel. However, before we mention them, we must point out that there is a basic condition which we must keep in mind.

The condition

The entire procedure is based on a basic condition for removing dissension and growing love and unity. Only when the condition is fulfilled will we attain our goal. Everyone proclaims loudly that Muslims must unite and bickering must end. In fact, even those who sow seeds of dissension shout hoarse that we must unite! But unity evades us. Why? A saintly man has a proposal. He has diagnosed the illness and proposed a cure. It is only the men of Allah who succeed in diagnosing the illness because Allah puts only in the hearts of His pious slaves what the nature of the illness is and what is its cure.

Haji Imdadullah رحمة الله

The great Shaykh, Haji Imdadullah رحمة الله Muhajir Makki, is the Shaykh of our Shaykh's Shaykh. He is not a graduate of a Madrasah, not a qualified aalim. He only studied the initial books. But, if Allah opens the doors of ma'arifah (divine awareness) on anyone then great scholars submit to him. Great scholars like Mawlana Muhammad Qasim Nanotwi رحمة الله and Mawlana Rashid Ahmad Gangohi رحمة الله also presented themselves before him to gain training and to improve manners.

Two conditions-humbleness and sacrifice

He untied the knot-why is unity not established though everyone tries to get people united and agreeable? The wise answer that he gave is such that if we sincerely go by it then all our altercations will vanish. He said, "The basic path to unity and harmony is to grow two things in oneself. If we do that then unity will be established. If even one of them is lacking then unity will never be achieved. The two things are: humility and selflessness."

Humility or humbleness is to regard oneself as nothing. (Say to yourself:) "I am Allah's slave and because I am a slave I am bound to observe His commands. By myself, I have no merit and have no right. Hence, if anyone violates my rights then he does no wrong, for, I deserve that."

Arrogance obstructs

The respected Haji Imadadullah رحمة الله said that unity is not established because every man is arrogant at heart. He thinks that he is great, and he has many rights. He then blames others for violating his rights and not giving him respect Arrogance breeds discord.

When one is arrogant, he regards himself as great and owner of many rights. He expects other people to respect him but when they do not treat him with respect, he has complaints about them and the knot is tied. He begins to hate and things worsen. They quarrel. So, arrogance is the root cause.

Prescription for comfort

Mawlana Ashraf Ali Thanawi رحمة الله gave a prescription for a life comfort and peace. He said, "If you follow the prescription then you will not have complaint against anyone, Insha Allah". It is that you conceive to yourself that the world is a very bad place and its main purpose is to hurt. Hence, if a human being or animal hurts you then it is exactly in accordance with the nature on which the world is created. But ,if you find someone favourable to you then you must feel surprised and you should thank Allah for that.

Have no expectations

Hence, do not have good expectations from anyone in this world, a friend, a relative, etc. Do not entertain any kind of expectation from anyone that he would help you, give you something and so on. If you will have no expectation from anyone and yet you are benefitted by him then it will please you much. Thank Allah for that. Say, "O Allah you put it into his heart and he was kind to me. Indeed, You are Benevolent."

No complaints against enemies

If you have no expectations and anyone hurts you then you will have no complaints. It is just like when an enemy hurts us, we do not complain. We are not grieved. We only have a complaint when someone we had relied on hurts us. This is why Mawlana Thanawi رحمه الله said, "Have no expectations from any creature."

Place hopes in only one being

We must have expectation from only One Being. Ask only Him. Place hopes in Him alone. Cut off hopes from all the others. Expect from Allah the Majestic, the Gracious alone. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم used to make this supplication:

اَللّٰهُمَّ اجْعَلْ فِيْ قَلْبِيْ رَجَاءَ كَ، وَاقْطَعْ رَجَائِيْ عَنْ مَنْ سِوَاكَ

O Allah! Place in my heart hope in you. And, remove my hopes from everyone besides you.

First base of unity-humility

A man who is humble will not think that he has a right over other people. He will think of himself as Allah's slave who has no standing and who will be happy with howsoever Allah treats him. He will have no expectation from others and therefore, no complaints. When there are no complaints, there will be no disputes. Thus, humility or humbleness is the first pillar of unity and harmony.

The second base-selflessness

The second pillar of unity and harmony is selflessness. It is an attitude of self-sacrifice with Allah's creatures. He should be prepared to sacrifice his comfort to let his Muslim brother live in comfort. He would bear hardship but protect his Muslim brother from hardship. He would be willing to suffer loss but would try to benefit his Muslim brother. We must grow this spirit of self-sacrifice in us.

اس نفع و ضرر کی دنیا میں — یہ ہم نے لیا ہے درسِ جنوں

اپنا تو زیاں تسلیم مگر — اوروں کا زیاں منظور نہیں

We should agree to suffer loss but not let others suffer it.

This is the lesson the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم gave us.

Sahabah's self-sacrifice

The Qur'an described sacrifice of the Ansar Companions رضى الله عنهم

يُؤْثِرُوْنَ عَلٰٓى اَنْفُسِهِمْ وَلَوْ كَانَ بِهِمْ خَصَاصَةٌ

Preferring them above themselves even though poverty was their lot. (al-Hashr, 59:9)

Some travellers came to the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم once. They were hard-pressed. At such times, the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم would tell his Companions رضى الله عنهم that some poverty-stricken guests had come. Those who could might serve the guests with meals.

Example of a sahabi

When he heard the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم a sahabi took one of the guests to his house. His wife confided to him that they did not have enough food for three of them. Either they would eat or their guest, but not all of them. So, he suggested to his wife that she should place the food before the guest and blow out the lantern. She obeyed the instructions and the Sahabi sat down with his guest but though he moved his hand from the platter to his mouth, he did not eat anything. The guest was

www.ropeofsunnah.com

under the impression that he ate with him. Thus, the couple and their children slept hungry having fed the guest. Allah was pleased with them and revealed a verse about them:

يُؤْثِرُونَ عَلَىٰ أَنفُسِهِمْ وَلَوْ كَانَ بِهِمْ خَصَاصَةٌ

Preferring them above themselves even though poverty was their lot. (Al-Hashar, 59:9)

They preferred to go hungry but made sure that their guest was comfortable. This was their sacrifice.

Meaning of self-sacrifice

Accordingly, self-sacrifice is to endure some hardship but let a fellow Muslim be pleased at heart. He whom Allah grants this characteristic is really granted such a savor of faith that every other pleasure of the world is nothing before it. When a man endures hardship so that his Muslim brother might have a smile on his face then that is more pleasing to him than every other pleasure in the world. No one can say how long he would live. People die suddenly. So, why not practice self-sacrifice. Once that is done, Allah blesses people with love in their hearts for each other and He bestows His favours on those who practice self-sacrifice.

How a person was forgiven

We learn from a Hadith that a man from an earlier Ummah died and was brought before Allah. His Record of Deeds did not show any worthwhile worship. Allah asked the angel responsible over the Record of Deeds whether he had any pious deed in his record. The angel said, "He has no piety worth mention except that when he bought something he did not haggle with the seller. When the seller quoted a price, he asked for a discount and paid the discounted price."

سهلًا اذا باع، سهلًا اذا اشترى

Similarly, he was mild when he sold his merchandise. He never argued that his price was not negotiable, but reduced it for a poor buyer. Also, when he saw that his debtor was hard-pressed, he wrote-off the debt. Allah said, "If he forgave My slaves their debts then I am more liable to forgive him. So, I forgive him."

Thus, the grounds on which he was forgiven was his self-sacrifice.

Eliminate selfishness

Any way, we saw that Haji Imdadullah رحمة الله prescribed that we should rid ourselves of arrogance and develop an attitude of self-sacrifice. In this way, we will be free from discord. As for selfishness, it is the opposite of self-sacrifice. A man who is selfish is ever engrossed in his own little world always contemplating how to amass his ambitions.

The opposite of 'humbleness' is 'arrogance'. If a man gives up arrogance and selfishness and adopts humbleness and self-sacrifice then unity and love will be established, Insha Allah. So, let everyone resolve to do it. This is the deed that Haji Imdadullah رحمة الله prescribed.

One standard

The other thing that the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said in the Hadith is really the base of all good manners. If we develop it then all bickerings will end. That other thing is:

أحب لاخيك ما تحب لنفسك

واكره لاخيك ماتكره لنفسك

Love for your brother what you love for yourself and detest for your brother that which you detest for yourself.

Therefore, whenever we deal with anyone, we must place ourselves in his place and think how we would react if we were treated as we treat him. What would we like? Then, we must opt to deal with him in the light of our conclusion and do for him what we would have him do to ourselves. This is the best standard to deal with others.

Remove double standards

It is a malady with us that we have set up two standards,one for us and another for others. We do not like the same thing for other people as we like for ourselves.

However, if all of us abide by the instruction of the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم and choose for our brother what we choose for ourselves then there would be no discord because everyone www.pleofsunnah.com

will abstain from doing what hurts other people.

We conclude by repeating that these are some principles for promoting unity and harmony among ourselves. May Allah through His benevolence enable us to understand these things and to conduct ourselves accordingly. Aameen.

In part I, we have read the sayings of the Prophet صلی اللّٰہ علیه وسلم concerning remedies for disunity among Muslims. This is another Hadith of the Prophet صلی اللّٰہ علیه وسلم.

Sayyidina Ibn Umar رضی اللّٰہ عنه reported that the Prophet صلی اللّٰہ علیه وسلم said:

There is a Muslim who keeps away from other people, stay in a mosque or a Madrassah or a place of worship so that he may not have to deal with them. There is another Muslim who has not chosen solitude but mixes freely with the people. He meets them, has a relationship and friendship with them. He deals with them. As a result he faces hardship at their hands but he endures them patiently. This other Muslim who mixes with people and shows patience on their excesses is many times better than the Muslim who keeps away from other people so that he is not called upon to show patience on hardship. (Tirmidhi, 55:2507)

www.peopleofsunnah.com

No monasticism in Islam

As we know, Islam does not advocate monasticism as Christianity does. The Christians believe that nearness to God can only be achieved when man gives up all his worldly engagements and takes up a monastic life. But, the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم taught us that we must keep constant contact with people and bear with patience the hardships they cause.

Hardship from staying together

Ponder over this interesting teaching. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has mentioned the two things together: keeping company of people and enduring their excesses. This shows that the two things are complementary and corollary to one another. When you meet people, you will also face hardship, even when they are your close relatives or friends. Why is that?

Allah's perfect power seen in man's face

The answer lies in the creation of man. From the creation of Sayyidina Aadam عليه السلام till today, Allah has created billions upon billions of people and the creation will continue till the Last Day. He has given a face to every man which is no bigger than a span and has eyes, nose, mouth, teeth, ears, cheeks and chin but no two faces are alike in all respects. Every face is different from the other. The difference is seen not only among those who are already created but will persist also among those who will be created. It is not that one of the future creation will have the features of one created in the past. The features enable the looker to distinguish one man from the other.

Nature demonstrated in colour

Further, it is a demonstration of Allah's power that mankind is divided into different races. In each race there is a common factor and a distinguishing factor. The former makes the race distinct from other races while the later distinguishes every member of that race from the other. Indeed, man cannot comprehend Allah's power.

Fingerprints

The fingerprints of no two men are the same. They are, therefore, used for identification and a thumb impression is like the signature of a man. The lines on it differ from person to person. A cursory look will not detect difference on thumbs of two men but this is a universally accepted fact that there is a wide difference in every two thumb impressions.

What experts can do

Experts on thumb impression assure us that from an enlarged thumb impression they can describe its owner from head to toe. The lines disclose to them all his features even his eyes, his teeth, etc.

Allah can recreate lines on the thumb

My father رحمه الله told us that there is a verse in surah al-Qiyamah in which Allah says about the disbelivers:

اَيَحْسَبُ الْاِنْسَانُ اَلَّنْ نَّجْمَعَ عِظَامَهٗ ○ بَلٰى قٰدِرِيْنَ عَلٰٓى اَنْ نُّسَوِّيَ بَنَانَهٗ ○ (سورة القيامة: آيت ٣-٤)

Does man think that we shall not gather his bones? Yea, we are Able to restore his very fingertips. (al-Qiyamah, 75:3-4)

The disbelievers used to ask, "After we die and rot and turn into dust, then how will we be resurrected? Who will do it?"

In the above verse, Allah tells them that He will restore them to life. No one else can.

Embraces Islam on this verse

Allah could have said that He was Able to restore the face, hands or feet, but He mentioned the fingertips particularly.

My father رحمه الله disclosed to us that a scientist became a Muslim on reading this verse. He said, "No body but the creator could have said this thing." Only He who has created every limb of man can say that.

www.freepdfofislam.com

Allah's perfect ability

As we said, no two people are alike. If any two look alike then that is surprising but not if they are unalike. Truly, it would not have been surprising if all men were alike and we should be surprised at their being different. It is Allah's perfect Ability that is reflected in dissimilarity of every person though the races are identified and man is discerned from a woman.

Temperaments differ

Just as faces of every two men differ, their temperaments also differ. Their tastes differ as also their likes and dislikes.

Hence, if two men are together, it can never be that they will not cause inconvenience to one another or one will not hurt the other. They may hurt one another physically, spiritually, psychologically. They are likely to do something that hurts the other.

Sahabah's رضی اللہ عنہم temperaments differed

The Companions رضی اللہ عنہم are the most excellent creatures in this universe after the Prophets علیہم السلام. Next to the noble Prophets علیہم السلام, there is no one more God-fearing, pious, righteous, self sacrificing than them and there will not be any. In spite of that, they were temperamentally unalike each other.

Disagreement between the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم and His wives رضی اللہ عنہن

No wife on earth can match the Mothers of the Faithful in their care for their husband. The Mothers of the Faithful were very caring for their husband. However, they too encountered situations not in consonance with their temperament. Sometimes, the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم faced such moments with them and found that very trying. For instance, once he was so hurt that he swore that he would not go to them for a month.

Sayyidah Ayshah's رضی اللہ عنہا displeasure

Sometimes, it was his holy wives who were hurt on his account. Once the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم said to Sayyidah Ayshah رضی اللہ عنہا "O Ayshah! I am able to tell when you are pleased and when displeased." She asked, "How is that?" He said, "When you are pleased with me, you take your oath و رب محمد 'By the Lord of Muhammad, but when you are displeased with me, you say و رب ابراهیم 'By the Lord of Ibrahim." She submitted.

لا اهجر الا اسمك یا رسول اللہ

"O Messenger of Allah, at such times, I do not leave but your name, for, your love continues to remain in my heart."

Ponder over it! Who can be more compassionate and kind than the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم particularly with Sayyidah Ayshah رضی اللہ عنہا. His love for her is not unknown to everyone. In spite of that, she had occasion to complain against him. He was not unaware of her displeasure when that occured.

Displeasure as husband and wife

Let no one say that because to hurt the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم is an act of disbelief, therefore Sayyidah Ayshah رضی اللہ عنہا committed a grave mistake. The truth is that Allah has divided life into different levels and the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم felt hurt by her in his capacity as a husband. Just as a wife takes pride on her husband, so too a husband takes pride on his wife, in certain situations, they do feel displeased with one another. This does not relate to his capacity as Prophet.

Variation in temperament of Abu Bakr رضی اللہ عنہ and Umar رضی اللہ عنہ

So, as we have seen, temperament differences did mark the lives of the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم and his wives as, indeed, it did the lives of the two shaykhs, Sayyidina Abu Bakr رضی اللہ عنہ and Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ. These two men are the most excellent on earth after the Prophets علیہ السلام. As for their relationship with the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم the Companions رضی اللہ عنہم said that the names of these two men were always taken together. "We would say:

Abu Bakr and Umar came,	جاء ابوبکرؓ و عمرؓ
Abu Bakr and Umar went,	ذهب ابوبکرؓ و عمرؓ
Abu Bakr and Umar came out.	خرج ابوبکرؓ و عمرؓ

They were like one life, two hearts. Whenever the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم wished to get advice, he would summon both of them. No one ever imagined of them as being separated.

Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ showed great respect to Sayyidina Abu Bakr رضی اللہ عنہ. Once he said to Abu Bakr رضی اللہ عنہ, "Take away all the worship in my life and every deed, but give me the one night you spent with the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم in the cave Thawr." They were so very close to one another, yet their temperaments were different so that sometimes it surfaced.

An example of disagreement between them

It is stated in a Hadith that they were conversing one day. Sayyidina Abu Bakr رضی اللہ عنہ said something which displeased Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ. He walked away and Sayyidina Abu Bakr رضی اللہ عنہ followed him, trying to pacify him and strike a compromise with him. Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ entered his house and shut the door behind him. When Sayyidina Abu Bakr رضی اللہ عنہ realized that he was very angry, he went to the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم who read the story on his face or was informed of it through wahy (revelation). Thus, when he was yet approaching the Prophet's صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم assembly, the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم told his Sahabah sitting there. "your friend has had a quarrel with someone today." He came and sat down in the assembly.

On the other side, Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ went into his house after shutting the door but when he was alone and sat down, he felt ashamed and repented for having been angry and having shut the door on his friend's face. He came out looking for Abu Bakr رضی اللہ عنہ till he too came to the Prophet's صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم assembly and found him there. Here, he declared that he was ashamed and felt sorry. He said, "O Messenger of Allah, I have committed a mistake." Sayyidina Abu Bakr رضی اللہ عنہ interrupted, "O Messenger of Allah, I have been wrong more than he was. Please do forgive him, for, I am the one who is wrong."The Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم turned to Sayyidina Umar رضی اللہ عنہ and the other Companions رضی اللہ عنہم and spoke some very precious words. He said, "will you or will you not leave my companion for me? When I had said:

يٰٓاَيُّهَا النَّاسُ اِنِّىْ رَسُوْلُ اللّٰهِ اِلَيْكُمْ جَمِيْعًا

O mankind! Surely I am the Messenger of Allah to you all,

(Al Araf 7:158)

All of you said كَذِبْتَ (you lie) but he was the only one who said "صدقت" (you speak the truth).

In short, these great men were mentioned together in the Prophets's assembly. Their natures were different and such incidents did occur in their lives.

Differences in temperament is natural

It is clear from this account that there are no two people who have identical temperament. No one will be exactly as the other expects him to be. Even a son cannot be expected to be exactly as his father likes to be. If a husband expects his wife to turn out exactly as he wishes then that cannot happen, neither can a husband turn out to be exactly as his wife expects him to be.

Unless you are patient, you will fight

Clearly, if you live with other people you will face hardship. It is natural that if you live among people you will face difficulty and you cannot separate these things. You will have to endure that patiently otherwise there will be fighting, quarreling, mischief and disorder. These things are shavers of religion.

We must realize beforehand that in every kind of relationship there will be such moments. The relationship could be between friends or spouses but one will face hardship at the hands of the other. We will have to exercise patience and not turn the experience into a permanent means of hatred. There might be a short displeasure but it should not be turned into an everlasting disunity.

How to avoid hardship

If we must expect hardship from other people, how should we reconcile ourselves to it? How may we keep away from it? And how may we develop mutual love? The Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم, who has not left behind anything unanswered, prescribed a remedy for these situations. He spoke about relations between spouses because this is the relationship most likely to see clash of temperament. The more people are close to one another, the greater the possibility of unpleasantness. The nearness enjoyed by the spouses is not known in any other relationship. Since a person is more liable to face hardship in www.sirat-e-mustaqeem.net

this bond than in any other, the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم prescribed a remedy for that. He said:

لا يفرك مؤمن مؤمنة ان سخط منها خلقًا رضى منها اخر۔

(صحیح مسلم، کتاب الرضاع، باب الوصیة بالنساء)

Let no believing man bear malice to a believing woman-meaning, no husband must detest his wife continuously-because, if he does not like any thing in her then surely there is something in her that he likes. (This Hadith is found in Saheeh Muslim, kitab ar-Ridaa, chapter al-wasiyah bin nisa.)

When a wife does something with which the husband is displeased, He must not let his displeasure take firm root in him and criticise her for several faults. Rather, he must look at her good points too. If he does that, his anger will subside.

Look only at the good thing

No one in the world is black from head to toe, or white from head to toe. No one is good in every way and no one bad or evil in all ways. If a man is wicked, he has some goodness in him, surely. There is some wickedness at least in a man who is good. So the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said, "Look at the good qualities of your wife. As a result she will look good to you in spite of something that you do not like." You will then become patient.

An interesting case

Some one complained to the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم about his wife. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم cured this man of his complaining nature when he suggested to him that if she was as bad as he said then he should divorce her. The man was taken aback at that for he could not part with her, so he said to the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم that he could not live without her. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم then advised him to keep her and overlook her faults and try to correct her shortcomings.

What does she do for you

Why did the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم advised the man straightaway that he should divorce her? The reason is that this man had in his mind only the faults of his wife and he had come to believe that she was very bad. He did not at all look at her good points. So the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم asked him to take the last step. On hearing that, he realized that she helped him in many ways by performing several household chores and she was very beneficial to him. If he were to divorce her then he would be the loser and would find it difficult to carry on. So, he appealed to the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم, "I cannot live without her!" So," said the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم, "keep her!"

If you look at the evil

It is a fact that if one looks at another's evil and begins to think of him as evil then he cannot see his good qualities. Hence, think of that which is good in him. You will begin to like him and feel safe. You will realize that though things do occur against your temperament yet you learn to tolerate them.

You might be wrong

It is not necessary always that the other person whom you think is on the wrong side is really wrong. You could be on the wrong side. Either one could be wrong.

One person may like some food which the other does not relish. When that is served and the two are at the meal, one will praise it while the other will find it difficult to swallow. So, none of them is wrong. Their temperaments differ and both are right.

Both are right

Therefore, when two people differ on something that is lawful, we cannot say that one of them is wrong. Every two people, including husband and wife, differ on something or the other. The difference is more marked in the two sexes because man and woman are created on different nature and psychology. Each of them thinks according to the nature on which they are created. That is why the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said, "Do not look at her shortcomings only. Look also at her good qualities."

You might break her

The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has compared women to a rib. He said:

المرأة كالضلع، ان اقمتها كسرتها، و ان استمتعت بها، استمتعت

www.peopleofsunnah.com

بها و فيها عوج - (بخاری کتاب النکاح، باب المداراة مع النساء)

A woman is like a rib. If you try to straighten her, you will break her. But, if you leave her at her condition then though she looks crooked to you yet you can benefit from her.
(Bukhari, Kitab an Nikah, Madarat Ma'nisa)

Her beauty lies in her crookedness

Some men allege that by calling her crooked, the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has blamed her and they use that saying to condemn her. When they quarrel with their wives, they threaten her "O crooked rib, I will straighten you." However, these people forget that the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has described the rib as crooked. If a rib is not crooked but straight then that will not be a rib. Its beauty and soundness lies in its crookedness. If it is straight then the rib is unhealthy.

Crookedness is in the viewer

The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has explained through this saying that to be crooked or to be straight is an external characteristic. It depends how you see it, for, from one angle, it would seem to be straight, but, from another it looks crooked. If we look at a street from the window of a mosque across it then the street seems to be crooked and winding, but if we stand on the street itself and look at it then it is straight while the mosque will seem to be diagonal. In fact, both the street and the mosque are straight. The same thing can be crooked from one point of view but straight from the other.

Woman's crookedness is natural

The Message is simple; because your nature is different from the woman, she is crooked in your eyes. The fact however is that the crookedness is part of her nature in the same way as a rib is crooked. If a rib is straight then that is defective and surgeons would try to mend it to its original crooked structure. Thus, this Hadith does not describe a woman's fault but emphasizes that from your point of view she is not straight and you should not try to straighten her. If you try then it would be like trying to straighten a rib which would then break. If you let it be as it is, it will be to your advantage.

An old woman and an eagle

In an Arabic beginner's text book, Mufeed ut-Taalibeen there is a story of a king's eagle that flew to an old woman's house. She tamed it but observed that its beak and claws were crooked. She felt pity for it and wondered that the poor thing was finding it difficult to eat and to walk. She decided to set things right, and armed with a pair of scissors, she operated upon the eagle's beak and claws. The bird was naturally injured and bled profusely. It became handicapped and could no more walk.

This is an example of misplaced love - a love without intelligent thinking. She did not realize that those things which she called crooked were part of the eagle's nature, its built.

Will never see peace

We see throughout this writing that when two people are together, differences in temperament will surely come to the surface. Each will be troubled by the other. There are two ways out for them. One is to quarrel and become disunited which will take away their peace of mind forever.

Show patience

The second way out is to realize that there is bound to be some hardship in every relationship because of variation in temperament of every two people. They should show patience. Life is fleeting and one day, they will face death. It is natural to feel angry when one's companion hurts one, but patience has to be exercised.

What will you gain

A man must think what he would gain if he displays his anger and teaches the other man a lesson of his life. He would not gain anything but there would be enmity all round. It would be very difficult to check it later on: rather, it would spread and intensify. Also, he would become answerable on the Day of Resurrection and face punishment. That punishment would be more terrible than the hardship he faces in the world. Hence, he must show patience and leave the matter to Allah's hands.

www.peaceofsunnah.com

Reward for patience

If he shows patience, Allah has promised him a reward.

إِنَّمَا يُوَفَّى الصَّابِرُونَ أَجْرَهُم بِغَيْرِ حِسَابٍ O (سورة الزمر، آيت ١٠)

Truly the persevering will be paid their reward in full without reckoning. (az-zumar, 39:10)

The reward is unlimited. Our numbers are limited but Allah has not mentioned a number. He said that patience is rewarded beyond limit.

If someone strikes you with a blow and you also give him a blow then you were right to do that, but what did you gain? If you show patience and do not avenge yourself then you have Allah's promise that He will reward you without reckoning. So, you must swallow your anger at the thought of the reward that awaits you.

What do you gain by retaliating

If someone else causes you hardship then Shari'ah has allowed you to prevent him doing that as far as it is possible for you to prevent him. But, you are wasting your time in this way. Suppose some person tells you that a certain man backbited you then you will waste your time in confirming his statement and asking other people although if he had not told you then you would never have known and it would never have made a difference to you. Even after you have obtained your information, what do you gain? But, if you had left it to Allah then what other people say about you does not change you in any away.

خلقے پس او دیوانہ و دیوانہ بکارے

If all creatures call me evil, let them do it. My case rests with Allah.

This entitles you to unlimited reward.

Equal retaliation

However, if you insist on avenging your self then how will you ensure that you do not commit excess in seizing revenge. You must cause him equal hardship, not more than what he has caused you; you should not exceed even the least bit otherwise you will be answerable in the Hereafter. Though a man has a right to avenge himself, using this right is very risky. If, on the other hand, you forgive then you are worthy of unlimited reward. Allah has said:

وَلَئِن صَبَرْتُمْ لَهُوَ خَيْرٌ لِّلصَّابِرِينَ O (سورة النحل، آيت ١٢٦)

But if you endure patiently, that is certainly better for the persevering. (An-Nahl, 16:126)

Summary

If a man intermingle with other people, he will find it taxing, difficult and troublesome. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has prescribed patience to tackle this situation. Pay heed! If everyone follows this prescription then there no more would be discord in the world. Mischief would be eliminated.

May Allah enable me and all of us to observe this prescription Aameen!

CAUSES OF DISUNITY AND THE REMEDY -III[1]

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ

Enduring patiently hardship

We have read in the previous part that disunity, severe disagreement and mutual hatred are a very serious malady afflicting Muslim society. The Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم has offered many instructions to the Muslims to protect themselves from this malady and to create mutual love and fraternity among them. One of his instructions is recorded in the previous part. He said that if anyone moves about with other people and exhibits perseverance on the hardship that he faces then he is much better than one who mixes not with people and so has no opportunity to exercise patience on hardship that would otherwise have come upon him from people.

This shows that the main reason for mutual discord and disharmony is lack of patience. When people live together, they are bound to face some difficulty from each other's actions. They must endure that with patience.

The most patient being

In order to lay emphasis on this instruction, the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم have said in the above Hadith which is reported by Sayyidina Abu Musa al Ash'ari رضى الله عنه: The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said, "None is more patient than Allah against the annoyance of the people who say that He has a son." The Christians and the Jews who ascribe Eesa عليه السلام and Uzayr عليه السلام as His sons, the polytheists who call the angels as His daughters, and so on. They also worship stones, idols, animals etc. He created mankind and informed the angels that He was placing man on earth as His vicegerent. The same man then ascribes partners to Allah.

Allah's perseverance

Allah knows about this, yet He has given security to mankind. He provides them sustenance. If we look around, there are majority of the disbelievers and polytheists in this world as there always has been. In fact, the Qur'an says:

وَإِنْ تُطِعْ أَكْثَرَ مَنْ فِي الْأَرْضِ يُضِلُّوكَ عَنْ سَبِيلِ اللَّهِ (الانعام:١١٦)

And if you obey most of those on earth they would lead you astray from Allah's way. (Al-An'am, 6:116)

Most of mankind are involved in disbelief, polytheism and immodesty.

Consequences of submitting to democracy

Everyone calls out for democracy and submission to majority opinion. If we accept that then disbelief is correct but Islam is wrong. May Allah forgive us! Not only are there more disbelievers and polytheists in this world but also of those who are called Muslims and who believe in Allah's unity and the Messengership of Sayyidina Muhammad صلى الله عليه وسلم and the Hereafter--, there are very few who adhere strictly to Shari'ah while those who mindlessly walk the path of sin and indecency form a majority.

Kindness to disbelievers

People commit disbelief, polytheism, sin and indecency on earth but inspite of that, Allah who sees all this, provides and sustains them, gives them security and showers His favours on them. This reflects His Clemency and perseverence. Who is there who endures annoyance more than Allah does? Shaykh Sa'di رحمة الله has said:

بر خوان یغما چه دشمن چه دوست

"The dining mat that Allah has spread in the world for sustenance is available equally to friend and foe, everyone."

He feeds the friend as well as His foe. In fact, He sometimes gives a greater share to the enemy. The disbelievers and the polytheists have more wealth while Muslims sometimes suffer hunger and poverty. Though He hears them, Allah is kind to them and gives them security and provision.

Grow in yourself Allah's character

Observe Allah's Clemency and conduct yourself on this saying of the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم:

تخلّقوا بأخلاق الله

Conduct yourself with Allah's manners.

You will not get all of them but you should try to get them. When you see that Allah patiently endures the annoying behaviour of the wicked, you - O servants of Allah-you, too should endure patiently the difficulties and trouble placed upon you by other people.

Do not take revenge

Someone may say that Allah does give His foes respite in this world and gives them provision and security and allows them to progress but He will nevertheless punish them in the Hereafter. Then, you too must do likewise and endure patiently if anyone troubles you. Leave the matter for Allah. He will do justice in the Hereafter. If you retaliate in this world then that is not as effective as the one Allah will seek in the Hereafter.

Better to forgive

It is better for you, in any case, that you forgive him who commits excess against you. For, if you forgive then Allah will suffice you and He will fulfil your needs. He will remove every hardship that you face. Hence, the slaves of Allah always forgive. We have heard from our elders about Miyanji Noor Muhammad رحمة الله the Shaykh of Haji Imdadullah رحمة الله and of our grand father. It was his habit that whenever anyone caused him trouble, he would say, "O Allah, I have forgiven him. "Even if a thief took away his property, he would say," O Allah, I make what he has taken away from me lawful to him.. What shall I do by taking revenge from him or calling for punishment on him." He was ever occupied in Zikr (remembrance of Allah). When he went to buy something, he carried a pouch full of money which he handed over to the seller and asked him to take away his due from it. He never counted the money, for, he spent the time it would take him to count in making Zikr.

An incident in the life of Miyanji Noor Muhammad رحمة الله

Once, he passed through the market, his pouch was in his hand, when a robber came to know that he had the pouch in his hand. He came behind him stealthily and snatched the pouch from his hand, at the same time, making good his escape. Miyanji رحمة الله did not even turn to look who was that. He walked towards his home engaged, as ever, in zikr and he also prayed in his heart,

> "O Allah, I have forgiven the robber and made over to him a gift of what he has taken away."

The robber, on his part, got entangled in a difficulty. He could not find the way to his home. He took street after street but always came back to the same point. He spent exasperating hours in this way and, finally exhausted, he sat down. He thought to himself that this was a wonder of Miyanji رحمة الله and Allah has closed every path on him. He thought, "I should go to Miyanji رحمة الله return the money to him and request him to pray to Allah that he may show me the path to my house and release me from the torment." He went there and knocked at the door. Miyanji رحمة الله asked him who he was and he disclosed his identity, saying "I had snatched your money. For God's sake take it back. I made a mistake." Miyanji said, "I have made this money lawful for you and gifted to you. It is no longer mine. I cannot take it back." The robber pleaded "For God's sake take it back!"

The two were arguing over it. The robber requesting him to take back the money and Miyanji asserting that it was his (the robber's).

Miyanji رحمة الله asked him finally why he wanted to return the money. He said, "I want to go home but cannot fmd the path. I have strayed through these streets for hours." Miyanji said, "Well I will pray that you find your way." So, he prayed and the robber returned to his home.

Do not bear malice for anyone

These men of Allah never bear malice for anyone, even those who hurt them. Their heart is like a mirror that has no stain of hatred, malice, or enmity.

Let Allah take account

They forgave for Allah's sake whoever annoyed them. If they had to seek revenge, they left that to Allah. If they were to take revenge themselves then that would lead to disputes and quarrels, for they might have taken more revenge then they should have. If they overstep then they would have to suffer in the next world. So, it is best to leave things to Allah.

Everyone must fulfill his duties

Nevertheless, we must know that Allah and His messenger always call us towards our duties-what we have to do, how it is to be done. Thus, one who is harassed is instructed to show patience and to forgive; do not seek revenge, do not hate, do not antagonise and do not turn the annoyance into disunity and rebellion.

At the same time, the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has addressed the harassers too, lest they do not imagine that it was not wrong to harass.

Do not annoy anyone

In fact, Allah has said to such people who annoy others that He will not forgive them till the person annoyed pardons them. So refrain from annoying anyone. Do not do anything that hurts other people.

The chief justice offered two hundred raka'at every day

Imam Abu Yusuf رحمة الله was a student of Imam Abu Hanifah and a great jurist. While he is well-known as a jurist, he is not as known as a waliullah (friend of Allah). However, it is recorded in his account that when he was the Chief Justice, in spite of his heavy engagements, he offered two hundred raka'at optional salah every day. When he was on his death bed, signs of worry and anxiety were detected on his face. He was asked what caused him worry. He said, "The time is near when I will be before Allah. I will have to answer to Him for my deeds. What will I say? I know that I have made istighfaar and repented to Him and I am hopeful that He will forgive me."

An injustice I committed

"However, I remember an incident for which I am much anxious. When I was the Judge, a case came to me involving a Muslim and a non-Muslim. I had made the Muslim sit on a respectable place and the non-Muslim on a lesser seat, but Shari'ah requires us to make both parties sit in equal position. It is unjust to differentiate in their seating. Although, I did decide according to the truth yet I did not observe the command of Shari'ah in arranging their seating. I am anxious how I will explain this if called upon to explain. This is what is not forgiven by repentance till the owner of the right forgives."

The real Muslim

Shari'ah has allowed rights not only to Muslims but also to nonMuslims. It has given rights to animals also. We are told in Ahadith of many people being punished for cruelty to animals.

We are told and warned not to cause anyone even the least of annoyance. For instance, a Hadith tells us:

المسلم من سلم المسلمون من لسانه و يده

(بخاری، کتاب الایمان، باب المسلم من سلم المسلمون من لسانه)

A Muslim is one from whose tongue and hands other Muslims are safe. (Bukhari, Kitab al-Eman)

To hurt anyone is a very dangerous thing, for, there is no way it can be forgiven unless the owner of the right himself forgives.

On the one hand, every human being is cautioned no to hurt or cause inconvenience to anyone. And, on the other, they are told to endure every annoyance with patience and to forgive the wrong-doer. They are instructed not to hate or bear animosity to any one. They should not let it turn into discord.

These are the Prophet's صلى الله عليه وسلم teachings.

Prophet's method of training

We learn from Ahadith that when the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم liberated Makkah with ten thousand Sahabah, his Sahabah included both the Ansar and the Muhajir. Then they conquered Hunayn. In this journey the Muslims got a large quantity of spoils of war, much of that in the form of cattle. In those times wealth generally consisted of cattle and the more livestock one had the more wealthy he was considered.

Spoils to new Muslims

When the spoils were to be distributed, the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم sensed that those who were new Muslims and those who had not yet become Muslims but were inclined to it could be turned into staunch Muslims if they were shown kind treatment. After that they would not conspire against the Muslim. So, he distributed all the spoils among those people.

Hypocrites incite others

One of the hypocrites incited an Ansar sahabi telling him, "See, how you people are treated. You have come from Madinah and support the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم in jihad but the spoils are given to those who have just embraced Islam, the very people you were fighting against." The experienced among the Ansar did not pay heed to the provocative suggestion knowing the insignificance of wealth and property.

However, the younger Ansar Sahabah رضى الله عنهم did take him seriously and wondered why they got no share.

The Prophet's صلى الله عليه وسلم wise speech

When He صلى الله عليه وسلم learnt of this, he asked all the Ansar Companions رضی اللہ عنہم to assemble at a place. He addressed them and said:

"O assembly of Ansar! Allah granted you the wealth of faith. He honoured you as hosts of His Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم I have distributed the spoils of war to the people who live here so that they may become firm of faith. How many times has it been that he whom I give no share is more honourable and dearer than he to whom I give a share of the spoils. I have heard of doubts being expressed by some people."

He then said:

"O Ansar! Are you not happy that when these people return to their homes, they have with them cows, oxen and goats while you go home and you have Muhammad, the Messenger of Allah, with you! Tell me who is more excellent of the two?"

Those who heard him were convinced at heart. The Ansar Sahabah said,

"O Messenger of Allah, there is nothing more honourable to us than this. It was some of our youth who had spoken in that way but our elders did not even think of that. Whatever you decide that is the truth."

The nearest to the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم

When this thing was settled, the Ansar Sahabah رضی اللہ عنہم were told by the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم, "Listen, O Ansar, you are the closest of men to me." And he also said:

لَوْ سَلَكَ النَّاسُ وَادِيًا لَسَلَكْتُ شِعْبَ الْأَنْصَارِ

"If people take one road and the Ansar another, I will take the path of the Ansar."

The ansar were advised to be patient

The Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم said to them, further:

"O Ansar! So far you have not been treated unfairly and I will continue to love you as always, Insha Allah. But, let me tell you that after me, you will find that other people are given preference over you - the rulers who will come will not treat you as well as they treat the Muhajir and others.

O Ansar! I instruct you that if that happens

فَاصْبِرُوْا حَتّٰى تَلْقَوْنِيْ عَلَى الْحَوْضِ

Show patience till you meet me at the Pond.

Thus, he forewarned them of the injustice that would be perpetrated on them. He advised them to be patient when that happens.

They abided by the instruction

The Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم did not advise them to form a society for the protection of their rights and to fight for that. Rather, he asked them to show patience till they meet him at the pond al-kawthar.

Hence, the Ansar abided by the advise so well that we do not find a single example m history of their rebellion. There were disagreements among the Sahabah resulting in the Battles of Jamal and Safeen, but the Ansar never raised their voice.

Heed the rights of the ansar

While he advised the Ansar in this manner, the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم also gave certain instructions to all his Companions رضی اللہ عنہم when he was ill before death and could not go to the Masjid Nabawi. One of these instructions was, "The Ansar Sahabah have supported me and have been firm believers. So, be mindful of their rights. Let them not feel mistreated."

Everyone must discharge his duty

The gist of this teaching is that everyone must see what his duties are. What is demanded of him in this regard? Does he fulfil his responsibilities and the demands on him or not? If everyone is careful to fulfil his duties and to do what Allah demands of him then everyone will get his rights.

Everyone demands his rights

However, today, we are going in reverse direction. People are taught to stand up and demand their rights. The result is that no one is mindful of his duties and of the demands on him. He does not know what rights others have over him. The labourer wants his rights as does the employer, but neither of them is ready to discharge his duty. The labourer is quick to quote the Hadith that a labourer must be paid his wages before his perspiration dries up but he does not mind if he did not do enough of his task to make him perspire. He does not care if he has done the task for which he claims his wages.

www.peopleofsunnah.com

Let everyone examine himself

So, let everyone examine himself. He should see if he discharges his duty correctly.

If a man serves in an office, he is worried about a raise in salary, a higher grade and elevation in seniority. It does not concern him; however, if he discharges his responsibilities or not.

The result is that everyone's rights are violated and no one gets what is due to him. This is why the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم remimded everyone of his duties and instructed him to observe them. This is the only way in which our society can be steered towards reform.

Summary

To summarise, the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم is quoted in this Hadith to have said that no one is more compassionate and patient than Allah. He watches the people who disobey and who disbelieve and associate partners with Him. Inspite of that, He is patient and continues to let them have security and sustenance.

So, develop this manner of Allah and try to conduct yourself accordingly.

May Allah cause us to abide by what we have read. Aameen!

Another cause

Of the causes of disharmony among our peoples is disregard for yet another command of Shari'ah. It is:

"تعاشروا كالاخوان ـ تعاملوا كالاجانب"

Live as brothers of each other (and treat each other like brothers with love), but when you transact with each other do it as between strangers (let your dealings be transparent and explicit leaving no doubt whatever).

This is a great teaching of the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم.

Property should be well-defined

The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said that every thing of the Muslims should be clear and well explained. Properties should be well-defined and everyone's ownership must be made

---

[1] Venue: Jami' Masjid Baitul-Mukarram, Gulshan-e-Iqbal, Karachi.

www.peopleofsunnah.com

known. Today, we come across a growing number of disputes in our society because this command of Shari'ah is disregarded.

Partnership of father and son

For instance, a man may be engaged in business. When his sons grow old, they join him but it is not clearly defined whether he has taken them as partners in his business or they just help him out, or they are employed by him and their salaries are agreed upon. If nothing is decided then everything is in the dark. Each of them draws money as and when they need it. This goes on for years together. All the man's sons did not join business at one time and all do not do one kind of work.

Not only this they keep no account, they also do not make it clear who the proprietor is, and what their shares are. Neither is salary of each of them determined. If anyone suggests to them that they should keep an account, they declare that no such thing is necessary between family members. This is an expression of love on one side.

Disputes arise

However, when some more years pass in this way, the sons are married and have children or the father dies, the brothers quarrel. The love among them vanishes. They accuse each other. The mutual quarrels are unending and things become very complicated, the brothers stop speaking to each other and are prepared to die or kill. Finally, they come to a mufti for advice and a solution. But, what can he do?

Keep transparency

The disputes arose because a command of Shari'ah was disregarded. It calls for a clearly defined dealings whether between father and son between brothers or between the spouses. Everyone's property and share must be defined clearly. The life that we spend with out keeping an account is a life of sin, for, no one knows about that which he withdraws whether it is his own or someone else's.

Disburse the legacy immediately

The Shari'ah has commanded us that when someone dies we must distribute the inheritance to his heirs without delay.

Everyone must be given the share Shari'ah has apportioned for him. When my father رحمہ اللہ died, Doctor Abdul Hayyi رحمہ اللہ visited us to offer condolence while the funeral was still there awaiting burial. The honourable doctor was unwell and very weak which condition was accentuated by the grief of my respected father's death. We had my father's medicine from a Hakim with us and we offered it to him, saying, "Do take a little. You will gain some strength."

He said, "It is no more proper for me to eat it because it is now the property of the heirs. Only if all of them consent will it be proper for me to eat it." We told him that all the heirs were adult, who were there at that moment and gave their consent. So, he took some of it.

Anyway, Allah has said that after someone's death, his inheritance must be distributed immediately among his heirs so that no dispute may arise later on.

Consequence of delay

However, we have become so ignorant that if anyone dies in our society and the heirs are advised to distribute the shares, they exclaim, "What a prepostrous suggestion. He has been just buried and you want us to share his wealth!" They regard that as a worldly affair and put it in abeyance. On the one side, they display a pious disgust for the hurry, but, on the other, they use the legacy together till they sit down many months later to distribute their shares and quarrel over it. Those who had shown disgust are prepared to shed blood, and they accuse each other of having consumed more of the dead man's wealth.

Ownership in household articles

Shari'ah has given this command so that ownership is determined. In our society, husband and wife simply do not know who owns what, and to which of the two does the jewellery belong. They do not know whether the house is the husband's or the wife's. The result is that later on there are disputes.

Caution of my father

When my respected father رحمہ اللہ was ill and on his death bed and restricted to his room, there was a cot in the room on which he did all his work. I had my small room next to my father's. When his food was brought to him in a tray, he would say immediately after eating his meal, "Take the utensils back quickly". If he needed a book from the Madrasah, he returned it immediately after he had read it. "Do not keep it here," he would say. If we ever were late in returning the utensils or the book, he would express displeasure. "why are you slow. Go return it forthwith."

We wondered how it could make a difference if we were late in returning the things by a few minutes. The answer was known on the day he addressed us, saying, "I have written down in my will that only that which is in my room belongs to me. Every thing in the house, I have given over ownership there of to my wife. Now, if there is anything in this room at the time of my death that does not belong to me, you will suppose that it is mine and place it with my legacy. Hence, I do not like that anything not belonging to me should remain here for long. Everything that comes from outside should be sent back at the quickest."

He was so mindful of defining every property that his things were known from those of his wife and children. There was, therefore, no dispute at all.

Even between brothers

When we give this advice to our acquaintances, they remark that this should be between strangers. But, in a few years these very people who had claimed intimacy, take up weapons against each other. Thus, one of the causes of disputes is failure to keep ownerships of every individual well marked.

Construction of house and proper accounts

Suppose a house is being built in which father and his sons have invested money. They may have borrowed some money. In this way, the house is built. However, it is not determined a forehand whether the sons have loaned the money to their father or have merely helped him. Or, is it that they put in their share of ownership as co-partners in the house.

When one of them dies, disputes arise on the ownership of the house. They claim their share in ownership of the house and the land on which it is built. They approach a mufti to decide for them but sometimes, there is some injustice in his decision because of unknown facts.

We must know that if a son works with his father in his business and his position as a partner or an employee is not specified then, according to Shari'ah, he may work all his life with his father, he will be understood to have helped his father merely for the sake of Allah. He will have no share what so ever in the business. Hence, it is wise to make a clarification beforehand.

How to gift a house

Shari'ah has also shown us how we may correctly make a distribution. It is not enough to say, "I have transferred my house to my wife's name," having registered it with the Registrar in her name. According to Shari'ah, no house is transferred to anyone simply by having it registered in his name till he is not handed over real possession and told, "I have given this house to your ownership. You are its owner." If this is not done, the ownership does not change.

Solution to problem lies in adherence to shari'ah

People do not know about these issues with a result that there is confusion and disputes arise. They go to courts with cases against each other. If people conduct themselves on Shari'ah in a proper way then more than fifty percent of the cases in the courts would be with drawn.

We have spoken of these disputes and quarrels which are between people who are well-meaning and have no evil intention. They do not whish to misappropriate anyone's property. They have come to this pass only because of their ignorance.

However, those people who are evil and have evil intentions who wish to appropriate other people's wealth unjustly, they are unconcerned with regulations of right and wrong.

Summary

This is a great mischief besetting our society. We must understand it well and explain it to all our acquaintances, relatives and friends.

Put things right once. Then deal with eachother with love. Everything must be clear and well-defined. Leave nothing www.maktabah.org

doubtful and unsaid.

May Allah cause us to conduct ourselves on these guidelines.

Ameen.

Another of the causes is found in the above Hadith of the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم.

Another cause of disunity

It is reported by Sayyidina Abdullah Ibn Abbas رضى الله عنه that the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said:

لا تمارِ اخاكَ و لا تمازحه و لا تعده موعدًا فتخلفه (ترمذي، كتاب البر والصلة، باب ما جاء في المراء)

The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has given three commands in this Hadith.

1: Do not quarrel with your brother.

2: Do not make an unreasonable jest with him.

3: Do not make a promise to him which you cannot fulfil.

Do not quarrel

This is the first command "لا تمار اخاك" the Arabic key word in this command is "لا تمار" do not quarrel. It is from "مـــراءٌ" the verbal noun. It is a word with a wide meaning: to dispute, debate, argue, physical fight, oral exchange of hot words.

Thus physical fighting, oral pouring down on someone and disputing are what hinder mutual harmony, unity and love among the Muslims. So, we must try our best to avoid these things.

Go to court when necessary

Sometimes a man finds it necessary to approach the court to redress his grievance. His rights have been violated and if he does not go to court, he would not be able to live peacefully. If it comes to extremes, then he may approach the courts as a last resort but otherwise he should try his best to refrain from disputes.

Do not debate

This guidance is particularly for those who pick faults in others and reject everything they say or do. It is part of their nature to debate with other people over an insignificant thing. We have become used to engage in unnecessary debate which has nothing to do with religion and is of no worldly worth. We will not be asked about it in the grave nor in the place of gathering in the next world. These unnecessary debates lead to disputes which divide us into sects and cause us to hate each other.

Disputes remove light of knowledge

Imam Maalik رحمة الله said:

المِـــــراء يذهب بنـــــور العلـــــم .

The disputes, debates wipe off the light of knowledge.

A person who engages in these things loses the light of knowledge. If you know the truth, convey it with a true method and true intention to the other person. If he accepts it that is good other wise leave it at that. You are not sent as a supervisor over him to compel him to accept your words. Explain the Truth gently but beyond that you are not responsible. You will not be asked to explain if people do not subscribe to what you say.

Your responsibility is to convey

In fact Allah has said:

مَا عَلَى الرَّسُوْلِ اِلَّا الْبَلَاغُ (سورة المائدة، آیت ۹۹)

The duty of the Messenger is only to convey (the message). (al-Ma'idah, 5: 99)

It is not for the Prophets صلى الله عليه وسلم to compel. Then why should you insist. Discuss matter to an extent but when you see that it is turning into a debate and your listener is unwilling to accept the truth then you should stop.

Do not complain

Some people are much inclined to complain to other people about their behaviour. They dig out past conduct and complain, "You did this. You said that," etc. Adding to that, they bracket their complaints with love, saying, "Only friends complain" (or something to the effect). They may be true in that but there is a limit to the complaints, it is understandable if they complain on something significant but to complain at every step is to transgress. For instance they grumble, "You did not invite me at your function," etc. Now, the man is with in his rights given to him by Shari'ah and he may, or may not, invite someone. No one has a right to complain for that. This thing leads to a counter-complain and a long debate and instead of love, enmity grows in the hearts.

Find an excuse for him

I can say from experience that this leads to serious disputes and disruption in a harmonious life of families. What you should do is forgive and forget. Put the matter in Allah's hand.

The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has often encouraged us to forgive others. If you forgive then you will not lose anything. Close your eyes to the affair and suggest to yourself an excuse for the other man's conduct.

Mufti Aziz ur-Rahman's رحمة الله example

Mufti Aziz ur-Rahman رحمة الله was the teacher of my respected father. He was the Grand Mufti at Darul-Uloom,

www.peaceofislam.com

Deoband. His rulings have been published in Urdu in ten volumes as Fatawa Darul-Uloom Deoband, an ocean of knowledge. He was a great man who never refuted anyone on his face, "You are wrong," but, if anyone said a wrong thing, he would say. "O! You mean to say...." And he put in the correct words there. In that way, the other man was told of the right thing, politely.

Let your heart be clean

So, you too find an explanation for the mistake of someone you know. Perhaps he was forced by circumstances, etc. and let your heart be clean for him. If you must complain then do it in mild words, "I did not like what you had said." If he gives an explanation, accept that. But do not insist on your complaint. This is why the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said:

"لا تماري أخاك"

Do not dispute with your brother.

This is a few day's life

How long does one live? A few days. No one knows how long he would live. Besides, the complaints are normally for worldly matters - petty things! All things pertaining to the world - its wealth, property, position, honour, reputation, etc. - are meaningless. All these things will be taken away from us. So, instead of this, let us worry about the Hereafter which is an everlasting life. How will we fare there? What answer will we give to Allah? The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has said:

اعمل لدنياك بقدر بقائك فيها و اعمل لآخرتك بقدر بقائك فيها

Work for this world enough for your survival here;
Work for the Hereafter according to Your life there.

All the things of this world are passing. We have them with us today, but will not have them tomorrow.

What one was and what he is

People who were powerful, who had authority and who were feared, rot in jails today! They had a list of titles and honourable prefixes to their names, but today they are accused with a list of crimes.

So, on what do you pride yourself and dispute with others, what honour, what wealth?

Allah may take away from you all these things suddenly, any moment. So, do not quarrel, do not dispute on petty matters. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has said:

لا تمار اخاك

Do not quarrel with your brother.

The jest that is allowed

The second command of the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم in this Hadith is:

لا تمازحه

Do not make a joke with your Muslim brother.

The Hadith speaks of the jest that might be unpalatable to the other.

There is no harm if the jest is light-hearted and well received by the listener provided it is within the limits of Shari'ah. In fact, if the jest is true and is made with the intention of pleasing the listeners then it will also fetch a reward for the one who makes it.

It is not allowed to ridicule anyone

It is proper to make a jest and humour someone but it is not allowed to ridicule anyone or make or play a joke on anyone. The later is unpleasant and hurts the listener. It is unlawful and disallowed. Some people take fun in ridiculing others or calling them names and tease them to make them angry. This is the jest that the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has disallowed. We must keep within limits and not go so far that the listener feels disgusted and hurt. You may enjoy at his cost in this world but the punishment for it, in the Hereafter, will be very severe because you have hurt a Muslim which is a grave sin. (May Allah protect us!)

Man's honour is greater than BaytAllah

زاد الله شرفا و تعظيما

There is a Hadith in Ibn Majah. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم was performing the tawaf of BaytAllah. He addressed the House of Allah while circumambulating it:

O BaytAllah! How great are you! How great is your esteem www.neelofsunnah.com

that Allah has declared you as His House on this earth! How great is your sanctity! But, O BaytAllah! There is something more sacred than you. It is a Muslim's life, his property and his honour.

If there is a hard-hearted person who pulls down the BaytAllah then everyone will call him evil and say that he has desecrated the House of Allah. But, the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has said that if anyone attacks a Muslim's life, property and honour, or hurts his heart then he has committed a sin more grave than demolishing BaytAllah. We take it lightly and do not hesitate to make fun of other people whereby they are hurt while we enjoy that. What are we doing? We are pulling down the BaytAllah and causing it disrespect. It is unlawful to make fun of anybody.

It grows hatred

Such a joke is one of those things that grow hatred in the heart. It gives rise to enmity and ill-will. If another person sees that you make fun of him and insult him then do you expect him to respect and love you. Rather, he will detest you and that would lead to quarrel and dispute. However, if friends and relatives humour each other in a way that no one feels hurt and they do not tell lies then Shari'ah allows such jesting. Shari'ah does not forbid a jest of this kind.

Make good your promise

The third command in the Hadith is:

و لا تعده موعدًا فتخلفه

Do not make a promise that you will break.

Fulfil your promise. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has described breaking a promise as a sign of hypocrisy. He said:

ثلاث من كن فيه فهو منافق اذا حدث كذب و اذا وعد اخلف و اذا أوتمن خان (نسائي، كتاب الايمان، باب علامة المنافق)

Three signs of a hypocrite

When three things are found in a man, he is a hypocrite: when he speaks he lies, when he makes a promise he breaks it, and when he is trusted with something he betrays the trust.

Whoever has these three things is a hypocrite without doubt. Thus to break a promise is a sign of hypocrisy. Hence, if you are not sure that you will be able to keep your promise then do not make one. If you do make a promise then, unless there is a serious obstruction, fulfil it.

Fulfil promise made to children

The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم went so far as to emphasize that a promise made to children must also be made good. One of his Sahabah رضى الله عنهم called a child to him and said, "Come, I will give you something." The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم asked him, "Do you really intend to give him something, or are you just playing with him?" He said, "O Messenger of Allah, I have dates and I intend to give him that." The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said, "If you had made a promise to him without intending to give him something then you would have committed a sin for breaking a promise." Also, in this way, a child is taught that a promise may be broken without compunction. You then give him a bad training. So, do not break your promise made to children.

Sometimes, a man who breaks a promise knows that he should not break it. But, some other times, people do not even bother that they break promises.

To break principles and rules is to break promises

For example, rules and procedure govern every organisation. Thus, those who are employed there implicitly promise to abide by those rules and procedures.

Or, students who are admitted to the Darul-Uloom are required to give an undertaking in writing that they would do certain things and abstain from certain other things. If a written undertaking is not asked from a student even then it is implicit in the admission granted to him.

Thus, if anyone violates the rules and procedures of the organisation or of Darul-Uloom then he breaks his promise. He does something that is disallowed and commits a sin.

Laws that do not violate shari'ah must be followed

In the same way, when a man takes up residence in a country and adopts its nationality then he really promises to abide by its laws till those laws do not compel him to act against Shari'ah. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has said about a law

www.peopleofislam.com

that clashes with Shari'ah:

لا طاعة لمخلوق فى معصية الخالق

The creatures are not followed in disobedience to the Creator.

You must not obey a king, a President, Prime Minister or a (man-made) law if they ask you to do that which Shari'ah forbids you to do.

Disobedience to laws is like breaking a promise

Hence, if you are not compelled to commit a sin and laws are framed on what is permissible in Shari'ah then every citizen Muslim or non-Muslim has pledged to the government that he would abide by the laws. If anyone disobeys the laws without a valid reason then he is like one who breaks a promise.

Traffic rules

Shari'ah calls upon us to obey the Traffic Rules too. This is because we have pledged to obey the laws of the land. If you disregard the Traffic lights, for instance, then you break your promise and are committing a sin. It is the same thing whether you live in a Muslim country or a non-Muslim country.

Receiving unemployment benefit

In Britain, an unemployment benefit is given to the unemployed. The government gives them an allowance till they get a proper employment. This is a commendable practice. However, some of our brothers who have gone there have made it their profession to secure the allowance. They take jobs on the quiet in the right but also draw the unemployment benefit. Even those who are religious-minded commit this fraud. First this conduct is unlawful, for, they show themselves as unemployed though they are employed. Secondly, it is a violation of government laws which they have undertaken to observe when they enterred the country. Some people argue that it is proper to take away the wealth of non-Muslim countries in any way they can. No! When they entered that country, they undertook to obey its laws. Hence, it is not proper to disobey its laws. Just as you are not allowed to break a promise made to Muslims, so too you are not allowed to break a promise made to non-Muslims. The money so acquired is unlawful.

Conclusion

May Allah help us to abide by these commands of the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم. Aameen.

CAUSES OF DISUNITY AND THE REMEDY-VI[1]

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ

اَلْحَمْدُللّٰهِ نَحْمَدُهٗ وَنَسْتَعِيْنُهٗ وَنَسْتَغْفِرُهٗ وَنُؤْمِنُ بِهٖ وَنَتَوَكَّلُ عَلَيْهِ وَنَعُوْذُبِاللّٰهِ مِنْ شُرُوْرِ اَنْفُسِنَا وَمِنْ سَيِّئَاتِ اَعْمَالِنَا۔ مَنْ يَّهْدِهِ اللّٰهُ فَلَا مُضِلَّ لَهٗ وَمَنْ يُّضْلِلْهُ فَلَا هَادِيَ لَهٗ وَاَشْهَدُ اَنْ لَّا اِلٰهَ اِلَّا اللّٰهُ وَحْدَهٗ لَا شَرِيْكَ لَهٗ وَاَشْهَدُ اَنَّ سَيِّدَنَا وَنَبِيَّنَا وَمَوْلَانَا مُحَمَّدًا عَبْدُهٗ وَرَسُوْلُهٗ صَلَّى اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰى عَلَيْهِ وَعَلٰى اٰلِهٖ وَاَصْحَابِهٖ وَبَارَكَ وَسَلَّمَ تَسْلِيْمًا كَثِيْرًا۔ اَمَّا بَعْدُ!

اَعُوْذُ بِاللّٰهِ مِنَ الشَّيْطٰنِ الرَّجِيْمِ O

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ O

We have seen the many causes of disputes and disharmony among families, clans and people and the remedies prescribed by the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم. In the above Hadith, he has pointed out to yet another cause.

A serious betrayal

Sayyidina Sufyan ibn Aseed Hadrami رضى الله عنه reported that he heard the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم say:

كَبُرَتْ خِيَانَةً اَنْ تُحَدِّثَ اَخَاكَ حَدِيْثًا هُوَ لَكَ بِهٖ مُصَدِّقٌ وَّ اَنْتَ لَهٗ بِهٖ كَاذِبٌ (ابو داود، كتاب الادب، باب فى المعاريض)

It is a great betrayal that you tell your brother something that he believes to be a truth from you while you are lying to him.

This is something that causes hearts to split and grows

[1] Venue: Jami' Masjid Baitul-Mukarram, Gulshane-Iqbal, Karachi.

www.peopleofsunnah.com

animosity. To tell a lie is always a major sin, but here the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم refers to a lie where the addressee believes the speaker to be true. He trusts him. The liar betrays the trust. So, apart from earning the sin of a lie, he also earns the sin of betrayal.

He holds the trust

The person who turns to the other takes him to be trustworthy and true. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم also said:

المستشار مؤتمن

The one who is consulted is holder of a trust.

It is as though he who consults places a trust with him. He trusts him to give a correct advice. But, this man tells him a lie and gave him a wrong advice so, he has also committed the sin of betrayal.

False medical certificate

The medical certificates that are issued in our country today, all attract the warning in this Hadith. If a man is ill and needs a medical certificate to get leave from his superiors in the office where he works then the doctor who issues the certificate holds a trust because the office where it will be presented trusts him. They will believe what the doctor says and trust that if their employee was not ill, the doctor would not have issued a certificate.

If the doctor gives a false certificate whether against bribe or friendship then he not only tells a lie but also betrays those who trust him. As for the man who induces the doctor to issue a false certificate, he perpetrates a number of sins. He tells a lie, compels the doctor to speak a lie, gives a bribe if he gets the certificate against cash and he takes leave by lying. His leave is unlawful and the salary for this period is unlawful. The food that he consumes with the salary is unlawful. All these sins are committed on issuing a false medical certificate.

Our society is involved in these sins. Even well-educated, religious-minded people stoop so low as to collect a false medical certificate when they need it and feel no compunction about it. They put this wrong as not part of religion.

Confirming a madrasah

Many people come to me with a request to confirm that their madrasah exists and imparts proper education and puts donations to proper use.

Such a confirmation is like a testimony. In other words, the donor relies on the confirmation. So, the person issuing the confirmation must first satisfy himself that the madrasah deserves to receive the donation. If someone comes to me and I issue the confirmation without verifying the facts then I am telling a lie to the donors who trust me, because though I have not seen the madrasah and how it works yet I confirm its existence and working. I am also guilty then of the worst of betrayal. So, those people who come to me for a confirmation express surprise when I regret my inability to oblige them. They forget that they actually ask for a testimony about which the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has said, "It is the worst form of betrayal that people trust you to be true but you speak a lie."

False character certificate

Often character certificates are issued and the person who signs it affirms that he knows the certified man for a certain number of years though he may be knowing him for just a couple of days. He also affirms that the man has good character, etc. He imagines that he is doing a good deed for the man but he does not know that he will be answerable on the Day of Resurrection for lying in the certificate. He is involved in the worst kind of betrayal and tells lies to those who trust him

Certificate is worthless

A plethora of certificates are being issued with the result that they have become worthless. People know that they are a pack of lies. We do not pay proper respect to the sayings of the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم and have restricted religion to salah, fasting, etc. but we do not pay attention to how we deal with other people.

Cause of dissension

This wrong is also one of the causes of disunity among us. If you trust someone then you expect him to speak the truth, but he lies. The result is that you are disillusioned and begin to dislike him.

Thus lying is one of the great causes of disunity. We must stop telling lies to remove disunity among us. While every lie is disallowed, the lie to one who trusts you is a very dangerous kind of lie.

How to atone

If we begin today to act on the Prophet's صلى الله عليه وسلم sayings and remove the causes of disunity then InshaAllah our future life will improve. The question arises how do we atone for past mistakes like backbiting and reviling others, etc. we have come in contact with so many people in the past whom we have hurt in one way or the other but we have no more any contact with them and there is no way to seek their forgiveness. We must contemplate how we clear our past wrongs.

The Prophet's صلى الله عليه وسلم seeking forgiveness

The beloved Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has not left anything untaught to us. He has shown us a solution to every problem. If anyone wishes to correct his past mistakes and atone for the violation of rights of fellow men then the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has taught us how we can do it and he showed it by a practical example. He stood up in the Masjid Nabawi and said to the Sahabah there:

> "If I have caused hardship to anyone or committed excess against him then today I present myself before him. If he chooses to retaliate against my excess then I submit my self that he may seek revenge. If he seeks compensation then I will give that. If he is willing to forgive then I request him to forgive me."

The Prophet's صلى الله عليه وسلم high station

He was the Prophet who said that and about whom the Qur'an says:

لِيَغْفِرَ لَكَ اللّٰهُ مَا تَقَدَّمَ مِنْ ذَنْبِكَ وَ مَا تَاَخَّرَ (سورۃ فتح، آیت ۲)

That Allah may forgive you of your fault that which is past and that which is to come....(al-Fath, 48:2)

فَلَا وَ رَبِّكَ لَا يُؤْمِنُوْنَ حَتّٰى يُحَكِّمُوْكَ فِيْمَا شَجَرَ بَيْنَهُمْ ثُمَّ لَا

يَجِدُوْا فِيْٓ اَنْفُسِهِمْ حَرَجًا مِّمَّا قَضَيْتَ وَ يُسَلِّمُوْا تَسْلِيْمًا ○

(سورۃ النساء، آیت ٦٥)

But no, by your Lord! They will not believe until they make you the judge of what is in dispute between them, then fmd no vexation in their hearts over what you decide, and submit with full submission. (an-Nisa, 4:65)

The Qur'an says about him that he cannot hurt others, yet he stood up in the Masjid Nabawi and sought forgiveness for himself from his Companions رضى الله عنهم.

One companion sought compensation

When he said that, one Sahabi got up and submitted, "O Messenger of Allah! I want to get even with you!" He asked, "For what?" He submitted, "Once you had hit me on my back. I want you to make amends for that." He said, "I do not remember that, but you may avenge yourself if you remember that." So, he came behind the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم and said, "O Messenger of Allah, when you had struck me, I had no clothes on my back. It was bare." The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم removed his cloak from his back. The seal of Prophethood was visible. The man came forward and kissed it and submitted, "O Messenger of Allah! I had used the excuse to kiss the seal of Prophethood."

Anyway, the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم had offered himself that anyone might seek amends for a wrong he might have committed.

Seek forgiveness from everyone

In this way the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم taught us to apologise to everyone for past mistakes, to offer ourselves to others to get even with us. We must tell them that if they forgive, we would be obliged.

Mawlana Thanawi رحمة الله sought pardon

The Mawlana Thanawi رحمة الله wrote an article for that and sent it to all his acquaintances. He entitled the article (العذر والنذر) (al-Uzar wan Nuzar). He wrote, "Because I have contact with many people it is possible I may have hurt someone. I offer myself to anyone who might wish to get even with me. If I have not paid money where due, do remind me of that and I will repay it. If I have caused physical hurt to someone, I submit myself to him that he may avenge himself. Or, I ask to be forgiven." He also wrote down this Hadith:

www.pdfbooksfree.pk

The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said,

"If a Muslim asks another Muslim sincerely to forgive him then it is the duty of the other to forgive him. if he does not forgive him then he should not expect Allah to forgive him in the Hereafter."

As far as cash is concerned, the owner of the right can demand a reimbursement in cash. However, other kinds of violations like backbiting, hurting anyone, etc. should be forgiven if the wrong-doer seeks forgiveness.

Mufti Muhammad Shafi's رحمة الله example

My respected father, Mawlana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله had a heart attack three years before his death. He called me to the hospital and instructed me to write down an article for him on the pattern of Mawlana Thanawi's رحمة الله (al - Uzar wan Nuzar) and to entitle it (kutch Talafi Mafaat). The first word kutch (some) indicating that he was not necessarily seeking forgiveness for all his past conduct, but was seeking some atonement. It was written and published and was sent to all his acquaintances so that they might forgive him.

Pardon us

Our elders have taught us an apt sentence which they say on parting, "Brother forgive us what we have said or heard."

This is a very proper sentence though many people say it without seriousness. It means, "We are separating now. We do not know if we would meet again or not. So if I have said or heard anything about you, or hurt you in any way, I seek forgiveness for that now."

We must speak this sentence when going on a journey. If he says, "I have forgiven you" then, Insha Allah, you are forgiven.

Forgiveness from those who are not traced

There are many people we cannot trace. We may have met them casually and do not even know their names or where they live. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم taught us a very easy way to ask forgiveness of such people.

Make this supplication

He made this supplication for such people.

اَيُّمَا مُؤْمِنٍ اَوْ مُؤْمِنَةٍ اٰذَيْتُهٗ اَوْ شَتَمْتُهٗ اَوْ جَلَدْتُهٗ اَوْ لَعَنْتُهٗ فَاجْعَلْهَا لَهٗ صَلٰوةً وَ زَكٰوةً وَقُرْبَةً تُقَرِّبُهٗ بِهَا اِلَيْكَ

(O Allah) if I have ever tortured or reproached believing man or a believing woman or had him whipped or cursed him then turn each of those things a source of grace and purification to him and grant him nearness to You.

Our elders have said that we must make this supplication for those people whom we cannot reach. If the harm that we have caused them turns into mercy for them then they will by themselves forgive us; Insha Allah. We must also convey reward to them (against pious deeds).

Consigning reward to the living

We can also consign reward to the living. We may do that through worship like reciting the Qur'an, etc. we may have hurt them at some time, so we can atone for that by consigning reward. Insha Allah our mistake will be forgiven.

A general supplication

There is also a general supplication:

"O Allah, do shower Your Mercy on everyone I may have hurt or whose right I may have violated. O Allah, shower Your mercy on him and turn my deed as a means of mercy for him. Cause him to be pleased with me. Cause him to forgive me and forget my mistakes."

A wrong thought

Mawlana Thanawi رحمة الله said about the Hadith with the supplication that people should not imagine from this Hadith that the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has cursed those who have committed many sins. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has also said:

لَعَنَ اللّٰهُ الرَّاشِيَ وَالْمُرْتَشِيَ

Allah has cursed him who takes bribe and who gives bribe.

These people should not imagine that the Prophet صلى الله عليه

www.Peopleofdeen.com

وسلم has cursed them because he him self has made another supplication:

"O Allah those whom I have cursed, turn the curse into a prayer for them."

In the beginning of the Hadith with the supplication, the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم had said:

إنما أنا بشر أغضب كما يغضب البشر.

O Allah, I am human and get angry as any human being can. So, if through this anger I have caused trouble to anyone or cursed him or reproached him then turn all that into a prayer for him.

So the Hadith mentions the Prophet's صلى الله عليه وسلم curse in anger which is a human trait. It may be turned into a prayer. If the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has cursed anyone for a sin or because Shari'ah calls for it then that Hadith of supplication does not cover it.

Summary

Thus, if you have violated anyone's rights and you cannot atone for that then make a supplication for them. It is not difficult to do that.

Only sit down and say to Allah, "O Allah, I do not know how many I have hurt and violated their rights. O Allah, let my wrongs turns into prayers for them and means of mercy. O Allah, clear their hearts of anger for me and cause them to forgive me."

These two things are known from the Prophet's صلى الله عليه وسلم; Sunnah and the practice of our elders. May Allah cause us to do both these things! Aameen.

IMPORTANCE OF THE SALAH AND THE CORRECT WAY TO OFFER IT[1]

First words

The discourse follows the previous in which I explained the first few verses of surah al-Muminun. They describe the qualities that will make a believer prosperous.

Khushu and Khudu

Allah taala mentions the first quality as khushu. Salah is the most important of a believer's tasks. So, Allah taala mentions khushu in salah before the other qualities. Generally, this word is paired with khudu which is to submit one's visible limbs before Allah taala while khushu is to concentrate one's heart towards Allah taala. Both these things are demanded in

www.peopleofsunnah.com

salah.

Reality of khudu

It is to bow down. One stands before Allah taala in such a way that all the limbs submit to Allah, there being no negligence and carelessness. But, it is not our reasoning that will tell us what method is proper manners. Rather, we must follow the Prophet's صلى الله عليه وسلم method. The Prophet said to his sahabah رضى الله عنهم once after the salah:

صَلُّوا كَمَا رَأَيْتُمُونِي أُصَلِّي

"Offer the salah as you have seen me offer."

Thus, only this method is according to proper manners. There can be no deduction or addition in it.

Teachings of the righteous caliphs

This is why the sahabah رضى الله عنهم were careful to remember the method that the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم taught them, they offered salah accordingly and they taught it to the others. The righteous caliphs Umar رضى الله عنه, Uthman رضى الله عنه and Ali رضى الله عنه ruled over more than half of the world. Wherever they went they taught the people the Prophet's صلى الله عليه وسلم method of salah so that they might offer accordingly.

Proper posture of limbs is khudu

Abdullah ibn Masud رضى الله عنه said to his students:

أَلَا أُصَلِّي بِكُمْ صَلَاةَ رَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ؟

"Shall I not offer the salah of the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم for you to see?"

Khudu is that all the limbs must behave according to the sunnah which is the first step towards khushu. When a worshipper does that while standing, bowing, prostrating and sitting (in salah), it is the first step towards turning the heart to Allah taala.

Outside thoughts

We often complain that our thoughts wonder about in the salah and we cannot concentrate. One main reason for that is that our salah is not according to the sunnah in its appearance, nor do we care for it. We do not learn or correct over what we have been doing since childhood. The salah is so important that hundreds of pages are written in the books of fiqh, giving details of each posture from the takbir tahrimah, qiyam, ruku, sajdah to the salutation. But, we have no mind to learn these methods.

The honourable Mufti رحمة الله care

My respected father, Mawlana Mufti Muhammad Shafi رحمة الله used to say in the last days of his life. "Today, it has been sixty years since I have been learning and teaching the Quran and hadith and fiqh and issuing the fatawa. I have no other occupation besides that. In spite of that, I come across situation in salah when I do not know what I should do. So I have to consult a book on salah. This is my condition. But, I see people who have never given a thought to verify if their salah is according to sunnah or not." The reason is that we have no importance of salah in our minds. One must first of all correct the way he offers the salah.

Standing posture

Let me now outline the correct method of offering the salah. I will explain the verses in some other discourse. When one stands for the salah, his entire body must face the qiblah, even the chest. If the chest is not aligned to qiblah for a short while, Allah taala will accept the salah because he does not question minor discrepancies but the salah will lack the light of sunnah because this standing does not conform to sunnah. The toes and, in fact, the whole body must face the qiblah. Actually, it is neither difficult nor painful to do that. It only needs some attention which will make the salah conform to sunnah and it will have khudu and the light and blessing of sunnah.

Forming intention

I must make one thing clear. Intention is the resolve of the heart. It is not necessary to utter the words with the tongue. Many people think it necessary to utter the words with the tongue. They regard it to be fard or wajib, and even delay joining the congregation till they utter out the words of intention whereby they sometimes miss a rakah. Only the intention of the heart is enough.

Takbir Tahrimah

Again, they do not care how they raise their hands for

www.peopleofsunnah.com

beginning the salah. The sunnah is that the palms must face the qiblah and the pores of the thumbs must be in line with the earlobes. Any other way is not sunnah and the salah may not be negated but it is not according to sunnah, and will lack light. A little presence of mind will correct it.

Folding hands

The sunnah method of folding hands is to make a circle with the small finger of one's right hand and its thumb and hold the left wrist keeping the three middle fingers on the back of the left hand, folding the hands a little below the navel. This is sunnah and it will fetch the blessing and light too. If a different method is employed, then the salah will not be void but the sunnah would have been neglected.

Recital of the Quran

After folding the hands, he must recite the thana سبحانك اللهم..., surah al Fatihah and another surah. He must recite in a correct manner, with tajweed in proper articulation and pronouncement. It is not difficult to learn this. Only 69 letters are used in the Quran. It is very easy to pronounce them. However, there are between 8 and 10 letters that will have to be practiced, like ث(th), ح (ha), ض(dgard) and ظ (thow). One should practice this before a qari because sometimes, if they are interchanged then the meaning might change. This is not difficult to learn. Only we do not pay attention.

Summary

You must go to your neighborhood mosque and practice the letter with the imam there, or the qari if there is one. Insha Allah, your pronunciation of all the letters will improve. Then your salah will conform to sunnah.

Insha Allah, I will say more about these things in another discourse.

May Allah cause us to abide by these things. Ameen!

Introduction

This is the third discourse on khushu in salah, the first quality of a successful believer as described in the first seven verses of al-Muminun.

We have seen that two words are used together, khushu and khudu. The former implies attention of the heart towards Allah taala while the latter is submission of the limb before

[1] Venue: Jame Masjid Baitul-Mukarram, Gulshan-e-Iqbal, Karachi

www.peopleofsunnah.com

Allah taala according to sunnah. This discourse takes up the subject from where we had stopped in the previous at recital of the Quran.

Standing posture

This is qiyam. The worshipper stands erect with eyes looking at the spot of prostration. This will mean that the upper limb bends slightly forward. It is disliked to bend it more than that. The back should not bend down for, it is against the sunnah. One stands upright, head slightly bowed to be able to look at the place of prostration.

Motionless

The worshipper should refrain from any kind of movement. The Quran says (in al Baqarah verse 238):

وَقُومُوا لِلَّهِ قَانِتِينَ۔ (سورة البقرة: آیت ۲۳۸)

Stand before Allah in total devotion.

Many people are careless in theis regard and they swing backward and forward in their salah, giving motion to their hands to wipe perspiration, etc. All these things are contrary to devotion (qunut).

In the presence of the ruler of all rulers

When you stand for the salah, tell yourself that you are before Allah taala. When a person is in the presence of a worldly king, he is careful of his manners and is not inattentive. So, why should he not be careful before the Ruler of all rulers. Unnecessary movement in salat is contrary to manners and sunnah. The jurists say that if anyone moves his hand thrice in a single posture without need then his salah stands nullified. This was explained in a previous discourse.

Rukn (bowing)

Bowing follows the standing posture. In bowing, the back must be straight, otherwise, some jurists say the salah is void. The fingers of the hands must be spaced and must grip the knee which too should be straight and firm, not sagging. The more this method is neglected, the more the sunnah is disregarded and there is a proportionate diminishing light and blessing.

The qawmah (standing from ruku)

The worshipper arises from the ruku saying:

سَمِعَ اللّٰهُ لِمَنْ حَمِدَهُ

This is the qawmah. One of its sunnah is forgotten now a days. It is to keep standing in qawmah for a while but many people do not stand straight preferring to go down into prostration while still half way up. According to a sahabi رضی اللہ عنہ the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم waited in qawmah for as long as he was in ruku before going down into prostration. Hurrying down is not sunnah.

Supplication

The Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم made this supplication in qawmah:

رَبَّنَا لَكَ الْحَمْدُ مِلْأَ السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْاَرْضِ وَمِلْأَ مَا بَيْنَهُمَا وَمِلْأَ مَا شِئْتَ مِنْ شَيْئٍ بَعْدُ

or

رَبَّنَا لَكَ الْحَمْدُ حَمْدًا كَثِيْرًا طَيِّبًا مُبَارَكًا فِيْهِ كَمَا يُحِبُّ رَبُّنَا وَ يَرْضٰى

Thus one must remain in qawmah for at least the time it takes to recite this. If any one hurries down without straightening his back then he must redeem the salah.

An example

While the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم was in the Masjid Nabawi, a man came and offered the salah. But he hurried through its postures. On finishing it he offered salam to the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم on going to him. But he said:

وَعَلَيْكُمُ السَّلَام قُمْ فَصَلِّ فَاِنَّكَ لَمْ تُصَلِّ

And peace be on you. Stand and offer the salah (again) for, you have not offered it (correctly)."

He did so, but again it was the same story because that had become his habit. Anyway, he came to the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم and offered the salam but got the same reply. This happened the third time to, so he requested:

www.peaceofsunnah.com

يَا رَسُوْلَ اللّٰهِ أَرِنِى وَعَلِّمْنِى

"O Messenger of Allah, teach me the correct way."

So the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم taught it to him.

Why did he not teach straight away

The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم did not teach him the first time because the man ought to have asked him. Since he did not, the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم did not teach him. Thus, if a man does not himself seek to know, it is sometimes useless to teach him. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم waited for him to get the urge to learn.

Offer it peacefully

The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم also thought that after such repetitions, he would learn it to remember well. The teaching will be appreciated. So he taught him. When you offer the salah, go through its postures in a correct manner and make the recital in a composed way, and do so, throughout the salah. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم taught him how to offer the salah. The sahabah رضى الله عنهم heard him too and remarked, "Because of this man, we learnt the salah from beginning to end from the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم."

Will have to be repeated

The Prophets صلى الله عليه وسلم instruction to the man to repeat the salah shows that if there is a shortcoming in any of the postures then it is wajib to repeat the salah. Hence, many of us who are not careful about their salah must repeat them and offer correctly. So it is better to be careful from the first. As much time must be given to qawmah as to ruku.

An etiquette of qawmah

One of the sahabah رضى الله عنهم said that sometimes they wondered that the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم might have forgotten because he stood too long in the qawmah. Actually, he matched it with the ruku that was also very lengthy. Then he went into prostration. This is one of the manners of qawmah.

Into prostration

First rest the knees on the ground, then the palms, then the nose and after that the forehead. The limb nearest the ground touches it first. Observe this sequence.

Toes must be well grounded

All these limbs also go into prostration too. They are both the hands, both knees, both feet, the nose and the forehead. They must be well grounded. If the toes do not at all rest on the ground during the prostration then the prostration is not accomplished. The salah too would then be void. But, if the toes do rest on the ground for a moment for the time it takes to say subhan Allah then the prostration and salah would be valid, but it will not conform to sunnah. The sunnah is that the toes must rest on the ground throughout the prostration and their direction should be toward the qiblah. So, even if they are rooted on the ground but are not turned to the qiblah then too the salah is not according to the sunnah.

Prostration nearest to Allah

There is no worship more pleasant than prostration, and there is no other way to attain nearness to Allah taala than prostration. According to a hadith, a man is not as near Allah in any situation as he is in prostration. When he prostrates before Allah taala, his entire body, all his being submits to Allah taala. All the limbs must be bowed down and that must follow the way shown by the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم and done by him.

Women must unlock their hair

It is disliked that women should offer salah with their hair locked or lied together though their salah would be valid. The ulama say that if their hair are tied then they would be erect in prostration and not bowed down. If they keep them untied when beginning the salah, the hair too will prostrate, falling downwards. They would benefit from the light and blessings of prostration.

Salah is believers miraj

Allah taala bestowed on the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم the grand rank of miraj that he gave no one else. He reached the place where even jibril عليه السلام could not go. He prayed to Allah taala there for his ummah to be given a similar honour of nearness to Allah taala. Allah taala gave him the gift of salah, www.pbookfsa.com

five times a day. They would prostrate during the salah which would bring them near to Allah taala. This is why it is said:

اَلصَّلٰوۃُ مِعْرَاجُ الْمُؤْمِنِیْنَ

Salah is the miraj of the believers.

We could never hope to ascent the seven heavens into the higher world and up to the sidra tul muntaha. But by virtue of the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم we are granted the miraj when we prostrate. We must value this thing.

Merit of prostration

When you prostrate your entire being before Allah taala, the whole universe bows to you. When you are in prostration in Allah's taala presence, your feet are on the crown. The universe in wholly under it, Iqbal said:

یہ سجدہ جسے تو گراں سمجھتا ہے ہزار سجدوں سے دیتا ہے آدمی کو نجات

This one prostration gives you riddance from a thousand prostrations. If man were to refuse to make this prostration then he would have been compelled to bow to everyone, the governor, officer, etc. But he who prostrates to Allah taala does not bow before anyone else. So, esteem it and prostrate with love.

The condition

Shah Fadel Rehman Ganj Muradabadi رحمۃ اللہ was a saint of high order. Mawlana Ashraf Ali Thanwi رحمۃ اللہ once visited him. When he was returning, he said to him in low tones. "O Ashraf Ali, I tell you one thing. When I prostrate, it seems that Allah taala loves me."

So, make the prostration with love. It relieves you of a thousand prostrations. It brings you nearer Allah which cannot be achieved in any other way.

Keep elbows apart

The prostration must be made correctly in the way the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم made. The elbows must be apart from your sides but without causing inconvenience to the man at your either side. To put them very far is against sunnah and hurts the neighbours, so it is not allowed, for it is a grave sin to cause inconvenience to another person. You must recite:

سُبْحَانَ رَبِّیَ الْاَعْلٰی at least thrice in prostration. You may add to that and recite five, seven, eleven times but in love and esteem.

The jalsah and supplication

The sitting down after the first prostration is called jalsah. One must sit for a while before making the second prostration. According to a sahabi رضی اللہ عنہ the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم sat for as long as it took him to prostrate. But, ths sunnah too is being abandoned. The Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم made this supplication in jalsah:

اَللّٰھُمَّ اغْفِرْلِیْ ذَنْبِیْ اَللّٰھُمَّ اغْفِرْلِیْ وَارْحَمْنِیْ وَاجْبُرْنِیْ وَاھْدِنِیْ وَارْزُقْنِیْ

After this the worshipper must make the second prostration.

This was the description of one rakah from the takbir tahrimah to the prostration.

Insha Allah, we will see more in the next discourse. May Allah enable us to offer the salah in accordance with sunnah. Aameen!

First words

In the previous discourse, we saw that both khudu and khushu are demanded in the salah. The former concern our visible limbs while the latter is linked to our heart. The limbs should be in conformity with the Prophet's صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم teaching and most of it was covered previously. In this discourse, I speak of the remaining and then take up khushu.

Fingers and toes in ruku and sajdah

The fingers of the hand must be kept apart while grasping

[1] Venue :Jame Masjid Baitul-Mukarram, Gulshan-e-Iqbal, Karachi.

www.peopleofsunnah.com

the knees in ruku. In sajdah, the fingers must be closed together, unspaced. The hands must be placed with the face between them, wrists near the shoulders and the thumbs opposite the earlobes. The elbows must be away from the ribs not touching them.

Sitting for attahiyat

The right foot must be erect in the sitting posture, its toes turned forward facing the qiblah. The left foot must be laid down for sitting on it. The fingers of the hand must be on the thighs with their tips above the knees, but it is not good to suspend them over the knees.

Salutation

When turning in salam, the neck should be turned fully to the right side with the glance on the right shoulder. Then it should be turned to the left side fully, and the glance on the left shoulder. If these things are observed, the salah shall be according to sunnah. And, because of that the light of sunnah and its blessing will be available. The salah will have khushu in it. Moreover these things do not take much time nor call for strenuous efforts. May Allah taala enable us to do this. Aameen!

The fact of khushu

Now, let us turn to khushu. It means the submission of the heart to Allah taala. The worshipper realizes that he stand before Allah taala. The highest rank of it is as described by the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم:

اَنْ تَعْبُدَ اللّٰهَ كَاَنَّكَ تَرَاهُ فَاِنْ لَّمْ تَكُنْ تَرَاهُ فَاِنَّهُ يَرَاكَ۔ (بخاری۔ باب بدء الوحی)

"That you worship Allah as though you see Him, but if you cannot visualize that, then he sees you." (Bukhari (base wahy), Muslim # 8, Trimdhi # 2619, Abu Dawud # 4695, Ibn Majah # 63, Ahmed 184)

This is the highest form of khushu.

Not necessary to be visible

We do not see Allah taala nor do we observe him seeing us. Then how may we understand these things? The answer is that there are not all things in this world that we can see but we are convinced at heart that they are present. We can give the example of people hearing someone over the loudspeaker though he is inside the mosque invisible to them. They will confirm that the speaker is there and will identify him by his voice.

Passengers in the aeroplane

Or, for instance, an aeroplane flies overhead. We know that there are passenegers inside though we cannot see them. We know that there also is a pilot flying it, for it cannot fly without a pilot.

Sunlight

We get sunlight in the mosque but do not see the sun yet we are convinced that the sun is there.

Just as the aeroplane can fly only if it has a pilot, so too this wide universe with everything it contains speaks of its Creator.

Everything is evidence of Allah's being

Therefore, the worshipper should, when he stands for salah, tell himself that everything points out to Allah's taala existence and creation, so he also stands before Allah. He should say, "Allah taala sees me. And I am convinced to such an extent that I see him." If you will build this idea in your mind and offer the salah, then you will have a spiritual experience in your salah. May Allah taala grant this kind of experience to every Muslim. This is why the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said that we must offer the salah as though we see him, or he sees us if we cannot do that.

First step are the words

To achieve that highest form of salah, we have to climb up the stairs one by one. Mawlana Ashraf Ali Thanwi رحمه الله said that the first step is to concentrate on the words we utter. We must be aware of what we say, like when we say, الحمد لله رب العالمين. We must know the words. However, today the moment a worshipper begins his salah with Allahu Akbar, it is as though it is the word 'Go' and he speeds through. It is the habit that brings the words on the tongue without effort. The result is that he does not know what he has recited. This is the general picture with us.

www.peopleofsunnah.com

First step to khushu

Hence, he must concentrate on his word. This seems difficult in the beginning but Mawlana Thanwi رحمہ اللہ said that it has to be done.

Second step is the meaning

The next step is to concentrate on the meanings. When one says الحمد للہ رب العلمین he must know that, All praise belongs to Allah, Lord of the worlds; And so to the end of this surah with Allah's attributes of mercy, his being the Master of the day of requital. Then one must know that one confirms one's worship of him and one seeks His help to guide him on the straight path. And when one utters the last verse, one must know that one asks him to guide one on the path of those whom he has favoured, not of those on whom is his wrath or who go astray.

When he does that, he will rid himself of unnecessary thoughts that come to his mind.

Why the distraction

The main reason for such thoughts invading the mind is that ablution is not done properly according to sunnah. People converse while making ablution though this is wrong. They must make the supplication taught by the Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم. They must come early to the mosque and offer the optional and sunnah salah before the congregation begins because these things are the preface to the fard so that concentration may be built for it. Insha Allah, this will drive away interrupting thoughts.

Return if distracted

However, man's mind is given to stray. So, if he gets an uninvited interrupting thought in spite of these measures then Allah taala will not punish him. But, the moment he realizes that he has strayed, he must (regain his concentration and) return to the salah whenever he is. He must do this exercise every time it happens.

Exercise and effort

Nothing may be achieved in this world without practice and effort. So the same applies here. The worshipper must resolve when he begins the salah that he will concentrate on the salah whether he recites or is in the ruku. But, every time he stray, he must come back. This practice will make him near perfect and gradually the straying will diminish, Insha Allah. The only thing is that he must not give up. He must keep trying. Try he must all his life. A time will come, Insha Allah, when most of his mind will be in the salah.

Third step thought of Allah

When that is achieved, the next step is to think in salah that Allah taala stands before him. When this is visualized, the objective is achieved, Insha Allah.

This is the brief discourse on obtaining khushu to which the Quran refers in the first two verses of al Muminun:

قَدْ اَفْلَحَ الْمُؤْمِنُوْنَ ۝ الَّذِيْنَ هُمْ فِيْ صَلَاتِهِمْ خٰشِعُوْنَ ۝

These believers who practice khushu in their salah are prosperous.

May Allah enable us to abide by these teachings and to grow khushu in our salah. May he cause us to concentrate and to offer the salah according to sunnah. Aameen!

Introduction

We continue our commentary on the first few verse of surah al Muminun which describe the believers who are prosperous in both the worlds. Their first quality is:

اَلَّذِيْنَ هُمْ فِيْ صَلَاتِهِمْ خٰشِعُوْنَ ○

Who adopt khushu in their salah.

Three stages of khushu

There are three stages or steps to attain khushu:

(i) To be attentive to the words spoken by the tongue,

(ii) to concentrate on their meaning, and

(iii) to visualize while offering the salah that one sees Allah taala, or , at least, that Allah taala sees him. These verses alert us that it is not enough to offer the salah but one must try to grow khushu in the salah.

Disturbed by thoughts

Many people complain that they get various thoughts while they offer the salah. There is no point in worrying about it, but it is necessary to adopt ways to remove the difficulty and shortcoming.

Prefaces of the salah

Allah taala has placed certain thing (prefaces) that are done before the salah which is the real end. The worshipper comes to the salah through those things. If he observes them correctly then the distracting thoughts would be diminished.

The first preface: purification

Allah taala has made purification (or taharah) essential before salah. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said:

مفتاح الصلاة الطهور

"The key to salah is purity."

He also said:

لاتقبل الصلاة بغير طهور

"The salah is not accepted (by Allah) without purity."

Istinja begins purification

Purification begins with istinja or abstersion. It is wajib to make istinja. A person must satisfy himself that he has obtained purity thoroughly. If he feels that even after passing urine drops are likely to follow, then he must wait for them to finish. This is called istibra in juristic language. If he does not obtain a proper purity and his clothes or body have the impurity on them then his thoughts will distract him.

Impurity is cause of thoughts

Allah taala has given peculiarities to everything. Impurity has the characteristic of creating evil thoughts in man. Hence, the first introductory task for salah is to remove impurity (to make istinja).

Ablution

The second introductory task of salah is to make ablution (or wudhu). It is an amazing thing. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said, "When a man who make ablution washes his face, Allah taala washes off the minor sins committed by the eyes. When he washes his hands, Allah taala washes off the minor sins committed by his hands. When he washes his feet, Allah taala forgives him the sins committed by his feet. The four limbs washed in ablution are generally these four that take him toward sin. Allah taala has arranged for man to be pure of sins before standing for salah. But these are minor sins. The major sins are forgiven only by making repentance.

Ablution washes off sin

It is known about Abu Hanifah رحمه الله that he could see forms of sin in the residual water of a person performing ablution. Allah taala had given him this kashf, or means of disclosure. Anyway, wudhu is instrumental in not only producing outward cleaning but also inward cleansing and riddance from sin.

Which kind of ablution

However, this advantage accrues only when ablution is made in the sunnah way. The Prophet's صلى الله عليه وسلم habit was to face the qiblah while making ablution. So it is part of manners of ablution. He said بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم before beginning ablution and he never spoke to anyone while performing ablution.

Concentration

The best thing in concentrating while making ablution is that one thinks while washing the limbs that his sins are being washed off. Also, he must not waste water but use only as much as is necessary. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said:

www.peopleofsunnah.com

ایاك والسرف وان كنت على نهر جار

"Beware of waste, even if you are at a running river."

Now, the river will not lose any water if you use much, but the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said that even there you must not be wasteful.

Prayers during ablution

One must make prayers while making ablution. When he made ablution, the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم recited often:

اَشْهَدُ اَنْ لَّا اِلٰـهَ اِلَّا اللّٰهُ وَاَشْهَدُ اَنَّ مُحَمَّدًا عَبْدُهٗ وَرَسُوْلُهٗ and he made this supplication in between:

اَللّٰهُمَّ اغْفِرْلِیْ ذَنْبِیْ وَ وَسِّعْ لِیْ فِیْ دَارِیْ وَ بَارِكْ لِیْ فِیْ رِزْقِیْ

After having performed ablution he made this supplication:

اَللّٰهُمَّ اجْعَلْنِیْ مِنَ التَّوَّابِیْنَ وَاجْعَلْنِیْ مِنَ الْمُتَطَهِّرِیْنَ

If a person observes these manners while making ablution then it is its characteristic that it removes divergent thoughts from his mind,turns his attention towards Allah taala.

Conversation during ablution

However, we begin to commit mistakes while making ablution itself. We do everything that is wrong. We converse with each other, exchange gossip and are lost elsewhere in thought while discharging our duty in haste. The result is that the fruit and benefit of ablution is lost to us. If, instead of that, we make a proper and careful ablution observing its manners and making supplication then the preface to the salah will be correct.

The third preface

The third preface of the salah is to perform ablution and come to the mosque a little before the congregational salah and offer two rakaat supererogatory salah as Tahiyat ul Masjid and Tahiyat ul wudhu. There is much merit in these two rakaat. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم asked Bilal رضى الله عنه, "O Bilal, during my miraj while I visited paradise, I heard your footsteps ahead of me. Tell me about a deed that you do regularly for which Allah taala has given you this place." He said, "O Messenger of Allah, I cannot think of any deed other than that I have resolved ever since I embraced Islam that I would surely offer two rakaat after every ablution that I perform. I do that regularly whether it precedes a fard salah or not." The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said, This is the deed for which Allah taala has raised you to this station."

When to offer

It only takes a couple of minutes to offer the two rakaat. It is very virtuous to offer the Tahiyat ul Masjid on entering the mosque before sitting down but if he sits down by mistake then he may arise on remembering and offer them.

The fourth preface

Before every fard salah, there are some sunnah salah, both muakkadah (emphasized) and ghayr muakkadah (non emphasized). These sunnah are the fourth preface of salah. There is not as much virtue in offering sunnah salah before Maghrib because we have a command to offer them promptly. However, some ahadith speak of two rakaat before fard of Maghrib.

The four introduce khushu

If the four prefaces are observed and the worshipper begins the fard salah then he will not complain about distracting thoughts. The short gap of fifteen minutes or more between adhan and the congregational salah is given so that these prefaces may be observed. When he begins his fard salah afterwards, Insha Allah, Allah taala will give him khushu and concentration. These prefaces take only a few minutes but they improve our salah and we will gain prosperity.

Ignore the thoughts

If the distracting thoughts continue to pester you then do not worry. If they come to mind on their own then Allah taala forgives that. Some people blame themselves and their salah because of these thoughts. They underestimate their salah because of it.

Value the prostration

These things result from a poor estimation. Allah taala does not like that. These people must appreciate that they are

www.pbmeofsunnah.com

enabled to offer the salah and to make prostration to Allah taala. Let them thank him for that. How many a people are deprived of this blessing! We are not deprived! It is not anything ordinary. Allah taala has enabled us to present ourselves before him.

قبول ہو کہ نہ ہو پھر بھی ایک نعمت ہے وہ سجدہ جس کو تیرے آستاں سے نسبت ہے

The opportunity to rest the head before him is itself a great blessing. Be grateful for it. And keep trying but if you fail and distracting thoughts haunt you, make istighfar for that. Repent over it.

After the salah

Abu Bakr Siddiq رضی اللہ عنہ said that a man must do two things after offering the salah. He must say الحمد للہ and استغفر اللہ to thank Allah for the opportunity to do good, and to seek forgiveness for not being able to do justice to it.

The Prophet صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم used to say, after making the final salutation of a salah, استغفر اللہ three times though he had offered the salah (which is a good thing) and had not committed sin. He made istighfar because, "O Allah, the salah that I ought to have offered presentable to you, I have not been able to do."

Summary

The message is that we should not underestimate this salah nor indulge in egoism. We must be grateful to Allah taala for enabling us to worship him and we must seek his forgiveness for our shortcomings. At the same time we must do our best to improve our salah. We must continue to do it all our lives. Insha Alah, Allah taala will accept it, merciful as he is.

May he cause us to abide by these teachings. Aameen!

First words

This is one of the discourses on the surah al-Muminun whose initial verses describe the qualities necessary for the success of a believer. This last discourse on the surah is on the verses {9 to 11}.

وَالَّذِيْنَ هُمْ عَلٰى صَلٰوتِهِمْ يُحَافِظُوْنَ O أُولٰئِكَ هُمُ
الْوٰرِثُوْنَ O الَّذِيْنَ يَرِثُوْنَ الْفِرْدَوْسَ ط هُمْ فِيْهَا خٰلِدُوْنَ O

They are those who observe salah consistently and they are heirs of al-Firdaws where they will abide forever. Al-Firdaws is a high station in Paradise.

All characteristics in one perspective

Let us review these characteristics together. Those believers are successful who have these qualities:

1) They observe humility in their salah.
2) They abstain from every thing that is vain.
3) They observe the zakah which means that they pay the zakah that is due on them and purify their character.
4) They purify their character of bad habits.
5) They guard their private parts except from their wives and their female slaves who were kept in the olden times. They keep their sexual desires in check except with their wives and female slaves and they are not blamed if they uses them. Those who seek other ways are transgressors and are criminals in Allah's taala sight.
6) They are faithful to their trusts and do not commit treachery in what is entrusted to them.
7) They honour their promises.

We have thrown a detailed light on all these attributes and praise belongs to Allah for that.

Similarity in the first and the last quality

Allah taala mentions the eighth and the last quality وَالَّذِيْنَ هُمْ عَلٰى صَلٰوتِهِمْ يُحَافِظُوْنَ Those believers are successful who observe their salah consistently. The noble Quran has mentioned the eight qualities that make a successful believer, beginning with salah and ending with it. They are humble in their salah or observes humility therein, and they are consistent in their salah. These are respectively the first and the last characteristics. This suggests that the important way to gain success is through the salah. While elaborating on the first characteristic, we had described khushu or humility, humbleness.

Punctuality of time

Observing the salah implies many things. One must be consistent and regular, not offering it now and then. The second meaning is to be careful of the hours of salah. Allah taala has bound the salah to their hours. He says in surah an-Nisa verse 103 إِنَّ الصَّلٰوةَ كَانَتْ عَلَى الْمُؤْمِنِيْنَ كِتٰبًا مَّوْقُوْتًا salah is duty imposed by Allah for which He has appointed the hours. Fajr is from dawn till sunrise, Zuhr from end of declination of the sun till when shadows are twice in length, and from then till sunset is Asr. There is a time duration for every salah so, it is not merely to observe the salah. But also to respect its hours.

The salah of the hypocrite

The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said, "It is the hypocrite's salah that when it is the time of the Asr, he sits unconcerned till the sun is at the edge (when it turns yellowish and can be seen with the naked eye and at this hour the salah is disliked). He gets up hurriedly and goes through four pecks and finishes the salah." This is the hypocrite's salah. Hence, it is not that only the salah is offered and the obligation is thus discharged, but the hour must be respected. The Fajr salah must be offered before sunrise when its time ends, but if anyone over sleeps and gets up after sunrise and offer the salah then he has redeemed it but has not observed it consistently because he was not careful of the hours prescribed by Allah taala.

Religion is obedience to Allah taala

I have repeated very often that, religion is the word for obedience to Allah.' It is not the question of an appointed hour but merely the command of Allah taala to observe a salah at a particular hour and another later. Thus, if anyone offers the Fajr salah when the sun is rising then that is forbidden. Salah must be offered within the prescribed time.

www.peofs.com

With the congregation

The third thing that is necessary for a consistent observation is to offer salah in its perfect method. This means that men must go to the mosque and offer the salah with the congregation; it is sunnah muakkadah (emphasised sunnah) for men to join the congregation and this approaches the wajib (obligatory). Some ulama hold that it is wajib to offer the salah in congregational form. But, Imam Abu Hanifah رحمة الله held the former view. If a man offers the salah by himself then it is an incomplete observation, ada qasir. But ada Kamil (perfect observation) is that a man offers the salah with the congregation. Besides, the degree of a congregation salah is higher in terms of merit and reward. The Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said, "Offering a salah with the congregation fetches twenty-seven times higher reward than offering it by oneself." A few minutes more will be spent in the mosque. How foolish it is to miss the congregation for those few minutes and, make it incomplete. Men must go to the mosque.

Waiting for the salah

Allah taala has made the mosque His house. If a man sits in the mosque waiting for a salah then Allah taala goes on giving him reward of salah. He gets the same reward as is given or offering the salah even if he does nothing but merely sit. His record of deeds is continuously credited. So to observe salah consistently is to offer it with the congregation.

Put their houses on fire

When the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم led the salah as an imam, in the Masjid Nabwi, all the sahabah رضى الله عنهم اجمعين offered the salah in his leadership. But some people, resembling the hypocrites, did not join the congregation. They did not have faith in their heart but only professed it orally, so they made lame excuses for neglecting the congregation. However, it could never be imagined that any sahabi would do so. One day, the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم said, "I got the thought that I should ask someone else to lead the salah and begin it, while I should go to houses and see who is there not attending the congregation. I wish that I should set their homes on fire."

Advantages of the congregation

Fathom the importance of the congregational salah from these words of the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم. The muadhdhin calls but this man sits home. May Allah taala preserve every Muslim from the Prophet's صلى الله عليه وسلم anger. Aameen. Those who sit home and fail to attend the congregation must think of these words. Allah taala has made the mosque His House and a center for the Muslim ummah. When the Muslims meet, they discuss their problems and ask their welfare.

Do not imitate Christianity

The idea that has grown in us that we will go to the mosque only on Fridays and keep away from it all the week is an imitation of Christians. The Christians went to the church on Sunday but now they do not go there on Sunday too. In Europe and the us; the churches are now empty and deserted. Any way, salah is fard everyday of the week five times a day and must be offered in the mosque.

Women must offer the salah in the initial hour

The women are told that as soon as the time begins, they must offer the salah . Generally, they procrastinate and waste much time and finally offer the salah when the disliked hour is on. The men must go to the mosque.

The importance of salah

Allah taala described His successful slaves beginning the description with the salah and ending it with it. The most important duty of a believer is the salah .

Umar رضى الله عنه ruled over more than half the world. Today rulers of minor governments think very high of themselves and call themselves 'king' and so on. There are as many as fifteen independent states that add up to the area under Umar's رضى الله عنه rule. He wrote a letter to each of his governors. It is to be found in Muwatta Imam Maalik (Kitab us-salah hadith # 6)

ان اهم امركم عندى الصلاة فمن حفظها و حافظ عليها حفظ
دينه و من ضيعها فهو لما سواها اضيع (موطا امام مالك، كتاب وقوت الصلاة حديث نمبر٦)

"Know that the most important of your task is the salah. He, who is careful of his salat and consistent with it, preserve his religion. He who neglects the salat will neglect other things more than that"

Inheritors of al-Firdaws

The Quran begins the description with mention of the salah and ends it with it. After recounting the eight characteristics, the Quran says that these people are inheritors of paradise. They will dwell therein forever

May Allah taala be merciful to us and grant all of us all these attributes and then through His mercy admit all of us to paradise. Aameen

ALPHABETICAL LIST OF CONTENTS

Volume: 1 to 10

While the list is made up in the order of keyword, the sequence of words in the sentence is not changed because that would have been too laborious and confusing in some cases. The nearest keyword is chosen when more than one was available. The first figure refers to volume and the next to page numbers.

وسلم has cursed them because he him self has made another supplication:

"O Allah those whom I have cursed, turn the curse into a prayer for them."

In the beginning of the Hadith with the supplication, the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم had said:

اِنما أنا بشـــر أغضب كمـــا يغضب البشـــــر

O Allah, I am human and get angry as any human being can. So, if through this anger I have caused trouble to anyone or cursed him or reproached him then turn all that into a prayer for him.

So the Hadith mentions the Prophet's صلى الله عليه وسلم curse in anger which is a human trait. It may be turned into a prayer. If the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم has cursed anyone for a sin or because Shari'ah calls for it then that Hadith of supplication does not cover it.

Summary

Thus, if you have violated anyone's rights and you cannot atone for that then make a supplication for them. It is not difficult to do that.

Only sit down and say to Allah, "O Allah, I do not know how many I have hurt and violated their rights. O Allah, let my wrongs turns into prayers for them and means of mercy. O Allah, clear their hearts of anger for me and cause them to forgive me."

These two things are known from the Prophet's صلى الله عليه وسلم Sunnah and the practice of our elders. May Allah cause us to do both these things! Aameen.

وَاٰخِرُ دَعْوَانَا اَنِ الْحَمْدُ لِلّٰهِ رَبِّ الْعٰلَمِيْنَ

And our last call be, praise be to Allah, Lord of the worlds.
