9. When buying and selling an item, it is also necessary to show the item properly and spell out the terms clearly. The seller should abstain from speaking in vague terms which could result in problems and arguments. Similarly, the price has to be clearly laid down and agreed upon. Even if one of these factors is not made clear and agreed upon, the sale will not be valid.
10. A person purchases an item with money. The seller says: "Hand the money over to me first and then I will give you the item." The buyer replies: "Hand the item over to me first and then I will give you the money." In such a case, the money will have to be given first and then only will the item be given to the buyer. The seller has the right to refuse to hand over the item until he receives the money for it.
However, if he purchases an item in return for another item, changes money in return for money or a person purchases clothing in return for clothing, and in all these cases this sort of argument takes place, then each one will be asked to place his hand on the others hand and then the exchange will take place.

Finding out the price of an item

1. A person closed the palm of his hand and says: "Give me that particular item for whatever money is in my hand." And it is not known what is in his hand; whether he has dollars, rands, cents, a gold coin; whether he has one, two or many. Such a transaction is not permissible.
2. In a certain city, two different currencies are in vogue. The person will have to inform the seller that he intends buying a particular item with a particular currency. If the person does not inform him and says that he is selling a particular item for a particular price and the buyer says he will take it, then we will have to see which currency is more in use in that place. The currency that is more in use will have to be given as payment. If both the currencies are used equally, the transaction will not be valid and will be fâsid, i.e. imperfect.
3. A person has some money in his hand, he opens his hand, shows it to the seller and asks him to sell him a particular item for all that money. The seller saw the money in his hand and handed over the item but did not know the exact amount of money that was in the buyer's hand. This transaction is valid.
Similarly, if the buyer places a heap of money before the seller on a mat, etc. and the latter agrees to sell him the item for that heap of money, the sale is valid even if he does not know the exact amount kept before him..
In short, once the seller sees the money, it is not necessary to tell him how much money there is. But if he does not see the money with his own eyes, it is necessary to specify the exact amount. A person says: "I will take this item for 10 coins." If in such a case, he does not specify the total amount of money and the matter is not settled, this transaction will not be valid.
4. A person says:
(a) "Take this item, what is the need to agree on a price? Whatever the price will be, I will collect it from you. How can I take extra from you?"
(b) "You can take this item away. I will find out the price from home and let you know later."
(c) "Someone else had taken a similar item. You can pay me whatever that person had paid."
(d) "Pay me whatever you wish, I will not refuse it. I will accept whatever you give me."
(e) "Find out the price in the bazaar and then pay me whatever the market price is."
(g) "Go and show this item to a certain person and you can pay me whatever he quotes you."

The transaction will be invalid in all the above instances. However, if the price of the item is made known at that very place and the cause which had made the transaction invalid is no more found, the transaction will become valid. If the price was made known after there was a change in their places, then the first transaction will be invalid. However, once the price is made known, they can recommence the transaction.

5. There is a particular shopkeeper from whom one orders whatever one needs and the goods are delivered to the person's home. Today he might order some betel nut, tomorrow he might order some catechu (a vegetable extract eaten with betel leaves), some other day he might order a few coconuts, etc. and when purchasing these items he did not bother to ask about the price and thought to himself that whenever the account comes he will pay whatever he has to pay. Such a transaction is permissible.

Similarly, a person sent a prescription to a chemist requesting for some medicine but did not ask for the price thinking to himself that once he recovers from his sickness he will go and pay whatever he is owing. This is also permissible.

6. A person has got R1 in his hand and says: "I am buying this item for this R1." He has the choice of giving that same R1 or he could take out another R1 and hand it over to the seller. The only condition is that it must not be counterfeit.

7. A person purchased an item for R1. He has the choice of giving a R1 coin, two 50c coins, five 20c coins, etc. As long as they total R1, the seller cannot refuse to accept that money. However, if the person does not give such coins but gives 1c and 2c coins, the seller has the right to accept or refuse. If he does not wish to accept any coins, the buyer will have to pay in notes.

8. A person sold a writing case or a suitcase. The key for both these items will also be considered to be sold. He cannot charge separately for the key of the writing or suit case nor can he withhold the key.

Having knowledge of the item that is to be purchased

1. When purchasing dry groceries, seeds, etc. a person has the choice of purchasing it after having it properly weighed or he could say: "I am buying a certain amount of wheat for R1." Alternatively, he could purchase it as it is (i.e. without having it weighed nor specifying any amount) and say: "I am buying this heap of wheat for R1." No matter how much of wheat may be in that heap, all will belong to him (once he purchases it).

2. When purchasing, mangoes, guavas, oranges, etc. one has the choice of purchasing them by merely counting them or purchasing them in heaps. If a person purchases all the mangoes that are in a basket for R2 without knowing how many there are in it, the transaction will be valid. All the mangoes will be his irrespective of how many come out from that basket.

3. A woman came around selling fruit. The person said to her: "Give me some fruit equal to this brick in weight for R1." The woman agreed to sell the fruit by using the brick as a weight. However, none of them know the weight of the brick itself. Despite this, the transaction will be valid.

4. A person purchased an entire basket of mangoes, guavas, oranges or any other fruit for R100 on the condition that there are 400 mangoes (or whatever other fruit there may be) in that basket. When the mangoes were counted, there were only 300. The person purchasing the mangoes has the choice of taking them as they are or not buying them. If he buys the entire basket, he does not have to give R100. Instead, he will have to pay for only 75% of the total amount. If there are 350 mangoes, he will have to pay for 88% of the total amount. In short, the fewer the mangoes, the lesser he will have to pay.

If, after counting, more than 400 mangoes come out, the balance will belong to the seller. The buyer does not have the right to take more than 400. But if the buyer purchases the entire basket without specifying how many there are, then whatever number comes out will be his; whether they are more or less.

5. A person purchased a head-covering which is made of such a fabric that if a part of it is torn, the entire garment will become spoilt and useless. At the time of purchasing it, the person made this condition that it is 3 metres in length. When it was measured, it turned out to be less than 3 metres. In such a case, the price of this fabric will not be reduced. Instead, the buyer will have to pay the full price that had been agreed upon. However, in such a case, the only concession that they will have is that despite their agreeing on a price, the buyer has the right to take the item or leave it. If more than 3 metres are found in that length of fabric, it will belong to the buyer. He does not have to pay any additional amount of money for it.

6. A woman purchased two silk belts at night. The following morning she noticed that one of the belts is made of cotton. The transaction with regard to both these belts is not permissible; neither the one made of silk nor the one made of cotton. Similarly, if a person purchased two rings on the condition that they are made of turquoise, and later he learns that one of them is not made of turquoise but of something else, the transaction with regard to both is not permissible. If the person still wishes to purchase one of the two or both of them, then the method of doing this is that they should commence the transaction all over again and thereafter the buyer can purchase whichever one he wants.

Purchasing on credit

1. It is permissible to purchase an item on credit. However, it is necessary to specify a period of time, i.e. you will pay the amount after 15 days, after one month or after four months - whatever the case may be. If a person does not specify any period but merely says: "I don't have the money now, I will pay you later", this has two aspects to it: (i) He says: "I will purchase this on condition that I will pay you later." In such a case the transaction will be invalid (faasid). (ii) If the person does not include this condition in the actual transaction, but after purchasing it he says: "I will pay you later", this will be permissible.

If he did not mention anything within the transaction nor anything after the transaction, the sale will be valid and in both these instances he will have to pay cash for the item. If the seller gives on credit on his own accord, it will be permissible. But if he asks for the money immediately, the person will have to give it.

2. At the time of purchasing an item a person says:

(a) "Give me that item, once I get my money I will pay it to you."

(b) "When my brother comes, I will pay you."

(c) "Once the orchard bears its fruit, I will pay you."

(d) Alternatively, the seller says: "Take the item now, and you can pay me whenever you wish."

In all these cases, the transaction will be invalid. One has to specify a period of time and then purchase the item. If the person purchases the item and then says any of the above, the transaction will be valid and the seller has the right to ask for the money immediately. The exception is that the seller cannot demand for the money before the orchard can bear its fruit.

3. When paying in cash, the price of 200 grams of wheat is R1. But if the person buys on credit, he receives only 150 grams. This transaction is valid on the condition that the buyer is informed of this at that very time.

4. The above rule applies when the seller asked the buyer whether he is going to pay cash or take it on credit. When he replied that he is going to pay cash, the seller gave him 200 grams. And when he said credit, the seller gave him 150 grams. But if the seller says: "If you pay cash, this will be the price, and if you take it on credit, this will be the price", then such a transaction will not be valid (since the buyer has not specified his intention of paying cash of taking on credit).

5. A person purchased an item after promising to pay for it after one month. On the expiry of one month he went to the seller and told him that he must give him a respite for another 15 days, after which he will pay him his money. If the seller agrees, it will be permissible. However, he also has the right to demand the money immediately.

6. Once the person has the money, it is not permissible to delay in paying. He cannot say: "I won't give you today, I'll give it to you tomorrow", "Don't come to collect it now, come at such-and-such time", "I don't have change now, once I get some change I will pay you". All this is harâm. Once the person asks for the money, you should make the change and give him his money immediately.

However, if the person purchases something on credit and promises to pay after a certain period of time, then once the time expires, it will be wâjib on him to pay the money. It is not permissible to delay or make the person "run" for his money once the specified time expires. But if the person does not have the money nor was he able to obtain it from someone else, then he has no alternative but to pay it the moment he receives the money. Once he receives the money, he cannot delay in fulfilling his debt.

1. At the time of purchasing an item, a person says: "I have the right to take or return this item within one day, two days or three days. If I wish, I will keep it, if not, I will return it to you." This is permissible. He has the choice of returning the item within the period that he specifies or of keeping it.
2. A person says: "I have the right to take or return this item within three days." Three days expired and this person did not say anything nor did he return it. He will now have to take that item. He does not have the right to return it. However, if the seller permits him to do so, it will be permissible. He cannot return it without obtaining the consent of the seller.
3. It is not permissible to make such a condition for more than three days. If a person makes a condition for four or five days, we will have to see whether he makes a decision within three days or not. If he returns the item within three days, it will be considered to be returned. If he decides to keep it, the transaction will be valid. If three days pass without knowing whether he is going to keep the item or return it, the transaction will become invalid.
4. Similarly, the person selling the item also has the right to say: "I have the choice of taking my item back within three days." This is also permissible.
5. At the time of purchasing an item, a person says: "I have the right of returning this item within three days." The next day he comes and says: "I have decided to keep this item and I am not returning it." Once he says this, his right will be forfeited and he cannot return that item. In fact, even if he goes to his own house and says that he has decided to keep that item, his right will be forfeited. When a person wishes to cancel his transaction or return the item, he will have to do it in front of the seller, he cannot do it behind his back or in his absence.
6. A woman says: "My mother has the right - if she says that I should keep it, I will do so, if not, I will return it." This is permissible. This woman or her mother can return the item within three days. If this woman or her mother come and inform the seller that she has decided to keep the item, this right will now be forfeited and the item cannot be returned.
7. A person takes two or three pieces of cloth and says: "I have the right for three days. Whichever one I like, I will pay R10 per piece and keep it." This is permissible and he can select one piece of cloth within three days. But if the person takes four or five pieces of cloth (i.e. more than three) and says that he will select one from them, this transaction will be invalid.
8. A person had stipulated the right to return the item within three days. Thereafter, he began using it at home, e.g. if it is something that is used to cover himself, he began covering himself with it. If it is something that is worn he began wearing it. If it is something to lay out, he began laying it out. In all these cases, the right to return the item will now be forfeited.
9. However, if a person uses an item merely to see whether it is suitable or not, e.g. a woman purchases a dress, sheet or carpet. Thereafter, she puts on the dress to check whether it fits her well or not and removes it immediately thereafter, wraps the sheet around her to check whether its length and width is suitable or not, or spreads the carpet to see whether its length and breadth is suitable or not. In all these cases, she still has the right to return these items if she wishes to do so.

Purchasing an item without seeing it

1. A person purchases an item without having seen it. This transaction is valid. However, once he sees the item, he has the right to return it or keep it. This is irrespective of whether there is any defect in the item or not. Even if the item is exactly as he had envisaged it to be, he still has the right to return it or keep it.
2. A person sold an item without even looking at it. This person who sells the item does not have the right to take it back after he sees it. Only the buyer has the right of returning an item after seeing it.
3. A hawker came selling peas. The top of the heap had all good quality peas. Upon seeing this, the buyer bought the entire basket of peas. However, the peas that were in the bottom of the heap were of an inferior quality. He still has the right to return them. However, if all the produce is of the same quality, it will be sufficient to see a few. Once he does this, he forfeits the right to return them irrespective of whether he sees all the produce or not.
4. A person bought guavas, pomegranates, coconuts or anything else which is generally not all the same. As long as the person does not see all the fruit, he will have the right to return them. By his seeing a few of the fruit, he does not forfeit the right to return.
5. If a person purchases something that is to be consumed (either by eating it or drinking it), he does not forfeit his right to return by merely seeing it. He should also taste it. If he does not like it, he has the right to return it.
6. A person had seen an item long ago. He purchased it today but did not look at it at the time of purchasing it (thinking that there is no need to do so since he had seen it previously). When he took it home, it was exactly as he had seen it a long time ago. After seeing it, he does not have the right to return it. However, if, after seeing it after so long, he notices some difference in it, he has the choice of keeping it or returning it.

Defects in an item

1. When selling an item, it is wajib on the person to show all the defects that may be found in it. It is ḥarâm to conceal the defects and to convince the person into buying such an item.
2. After purchasing an item, a person noticed a defect in it, e.g. a woman notices that a cloth has been eaten up, a shawl has some moths in it or she notices any other defect. She now has the choice of keeping the item as it is, or returning it to the seller. However, if she decides to keep it, she will have to pay the full price of the item. It is not permissible for her to reduce an amount from the total price as a compensation for the defect. But if the seller agrees to reduce the price because of the defect, it will be permissible for her to pay less.
3. A person had purchased some fabric and kept it aside. A child ripped off a corner of that fabric or cut it with a pair of scissors. Thereafter, he noticed that it is damaged from the inside as well and that a rat has eaten it at several places. The person cannot return this item because one additional defect took place at his house (i.e. when the child had cut it). However, he can have the price reduced as a compensation for the defect that took place at the shopkeeper's place (i.e. the several places that had been eaten by a rat). People who know the value of the item should be asked to estimate its present value and the price reduced accordingly.
4. Similarly, if a defect is noticed after a fabric has been purchased and already cut, it cannot be returned but the price will be reduced. However, if the seller says: "Return the cut fabric and take a full refund, I am not going to reduce the price", he has the right to ask for it and the buyer cannot refuse to return it.

If the fabric has been cut and also sewn and thereafter a defect is noticed, the price will be reduced as a compensation for the defect. In such a case, the seller cannot take his fabric back.

If the buyer sells that fabric or cuts it with the intention of sewing something for her immature child and at the same time making a firm resolution of giving it to the child, and thereafter a defect is noticed, then the price cannot be reduced. But if she cut it with the intention of sewing something for her mature child, the price can be reduced.

5. A person purchased eggs and paid a certain price per egg. When the eggs were broken, all of them turned out to be rotten. The buyer can take all his money back and it will be regarded as if he did not purchase the eggs at all. If a few turn out to be rotten, he can claim the money for those that are rotten.

If a person purchases several eggs which have all been priced together (i.e. he does not pay a certain price per egg), then we will have to see how many rotten eggs come out from the entire lot. If five or six eggs are rotten out of a total of 100 eggs, it will not be considered. But if more than this turns out to be rotten, he can claim the money for those that are rotten.

6. A person purchased cucumbers, sweet-melons, water-melons, pumpkins, almonds, walnuts, etc. When they were cut open or broken open, he noticed that they are rotten. In such a case, check whether they could be used, or they are so bad that they are absolutely useless and have to be thrown away. If they are absolutely useless, this transaction will not be valid and the person must claim all his money back. But if they can be used in some way, he must pay the market value of such items. The full price will not be paid.
7. If, out of 100 almonds, four or five are rotten it will not be considered. But if more than these turn out to be rotten, the person has the choice to reduce the price accordingly.

8. A person purchased 150 grams of wheat for R1 or 100 grams of ghee for R1. A portion of both these items was good, while the balance turned out to be bad. It is not permissible to keep the good and return the bad. If he decides to keep them, he will have to keep all. And if he decides to return them, he will have to return all. However, if the seller agrees to take back all the bad and give you the good, it will be permissible to do so. The buyer cannot do this without the consent of the seller.
9. When there is any defect in an item, the person will only have the right to return it when it is established that there is no indication that the person is happy about taking the defective item. However, once a person agrees to purchase an item after seeing the defect, he does not have the right to return that item. But if the seller takes it back happily, it will be permissible. For example, a person purchased a goat or cow. When he went home with it, he realized that it is sick or there is a wound on its body. Once he notices this defect and expresses his consent and says to himself: "Well, it's okay. I've bought a defective animal", he will no longer have the right to return it. If he does not say anything verbally, but carries out certain actions which show that he is satisfied with the animal, then too will he no longer have the right to return it. For example, if he starts treating its wound and gives it some medication, he will no longer have the right to return it.
10. A person purchased goat's meat. When he went home, he realized that it is the meat of a sheep. He has the right to return it.
11. A woman purchased a pearl necklace or some other jewellery and also wore it at some time or the other. Alternatively, she purchased a pair of shoes and began walking around with it. Now she cannot return these items if she finds any defect in them. However, if she wears the shoes in order to check whether they fit her properly and that she does not experience any discomfort by wearing them, there will be no harm in wearing them for a little while in order to test them and she still has the right to return them if she wishes to do so.
Similarly, if a person purchases a flat-couch (refers to a flat wooden type of bed) or bed and lays them down out of necessity or begins to offer salâh on that couch or uses the bed in some way or the other, he will no longer have the right to return the bed or couch. Other items could be understood in the same manner. That is, once they are used for any purpose, they cannot be returned.
12. At the time of selling an item, a person said: "You better check it properly before you buy it. Later if you find any defect in it, I will not be responsible." Despite the seller saying this, the person purchased the item. Later, he cannot return it irrespective of how many defects it may have. It is permissible for the seller to sell an item in this manner and it is no longer wajib on him to show the defect that may be in the item.

Invalid and improper transactions

1. A transaction which is not considered in the Sharî'ah, which is regarded as useless, and regarding which one will say that it is as if the person did not even purchase the item and the seller did not even sell it, is referred to as bâṭil or invalid. The rule with regard to such a transaction is that the person who purchased the item does not become its owner and that it is still considered to be under the ownership of the seller. Therefore, it is not permissible for the buyer to consume it or to give it to anyone. It is not permissible for him to utilise it in any way.
As for the transaction which has taken place but some sort of shortcoming is found in it, is referred to as fâsid or improper. The rule with regard to such a transaction is that as long as the item does not come into the possession of the buyer, ownership of that item will not be transferred to him. Once he takes possession of it, it will come under his ownership but it is not ḥalâl and ṭayyib. Therefore, it is not permissible for him to consume it or utilise it in any way. Instead, it is wajib to cancel or annul this transaction. If the person wishes to keep it, he must recommence the transaction and then purchase it. If the person did not cancel this transaction and instead, sold the item to someone else, he will be committing a sin. However, it will be permissible for the second buyer to consume it or utilise it in any way and this second transaction will be valid. If the person sold it at a profit, it will be wâjib on him to give the profits in charity. It is not permissible for him to use it for his personal purposes.
2. The custom of selling the fish that is in the lakes or pools of landlords is a bâṭil transaction. All the fish that are in these lakes and pools do not belong to anyone as long as they are not caught and fished out. The person who catches the fish becomes its owner. Once you have understood this aspect, now try and understand the following: if the landlords do not even own those fish, how can it be permissible for them to sell them? Obviously, if the landlord catches the fish himself and then sells it, this will be permissible. If he asks someone else to catch the fish, that person will become its owner. The landlord has no right over the fish which has been caught by that person. In the same way, it is also not permissible for him to prevent people from fishing there.
3. Grass began growing on its own on a person's land. He did not plant it nor did he irrigate it. This grass does not belong to anyone. Anyone can come and cut it and take it away. It is not permissible for the owner of the land to sell it nor is it permissible for him to stop anyone from cutting it. However, if the person irrigated it and put some work into it, it will come under his ownership. Now it will be permissible for him to sell it and to stop others from cutting it as well.
4. The young of an animal that is still in the stomach of the mother cannot be sold before it is born. Such a transaction is bâṭil. However, it is permissible to sell the entire animal. But if the owner says: "I am selling this goat to you but the kid that is in its stomach belongs to me. Once it gives birth to that kid, you will have to give it to me", then such a transaction is fâsid.
5. The milk that is still in the udders of an animal cannot be sold before it can be milked. Such a transaction is bâṭil. The owner will have to milk the cow first and then sell the milk. Similarly, it is prohibited and bâṭil to sell the wool that is on a sheep before it can be sheared.
6. It is not permissible to sell the timber, wood, etc. that is part of the house or roof before removing or digging these items out.
7. It is not permissible to sell the hair, bones, etc. of humans. Such a transaction is bâṭil. It is also not permissible to utilise these things for one's personal purposes.
8. Apart from pigs, the bones, hair and horns of dead animals are pure. It is permissible to use them and to sell them as well.
9. You purchased a goat or any other item for R5 from someone, took possession of it, took it home and had it tied. However, you did not pay for it as yet. Coincidentally, you are unable to pay for it or you decided not to keep it any longer. You therefore went to the person and said: "Take this goat back for R4 and I will give you R1 separately." This selling and this taking away will not be permissible. As long as the person does not give him the full amount in cash, it will not be permissible to sell it to him for a lesser price.
10. A person sold his house on the condition that he will not hand it over immediately. Instead, he will stay in it for one month. Alternatively, he sold it on the condition that the buyer gives him a certain amount of money as a loan. Or a person purchased fabric on the condition that the person who is selling it must cut and sew it. Or he made the condition that he will purchase it on condition that it is delivered to his house. Or he made any other similar condition which is regarded as baseless and prohibited in the Sharî'ah. In all these cases, the transaction will be fâsid.
11. A person purchased a cow on condition that it gives four litres of milk. This transaction is fâsid. However, if he did not specify any amount but merely made the condition that this cow gives a lot of milk, the transaction will be permissible.
12. A person purchased animate toys (such as dolls) for his children. This transaction is bâṭil. Such toys have no value in the Sharî'ah. Therefore, no price will be paid for them and if someone happens to break them, he will not have to pay any compensation.
13. If you purchased dry groceries, oil, ghee, etc. for a certain amount per kilogram, the seller could have given you these items in any of the following three ways:
(a) He weighed these items in your presence or in the presence of the person whom you sent.
(b) He did not weigh them. Instead, he asked you to go home and told you that he will send the items to you.
(c) The items were already weighed and kept aside and when you asked for them, he merely picked them up and gave them to you without re-weighing them.
The rule with regard to (a) is that once you bring the items home, you do not have to weigh them. You can eat them, drink them, use them, sell them, and do whatever else you like without having to re-weigh them. All this is permissible and valid.
The rule with regard to (b) and (c) is that as long as you do not weigh them yourself, you cannot consume them, you cannot sell them nor can you use them in any way. If you sell them without weighing them, the transaction will be fâsid. Even if you weigh them after this, the transaction will not be proper.

14. Before he could sell you these items, he weighed them and showed them to you. Thereafter, you purchased them but he did not re-weigh them. In such a case, it is necessary for you (the buyer) to re-weigh them. You cannot consume them or sell them without re-weighing them. Although he weighed them and showed them to you before you could buy them, this weighing of his will not be considered.
15. All items apart from land, properties, houses, etc. cannot be resold as long as the buyer does not take possession of them after buying them.
16. A person purchased a goat or any other item. After a few days another person comes and says that the goat actually belongs to him. Someone had taken it away and sold it to you without it belonging to him. If this person can substantiate his claim with two witnesses in the presence of a Shar'î judge, the goat will have to be given to him once the judge passes judgement in his favour. This person (who had purchased the goat) cannot claim the money from him. Instead, he can claim the money from the person from whom he had purchased the goat.
17. A fowl, goat or cow died. It is harâm to sell that animal. Such a transaction is bâṭil. In fact, it is not even permissible to give this dead animal to the toilet-cleaners and tanners for their consumption. However, if you give it to the toilet-cleaner or tanner for throwing away and he picks it up and eats it, there will be no blame on you. It is permissible for you to have the animal skinned, it's skin treated and tanned and thereafter to sell it or use it for your personal purposes.
18. Once a person decides to purchase an item, has it weighed, agrees on a price and the seller also agrees to sell it at a particular price, it will not be permissible for someone else to come and bid a higher price and take it away. Similarly, it is not permissible for another person to say: "Don't buy from him. I will give it to you at a better price."
19. A hawker sold four guavas to you for R1. Another person bargained with him and got five guavas for R1. On seeing this, you have no right to ask him for one more guava. It is not permissible and harâm to take it forcefully. You can only take what you had agreed upon with him.
20. A person is selling something but he does not want to sell it to you. It is not permissible to take the item forcefully and give him the money. This is because he is the owner of that item, he can sell it if he wishes. If not, he does not have to sell it. He also has the right to sell it to whomsoever he wishes. Very often, the police take things forcefully. This is absolutely harâm. If any woman's husband is a policeman and he brings any item home, she must find out properly as to where he obtained it from. She must not use that item without asking him.
21. A person bought a kilo of potatoes. Thereafter, he took a few more potatoes forcefully. This is not permissible. But if the seller gives a few more on his own will, it will be permissible to accept them. Similarly, once a price has been agreed upon and the person takes the item, it will not be permissible to give an amount less than the price that was agreed upon. If the seller happily reduces the price on his own, it will be permissible.
22. If there is a bee-hive in a person's house, he will be regarded as its owner. It is not permissible for anyone else to break it or take it away without his permission. If a bird gives birth to some chicks in a person's house, he does not become the owner of those birds. Instead, whoever catches them will become their owner. However, it is not permissible to catch the chicks and trouble them.

Selling at a profit or at cost

1. I purchased an item for R1. I have the right to sell this item for R1, R10, R20, R50 or at any other price. There is no sin in this. However, if the transaction was settled in a way that the buyer says: "Make a profit of 10c on the item and sell it to me", and you say: "Okay, I will sell it to you after making a profit of 10c on it", then in such a case it is not permissible for you to make a profit of more than 10c on that item. Alternatively, the buyer says: "For whatever price you purchased it, add 40c profit to it and sell it to me." Even in such a case, it will be wajib on you to quote the correct price and it will be harâm to make more than 40c profit. Similarly, if you tell the buyer: "I will sell this to you at cost and I won't make any profit from you", it will not be permissible to make any profit. It will be wâjib to quote the cost price.
2. You intend purchasing an item and you ask the seller to sell it to you at a profit of 10c. He replies: "Okay, I sell it to you at a profit of 10c." Alternatively, you say: "Sell it to me at your cost price." He replies: "Okay, give me that amount and don't give me any profit." However, in both cases, he did not tell you the cost price of the item as yet. In such a case, if he quotes you his cost price before getting up from his place, the transaction will be valid. But if he does not quote you the price at that place, and says: "Take the item now, I will check the price and inform you" or says something else, then in such a case the transaction will be fâsid.
3. After taking the item, the buyer learns that the person hadn't quoted the correct cost price and had made a profit more than what he had promised. In such a case the buyer does not have the right to give a lesser amount. If he wishes to purchase the item, he will have to pay the price that was quoted to him. However, he does have the right to return the item if he does not wish to purchase it. If the seller had agreed to sell the item at cost and had promised that he will not make any profit and thereafter quoted an amount that is more than his cost price, then he does not have the right to take more than the cost price. The buyer has the right to pay the cost price and not pay the additional amount that he had quoted.
4. You purchased an item on credit. As long as you do not inform other buyers that you have purchased it on credit, it will not be permissible for you to sell it at a profit or at cost (if mention of the cost price is made at the time of sale). Instead, you should inform them that you purchased the item on credit. In so doing, it will be permissible for you to sell it at cost or at a profit. However, if you do not make any mention of your cost prices, it will be permissible for you to sell it at whatever price you wish.
5. You purchased a cloth for R100. Thereafter, you had it dyed at a cost of R4. Alternatively, you had it washed or sewn for R4. It will now be understood that you acquired it for R104. It will now be permissible for you to mention its cost price as being R104 and thereafter to make your profit on this amount. However, you should not say that you purchased it for R104. Instead, you should say that it landed you at R104 so that it is not regarded as a lie.
6. You purchased a goat for R100. You kept it with you for one month and it cost you R10 to feed it in this one month. It will be permissible for you to quote the cost price as being R110, and sell it at a profit accordingly. However, if this goat produces milk, you will have to subtract that amount accordingly as well, e.g. if it cost you R10 to feed this goat and it produced milk to the value of R5, you will have to subtract this amount from the R10 and say that this goat landed you at R105.

There are many other masâ'il in this regard but since women do not encounter them very frequently, we have not mentioned them. (Bearing in mind that Bahishti Zewar was originally written for women).

Transactions based on Ribâ or Interest

There is a very major sin in conducting transactions which are based on ribâ or interest. The Quran and Hadîth have mentioned many harms and evils in this regard and have greatly emphasized abstention from such transactions. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam cursed the payer of interest, the receiver of interest, the person who acts as a proxy for such a transaction, the person who writes it down and the person who witnesses such a transaction. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam also added that the payer and receiver of interest are both equal in this crime. It is therefore necessary to be extremely cautious in abstaining from such transactions. The masâ'il in this regard are very intricate. On trivial transactions one can be regarded as committing the sin of involving himself in interest. Many people do not even realize that they have committed a sin. We will explain the necessary masâ'il in this regard. When conducting any transaction, always bear these masâ'il in mind.

Note: According to the norm in India and Pakistan, all things can be divided into four categories:
(1) Gold and silver, and items that are made from them.
(2) Items other than gold and silver that are sold by weight, such as dry groceries, crops, steel, copper, wool, vegetables, etc.
(3) Items that are sold by measurement, such as fabrics.
(4) Items that are sold by counting, such as eggs, mangoes, guavas, oranges, goats, cattle, horses, etc.
Try and understand the rules of all the above individually.

Gold and Silver

1. There are several ways of purchasing gold and silver. One is that gold could be purchased in exchange for gold or silver in exchange for silver, e.g. a person purchases gold with a gold coin which he has in his possession or silver with a silver coin which he has in his possession. In other words, the item that is being purchased is of the same category as that with which it is being purchased. In such a case, two factors are wajib: (i) the gold or the silver on both sides will have to be equal, (ii) the transaction must be complete before the buyer and the seller can separate, there must be no outstanding amount. If they conduct this transaction contrary to any of these two factors, it will be interest. For example, if you purchase silver with a R1 coin (which is made of silver), you will have to purchase the silver that is equal in weight as that of the R1 coin. If it is more or less than the R1 coin, it will be interest. Similarly, if you hand over the R1 coin and he does not give you the silver immediately, instead he promises to give it to you after a short while and goes away or, you do not hand over the R1 coin to him and instead you take the silver on credit, then this will also be interest.

2. The second method is that the same category is not found on both sides. Instead, one person has gold while the other has silver. The rule in this regard is that it is not necessary for them to be equal in weight. It is permissible to purchase as much gold as possible with a R1 coin. Similarly, it is permissible to purchase as much silver as possible with a gold coin. However, this transaction will have to be completed before the two can separate. In this case it is also wâjib to abstain from any credit, as mentioned in the previous mas'ala.

3. The market value of silver has risen sharply. In other words, a R1 coin is selling for R1,20 and no one is giving it for R1. Alternatively, a piece of silver jewellery has been exquisitely designed and its weight is equal to 10 R1 coins of silver. However, one cannot purchase it for less than the weight of 12 R1 coins of silver. In order to save yourself from interest, an alternative method is that you should not purchase it with silver coins. Instead, purchase it with money (notes) or normal ordinary coins. However, you should not purchase the R1 coin with R1,20. If you do so, it will be interest. Similarly, if you wish to purchase R8 worth of silver for R9, pay the person with R7 worth of silver and R2 in cash. In so doing, you will be purchasing R7 worth of silver with R7 worth of silver, and the balance of the silver will actually be paid for with your R2. In short, if you wish to purchase silver with silver always tender less silver than what is actually being purchased and the remainder should be paid in cash (notes or coins).

4. If both the buyer and seller agree, then an easy method will be to add some money on that side where the silver is less in weight.

5. An easier method is that each of them should keep whatever silver he wishes to keep, and the other should keep whatever silver coins he wishes to keep. However, each one should also add some money to his silver or silver coins. He should then say: "I am buying this silver and this money in exchange for these silver coins and this money." In so doing, they will save themselves from all technicalities.

6. If the price of silver has dropped and one is able to purchase R1.50 worth of silver for R1 (made of silver) and one feels that if he has to purchase R1.50 worth of silver for R1, he will suffer a loss, then the method of avoiding this and also avoiding any interest is that he should include some money (not made of silver) in the price of the silver irrespective of how little it may be, e.g. he purchased R15 worth of silver for R10. In this way, it would be understood that the silver worth R9 was in exchange of the nine silver coins of R1 each whilst the cash (i.e. other coins not made of silver) of R1 was in exchange of the remainder.

7. A person wishes to purchase high quality silver in exchange for his inferior quality silver and is unable to acquire an amount of high quality silver which is equal in weight to his inferior quality silver. In such a case, he should first sell his inferior quality silver for whatever price he may be able to get. Thereafter, he should purchase the high quality silver with the money that he receives. In buying and selling, the rules that have been mentioned above should also be borne in mind. Alternatively, both the buyer and seller could include some money in both the silver and thereafter undertake the transaction.

8. Most women purchase silver laces, brocades, tassels, etc. from the bazaars. They should also bear the above masâ'il in mind because this is also silver and silver coins are being paid in exchange for these silver items. Even in this case, an easy method will be to include some money on either side and then undertake the transaction.

9. If a person purchases an item which is made of gold or silver and it is such that it is entirely made of gold or entirely made of silver and it does not contain anything else, then the same rule will apply. That is, if a gold item is being purchased with silver or silver coins, or a silver item is being purchased with gold coins, it will be permissible to purchase that item irrespective of the difference in weight. The only factor that they have to worry about is that the transaction must be completed there and then. None of the parties must have any outstanding amount. But if a silver item is being purchased with silver coins or a gold item is being purchased with gold coins, it will be wâjib for them to be equal in weight. If there is any shortfall or extra on either side, the item should be purchased through the above-mentioned methods.

10. The item is such that it has some other metal or stone in addition to the silver. For example, an armlet has been filled with sealing-wax, a stone has been set onto a nose-ring, a stone has been set into a ring, or an armlet has not been filled with sealing-wax but instead it has been beaded with strands of wire (and beads). If these items have been purchased with silver coins, then check the amount of silver they contain. Is the silver in the item which you have purchased equal in weight as that of the silver coins, is it more or is it less? If the silver in the item is definitely less than the weight of your silver coins, this transaction is permissible. If it is equal or more, the transaction will be regarded as interest. In order to save yourself from this interest, the above-mentioned methods should be employed. That is, the silver coins with which you will be paying should be less in value than the silver that the item contains and include some cash in order to fill in the balance. The condition or prerequisite of the entire transaction being carried out at one time (i.e. without any credit on either side) has also to be adhered to in all these masâ'il.

11. You have taken someone else's ring in exchange for your ring. Check if both have any stone or gem. If both the rings have a stone or gem, this exchange is permissible irrespective of whether the amount of silver in both the rings is equal, less or more. However, it is necessary that this exchange takes place in one sitting.

If both the rings are plain, i.e. without any stone, then the condition is that the silver will have to be equal. Even if there is a slight difference, it will be regarded as interest.

If one of the rings are plain and the other has a stone, it will be permissible to exchange one for the other only if the plain ring has more silver than the ring which has a stone. If it is not so, it will be harâm to exchange and it will be regarded as interest.

Similarly, if this transaction and exchange does not take place at once; i.e. one of them hands over his ring immediately while the other says that he will give it at a later stage, then this will also be regarded as interest.

12. In all those masâ'il where we said that it is a condition or a prerequisite for the transaction to be executed in one sitting or at one time - this means that the transaction must be completed before the two can separate. If one of them separates or moves away before the transaction can be completed, it will not be considered and this will also be regarded as interest. For example, you purchase some gold, silver, or a gold and silver item from the jeweller in exchange for R10 worth of silver. In such a case, you should hand over the silver coins there and then. In the same way, the jeweller should hand over the item to you there and then. If the jeweller does not have the silver with him and says that he will go home just now and send the silver item to you, this will not be permissible. Instead, he should send someone to bring it for him. At the same time, you should not move from that place until the silver item is brought nor should you allow the jeweller to move away from there. If the jeweller asks you to go home with him and that he will give it to you over there, you should follow him closely and try to be with him all the time. If he disappears into the house or disappears somewhere else, it will be a sin and the transaction will not be permissible. You will have to renew the entire transaction.

13. After purchasing the item, you went home to bring the silver coins, or the jeweller went to relieve himself or went into the back of his shop for some work. In so doing the two of you were separated from each other. This is not permissible and the transaction will be regarded as interest.

14. If you do not have the silver coins with you at that time and you wish to purchase the item on credit, then the method of purchasing the item is that whatever amount you have to pay for the item, borrow that amount from the person as a loan. Once you have taken that amount, pay for the item that you wish to purchase, and the responsibility to re-pay the loan will remain on your shoulders. You can re-pay this loan whenever you wish.

15. You purchased a head-covering or hat which has been embroidered with silver at a price of R10 worth of silver. In such a case, try to estimate the amount of silver that will come out from that head-covering. After estimating the amount of silver, it will be wajib on you to pay an equivalent amount from your silver coins immediately. The balance of the price could be paid whenever you wish. The same rule will apply to pre-set jewellery. For example, you purchased jewellery to the value of R50 in silver while it has R20 worth of silver in it. In such a case, you will have to pay the R20 immediately, and the balance could be paid whenever you wish.

16. You purchased cash money in exchange for silver coins. The rule in this regard is that it is not necessary for the transaction to be executed immediately. Instead, it will be sufficient if it is fulfilled by one of the parties. For example, you gave the silver immediately while he gave the cash money after some time. Alternatively, he gave you the cash money immediately, while you gave him the silver after separating from him. This is permissible. However, if you take small change (coins in small denominations) together with the cash money, this small change will have to be given there and then.

However, it should be borne in mind that this rule with regard to cash will only be applicable when the shop-keeper has the cash money in his possession but is unable to hand it over immediately due to some reason, or because it is still at home and he will bring it for you from there. But if he did not have the money in his possession and said that he will give it to you after selling some of his goods or, he gave you a part of the money now and said that when he makes a sale and receives some money you must come and take the balance of what he owes you; this will not be permissible. Since most of these debts take place on account of an absence of money, it is therefore preferable not to leave any money on credit. If it becomes necessary to undertake such a transaction, take whatever money the person has as a loan and let him keep the silver as an amânah. Once he gives you all the money undertake the transaction.

17. If a person gives gold coins in exchange for silver coins, it is wâjib for both of them to be present and for the transaction to be carried out in the presence of the buyer and seller.

18. A person purchased a gold or silver item with gold or silver coins and made the condition that he has the right to keep the item or return it within one day or three days. This is not permissible. One should not make conditions of this nature in such transactions.

Items sold by weight

1. We will now explain the rules with regard to items sold by weight, such as dry groceries, meat, steel, copper, vegetables, salt, etc. If a person wishes to exchange or purchase any of the above-mentioned items (or items that fall under this category) in exchange for the same item, e.g. he wishes to exchange wheat in return for wheat, rice in exchange for rice, flour in exchange for flour or any other similar item which is the same, then the rule in this regard is that it is wâjib to take the following two factors into consideration: (i) the weight of the item will have to be equal on both sides. Even the slightest difference in weight will not be permitted. If not, it will be regarded as interest. (ii) If the two parties do not take possession of the respective items, the minimum requirement is that the wheat of both should be kept separately. You should take your wheat, weigh it, keep it separately and tell him that this wheat is kept over here, he can take it whenever he wishes. In the same way, he should also weigh his wheat, keep it separately and tell you that this wheat is kept over here and that you can take it whenever you wish. If they do not do this and separate from each other (or go away), they will be committing the sin of interest.

2. A person wishes to give his inferior quality wheat in exchange for wheat that is of a high quality, or inferior quality flour in exchange for flour that is of a high quality. When engaging in exchanges of this nature, it is obvious that no one would give an equal amount. In order to save oneself from interest, one should sell this inferior quality wheat or flour in exchange for money. For example, by selling a certain amount of flour for R2. Thereafter, he should purchase the high quality flour (or wheat) with the R2 that he received. This is permissible.

3. If an item is being exchanged for another item, e.g. a person gives some wheat and takes rice, barley, gram, corn, salt, meat, vegetables, etc., then in such a case it is not wâjib for the weight of both the items to be exactly the same. He can give a kilo of wheat in exchange for 10 kilos of rice or any other item. He could also give a kilo of wheat in exchange for a fraction of a kilo of any other item.

However, the second factor is wâjib here as well. That is, the transaction must be executed in the presence of both the persons. Alternatively, the minimum is that the items of both the persons must be kept separately. If they do not do this, they will be committing the sin of interest.

4. A woman purchased vegetables from the hawker in exchange for a kilo of gram. She then separated herself from there and went into the house to bring some wheat. This is harâm and not permissible. She will have to recommence the entire transaction.

5. Items which are sold by weight were purchased with silver coins, money, clothes, or any other item which is not sold by weight but sold by measurement or by counting. For example, the person gave a metre of material and took some wheat or similar item (which is sold in weight) in exchange. Alternatively, he gave some wheat or gram and took some guavas, oranges, pears, eggs, or any other item that is sold by counting. In short, on one side we have an item that is sold by weight, and the other side we have an item that is sold by counting or measuring. In such a case, none of the two factors which we had mentioned will be wajib. For R1, a person can purchase as much wheat, flour, or vegetables as he wishes. Similarly, he can give some clothes and take as much dry groceries as he wishes. By giving some wheat, gram, etc. he can take as much guavas, oranges, etc. as he wishes. All this is possible irrespective of whether the entire transaction is executed in one sitting or whether it is completed after them separating. In all cases this transaction will be correct.

6. On one side there is sifted flour while on the other side there is un-sifted flour. Alternatively, on one side there is course flour while on the other side there is fine flour. When exchanging such flour, it will be wâjib for them to be equal in weight. It is not permissible to have any difference in the weight. If it becomes necessary to exchange it in this way, the above-mentioned methods should be adopted.

If on one side you have wheat flour and on the other side you have gram flour or rice flour, then in such a case it will not be wâjib to have an equal weight of both. However, the second factor, i.e. that the transaction must be executed in one sitting, is wâjib.

7. In no way is it permissible to exchange wheat for flour. This is irrespective of whether you give a kilo of wheat in exchange for a kilo of flour, or whether there is any difference in their weight. In all cases it is not permissible. However, if the person gives some wheat and does not take any wheat flour, instead he takes the flour of some other item such a gram flour, it will be permissible to do so. However, the transaction will have to be executed there and then.

8. A person gave mustard seeds and took mustard oil in return or he gave sesame seeds in exchange for sesame oil. In such a case you should check whether this oil is definitely more than the oil that can be extracted from these mustard or sesame seeds or not. If this oil is more, it will be permissible to undertake such a transaction provided it is executed there and then. If it is equal to or less, or you have a doubt as to whether it is more or not, it will not be permissible. Instead it will be regarded as interest.

9. A person gave beef in exchange for mutton. It is not wâjib for the weight of both to be the same. There can be a difference in the weight. However, the transaction will have to be executed there and then.

10. A woman gave her water pitcher and took another one in exchange. Alternatively, she exchanged her water pitcher for a small pot or pan. In such a case it is a condition for both the items to be equal in weight and for the transaction to be executed there and then. If there is a slight difference in the weight, it will be interest. This is because both the items are made of copper and they will therefore be regarded as being of the same category. If they are equal in weight but the transaction was not executed there and then, it will also be interest. However, if one item is made of copper and the other of steel, brass or any other metal, it will be permissible to have some difference in weight. However, the transaction will have to be executed there and then.

11. A woman purchases a kilo of wheat on credit from a person and says: "I don't have any wheat. However, in compensation for your wheat I will give you two kilos of gram." This is not permissible because it means that the woman is exchanging her gram for wheat and at the time of exchanging it is necessary to have the entire transaction to be executed there and then. There must be no credit remaining. However, if the need arises to carry out such a transaction, she should take the wheat on credit but she should not mention that she will give two kilos of gram in exchange for it. Instead, after some time she should bring the gram and inform the person thus: "I am giving you this gram in exchange for the wheat that I had taken from you." This is permissible.

12. In all the above-mentioned masâ'il it is a prerequisite for the entire transaction to be executed there and then. If this is not done, then the minimum is that both the items should be weighed there and then and kept separately. If this is not done, the transaction will be regarded as interest.

Items sold by measurement or counting

1. The following rules apply to items that are not sold by weight, but sold either by measurement or counting. If a particular type of item is exchanged for the same type of item, e.g. guavas are exchanged for guavas, or oranges are exchanged for oranges, or a fabric is exchanged for similar fabric, then in all these cases it is not a prerequisite for both the items to be equal. It is permissible to have some difference. However, it is wâjib for the transaction to be executed there and then.
If the item that is being exchanged is different from the other item, e.g. guavas are exchanged for oranges, wheat is exchanged for guavas or a fine fabric is exchanged for a coarse fabric, this will be permissible under all circumstances. It is not wâjib for both the items to be equal nor is it wâjib to execute the transaction there and then (i.e. it is permissible to take, for example, the guavas now and give the oranges later on).

1. The essence of this entire explanation is that apart from gold and silver, if the same item is on either side and it is sold by weight, e.g. wheat in exchange for wheat or gram in exchange for gram, then it is wâjib for them to be equal in weight and it is also wâjib for the entire transaction to be executed there and then.
If the same item is found on either side but it is not sold by weight, e.g. guavas in exchange for guavas, oranges in exchange for oranges or fabric in exchange for a similar fabric or, there are different items on either side but both are sold by weight, e.g. wheat in exchange for gram or gram in exchange for rice, then in both these cases it is not wâjib for them to be equal in weight. A difference in weight is permitted. However, it is wâjib to execute the entire transaction there and then.
Where both these factors are not found, i.e. the items are different on either side and both of them are not sold by weight, then in such a case a difference is permitted and it is also not wâjib to execute the entire transaction there and then. For example, exchanging guavas for oranges. Understand these masâ'il well.
2. A utensil made of china was exchanged for another such utensil of a different quality. Alternatively, a utensil made of china was exchanged for an enamelled copper utensil. Equality in these items is not wâjib. It is also permissible to give one such item in exchange for two such items. Similarly, it is permissible to give one needle in exchange for several needles. However, if there are copper utensils on either side or enamelled copper utensils on either side, then in such a case, the transaction will have to be executed there and then. But if the type is different, e.g. a utensil made of china in exchange for an enamelled copper utensil, then even this prerequisite is not wâjib.
3. Your neighbour comes to you and tells you: "Give me the rotis which you have made with one kilo of flour because a few visitors have come to my house. In return for these rotis, you can take a kilo or one and quarter kilos of flour or wheat. Alternatively, give me these rotis now and later you can take the flour or wheat from me." This is permissible.
4. When sending your servant or maid to purchase an item, explain to them carefully as to how they should conduct these transactions. It should not occur that they purchase something in an incorrect manner which would involve an interest transaction whereby you and all your children eat that item and are thereby caught up in eating something harâm. The sin of all those whom you feed from such food, e.g. your husband, your guests, etc. will fall on your shoulders.

Bay'us Salam* or Forward buying

1. Prior to harvesting or after harvesting the crops, one gives R100 to a person and says: "(After two or three months) in a certain month, on a certain day, I will take wheat in exchange for this R100 which I am giving you now." In addition to this, the person also specified the quantity of wheat that he will take in exchange for this money. This transaction is valid. He will have to give the wheat in the month and date which he had specified and at that very price which they had agreed upon. This is irrespective of whether the market value of the wheat on that specified date is more or less than the price that he had specified. Such a transaction is known as bay'us salam. In order for this transaction to be valid, there are several conditions. Try and understand them thoroughly.
(a) The type, quality, class, etc. of the wheat (or whatever other crop one is purchasing) should be clearly mentioned so that there is no dispute when taking delivery of the item. For example, he must state: "You must give me a certain type of wheat. It must not be too fine nor too coarse. It must be of a high quality and not of an inferior quality. It must not be mixed with anything else such as gram, peas, etc. It must be thoroughly dried and not wet." In short, whatever type of item he wishes to purchase, he must clearly state how it should be so that there is no dispute later. If, at that time, he did not stipulate but merely said: "You must give me wheat in exchange for this R100", then this transaction will not be permissible. Alternatively, if he merely said that he must give him some husk or rice without specifying the type or quality; then this will not be permissible.
(b) The second condition is that he must also specify the weight, that for R100 he will take 10 kilos or 15 kilos or whatever the amount may be. If the person says that he must give it to him according to the market rate at that time or that he must give 2 kilos more than whatever the market rate will be at that time, this will not be permissible. The market rate will not be considered. At the time when making the agreement, the amount must be decided upon and once the stipulated date arrives, he must take the specified amount.
(c) The third condition is that he must also specify the price that he is going to pay, i.e. he is going to take the wheat for R100 or R200 or whatever the case may be. If the person does not specify this clearly but speaks in vague terms by saying that he will take some wheat for a few rands, then this is not valid.
(d) The fourth condition is that he must pay all the money at that very time and at that very place. If they agree on the entire transaction, separate and go away, and then the person comes back to pay the money, this agreement of theirs will be invalid and they will have to recommence the entire transaction. Similarly, if the person pays R50 in cash and the balance of R50 after some time, the bay'us salam will be valid in respect of the R50 and invalid in respect of the balance R50.
(e) The fifth condition is that the person must specify the time of taking delivery which must be a minimum of one month. That he will take the wheat after one month on a particular date. It is not permissible to stipulate a period less than one month. He can stipulate more than one month irrespective of how much more it may be. However, he must clearly state the month, day and date so that there is no dispute and the person does not say that he will not give it you immediately and you demand that you want it immediately. Therefore, stipulate everything before hand. If the person does not specify the month, day and date, and instead says that once the crop is harvested you must give it, this will not be valid.
(f) The sixth condition is that the person must specify the place where he wants the wheat, either in this town or in some other town. Alternatively, he could ask the person to deliver it to his house. In short, the person should clearly state where he wishes to have the wheat delivered or collected. If the person does not specify the place it will not be valid. However, if it is an item that is light and there is no labour involved in transporting the item, e.g. a woman purchases musk or pearls, etc. then it is not necessary to mention the place. Wherever he meets the person, he can hand it over.
If the bay'us salam is executed according to the above-mentioned conditions, the transaction will be valid, if not, it will not be valid.
2. If items other than wheat and other crops are such that at the time of purchasing them they can be clearly described in order to prevent any dispute at the time of taking delivery, then bay'us salam with regard to such items will also be valid. Such items include eggs, bricks and clothes. However, all the necessary details will have to be mentioned, e.g. he will have to specify the size of the bricks, their length, their width, etc. The cloth will have to be described as to whether it is of silk, how fine or coarse it should be, etc. The eggs will have to be described as to whether they will be farm eggs or eggs produced from battery chickens, etc. In short, all the necessary details will have to be clearly mentioned so that there is no dispute later on.
3. A person purchased five bags or five baskets of husk for R100 on the basis of bay'us salam. This transaction will not be valid because you get different sizes of bags and baskets. However, if they are able to specify and agree upon a certain size or conduct the transaction by weight, it will be valid.
4. An additional condition for the validity of bay'us salam is that from the time that they conduct the transaction till the time that they specified for delivery of the item, that item must be available in the market and it must not become scarce. In the course of this time, if this item becomes absolutely scarce to such an extent that it is unavailable in the markets of this country and can only be obtained from elsewhere after much difficulty, then this bay'us salam will be invalid.
5. When conducting the transaction, the person says: "After the crop is harvested, in a certain month I will take the fresh wheat or, I will take the wheat that comes from a particular farm." This is not permissible. Such a condition should therefore not be made. When the specified time approaches, the person can give the old or the fresh wheat. However, if the fresh wheat is already harvested, it will be permissible to make a condition with regard to the fresh wheat.
6. You had agreed to take wheat to the value of R100. The specified time expired and went beyond that as well and this person did not give the wheat as yet. Nor is there any hope of receiving it. In such a case it is not permissible for you to ask him not to give you the wheat and that in place of the wheat he should give you gram, rice or something else. It is not permissible to take anything else in place of the wheat. You could either give him more time in which he could give you the wheat or you could take your money back.

Similarly, if both of you annul the bay'us salam and you decide not to take the wheat and take the money back, then you cannot take anything else from him in place of that wheat. You will have to take your money back. Similarly, if the transaction becomes annulled on its own, e.g. that item has become scarce and cannot be obtained, then even in such a case you will have to take your money back. You cannot take anything else in place of the wheat. You could take your money and purchase something else with that money from him.

The taking of loans

1. It is permissible to take loans of items which could be replaced, such as dry groceries, eggs, meat, etc. It is not permissible to take loans of items which are difficult to replace (i.e. it is difficult to obtain an exact replica of the item) such as, guavas, oranges, goats, fowls, etc.
2. At a time when 10 kilos of wheat was being sold for R10, you borrowed 5 kilos. Thereafter, the price of wheat dropped and 20 kilos of wheat began to be sold for R10. You will still have to give 5 kilos and not more. Similarly, if the price rises, you will still have to give 5 kilos.
3. When the person returned the wheat that he had borrowed from you, he gave you wheat of a higher quality. It is permissible to accept this wheat and it is not regarded as interest. However, at the time of borrowing the wheat it is not permissible to say that you will take wheat that is of a higher quality. It should be remembered that the wheat should not be more in weight. If you take wheat that is more in weight than the one that you had given, it will not be permissible. You must weigh the wheat properly and give it. If slightly more is given (as a precaution), it will be overlooked.
4. You borrowed money or some grains on the promise that you will return it within one month or fifteen days and the person accepted this promise. Even then, mentioning this period will not be considered. In fact, it is not permissible to mention any period. If the person who lent the money or grains needs the same and asks for it, or asks for it without even really needing it, you will have to return it.
5. You borrowed two kilos of wheat, flour or something else. When the person asked for it, you replied: "I do not have any wheat at the moment. In place of that wheat take R2." The person agreed to take the money instead. In such a case, the money will have to be handed over to the person there and then. If the person goes into the house in order to bring the money and separates from the person, this agreement will become invalid. He will have to repeat the entire agreement with regard to taking the money instead of the wheat.
6. A person borrowed one silver coin whose market value was R5. Thereafter, the market slumped and the value of the same coin dropped to R4. The person does not have to give any additional silver in order to cover up the R1. Instead, he merely has to give the same silver coin back or any other one which is equal to that one in weight. The person cannot say that he is not going to take the silver coin and that he must bring R5 in cash instead.
7. It is the custom in certain homes that one house may borrow five cooked rotis now, and later when they make their rotis, they return them. This is permissible.

Giving guarantees

1. Na'îmah (name of a woman) was owing money to someone. You went and gave a guarantee that if she does not fulfil this debt, the person must come and collect it from you or that you are responsible for her, or that she owes you as well (i.e. since you have trusted her and lent her money, it is okay for the other person to trust her as well), or you mention some other words which could be regarded as a guarantee. The person to whom the money was owed also accepted this guarantee of yours. It now becomes wâjib on you to fulfil this guarantee which you gave. If Na'îmah does not fulfil this debt, you will have to fulfil it and the creditor has the right to ask for the money from whomsoever he wishes, i.e. either from Na'îmah or from you. As long as Na'îmah does not fulfil her debt or does not have it waived, you will continue being her guarantor and being responsible for the fulfilment of the debt. However, if the creditor waives your responsibility and says that you are now completely absolved from this agreement and that he will not ask you to fulfil the debt, then this guarantee of yours will no longer remain. If the creditor does not accept your guarantee from the very beginning and says that he is not going to take your guarantee into consideration, you will not be responsible.
2. You had given a guarantee on behalf of someone. This person did not have any money to fulfil the debt. You therefore had to fulfil it on his behalf. If you had given this guarantee upon the insistence of the debtor, you can claim whatever money you paid to the creditor on behalf of the debtor. If you had given this guarantee out of your own free will, you will have to see who had accepted your guarantee first; was it the debtor or the creditor? If the debtor had accepted your guarantee first, it will be regarded as if you had given your guarantee on his instance. You can therefore claim your money from him. And if the creditor accepted your guarantee first, you do not have the right to claim it from the debtor. It will be regarded as if you fulfilled his debt out of your good-heartedness. If the debtor gives you the money on his own, it will be acceptable (but you cannot demand it).
3. If the creditor grants a respite of one month or fifteen days to the debtor, then he (the creditor) cannot demand this money from the guarantor during this period.
4. You did not give a guarantee to pay on behalf of the debtor. Instead, the money of the debtor was kept in your custody as an amânah. You therefore said that this person's amânah is kept by you and that you will pay the creditor from this amânah. However, the amânah that was kept by you got stolen or disappeared through some other way. Your guarantee will no longer be applicable. It will not be wajib on you to pay it nor can the creditor demand it from you.
5. You wished to go somewhere, so you hired or rented a car or truck from someone. Another person came to the owner of the car and gave a guarantee that if you do not return it, he will give his own car to the owner. Such a guarantee is valid. If you do not return the car, the guarantor will have to give his own car to the owner.
6. You gave a certain item of yours to a person to go and sell it. He sold it but did not bring the money and says to you: "The money cannot go anywhere. I am responsible for it. If you do not get it, you must come and collect it from me." Such a guarantee is not valid.
7. A person says: "Leave your fowl en-caged in this fowl-run. If the cat captures it, I am responsible. You must take it from me." Alternatively, he says the following with regard to a sheep: "If the wolf captures it, I am responsible." Such a guarantee is not valid.
8. If an immature boy or girl gives a guarantee, it will not be valid.

Passing over of debts to someone else

1. You owe money to Shafi'ah while Râbi'ah owes you money. Shafi'ah asked you for the money which you owe her. You reply: "Râbi'ah is owing me some money. Take the money which I owe you from her and do not ask me." If Shafi'ah agrees to this there and then, and Râbi'ah also agrees to this, then you are absolved from the responsibility of your debt to Shafi'ah. Shafi'ah cannot ask you for the money; she will have to ask Râbi'ah, irrespective of when she receives the money. Furthermore, the money that you have asked Shafi'ah to collect from Râbi'ah, you cannot claim that amount from Râbi'ah. However, if Râbi'ah is owing you more than what you were owing Shafi'ah, you can claim the balance from Râbi'ah. If Râbi'ah pays the money to Shafi'ah, well and good. But if she did not pay and passes away, then Shafi'ah will be paid after selling all her (Râbi'ah's) personal belongings. If Râbi'ah did not leave behind any wealth or possessions or, while she was alive she denied owing you any money, took an oath that she owes no money to you, and there are no witnesses in this regard as well, then in such a case Shafi'ah can ask you for the money that you owe her and can also demand it from you.
If in the very beginning you ask Shafi'ah to take the money from Râbi'ah and she does not agree, or Râbi'ah herself is not happy about giving the money to Shafi'ah, then this debt has not fallen off your shoulders (i.e. you are still responsible to pay Shafi'ah her money).
2. Râbi'ah was not owing you any money. However, you passed on your debt (money which you were owing to Shafi'ah) to Râbi'ah. Râbi'ah accepted this and Shafi'ah also agreed. Even in such a case your debt to Shafi'ah will be passed over to Râbi'ah and she will be responsible to fulfil it. Therefore, all the above-mentioned rules will also apply over here. After fulfilling the debt on your behalf, Râbi'ah can claim that money from you. However, she does not have the right to claim that money before she can fulfil it on your behalf.
3. You had kept some money with Râbi'ah as an amânah. You therefore passed over your debt (money which you were owing to Shafi'ah) to Râbi'ah. Thereafter, that money which was with Râbi'ah got lost or disappeared in some way or the other. Râbi'ah is no longer responsible. Instead, Shafi'ah will demand the money from you and take it from you. Now she has no right to demand or take the money from Râbi'ah.

4. If you pass over your debt to Râbi'ah and thereafter you yourself fulfil this debt and pay the money to Shafi'ah, this will be valid. Shafi'ah cannot refuse to accept the money from you and insist on taking it from Râbi'ah.

Appointing a person as a wakîl (representative)

1. Just as a person has the power to carry out a certain work on his own, he also has the choice of appointing someone to carry out that task on his behalf. This is applicable in buying and selling transactions, taking or giving on rent, getting married, etc. For example, sending the domestic servant to the market to purchase something, selling something through her, sending her to hire a car, taxi, etc. The person who is appointed for such a task is known as a wakîl (representative or proxy) in the Sharî'ah. If you send the domestic servant or labourer to purchase something for you from the market, he will be your wakîl.
2. You sent the domestic servant to purchase meat. She purchased the meat on credit. The butcher cannot demand the money for the meat from you. He will have to ask the domestic servant who will in turn ask you for the money. Similarly, if you ask your domestic servant to sell a certain item for you, you do not have the right to ask or demand the money from the person who purchased the item. He will pay the money to the person from whom he purchased the item (in this case, your domestic servant). But if he comes and gives the money to you, it will be permissible. What this means is that if he refuses to give the money to you, you cannot force him to do so.
3. You sent your worker to purchase something and he brought it. He has the right to refuse to hand over the item to you until you give him the money for it. This is irrespective of whether he paid for it with his own money or whether he has not paid for it as yet. However, if he purchased it on credit on the promise that he will pay within five or ten days, then he cannot ask you for the money before the stipulated number of days.
4. You asked your domestic servant to purchase one kilo of meat. She comes home with one and half kilos. It is not wajib for you to accept the one and half kilos. If you do not take it, she will have to take the half kilo.
5. You asked a person to go and purchase a certain goat from a certain person for R200. This wakîl cannot go and purchase that goat at that price for himself. In other words, when you ask the wakîl to purchase something specifically for you, it is not permissible for him to purchase that very item for himself. However, if he purchases it at a price more than what you had specified, it will be permissible for him to purchase it for himself. But if you did not specify any price, it will in no way be permissible for him to purchase it for himself.
6. You did not specify any particular goat. You merely asked him to purchase a goat for you. It will be permissible for him to purchase a goat for himself as well. He can purchase whichever one he wishes to purchase for himself, and whichever one he wishes for you. If he purchases it with the intention that he is purchasing it for himself, it will be his. If he purchases it with the intention that he is purchasing it for you, it will be yours. And if he purchases it with your money, it will be yours irrespective of what intention he makes when purchasing it.
7. He purchased a goat for you. However, before he could give it to you, it died or got stolen. In such a case, you will have to give him the money for that goat. If you tell him that he had purchased that goat for himself, then your money will be lost if you had already given him the money. But if you hadn't given him the money and he comes to you now to ask for the money, then if you are able to take an oath that he had purchased the goat for himself, then his goat will be lost. And if you are unable to take an oath, you will have to accept his word.
8. The labourer or domestic servant purchased an item for you at a high price. If the price is slightly higher than the normal market value, you will have to take the item and give the money for it. But if the price is extremely high to such an extent that no one can quote such a high price, it is not wajib on you to accept it. If you do not accept it, he will have to take it.
9. You gave an item to a person to sell. It is not permissible for this person to purchase the item for himself and give the money to you. Similarly, if you ask a person to purchase an item for you, he cannot bring his own item and sell it to you. If he wishes to sell his item to you, or purchase your item for himself, he must clearly state so by saying: "This is my item, you can purchase it from me" or "I will purchase this item from you." It is not permissible to do so without clearly stating this.
10. You sent the domestic servant to purchase goat meat. She comes back with beef. You have the choice of either accepting it or rejecting it. Similarly, if you send her to purchase potatoes and she comes back with bhindi (lady's fingers - a vegetable) or anything else, it is not necessary for you to accept it. If you reject it, she will have to take it.
11. You asked her to purchase something worth R1 and she comes with R2 worth. You have the right to take R1 worth and give the extra back to her.
12. You sent two persons to purchase a certain item. It will be necessary for both of them to be present when purchasing the item. It is not permissible for only one person to purchase the item. If only one person purchases it, the validity of the transaction will be dependent on you. If you accept it, it will be valid.
13. You asked a person to purchase a goat, a cow or something else for you. This person did not purchase it himself but sent someone else. It will not be wâjib for you to accept what this third person purchases. You can accept it or reject it. However, if he himself purchases it for you, you will have to take it.

1. The right to dismiss a wakîl remains with you all the time, e.g. you say to a person: "I need a goat. If you come across one, you must buy it for me." Thereafter you stop him from purchasing it for you. He now has no right to purchase it for you. If he purchases it, it will be his responsibility. You do not have to take it.
2. You did not dismiss a wakîl yourself. Instead, you wrote him a letter or sent someone to inform him that he should not purchase the item for you. Even then, he will be dismissed. If you did not dismiss him yourself, but someone else went on his own and informed him that you have dismissed him and that he should not purchase the item, then he will be considered to be dismissed if two persons informed him of this or one reliable, religious person informed him of this. But if this was not so, he will not be dismissed. If he purchases the item, you will have to take it.

Mudârabah* or Silent partnership

1. You gave some money to a person in order to conduct some business. You told him that he should conduct some business and the profits that accrue from there will be shared between the two of you. This is permissible. This is known as mudârabah. However, there are several conditions for this. If these conditions are fulfilled, it will be valid. If not, it will not be permissible and will be regarded as fâsid. The conditions are:

(a) You must mention the amount of money you wish to give him and also hand it over to him in order to conduct the business. If you do not hand over the money to him and keep it with you, this agreement will be fâsid.

(b) You should also specify how the profits will be shared by mentioning the percentage that each one will receive. If this is not specified and you merely said that we will share the profits, this will be fâsid.

(c) When specifying the share of profits, do not say that from all the profits, R100 will be mine and the balance yours or R100 yours and the balance mine. Instead, you should specify the percentage, e.g. half the profits will be mine and the other half yours, one third mine and two thirds yours or one quarter mine and three quarters yours. In short, the distribution should be according to the profits that accrue. If this is not so, the agreement will be fâsid.

(d) Only if there is a profit will the person who is working receive a share of the profits. If there are no profits, he will not receive anything. If you say that even if there are no profits I will give you a certain amount from the capital, this agreement will be fâsid. Similarly, if you make this condition that if there are any losses, they will be borne by the person who is working or borne by both of us, it will also be fâsid. The rule is that if there are any losses, it will be the responsibility of the owner and it will be his money that has been lost.

2. As long as the person has the money with him and has not purchased the goods for trade as yet, you have the right to dismiss him and take the money back. Once he purchases the goods, you do not have the right to dismiss him.
3. If you make this condition that I will work with you or a certain employee of mine will work with you, then this agreement will be fâsid.
4. The rule with regard to mudârabah is that if the agreement is valid and there are no nonsensical conditions in it, then both of them will be partners in the profits. They must divide the profits according to their agreement. If there are no profits or if they suffered any loss, then the person who is working will not receive anything and he will not have to pay any compensation for the loss. If the agreement becomes fâsid, the person who is working will not be regarded as a partner in the profits. Instead, he will be regarded as any other ordinary employee. You must check the amount of salary he would have received had he been employed as an ordinary employee and pay him accordingly. He will receive a salary irrespective of whether there are any profits or whether they suffer a loss. All the profits belong to the owner. However, if his salary is more than the profits, in such a case he will not receive a salary. Instead, the profits will have to be shared.

Note: Since women very rarely need such masâ'il, we have not written any lengthy explanations. Whenever the need arises, consult an 'âlim so that you do not commit any sin.

Amânah* or Trusts

1. A person came and gave you something to keep as an amânah and you accepted it. It is now wajib on you to safeguard it. If you display any shortcoming in safeguarding the item and it gets lost, you will have to compensate for it. However, if you did not display any shortcoming in safeguarding the item and it still gets lost either by being stolen or getting burnt when your house caught on fire, etc. then that person cannot demand any compensation from you. In fact, even if at the time of accepting the amânah you said to the person that you are responsible for it and that he can take the money for it if it gets lost, he does not have the right to demand any compensation. Compensating him out of your own free will is another matter.
2. A person comes and says: "I am going for some work. Please keep this item for me." You reply: "Okay leave it here." Alternatively, you do not say anything but merely remain silent. That person leaves it with you and goes away. This becomes an amânah. However, if you clearly state that you are not going to keep it and that he should keep it with someone else or you do not accept it and yet the person keeps it with you and goes away, then that item will not be an amânah. However, if you pick up that item and keep it away after the departure of the person, it will become an amânah.
3. Several women were sitting together. A lady comes, keeps an item with them and goes away. It is wajib on all of them to safeguard that item. If they leave that item behind and go away and it disappears thereafter, they will have to pay compensation. If all of them did not leave at once but left one after the other, it will be the responsibility of the last person to safeguard the item. If she leaves that place and the item disappears, compensation will be taken from her.
4. The person who has an amânah with her has the right to keep the item with her and safeguard it or to give it to her mother, sister, husband or any such relative who lives in the same house as hers and by whom she also keeps her possessions at the time of need. However, if any of the relatives are not trustworthy, it will not be permissible to keep it with them. If she intentionally gives it to such an unreliable person, she will have to pay compensation in the event of that item disappearing.

It is not permissible to keep an amânah by anyone else (besides the above-mentioned) without the permission of the owner. This is irrespective of whether the person is a total stranger or a distant relative. If an amânah is kept with such a person, she will have to pay compensation in the event of that item disappearing. However, if this person is such that she herself entrusts her with her own possessions, then it will be permissible to keep an amânah with that person.

5. A person came and gave you an item to be kept as an amânah. You forgetfully left it behind and went away. If it disappears, you will have to pay compensation. Alternatively, you left the lock of the closet or safe open and went away. And there are several persons sitting over there. Furthermore, the item is such that it generally cannot be safeguarded without being locked. In the event of it disappearing, you will have to pay compensation.
6. Your house caught on fire. At such a time, it is permissible to keep the amânah with strangers as well. However, once this excuse (house being on fire) is no more, you should immediately go and take that amânah from that person. If you do not go and take it, you will have to pay compensation in the event of it disappearing. Similarly, if at the time of your death, none of your house folk are present, it will be permissible to give it to your neighbour.
7. If a person gives you gold or silver coins to be kept as an amânah, it will be wâjib on you to safeguard those very gold or silver coins. You cannot mix them with your gold or silver coins nor can you spend them. You should not think that all gold or silver coins are the same and therefore you will use them and when he asks you for them you will give him your own. This is not permissible. If the person permits you to use them, it will be permissible. However, the rule with regard to this is that if you keep those very coins aside, it will be regarded as an amânah. If they disappear, you will not have to pay any compensation. But if you seek his permission and use them, it will now be regarded as a debt and not an amânah. You will therefore have to pay him irrespective of whether they disappear or not. After using his coins, you kept aside the same amount in his name (with the intention that it is his). It will still not be regarded as an amânah. They will be regarded as your coins. If they are stolen, your coins will be considered to be stolen and you will still have to pay him. In short, once you use his coins, it will be regarded as your responsibility as long as you do not repay him.
8. A person kept R100 as an amânah with you. You sought his permission to use R50 and spent it. R50 will be regarded as a debt on your shoulders and R50 will be regarded as an amânah. Later when you obtain R50, do not mix it with his R50 which you kept as an amânah. If you mix it, the entire amount (R100) will not be regarded as an amânah and you will be responsible for the entire R100. If this amount disappears, you will have to repay the entire R100. This is because by mixing the money of amânah with your own, the entire amount becomes a debt and you will have to repay the entire amount irrespective of whether it disappears or not.
9. You sought the person's permission and mixed his R100 with your R100. The entire amount will be regarded as a partnership. If it is stolen, both the amounts will be considered to be stolen and there is no need for any compensation. If part of the money is stolen and part is left behind, then from the money which has been stolen, half will be considered to be yours and half his. If one person had given R100 and the other R200, then the amount that is stolen will be calculated accordingly, e.g. if R12 is stolen, R4 of the person who gave R100 will be considered to be stolen and R8 of the person who gave R200. This rule will only apply if it was mixed with his permission.

If you mix it without his permission, the rule that has been mentioned previously will apply. That is, by mixing the money of amânah with your money without the owner's permission, that amânah becomes a debt. That money no longer remains an amânah. Whatever money from there disappears will be regarded as yours and you will have to repay him.

10. A person kept a goat or cow as an amânah with you. It is not permissible for you to drink its milk or benefit from it in any other way. However, it will be permissible for you to do so if you obtain his permission. Whatever milk you drink without permission will have to be paid for.
11. A person kept clothing, jewellery, a bed, etc. as an amânah. You cannot use these items without permission. If you use these items without permission and while using them, the clothing gets torn or stolen, or the jewellery or bed breaks or gets stolen, then in all these cases you will have to pay compensation. However, if you repent from this action and keep these items away safely and thereafter they disappear, you will not have to pay any compensation.
12. You removed the clothing which was given to you as an amânah from the cupboard with the intention that you will wear it in the evening for a particular occasion. However, before you could wear it, it got stolen. You will still have to pay compensation.
13. The cow or goat which was given to you as an amânah fell ill. You gave it medication. Because of this medication it died. You will have to pay compensation. If it dies without your giving it any medication, you will not have to pay any compensation.
14. A person gave you some money. You kept it in your wallet or cash pocket. However, this money did not go into your wallet or cash pocket. Instead, it fell down but you were under the assumption that it is in your wallet or cash pocket. You will not have to pay any compensation.
15. When a person asks for his amânah, it is wâjib to hand it over to him immediately. It is not permissible to delay without any valid excuse. A person asks you for his amânah. You reply that you are busy now and that he must take it from you tomorrow. The person agrees - there is no harm in this. If the person is not happy about taking it tomorrow and goes away angrily, that item will no longer be regarded as an amânah. If it disappears, you will have to pay compensation.
16. A person sent someone to collect his amânah. You have the right of refusing to hand it over to this person with the message that the person must come himself and that you will not give it to anyone else. If you hand it over to this messenger thinking him to be honest and later the owner says that he did not send him, the owner can demand the item from you. You can take the item back from that person. If the item is no longer in his possession, you cannot demand the money for it from him but the owner can demand it from you.

'Âriyah* or Borrowed items

1. You borrowed clothing, jewellery, a bed, utensils, etc. from someone for a few days and told them that you will return them once your need for them is over. The rule with regard to this is the same as that of an amânah. It will be wâjib on you to safeguard these items. If such borrowed items disappear despite your taking all the precautions to safeguard them, then that person cannot demand any compensation from you. In fact, even if you had told that person that if it gets lost you will compensate him, it is not permissible for him to take any compensation. But if you did not safeguard it and it therefore got lost, you will have to pay compensation for it. Furthermore, the owner has the right to take back his item whenever he wishes. It is not permissible for you to refuse to return it to him. If you refuse to hand it over to him despite his asking you to do so and thereafter it gets lost, you will have to pay compensation.
2. If the owner permitted you to utilise the item in a particular manner, you will have to utilise it in that very manner. You cannot use it in any manner contrary to that which he permitted. If you use it in a contrary manner and it gets lost, you will have to pay compensation. For example, a woman lent you her scarf in order to cover your head. Instead, you spread it out on the ground and lied down on it. On account of this it became damaged. She lent you her couch and so many people sat on it that it broke. She lent you a glass utensil and you placed it over the fire and it therefore broke. Alternatively, you used any other item contrary to its normal manner of usage. In all such cases you will have to pay compensation. Similarly, if you borrow an item and have this evil intention in your heart that you will not return it but keep it for yourself, you will have to pay compensation if it disappears.
3. You borrowed an item for a specific number of days. It will be necessary to return it on the expiry of that period. If you do not return it within the specified number of days and it gets lost, you will have to pay compensation.
4. If the owner lent an item and clearly stated that you can use it yourself and also give it to others to utilise, then you have the right to lend it to others. Similarly, if the owner did not clearly state this but your relationship with him is such that you have full conviction that others are permitted to utilise it as well, then the above rule will also apply. If the owner clearly prohibited you from lending it to others or allowing others to utilise it, then under no circumstances will it be permissible for you to give it to others.
If you borrowed an item telling the owner that you will use it and he did not prohibit you from giving it to others nor did he clearly permit you to do so, then check the nature of the item. If it is such that the manner of utilising it is the same and everyone utilises it in the same manner without there being any difference whatsoever, it will be permissible for you to use it and to allow others as well. If the item is such that it is not utilised in the same manner - some people use it in the proper manner while others mishandle it, then it will not be permissible for you to allow others to utilise it.
Similarly, if you borrowed an item telling the owner that a certain relative or friend will use it and the owner did not mention anything about you using it yourself or not using it, then the same rule will apply here as well. That is, if the manner of utilising it is the same, it will be permissible for you to use it. If not, it will not be permissible for you to use it. Only that person in whose name you borrowed it will be permitted to use it.
If you borrowed an item without informing the owner as to who is going to utilise it and the owner did not specify anyone as well, then the rule is that if the manner of utilising it is the same, it will be permissible for you to utilise it and give it to others as well. But if the manner of utilising it is not the same and you already commenced utilising it, it will not be permissible for you to give it to others. If you did not commence utilising it and gave it to someone else, it will not be permissible for you to utilise it. Understand this well.
5. It is not permissible for the parents and others to lend items that belong to their immature children. If they lend it out and it gets lost, they will have to pay compensation. Similarly, if an immature child lends his item on his own accord, it will not be permissible to take it.
6. You borrowed an item from a person. Thereafter, the owner passed away. Once he passes away, it does not become the possession of the borrower. It will therefore not be permissible for you to use it. Similarly, if the borrower passes away, it will not be permissible for his inheritors to use it in any way.

HIBA* or GIFTS

1. You gave an item to a person and he accepted it. Alternatively, he did not accept it verbally, instead, you placed it in his hand and he took it. That item will now be his and it no longer belongs to you. In the Sharî'ah this is known as hiba - a gift or present. There are several conditions for this. One is that you have to hand over the item to the person and he has to take possession of it. If you tell him that you are giving him this item and he says that he is accepting it but you have not handed it over to him as yet, then this giving of yours is not correct. The item will still be considered to be under your ownership. However, if he takes possession of it he will become its owner.
2. You placed the item in front of him in such a manner that if he wishes he can take it, and you say to him: "Here, take this." By placing the item in such a way, he will also become its owner. It will be regarded as if he picked it up and took possession of it.
3. You gave a person clothing that is kept in a locked trunk but did not give him the keys to the trunk. This will not be regarded as taking possession of the item. Once you hand over the keys, possession will take place and he will become the owner of the clothing.
4. There is oil or any other substance in a bottle. You gave the bottle to a person but did not give him the oil. This giving will not be correct. Even if he takes possession of it he will not become its owner. Only when you take out your oil from it will he become its owner. If you give the oil but not the bottle and the person takes the bottle with the oil and tells you that he will empty the oil out and then return the bottle to you, then giving the oil in this manner will be correct. Once he takes possession of it he will become its owner. In short, if you wish to give a bottle, utensil, etc. it is a prerequisite to empty the utensil first. It is not permissible to give it without first emptying it. Similarly, if anyone gives a house, he must remove all his belongings and he himself must come out of it and then hand it over.
5. If you wish to give a person a portion of a certain item (i.e. half, quarter, one third or whatever the case maybe), first check the nature of the item. Will it be of any use after being divided or not? If it will not be of any use after dividing it, it will be permissible to give it. Such items are: a grinding mill that if it is split in half, it will not be of any use, a bench, a bed, a utensil, a pitcher, a bowl, a tumbler, a trunk, an animal, etc. Once the person takes possession of such items he will become owner of that portion which you have given to him and the whole item will come under a partnership between both of you.
If the item is such that if it is divided it can still be of use, then it is not permissible to give it without dividing it. Such items are: a plot of land, a big house, a roll of material, firewood, dry groceries, milk, yoghurt, etc.
You tell a person: "I am giving you half the ghee that is in this container." He replies: "I accept it." This giving will not be correct. In fact, even if he takes possession of the container he will not become the owner of that ghee. All the ghee still belongs to you. However, if you thereafter separate half the ghee and hand it over to him, he will become its owner.
6. Two persons purchased a length of material, a house or a farm and each one paid half the money for it. As long as they do not divide it, it is not permissible for any one of them to give his share away to anyone.
7. You gave R10 to two persons and told them to take half each. This is not correct. Instead, you should divide both in half and then give it to them. However, if both of them are poor, it is not necessary to divide it. If you give one cent to two persons, this will be correct.
8. A goat or cow is pregnant. It is not permissible to give the young of the goat or cow to anyone before it can be born. In fact, even if the person takes possession of it after it is born, he will not become its owner. If you wish to give it, you must give it again after it is born.
9. A person gives you a goat and tells you that he is not giving you the kid that is in its stomach and that it belongs to him. The goat and the kid now belong to you and the person does not have the right to take the kid away.
10. A certain item of yours is kept with someone as an amânah. You gave that very item to that very person. In such a case that person will become its owner by merely stating that he has accepted it. It is not necessary for him to go and take possession of it again because it is already in his possession.
11. If an immature boy or girl give their possession to someone, this will not be correct. It is also not permissible to take anything that they give. Remember this mas'ala well because many people are neglectful in this regard.

Giving to children

1. When anything is given to a child on the occasion of his circumcision or any other such occasion, the purpose and object is not to give the child but to his parents. All those gifts are therefore not the possession of the child. Instead, the parents are its owners and they can do whatever they wish with those gifts.

However, if a person gives an item specifically for the child, he will be its owner. If the child has reached an age of understanding, it is sufficient for him to take possession of the item himself. Once he takes possession of it, he will be its owner. If the child does not take possession of it or is incapable of doing so, then by the father taking possession of it, the child will become its owner. If the father is not present, the child will become its owner by the grandfather taking possession of it. If the father and grandfather are not present, the guardian of the child should take possession of it. If the mother or grandmother take possession of the item despite the father or grandfather being present, it will not be considered.

2. If the father or the grandfather (in the absence of the father) wish to give the child or grandchild a gift, it is sufficient for them to say: "I have given this to the child." In the absence of the father or grandfather, if the mother or brother wish to give a gift to the child and this child is also under their care, then by their saying the above words, the child will become its owner. It is not necessary for anyone to take possession of the item.

3. When wishing to give anything to your children, ensure that you give it equally among your children. The son and the daughter should be given equally. If you give one of your children more than the others, there is no harm in this. However, you should not have the intention of causing harm to the one whom you gave less. If this is your intention, it will not be permissible to give him less.

4. Anything that belongs to an immature child should only be utilised for him. It is not permissible for anyone to utilise it for their personal purposes. Even the parents should not utilise it for their personal purposes nor for any of the other children.

5. If an item is given outwardly to the child but the actual purpose was to give it to the parents, but the person gave it in the name of the child because he considered the gift to be insignificant, then that item will be considered to be under the ownership of the parents. They can utilise it as they wish. Furthermore, one should see who has given the gift. If the gift was given by the wife's relatives, it will belong to the wife. If it was given by the husband's relatives, it will belong to the husband.

6. You sewed a set of clothing for your immature child. That child will now be its owner. You made a set of jewellery for your immature daughter. She will now be its owner. It will not be permissible to give that clothing or jewellery to any other boy or girl. It should be given to the one for whom it was made. However, if at the time of making it, you clearly stated that this item belongs to you and that you are merely loaning it to this child, the item will belong to the person who made it (or got it made). It is the habit of many elder sisters and also mothers to borrow a scarf and other items from their immature sisters or daughters. It should be noted that it is not permissible to borrow such items even for a little while.

7. Just as an immature child cannot give any of his possessions to anyone, in the same way the father cannot give any of the possessions of his immature child to anyone. If the parents give any of the possessions of the child to anyone or lend it to anyone, it will not be permissible to accept it. However, if the parents have a severe need for it on account of poverty and cannot obtain it from anywhere else, then at such a time of need and desperation it will be permissible for them to take an item that belongs to the child.

8. It is not correct for the parents to loan the wealth of the child to anyone. In fact, it is not correct for the parents themselves to borrow the wealth of the child. Remember this well.

Taking back something that has been given

1. It is a major sin to take back something that you have given. If a person takes back something that he has given and the person gives it back willingly, then the person who had originally given the item will once again become its owner. However, there are certain things which the person has no right to take back, e.g. you gave a goat to a person. This person fed that goat so well that it became fat and healthy. In such a case you do not have the right to take it back. Alternatively, you gave a plot of land to a person. He constructed a house on that plot or turned it into an orchard. In such a case you do not have the right to take it back. Alternatively, you gave a length of material to a person. He sewed a garment out of it, dyed it or had it washed. You do not have the right to take it back.

2. You gave a goat to a person. After some time it gave birth to kids. You can take the goat back but you do not have the right to take the kids.

3. If the person who gives an item or the person who receives it dies after the item was given, the right to take it back no longer remains.

4. A person gave you something. You also gave her something in return for this and said to her: "Sister, take this in return for the item that you gave me." After giving this item in exchange, you do not have the right to take it back. However, if you did not tell her that you are giving this in exchange for what she gave you, you have the right to take back your item and she also has the right to take back the item that she gave you.

5. The husband gave something to his wife or vice versa. They do not have the right to take back whatever they give. Similarly, if a person gives something to a relative with whom marriage is harâm forever and this is a blood relation, such as brother and sister or nephew and niece, they do not have the right to take back whatever they give. If the relative is such that marriage is not harâm with him or her, such as one's cousin, then one has the right to take back whatever one gives. Similarly, if marriage is harâm but the relationship is not a blood relationship, instead it is a relationship based on breast-feeding or some other relationship such as foster brothers or sisters or son-in-law, mother-in-law, father-in-law, etc., then in all these cases one has the right to take back whatever one gives.

6. All the cases wherein we have mentioned that one has the right to take back what one gives, means that he will only have the right to take it back if the person is also willing to give it back, as mentioned in the beginning. However, there is also a sin in doing this. If the person is not willing to give it back and does not give it back, one does not have the right to take the item forcefully without first obtaining a ruling from a judge in his favour. If he takes it forcefully without obtaining a ruling from a judge, he will not become its owner.

7. Most of the rules that have been mentioned with regard to the giving of gifts also apply to giving in the path of Allawh, e.g. an item will not go into the ownership of a poor person without the latter taking possession of it. The item which has the prerequisite that it has to be divided before it can be given, this prerequisite will also apply here. The item which has to be emptied before it can be given will also have to be emptied in this case.

However, there are two differences. One is that when you give something you have the right to take it back if the person is willing to do so. However, when you give something in the path of Allawh you do not have the right to take it back. The second difference is that if you give a certain amount of money to two poor persons and tell them to share it between themselves, it will be permissible to do so. However, when giving a gift to someone, you cannot ask them to divide the money.

8. You were going to give R10 to a poor person but you mistakenly gave him a R20 note. You do not have the right to take it back.

Renting and hiring

1. Once you have taken a house on rent on a monthly basis and took possession of it, you will have to pay the rent on the expiry of the month. This is irrespective of whether you lived in it or whether it remained empty. In both cases it is wâjib on you to pay the rent.

2. A tailor sewed a garment for you, a dyer dyed it for you or the washerman washed it for you. After carrying out this work, he brought it to you. He has the right of refusing to hand over the garment to you until you pay him for the job that he has carried out. It is not permissible for you to take it forcefully without having paid him.

If you asked a labourer to carry a sack of grain for you, he cannot hold back this grain until you pay him for his effort. This is because by his bringing the grain for you, no changes took place in the grain. As opposed to the above-mentioned examples wherein a change took place in the fabric or garment.

3. A person made a condition that you alone should sew this garment, you alone should dye it or you alone should wash it. In such a case it is not permissible to give it to anyone else to do any of the above tasks. But if he did not make this condition, the work could be given to anyone else.

Improper leasing or hiring out

1. The following methods of hiring out are regarded as ijârah fâsidah (improper leasing):

(a) At the time of renting a house, the period was not specified as to how long the house will be rented.

(b) The rental was not specified. The person merely occupied the house and began living in it.

(c) The tenant made this condition that he will pay the costs for whatever breaks in the house.

(d) The landlord rented the house on the condition that whatever breaks in the house will have to be repaired by the tenant and that the repairs that he will undertake will actually be his method of payment of the rental. But if the landlord says: "You live in this house and undertake whatever repairs are necessary. There is no rental to be paid." In such a case this is an aariyah (a loan). This is permissible.

2. A person rented a house saying that he will pay R500 monthly. This hiring out will only be valid for one month. At the expiry of one month, the landlord has the right to evict him. If the tenant stays for another month, this hiring out will be valid for one additional month. In this way, a new lease will continue each month. However, if the tenant specified a certain period of time by saying that he will be renting this house for six months or four months (or whatever the case may be), then the leasing will be valid for whatever period he specified. The landlord cannot evict him before the expiry of this period.

3. You asked a person to grind wheat for you and told him to take a certain amount (e.g. half a kilo) of its flour as payment. Alternatively, you asked someone to harvest the crops and told him to take a certain amount of grain from there as payment for harvesting. All this is fâsid.

4. The rule with regard to ijârah fâsidah is that whatever had been agreed upon will not be given. Instead, he will be given whatever payment is normally made for a particular job. If it is a house, the tenant will have to pay the normal rental. However, if the normal payment or the normal rental is more than what had been agreed upon, then the normal payment or rental will not be given. Instead, he will be paid that which was agreed upon. In short, he will be entitled to receive the amount which is less.

5. The hiring of singers, dancers, tricksters and all other types of frivolities is not valid. All this is absolutely bâṭil. Therefore, no payment will be given for this.

6. A ḥâfiẓ was employed in order to stand over a grave for a certain number of days and recite the Quran and send the rewards to the deceased. This is not valid. The ḥâfiẓ will not receive any reward nor the deceased. Furthermore, he is not entitled to receive any payment for this.

7. A person hired a book in order to read it. This hiring out is not valid.

8. The custom of hiring a bull, male goat or male buffalo in order to enable your cow, female goat or female buffalo to fall pregnant is absolutely ḥarâm.

9. It is not permissible to hire a cow, goat or buffalo in order to obtain its milk.

10. It is not permissible to give your fowls or goats to a person asking him to take care of them and thereafter if they give birth, half the young will be for you and the other half for him. This is not permissible.

11. It is not permissible to hire chandeliers, etc. merely to adorn and decorate the house. Even if one hires them, the person who hired them out is not entitled to receive any rental for them. However, it is permissible to rent a chandelier if it is for the purpose of illuminating the house (and not for mere adornment).

12. A person hired a rickshaw (car or any other vehicle). It is not permissible to load such a vehicle beyond its capacity or beyond the normal way of loading. Similarly, it is not permissible for more than the normal number of persons to sit in a palanquin without obtaining the permission of the palanquin-carrier.

13. A person lost an item of his. He announced: "Whoever can show me where this item is, I will give him R10." If anyone shows him the place where it is, he will not be entitled to receive the money because this ijârah is not valid. However, if the person asked a particular person that if you can show me where it is, I will give you R10, then the latter will not receive any money if he showed it to him while he (the latter) was sitting or standing in that very place. However, if he took a few steps and showed him where the item is, he will receive whatever he was promised.

1. A dyer, washerman or tailor was given an item in order to carry out his respective job. The item which is given to him is regarded as an amânah. If it is stolen, lost or destroyed unintentionally despite his taking all the precautions; it is not permissible to take any compensation from him. However, if he washed the cloth in such a way that it got torn, or placed an expensive silk garment in the cauldron in such a way that it got damaged; it will be permissible to ask him for a compensation. Similarly, it is permissible to take compensation for a garment which he may have exchanged (with another garment). If he loses a garment and says that he does not know where it has disappeared to or what has happened to it, it will be permissible to ask him for compensation. But if he says that a burglary took place and it got stolen, it will not be permissible to ask for any compensation.

2. You hired a labourer and asked him to deliver some oil, ghee, etc. to your house. On the way, it fell down. It is permissible to ask him for compensation.

3. As for the person who is not hired for that particular job, instead he is your employee, domestic servant or a person who has been hired for a day or a few days, if he drops anything, it will not be permissible for you to take any compensation from him. However, if he intentionally causes any damage, it will be permissible to ask him for compensation.

4. A person has been employed to tend to a child. Through his negligence, the child's jewellery or any other item disappeared. It is not permissible to take any compensation from him.

Annulment of a rental contract

1. A person took a house on rent. However, it leaks profusely, a certain portion of it collapsed or any other fault became apparent which makes it difficult to live in. In such cases, it is permissible to annul the rental contract. And if the house becomes absolutely dilapidated and uninhabitable, the rental contract will be annulled on its own. There is no need for you to request an annulment nor is it necessary to obtain the consent and agreement of the landlord.

2. If the landlord or the tenant passes away, the rental contract becomes annulled.

3. If a certain reason crops up whereby one is forced to annul the contract, it will be permissible to annul it. For example, you hired a vehicle in order to travel to a certain place. Thereafter, you changed your mind and decided not to embark on such a journey. In such a case it is permissible to annul the contract.

4. The custom of paying a deposit when hiring a vehicle and thereafter paying the balance when you embark on the journey, and forfeiting the deposit when you decide not to embark on the journey is not permissible. The person who takes the deposit has to return it in the event of the customer not embarking on the journey.

Taking an item without permission

1. It is a major sin to take an item which belongs to a person forcefully or in his absence. Some women take items that belong to their husbands or other relatives without permission. This is also not permissible. If you take an item without permission and you still have it in your possession, you will have to return that very item. However, if you have already used that item then the rule is that if the same item could be purchased from the bazaar, it will be wâjib on you to purchase it and replace it. Such items are: grain, ghee, oil, money, etc. If the item is such that its exact replica cannot be obtained, then you will have to give money equal to the value of that item. Such items are: fowls, goats, guavas, oranges, pears, etc.

2. One of the legs of the bed broke or its strips or joints broke. Alternatively, you took an item and it got damaged or broken. You will have to pay for the damage caused.

3. You took a certain amount of money without permission and thereafter began a certain business with it. It is not permissible for you to take whatever profits you make with that money. You will have to return the original money to the owner and the profits will have to be given to the poor.

4. You tore someone's clothing. If very little got torn, you will have to pay compensation according to the damage. If you tear it in such a way that it cannot be used for the purpose for which it was made, that clothing will be given to you and you will have to pay for it entirely. For example, a scarf was torn in such a way that it can no longer be used as a scarf. Instead, small blouses can be made with it. In such a case, keep that scarf and pay for the entire cost of it to the owner.

5. You took someone's gem-stone and had it set in a ring. You will now have to pay for that stone. It is not wâjib on you to break the ring, remove the stone, and return it to the owner.

6. A person took a cloth and had it dyed. The owner of the cloth has the choice to take the dyed cloth and pay whatever increase took place in the price of the cloth. Alternatively, the owner can leave the cloth with the person and ask him to pay for it.

7. A person takes a certain item without permission, loses it, pays compensation for it, and thereafter finds it. He will have to check whether the value of the item is according to the compensation that the owner had asked for. If it is the same, he does not have to return the item. It will now belong to him. If the compensation paid was less than what the owner had asked for, then the owner has the right to take back his item and return the compensation.

8. Someone's goat or cow came into your yard. It is ḥarâm for you to milk it. If you take any milk, you will have to pay for it.
9. It is not permissible to take the following items without permission: needles, cotton, a scrap of material, etc. It is wâjib to pay for whatever you take if it gets lost or consumed. Alternatively, inform the person that you have taken a certain item and that he should forgive you. If you do not do so, you will have to pay on the day of judgement.
10. Your husband brought a length of material for himself. At the time of cutting the material, you saved a certain length and kept it for yourself without informing him. This is also not permissible. Whatever you want, ask for it. If he does not give it to you, do not take it.

Partnerships

1. A person passed away and left behind some wealth. All his wealth will fall under the partnership of all his rightful inheritors. As long as permission is not obtained from all the inheritors, no one can take it for his personal purposes. If anyone takes it and uses it, he will be sinning.
2. Two women got together and purchased a utensil. This utensil will now be under their joint partnership. One of the women cannot use it or sell it without the permission of the other.
3. Each of two women contributed a certain amount of money and purchased guavas, pears, berries, jambolana, cucumbers, melons, etc. under a joint partnership. When the items came from the market, one of the women was not present. In such a case, do not divide the items taking your share and leaving her share one side thinking that when she comes she will take her share. As long as both of them are not present, it is not permissible to divide the shares. If you divide the shares and eat your share before she can arrive, you will be committing a major sin.
However, if wheat or any other grain was purchased under a joint partnership and you divided it, took your share and gave hers to her when she arrived, this is permissible. However, in such a case, if any theft takes place in the share of the other wife before her share could be given to her, then this would be regarded as a loss of both the women and she (the woman whose share got stolen or disappeared in any other way) will become a partner in her (the women whose share was not stolen) share.
4. Two persons invested R100 each and commenced with a business and agreed that whatever profits they make will be divided equally between them. This is valid. If they agree that one person will receive two thirds of the profits and the other will receive one third, it is also valid. This is irrespective of whether both of them invested the same amount of money or one invested more and the other less.
5. These two persons hadn't purchased the goods as yet and the money got stolen. Alternatively, both their money was still kept separately and the money of one of them got stolen. In such a case the partnership will be annulled. They must become partners again and then commence with their business.
6. Two persons entered into a partnership and one of them said: "Take this R100 of mine, add R100 from your side and you start selling clothes. We will divide the profits between us." One of them purchased some clothes (with his own money). Thereafter, R100 of the other person (the one who did not purchase the clothes) got stolen. In such a case, both of them will be partners in whatever clothes were purchased and the other person (the one whose money got stolen) can take money from him equal to the value of half the clothes.
7. When embarking on a business venture, one of them made the condition that whatever profits we make, R10 or R15 will be mine and the balance will be yours. This is not permissible.
8. The goods that were for sale got stolen. Both of them will have to bear the loss. It cannot happen that all the losses are borne by one person. If they make an agreement that whatever losses we encounter, I will bear them and whatever profits we make we will share it between us, this is not permissible.
9. Once a partnership has been pronounced to be prohibited or invalid, then when they share the profits, all their previous agreements will not be taken into consideration. Instead, if both of them made an equal investment, they will receive equal profits. If the investment was not the same, the profits will be shared according to the percentage invested by each person irrespective of what agreement may have been made. Agreements are only taken into consideration when the partnership is valid and is not allowed to become prohibited.
10. Two women entered into a partnership on the basis that whatever sewing we get, we will do it together and whatever money we receive for the sewing, we will share it between ourselves. This partnership is valid. If they make an agreement that we will do the sewing together but the money that we receive, I will take two thirds and you must take one third, it will still be valid. But if they agree that one will receive R10 or R20, and the other will receive the balance, this is not permissible.
11. One of these two women accepted a length of material which had to be sewn into a garment. The other woman cannot say: "Why did you take this job? Since you have taken it, you will have to sew it." Instead, the responsibility of sewing the garment is now wajib on both of them. If one of them does not sew, the other one will have to sew it. Alternatively, both of them can sew it together. In short, they cannot refuse to sew it.
12. The customer who had given the job of sewing came to collect her garment. When she came to collect it, the woman who had accepted the job was not present. Instead, the other partner was present. The customer has the right to ask for the garment from this partner as well. The latter cannot say that she has nothing to do with it and that she must collect it from the person whom she had given it to.
13. In the same way, both partners have the right to ask for the money for carrying out the job. The customer cannot say that she will not give it to you and that she will only pay the person to whom she had given the job. When both of them are working under a partnership, both of them have the right to ask for the money. The customer will be fulfilling her duty by paying any one of them.
14. Two women entered into a partnership that they will go together into the jungle and bring firewood. This partnership is not valid. The firewood belongs to the one who picks it up. There is no joint ownership in this.
15. One woman said to another: "Keep these eggs under your hen. Whatever chicks are born, we will share them equally." This is not permissible.

Distributing items that are under a partnership

1. Two persons got together and purchased wheat from the market. At the time of dividing this wheat, it is not necessary for both of them to be present. Even if one of them is not present, it is permissible for the other person to have it weighed properly, take her share, and keep the other share aside for her partner. Once the wheat has been divided, it is permissible for the person who was present to do whatever she wishes with her own share - she can eat it, consume it in any other way, give it to someone, etc. All this is permissible. The same rule will apply to ghee, oil, eggs, etc. In short, items which do not have any difference and are all the same can be purchased and divided in the absence of any one of the partners. However, if the second person has not taken her share as yet and it disappears or is destroyed in some way or the other, then this loss will be regarded as a loss of both the partners - as explained in the chapter on partnerships.
As for those items in which there is a difference, such as guavas, pears, etc. then as long as both partners are not present, it will not be permissible to divide the shares.
2. Two girls got together and purchased some mangoes, guavas, etc. One of them was not present at that time. It is not permissible for the other girl to eat any of this fruit. When the other girl comes, the fruit will be divided and only then can she eat it. If she does not wait for her and commences eating before it can be divided, she will be committing a sin.
3. Two persons got together and purchased roasted gram seeds. It will not be permissible for them to divide this by mere estimation. They will have to weigh it properly and divide it equally. If there is any difference in the weight, it will be regarded as interest.

Mortgages

1. You took a loan of R10 from someone and in order for him to trust you, you kept one of your possessions with him informing him that if you do not trust me, keep this item with you. Once I repay you the R10, I will take my item back. This is permissible. This is known as mortgaging or pawning. However, under no circumstances is it permissible to pay any interest as is in vogue among the merchants and bankers whereby they charge an interest for mortgaging. It is ḥarâm to pay or to accept interest.
2. Once you have mortgaged an item, you do not have the right to ask for it or take it until you have fulfilled your debt.

3. If any one mortgages an item with you, it is not permissible for you to utilise it or take any benefit from it whatsoever, e.g. it is not permissible for you to eat any fruit from the orchard that has been mortgaged, to eat the grain from such a land, to use such money or to live in such a house.
4. If a person has mortgaged a goat or cow, the milk and young ones will belong to the owner. It is not permissible for you to use any of this for your personal purposes. You will have to sell the milk and include the money with the mortgage. Once the person fulfils his debt, you will have to return the mortgaged item together with the money you receive for the milk, and you can deduct the money for whatever it cost you to feed the animal.
5. Once you have repaid part of your debt, you still cannot take back your mortgaged item. Only when you settle your debt in full will you receive your mortgaged item.
6. You took a loan for R10 and mortgaged an item which cost R10 or more. While that item was under his possession, it got lost or disappeared. In such a case, he has no right to demand his money from you nor do you have any right to demand any money for your item which he lost. You have lost your item and he has lost his money. However, if your item was worth R5 and it got lost or disappeared, you will only have to repay R5 and the balance R5 will be deducted.

Wasîyyah* or Bequests

1. A person's saying that a certain amount of money or wealth will go to a certain person or for a certain cause after his death is known as wasîyyah. This is irrespective of whether he said this while he was enjoying good health or while he was ill, and irrespective of whether he passes away as a result of this sickness or he recovers from it. The rule with regard to the wealth which he gives with his own hands or forgives the debts that he is being owed is that if he gives this while he is enjoying good health or he recovers from the sickness in which he gave this, it is permissible for him to do this and this is valid. As for the sickness in which he passes away, this will be regarded as a wasîyyah - the rules regarding which will be mentioned later.
2. If a person has salâts to be fulfilled, fasts to be kept, zakâh to be paid, kaffârah to be paid for certain oaths, missed fasts, etc., and he also has sufficient wealth to fulfil all these, then at the time of death it is necessary and wâjib upon him to make a wasîyyah in this regard. Similarly, if a person has debts to be fulfilled or an amânah has been kept with him, it becomes wâjib upon him to make a wasîyyah in this regard. If he does not make a wasîyyah, he will be sinning.
If such a person has poor relatives who cannot inherit from his wealth according to the Sharî'ah and this person has a lot of wealth and possessions, it is mustahab for him to make a wasîyyah in favour of these poor relatives. As for all other persons, he has the choice of either making a wasîyyah in their favour or not making.
3. When a person passes away, all the expenses for his ghusl, kafan, burial, etc. will be paid from his estate. Thereafter, all his debts will be paid. If the entire estate of the deceased is exhausted in paying off his debts, it is still necessary to pay off all the debts and the inheritors will not receive anything. Therefore, his wasîyyah of fulfilling his debts will have to be followed. Even if all his money is exhausted in fulfilling his wasîyyah of debts, it will have to be followed. In fact, even if he does not make any wasîyyah with regard to his debts, they will still have to be paid off first.
Apart from debts, the person can only make a wasîyyah for one third of his entire estate. In other words, if his wasîyyah can be fulfilled from one third of his entire estate, it will have to be fulfilled and it will not be wâjib on the inheritors to use more than one third in order to fulfil his wasîyyah. For example, after paying for his kafan, burial and debts, there remained R300 and R100 (which is one third of R300) was sufficient to fulfil all his wasîyyahs. In such a case, his wasîyyah will be fulfilled.
If the person's wasîyyah is more than one third of his estate (in this case, more than R100), the inheritors will only have to fulfil the wasîyyahs until they pay off R100 and the balance of the wasîyyahs will not be paid. However, if all the inheritors happily agree to forgo their shares and rather have his wasîyyah fulfilled, then it will be permissible to use more than one third in order to fulfil his wasîyyah. It should be remembered that the permission of immature inheritors is not considered. Even if they agree, their share cannot be used to fulfil the wasiyyah.
4. It is not permissible to make wasîyyah in favour of the persons who are going to receive a share of the inheritance, e.g. one's parents, husband, wife, son, etc. It is permissible to make wasîyyah in favour of those relatives who are not entitled to receive any inheritance and also those persons who are not relatives whatsoever. However, the person cannot make wasîyyah for more than one third of his estate.
If a person makes a wasîyyah in favour of one of his inheritors to the effect that a certain person will receive a certain item of mine after my death or a certain amount of money, such a person will have no right whatsoever to receive that item or money. However, if all the other inheritors happily agree to give him, it will be permissible for him to receive it.
If a person makes wasîyyah for more than one third, the same rule as above will apply. That is, if all the inheritors happily agree to give more than one third, it will be permissible for him to receive it. If not, he will only receive one third.
It should be remembered that under no circumstances can the permission of immature inheritors be taken into consideration. Remember this rule in all situations and circumstances.
5. Although a person is entitled to make a wasîyyah for one third of his estate, it is preferable not to make it for the full one third. Instead, it should be made for a lesser percentage. In fact, if a person is not very rich, it will be preferable for him not to make a wasîyyah at all. Instead, he should leave his wealth for his inheritors so that they may lead a life of comfort. This is because one is also rewarded for leaving his inheritors in a state where they can lead a life of comfort and ease. However, if it is a necessary wasîyyah, such as his missed salaats, fasts, fidyah, etc. then he will have to make a wasîyyah, if not, he will be sinning.
6. A person says: "After my death, give R100 in charity." After paying for his burial arrangements and his debts, check how much wealth is left over. If there is R300 or more, R100 will have to be given in charity. If it is less than R300, it will only be wâjib to give one third of whatever money is left over. But if all the inheritors happily agree to give the full amount without anyone of them being coerced into agreeing, it will be permissible.
7. If a person has no inheritors, it is permissible for him to make wasîyyah for his entire estate. If he only has his wife as his inheritor, he can make a wasîyyah in her favour for three quarters of his estate. Similarly, if a woman only has her husband as her inheritor, she can make a wasîyyah in his favour for half her estate.
8. The wasîyyah of an immature child is not valid.
9. A person makes the following wasîyyah: "A certain person must perform my janâzah salât, I must be buried in a certain town, in a certain graveyard, next to a certain person, my kafan must be of a certain cloth, my grave must be constructed of bricks, a dome must be constructed over my grave, and a hâfiz must sit at my grave and continue reciting the Quran so that I may receive the rewards." It is not necessary to fulfil such a wasîyyah. In fact, it is not permissible to fulfil the last three wasîyyahs. The person who fulfils them will be committing a sin.
10. If a person makes a wasîyyah and thereafter revokes it, i.e. he says that he does not wish it to be fulfilled anymore and that it should not be taken into consideration, then in such a case this wasîyyah will be invalid.
11. Just as it is not permissible to make a wasîyyah for more than one third of one's estate, similarly, it is not permissible for one to spend more than one third of one's wealth while one is in his maradul maut. However, he can spend his wealth for his basic necessities, his food and drink, medication, etc. If a person gives more than one third, it will not be permissible to do so without the permission of the inheritors. Whatever he gives beyond one third, the inheritors have the right to take it. As for immature inheritors, even if they grant permission, it is not considered. Inheritors do not have the right to give anything without the permission of all the other inheritors even if it is within the one third. This rule applies when the person gave it while he was alive and the person to whom it was given also took possession of it. If he gave it but the person did not take possession of it as yet, then once the person passes away, this giving of his will be absolutely invalid. The person will not receive anything and the inheritors will have a right in all the wealth. This rule also applies to spending in the path of Allawh or in some noble cause while one is sick. In short, under no circumstance is it permissible to give more than one third.
12. When the person fell ill, a few people came to live with him with the intention of tending to him and seeing to his needs. They spent several days with him, living with him and partaking of his meals as well. If the sick person requires their services and therefore they stayed with him, there will be no harm in this. But if there is no need for them to be present, in such a case it will not be permissible for the sick person to spend more than one third in accommodating them.

If these persons who have come are his inheritors and there is no need for them to be present, it will not be permissible to spend even less than one third on them. That is, it is not permissible for them to eat from his wealth. However, if all the inheritors express their consent happily, it will be permissible.
13. When a person is in his maraḍul maut, he has no right to forgive anyone from paying their debts to him. If any inheritor was his debtor and he forgave him, it will not be considered to be forgiven. If all the inheritors give their consent to the waiving of an inheritor's debts (provided all of them are mature), it will be considered to be waived. If a person waives the debts of an outsider, only an amount that is within one third will be waived and the balance will not be waived. It is a custom for the wife to forgive her husband from paying the mahr at the time of her death. This is not valid.
14. When a woman begins to experience labour pains and she gives something to anyone or forgives her mahr, then the rules that apply at the time of death will also apply here. That is, if, Allawh forbid, she passes away during this labour, then whatever she gives will be regarded as a waṣîyyah and therefore not permissible for an inheritor. If it is an outsider, she has no right to give or forgive more than one third. However, if she delivers the child and recovers completely, this giving and forgiving will be valid.
15. Once a person passes away, his burial arrangements will be paid for with his money. From the balance, his debts will first have to be paid off. This is irrespective of whether he made a waṣîyyah in this regard or not - fulfilling of debts is always given precedence. The mahr that is owed to one's wife is also included in one's debts. If the person has no debts or there is a remainder after fulfilling the debts, we will have to see whether he made any waṣîyyah or not. If he made any waṣîyyah, it will be paid from one third. If he did not make any waṣîyyah or there is still a remainder, all the balance will be the right of the inheritors. One should enquire about the rightful inheritors (and their respective shares) from an 'âlim and distribute the estate accordingly. The custom of anyone taking whatever he likes is a major sin. If a person does not pay in this world, he will have to pay in the hereafter - where the payment will be with one's good deeds. Similarly, girls should also be given their share as the Sharî'ah has given them a right as well.
16. It is not permissible to take the money of the deceased in order to pay for entertainment and accommodation of visitors, feeding them, or to give in charity, etc. Similarly, it is ḥarâm to give any dry groceries, etc. (of the deceased) to poor persons from the time the person passes away until he is buried. In doing this, no reward whatsoever reaches the deceased. In fact, it is a major sin to regard this as an act of reward. This is because all this wealth now belongs to the inheritors, to deprive them of their right and give it to someone else is similar to stealing someone else's money and giving it in charity. All the wealth should be distributed among the inheritors. Each one of them has the right to spend and give as he wishes provided it is spent in accordance with the Sharî'ah. When intending to give in charity, one should not even ask the permission of the inheritors as in most cases, if they grant permission it will only be done superficially because they fear embarrassment. There is no consideration for such a permission.
17. Similarly, it is not permissible to give the deceased's used clothes in charity without obtaining the consent of the inheritors. If there are any immature inheritors, it will not be permissible to give these clothes even if they grant permission. All these clothes should first be distributed among all the inheritors, thereafter, if the mature inheritors wish to give anything in charity, they may do so from that which they received. Without this distribution, these clothes should never be given in charity.

ADDENDUM TO PART FIVE

Rules concerning hair

1. It is sunnah to grow one's hair on the entire head till the ear lobes or slightly below them. If a person wishes to shave his head, it is sunnah to shave the entire head. It is also permissible to merely clip the hair. However, it is not permissible to clip all the hair and leave the front portion long, as is the fashion today. Similarly, it is also not permissible to shave a portion and leave another portion long. From this we deduce that it is not permissible to sport the babri hairstyle (or to cut the hair in the shape of a cap or to shape the front part of the hair).
2. If the hair has been lengthened considerably, it is not permissible to tie it into a tail like women.
3. It is ḥarâm for women to shave the head or clip the hair on the head. The Hadith has cursed such women.
4. It is sunnah to clip the moustache to such an extent that it is clipped to the skin. There is a difference of opinion with regard to shaving the moustache. According to some it is a bid'ah, while others have permitted it. Caution demands that one does not shave it.
5. It is permissible to lengthen the moustache on the sides on the condition that the area above the lips is not lengthened.
6. It is ḥarâm to shave or clip the beard. However, it is permissible to clip it if it is longer than the length of one fist. Similarly, it is permissible to clip it on all the sides in such a way that it becomes neat and straight (provided it is beyond one fist).
7. It is permissible to clip the hair and straighten the hair line that grows on the cheeks. Similarly, it is also permissible to straighten and cut the eyebrows a wee bit.
8. The hair on the throat should not be shaven. However, it has been related from Abû Yûsuf raḥmatullâhi 'alayh that there is no harm in this.
9. Shaving the hair of the lower lip is regarded as a bid'ah by the jurists. Therefore this should not be done. Similarly, they have said that it is makruh to remove the hair that is on the nape of the neck.
10. It is not permissible to pluck out grey hairs merely for the purposes of beautification. However, it is better for the mujâhidîn to do so in order to instil fear and awe in the hearts of the enemy.
11. The hair of the nose should not be tweezed out. Instead, it can be clipped.
12. It is permissible to remove the hair that is on the chest and back. However, it is not good to do so.
13. It is preferable for men to remove the hair of the pubic region from just below the navel onwards. When shaving, they should commence from below the navel. It is also permissible to use sulphurate of arsenic and other preparations (such as hair-removing creams, etc.) to remove the hair of the pubic region. As for women, the sunnah method is that they should remove the hair of the pubic region by pinching it out or tweezing it out and that they should not use a shaving machine.
14. It is preferable to remove the hair of the arm pits by tweezing them. However, it is permissible to shave them.
15. As for the hair of the balance of the body, it is permissible to shave it or retain it.
16. It is also sunnah to clip the nails of the feet. However, it is mustaḥab for the person who is engaged in jihad not to clip his moustache and nails.
17. It is preferable to clip the finger nails in the following order: commence with the index finger of the right hand until you reach the little finger. Thereafter, commence with the little finger of the left hand until you reach the thumb of the left hand. Thereafter, complete by clipping the thumb of the right hand. As for the toe nails, commence with the little toe of the right foot and end with the little toe of the left foot. This is the preferable method. However, it is permissible to clip in any way that may be contrary to this method.
18. Clipped nails and hair should be buried. If they are not buried, they should at least be kept in a safe place. However, they should not be kept in any impure, dirty place as there is the fear of falling ill.
19. It is not good to bite the finger nails as this is a cause of leprosy.
20. It is makruh to trim the hair, clip the nails and remove pubic hair while one is in a state of impurity.
21. It is preferable to remove the pubic hair, hair of the arm-pits, nails, to have a bath and cleanse oneself at least once a weak. It is best to do all this on a Friday before going for the jumu'ah ṣalât. If one cannot do this on a weekly basis, he should carry it out every fortnight. If not, at least every forty days. There is no concession beyond forty days. If forty days expire and the person does not carry out the above, he will be committing a sin.

Shuf'ah* - The right of pre emption

1. The moment a shafi' gets the news of a sale and he does not verbally state that he will pre-empt, his right of pre emption will be invalid. It will not be permissible for him to make any claims later. Making a verbal statement immediately is so important that if a shafi' receives a letter wherein it is mentioned at the beginning that a certain house has been sold and he does not make a verbal statement that he will exercise his right of pre-emption until he completes reading the entire letter, then in such a case his right of pre-emption will become invalid.

2. A shafi' says: "Pay me a certain amount of money and I will forgo my right of pre-emption." In such a case, since he is happy to forgo his right, his shuf'ah will be considered to be surrendered. However, since this amounts to bribery, it is therefore harâm to give or to receive this money that he is willing to pay.
3. If the shafi' asks for the property but passes away before he can receive it, his inheritors will not have the right of pre-emption. But if the actual purchaser of the property passes away, the right of pre-emption will remain with the shafi'.
4. The shafi' heard that the house was sold for a certain price. He therefore relinquished his right of pre-emption. Thereafter he learnt that it was sold for a lesser price. At such a time he can exercise his right of pre-emption. Similarly, in the beginning he heard that a certain person is the buyer. Later he learns that the buyer is someone else. Alternatively, in the beginning he heard that half the property has been sold. Later he learns that the entire property has been sold. In all these cases, his relinquishing his right in the beginning, will not invalidate his right of pre-emption.

Muzâra'ah* - Temporary sharecropping contract

1. A person gave an empty piece of land to another person telling him: "You cultivate this land. Whatever you harvest will be divided between us according to a certain percentage." This is known as muzâra'ah and is permissible.
2. A person cultivated a piece of land and said to another person: "You irrigate this land, tend to it and do whatever else is necessary. Whatever fruit is produced, irrespective of whether it is up to one-two years or 10-12 years, we will share it between ourselves either equally (i.e. 50% each) or by dividing it in thirds (or whatever the percentage may be)." This is known as musâqât and is also permissible.
3. In muzâra'ah, the following conditions apply:
(a) the land must be cultivable.
(b) the landlord and the cultivator must be mature and in their senses.
(c) the period of cultivation must be specified.
(d) the ownership of the seeds must be specified - whether they will belong to the landlord or the cultivator.
(e) the crop must be specified - whether it will be wheat, barley or whatever else.
(f) the share of the cultivator must be specified, i.e. what percentage or how much will he receive from the total harvest.
(g) the land must be vacated and given to the cultivator.
(h) the landlord and the cultivator must remain partners in the harvest.
(i) the land and the seeds must be from one person while the ox, ploughing tools and labour must be from the other person. Alternatively, the land must be from one person and the rest of the things from the other person.
4. If any one of these conditions are not found, the muzâra'ah will be fâsid.
5. When a muzâra'ah becomes fâsid, all the produce will go to the person who gave the seeds. If the other person is the landlord (i.e. if he did not give the seeds), he will receive a rental for his land, the rate of which will be according to the market value at that time. If the other person is the cultivator (i.e. if he did not give the seeds), he will receive a payment for his labour, the rate of which will be according to what is normally paid at the time.
This rental and this payment for the labour will not be more than what they had agreed upon at the beginning of the contract. For example, if they had agreed that they will share it out equally (i.e. 50% each), either of them will not receive more than half of the total produce.
6. Once the muzâra'ah contract has been drawn and thereafter one of them refuses to work, he will be forced to carry out his work. However, the person who gave the seeds will not be forced.
7. If any one of the parties of the contract passes away, the muzâra'ah will become invalid.
8. If the specified time of muzâra'ah expires and the crops have not ripened as yet, the cultivator will be paid for the extra days that he works on the land. He will be paid according to the normal rate at that time.
9. In certain places the custom is that the crops are divided according to the contract that they had made. As for other crops such as unripe corn, etc. they do not divide between them. Instead, the landlord charges the cultivator a cash fee per acre of land. Since this condition falls contrary to the rule of muzâra'ah it ought to be impermissible. However, this law can be re-interpreted and circumvented to exclude such crops from the contract of muzâra'ah. Therefore, the 'urf (current custom) will be considered and it will be assumed that both parties have agreed to execute muzâra'ah in certain crops while in other crops it will be considered as though the land was rented out. Such a re-interpretation can make the afore-mentioned custom permissible. However, the consent of both parties is conditional.
10. It is the habit of some landlords that when the crops are being divided, then apart from their own share, they take out something extra from the share of the cultivator for the other labourers and workers. If he specifies a certain number by saying that he will take one or two tons (or whatever the case may be), this will not be permissible. However, if he says that he will take a certain number of kilos from each ton, it will be permissible.
11. Some people do not clearly state what will be planted. Thereafter, they end up in disputes and court cases. This is not permissible. They should either clearly state what will be planted or grant an open permission to the cultivator to plant whatever he wishes.
12. In certain places it is the habit of the cultivator to plant the seeds and thereafter hand over the responsibility of cultivating the land to a few persons. He hands over this responsibility to them on the condition that whatever produce they yield, they will receive one third (or whatever the case may be). This is also called muzâra'ah. This will be permissible wherever the landlords permit this sort of contract. If not, it will not be permissible.
13. In the previous mas'ala (no.9), the above-mentioned mas'ala (no.12) is also applicable. That is, certain crops are divided with these labourers, while for the other crops they are paid in cash per acre (or whatever the case may be). In this mas'ala as well, as with the above-mentioned mas'ala, it is apparently not permissible and the same explanation for its permissibility will also apply over here.
14. The custom of claiming inheritance or ownership over a land after renting it for 10-12 years or after entering into a muzâra'ah contract for a similar period is bâṭil (invalid), harâm, zulm (oppression), and ghasab (illegal seizure). Without obtaining a voluntary permission from the owner, it is not permissible to use this land or property. If a person does this, the produce of this land will be evil and eating it will be harâm.
15. The rules of musâqât are the same as that of muzâra'ah.
16. If a tree has fruit on it and the tree is given in order to be taken care of, and the fruit is in such a state that by irrigating it and tending to it, it will grow, musâqât will be permissible. However, if the fruit has already matured, musâqât will not be permissible just as muzâra'ah is not permissible once the plantation has already been prepared.
17. Once the musâqât contract becomes fâsid, all the fruit will go to the person who owns the trees. The person who tended to the trees will receive a basic wage, as had been mentioned for muzâra'ah.

Intoxicants

1. If any intoxicant is thin and flows, whether it be alcohol, toddy (an intoxicating drink made from palm juice) or anything else, and by drinking a considerable amount of it one becomes intoxicated, then even a single drop of such an intoxicant will be harâm even if one does not become intoxicated with such a meagre amount.
Similarly, it is also not permissible to use it in any medicine irrespective of whether the medicine is in the form of a syrup or in the form of an ointment. And irrespective of whether the intoxicant remains in its original form or whether its form changes due to certain chemical reactions. From this we can gauge the impermissibility of modern medicines in which alcohol is found in most of them.

2. As for that intoxicant which is not thin and flowing and is instead a solid, such as tobacco, nutmeg, opium, etc. the rule with regard to this is that the amount which intoxicates a person or causes him severe harm will be harâm. As for that amount which does not intoxicate nor does it cause severe harm, that is permissible. If it is used in an ointment, plaster, etc. there is no harm in this.

Partnerships

Partnerships are of two kinds:

(a) Shirkat-e-Imlâk: Examples: (1) A person passes away and there are several inheritors to his estate. (2) Two persons contributed an amount of money and purchased one item. (3) One person gave a gift to two persons.

The rule with regard to such a partnership is that no one has a right to do anything with the item without the permission of the other.

(b) Shirkat-e-'Uqûd: Two persons made a mutual agreement that they will conduct a business together. The categories and rules of such a partnership are as follows:

1. One of the categories of shirkat-e-'uqûd is shirkat-e-'inân.

Shirkat-e-'inân: Two persons contribute a certain amount of money and decide to purchase clothing, grain, etc. and thereafter start a business with it. The condition in such a partnership is that the contribution of both must be in cash irrespective of whether it be silver coins, gold coins or currency notes. Based on this, if both of them add something that is not cash and wish to commence a business on a partnership basis or, one of them contributes cash and the other contributes something else, this partnership will not be valid.

(i) In shirkat-e-'inân it is permissible for one person to contribute more than the other and the share of the profits will be according to what they agree upon. That is, if they make this condition that there will be a difference in the contribution of each one but the profits will be shared equally; this will be permissible. If they make a condition that the contribution will be equal but the share of profits will not be equal, e.g. the profit sharing ratio will be on a one third/two third basis, this will also be permissible.

(ii) In shirkat-e-'inân, each partner has the right to exercise his power and do whatever he wishes with the tradeable goods on the condition that whatever he does is not contrary to their agreement. However, the debts of one partner will not be demanded from the other partner.

(iii) Two persons agreed on entering into a partnership and they also agreed on the amount of each one's contribution. However, before they could purchase anything in order to commence their business, all the money was destroyed or the contribution of one of the partners was destroyed. In such a case, the partnership will become invalid.

If one of the partners has already purchased some goods and the contribution of the other partner was destroyed, the partnership will not become invalid. The goods that have been purchased will belong to both partners, and according to the percentage that the other partner (the one whose contribution was destroyed) contributed into the capital, he will have to give that percentage to the other partner (the one who had purchased the goods). For example, one person contributed R9 and the other person contributed R3. The person who contributed R9, purchased some goods with it. The one who contributed R3, lost his money. The one who contributed R3 therefore has a share of one third in those goods. The person who contributed R9, will collect one third of this amount (i.e. R3) from this person and these goods will be sold on a partnership basis.

(iv) In such a type of partnership it is not necessary for the contribution of both the partners to be mixed. Such a partnership becomes entrenched by mere îjâb and qubûl (offer and acceptance).

(v) The sharing of profits have to be specified on a percentage basis, eg. 50% or one third, two thirds, etc. It is not permissible for them to say that one will receive R100 and the other will receive the remainder.

2. Another category of shirkat-e-'uqûd is shirkat-e-sanâ'i. It is also called shirkat-e-taqabbul.

Shirkat-e-sanâ'i: For example, two tailors or two dyers make an agreement that whatever work comes to any one of the two, he will accept it and whatever money he gets paid for this work, it will be shared between the two based on a certain percentage. This is permissible.

(i) Work that is accepted by one of them will become necessary on both of them. For example, one partner accepted a job to sew a garment. Just as the customer can demand the garment from this partner, he can also demand it from the other partner as well. Similarly, just as the partner who sewed it can demand the money for the labour, the other partner also has the right to demand for it from the customer. Just as the customer can absolve himself by paying the partner to whom he had given the job, he can also absolve himself by paying the other partner.

3. Another type of partnership is shirkat-e-wujûh. That is, the partners do not have any money or wealth, nor do they have any profession or occupation. They merely make a mutual agreement that they will take goods on credit from the traders and go around selling them. Even in such a partnership, each partner will be a guarantor for the other. The profits will be shared according to the percentage that they agree upon. For example, if they agree that they are purchasing the goods on an equal basis, the profits will also be shared equally. If they agree that they are purchasing the goods on a one third/two thirds basis, the profits will be shared accordingly.

SUPPLEMENT TO BAHISHTI ZEWAR

The pursuit of halâl wealth

Hadith One: It is mentioned in a Hadith that to earn halâl wealth is a farḍ after other farâ'iḍ. In other words, it is farḍ to earn halâl wealth after other farâ'iḍ which are the pillars of Islam, such as salât, fasting, etc. This means that although it is farḍ to earn halâl wealth, the status of this farḍ is less than that of the other farâ'iḍ which form part of the pillars of Islam.

This farḍ (of seeking halâl wealth) is farḍ on the person who is in need of spending on the necessities of life. This is irrespective of whether it be for his own necessities or for the necessities of his wife and family. As for the person who has the basic necessities, this is not fard on him. Such as a person who owns a few properties or has received wealth through some other means. This is because Allawh Ta'âla has created wealth for the fulfilment of one's needs and so that man will fulfil his basic necessities and occupy himself in the 'ibâdah of Allawh Ta'âla. This is because one cannot engage oneself in 'ibâdah without eating and clothing oneself. From this we can deduce that wealth is not the main object, instead, it is merely a means towards the fulfilment of another object (i.e. the 'ibâdah of Allawh).

Once a person has acquired sufficient wealth, he should not unnecessarily seek more wealth out of greed, nor should he unnecessarily try to increase his wealth. It is not fard on the person who has acquired sufficient wealth to seek more wealth. In fact, it should be clearly understood that the greed to increase wealth is something that causes one to be neglectful of Allawh, and the abundance of wealth makes one prone to committing sins.

One should always be cautious in acquiring halâl wealth. At no time should Muslims turn towards haraam earnings. This is because such a type of wealth has no barakah, such a person is disgraced in this world and in the hereafter, and he is punished by Allawh. Some ignorant persons are under the misconception that in present times it is impossible to earn halâl wealth and that there is no hope of earning halâl wealth. This is absolutely wrong and is actually a delusion of shayṭân. You should remember that the person who acts in accordance with the Sharî'ah is assisted in unseen ways. The person who has the intention of earning halâl and abstaining from harâm is provided with such type of wealth by Allawh. This has been experienced by many, and the Quran and Hadith have promised this in numerous places. Even in these turbulent times, those servants of Allawh who have controlled their nafs from harâm and doubtful things, have been provided with the best of halâl wealth from Allawh. Such servants are living with greater comfort and honour than those who are devouring harâm wealth. The person who experiences this himself, who notices this in other persons as well, and finds this mentioned in several places in the Quran and Hadith cannot even bother about what these ignorant persons have to say. If you read this (what the ignorant persons have to say) in any reliable book, then the meaning of it is not what these ignorant persons have taken it to be. When you happen to read such an article, refer to a religious-minded and qualified 'âlim and ask him to explain the meaning of it to you. Inshâ Allawh, your doubts will be cleared and such foolish thoughts will disappear from your heart.

When it comes to wealth, people are extremely neglectful and indifferent. They take up prohibited professions and employments and also violate the rights of others. All this is ḥarâm.

Remember that there is no shortage in the treasures of Allawh. You will definitely receive what has been predestined for you. So where is the intelligence in having evil intentions and making preparations for entry into the fire of jahannam?

Since people pay very little attention towards ḥalâl wealth, this subject has been mentioned time and again with great emphasis. The actual purpose for the creation of man and jinn is that they engage in the 'ibâdah of Allawh. You should therefore bear this in mind in all your dealings and transactions. You have been asked to eat and drink in order to gain strength to remember Allawh. This does not mean that you should occupy yourself night and day in the pleasures of this world thereby forgetting Allawh and disobeying Him. Some ignorant persons are under the misconception that they have come into this world in order to eat, drink and enjoy the luxuries of this world. This is an extremely blasphemous concept. May Allawh destroy this affliction of ignorance.

Hadith Two: Rasûlullâh ṣallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "No person has partaken of a meal better than that which he has eaten through the earning of his own hands. Without doubt, Dâ'ûd 'alayhis salâm used to earn with his own hands." This means that it is best for one to earn with one's own hands, e.g. one should engage in some occupation, business, etc. and should not be a burden to others. Nor should one show any contempt for any occupation or menial job. When the Ambiyâ 'alayhimus salâm had taken up such occupations, who is there who is greater than them in honour and respect? In fact, no one's rank is equal to theirs, where can it ever be higher or greater than theirs? It is mentioned in a Hadith that there isn't a prophet who did not graze sheep. Understand this well and save yourself from ignorance.

It is the belief of certain persons that if you receive ḥalâl wealth through inheritance or through any other avenue, i.e. it is not acquired through your own hard work, then they feel that they should still work and they regard this as an act of ibâdah. This is a gross error. Instead, it is preferable for such a person to occupy himself in the ibâdah of Allawh. When Allawh has given you peace of mind and removed the concern of acquiring sustenance, it is a sign of great ingratitude that you do not remember Him and instead worry about increasing your wealth. All ḥalâl wealth is good no matter how it comes to you provided you do not have to bear any disgrace. This is a great bounty of Allawh, one has to value it, spend it in the proper manner, and do not allow any wastage and extravagance.

The import of the Hadith is that people should not burden others and should not beg from others as long as there is no alternative which has been recognized as such by the Sharî'ah. The Hadith also teaches that no occupation should be regarded as contemptible, ḥalâl wealth should be pursued, and that earning should not be considered to be a blemish. This topic has been discussed in detail so that people do not consider earning with their own hands to be below their dignity, and that they can eat, feed and spend in charity from their earnings.

This Hadith does not mean that ḥalâl wealth other than that which has been earned through one's own hands is not ḥalâl or that it cannot equal wealth that has been earned with one's own hands. In fact, at times, other wealth is better than that which has been earned with one's own hands. Certain ignorant persons criticize and condemn those pious persons who have placed their trust in Allawh and use this Hadith as a proof that such persons ought to earn through their own hard work and that they should not merely sit back, have tawakkul, and depend on gifts from others. This is actually a sign of their immaturity and this objection of theirs goes right up to Rasûlullâh ṣallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. Such persons should fear Allawh in this regard, as there is the possibility that by their showing disrespect, criticizing and censuring these pious servants, they will be punished in this world and in the hereafter. By being disrespectful to the auliyâ of Allawh, there is the fear of one losing one's îmân and dying in a state of kufr. May Allawh make such a person extinct before he can criticize the auliyâ because this will be best for him.

If one ponders over the Quran and Hadith with an open mind, one will learn that it will be preferable for a person who fulfils the qualities of tawakkul to practice tawakkul instead of earning a living. This is the highest stage of wilâyat. Rasûlullâh ṣallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam himself was a mutawakkil. The income that a person receives as a mutawakkil is much better than the income that one earns through one's own hard work. There is special barakah and special nûr in such income whereby Allawh Ta'ala has granted such a person such a high status, foresight, understanding and nûr. The person can see the barakah of this with his open eyes.

This subject will be dealt with in detail at another place. Because this is a concise article, it is not possible to go into much detail. It will be sufficient to understand over here that such an opinion is absolutely wrong as has already been explained. Furthermore, it is an act of great injustice that a person is not pious himself and yet when someone else has any piety in him, he begins to criticize and censure him. How will the person have the courage to face Allawh when he is causing such harm to His auliyâ?

Apart from the above-mentioned benefits of tawakkul, there are many other Dînî benefits. As for the mutawakkilîn who are engaged in teaching and guiding the masses, it is farḍ to serve them to the extent that their necessary expenses are paid for. So if they are accepting this right of theirs, why should it be considered to be wrong? More so when those who are not mutawakkilîn also demand their rights by arguing and fighting, while the mutawakkilîn accept their rights with great respect and by honouring the people. It is apparent that there is only good in accepting gifts - when there is no possibility of disgrace, the person is independent, he takes it without really worrying about it, and especially when the person who gave it will be greatly perturbed if it were returned to him. The reality is that persons who are true mutawakkilîn receive their sustenance with great honour. However, their intention and their attention is only directed towards having complete trust in Allawh. Their eyes are not set on the creation. As for the one who hopes to receive something from the creation and sets his eyes on their wealth, he is an imposter and is not included in our discussion. We have only confined ourselves to explaining the condition of the true mutawakkilîn. It is a major sin to despise anyone especially if such a person is one of the special servants of Allawh. These pious servants are not harmed in any way by your criticisms. Instead, they only benefit from them because on the day of judgement they will receive the good deeds of those who spoke ill of them. Harm will only come to those who speak ill of them and they will be destroyed in this world and in the hereafter.

It should also be remembered that the Sharî'ah has not granted permission for tawakkul to every one. It is extremely difficult to take up the task of tawakkul and to fulfil all its conditions. It is for this reason that we find so few persons like this. In fact, there are so few, it is as if there is no one. It should be remembered that something that is very good is very scarce. We express our gratitude to Allawh that through a little pondering and thinking, this subject has been written very well. May Allawh grant you and me the ability to practice on this. Âmîn.

Hadith Three: It is mentioned in a Hadith that Allawh is ṭayyib and that He only accepts that which is ṭayyib. Allawh has commanded the believers with that which He commanded the prophets. Allawh addressed the prophets saying: "O prophets! Eat that which is pure (i.e. ḥalâl) and do good deeds." And He addressed the believers saying: "O you who believe! Eat of the pure things which We have provided for you." Thereafter, Rasûlullâh ṣallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam mentioned a person who has undertaken a very long journey and who is in a very untidy and dishevelled state (on account of his journey). He raises his hands towards the heavens saying: "O Allawh! O Allawh!" (i.e. he beseeches Allawh again and again asking Him for His mercy and the fulfilment of all his needs), while his food is ḥarâm, his drink is ḥarâm, his clothing is ḥarâm, and he has been brought up in ḥarâm. So how can his du'â be accepted?"

In other words, despite his bearing such burdens, on account of this ḥarâm wealth, his du'â will never be accepted. Even if he realizes his goal and ambition, it will not be on account of his du'â but on account of it already being predestined in his favour. Just as the goals and ambitions of the kuffâr are realized.

The meaning of a du'â being accepted is that Allawh looks at a person with mercy. It is through this mercy that He grants him whatever he wishes for, and because of his asking, Allawh rewards him. So this can only be attained by the person who confines himself to the dictates of the Sharî'ah and asks for whatever he wishes from Allawh alone. From this we learn that ḥalâl wealth has an abundance of barakah and that it has a great influence (on the person's life). By consuming ḥalâl wealth, one gets the power to do good and one's limbs act in accordance with one's intellect.

Abu Ḥâmid al-Ghazzâlî raḥmatullâhi 'alayh narrates from a great sûfi by the name of Suhayl raḥmatullâhi 'alayh who said that when a person eats ḥarâm, his limbs give up following his intellect. That is, his intellect commands his limbs to do good but they do not obey it. However, this is only known to those whose hearts are illuminated. As for those whose hearts are black, they are preoccupied day and night in luxuries and following their desires, and this has no effect on them. May Allawh protect the sensitivity and insight of our heart. Âmîn.

Malfûz Four: ‘Abdullah bin Mubârak rahmatullâhi ‘alayh says: "I prefer returning one dirham which is doubtful than giving 600 000 dirhams in charity." From here we can deduce the serious nature of doubtful wealth. It is extremely sad that today people do not even give up haraam wealth. All they are interested in is acquiring wealth irrespective of how it is obtained while the pious servants of Allawh used to regard doubtful wealth with abhorrence. It is necessary to safeguard oneself from haraam wealth and essential to exercise extreme caution in this regard. By consuming haraam wealth, numerous evils are born in the soul. This is what destroys man.

Hadith Five: It is mentioned in a Hadith that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu ‘alayhi wa sallam said: "The halâl is clear and the harâm is clear. In-between these two, there are many doubtful things. The person who abstains from these doubtful things has in fact safeguarded his Dîn and his honour. As for the one who consumes the doubtful things, he will soon consume that which is harâm. Similar to the shepherd who grazes his flock around the sanctuary of a king. It is highly possible that he will very soon fall into that sanctuary. Beware, every king has a sanctuary, and the sanctuary of Allawh is all those things which He has made harâm. Behold, there is a piece of flesh in the body, if it is sound, the entire body will be sound. But if it is unsound, the entire body will be unsound. Behold, it is the heart."

Hadith Six: It is mentioned in a Hadith that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu ‘alayhi wa sallam said: "May Allawh destroy the Jews. Fat was made harâm upon them, but they melted it and sold it."

Hadith Seven: Rasûlullâh sallallâhu ‘alayhi wa sallam said: "It is not possible for a person to earn harâm wealth, give it in charity, and expect to receive any reward for it. Nor is it possible for him to spend such earnings and expect to receive any blessings in it. Nor is it possible for him to leave it behind and expect it to be a source of provision for him in the future. Instead, he will enter hell. Without doubt, Allawh does not wipe out evil with evil. Instead, He wipes out evil with good. Without doubt, harâm wealth does not wipe out sins."

Hadith Eight: It is mentioned in a Hadîth that the flesh which has been brought up and nurtured with harâm wealth will not enter jannah. And all such flesh is most suitable for jahannam. In other words, a person who devours harâm will not enter jannah without expiating for his sins. This does not mean that he will never enter jannah like the kuffâr. Instead, if he dies a Muslim but was involved in devouring harâm wealth, he will be punished for his sins and eventually admitted into jannah. If he repents for his sins before his death and fulfils the rights of those whom he owes, Allawh will forgive him and he will be safe from the punishment which has been mentioned in the Hadîth.

Hadith Nine: It is mentioned in a Hadîth that a person will not be a complete believer until he abandons those things in which there is no fear (of it being harâm) because of something in which there is fear. In other words, there are certain things which are absolutely halâl, while others are merely permissible. However, by turning one's attention towards the latter and consuming such wealth, there is the possibility and fear of committing a crime. Therefore, even such halâl wealth should not be consumed nor should such halâl activity be carried out. This is because although there is no sin in engaging in such halâl activity or consuming such halâl wealth, there is still the possibility of falling into sin. And we know that the means to an evil is also considered to be an evil. For example, it is permissible and halâl to eat and wear expensive food and clothing. But because by one becoming pre-occupied in such luxuries beyond the limits, there is the possibility and fear of committing sins. Piety and righteousness demands that such food and clothing be abstained from.

It is makrûh to consume wealth that is doubtful. By consuming it, there is a great possibility that one will lose control over one's nafs and thereby fall into harâm. Such wealth should therefore be abstained from.

Hadith Ten: ‘Â’ishah radiyallâhu ‘anhâ narrates that Abû Bakr radiyallâhu ‘anhu had a slave who used to give him khirâj. Abû Bakr radiyallâhu ‘anhu used to consume this income. One day, this slave brought something and Abû Bakr radiyallâhu ‘anhu ate it. The slave then asked him: "Do you know what you ate?" Abû Bakr radiyallâhu ‘anhu asked: "What was it?" He replied: "In the times of jâhilîyyah (days of ignorance or pre-Islamic era) I had given certain information to a person according to the rules and regulations of the fortunetellers. However, I did not know this art (of fortune telling) very well. I deluded this person into believing whatever I had told him. This person met me and gave me that which you ate as a compensation for the information that I had given him. That which you have eaten is actually what he gave me." Upon hearing this, Abû Bakr radiyallâhu ‘anhu inserted his hand down his throat and vomited everything that was in his stomach.

In other words, as a precaution and out of complete piety, he expelled everything from his stomach as it would have been impossible to expel only that which was given by this slave. Even if he did not vomit it out, he would not have been committing any sin.

Hadith Eleven: It is mentioned in a Hadîth that a person who purchases a garment for 10 dirhams and one dirham from it was harâm, Allawh will not accept his salât as long as he is wearing that garment.

Although the person will absolve himself of this duty, he will not receive the full reward for his salât. Other acts could also be based on this. We should fear Allawh in this regard. First of all, our acts of ‘ibâdah are not offered in the proper manner. And those that are offered go to waste in this way (by harâm wealth). What answer will we give to Allawh on the day of judgement and how will we bear the severe punishment?

Hadith Twelve: It is mentioned in a Hadîth that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu ‘alayhi wa sallam said: "There isn't anything which will take you near to jannah and keep you away from jahannam except that I have ordered you to do it. And there isn't anything which will distance you from jannah and take you closer to jahannam except that I have prohibited you from doing it. Jibra’îl has informed me that no person will die until his sustenance has been completed for him even though he may receive it late. Fear Allawh and try to restrict yourself in seeking your sustenance. Don't ever allow a delay in receiving your sustenance from seeking something through the disobedience of Allawh. This is because it is the grand status of Allawh that nothing can be attained from Him through disobedience, irrespective of whether it be your sustenance or anything else."

Hadith Thirteen: Rasûlullâh sallallâhu ‘alayhi wa sallam said: "Out of ten parts, nine parts of one's sustenance is in business." In other words, business is a great source of income. You should therefore opt for it.

Hadith Fourteen: It is mentioned in a Hadîth that Allawh befriends a believer who is hard working and who is a tradesman, and who does not worry about what he is wearing.

In other words, because of his hard work and toiling, he wears ordinary, dirty clothes. He does not have so much of time nor the opportunity wherein he can keep his clothes clean. As for the person who is not forced to do so, he should wear clean and simple clothes.

Hadith Fifteen: Rasûlullâh sallallâhu ‘alayhi wa sallam said: "It was not revealed to me that I should gather wealth or that I should become a businessman. However, it has been revealed to me that I should glorify Allawh, praise Him, be of those who prostrate to Him and that I engage in His ‘ibâdah until death overtakes me."

In other words, do not occupy yourself in this world more than necessary because it is wâjib on everyone to make arrangements for living according to necessity only (and not more). As for the person who has the power of tawakkul and fulfils all the conditions of tawakkul, such a person can leave all the occupations of this world and occupy himself with theoretical (‘ilmi) and practical (‘amali) ‘ibâdah.

Hadith Sixteen: Jâbir radiyallâhu ‘anhu narrates that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu ‘alayhi wa sallam said: "May Allawh have mercy on the person who is lenient and soft-hearted when he sells something, purchases something, and when he asks for repayment of loans given."

Glory be to Allawh! How great it is to display leniency and soft-heartedness at the time of buying, selling and asking for repayment of loans given that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu ‘alayhi wa sallam is making a special du‘â for such a person. We know for sure that his du‘â will be accepted. If this was the only virtue of displaying leniency and there was no other reward, then this virtue in itself is very great. However, one will still be rewarded for this leniency and soft-heartedness. It would therefore be appropriate for the traders and businessmen to act upon this Hadith and thereby make themselves eligible for the du‘â of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu ‘alayhi wa sallam.

Apart from this, the benefit of such behaviour in this world is that people will be happy with such a person and his business will prosper. Generally, people refer to such a person time and again. At times, they even make du‘â for him out of happiness. The reality of the situation is that the person who lives and acts according to the Sharî'ah lives in this world and in the hereafter like a king and in great comfort. Who can be more fortunate than this person who has the blessings of both the worlds and who is beloved and honoured by Allawh and by most of the people as well?

Hadith Seventeen: Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "Be cautious of taking too many oaths when selling anything. This is because too many oaths cause the goods to become popular among the people (and because of these oaths they begin attaching value to the goods). This results in a lack of barakah and one is thereby deprived of any profits both in this world and in the hereafter.

Hadith Eighteen: Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "The businessman who is honest in his dealings and trustworthy will be with the prophets, siddîqîn, and martyrs on the day of judgement."

In other words, the businessman who possesses the above-mentioned qualities will be in the company of the Ambiyâ 'alayhimus salâm, the siddîqîn, the martyrs, and will gain salvation from jahannam. Being with such persons does not mean that they will enjoy the same status as them. What it means is that they will attain a special type of greatness which is normally acquired by remaining in the company of such persons. This is similar to a person who invites a pious person to his house and also hosts the attendants of this pious person. It is obvious that the place where these attendants will eat their food and the food that they will eat will be the same as that of the pious person. Despite this, the status and respect that these persons will have for this pious person will be higher than that which they will have for these attendants. But being in his company, sitting at one place and partaking of the same food is also a great feat accomplished by the attendants. Attaining the company of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam itself is a great virtue. Assuming that they do not even receive any food nor any honour and respect from being in his company, merely being in his company is sufficient for those Muslims who love Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. Let alone being in his company being a great achievement, even being his neighbour is a great virtue. It is therefore extremely appropriate for Muslims to be entitled to this blessed du'â of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam.

Hadith Nineteen: Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "O traders! Without doubt, business is such a thing that a lot of foolish talk takes place and many oaths are taken. Therefore include charity in it."

In other words, it is reprehensible to engage in foolish talk and to take too many oaths. You should therefore give in charity so that it may be an expiation for those oaths and indiscreet conversations which you may unwittingly engage in, and so that it may also remove the filth and grime that may have accumulated in your heart because of this.

Hadith Twenty: It is mentioned in a Hadîth that the businessmen will rise as sinners and shameless persons on the day of judgement except for that businessman who feared Allawh and spoke the truth. The person who did not commit any sin in his transactions will be saved from this calamity.

The detestation of taking credit unnecessarily

Hadith One: Abû Sa'îd radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that he heard Rasûlullâh *sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam*saying: "I seek refuge in Allawh from kufr and debts." A person asked: "O Rasulullah! Do you regard kufr and debts to be equal that you are mentioning them together?" He replied: "Yes."

Hadith Two: 'Abdullah bin 'Umar radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "Debts is the flag of Allawh on earth. When He wishes to disgrace anyone, He burdens him with the weight of debts."

Hadith Three: 'Abdullah bin 'Umar radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that he heard Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam advising a person in the following manner: "Reduce your sins so that your death will be easy. Reduce your debts so that you may live a free person."

Hadith Four: Abû Hurayrah radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "Allawh will fulfil the debts of a person who takes on credit with the intention of fulfilling his debt. Allawh will destroy the person who takes on credit with the intention of not paying it and cheating people."

Hadith Five: 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ narrates that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "I will help the person who is involved in debts and thereafter makes every effort to fulfil them, but passes away before he can fulfil them."

Hadith Six: Maymûn Kardî radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "The person who marries a woman with mahr, whether it be a small amount or a large amount, and has this intention that he will not pay her the mahr and passes away without paying her, then on the day of judgement he will rise as an adulterer in the presence of Allawh. And the person who takes a loan with the intention of not paying it back and passes away without fulfilling it, will rise as a thief in the presence of Allawh on the day of judgement."

Hadith Seven: 'Umar bin Shurayd narrates from his father (who is a Sahâbî) that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "The delaying of a person who is able (to pay his debts) makes his honour and wealth halâl."

In other words, if a person is able to fulfil his debts and yet does not do so, then his creditors can disgrace him, speak ill of him, announce his dishonesty in his transactions, and when possible, they can claim back their rights either openly or in secret.

Hadith Eight: Abû Dhar radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "Allawh abhors three persons: (a) an old man who is an adulterer, (b) a poor person who has a lot of pride, (c) a rich oppressor (who oppresses his creditors by delaying in paying his debts)."

Du'â for the fulfilment of debts

Hadith One: A mukâtab came to 'Alî radiyallâhu 'anhu and said: "I have become incapable of paying for my freedom. Please help me." He replied: "I will show you a du'â which Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam taught me. Even if you have debts equal to mount Thubayr, Allawh will fulfil your debts for you. The du'â is:
!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Hadith Two: Anas bin Mâlik radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said to Mu'âdh bin Jabal radiyallâhu 'anhu: "Should I not teach you a du'â which if recited, Allawh will fulfil your debts even if they equal a mountain? The du'â is:

1. Nikâh is a great bounty from Allawh Ta'âlâ. The affairs of this world and the hereafter are put in order through marriage. There is a lot of wisdom and many benefits in marriage. A person saves himself from sinning and his heart is put at ease. He does not have any evil intentions and his thoughts do not begin to wander and stray. The greatest virtue is that there are only benefits and only rewards in this. This is because a husband and wife's sitting together and engaging in a loving conversation, joking with each other, etc. is better than nafl salât.
2. A marriage can be executed by just two words, e.g. a person says the following words in the presence of witnesses: "I give my daughter to you in marriage." The person who is addressed replies: "I accept her in marriage." In so doing, the marriage is valid and both of them are lawful husband and wife. However, if the person has several daughters, the nikâh will not be executed by his uttering the words mentioned above. He will have to mention the daughter by name, e.g. he says: "I give my daughter, Qudsiyyah, to you in marriage", and the person replies: "I accept her in marriage."
3. A person says: "Give so-and-so daughter of yours to me in marriage." The father replies: "I give her to you in marriage." In so saying, the nikâh will be valid irrespective of whether he says that he accepts or not. (In other words, it is not necessary for the word "accept" to be mentioned).
4. If the daughter is present and the father says: "I give this daughter of mine in marriage to you", and the person replies: "I accept her", the nikâh will be valid. It will not be necessary to mention her name.

If the girl is not present, it is necessary to mention her name and the name of her father in such a loud tone that all the witnesses are able to hear. If the people do not know the father and there is a strong possibility that by mentioning his name they will still not know whose nikâh is being performed, then it will be necessary to mention the name of the grand-father as well. In other words, such identification is necessary whereby those present immediately know whose nikâh is being performed.

5. In order for a nikâh to be valid, it is also essential for at least two males or one male and two females to be present, to hear the nikâh being performed, and to hear the two words (i.e. the offer and the acceptance) being uttered. Only then will the nikâh be valid. If two persons sit together in privacy and one says to the other: "I give my daughter to you in marriage" and the other person replies: "I accept your daughter", the nikâh will not be valid. Similarly, if the nikâh was performed in the presence of one person only, even then the nikâh will not be valid.
6. If there are no males present, but only females, the nikâh will not be valid even if there are ten females present. Together with two females, one male has to be present.
7. If there are two males but they are not Muslims, the nikâh will not be valid. Similarly, if both are Muslims but both or one of them is immature, the nikâh will not be valid. Similarly, if there is one male and two females but both or one of the females is immature, the nikâh will not be valid.
8. It is preferable to perform the nikâh in a large gathering such as after the jumu'ah salât in a jumu'ah musjid or in any other large gathering. This is so that the nikâh will be well announced and the people will become aware of the nikâh. A nikâh should not be performed in secret and privacy. However, if due to some reason many persons are unable to attend, then at least two males or one male and two females who hear the nikâh being performed in their very presence should be present.
9. If both the man and woman are mature, they can perform their own nikâh. All that they have to do is say the following in the presence of two witnesses: One of them must say: "I am making my nikâh with you" and the other must say: "I accept." In so doing, the nikâh will be valid.
10. If a person does not make his nikâh himself, but asks someone to perform his nikâh with someone, or, he mentions the name of the person with whom he wishes his nikâh to be performed and this person performs this nikâh in the presence of two witnesses - the nikâh will be valid. Even if this person rejects or denies this later, the nikâh will still be intact.

Persons with whom Nikâh is Harâm

1. Marriage with one's children, grand-children, great grand-children, etc. is not permissible. Nor is marriage with one's parents, grand-parents, maternal grand-parents, etc. permissible.
2. Marriage with one's brothers, uncles and nephews is not permissible. According to the Sharî'ah, a brother is one whose mother and father is the same, or they have one father but two mothers, or one mother but two fathers. They are all brothers. But if the father is different, and the mother is also different; that person will not be a brother. Nikâh with him will be valid.
3. Marriage with one's son-in-law is not permissible. This is irrespective of whether the daughter is already living with him or not. In all cases, nikâh with him is ḥarâm.
4. A girl's father passed away. Her mother married another person. However, before the mother could even live with her new husband, she passed away or he divorced her. In such a case, the girl can marry this step-father of hers. However, if the mother lived with him, it will not be permissible for this girl to marry him.
5. Nikâh with one's step-children is not valid. In other words, if a man has several wives, then one of the wives cannot marry the children of the co-wives. This is irrespective of whether she had lived with her husband or not. Nikâh with these children is prohibited under all circumstances.
6. It is not permissible for a woman to marry her father-in-law or even the father or grand-father of her father-in-law.
7. As long as a sister is married to her husband, it is not permissible for another sister to marry this brother-in-law of hers. However, if her sister passes away or he divorces her and she completes her iddah, it will be permissible for the other sister to marry her brother-in-law. In the case where the brother-in-law divorces the first sister, it is not permissible for the second sister to marry her brother-in-law until her sister completes her iddah.
8. If two sisters marry one person, the marriage of the sister whose nikâh was performed first will be valid while the marriage of the sister whose nikâh was performed later will not be valid.
9. A man married a woman. As long as he remains married to her, he cannot marry her maternal and paternal aunts and nieces.
10. If the relationship between two women is such that if we had to regard one of them as a man, their nikâh will not be valid, then such two women cannot marry a person at the same time. When one of them passes away or one of them is divorced and completes her iddah, only then will it be permissible for the person to marry the other woman.
11. If a woman and her step-daughter marry a person at the same time, the nikâh will be valid.
12. Adoption is not considered in the Sharî'ah. By adopting a boy, he does not become one's son. It is therefore permissible to marry one's adopted son.
13. If a man is not one's real uncle but he becomes an uncle through some other distant relationship, marrying him is permissible. Similarly, if a man happens to be one's paternal uncle or nephew through some distant relationship, nikâh with him is permissible. Nikâh with one's cousins is also valid irrespective of whether they are paternal or maternal cousins.
14. Two women who are not blood sisters but are maternal or paternal cousins are permitted to marry one man at the same time. In the presence of such a cousin, another cousin can also marry the same man. The same rule applies to a very distant maternal or paternal aunt. That is, the niece and this distant maternal or paternal aunt can marry the same man at one time.
15. All the relations which become ḥarâm on account of lineage also become ḥarâm on account of breast-feeding. In other words, if a girl is breast-fed by a particular woman, then this girl cannot marry the latter's husband because he will now be regarded as her father. A girl who has been breast-fed by a particular woman cannot marry a boy who has been breast-fed by the same woman. Nor can this girl marry the children of this woman because she is also regarded as a child of this woman. All the maternal and paternal uncles and maternal and paternal nephews who become related due to this breast-feeding also become ḥarâm on this girl.
16. If two girls have been breast-fed by one woman, they cannot marry the same man at one time. In other words, whatever has been explained previously, will also apply to relations based on breast-feeding.
17. A man committed adultery with a certain woman. Now it will not be permissible for her mother or her children to marry this man.
18. Due to the passions of youth, a woman touched a man with evil intentions. It will now not be permissible for her mother or her children to marry this man. Similarly, if a man touches a woman with evil intentions, her mother and her children will be ḥarâm on him.
19. In the middle of the night, a man decided to awaken his wife. However, he mistakenly touched his daughter or his mother-in-law. Thinking them to be his wife, he touched them with the passions of youth. Now, this man will become ḥarâm on his wife forever. There is no way in which she can become permissible for him. It will be necessary for him to divorce his wife.
20. If a boy touches his step-mother with an evil intention, she will become ḥarâm on her husband. There is no way in which she can be ḥalâl for him. If the step-mother touches her step-son with an evil intention, the same rule will apply.
21. A Muslim woman cannot marry a man who belongs to any other religion. She can only marry a Muslim man.
22. A woman's husband divorced her or he passed away. As long as she does not complete her iddah, she cannot marry anyone else.
23. Once a woman marries a man, she cannot marry another person unless and until she is divorced by this person and also completes her iddah.
24. If a woman is not married and she falls pregnant due to adultery, it will be permissible to marry her. However, it will not be permissible to have intercourse with her until she delivers the child. But if the woman marries the same person who had committed adultery with her, it will be permissible for the person to have intercourse with her.
25. If a person has four wives, he cannot marry a fifth woman. If he happens to divorce one of his four wives, another woman cannot marry him until the one who is divorced completes her iddah.
26. The marriage of a Sunnî girl with a Shî'ah man is not permissible according to the majority of the 'ulamâ.

The Wali or Legal Guardian

The person who has the power or choice of getting a boy or girl married is called a wali.

1. The first wali of a boy or girl is their father. If the father is not present, the grand-father becomes their wali. If he is not present, then the great grand-father. If none of them are present, the blood-brother becomes their wali. If he is not present, then the step-brother, i.e. brothers from one father. Thereafter, the nephew, thereafter the nephew's son; and thereafter, the nephew's grand-son. If none of them are present, the blood uncle becomes their wali. If he is not present, then the step-uncle, i.e. the step-brother of their father. Thereafter, the son of the blood uncle and thereafter his grand-son. Thereafter, the son of the step-uncle and thereafter his grand-son. If none of them are present, the father's uncle becomes their wali; and thereafter his children. If the father's uncle, his children and grand-children are not present; then the grand-father's uncle becomes their wali. Thereafter, his children, grand-children, and great grand-children.

If none of them are present, the mother will be their wali. Thereafter, the paternal grand-mother, then the maternal grand-mother and then the maternal grand-father. Thereafter, the blood-sister and then the step-sister, i.e. sisters from one father. Thereafter, the step-brother and then the step-sister who is from one mother. Thereafter, the paternal aunt, then the maternal uncle, and then the maternal aunt.

2. An immature person cannot become a wali of anyone. A kâfir cannot be a wali for any Muslim, nor can a lunatic be a wali for anyone.
3. A mature girl has the choice to marry or not to marry. She can marry whomsoever she wishes - no one can force her to marry a particular person. If she marries a person on her own, the nikâh will be valid irrespective of whether the wali is informed or not, and irrespective of whether the wali gives his consent or not. In all cases the nikâh will be valid. However, if she does not marry a person who is of the same social standing as her, and instead, marries a person who is of a lower standing than her family, and her wali is not happy about this marriage, then the fatwâ in this case is that the nikâh will not be valid.

If she marries a person who is in the same social standing as her, but the mahr that she receives is less then what is normally fixed in her paternal grandfather's family, then although the nikâh will be valid, the wali will have the right to annul this marriage. The mahr that is normally fixed in her paternal grandfather's family is known as mahrul mithl. The wali can go to a Muslim court and have such a marriage annulled. However, it should be borne in mind that this right of annulment is only possessed by all those walis whom we had mentioned before the mother. In other words, from the father onwards till the children of the grand-father's uncle.

4. A wali performed the nikâh of a mature girl without asking her or without seeking her consent. The validity of such a nikâh will be dependent on her permission and consent. If she grants her permission, the nikâh will be valid. If she does not grant her permission or is not happy, the nikâh will not be valid. The method of granting permission is mentioned in the next mas'ala.

5. The wali came and informed a young virgin girl that he intends performing her nikâh with a certain person, or that he has already performed her nikâh with a certain person. Upon hearing this, she remained silent, began smiling or began to cry. All these responses of her's will be considered to be a permission and a consent. Now, if the wali performs her nikâh, it will be valid. If he has already performed it, it will also be valid. It is not a prerequisite for her to give a verbal permission. Those who force a girl in giving a verbal permission are in error.

6. At the time of seeking her permission, the wali did not mention the name of her future husband, nor did she have any prior knowledge of him. In such a case, her silence will not be considered to be a form of consent, nor will it be considered to be a form of granting permission. It is necessary to mention the boy's name or some other form of identification whereby the girl can understand that the wali is referring to a particular person. Similarly, if the wali performed the nikâh without mentioning the amount of mahr to her and it was far less than the mahrul mithl, the nikâh will not be valid without her permission. He will have to seek her permission again.

7. The girl is not a virgin, and instead had married previously and this is her second marriage. When the wali asks her or seeks her permission for this second marriage, her mere silence will not be considered to be a form of granting permission. Instead, she will have to give a verbal reply. If she does not give a verbal reply and remains silent, and despite this the wali performs her nikâh, then her nikâh will be in abeyance. Later, if she gives a verbal permission, the nikâh will be valid. If not, it will not be valid.

8. Despite the father being present, the uncle, brother or any other wali sought the permission of a virgin girl. If she remains silent, it will not be considered to be a form of granting permission. Only when she gives a verbal permission will it be considered. However, if the father sent these persons to seek her permission, her silence will be considered to be a form of consent. In short, the wali who is given the first preference in the Sharî'ah and who has the most right to seek permission from the girl - when he asks her or when someone who has been sent by him asks her, then only will her silence be considered to be a form of consent. If the grand-father had the right of asking her, and instead the brother asked her; or if the brother had the right of asking her and instead she was asked by her uncle, then in such a case her silence will not be considered to be a consent.

9. A wali performed the nikâh of a girl without asking her and without obtaining her consent. After the nikâh, the wali or his messenger came and informed the girl that her nikâh with a particular person has been performed. In such a case, if she remains silent, this will be a permission on her part and the nikâh will be valid. But if someone else comes and informs her, and this person is a pious, reliable person, or two persons come and inform her, then by her remaining silent the nikâh will be valid. But if there is only one person who informs her and he is an unreliable person, then by her remaining silent the nikâh will not be valid. Instead, it will be held in abeyance. When she gives a verbal reply or any other form of granting permission is found, then only will the nikâh be valid.

10. Upon being informed of her nikâh, the girl did not give a verbal reply although it was necessary for her to give a verbal reply. However, when her husband approached her she did not refuse him from engaging in sexual intercourse with her. Even in this case, the nikâh will be valid.

11. The same rules apply to a mature boy, i.e. he cannot be forced into a marriage nor can the wali perform his nikâh without his permission. If his nikâh is performed without his permission, it's validity will be dependent on his permission. If he expresses his consent, his nikâh will be valid. If not, it will not be valid. However, it should be borne in mind that the boy's silence is not considered to be a form of granting permission. He will have to give a verbal reply.

12. If a boy or a girl are immature, they do not have their own choice. Their nikâh is not valid without a wali. If a boy (or girl) performs his nikâh on his own or someone else performs it, it will be dependent on the permission of the wali. If the wali grants permission, the nikâh will be valid. If not, it will not be valid. The wali has full rights over such a boy or girl. He can get them married to whoever he wishes and refuse whoever he wishes. Immature girls and immature boys cannot reject such a nikâh at that time. This is irrespective of whether the girl is a virgin or had been married previously and had also been sent to her (first) husband's home - the same rule will apply.

13. If the father or grand-father perform the nikâh of an immature girl or boy, they do not have the right to reject or repudiate this nikâh even after they become mature. This is irrespective of whether the marriage was executed with a person who is of the same social standing or with a person of a lower class, and irrespective of whether the nikâh was performed with mahrul mithl or whether it was far less than the mahrul mithl. In all cases the nikâh will be valid and they cannot reject or repudiate this nikâh.

14. If a wali other than the father or grand-father performed the nikâh, and it was performed with a boy of the same social standing and the mahrul mithl was also given, then in such a case the nikâh will be valid. However, after reaching the age of maturity, she has the right to endorse this nikâh or to go and complain to a Muslim judge and have this marriage annulled.

But if the wali performed her marriage with a person of a lower social standing or accepted a mahr which was far less than the mahrul mithl, the nikâh will not be valid from the very outset. Similarly, if the wali performed the nikah of a boy with a mahr which was far more than the mahrul mithl of the girl, the nikâh will not be valid from the very outset.

15. A wali other than the father or grand-father had performed the nikâh of an immature girl who also had knowledge of this nikâh. Thereafter, she became mature and until then her husband hadn't had any sexual intercourse with her. In such a case, the moment she becomes mature, she must mention her discontent with regard to marrying this person. She must clearly state that she is not happy. Alternatively, she could say that she does not wish to continue with this marriage. This could be said in the presence of others or in privacy where she is all alone. But she has to mention it verbally. However, by her merely saying this, the nikâh will not be annulled. She will have to go to a Muslim judge, he will annul the marriage, and only then will it be annulled.

Once she becomes mature and allows even a moment to pass in which she does not mention her discontent, she will not have the choice of having her nikâh annulled.

But if the girl did not have any knowledge of this nikâh and only learnt of it after becoming mature, then the moment she is informed, she will immediately have the right to reject the nikâh. If she remains silent for even a moment, she will forfeit this right to reject the nikâh.

16. If her husband engaged in sexual intercourse with her, and thereafter she becomes mature, it is not necessary for her to reject the nikâh immediately after becoming mature or after being informed. Instead, as long as she does not express her consent and happiness, she will have the choice of rejecting or accepting irrespective of how much time lapses. However, if she clearly states that she is happy about this marriage, or her consent is made apparent in some other way such as being in solitude with her husband like any other normal husband and wife, then she will have no choice and this nikâh will become entrenched.

17. The person who is most entitled of being the wali of an immature girl is gone to a foreign country. He is so far away that if the rest of the family had to await his arrival in order to consult him, the girl will lose this opportunity. Furthermore, the person who has come with the proposal is not prepared to wait for so long and it will be difficult for the girl to receive a similar proposal. In such a case, the person who is next in line to become her wali can also perform her nikâh. If he performs the nikâh without consulting the girl, it will be valid. But if the first wali is not very far away, her nikâh should not be performed without consulting him. If it is performed, it will be dependent on his permission. Once he grants his permission, the nikâh will be valid.

18. Similarly, if the second wali performs the nikâh of an immature girl despite the most rightful wali being present, it will be dependent on his permission. For example, if the grand-father performs the nikâh without consulting the father despite the latter being present, it will be dependent on the father's permission. If the right belonged to the brother but the nikâh was performed by the uncle, it will be dependent on the brother's permission.

19. A woman became a lunatic and lost her sanity. She has a mature son and a father as well. If her nikâh has to be performed, her wali will be her son because the son is more entitled of being a wali than the father (father of the woman).

The Question of Compatibility or Kufu'

1. The Sharî'ah has taken great precautions in ensuring that nikâh with an incompatible person or a person of a lower social standing does not take place. In other words, do not perform the nikâh of a girl with a man who is not equal to her in status or who is of no match to her.
2. Compatibility or equality is considered in several factors: (1) lineage, (2) Islam, (3) piety, (4) wealth, (5) profession or occupation.

Equality in Lineage

1. Equality in lineage is that the Shaykh, Sayyid, Ansâri, and 'Alawi are all equal to each other. In other words, although the status of a Sayyid is more than the others, if the daughter of a Sayyid marries a Shaykh boy; it will not be said that she did not marry someone who is of her family relations. Instead, it will also be regarded as if she has married one of her relatives.
2. In matters of lineage, the lineage of the father is considered and not the mother. If the father is a Sayyid, the son is also a Sayyid; and if the father is a Shaykh, the son is also a Shaykh - irrespective of what the mother may be. If a Sayyid marries a woman who is not a Sayyid, their son will be regarded as a Sayyid. This son will be equal in status to all other Sayyids. Although the son whose father and mother are both from a noble family is respected more, according to the Shariah they will all be regarded as relatives or of the same social standing.
3. The Moghuls and Pathans are regarded as one nation and are not of the same class as that of the Sayyids and Shaykhs. If the daughter of a Sayyid or Shaykh gets married with one of them, it will be said that she married someone who is of a lower social standing than her.

Equality in being a Muslim

1. Equality in being a Muslim is only considered among the Moghuls, Pathans, and other non-Arab nations. There is no consideration of this among the Shaykhs, Sayyids, 'Alawis, and Ansâris. A man who accepts Islam and his father was a kâfir cannot be on par or equal to a woman who is a Muslim and her father was also a Muslim. The man who is a Muslim, his father is also a Muslim, but his grandfather was a kâfir; cannot be equal to a woman whose grandfather was also a Muslim.
2. A man whose father and grandfather were Muslims, but his great grandfather was a kâfir will be regarded as equal to a woman whose several forefathers were Muslims. In short, this equality is only considered till the grandfather. Equality beyond the grandfather, such as the great grandfather and beyond him is not considered.

Equality in Piety

Equality in piety means that a man who does not follow the dictates of the Sharî'ah - who is a wicked person, a scoundrel, an alcoholic, a shameless person - will not be considered to be equal to a pious, chaste and religious woman.

Equality in Wealth

Equality in wealth means that a person who is an absolute pauper cannot be compatible to a rich woman. If the man is not an absolute pauper, but is capable of giving that amount of mahr that is normally given on the first night and is also capable of giving her maintenance, then he will be regarded to be equal to her in status even if he is unable to give the entire amount of mahr. It is not necessary for the man to be in exactly the same financial position as that of the woman. Nor is it necessary for him to be close to that financial position.

Equality in Occupation

1. Equality in occupation is that, e.g. weavers are not regarded as equal to tailors and are accorded a status that is lower than that of tailors. Similarly, barbers, washermen, etc. are not regarded as being equal to tailors, but are regarded as being lower than tailors.
2. A mad, lunatic person cannot be equal to an intelligent, understanding woman.

Mahr - Dowry

1. Once a nikâh is performed, it will be valid irrespective of whether mention of any mahr was made or not. Despite it being valid, one will have to give the mahr. In fact, if a person makes the condition that he will not give any mahr and that he is marrying the woman without any mahr, he will still have to give the mahr.
2. The minimum mahr is 10 dirhams and there is no limit to the maximum amount of mahr. The woman can stipulate as much as she wishes. However, it is not good to stipulate a very high figure. If a person gives an amount less than 10 dirhams or its equivalent, he will have to give the balance as well because mahr cannot be an amount less than the minimum. If the husband divorces his wife (in this case) even before she can come and live with him, he will have to give half of the minimum.
3. A person stipulated R20, R100, R1000, or any other amount according to his financial position. The woman thereafter came and lived with him. He also had sexual intercourse with this wife of his. Alternately, he did not have intercourse with her, but he and his wife were able to meet in privacy where no one or nothing stopped them or prevented them from engaging in sexual intercourse. In both these cases, it will be wajib on the person to fulfil the full amount of the stipulated mahr. If none of the above transpired between them, and one of them passed away, it will still be wâjib to fulfil the entire mahr. Furthermore, if none of the above transpired between them, and the man divorced her, it will be wâjib on him to fulfil half the stipulated mahr.

In short, if the husband and wife meet in privacy, as mentioned above or one of them passes away, the entire mahr becomes wâjib. And if the husband divorces her prior to them being in privacy and seclusion, it will be wâjib to fulfil half the stipulated mahr.

4. If one of them was ill, keeping a fast of Ramadân, in the ihrâm of hajj, the woman was in her hayd or there was someone who was peeping at them or intruding on their privacy, and they met in private or seclusion in any of the above situations, then this privacy or seclusion of their's is not considered. If they meet each other in any of the above situations or circumstances, the total amount of mahr will not become wâjib. If the husband divorces her, it will be her right to receive half the total mahr. However, if the fast was not a fast of Ramadân, instead it was a qadâ, nadhr, or nafl fast, and this was being kept by one of them, then in such a case if they happened to meet in privacy and seclusion, the wife will have the right of receiving the full amount of the mahr. It will be wâjib on the husband to fulfil the full amount.
5. The husband is impotent, however, both of them met in privacy and seclusion. The wife will still receive the full mahr. Similarly, if the husband is a hermaphrodite and they meet in privacy and seclusion and thereafter he divorces her, she will receive the full mahr.
6. The husband and wife met in privacy and seclusion but the wife is so young that she is incapable of sexual intercourse. Alternately, the husband is so young that he is incapable of sexual intercourse. If they meet in privacy and seclusion in such a case, the full mahr will not be wâjib.
7. If no mention whatsoever of the mahr was made at the time of the nikâh, or the nikâh was performed on the condition that the woman will not receive any mahr, and thereafter one of them passed away or they met in privacy - that is regarded as a valid privacy in the Sharî'ah - even then the mahr will have to be fulfilled. However, in such a case, the mahrul mithl will have to be paid.

In the above case, if the husband divorced his wife prior to being in seclusion with her, she will have no right to receive any mahr. Instead, she will only receive a set of clothing. It is wâjib on the man to give this to the woman. He will be sinning if he does not do so.

8. When giving this set of clothing, only four items are wâjib on the man: a dress, a scarf, a pants, and a sheet which can cover her body from head to toe. Apart from these items it is not wâjib to give any other clothing.
9. The clothing that the man gives should be according to his financial position. If the man is poor, he should give cotton clothing. If he is of a middle class, he should give silk that is of an inferior quality. If he is very rich, he should give silk clothing that is of a very high quality. However, it should be borne in mind that in all these circumstances the clothing that is given should not be more than half the mahrul mithl in value. At the same time, it should not be less than 5 dirhams in value.

In other words, it is not wâjib on the man to give clothing which is very expensive and which exceeds half the mahrul mithl in value. However, it is permissible for him to give clothing that is more than the stipulated amount provided that he gives it happily and out of his own will.

10. At the time of the nikâh no mahr was stipulated. However, after the nikâh, the husband and wife agreed upon a specific amount as mahr. In such a case, mahrul mithl will not have to be given. Instead, the amount that they had agreed upon will have to be given. But if the husband divorced his wife prior to their meeting in privacy and seclusion, she will not have any right of receiving any mahr. Instead, she will only receive the clothing that had been mentioned previously.
11. A person stipulated R100, R1000 or any other amount according to his financial position. Thereafter the husband decided to give more than the original amount that was stipulated. This he did voluntarily and out of his own good will. For example, the stipulated mahr was R100, but he decided to give R150. Whatever additional amount he decides to give will now become wâjib upon him. If he does not give it, he will be sinning. But if he divorces her prior to meeting in privacy and seclusion, he will have to give half of the original amount that was stipulated. The additional amount that he had decided to give will not be calculated. Similarly, if the wife happily and willingly reduces the amount of mahr, it will be considered to be reduced. If she absolves him from paying the entire amount, it will be absolved. Now she has no right to claim it.
12. If the husband pressurized her into reducing the mahr or instilled some fear into her so that she reduces the mahr, then by her reducing or forgiving her husband, it will not be considered to be forgiven. It will still be wâjib upon him to fulfil the mahr.
13. No cash, gold or silver was stipulated for the mahr. Instead, a small village, a farm or some land was stipulated. This is permissible. The farm, land, etc. that was stipulated will have to be given.
14. A horse, elephant or any other animal was stipulated as mahr. However, a specific horse or a specific elephant was not stipulated. This is also permissible. In such a case an average horse which is not too cheap nor too expensive will have to be given. Alternatively, it's value in cash could be given. However, if an animal was stipulated without specifying the type of animal, this will not be valid. Mahrul mithl will have to be given.
15. A couple got married in an unlawful way and the husband and wife were therefore made to separate. For example, they got married in secret without the presence of two witnesses. Alternately, two witnesses were present but they were deaf and were therefore unable to hear the words that make a nikâh valid. Alternatively, a man had divorced his wife or he had passed away. Prior to completing her iddah, the woman married another man. Or some other form of unlawful marriage had taken place and the husband and wife were therefore made to separate. However, in all these cases, the man did not have any sexual intercourse with this woman. In such a case, she will not receive any mahr. In fact, even if they met in privacy and seclusion, she will still not be eligible to receive any mahr. But if sexual intercourse had taken place, she will receive mahrul mithl. However, if at the time of nikâh some mahr had been stipulated and this mahr is less than the mahrul mithl, then she will receive the mahr that had been stipulated at the time of the nikâh and not the mahrul mithl.
16. A person had sexual intercourse with a woman after mistaking her for his wife. He will have to give her mahrul mithl as well, and this intercourse with her will not be regarded as adultery (zinâ) nor will there be any sin. In fact, if the woman falls pregnant, the lineage of the child will be in order. It will not be tainted and it is not permissible to label the child as being illegitimate. The moment the man realizes that this is not his wife, he should immediately separate himself from her and it will not be permissible for him to continue with the intercourse. It is also wâjib on this woman to observe the iddah. It is not permissible for her to stay with her husband or to engage in sexual intercourse with him. The rules related to iddah will be mentioned in a later chapter - Inshâ' Allawh.
17. If in a certain place or country, the norm is that the entire mahr must be given on the first night, then the woman has the right to demand the mahr on the first night. If she does not ask for it on the first night, she can ask for it whenever she wishes and it will be wâjib on the husband to give it to her. He cannot delay in fulfilling the mahr.
18. The practice in India is that the paying and receiving of mahr is undertaken after divorce or after death. When the woman is divorced, it is only then that she claims her mahr. Alternatively, when the husband dies and leaves behind some wealth, she takes her mahr from this left over wealth of his. If the woman dies, her inheritors claim the mahr. As long as the husband and wife are living together, no one pays the mahr nor does she ask for it. In such a situation, the woman cannot demand the mahr before divorce. However, it is wâjib on the man to give an amount that is normally given in that place on the first night. But if all these practices are not found in any place, these rules will not apply.
19. If the husband does not give the amount of mahr that is normally given beforehand, the wife has the right to refuse him to engage in sexual intercourse with her until he pays that amount. If they engaged in intercourse once, she still has the right of refusing him the next time or the following time if he does not pay the mahr. If he wishes to take her to another city or country, she has the right of not going unless her mahr is paid. Similarly, if the mahr is not paid and the woman wishes to travel to another city or country, or wishes to go to her parents home, and there is a mahram who can take her, then the husband does not have the right to stop her. But once he pays the mahr, she does not have the right to do any of these things without her husband's permission. It is not permissible for her to go anywhere without his consent. As for the husband, he can take her wherever he wishes. It is not permissible for her to refuse him.
20. The husband gave some item (or cash, gold, silver, etc.) to his wife with the intention that it is mahr. Whatever he gives will be regarded as part of the mahr. It is not necessary for him to inform his wife at the time of giving it to her that he is giving her mahr.
21. The man gave an item to his wife. She claims that the item was given as a gift and not as mahr while the man claims that he gave it as mahr. In this case, the husband's claim will be considered. However, if the item was such that it is consumed as food or drink, it will not be considered to be mahr and the husband's claim will not be considered.

Mahrul Mithl

1. Family mahr or mahrul mithl is determined in the following way: look at any woman in the girl's father's family who is similar or equal to this girl. That is, if the girl is young, the woman must also be young at the time of marriage. If the woman is beautiful, this girl must also be beautiful. If the woman's marriage had taken place when she was a virgin, this girl's marriage must also take place while she is a virgin. The wealth that this girl possesses at the time of her nikâh, that woman also had possessed the same at the time of her nikâh. The place or locality from which this girl is, that woman must also be from the same place. If this girl is religious-minded, intelligent, well-mannered and educated, that woman must also be the same. In short, this girl whose nikâh is being performed now, must also possess the qualities that that woman possessed at the time of her nikâh,. If they share the same qualities, then the mahr that was stipulated for that woman will be the mahrul mithl for this girl.
2. Women of the girl's father's family refer to the girl's sisters, paternal aunts, cousins (children of paternal uncles), etc. In other words, girls or women who are connected to her paternal grandmother. When determining the mahrul mithl, the mahr of the mother is not considered. However, if her mother is also of the same family as that of her father's, e.g. if her father marries his cousin (paternal uncle's daughter), then the mother's mahr will also be regarded as mahrul mithl.

The Marriages of the Kuffâr

1. The different forms of marriage in the different religions are recognized in the Sharî'ah. If both, husband and wife, accept Islam, there is no need to repeat their nikâh. The nikâh that they had performed as kuffâr will still be valid.
2. If the husband or the wife accepts Islam and the other partner does not accept, their nikâh will be annulled. It will not be permissible for them to live as husband and wife.
3. If the wife accepts Islam and not the husband, then as long as the wife does not complete three hayd periods, it will not be permissible for her to marry another person.

Equality among Wives

1. If a person has more than one wife it is wâjib upon him to treat each one equally. Whatever he gives to one wife, the other wife also has the right to claim something equal to that in value. This rule of equality applies to all types of wives, i.e. whether both were virgins at the time of marriage, both were previously married or one was a virgin at the time of marriage while the other had been previously married. If he spends one night with one wife, he will have to spend one night with the other wife as well. If he spends two or three nights with one wife, he will have to do the same with the other wife as well. Whatever wealth, jewellery, clothes, etc. he gives to one wife, the other wife also has the right to claim something equal to that in value.
2. If a person marries a second woman, the rights of this new wife and the rights of the old wife are the same. There is no difference in rights between the two.

3. Equality is based on spending the night and it is not necessary to spend an equal time with them during the day. If a person spends more time with one wife during the day and less time with the other, there is no harm in this. However, it is wâjib to spend an equal time with them at night. If a person goes to one wife immediately after maghrib, and the following day he goes to the other wife after 'ishâ, he will be sinning. However, if a person's occupation is such that he works at night and remains at home during the day; for him, the basis of equality will be the day. For example, a night watchman or guard will have to base his equality with his wives according to the day and not the night.
4. There is no equality in engaging in sexual intercourse in the sense that if a person engages in sexual intercourse with one wife, it is not necessary for him to engage in sexual intercourse with the other wife as well.
5. The man has to maintain equality in allocating nights to his wives irrespective of whether he is ill or not.
6. There is no sin in loving one wife more than the other because these matters are connected to the heart and one does not have any control over one's heart.
7. Equality is not wâjib when embarking on a journey. The husband can take whichever wife he wishes. However, it is preferable to cast a lot and to take the wife in whose favour the lot was drawn. In this way there will be no unhappiness or disgruntlement.

SUPPLEMENT TO BAHISHTI ZEWAR

The Virtues and Rights of Marriage

1. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that this world has been created to be utilised and that of all the things that are utilised in this world, there is nothing better than a pious woman. In other words, if a person is fortunate enough to get a pious wife, it will be a great blessing. It is also a mercy from Allawh Ta'âlâ that she is actually a comfort for the husband and a means for his success in this world and in the hereafter. A person enjoys comfort from such a woman for his worldly needs and she also assists him in fulfilling his religious duties.
2. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "Marriage is my way and my sunnah." "The one who does not act upon my sunnah is not of me." That is, there is no relationship between him and me. This is actually a warning and a threat to the one who does not practice on the sunnah and a mention of Rasûlullâh's sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam anger on such a person. It is therefore necessary to be extremely cautious in this regard. Furthermore, how can a Muslim bear to have Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam displeased with him for even a moment. May Allawh Ta'âlâ grant us death before that day comes when a Muslim is able to bear the displeasure of Allawh and His Rasûl sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam.
It is mentioned in a Hadîth that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "Marry so that I can be proud (of your numbers) on the day of judgement over the other nations." In other words, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam likes his 'ummah to be in large numbers and more than the other nations. If this happens, his 'ummah will be carrying out more good deeds, and in so doing he will receive more rewards and gain closer proximity to Allawh Ta'âlâ. This is because whoever from his 'ummah does good deeds, does so through his teachings. Therefore, the more people who act on his teachings, the more reward he will receive for conveying those teachings. We also learn from this that whenever and however possible, we should undertake to carry out those tasks and actions that will take us closer to Allawh Ta'âlâ, and that we should not display any laziness in this regard.
It is mentioned in a Hadîth that on the day of judgement the people will be standing in 120 lines. Out of these, 40 lines of people will be from the other nations while 80 lines of people will be from the 'ummah of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. Glory be to Allawh! How beloved Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam is to Him.
The one who is able to (fulfil the rights of a wife) should marry. As for the one who does not have sufficient wealth (to fulfil the rights of a wife), he should fast. That is, he should fast so that there will be a decrease in his desires. Fasting is actually a means of curbing his desires. If a person does not have a very dire need for women, and instead has an average need, and he is able to pay for her basic necessities, then nikâh is sunnat-e-mu'akkadah for such a person. As for the person who has a very urgent need, nikâh will be fard upon him. This is because there is a fear that he will commit adultery and thereby get the sin of committing a harâm act. If a person has a very urgent need but is financially incapable of maintaining a wife, then such a person must fast abundantly. Later, when he has sufficient funds to maintain a wife, he must get married.
3. It is mentioned in a Hadith that children are the flowers of jannah. This means that the amount of joy and happiness one will experience on seeing the flowers of paradise, that same amount of joy and happiness is experienced when he looks at his children. And we know fully well that children can only be obtained through marriage.
4. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that when the status of a person is increased in jannah, he asks out of wonder: "How did I receive all this?" (That is, "How did I receive such a high status when I hadn't carried out so many good deeds to deserve such a status?") It will be said to this person that this high status is on account of your children asking for forgiveness on your behalf. In other words, your children had asked for forgiveness on your behalf. In return for that, you have been accorded this status.
5. It is mentioned that the child who is born out of a miscarriage (i.e. it is born before the due date) will "fight"(wrangle) with its Creator when its parents are entered into jahannam. In other words, this child will go to extremes in interceding on behalf of its parents and will ask Allawh Ta'âlâ to remove its parents from jahannam. Through His bounty, Allawh Ta'ala will accept the intercession of this child and He will be soft and lenient towards it. It will be said to this child: "O siqt (which means, miscarried foetus) who is quarrelling with its Lord! Enter your parents into jannah." So this child will draw its parents out of jahannam with its navel cord and enter both of them into jannah. We learn from this, that children of this sort, who are actually a by-product of marriage, will also be of help in the hereafter.
6. It is mentioned in a Hadith that when the husband and wife look at each other (with love), Allawh Ta'âlâ looks at both of them with mercy.
7. It is mentioned in a Hadith that Allawh Ta'âlâ has taken it upon Himself (i.e. out of His mercy, He as taken the responsibility) of helping the person who gets married in order to attain purity from that which Allawh has made harâm. In other words, the person who marries in order to save himself from adultery with the intention of obeying Allawh Ta'âlâ, Allawh will help and assist him in his expenses and other affairs.
8. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that two rak'ats of salât performed by a married person is better than 82 rak'ats performed by an unmarried person. In another Hadith, 70 rak'ats have been mentioned instead of 82 rak'ats. It is possible that this means that 70 rak'ats are written in favour of the person who fulfils the necessary rights of his wife and family, and that 82 rak'ats are in favour of the person who apart from fulfilling their necessary rights, serves them more with his life, wealth and good habits.
9. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that it is a major sin for a person to be neglectful with regard to those whom he is responsible for (and to have shortcomings in fulfilling their needs).
10. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "I have not left behind any test and tribulation on men more harmful than women." In other words, of all the things that are harmful for men, women are the most harmful. This is because, out of his love for a woman, a man loses all his senses, so much so that he does not even take the commands and orders of Allawh Ta'âlâ into consideration. Therefore, a person must not fall in love with a woman in such a way that he has to act contrary to the Sharî'ah. For example, her demands for her food and clothing are more than what the husband can afford. In such circumstances, never accept any bribes in order to supplement your present income. Instead, give her from the halâl earnings which Allawh Ta'âlâ has blessed you with. You should continue teaching your womenfolk and inculcate respect and good manners in them. Do not allow them to become impudent and disrespectful. The intellect of women is deficient, it is therefore incumbent to take special measures in reforming them.
11. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that you should not propose to a girl when your fellow Muslim brother has already proposed to her until he gets married or gives up this proposal. In other words, when a person has sent a proposal to a particular family and there is a likelihood of their replying in the affirmative, another person should not send a proposal to that same family. However, if they reject this first person, or he himself changes his mind, or they are not too happy with him and are still hesitant in giving a reply, it will be permissible for another person to send a proposal for the same girl.

The same rule applies to the transactions of buying and selling. That is, if a person is busy buying or selling something, then as long as they do not separate or abandon the transaction, another person should not enter into their transaction and should not offer a price above or below that which has been already offered when there is an indication that they are about to come to an agreement. Understand this well, and know that a kâfir is also included in this rule.

12. It is mentioned in a Hadith that a woman is either married because of her Dîn, her wealth or her beauty. Choose the one with Dîn, may your hands become dusty. In other words, a man may prefer a woman who is religiously inclined. While another may prefer one who is wealthy. While yet another may prefer one who is beautiful. However, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam says that one should choose a religiously inclined woman and that it is preferable to marry such a woman. However, if the circumstances are such that a woman is very pious but at the same time she is so ugly that one's nature does not find her acceptable and there is a fear that if he marries such a woman there will be no mutual understanding between them, and that he will be neglectful in fulfilling her rights, then in such a case he should not marry such a woman. "May your hands become dusty" is an Arabic mode of expression which is used on different occasions. In this context, it is meant to create a yearning and a desire for a pious woman.

13. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that the best wife is one whose mahr is very simple. That is, it is very easy for the man to fulfil her mahr. These days, there is the habit of specifying a very high mahr. People should abstain from this.

14. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that you should look for a good place for your sperms because a woman gives birth to children that resemble her brothers and sisters. In other words, marry a woman who comes from a pious and noble family because the children generally resemble the maternal relations. Although the father also has some influence over the child's resemblance, we learn from this Hadîth that the mother's influence is greater. If the wife is from a disreputable and irreligious family, the children who will be born will be similar to that family. But if this is not so, then the children who will be born will be pious and religious.

15. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that the greatest right that a woman has to fulfil is to her husband, and that the greatest right that he has to fulfil is to his mother. In other words, after the rights of Allawh and His Rasûl sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam the woman has a very great right to fulfil to her husband, so much so that the husband's rights supersede the rights of her parents. As for the man, after the rights of Allawh and His Rasûl sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam, the greatest right that he has to fulfil is to his mother. We learn from this that the right of the mother supersedes that of the father.

16. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that if anyone of you wishes to engage in sexual intercourse with his wife, he should recite the following du'â:

The virtue of this du'â is that if a child is conceived through this intercourse, shaytân will not be able to harm this child in any way.

17. There is a lengthy Hadîth in which Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam addressed 'Abdur Rahmân bin 'Auf radiyallâhu 'anhu asking him to have a walîmah even if it is with one sheep. In other words, even if you possess very little, you should spend. It is preferable to have the walîmah after engaging in sexual intercourse with one's bride. However, many 'ulamâ have permitted it immediately after the nikâh as well. It is mustahab to have a walîmah.

BOOK IIXXX

THE METHOD OF BRINGING-UP CHILDREN

Breast-feeding

1. When a child is born, it is wâjib on the mother to breast-feed the child. However, if the father is rich and a wet nurse can be obtained, there is no sin on the mother if she does not breast-feed the child.
2. It is not permissible to breast-feed someone else's child without the permission of the husband. However, if the child is extremely hungry and there is a fear that if it is not fed it will die, then in such a case she can feed the child without seeking the permission of her husband.
3. The maximum period of breast-feeding is two years. It is harâm to feed a child beyond two years.
4. If the child has commenced eating solids and because of this the woman stopped breast-feeding the child before the expiry of two years, there is no harm in this.
5. When a child drinks the milk of another woman, that woman becomes the mother of this child. The husband of that woman becomes this child's father. The children of this woman are regarded as foster brothers and foster sisters of this child and nikâh between them is now harâm. All the relations that become harâm through lineage (blood relations) become harâm through this foster relationship as well. According to the majority of the 'ulamâ, this rule will only apply if the child drinks the milk within the age of two years. If a child drinks the milk of another woman after the age of two, this will not be considered. This woman will not be regarded as the child's mother nor will her children be regarded as the child's brothers and sisters. Therefore, if they happen to marry, their nikâh will be valid. However, Imâm Abû Hanîfah rahmatullâhi 'alayh says that even if a child drinks the milk of another woman within two and a half years, the nikâh will still not be valid. But if the child drinks the milk after the age of two and a half, there is no way that it will be considered. In this case, all the 'ulamâ agree that the nikâh will be valid.
6. The moment the milk goes down the throat of the child, all relations which we had mentioned above will become harâm for that child. This is irrespective of whether very little milk went down or a lot of milk went down its throat.
7. If the child did not drink the milk directly from the woman's breast, and instead, she emitted some of her milk and fed it to the child, even then all those relations will become harâm for that child. Similarly, if some milk is poured into the child's nose, all those relations mentioned will become harâm. But if some milk is poured into the ears, it will not be considered.
8. If the milk of a woman is mixed with water, medicine or any other substance and given to a child, we will have to check whether the milk is more, the other substance is more, or both are equal. If the milk is more than or equal to the other substance, then the woman to whom the milk belongs will become the child's mother and all relations will become harâm for that child. But if the water, medicine, etc. is more than the milk; it will not be considered and the woman will not be regarded as the child's mother.
9. The milk of a woman was mixed with cow's or goat's milk and the child drank this milk. Check which is more. If the woman's milk is equal to or more than the other milk, all relations will become harâm for that child and this child will be regarded as the offspring of the woman to whom the milk belongs. But if the cow's or goat's milk is more, it will not be considered and it will be regarded as if the child did not even drink the woman's milk.
10. If a virgin girl happens to get milk and a child happens to drink it, all relations will become harâm for this child.
11. The milk of a dead woman was taken out and given to a child to drink. Even then, all relations will become harâm for this child.

12. Two children drank milk from the same cow or goat. In doing so, no relations become ḥarâm, nor are they regarded as brother and sister.
13. A young man drank the milk of his wife. She does not become ḥarâm on him, however, he has committed a major sin because it is ḥarâm to drink breast-milk after the age of two.
14. There is a boy and a girl. Both of them drank the milk of the same woman. Now, they cannot marry each other irrespective of whether they were fed the milk at the same time or one was fed now and the other was fed after several years. The same rule will apply in both cases.
15. A girl drank the milk of Bâqir's (name of a person used as an example) wife. This girl cannot marry Bâqir, his father, his grandfather nor other ascendants. Furthermore, she cannot even marry Bâqir's children. In fact, she cannot marry the children of Bâqir which are from his other wife.
16. Abbas drank the milk of Khadîjah. Khadîjah's husband, Qâdir, had another wife by the name of Zaynab whom he had already divorced. In such a case, even Zaynab cannot marry Abbas. This is because Abbas is regarded as a child of Zaynab's husband and we know that nikâh with the husband's children is not permissible. Similarly, if Abbas divorces his wife, then this wife of his cannot marry Qâdir because he is now regarded as her father-in-law. Furthermore, Abbas cannot marry Qâdir's sister because she is regarded as his paternal aunt, and he, her nephew. This is irrespective of whether she is Qâdir's blood sister or his foster sister. The same rule will apply in both cases. However, Qâdir can marry ‘Abbâs's sister.
17. ‘Abbâs has a sister by the name of Sâjidah. Sâjidah drank the milk of a particular woman, but ‘Abbâs did not drink. In such a case, ‘Abbâs can marry this woman.
18. ‘Abbâs's son drank the milk of Zâhidah. It will be permissible for ‘Abbâs to marry Zâhidah.
19. Qâdir and Dhâkir are two brothers. Dhâkir has a foster sister. This sister can marry Qâdir but not Dhâkir. Understand all this very well because masâ'il of this nature are difficult to understand. We have therefore not gone into details. Whenever the need arises, consult a learned, intelligent ‘âlim.
20. A man proposed to or married a particular woman. Thereafter, a woman came and said that she had breast-fed both of them. Apart from this woman, no one else claims or bears testimony that she had in fact breast-fed this couple. In such a case, any foster relationship between this couple cannot be established merely on the allegation of this one woman. The nikâh of the couple will be valid. However, if two reliable and pious men or one reliable, pious man and two women bear testimony that this woman had in fact breast-fed this couple, only then will their foster relationship be established. Their nikâh will now be ḥarâm. Without such a testimony, their foster relationship will not be established.
However, if only one man, only one woman or several women only bear testimony to this fact and one feels in one's heart that these people are speaking the truth, then in such a case they should not marry each other because there is no benefit in falling into unnecessary doubt. But if the nikâh is already performed, it will be valid.
21. It is not permissible to add a woman's milk into any medicine. If this is done, it will be ḥarâm and it is not permissible to consume it or apply it. Similarly, it is not permissible to apply breast-milk in the eyes or ears as a form of medication. In short, it is not permissible to take any benefit from the milk of humans or to use it for one's personal purposes.
then both the husband and wife have to go to a Shar'î judge. The judge will ask both of them to take an oath. First, the husband will take the following oath: "I make Allawh my witness and say that I am speaking the truth with regard to the act for which I have accused her." He should take this oath four times. The fifth time he must say: "If I am lying, may Allawh's curse descend upon me."
When the husband completes this, the wife must say the following four times: "I make Allawh my witness and say that he is lying with regard to the act for which he is accusing me of." The fifth time she must say: "If he is truthful in this accusation, may the wrath of Allawh descend upon me."
Once both of them take this oath, the judge will separate them and one ṭalâqul bâ'in will take place. The child will not be attributed to this husband, but will be given in the care of the mother. In the Sharî‘ah, this oath and counter-oath is known as li'ân.

Legitimate Offspring

1. When a married woman gives birth to a child, that child will be attributed to her husband. It is not permissible to say that this child is not her husband's and that it is someone else's merely on a doubt or suspicion. It is also not permissible to refer to such a child as being illegitimate. In an Islamic state, such a slanderer will be whipped.
2. The minimum period of pregnancy is six months and the maximum period is two years. In other words, a baby remains in the womb of a woman for a minimum period of six months. It cannot be born before this period. The maximum period it can remain in the womb is two years and not more than this.
3. The basic principle of the Sharî‘ah is that as far as is possible, a child will not be regarded as being illegitimate. When there is no option left, only then will the ruling be given that it is illegitimate and only then will we say that the woman has committed a sin.
4. A person issued a ṭalâqur raj'î to his wife. Thereafter, she gave birth to a child within a period of two years. This child belongs to this husband. It is not permissible to regard this child as being illegitimate. According to the Sharî‘ah, this child's lineage is in order. Even if this child is born one day before the expiry of two years, the same rule will apply. It will be regarded as if she had fallen pregnant before the divorce could be issued to her, that the child remained in her womb for up to two years and that after delivering the child her ‘iddah has come to an end and she has now come out of the nikâh with this man.
If this woman has already admitted that her ‘iddah has come to an end before she could give birth, then there will be no alternative but to say that this child is illegitimate. In fact, if such a woman gives birth to a child after two years and she has not admitted that her ‘iddah has come to an end as yet, even then this child will be that husband's irrespective of how long it takes to deliver this child. In this case, it will be understood that they had engaged in sexual intercourse while she was still in her ‘iddah and that he had now revoked his divorce. Therefore, the child that is born will be his, this woman will still remain his wife, and the nikâh will not be annulled. If it is not the husband's child, he must say so and once he rejects this child, the laws pertaining to li'ân will apply.
5. If a ṭalâqul bâ'in was issued, the rule is that the child will be the husband's if it is born within two years. If it is born after two years, it will be an illegitimate child. However, if the child is born after two years and the husband still claims that it is his child, it will not be illegitimate. In such a case it will be understood that they had unwittingly engaged in sexual intercourse while she was still in her ‘iddah and she fell pregnant thereafter.
6. An immature girl who is close to maturity was given a divorce. After the divorce, she gave birth to a child after a full nine months. This child is illegitimate. If it is born within nine months, it will be attributed to the husband. However, this girl will have to admit that she is pregnant while she is still in her ‘iddah, i.e within three months she will have to admit that she is pregnant so that the child will not be regarded as illegitimate. If the child is born within two years, it will be the husband's child, i.e. it will be legitimate.
7. A woman's husband passed away. If she gives birth to a child within two years from the time that he passed away, this child will not be illegitimate. Instead, it will be attributed to the husband. However, if the woman had already admitted to the expiry of her ‘iddah then there will be no option but to regard it as illegitimate. If it is born after two years, it will still be illegitimate.
Note: We learn from these rules that the habit of accusing a woman of adultery when she gives birth to a child a few months beyond nine months after the death of her husband is a major sin.
8. If a child is born before six months after the nikâh, it is illegitimate. If it is born on the completion of six months or thereafter, it is legitimate and it is a sin to have any doubts with regard to its legitimacy. However, if the husband rejects the child and says that it is not his, then the rules of li'ân will apply.
9. The nikâh has been performed, but according to custom, the bride did not leave her parents' home as yet. In the meantime, she gives birth to a child and the husband does not reject it by saying that it is not his. This child will be regarded as the husband's and will not be regarded as illegitimate. It is not permissible for others to regard it as illegitimate. If it is not the husband's, he should reject it and upon rejecting it, the laws of li'ân will apply.
10. The husband is gone overseas for quite some time. Several years have passed and he has not come home. In the meantime, his wife gives birth to a child and the husband claims that it is his. Even in such a case, the Sharî‘ah will not regard this child as illegitimate and it will be attributed to the husband. However, if the husband rejects it after receiving this news, the laws of li'ân will apply.

The Custody of Children

1. The husband and wife have been separated, divorce has taken place and they have a small baby. The mother of the child has the right of custody over the child. The father cannot take this child away. However, the father will have to pay for all the expenses that will be borne in order to bring up the child. If the mother does not take the child, and instead, gives it to the father, he will have to take it. The mother cannot be forced to keep the child.
2. If there is no mother or she refuses to take the child, the maternal grandmother and then the maternal great grandmother have the right of custody. Thereafter, the paternal grandmother or great grandmother will have the right of custody. If they are not present, the blood sisters of the child have the right of custody. If they are not present, then the stepsisters. However, as regards stepsisters, those who are from the same mother will be given preference over those who are from the same father. Thereafter, the child's maternal aunts and then the paternal aunts.
3. If the mother marries a person who is not a maḥram relative of the child, i.e. this relative is such that nikâh with him is not ḥarâm forever, then the mother forfeits the right of custody over the child. However, if the woman marries a maḥram relative of this child, and this relative is such that nikâh with him is not valid (for the child), e.g. she marries the child's paternal uncle or any other similar relative, then the mother's right of custody remains. In the absence of the mother, if any other woman such as the child's sister, maternal aunt, etc. marries a ghayr maḥram man (i.e. a ghayr maḥram man to the child), the same rule will also apply. That is, the right of custody over the child no longer remains with this woman.
4. The right of custody over the child had been forfeited on account of the woman marrying a ghayr maḥram (of the child). Thereafter, this man divorced her or he passed away. The right of custody will return to this woman and the child will be handed over to her.
5. If, from among the relatives of the child, no woman can be found in order to take custody of the child, the father will be the most eligible for custody. Thereafter, the paternal grandfather will be the most eligible, and thereafter the same order that we had mentioned in the chapter on the walî (or guardian) at the time of nikâh, will be followed. However, if the relative is a ghayr maḥram and there is some fear over the safety of the child in the future, then in such a case the child will be given to someone who is reliable and trustworthy.
6. The right of custody over the child remains as long as the child does not reach the age of seven. Once the child reaches the age of seven, the father can take the child forcefully if he wishes to do so. The right of custody over a girl remains until she reaches nine years of age. Once she turns nine, the father can take her and the mother does not have the right to prevent her from going.

understanding that had prevailed prior to your argument will no longer be the same. Irrespective of how many excuses and pardons you may put forward, the love and clean-heartedness that had prevailed will no longer be found. Later, when any incident takes place, the mind will always go back to that argument and the husband will always think that this is the same woman who had said such-and-such thing on that day. Therefore, you should always think and ponder before saying anything or doing anything when dealing with your husband. In doing this, you will not only gain the pleasure of Allawh and His Rasûl ṣallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam, but you yourself will be happy in this world and in the hereafter.

The Method of Bringing up Children

It should be borne in mind that the bringing up of children in the proper manner is of prime importance. This is because whatever good or bad habits they learn in their childhood, they do not leave them for the rest of their lives. From the time of infancy till they reach maturity, the following matters should be strictly adhered to:

1. Ensure that the child drinks the milk of a pious, religious woman. Milk has a great effect in the life of a person.
2. It is the habit of women to frighten their children by mentioning the police or other frightening persons or objects. This is an evil habit. Children become weak-hearted because of this.
3. Set aside specific times for making him drink his milk or feeding him so that he may remain healthy.
4. Keep him clean, neat and tidy because one remains healthy in this way.
5. Do not beautify and adorn the child excessively.
6. If the child is a boy, do not lengthen the hair on his head.
7. If it is a girl, do not make her wear any jewellery as long as she does not reach the age where she has to observe purdah. This is because this will pose a danger to her life. The other reason is that it is not a good habit to create a love for jewellery in a girl's mind when she is still so young.
8. Have the habit of handing over the responsibility of distributing food, clothing, money, etc. that is to be given to poor people to your children. Similarly, give them the task of distributing food, sweets, etc. to their brothers, sisters and other children. This is so that they will inculcate the practice of generosity. However, you should remember that you must only ask them to distribute those things that belong to you. It is not permissible for anyone to ask them to distribute those items or things that belong to them from the Shar'î point of view.
9. You should mention the harms of over-eating to them. However, do not mention anyone by name. Instead, tell them that the one who eats too much is regarded as an ox (or any other similar example).
10. If it is a boy, incline him towards wearing white clothes and create a dislike in his heart for colourful and gaudy clothing by telling him that such clothes are worn by women and that he is a man. You should always teach him in this way.
11. If it is a girl, do not give her the habit of worrying too much about plaiting and parting her hair or wearing very stylish clothing.
12. When a child persists or insists on having something, do not fulfil all his wishes or else he will become spoilt.
13. Prevent the child from talking very loudly or shouting. Especially if it is a girl and she speaks in this loud shouting manner, you should scold her and reprimand her. If you do not do this, this habit will remain when she grows up.
14. Safeguard your child from speaking or mixing with children who have evil habits, who are not interested in their learning, who are in the habit of wearing stylish clothes or eating extravagant dishes.
15. Always inculcate a hatred for the following actions in your child, i.e. teach him to hate the following acts:

(a) becoming angry,
(b) speaking lies,
(c) envying someone,
(d) stealing,
(e) carrying tales,
(f) defending whatever he does or says,
(g) to unnecessarily "make up" stories,
(h) speaking excessively without any benefit,
(i) laughing unnecessarily or laughing excessively,
(j) cheating or deluding someone,
(k) not thinking about or not differentiating between good and bad.

If any of these acts or traits are found in him, stop him immediately and warn him.

16. If he breaks something or begins to hit someone, punish him accordingly so that he does not repeat such acts. Loving the child, consoling him or allowing him to commit such acts always causes the child to become "lost" or spoilt.
17. Do not allow the child to sleep very early.
18. The habit of waking up early should be inculcated in the child.
19. When the child reaches the age of seven, inculcate the habit of offering ṣalât.

20. Once he reaches the age wherein he can go to madrasah, first teach him to recite the Quran.
21. As far as is possible, make him learn under a religious-minded teacher.
22. Don't ever allow him to absent himself from going to madrasah.
23. Set aside certain times in which you narrate stories of the pious to him.
24. Do not allow the child to look at books that contain love stories, stories that are contrary to the Sharî'ah, stories that are obscene or that have no benefit, love poems, etc.
25. Give them books that cover the different aspects of the Dîn, and books that cover the necessary aspects of this world.
26. Once the child returns from the madrasah, permit him to play around in order to occupy him and so that he does not become dull-headed. However, the games must be such that there is no sin in playing them and at the same time there is no fear of physical injury.
27. Do not give the child any money to purchase fireworks, musical instruments or any other similar unnecessary items which amount to wasting of money.
28. The habit of watching games, matches, etc. should not be inculcated in the child.
29. Always teach your children some sort of hobby or trade which will help them at the time of need or necessity whereby they can support their families.
30. Teach girls to write to the extent that they are able to write necessary letters and also work out the expenses of the house.
31. The habit of doing their own work should be inculcated in the children so that they do not become dependent and lazy. You should order them to lay out their own beds at night and to get up early in the morning and neaten their beds again. They should keep their clothes neatly. Clothes that become undone or torn should be stitched by themselves. Clothes that are clean or dirty should be kept in a place where there is no fear of moths.
32. Emphasize on the girls to check the jewellery that they are wearing before they go to sleep and once they wake up the following morning.
33. You should order the girls to watch attentively at the cooking, sewing, threading, dying, and all the other work that is carried out at home so that they will also learn these things.
34. When the child does something good, praise him, kiss him, reward him so that he will feel happy. When he commits an evil act, call him aside in privacy and make him understand that he has committed an evil act and that others will think bad of him, and that whoever else comes to know of it will also think bad of him. You should warn him against committing such an act again and explain to him that good children do not do such things. If he repeats that act, punish him appropriately.
35. It is the duty of the mother to create respect for the father in the child's heart.
36. Do not allow the child to do anything secretly. This is irrespective of whether it is some game, food or any other act. If he does anything secretly, you should immediately understand that he regards it to be evil. If the act is in fact evil, teach him to abstain from it. If it is a good act, such as eating or drinking, then tell him to eat and drink in the presence of others.
37. Set aside some strenuous work for the children which will keep them healthy, energetic and which will not allow laziness to overtake them. If it is a boy, he should do gymnastics, weightlifting or walking for a few kilometres. As for girls, it is necessary for them to work with the grinding stone and spinning wheel. The benefit of doing these things is that they will not regard such work to be below their dignity.
38. When walking, teach them not to walk very swiftly, nor should they raise their gazes when walking.
39. Inculcate the habit of humility in them. Their manner of speaking, walking, conversing, etc. should be such that they do not become boastful. They should be taught humility to such an extent that they should not even sit with their classmates and boast about their clothes, house, family, books, pens, ink, exercise books, etc.
40. Occasionally you should give them some money so that they may purchase whatever they wish. However, inculcate the habit in them that they should not conceal whatever they buy.
41. Teach them the etiquette and manners of eating, sitting and standing in gatherings. We will now enumerate a few of these etiquette:

The etiquette of eating

1. Eat with the right hand.
2. Read Bismillâh in the beginning.
3. Eat the food that is in front of you.
4. Do not commence eating before others.
5. Do not ogle or stare at the food.
6. Do not look at those who are eating.
7. Do not eat very quickly.
8. Chew the food well.
9. Do not take another morsel as long as the morsel that is in your mouth is not chewed and swallowed.
10. Do not allow the gravy and other liquids to drip onto the clothes.
11. The fingers should not be allowed to become too messy.

The etiquette of gatherings

1. Whoever you meet, meet with respect and speak kindly.
2. Do not spit in gatherings nor clean your nose. But if there is a need to do so, excuse yourself and go to another place.
3. If you have to yawn or sneeze, cover your mouth with your hands and try to muffle the sound.
4. Do not face your back towards anyone.
5. Do not face your feet towards anyone.
6. Do not sit by placing your hand under your chin.
7. Do not crack your fingers.
8. Do not look in the direction of anyone repeatedly and unnecessarily.
9. Remain seated with respect.
10. Do not speak excessively.
11. Do not take oaths over trivial matters.
12. As far as possible, do not commence with any conversation. When the other person speaks, listen attentively so that his spirits are not dampened. However, if it is a sinful conversation, do not listen. Either stop him, or leave that place.
13. As long as a person does not complete whatever he wishes to say, do not interrupt him.
14. If someone comes and wishes to sit in the gathering and there is no place, make way for that person and sit closely so that he may be able to get some place.
15. When you meet someone or bid them farewell, say As-salâmu 'alaykum, and when replying to someone's salaam, say Wa 'alaykumus salâm. Do not utter other forms of greeting.

(b) Meet their friends and relatives in a friendly way and also assist them wherever possible.
(c) If you have the finances, fulfil their unpaid debts and the permissible bequests that they have made.
(d) When they pass away, abstain from crying and wailing aloud or else their souls will be troubled.

6. According to the Sharî'ah, the rights of the paternal and maternal grandparents are similar to those of the parents and they should be regarded as such.

7. Similarly, the rights of the maternal and paternal uncles and aunts are similar to those of the parents. This has been deduced from certain 'Ahâdîth. (Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "The maternal aunt has the status of one's mother." - Tirmidhî)

BOOK XXIX

DIVORCE

1. If a husband who is mature, not a lunatic nor a mad person divorces his wife, the divorce will come into effect. As for the husband who is not mature, who is not in his senses, or is mad, by his divorcing his wife, the divorce will not come into effect.
2. A sleeping person uttered the following words: "You are divorced" or he said: "I divorce my wife." On uttering these words, divorce does not come into effect.
3. A person compelled another person to divorce his wife. He beat him and threatened him that if he does not divorce his wife, he will kill him. Because of this compulsion, the person divorced his wife. Even then divorce will take place.
4. A person was under the influence of alcohol or any other intoxicant and divorced his wife. When he came to his senses, he regretted this action of his. Even then divorce will take place. Similarly, ṭalâq given in anger also causes divorce to take place.
5. Apart from the husband, no one has the right to divorce a woman. However, if the husband orders someone to divorce his (the husband's) wife, this person can divorce her.

Divorcing a Person

1. Only the man has the right to divorce. Once the man divorces his wife, the divorce comes into effect. The woman has no choice in this irrespective of whether she accepts the divorce or not. In all cases, the divorce comes into effect. The wife cannot divorce her husband.
2. The man has the right of issuing three ṭalâqs only, and not more. If he issues four or five ṭalâqs even then only three will be considered.
3. Once the man utters: "I divorce my wife", and utters these words in such a tone that he himself can hear these words, divorce comes into effect. This is irrespective of whether he uttered them in private or in public, and whether his wife heard him uttering these words or not. In all cases, divorce takes place.
4. Divorce is of three types:

The First Type: Is that the nikâh is completely annulled and it is not permissible to live with the man without renewing the nikâh. If the woman wishes to stay with this man again, and the man also agrees to keep her, they will have to have their nikâh performed again. Such a ṭalâq is known as ṭalâqul bâ'in.

The Second Type: Is that if the husband and wife wish to remarry, then after completing the 'iddah for the first divorce, she will have to marry another person. When he divorces her, she will have to complete the 'iddah for this second divorce. Only then will it be permissible for her to remarry her first husband. Such a ṭalâq is known as ṭalâqul mughallaẓah.

The Third Type: Is that the nikâh has not broken as yet. If the husband divorces his wife by uttering the words of divorce one or two times and thereafter regrets his action, it will not be necessary to renew this nikâh. He can live with this wife without performing another nikâh and it will be permissible for them to live as a normal couple. However, if the man divorced her and maintained this divorce of his, i.e. he did not regret his action nor did he decide to continue living with his wife, then the moment the 'iddah of ṭalâq expires, the nikâh will break and the woman will be separated from her husband. As long as the 'iddah does not expire, the man has the choice of either keeping his wife or not keeping her. Such a ṭalâq is known as ṭalâqur raj'î. It should be borne in mind that if the husband issues three ṭalâqs, he will not have the choice of keeping his wife.

5. There are two ways in pronouncing or issuing the ṭalâq.

The First Way: Is that the husband clearly utters: "I divorce you" or "I divorce my wife." In other words, he issues the divorce in such clear words that there is no possibility of taking any other meaning from these words. Such a divorce is known as ṭalâq-e-ṣarîḥ.

The Second Way: Is that the husband does not utter the words of divorce clearly. Instead, he speaks in very vague terms from which divorce could be deduced and from which some other meaning could also be taken, e.g. the person says: "I have distanced you from me." From this, it could be deduced that he said: "I divorce you" or "I have not divorced you, but I will not keep you with me. Remain with your parents. I will not even bother about you."

Alternatively, he could have said: "I will have no contact with you." "I have no need for you." "You have been separated from me." "I have separated you from me." "I have separated you from my house, go away." "Get out." "Go far from here." "Go away to your parents." "Go away to your house." "I will not accommodate you any longer."

Uttering any of the above words or other words similar to these, in which there is the possibility of several meanings is known as ṭalâq-e-kinâyah.

6. If the divorce is issued in clear terms, divorce will take place the moment the words are uttered. This is irrespective of whether one had the intention of divorcing his wife or not, or whether he issued the divorce jokingly. When a divorce is issued in clear terms, the third type of divorce will take place. That is, the husband has the choice of keeping or divorcing his wife until just before the expiry of her 'iddah. By uttering the divorce once, only one divorce will come into effect - not two nor three. However, if he utters the divorce three times, or says: "I give you three ṭalâqs", three ṭalâqs will take place.
7. A person issued one divorce. As long as the wife is in her 'iddah, he has the right to issue her a second or a third divorce. If he issues a second or third divorce, it will be valid and come into effect.
8. A person says: "I will divorce you." Divorce will not take place. Similarly, if he says: "If you carry out a particular action, I will divorce you." Divorce will not take place irrespective of whether she carries out the action or not. However, if the person says: "If you carry out a particular action, you are divorced", then once she carries out the action, divorce will take place.
9. A person uttered the divorce and at the same time said: "'Inshâ' Allawh". Divorce will not take place. Similarly, if he says: "If Allawh wills, I divorce you" divorce will not take place. However, if the person uttered the divorce, waited for a while and thereafter said "'Inshâ' Allawh"; divorce takes place.
10. A person called his wife and addressed her as a "divorcee". Divorce will take place even if he says this jokingly.
11. A person says: "When you go to Lucknow (or any other place which he mentions), you are divorced." As long as she does not go to Lucknow, divorce will not take place. Once she goes there, divorce will take place.
12. The person did not clearly state the words of divorce. Instead, he issued the divorce in vague words and terms. If at the time of uttering these words, he had the intention of issuing divorce, divorce will take place. In such a case, the first type of divorce will take place, i.e. ṭalâqul bâ'in. Now it will not be permissible for him to keep his wife without renewing the nikâh. If the person did not utter these words with the intention of ṭalâq and instead had some other meaning in mind, ṭalâq will not take place. However, if it is learnt through some evidence or indication that he had in fact intended divorcing her and that he is lying, then in such a case the woman should not live with him and she should regard it as if she has been divorced. For example, the wife comes angrily to her husband and says: "I cannot live with you any more. Divorce me!" And the husband replies: "Okay, I leave you." In such a case, the woman must consider this to be a divorce.
13. A person says: "I divorce you, I divorce you, I divorce you." Three divorces will take place. Alternatively, he divorces her three times, but in very vague terms. Even then, three divorces will take place. However, if the person had only intended one divorce but had uttered it three times in order to emphasize his point, only one divorce will take place. However, the woman does not know his intention. She should therefore regard it as three divorces.

Divorce prior to the bride's departure from her parent's home

Before the bride could even go to her husband's home, he divorced her. Alternatively, she went to her husband's home but they did not meet in privacy or seclusion which could be considered to be valid in the Sharî'ah. This privacy or seclusion was explained in the chapter on mahr. Before they could meet in privacy and seclusion, the husband divorced her. In such circumstances, ṭalâqul bâ'in will take place irrespective of whether the divorce was uttered in clear words or in vague terms. When such a woman is divorced, ṭalâqul bâ'in will take place and she does not have to complete any 'iddah. Immediately after being divorced, she can marry another person. Furthermore, after issuing one divorce to such a woman, the man does not have the right or choice of giving a second or third divorce. If he does so, it will not apply. However, if in the first time, he says: "I give you two divorces, or, three divorces", two or three divorces will take place. If he says: "I divorce you, divorce you, divorce you", even then one divorce will take place with regard to such a woman.

Divorce after the bride's departure from her parent's home

After the bride's departure from her parents' home, the bride and bridegroom met in privacy and also engaged in sexual intercourse. Thereafter, if the husband issues one or two divorces in clear terms, ṭalâqur raj'î will take place. If he utters the divorce in vague terms, ṭalâqul bâ'in will take place. In ṭalâqur raj'î he will have the choice of going back to his wife, while in ṭalâqul bâ'in he will not have the choice. However, if he did not issue three divorces, they can re-marry within her 'iddah (if both of them wish to remarry) and after the expiry of the 'iddah as well. But if she wishes to marry another person, she can do so only after the expiry of her 'iddah. But it should be borne in mind that the 'iddah is necessary in all forms of divorce. As long as the 'iddah has not expired, a second or third divorce can also be issued.

The bride and bride groom met in privacy and there was nothing to stop them from engaging in sexual intercourse (i.e. nothing from the Sharî'ah point of view, or from a physical aspect). Despite this, they did not engage in sexual intercourse. In such a case, if the husband divorces his wife, ṭalâqul bâ'in will take place irrespective of whether the divorce is uttered in clear terms or in vague terms. The 'iddah will also be wâjib on the woman, he will not have the right of taking her back, and she cannot marry another person without completing her 'iddah. However, she can marry the husband who divorced her within the 'iddah or even after the expiry of the 'iddah. The only condition is that three divorces must not be issued.

Issuing Three Ṭalâqs

1. If a man issues three divorces to his wife, she becomes completely ḥarâm for him. Even if they renew their nikâh, it will be ḥarâm for this woman to live with him. This nikâh will not be valid irrespective of whether the three divorces were issued in clear terms or in vague terms. If a woman who has been issued three divorces wishes to live with her first husband and wishes to remarry him, there is only one way in doing this. That is, she will have to marry another person, engage in sexual intercourse with him, and when he dies or divorces her, she must complete her 'iddah. Upon completing her 'iddah, she can remarry her first husband. Without marrying a second person, she cannot remarry her first husband. If she marries a second person, but he passed away before he could engage in sexual intercourse with her or divorced her before engaging in sexual intercourse with her, then this will not be considered. She can only marry her first husband when her second husband has intercourse with her. Without this intercourse, she cannot remarry her first husband. Understand this well.
2. There are different ways in issuing three divorces. One is that the person issues them at one time, e.g. he says: "I give you three divorces" or "I divorce you, I divorce you, I divorce you." The second way of issuing three divorces is to issue them over a period of time, e.g. he issues one today, another one tomorrow, and the third one the day after tomorrow. Alternatively, he issues one divorce this month, another the following month, and a third divorce in the following month. However, all these are issued within her 'iddah. The same rule will apply to all the different forms of issuing the ṭalâq. The right or choice to keep one's wife only remains when a person issues one or two divorces in clear terms and not three. Once he issues three, he has no choice or right to keep his wife.
3. A person issued a ṭalâqur raj'î to his wife. Thereafter he decided to keep his wife. After a few years he became angry over some matter and therefore issued another ṭalâqur raj'î (in which he has the right of keeping his wife). When his anger subsided, he decided to keep his wife and did not let her go. These divorces that he issued will be counted as two divorces. If, at some time or the other, he issues one more divorce, it will total three divorces. Once this occurs, the rules that have been mentioned in mas'ala number one will apply over here as well. That is, she cannot remarry this husband of hers unless she marries another person first.

Similarly, if a person issues a ṭalâqul bâ'in (in which he does not have the right to keep his wife), the marriage will be annulled. Thereafter, he regretted his action and both of them decided to remarry. After some time, he became angry with her again and issued a ṭalâqul bâ'in. After his anger subsided, he remarried her. He thus issued two divorces. If he issues one more divorce, the rule mentioned in mas'ala number one will apply. That is, he cannot remarry her unless she marries another person first.

4. If the woman marries another person on the condition that he would divorce her after engaging in sexual intercourse with her, this person is not bound to fulfil this condition. He can divorce her if he wishes or keep her if he wishes. Furthermore, he can divorce her whenever he wishes - he is not bound by any time limit. It should be borne in mind that it is a major sin and ḥarâm to marry on such a condition or promise. One is cursed by Allawh Ta'âlâ. However, despite this, the nikâh will be valid. If such a nikâh takes place, the second husband has intercourse with her, and thereafter passes away or divorces her, it will be permissible for her to remarry her first husband.

Conditional Divorce

1. Prior to marrying a woman, a person said: "If I marry you, you are divorced." If the person happens to marry this woman, one ṭalâqul bâ'in will take place the moment the nikâh is performed. Now, he cannot keep her without remarrying her. If he said: "If I marry you, you are divorced two times", two ṭalâqul bâ'in will take place. If he issued three divorces, three will take place and it will be ṭalâqul mughallaẓah.
2. A person made the condition of divorce prior to marriage. The moment the nikâh was performed, divorce took place. He then remarried the same woman. By remarrying her, another divorce will not take place. However, if the person made the condition in the following way: "Each time that I marry you, you are divorced", then each time that he marries her, divorce will take place. Now, there is no way in which he can keep this woman. Even if she marries another person, separates from him, and thereafter remarries the first person, divorce will still take place.
3. A person says: "Whichever woman I marry, she is divorced." Based on this, whichever woman he marries, divorce will take place. However, once divorce takes place between him and a woman and he decides to re-marry her, divorce will not take place this second time.
4. A person addressed a woman whom he had not married as yet saying: "If you carry out a certain action, you are divorced." Such a condition is not considered. If he marries her and she carries out that action, divorce will not take place. This is because there is no way a person can divorce a woman who he has not even married except by saying: "If I marry you, you are divorced." Divorce cannot take place in any other way if the woman is not married to him as yet.
5. If a person addresses his wife saying: "If you carry out a certain action, you are divorced." "If you come near me, you are divorced." "If you enter this house you are divorced." Alternately, he threatened to divorce her on some other condition. In all these cases, if she carries out that action, divorce will take place. As long as she does not carry out that action, divorce will not take place. In all these cases, ṭalâqur raj'î will take place, in which the husband has the right to keep his wife without having to renew the nikâh. However, if the person spoke in vague terms, ṭalâqul bâ'in will take place. For example, he said: "If you carry out a certain action, there will be no relation between me and you." Once she carries out the action, ṭalâqul bâ'in will take place. This is on the condition that when the man uttered these words, he intended divorcing her.
6. If he says: "If you carry out a particular action, you are divorced two times, or three times", divorce will take place according to the number that he specified.
7. A person said to his wife: "If you enter this house, you are divorced." She entered the house and divorce took place. However, within her 'iddah, he decided to keep her or he remarried her. Now if she enters the house, divorce will not take place. However, if he said: "Each time that you enter this house, you are divorced" or "Whenever you enter the house, then each time you are divorced", then in such a case if she enters the house within her 'iddah or after remarrying her, a second divorce will take place. Thereafter, within her 'iddah or after remarrying her, she entered the house for a third time. A third divorce will take place. After this third divorce, it is not permissible for him to remarry her. However, if she marries another person, after separating from him, remarries her first husband, and then enters the house, divorce will not take place.
8. A person said to his wife: "If you carry out a certain action, you are divorced." Before she could carry out that action, he divorced her and separated from her. After some time he remarried the same woman. After marrying her she carried out that action which he had warned her against during their previous marriage. In carrying out this action, divorce will take place. However, if the woman carried out that action after her first divorce and after completing her 'iddah, but before remarrying him, then by carrying out that action after remarrying him, divorce will not take place. But if she carries out that action after the divorce but within her 'iddah, a second divorce will take place.

9. A person said to his wife: "If you experience ḥayḍ, you are divorced." Thereafter she saw some blood. Upon seeing the blood, we will not pass judgement of divorce. Instead, when she bleeds for three days and three nights, only then will we say that divorce has taken place from the time that her bleeding had commenced. But if the person said: "If you experience one ḥayḍ, you are divorced", divorce will take place on the completion of her ḥayḍ.
10. A person said to his wife: "If you fast, you are divorced." The moment she commences her fast, divorce will take place. However, if he says: "If you keep one fast or if you fast for the whole day, you are divorced", then divorce will only take place on the completion of the fast. If she breaks her fast, divorce will not take place.
11. The wife decided to go out of the house. The husband said: "Don't go now." She did not pay any heed to him. Upon this, the husband said: "If you go outside, you are divorced." The ruling in such a case is that if she goes outside at that very time, divorce will take place. But if she goes outside later, divorce will not take place. This is because, when the husband stopped her from going outside, he meant that she should not go now, and does not mean that she must not go outside for the rest of her life.
12. A person said: "The day on which I marry you, you are divorced." Thereafter, he married her at night. Even then, divorce will take place. This is because in our normal conversation this means when I marry you, you are divorced.

Divorce issued by the Sick

1. While a person was sick, he divorced his wife. Prior to the expiry of her 'iddah, he passed away. This wife of his is entitled to receive her share of inheritance from the wealth of her husband. This is irrespective of whether he issued one divorce, two or three divorces. And irrespective of whether he issued ṭalâqur raj'î or ṭalâqul bâ'in - she is still entitled to receive her share of the inheritance. If the husband dies after the completion of her 'iddah, she will not receive any inheritance. Similarly, if the husband does not die from this illness, but recovers and then falls ill again, even then she will not receive any inheritance. This is irrespective of whether she had completed her 'iddah or not.
2. The woman asked for a divorce and the husband complied to her request. Even then, the woman is not entitled to receive any inheritance irrespective of whether the husband dies within her 'iddah or after it. However, if he issues a ṭalâqur raj'î and passes away within her 'iddah, she will be entitled to receive her share of the inheritance.
3. During his illness, the man said to his wife: "If you go outside, you are divorced a ṭalâqul bâ'in." Thereafter the woman went outside and ṭalâqul bâ'in took place. In such a case she will not receive any share of the inheritance because she is the one who caused this ṭalâqul bâ'in to take place.
The husband (while ill) says: "If you eat any food, you are divorced a ṭalâqul bâ'in" or "If you offer your ṣalât, you are divorced a ṭalâqul bâ'in." In such a case, if the husband passes away within her 'iddah, she will receive her share of inheritance. This is because this divorce did not take place through her choice. Eating food and offering ṣalât are necessary obligations, how can she leave them out?
If the husband issues a ṭalâqur raj'î and he passes away within her 'iddah, she will receive her share even in the first example. In short, if she receives a ṭalâqur raj'î, she will receive her share in all circumstances as long as the husband passes away within her 'iddah.
4. A normal, healthy person said to his wife: "When you go out of the house, you are divorced a ṭalâqul bâ'in." She did not leave the house immediately, but went outside when he fell ill. Due to this sickness, he passed away within her 'iddah. Even then, she will not receive any share of the inheritance.
5. A normal, healthy person said to his wife: "When your father comes from overseas, you are divorced a ṭalâqul bâ'in." At the time when her father arrived, her husband was ill and passed away in that very illness. She will not receive any share of the inheritance. But if he said the same thing while he was sick, and passed away within her 'iddah, she is entitled to receive her share of the inheritance.

Revoking a Ṭalâqur Raj'î

1. When the husband issues one or two divorces that are raj'î, he has the choice or right to revoke such a divorce before the expiry of the wife's 'iddah. In such a case, there is no need to renew the nikâh. The woman has no choice in this matter - he can revoke the divorce irrespective of whether she agrees or not. But if he issues three divorces, he has no choice of revoking the divorce as explained previously.
2. The method of revoking the divorce is as follows: (1) he could inform her in clear terms: "I am going to maintain you as my wife and I will not let you go." (2) he could tell her: "I am taking you back into my nikâh". (3) he could inform someone else without informing his wife that he has decided to keep his wife and revoked the divorce. (4) he does not say anything verbally, instead he has sexual intercourse with her, kisses her, fondles her, touches her with the passions of youth. In all these cases, she becomes his wife once again and there is no need to renew the nikâh.
3. When a person decides to revoke the divorce and keep his wife, it is preferable to have a few people as witnesses so that if any differences or problems occur at a later stage, none can deny any claims or make any allegations. If no witnesses are brought, the revocation will still be valid. The object, which was to keep his wife, will be accomplished.
4. If the 'iddah of the wife has expired and then the husband decides to revoke the divorce, it will not be possible. Now, if the wife agrees and is happy to go back to her husband, the nikâh will have to be renewed. He cannot keep her without remarrying her. Even if he keeps her, it will not be permissible for the wife to live with him.
5. The 'iddah of ṭalâq for the woman who experiences the monthly menstrual periods is three ḥayḍ periods. When she completes three ḥayḍ periods, her 'iddah expires. At the end of her third ḥayḍ period, if she stops bleeding on the completion of the tenth day, then from that very moment her 'iddah will expire and the right of revoking the divorce, which the husband possessed, will be forfeited. This is irrespective of whether the woman has already had a bath or not. However, at the end of her third ḥayḍ period, if she stopped bleeding before 10 days, then as long as she does not have a bath or as long as no ṣalât becomes wâjib on her, the husband will have the right of revoking the divorce and she will become his wife once again. But if she has a bath once the bleeding stops or she did not have a bath, but one ṣalât time passed and she did not offer her ṣalât in that time (i.e. qaḍâ' of one ṣalât became wâjib on her), then in both cases the right of the husband will be forfeited. Now he cannot keep her without remarrying her.
6. If a person divorces a woman with whom he has not engaged in sexual intercourse as yet, even though he may have met her in private or seclusion, then by divorcing her once, he does not have the right of revoking this divorce. This is because the divorce that she gets in this case is actually a ṭalâqul bâ'in, as has been mentioned previously. Understand this well.
7. The couple met in privacy but the man confesses that he did not engage in sexual intercourse with her. If he divorces her after this confession of his, he does not have the right to revoke his divorce.
8. When a woman receives one or two ṭalâqs that are raj'î (revocable), i.e. in which the husband has the right of revoking his divorce, it is preferable for such a woman to beautify herself and adorn herself with beautiful clothes; perhaps her husband will be attracted towards her and thereby revoke his divorce. But if she knows that he has no intention of revoking the divorce, it will be preferable that when he enters the house he should cough, clear his throat etc. so that if her body is exposed, she could cover it quickly and his sight does not fall on her private parts. Once her 'iddah expires, she should go and live elsewhere.
9. If the person has not revoked his divorce as yet, it is not permissible for him to take his wife on any journey nor is it permissible for her to go with him.
10. A woman has received one or two ṭalâqul bâ'in, i.e. a divorce that is irrevocable. The rule with regard to her is that if she wishes to marry another person, she should do so after the expiry of her 'iddah. It is not permissible for her to marry another person within her 'iddah. But if she wishes to marry the same person (i.e. her husband who has divorced her), she can marry him within the 'iddah as well.

'Îlâ' or Taking an oath on not going to one's wife

1. A person takes an oath and says: "I swear by Allawh that I will not engage in sexual intercourse", "I swear by Allawh that I will never have sex with you", "I take an oath that I will not have sex with you." Alternately, he takes an oath that is similar in meaning to the above-mentioned oaths. The rule with regard to this is that if he does not engage in sexual intercourse with her, ṭalâqul bâ'in will take place on the expiry of four months. Without remarrying, they cannot live as husband and wife. But if the husband breaks his oath within four months and has sexual intercourse with his wife, divorce will not take place. However, he will have to pay the kaffârah for breaking his oath. In the Sharî'ah, such an oath is called 'îlâ' (which literally means "oath").

2. A person did not take an oath of not having sex with his wife forever, instead he took an oath that he will not engage in sexual intercourse for a period of four months and said: "I swear by Allawh that I will not have sex with you for four months." Even by specifying such a period, 'îlâ' will be considered and the same rule will apply, i.e. if he does not engage in sexual intercourse with her within four months, ṭalâqul bâ'in will take place. If he engages in sexual intercourse within four months, he will have to pay kaffârah. The rules relating to kaffârah will be explained in a later chapter - 'Inshâ' Allawh.
3. If a person takes an oath of not having sex with his wife for a period of less than four months, 'îlâ' will not be considered. Even if the oath is taken for just one day less than four months, 'îlâ' will not be considered. However, if he takes an oath for a specified period (less than four months) and then breaks this oath by engaging in sexual intercourse before the expiry of the specified period, he will have to pay kaffârah for breaking the oath. If he does not engage in sexual intercourse, divorce will not take place and his oath will be fulfilled.
4. A person had taken an oath of four months and did not break it. On the expiry of four months, divorce took place. After the divorce, he re-married the very same woman. After the nikâh, if they do not engage in sexual intercourse for a period of four months, there will be no harm in this and no divorce will take place.
A person had taken an oath forever by saying: "I take an oath that I will not have sex with you" or "I swear by Allawh that I will never have sex with you". He did not break this oath of his, on the expiry of four months, divorce took place, thereafter he remarried her and after the marriage they did not engage in sexual intercourse for four months. A second divorce will now take place. If he remarries the same woman for a third time, the same rule will apply over here as well. That is, if they do not engage in sexual intercourse for a period of four months after remarrying for this third time, a third divorce will take place. Now he will not be able to remarry her without her first marrying another person. However, had they engaged in sexual intercourse after the second or third nikâh, the oath would have broken and no divorce would have taken place. However, he would have had to pay the kaffârah for breaking his oath.
5. Furthermore, if three divorces took place in the three nikâhs, thereafter the woman married another person, after being divorced from him and completing her 'iddah she remarried her first husband, and again he did not engage in sexual intercourse with her. Now, divorce will not take place irrespective of how long he abstains from having intercourse with her. However, if and when he engages in sexual intercourse with her, he will have to pay the kaffârah for breaking his oath because he had taken the oath that he will never engage in sexual intercourse and now he has broken this oath.
6. If a person issues a ṭalâqul bâ'in to his wife and thereafter takes an oath that he will not have sex with her, it will not be 'îlâ'. Now if he remarries her and does not engage in sexual intercourse, divorce will not take place. However, if he engages in sexual intercourse, he will have to pay kaffârah for breaking his oath. But if the person issues a ṭalâqur raj'î and within the 'iddah he takes an oath that he will not have sex with his wife, it will be 'îlâ'. Now if he revokes his divorce and does not engage in sexual intercourse, divorce will take place after four months. But if he has sex with her, he will have to pay kaffârah for breaking his oath.
7. A person did not take an oath on Allawh. Instead, he said: "If I have sex with you, you are divorced." This will still be considered to be 'îlâ'. If he has sex with her, a ṭalâqur raj'î will take place and in such a case, he will not have to pay the kaffârah for breaking his oath. If he does not engage in sexual intercourse, a ṭalâqul bâ'in will take place after four months.
The person says: "If I have sex with you, one ḥajj, one fast, R1 in charity, one qurbâni, etc. will become incumbent upon me." In all these cases, 'îlâ' will be considered. If he engages in sexual intercourse, he will have to fulfil whatever oath he had taken and it will not be necessary to pay any kaffârah. If he does not engage in sexual intercourse, divorce will take place after four months.

1. If it is not possible to bring about any conciliation between husband and wife and the husband even refuses to divorce her, it is permissible for the wife to give some money or her mahr to her husband and tell him to let her go in exchange for that money. Alternatively, she could ask him to let her go in exchange for the mahr that he is still owing her. In answer to her request, the husband says: "I let you go." In saying so, one ṭalâqul bâ'in takes place. The man does not have the right to keep her back or to revoke his divorce.
However, if the husband did not answer to her request in that very place and instead he stood up and began walking or, he did not get up but the wife stood up and began walking about, and only then did the husband say: "Okay, I let you go", in such a case this is not considered. The request and the reply to it have to be uttered in one place. Separating from one's husband in such a manner is referred to khula' in the Sharî'ah.
2. The man says: "I grant you khula'" and the woman replies: "I accept." Khula' takes place. But if the woman did not reply at that very place - instead, she stood up or did not even accept his khula', it will not be considered. However, if the wife remained seated in her place and the man stood up after having said this, and the woman accepts the khula' after he stood up, even then khula' takes place.
3. The man says: "I grant you khula'" and the woman accepts. There was no mention of any money or any other monetary compensation on the part of the husband or the wife. Even then, whatever the man was owing to his wife or whatever the wife was owing to her husband will be forgiven. If the man still had a balance of the mahr to pay, it will be forgiven. If the woman has already received the total amount due to her, she does not have to return anything to the man. Despite all this, the man will have to feed, clothe and provide shelter to her until the end of her 'iddah. However, if the woman had said that she will not even take advantage of these benefits during her 'iddah, then they will also be forgiven.
4. When granting khula', mention of monetary compensation was also made, e.g. the man says: "I grant you khula' in exchange for R100." The woman accepted this. Khula' will be valid and it will be wâjib on the woman to pay the R100. She will have to pay this R100 irrespective of whether she has received her mahr in full or not. If she had not received her mahr as yet, she will not receive it now because it is considered to be forgiven due to her acceptance of the khula'.
5. If the conflict between husband and wife has been caused by the husband, it will be ḥarâm and a major sin for him to grant khula' in exchange for money or in lieu of the mahr that he is still owing. If he happens to take any money, it is ḥarâm upon him to utilise it. But if it is the wife's fault alone, he should not take any compensation in excess of the mahr that he had given. Instead, he should grant khula' in exchange for the mahr alone, and not more than that. If he takes more than the mahr, it will not be a good thing. At the same time, there is no sin in taking more.
6. The woman was not happy about khula'. The man forced her and compelled her to make khula'. In other words, he beat her and threatened her into making khula'. In such a case, divorce will take place but it will not be wâjib on the woman to give any monetary compensation. If the man had an outstanding amount of mahr to pay, this will also not be forgiven (he will have to pay it to her).
7. All the above rules will apply only when the word khula' was mentioned or the following was said: (1) "Leave my life in exchange for R100, R1000, etc.", (2) "Leave me in exchange for my mahr."
If the above-mentioned was not said and instead, the word divorce was used, e.g. she says: "Divorce me in exchange for R100", this will not be khula'. If the man grants a divorce in exchange for that money, one ṭalâqul bâ'in will take place. In such a case, no rights or debts will be forgiven - neither those that the man has to fulfil nor those that the woman has to fulfil. If the man had not paid the mahr as yet, it will not be forgiven and the woman can claim it. Furthermore, the man will take the R100 from the woman.
8. The man says: "I am divorcing you in exchange for R100." This will be dependent on the acceptance of the woman. If she does not accept, divorce will not take place. If she accepts, one ṭalâqul bâ'in will take place. However, if she accepts after having changed her place, divorce will not take place.
9. The woman says: "Divorce me!" The man replies: "Forgive me from paying your mahr and all the other debts that I owe you, only then will I divorce you." Upon this, the woman replied: "Okay I forgive you." Thereafter, the man did not divorce her. In such a case, nothing will be forgiven and he will still have to pay her all the money that he owes. If he divorces her in that very place, he will be absolved from paying her anything.
10. The woman says: "Give me three divorces in exchange for R300." In reply to this, the man gives her only one divorce. In such a case, he will receive only R100. If he gives her two, he will receive R200. If he gives all three divorces, the woman will have to give R300. In all these cases, the divorces that will take place will be ṭalâqul bâ'in, because the divorce is in exchange for some money.

11. An immature boy and a lunatic cannot make khula' with his wife.

Zihâr or Likening the wife to one's mother

1. A person says to his wife: "You are equal to my mother.","To me, you are equal to my mother", "According to me, you are equal to my mother", "According to me, now you are similar to my mother or like my mother". In all the above cases, look at the intention of the person and what did he mean by these words. If he meant that she is similar or equal to his mother in respect and piety or that she is absolutely old just like his mother, equal in age to her, etc. then there will be nothing wrong in saying all these things and no rule will be enforced. Similarly, if he did not intend anything at the time of uttering these words or did not mean what he said but merely blurted these words out, even then no rule will be enforced.

However, if the person intended divorce when he uttered these words or intended separating his wife, then one ṭalâqul bâ'in will take place.

The person did not intend divorcing her nor separating her, but merely intended to inform her that: "Although you are my wife and although I am not breaking up this nikâh, I will not have sex with you. I am making sex with you ḥarâm upon myself, you can merely eat, clothe yourself and live with me - that is all." In short, he did not intend divorcing her but merely made sex with her ḥarâm upon himself. In the Sharî'ah, this is called ẓihâr.

The rule with regard to ẓihâr is that this woman will remain in his nikâh. However, as long as the man does not pay kaffârah, he cannot engage in sexual intercourse with her, he cannot touch her with the passions of youth, he cannot fondle her nor kiss her, etc. All this will be ḥarâm. As long as he does not pay the kaffârah, that woman will remain ḥarâm upon him irrespective of how many years pass. Once he pays the kaffârah, they can now live as husband and wife without having to renew the nikâh. The kaffârah for ẓihâr is given in the same manner that the kaffârah for not fasting is given.

2. If the person engages in sexual intercourse before giving the kaffârah, he will be committing a major sin. He must repent to Allawh Ta'âlâ, seek His forgiveness and make a firm resolution that he will not engage in sexual intercourse again without having given the kaffârah. As for the woman, she should ensure that as long as he does not pay the kaffârah, she should not allow him to approach her.

3. If a person equals or likens his wife to his sister, daughter, aunt or any other woman with whom nikâh is ḥarâm forever, the same rule will apply.

4. A person says: "To me, you are equal to a pig." If his intention was that of divorce or separating her, divorce will take place. If he intended ẓihâr, i.e. he did not mean to divorce her but actually intended to make sexual intercourse with her ḥarâm upon himself, then in such a case no rule will apply. Similarly, no rule will apply if he had no intention at all.

5. If the person does not engage in sexual intercourse for four months or more after pronouncing the ẓihâr and has not paid the kaffârah as yet, divorce will not take place, i.e. it will not be 'îlâ'.

6. As long as the kaffârah is not fulfilled, it is not ḥarâm to look at the wife or to converse with her. However, it is not permissible to look at her private parts.

7. A person did not pronounce the ẓihâr forever. Instead, he specified a certain period of time, e.g. he says: "To me, you are equal to my mother for four months or for one year." In such a case, ẓihâr will be considered for the period that he specified. If he wishes to engage in sexual intercourse within this specified period, he will have to pay kaffârah. If he engages in sexual intercourse after the specified period, he does not have to pay anything and his wife will be ḥalâl for him.

8. Just as in divorce, if a person says 'Inshâ' Allawh immediately after pronouncing the ẓihâr, it will not be considered and no rule will apply.

9. An immature boy or a lunatic cannot pronounce the ẓihâr. If they pronounce it, it will not be considered. Similarly, if a person pronounces the ẓihâr to a woman who is not his wife, it will not be considered. It will still be permissible for him to marry such a woman.

10. If the ẓihâr is pronounced several times, e.g. a person says: "To me, you are equal to my mother" and he says this two or three times, then each time that the ẓihâr is pronounced, a separate kaffârah will have to be paid. However, if the person repeated the ẓihâr merely to emphasize it and did not intend pronouncing several ẓihârs, he will only have to pay one kaffârah.

11. If a person has more than one wife and pronounces the ẓihâr to more than one wife, he will have to pay a separate kaffârah for each wife.

12. When pronouncing the ẓihâr, a person did not use the words: "equal", "similar", "like". Instead, he said: "You are my mother" or "You are my sister". This will not be ẓihâr and his wife will not become ḥarâm on him. However, to say so is a sin. Similarly, it is not good to address one's wife by shouting: "My sister! Do such and such work for me!" Despite this being a sin and an evil habit, it is not ẓihâr.

13. A person says: "If I keep you, it's like keeping my mother", "If I have sex with you, it's as though I am having sex with my mother". Ẓihâr is not considered.

14. A person says: "You are ḥarâm upon me just as my mother is ḥarâm upon me." If he intended divorce, it will take place. If he intended ẓihâr or did not intend anything, ẓihâr will take place. Sexual intercourse with her will be permissible after fulfilling the kaffârah.

Kaffârah

1. The kaffârah for ẓihâr is the same as that which was mentioned for fasting. There is no difference between the two. We have mentioned these masâ'il in detail in Part Three of Bahishti Zewar. Please refer to them. A few necessary matters which were not mentioned previously will be mentioned here.

2. If the man has the strength, he should fast consecutively for 60 days. He should not miss any fasts in-between. As long as he does not complete these fasts, he should abstain from engaging in sexual intercourse with his wife. If he engages in sexual intercourse with that wife (i.e. the wife on whom he had pronounced ẓihâr), he will have to re-commence keeping the 60 fasts. This is irrespective of whether he engages in sexual intercourse with her at night, during the day, intentionally or forgetfully. The same rule will apply in all cases.

3. If a person commences fasting on the first day of a particular month (Islamic month), he should continuously fast until the end of two months. This is irrespective of whether the months are of 30 days each, whereby he completes the 60 days, or whether they are less than 30 days each. In both cases, the kaffârah will be fulfilled. However, if he did not commence fasting at the beginning of the month, he will have to fast for a full 60 days.

4. If the person was fulfilling the kaffârah by fasting and forgetfully engages in sexual intercourse with his wife prior to completing his kaffârah, he will have to repeat his kaffârah.

5. If a person does not have the strength to fast, he should feed 60 poor persons with two meals. Alternatively, he could give them dry groceries. If he engages in sexual intercourse before he can complete feeding all the poor persons, he will be committing a sin. However, he does not have to repeat this kaffârah.

The different methods of feeding poor persons that have been mentioned in Part Three are applicable over here as well.

6. A person had to fulfil two kaffârahs for two ẓihârs. He gave approximately 4 kilos of wheat to each of the 60 poor persons under the misunderstanding that he is actually giving each person 2 kilos for each kaffârah. Even then, only one kaffârah will be fulfilled and the other will still be outstanding. However, if the person had to fulfil two kaffârahs; one for ẓihâr, and the other for fasting; then both his kaffârahs will be valid even if he fulfils them together.

Li'ân - Allegation of Adultery

When the husband accuses his wife of adultery or rejects a particular child as being his own child, then both the husband and wife have to go to a Shar'î judge. The judge will ask both of them to take an oath. First, the husband will take the following oath: "I make Allawh my witness and say that I am speaking the truth with regard to the act for which I have accused her." He should take this oath four times. The fifth time he must say: "If I am lying, may Allawh's curse descend upon me."

When the husband completes this, the wife must say the following four times: "I make Allawh my witness and say that he is lying with regard to the act for which he is accusing me of." The fifth time she must say: "If he is truthful in this accusation, may the wrath of Allawh descend upon me."

Once both of them take this oath, the judge will separate them and one ṭalâqul bâ'in will take place. The child will not be attributed to this husband, but will be given in the care of the mother. In the Sharî'ah, this oath and counter-oath is known as li'ân.

Disappearance of the Husband

When a woman's husband disappears or goes missing and it is not known whether he is alive or dead, then such a woman cannot enter into a second marriage. Instead, she should remain waiting in the hope that her husband will return. When she remains waiting until such a time that her husband must have reached 90 years of age, we will give the ruling that he must have passed away by now. Based on this, if a woman is still young and she wishes to remarry, she must wait until her husband's age must have reached 90, thereafter she must complete her 'iddah, and then she can enter into a second marriage. However, the condition for this is that the ruling that her first husband must have passed away by now will have to be passed by a Shar'î judge.

'IDDAH

'Iddah after Talâq

1. When the husband divorces his wife or their nikâh is annulled through khula', zihâr, 'îlâ' or any other way, or the husband passes away - then in all these cases the woman has to remain in a house for a certain period of time. As long as this period does not expire, she cannot go to any other place nor can she marry another person. Once this period expires, she can do whatever she wishes. This period of waiting is known as 'iddah.
2. When the husband divorces his wife, she will have to live in that very house where she received the divorce until the end of three hayd periods. She must not leave that house during the day nor at night. Nor can she make nikâh with anyone else. Once she completes three hayd periods, her 'iddah will be complete and she can now go wherever she wishes. This rule will apply irrespective of whether the man issued one divorce, two or three divorces. And irrespective of whether he issued a talâqul bâ'in or a talâqur raj'î. The same rule will apply in all cases.
3. If a young girl who has not commenced experiencing hayd, or an old woman whose hayd has terminated is divorced, then their 'iddah will be three months. They must observe the 'iddah for three months and thereafter they can do whatever they wish.
4. A young girl who has not commenced experiencing hayd as yet was divorced. She therefore commenced her 'iddah on the basis that it will be three months. However, after a month or two she began experiencing hayd. Her 'iddah will now be calculated from the time that her hayd commences. She will therefore have to remain in 'iddah until the completion of three hayd periods. Her 'iddah will not be complete until the completion of three hayd periods.
5. If a woman is pregnant and her husband divorces her, she will have to remain in that house until she delivers her child. This is her 'iddah. When she delivers her child, her 'iddah will expire. Even if she delivers her child a few days after being divorced, her 'iddah will expire.
6. If a woman is divorced while she is in her hayd, this hayd will not be considered. Her 'iddah will only be complete on the expiry of three additional hayd periods after the hayd that she is presently experiencing.
7. The 'iddah for divorce is only compulsory on the woman who is divorced after her husband had engaged in sexual intercourse with her or, they did not engage in sexual intercourse but they met in privacy and solitude and thereafter her husband divorces her. This is irrespective of whether they met in such a way that the total mahr becomes wâjib or in such a way that the total mahr does not become wâjib. In both cases, she will have to observe the 'iddah.
If they did not meet in privacy and solitude and the person divorces her; she does not have to observe the 'iddah.
8. A person mistakenly engaged in sexual intercourse with another woman thinking her to be his wife. Thereafter it became known that she was not his wife. This woman will also have to observe the 'iddah. As long as she does not complete her 'iddah, she cannot even engage in sexual intercourse with her actual husband nor can she permit him to do so. If they engage in sexual intercourse, both of them will be sinning. The 'iddah of such a woman is the same as that mentioned above. If the woman falls pregnant (due to the intercourse with that man), she will have to observe the 'iddah until she delivers the child. This child will not be illegitimate. His lineage will be correct - he will be attributed to the person who had engaged in sexual intercourse with this woman.
9. A person married a woman illegally, e.g. he marries a woman and later he learns that her husband is alive and that he (i.e. her husband) had not divorced her. Alternatively, this person and this woman come to know that they had drank the milk of the same woman when they were infants. The rule in this regard is that if the man had engaged in sexual intercourse with her, and after learning the truth, they were separated, she will still have to observe the 'iddah. From the moment the man repents and chooses to separate this wife, her 'iddah will commence. If they did not engage in sexual intercourse, 'iddah will not be wâjib. In fact, if they had met in privacy and solitude, even then the 'iddah will not be wajib. 'Iddah will only be wâjib when they engage in sexual intercourse.
10. Feeding and clothing the woman while she is observing her 'iddah is wâjib on the very person who divorced her. This will be explained in detail in a later chapter - 'Inshâ' Allawh.
11. A person issued a talâqul bâ'in or three divorces to his wife. Thereafter, while she was in her 'iddah, he mistakenly engaged in sexual intercourse with her. Because of this, one additional 'iddah becomes wâjib on her. She will have to observe the 'iddah for an additional three hayd periods. On the completion of these three additional hayd periods, both her 'iddahs will be completed.
12. A person issued a talâqul bâ'in and he is also living in the house in which the woman is observing her 'iddah. She will have to observe strict purdah with him.

'Iddah after Death of the Husband

1. A woman's husband passed away. She must now observe the 'iddah for four months and ten days. She must live in the house in which she was staying at the time of her husband's death. It is not permissible for her to go out of that house. However, if a woman is very poor and does not have the resources to lead a normal life, and she takes up a job of cooking for someone or takes up some other similar job, it will be permissible for her to leave her house. However, she will have to spend the night in her home.
This 'iddah is applicable irrespective of whether sexual intercourse had taken place or not, whether they had met in privacy or not, and whether she experiences hayd or not. The same rule will apply in all cases. That is, she will have to observe the 'iddah for four months and ten days.
However, if the woman was pregnant at the time of her husband's death, her 'iddah will be complete the moment she gives birth to the child. There is no need to calculate according to the number of months. Even if she delivers the child a few hours after her husband's death, her 'iddah will be complete.
2. The woman who is observing her 'iddah can live in any part of the house. The custom of setting aside a specific place and setting aside a specific bed for mourning, and remaining there in mourning and refusing to come out of that place is all nonsense and meaningless. Customs of this sort should be given up.
3. The husband was an immature child. At the time when he passed away, his wife was pregnant. Even in this case her 'iddah will be until she delivers the baby. However, this child is illegitimate. It will not be attributed to the husband.
4. If the husband passed away on the first day of the lunar calendar and his wife was not pregnant, her 'iddah will be four months and ten days. If he did not pass away on the first day, she must calculate each month as 30 days and after the completion of four months and 10 days her 'iddah will be complete.
The same rule applies to the 'iddah after divorce. That is, if the woman does not experience hayd nor is she pregnant, and her husband divorces her on the first day of the lunar calendar, she must calculate three months according to the lunar calendar. This is irrespective of whether the months are of 29 days or 30 days. If she was not divorced on the first day, she must calculate 30 days for each month until she completes three months.
5. A person's nikâh was performed in an unlawful manner, e.g. the marriage was performed without any witnesses. Alternatively, a woman married her brother-in-law while her sister was still married to him. Thereafter, the husband passed away. Such a woman whose nikâh was not valid must not observe the 'iddah of four months and 10 days. Instead, she must observe the 'iddah of three hayd periods after her husband's death. If she does not experience any hayd, she must observe the 'iddah for three months. If she is pregnant, then until she delivers the child.
6. While a person was ill, he issued a talâqul bâ'in to his wife. Before she could complete the 'iddah of talâq, her husband passed away. In such a case we will have to see which of the two 'iddahs ('iddah after talâq or 'iddah after death) will take longer to complete. She will have to observe the 'iddah that will take longer to complete.
If the husband issued a talâqur raj'î and he passed away prior to his wife completing her 'iddah, it will be necessary on such a woman to observe the 'iddah for death. (i.e. four months and 10 days).
7. A woman's husband passed away but she did not receive the news of his death. She only received the news after four months and 10 days. In such a case her 'iddah will be complete. It is not necessary to observe the 'iddah from the time one receives the news. Similarly, if the husband divorces his wife and she does not know of this until after some time. When she is informed of this the 'iddah which she would have had to observe had already expired. Her 'iddah is also complete and there is no need to observe the 'iddah now.

8. A woman had left her house for some work or to visit her neighbour. While she was away, her husband passed away. She should immediately return from that place and remain in the house in which she had been living all along (with her husband).
9. When a woman is observing the 'iddah after the death of her husband, she is not entitled to receive any food, clothing, etc. She must spend her own money for this purpose.
10. In certain places there is a custom of observing the 'iddah for a full year after the death of the husband. This is absolutely ḥarâm.

Mourning for the Dead

1. When a woman has been issued with a ṭalâqur raj'î, her 'iddah is that she cannot leave her home until the expiry of the period of 'iddah nor can she marry anyone in this period. It is permissible for her to beautify and adorn herself.

As for the woman who has been issued three ṭalâqs, one ṭalâqul bâ'in, or her nikâh has broken in some other way - the ruling in all these cases is that such a woman cannot leave her home until the expiry of her 'iddah, she cannot marry anyone in this period nor can she beautify or adorn herself. All these things are ḥarâm upon her. Abstaining from this self-beautification and remaining in a dishevelled and unkempt manner is known as mourning.

2. As long as the 'iddah is not completed, it is ḥarâm to carry out the following acts:

(a) to apply perfume
(b) to scent clothing
(c) to wear jewellery and ornaments
(d) to wear or suspend flowers (eg. from the hair)
(e) to apply surmah (antimony)
(f) to redden the mouth by eating betel leaves
(g) to rub tooth powder (with the intention of colouring the teeth)
(h) to apply oil to the head
(i) to comb the hair
(j) to apply henna
(k) to wear beautiful clothes
(l) to wear silk, dyed or colourful clothes.

However, if the clothes are not colourful, it will be permissible to wear them irrespective of what colour they may be. The condition is that they must not be clothes that are used to beautify oneself.

3. If a woman who is in mourning experiences a headache and therefore feels it necessary to apply oil on her head, she may do so as long as the oil is free of any fragrance. It is also permissible to apply surmah if it is applied as a medication. However, this surmah will have to be applied at night and removed the following morning. It is also permissible to massage the head or to have a bath. When necessary, it is also permissible to comb the hair, e.g. after massaging the head or in order to remove some lice that may have fallen onto the head. However, she should not allow her hair to hang down over her face or forehead in a stylish way nor should she use a very fine comb which causes the hair to become smooth and glossy. Instead, she should use a comb with large teeth so that no beauty may become apparent.
4. Mourning the death of the husband is only wâjib on a woman who is mature and not on an immature girl. All the above restrictions and prohibitions are permissible for an immature girl. However, she is still prohibited from leaving the home or entering into another marriage.
5. Mourning is not wâjib on a woman who had entered into an invalid marriage, whose nikâh was not performed in the proper manner and was therefore separated from her husband or her husband passed away.
6. It is not permissible for a woman to mourn the death of anyone apart from her husband's death. However, if her husband does not stop her, it will be permissible to mourn the death of one of her close relatives for up to three days and not more. It is absolutely ḥarâm to mourn for more than three days. If her husband prevents her from mourning even for three days, she cannot do so for these three days as well.

Feeding and Clothing the Wife

1. It is wâjib on the man to provide his wife with food and clothing. Irrespective of how rich the wife may be, the responsibility of feeding, clothing and providing shelter to the wife rests entirely on the shoulders of the husband.
2. If the nikâh has been performed but she has not gone to live with her husband as yet, she can still claim for the food and clothing. However, if the husband wished to take her to his house and she did not go or was not sent by her parents, then as long as she does not go, she will not be entitled to ask for any food or clothing.
3. The wife is so young that she is incapable of engaging in sexual intercourse. Despite this, if the husband takes her to his house so that she may be able to fulfil the domestic tasks or to merely please himself, then in such a case it will be wâjib on him to provide her with food and clothing. If he does not keep her and instead sends her to her parent's home, it will not be wâjib on him. If the husband is young and immature and the wife is mature, she will be entitled to receive food and clothing.
4. The man did not give the mahr that is normally given in the beginning. The woman therefore refuses to go and live with him. She will have to be provided with food and clothing. But if she refuses to go to his house without any valid reason, she will not be entitled to receive any food or clothing. Once she goes to him, she will be entitled to receive the mahr.
5. For as long as she stays at her parent's home with the permission of her husband, she can ask her husband to provide her with food and clothing.
6. A woman falls ill. While she is ill, she is still entitled to receive food and clothing from her husband. This is irrespective of whether she falls ill at his house or at her parent's house. However, if the husband asks her to come and live with him while she is ill and she refuses to go, she will not be entitled to receive any food or clothing from him.

While she is ill, she will only receive the expenses for her food and clothing. It is not wâjib on the man to provide her with medication or to pay the doctor for his treatment. She has to pay for it herself. If the man provides this, it will be out of his good will.

7. A woman went on ḥajj. During this period it is not wâjib on the man to give her any food or clothing expenses. But if the husband accompanies her as well, he will have to provide her with food and clothing as well. However, it will only be wâjib on him to provide the food and clothing that used to normally cost him at home. Any extra expenses in this regard will have to be borne by her. Providing for the costs of transportation is also not the responsibility of the husband.
8. In providing food and clothing, the financial position of both will have to be considered. If both are rich, she will receive the food and clothing which rich people are accustomed to. If both of them are poor, she will receive that of poor people. If the husband is poor while the wife is from a rich family or vice versa, she will receive food and clothing that is of an average quality and price. In other words, it will be such that it is cheaper than the food and clothing of rich people, but more expensive than the food and clothing of poor people.
9. If the wife is so sick that she cannot undertake all the domestic duties, or she is from an upper-class family and cannot do the menial tasks of the home such as cooking, cleaning, etc. and regards them as being below her dignity, then she will have to be provided with food that has been prepared and cooked by someone else.

If she is not sick nor is she from an upper class family, it will be wâjib on her to fulfil all the domestic duties with her own hands. All domestic tasks will have to be fulfilled by her. The responsibility of the man is merely to provide her with a stove, a grindstone, groceries, firewood, pots, pans, utensils, etc. for eating and drinking. She must do the cooking and eat the cooked food.

10. It is the man's responsibility to provide her with oil, a comb, oil cakes, soap, and water for performing wuḍû' and taking a bath. It is not the man's responsibility to provide her with surmah, scent, etc. It is not the responsibility of the man to pay the washerman for washing the clothes. She must wash and wear her clothes herself. If the man gets the clothes washed or pays someone to do so, it will be out of his own good will.
11. If a mid-wife is called, her expenses will be borne by the one who called her. If the man called her, he will have to pay her; and if the woman called her, she will have to pay her. If the mid-wife comes on her own, the man will have to bear her expenses.
12. If the man gave his wife the expenses for her food and clothing for the entire year or for any other period before hand, he cannot take anything back from there.

Providing a Shelter for the Wife

1. It is wâjib on the man to provide a shelter for his wife. This place must be such that no other relative of the husband lives there. It must be free from any relative of the husband whereby the husband and wife can live without any formalities. However, if the wife does not mind living with others, it will be permissible for him to keep her in the same house with other relatives of his.
2. The responsibility of the husband will be fulfilled if the wife is provided with a separate room within the house where she can keep all her belongings and personal effects, where she can stay, and where she has the lock and key for it whereby no one else can enter and only she has possession over it. The wife cannot lay claim to more than this nor can she ask for an entirely separate house.
3. Just as the wife has the right to ask for a separate house where none of her husband's relatives are living and over which she has complete control, in the same way, the man also has the right to prevent or stop her relatives from coming to the house in which she is living. He can stop anyone irrespective of whether it be her mother, her father, her brother, or anyone else from among her relatives.
4. The wife can go to visit her parents once a week. She can go to visit all her other relatives once a year. She cannot demand more than this. Similarly, her parents can visit her once a week. The husband has the right to prevent them from coming more often. All her other relatives can visit her once in the year and not more than this. The husband has the right to prevent them from visiting her more often. He can exercise this right over her parents and other relatives as well. It should be borne in mind that relatives in this context refer to those relatives with whom marriage is ḥarâm forever. As for other relatives who do not fall within this category (such as cousins), they will be regarded as absolute strangers.
5. If the wife's father is ill and there is no one to take care of him, the wife should go and see to his needs whenever the need arises, even if it means going daily. Even if her father is a kâfir, the same rule will apply. In fact, if her husband stops her from going, she should still go. However, if she goes despite her husband stopping her from going, then she does not have the right to claim food and clothing from her husband.
6. The wife should not go to the house of strangers. If there is a wedding or other function and her husband permits her to go, even then it is not permissible for her to go. If the husband grants her permission, he will also be committing a sin. In fact, it is not even permissible to go to such gatherings with one's maḥram relatives as well.
7. The woman who has been issued with a divorce also has the right to receive food, clothing and shelter until the end of her 'iddah. However, the woman whose husband has passed away does not have the right to claim for food, clothing and shelter. Obviously, she will receive a share of the inheritance.
8. If the nikâh is broken due to some reason caused by the wife, she will not be entitled to receive any food or clothing while she is in her 'iddah. She will be entitled to receive a shelter only. Examples of nikâh being broken because of the wife:
(a) she engages in sexual intercourse with her step-son or merely touches him with the passions of youth, and the husband therefore divorces her.
(b) she becomes a kâfir and turns away from Islam.
However, if the wife decides to leave on her own and not take advantage of the right to receive shelter, she may leave and thereby forfeit this right.

Legitimate Offspring

1. When a married woman gives birth to a child, that child will be attributed to her husband. It is not permissible to say that this child is not her husband's and that it is someone else's merely on a doubt or suspicion. It is also not permissible to refer to such a child as being illegitimate. In an Islamic state, such a slanderer will be whipped.
2. The minimum period of pregnancy is six months and the maximum period is two years. In other words, a baby remains in the womb of a woman for a minimum period of six months. It cannot be born before this period. The maximum period it can remain in the womb is two years and not more than this.
3. The basic principle of the Sharî'ah is that as far as is possible, a child will not be regarded as being illegitimate. When there is no option left, only then will the ruling be given that it is illegitimate and only then will we say that the woman has committed a sin.
4. A person issued a ṭalâqur raj'î to his wife. Thereafter, she gave birth to a child within a period of two years. This child belongs to this husband. It is not permissible to regard this child as being illegitimate. According to the Sharî'ah, this child's lineage is in order. Even if this child is born one day before the expiry of two years, the same rule will apply. It will be regarded as if she had fallen pregnant before the divorce could be issued to her, that the child remained in her womb for up to two years and that after delivering the child her 'iddah has come to an end and she has now come out of the nikâh with this man.
If this woman has already admitted that her 'iddah has come to an end before she could give birth, then there will be no alternative but to say that this child is illegitimate. In fact, if such a woman gives birth to a child after two years and she has not admitted that her 'iddah has come to an end as yet, even then this child will be that husband's irrespective of how long it takes to deliver this child. In this case, it will be understood that they had engaged in sexual intercourse while she was still in her 'iddah and that he had now revoked his divorce. Therefore, the child that is born will be his, this woman will still remain his wife, and the nikâh will not be annulled. If it is not the husband's child, he must say so and once he rejects this child, the laws pertaining to li'ân will apply.
5. If a ṭalâqul bâ'in was issued, the rule is that the child will be the husband's if it is born within two years. If it is born after two years, it will be an illegitimate child. However, if the child is born after two years and the husband still claims that it is his child, it will not be illegitimate. In such a case it will be understood that they had unwittingly engaged in sexual intercourse while she was still in her 'iddah and she fell pregnant thereafter.
6. An immature girl who is close to maturity was given a divorce. After the divorce, she gave birth to a child after a full nine months. This child is illegitimate. If it is born within nine months, it will be attributed to the husband. However, this girl will have to admit that she is pregnant while she is still in her 'iddah, i.e within three months she will have to admit that she is pregnant so that the child will not be regarded as illegitimate. If the child is born within two years, it will be the husband's child, i.e. it will be legitimate.
7. A woman's husband passed away. If she gives birth to a child within two years from the time that he passed away, this child will not be illegitimate. Instead, it will be attributed to the husband. However, if the woman had already admitted to the expiry of her 'iddah then there will be no option but to regard it as illegitimate. If it is born after two years, it will still be illegitimate.
Note: We learn from these rules that the habit of accusing a woman of adultery when she gives birth to a child a few months beyond nine months after the death of her husband is a major sin.
8. If a child is born before six months after the nikâh, it is illegitimate. If it is born on the completion of six months or thereafter, it is legitimate and it is a sin to have any doubts with regard to its legitimacy. However, if the husband rejects the child and says that it is not his, then the rules of li'ân will apply.
9. The nikâh has been performed, but according to custom, the bride did not leave her parents' home as yet. In the meantime, she gives birth to a child and the husband does not reject it by saying that it is not his. This child will be regarded as the husband's and will not be regarded as illegitimate. It is not permissible for others to regard it as illegitimate. If it is not the husband's, he should reject it and upon rejecting it, the laws of li'ân will apply.
10. The husband is gone overseas for quite some time. Several years have passed and he has not come home. In the meantime, his wife gives birth to a child and the husband claims that it is his. Even in such a case, the Sharî'ah will not regard this child as illegitimate and it will be attributed to the husband. However, if the husband rejects it after receiving this news, the laws of li'ân will apply.

The Custody of Children

1. The husband and wife have been separated, divorce has taken place and they have a small baby. The mother of the child has the right of custody over the child. The father cannot take this child away. However, the father will have to pay for all the expenses that will be borne in order to bring up the child. If the mother does not take the child, and instead, gives it to the father, he will have to take it. The mother cannot be forced to keep the child.

2. If there is no mother or she refuses to take the child, the maternal grandmother and then the maternal great grandmother have the right of custody. Thereafter, the paternal grandmother or great grandmother will have the right of custody. If they are not present, the blood sisters of the child have the right of custody. If they are not present, then the stepsisters. However, as regards stepsisters, those who are from the same mother will be given preference over those who are from the same father. Thereafter, the child's maternal aunts and then the paternal aunts.

3. If the mother marries a person who is not a mahram relative of the child, i.e. this relative is such that nikâh with him is not harâm forever, then the mother forfeits the right of custody over the child. However, if the woman marries a mahram relative of this child, and this relative is such that nikâh with him is not valid (for the child), e.g. she marries the child's paternal uncle or any other similar relative, then the mother's right of custody remains. In the absence of the mother, if any other woman such as the child's sister, maternal aunt, etc. marries a ghayr mahram man (i.e. a ghayr mahram man to the child), the same rule will also apply. That is, the right of custody over the child no longer remains with this woman.

4. The right of custody over the child had been forfeited on account of the woman marrying a ghayr mahram (of the child). Thereafter, this man divorced her or he passed away. The right of custody will return to this woman and the child will be handed over to her.

5. If, from among the relatives of the child, no woman can be found in order to take custody of the child, the father will be the most eligible for custody. Thereafter, the paternal grandfather will be the most eligible, and thereafter the same order that we had mentioned in the chapter on the walî (or guardian) at the time of nikâh, will be followed. However, if the relative is a ghayr mahram and there is some fear over the safety of the child in the future, then in such a case the child will be given to someone who is reliable and trustworthy.

6. The right of custody over the child remains as long as the child does not reach the age of seven. Once the child reaches the age of seven, the father can take the child forcefully if he wishes to do so. The right of custody over a girl remains until she reaches nine years of age. Once she turns nine, the father can take her and the mother does not have the right to prevent her from going.

Allawh Ta'âlâ has given great rights to the husband and has attached a lot of virtue to him. Pleasing the husband and keeping him happy is a great act of 'ibâdah and displeasing him or keeping him unhappy is a major sin.

1. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "The woman who offers her five times salât, fasts in the month of Ramadân, protects her honour and respect, and obeys her husband has the choice of entering jannah from whichever door she wishes to enter from." This means that from the eight doors of jannah she can enter through whichever door she wishes without even having to knock on that door.

2. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "The woman who passes away in such a state that her husband is pleased with her will enter jannah."

3. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "Were I to command anyone to prostrate to anyone other than Allawh, I would have commanded the woman to prostrate to her husband. If the husband orders his wife to carry the boulders of one mountain to the next mountain, and the boulders of the next mountain to a third mountain, she will have to do this."

4. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "When the husband calls his wife, she should go immediately to him even if she is busy at her stove." In other words, no matter how important a task she may be busy with, she should leave it and go to him.

5. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "When a man calls his wife to engage in sexual intercourse with him and she does not go and because of this he sleeps away angrily, the angels continue cursing this woman till the morning."

6. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "When a woman troubles or displeases her husband in this world, the hûr of jannah that has been set aside for him says: "May Allawh curse you! Do not trouble him. He is your guest for a few days. Soon he will leave you and come to me."

7. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "There are three types of people whose salât is not accepted, nor is any other good act of theirs accepted. One is a slave who runs away from his master. The second is a woman whose husband is displeased with her. The third is a person who is in a state of intoxication."

8. A person asked: "Who is the best woman?" Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam replied: "The best woman is one who pleases her husband when he looks at her, when he asks her to do something she obeys him, and she does not do anything that may displease him with regard to his wealth and honour."

One of the rights of the husband is that the wife should not keep any optional fasts nor offer any optional salât in his presence without his permission. Among the rights of the husband is that she should not remain in an untidy, dishevelled state. Instead, she should always remain clean and beautiful for her husband. In fact, if she remains untidy and dishevelled despite her husband ordering her to remain clean, he has the right of beating her (lightly) in order that she may obey him. Another right of the husband is that she should not leave the house without his permission irrespective of whether it be the house of a friend, relative or anyone else.

The Method of Living with one's Husband

It should be understood well that the intimacy and contact between husband and wife is such that they will have to live together for the rest of their lives. If they love each other and are compatible to each other, then there is no greater bounty than this. And if, Allawh forbid, there is conflict between the two, then there is no greater calamity than this. Therefore, as far as is possible, live with his heart in your hands and carry out your duties through the mere indication of his eyes. If he orders you to tie your hands and remain standing the entire night, then the prosperity of this world and the hereafter is in this that you bear this minor difficulty of this world and thereby attain the prosperity and success of the hereafter. Never do anything that is contrary to his mood. If he regards the day as night, you should also do the same.

Due to a lack of understanding and not thinking about the consequences, some wives utter things which cause doubts and distractions to enter the heart of the husband. At times they blurt out things on the wrong occasions, while on other occasions they blurt out taunts and insults. Out of anger they utter hostile statements which he abhors. When his attention turns away from her because of all this, she goes about crying and weeping. You should understand this well that once doubts and misgivings enter the heart of the husband and you reconcile after a few days, even then the love and mutual understanding that had prevailed prior to your argument will no longer be the same. Irrespective of how many excuses and pardons you may put forward, the love and clean-heartedness that had prevailed will no longer be found. Later, when any incident takes place, the mind will always go back to that argument and the husband will always think that this is the same woman who had said such-and-such thing on that day. Therefore, you should always think and ponder before saying anything or doing anything when dealing with your husband. In doing this, you will not only gain the pleasure of Allawh and His Rasûl sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam, but you yourself will be happy in this world and in the hereafter.

It is not necessary to teach an intelligent wife anything. She is able to differentiate between good and evil on her own. Despite this, we will enumerate a few basic and necessary matters. Once you understand them, you will be able to understand other issues as well.

1. Do not ask for an allowance that is beyond the financial position of your husband. Whatever you receive, appreciate it and consider this house as your own home and continue with life even if it is on simple food.

2. If at any time you happen to fancy some jewellery or clothing, and your husband does not have any money on him, do not ask him nor be grieved for not being able to obtain it. In fact, you should not even mention it. You should think for yourself that if you ask for it, he will think that you have no concern for him in the sense that you are asking him at such a time when he is unable to afford to buy you such an item. In fact, even if your husband is rich, then as far as possible you should not ask him to buy anything for you. However, if he himself offers to buy you something or asks you if you want anything, then there will be no harm in asking him. It should be remembered that by asking, one's status is lowered in the eyes of people and one is also disgraced.

3. Do not be persistent and stubborn in a particular matter. Even if it is against you or contrary to you, let it go this time and at some later stage you could reconcile him to your view in an appropriate manner.
4. If you experience any difficulties at your husband's home, never mention it. Always display happiness so that he does not experience any sorrow or grief and in so doing, his attention will always be directed towards you.
5. Whenever he brings anything for you, always express your pleasure at receiving it irrespective of whether it is to your fancy or not. Don't say that this is not good and that you do not like it. If you do this, he will feel grieved and will not like to bring anything for you in future. If you praise him and accept it happily, he will become more generous and present you with more gifts in future.
6. Don't come angrily and show ingratitude to the husband. Nor should you say that you have not really experienced any joy in this dead and lifeless house and that you have spent your entire life in difficulties and problems. Nor should you say that your parents have destroyed your future by immersing you in such problems and throwing you into such a fire. By uttering such words, one's heart becomes filled with hatred.
7. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "I saw numerous women in hell." Someone asked him: "O Rasûlullâh! Why will many women go into hell?" He replied: "They curse others a lot and they always show ingratitude to their husbands."
Ponder over this and think how serious it is to be ungrateful. To curse someone, to say: "May Allawh's wrath descend on so-and-so person", "May Allawh curse that person", "A certain person's face is accursed", "A certain person's face is full of curses", etc. - are all extremely evil words.
8. If the husband is angry over a particular matter, do not say something that will increase his anger. Whenever you wish to speak, check his mood first. If you find that he is in a jovial mood, laugh and joke with him. But if he is not in such a mood, do not engage in such conversation. Speak to him according to his mood.
9. If he is angry with you over something and abstains from talking with you, do not turn away and abstain from talking with him. Instead, smile at him, ask him for his pardon and forgiveness, touch him, shake his hands - in short, do whatever you can to win him over. Even if it is his fault and not yours, you should not turn away from him. Shake his hands and regard asking him for his pardon to be a source of pride and honour.
10. Remember, that the peace and harmony between husband and wife is not based on mere empty love. Apart from love, it is also necessary to respect the husband. It is a major error to consider your husband equal to you. Don't ever ask your husband to do anything for you. If he comes to massage your hands or head out of love, do not let him do it. Think for a moment that if your father comes and does this to you will you allow it? So how can you let your husband do this when his status is higher than your father's. In your actions, your conversations, and in every aspect of your relationship with him always be mindful of your manners and etiquette. If it is your fault and despite this you turn away angrily from him and refuse to speak to him, then this is a sign of great stupidity and immaturity. Actions of this sort cause one to become heart-broken.
11. When he returns from abroad or a distant journey, ask him about his state, his health, whether he encountered any difficulties or not. Massage his hands and feet, perhaps he is tired, perhaps he is hungry, make the arrangements of preparing a meal for him. If it is hot, put on the fan and cool him down. In short, do everything that will give him peace and comfort. Don't ever start talking about money and how much he brought for you or what he brought for you, or where his wallet is, etc. Whatever money he gives you, accept it. Do not tell him that he earns so much and that he has given you so little money or that he spent a lot of his money. Nor should you ask him as to what he did with all his money and where he spent it. If you coincidentally happen to ask him such questions when he is in a good mood, there will be no harm in this.
12. If your husband's parents are alive and he gives all his money to them and does not give anything to you, do not feel hurt about this. In fact, if he gives you any money, intelligence demands that you do not accept it. Instead, tell him to give it to his parents so that they do not have any evil thoughts about you and do not say that you have taken their son under your control.
13. As long as your in-laws are alive, regard serving them and obeying them to be your duty and honour. Don't think about living separately from your mother-in-law and sister-in-law because this is the root of all problems between yourself and your mother-in-law and sister-in-law. You should think for yourself that his parents brought him up and in this old age of their's they got him married so that they may receive some rest and comfort. On the contrary, the moment the daughter-in-law came into the house she is already thinking of asking her husband to leave his mother and father immediately. Once his mother learns that the daughter-in-law is instigating her son to leave the house, numerous problems and squabbles ensue.
14. Live in the household in an amicable manner. From the very beginning you must be mindful of your manners and character. Be kind to the young and respect the elderly.
15. Do not leave your work to be carried out by others. Do not leave your things lying around thinking that others will pick them up for you.
16. Do not think it below your dignity to do the work that your mother-in-law or sister-in-law is engaged in. You should take up that work without them having to tell you. If you do this, love for you will be created in their hearts.
17. When two persons are engaged in a secret conversation, separate yourself from there and do not lend an ear to what they are saying. In addition to this, do not unnecessarily think that they are speaking about you.
18. You should also bear this in mind that you should never live dejectedly or in an oblivious manner in your in-laws' house. Although you may not feel at ease on account of it being a new house to you or the people being new to you, you should try and make yourself understand and get used to the place instead of sitting down and crying - you have just come to a new place and you are already speaking of going!
19. You should always be careful when engaging in any conversation. Do not speak too much that those around you begin to dislike it. Nor should you speak so little that you do not even speak further than welcoming someone. This is also not good and regarded as a sign of pride.
20. If you see or experience anything at your in-laws' house which you dislike, do not go and mention it at your parent's house. It is an extremely evil habit to go and mention everything that takes place at your in-laws' house to your mother. It is also extremely detestable for mothers to "dig out" every little thing from their daughters. It is mainly due to these evil habits that quarrels, squabbles and bickering start between the two families. Apart from this, there is no other benefit in it.
21. Keep and set all the items that belong to your husband in a neat and orderly manner. Keep the room clean and do not let it get dirty. The bed should not be dirty and untidy. Remove all creases and wrinkles from it. If the pillow is dirty, change its cover. If there isn't a cover, sew one. If you do all these things after he tells you, what good is there in that? Elegance and beauty demands that you should put everything in order without his having to tell you to do so.
22. Whatever is kept with you, keep it safely. If they are clothes, fold them neatly; do not dump them nor throw them around. Instead, keep them in a suitable place according to your convenience. Do not take any "short-cuts" in doing your work nor give it to others to carry it out for you.
23. Never concoct any lies. In doing so, you will lose your respect and esteem. As a result of this, whatever truth you may speak will not be believed or relied upon.
24. If your husband scolds or rebukes you out of anger, control yourself and do not answer him. No matter what he says, remain silent. Once his anger subsides, he himself will regret his actions and will become extremely pleased with you. 'Inshâ' Allawh, he will not get angry with you again. However, if you do not keep quiet and display any defiance, then the entire incident will have disastrous consequences.
25. Do not accuse your husband on minor doubts or false allegations by saying that he jokes and laughs with a particular woman a lot, that he frequents a particular place and you don't know what he is up to over there. If the husband is innocent, think for yourself how upset he will be on hearing these accusations. And if what you are accusing him of is true, by your becoming angry, complaining or forcing him (to admit) is only going to harm you. If you want to distant his heart away from you, you can do so to your detriment. By your saying all these things, do you really think that he will give up his evil habits? If you want him to give up these illicit relationships, do it with tact and wisdom. Speak to him in privacy, make him understand, and explain to him the evils of such relationships. If he does not give up these relationships despite you explaining to him, despite you making him ashamed of himself in privacy; then exercise patience. Do not go about mentioning this to people and thereby causing him to be disgraced. Nor should you announce this everywhere, nor try to overpower him. In doing this, he will become more stubborn, more persistent, and become more involved in such relationships. If you become angry, begin mentioning it to people and try to disgrace him, the level of relationship that prevailed will drop even further. He might even stop speaking with you. You will end up in a sorrowful state.

Remember this very well, that Allawh Ta'âlâ has endowed men with valour and bravery. They cannot be overpowered by forcing them to do something or trying to subdue them. The best way of overpowering them is to flatter them and obey them. Becoming angry at them and trying to influence them is a big mistake and a sign of immaturity. Although you may not understand the evil consequences of this now, once there is an outbreak of dissension and quarrelling, the evil consequences of this will definitely appear at some time or the other.
In Lucknow, there is a woman whose husband is extremely immoral. He spends all his time in the company of a prostitute and never ever goes home to his wife. The audacity of this prostitute is that she used to send orders to his wife, that she must cook so-and-so meal today and send it for her. This poor wife does not take any offence to this. She cooks whatever the prostitute orders and sends it out to her, she never ever complains or thinks twice about sending this food. Now, you see for yourself, how all the people around her must be praising her, let alone the reward that she will receive from Allawh Ta'âlâ. The day Allawh Ta'âlâ guides this husband of hers and he gives up this illicit relationship, he will definitely return to his wife and become her slave.

The Method of Bringing up Children

It should be borne in mind that the bringing up of children in the proper manner is of prime importance. This is because whatever good or bad habits they learn in their childhood, they do not leave them for the rest of their lives. From the time of infancy till they reach maturity, the following matters should be strictly adhered to:

1. Ensure that the child drinks the milk of a pious, religious woman. Milk has a great effect in the life of a person.
2. It is the habit of women to frighten their children by mentioning the police or other frightening persons or objects. This is an evil habit. Children become weak-hearted because of this.
3. Set aside specific times for making him drink his milk or feeding him so that he may remain healthy.
4. Keep him clean, neat and tidy because one remains healthy in this way.
5. Do not beautify and adorn the child excessively.
6. If the child is a boy, do not lengthen the hair on his head.
7. If it is a girl, do not make her wear any jewellery as long as she does not reach the age where she has to observe purdah. This is because this will pose a danger to her life. The other reason is that it is not a good habit to create a love for jewellery in a girl's mind when she is still so young.
8. Have the habit of handing over the responsibility of distributing food, clothing, money, etc. that is to be given to poor people to your children. Similarly, give them the task of distributing food, sweets, etc. to their brothers, sisters and other children. This is so that they will inculcate the practice of generosity. However, you should remember that you must only ask them to distribute those things that belong to you. It is not permissible for anyone to ask them to distribute those items or things that belong to them from the Shar'î point of view.
9. You should mention the harms of over-eating to them. However, do not mention anyone by name. Instead, tell them that the one who eats too much is regarded as an ox (or any other similar example).
10. If it is a boy, incline him towards wearing white clothes and create a dislike in his heart for colourful and gaudy clothing by telling him that such clothes are worn by women and that he is a man. You should always teach him in this way.
11. If it is a girl, do not give her the habit of worrying too much about plaiting and parting her hair or wearing very stylish clothing.
12. When a child persists or insists on having something, do not fulfil all his wishes or else he will become spoilt.
13. Prevent the child from talking very loudly or shouting. Especially if it is a girl and she speaks in this loud shouting manner, you should scold her and reprimand her. If you do not do this, this habit will remain when she grows up.
14. Safeguard your child from speaking or mixing with children who have evil habits, who are not interested in their learning, who are in the habit of wearing stylish clothes or eating extravagant dishes.
15. Always inculcate a hatred for the following actions in your child, i.e. teach him to hate the following acts:

(a) becoming angry,
(b) speaking lies,
(c) envying someone,
(d) stealing,
(e) carrying tales,
(f) defending whatever he does or says,
(g) to unnecessarily "make up" stories,
(h) speaking excessively without any benefit,
(i) laughing unnecessarily or laughing excessively,
(j) cheating or deluding someone,
(k) not thinking about or not differentiating between good and bad.

If any of these acts or traits are found in him, stop him immediately and warn him.

16. If he breaks something or begins to hit someone, punish him accordingly so that he does not repeat such acts. Loving the child, consoling him or allowing him to commit such acts always causes the child to become "lost" or spoilt.
17. Do not allow the child to sleep very early.
18. The habit of waking up early should be inculcated in the child.
19. When the child reaches the age of seven, inculcate the habit of offering salât.
20. Once he reaches the age wherein he can go to madrasah, first teach him to recite the Quran.
21. As far as is possible, make him learn under a religious-minded teacher.
22. Don't ever allow him to absent himself from going to madrasah.
23. Set aside certain times in which you narrate stories of the pious to him.
24. Do not allow the child to look at books that contain love stories, stories that are contrary to the Sharî'ah, stories that are obscene or that have no benefit, love poems, etc.
25. Give them books that cover the different aspects of the Dîn, and books that cover the necessary aspects of this world.
26. Once the child returns from the madrasah, permit him to play around in order to occupy him and so that he does not become dull-headed. However, the games must be such that there is no sin in playing them and at the same time there is no fear of physical injury.
27. Do not give the child any money to purchase fireworks, musical instruments or any other similar unnecessary items which amount to wasting of money.
28. The habit of watching games, matches, etc. should not be inculcated in the child.
29. Always teach your children some sort of hobby or trade which will help them at the time of need or necessity whereby they can support their families.
30. Teach girls to write to the extent that they are able to write necessary letters and also work out the expenses of the house.
31. The habit of doing their own work should be inculcated in the children so that they do not become dependent and lazy. You should order them to lay out their own beds at night and to get up early in the morning and neaten their beds again. They should keep their clothes neatly. Clothes that become undone or torn should be stitched by themselves. Clothes that are clean or dirty should be kept in a place where there is no fear of moths.

32. Emphasize on the girls to check the jewellery that they are wearing before they go to sleep and once they wake up the following morning.
33. You should order the girls to watch attentively at the cooking, sewing, threading, dying, and all the other work that is carried out at home so that they will also learn these things.
34. When the child does something good, praise him, kiss him, reward him so that he will feel happy. When he commits an evil act, call him aside in privacy and make him understand that he has committed an evil act and that others will think bad of him, and that whoever else comes to know of it will also think bad of him. You should warn him against committing such an act again and explain to him that good children do not do such things. If he repeats that act, punish him appropriately.
35. It is the duty of the mother to create respect for the father in the child's heart.
36. Do not allow the child to do anything secretly. This is irrespective of whether it is some game, food or any other act. If he does anything secretly, you should immediately understand that he regards it to be evil. If the act is in fact evil, teach him to abstain from it. If it is a good act, such as eating or drinking, then tell him to eat and drink in the presence of others.
37. Set aside some strenuous work for the children which will keep them healthy, energetic and which will not allow laziness to overtake them. If it is a boy, he should do gymnastics, weightlifting or walking for a few kilometres. As for girls, it is necessary for them to work with the grinding stone and spinning wheel. The benefit of doing these things is that they will not regard such work to be below their dignity.
38. When walking, teach them not to walk very swiftly, nor should they raise their gazes when walking.
39. Inculcate the habit of humility in them. Their manner of speaking, walking, conversing, etc. should be such that they do not become boastful. They should be taught humility to such an extent that they should not even sit with their classmates and boast about their clothes, house, family, books, pens, ink, exercise books, etc.
40. Occasionally you should give them some money so that they may purchase whatever they wish. However, inculcate the habit in them that they should not conceal whatever they buy.
41. Teach them the etiquette and manners of eating, sitting and standing in gatherings. We will now enumerate a few of these etiquette:

The etiquette of eating

1. Eat with the right hand.
2. Read Bismillâh in the beginning.
3. Eat the food that is in front of you.
4. Do not commence eating before others.
5. Do not ogle or stare at the food.
6. Do not look at those who are eating.
7. Do not eat very quickly.
8. Chew the food well.
9. Do not take another morsel as long as the morsel that is in your mouth is not chewed and swallowed.
10. Do not allow the gravy and other liquids to drip onto the clothes.
11. The fingers should not be allowed to become too messy.

The etiquette of gatherings

1. Whoever you meet, meet with respect and speak kindly.
2. Do not spit in gatherings nor clean your nose. But if there is a need to do so, excuse yourself and go to another place.
3. If you have to yawn or sneeze, cover your mouth with your hands and try to muffle the sound.
4. Do not face your back towards anyone.
5. Do not face your feet towards anyone.
6. Do not sit by placing your hand under your chin.
7. Do not crack your fingers.
8. Do not look in the direction of anyone repeatedly and unnecessarily.
9. Remain seated with respect.
10. Do not speak excessively.
11. Do not take oaths over trivial matters.
12. As far as possible, do not commence with any conversation. When the other person speaks, listen attentively so that his spirits are not dampened. However, if it is a sinful conversation, do not listen. Either stop him, or leave that place.
13. As long as a person does not complete whatever he wishes to say, do not interrupt him.
14. If someone comes and wishes to sit in the gathering and there is no place, make way for that person and sit closely so that he may be able to get some place.
15. When you meet someone or bid them farewell, say As-salâmu 'alaykum, and when replying to someone's salaam, say Wa 'alaykumus salâm. Do not utter other forms of greeting.

HUQÛQ - RIGHTS

The Rights of Parents

1. You should not cause them any harm even if they commit any excesses.
2. Respect and honour them in your speech and dealings with them.
3. Obey them in permissible acts.
4. If they are in need of money, assist them even if they are kâfirs.
5. The following rights are due to parents after their death:

(a) Continue making du'âs of forgiveness and mercy for them. Continue sending rewards to them in the form of optional acts of worship and charity on their behalf.
(b) Meet their friends and relatives in a friendly way and also assist them wherever possible.
(c) If you have the finances, fulfil their unpaid debts and the permissible bequests that they have made.
(d) When they pass away, abstain from crying and wailing aloud or else their souls will be troubled.

6. According to the Sharî'ah, the rights of the paternal and maternal grandparents are similar to those of the parents and they should be regarded as such.
7. Similarly, the rights of the maternal and paternal uncles and aunts are similar to those of the parents. This has been deduced from certain 'Ahâdîth. (Rasûlullâh *s*allallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "The maternal aunt has the status of one's mother." - Tirmidhî)

The wet-nurse

Meet her with respect. If she is in need of money and you are able to help her, then help her.

The Step-mother

Since she is an associate of your father, and we have been commanded to be kind and friendly to our parents' associates, the step-mother, therefore, also has certain rights over you as mentioned previously.

The elder brother

In the light of the Hadith, the elder brother is similar to one's father. From this we can deduce that the younger brother is similar to one's children. Based on this, they will have rights similar to those of parents and children. The elder sister and the younger sister should also be treated in the same manner.

Relatives

If any of your blood relatives is in need and is unable to earn, help him out with his expenses according to your financial position. Go and meet them occasionally. Do not cut-off relations with them. In fact, even if they cause you harm, it will be best for you to exercise patience.

The In-laws

In the Quran, Allawh Ta'âlâ has mentioned the in-laws together with one's lineage. We learn from this that the father-in-law, mother-in-law, wife's brother, sister's husband, son-in-law, daughter-in-law, the previous children of the wife, the previous children of the husband - all of these have certain rights. Therefore, you have to be more considerate to them as opposed to others.

SUPPLEMENT TO BAHISHTI ZEWAR

The Virtues and Rights of Marriage

1. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that this world has been created to be utilised and that of all the things that are utilised in this world, there is nothing better than a pious woman. In other words, if a person is fortunate enough to get a pious wife, it will be a great blessing. It is also a mercy from Allawh Ta'âlâ that she is actually a comfort for the husband and a means for his success in this world and in the hereafter. A person enjoys comfort from such a woman for his worldly needs and she also assists him in fulfilling his religious duties.

2. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "Marriage is my way and my sunnah." "The one who does not act upon my sunnah is not of me." That is, there is no relationship between him and me. This is actually a warning and a threat to the one who does not practice on the sunnah and a mention of Rasûlullâh's sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam anger on such a person. It is therefore necessary to be extremely cautious in this regard. Furthermore, how can a Muslim bear to have Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam displeased with him for even a moment. May Allawh Ta'âlâ grant us death before that day comes when a Muslim is able to bear the displeasure of Allawh and His Rasûl sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam.

It is mentioned in a Hadîth that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "Marry so that I can be proud (of your numbers) on the day of judgement over the other nations." In other words, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam likes his 'ummah to be in large numbers and more than the other nations. If this happens, his 'ummah will be carrying out more good deeds, and in so doing he will receive more rewards and gain closer proximity to Allawh Ta'âlâ. This is because whoever from his 'ummah does good deeds, does so through his teachings. Therefore, the more people who act on his teachings, the more reward he will receive for conveying those teachings. We also learn from this that whenever and however possible, we should undertake to carry out those tasks and actions that will take us closer to Allawh Ta'âlâ, and that we should not display any laziness in this regard.

It is mentioned in a Hadîth that on the day of judgement the people will be standing in 120 lines. Out of these, 40 lines of people will be from the other nations while 80 lines of people will be from the 'ummah of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. Glory be to Allawh! How beloved Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam is to Him.

The one who is able to (fulfil the rights of a wife) should marry. As for the one who does not have sufficient wealth (to fulfil the rights of a wife), he should fast. That is, he should fast so that there will be a decrease in his desires. Fasting is actually a means of curbing his desires. If a person does not have a very dire need for women, and instead has an average need, and he is able to pay for her basic necessities, then nikâh is sunnat-e-mu'akkadah for such a person. As for the person who has a very urgent need, nikâh will be farḍ upon him. This is because there is a fear that he will commit adultery and thereby get the sin of committing a ḥarâm act. If a person has a very urgent need but is financially incapable of maintaining a wife, then such a person must fast abundantly. Later, when he has sufficient funds to maintain a wife, he must get married.

3. It is mentioned in a Hadith that children are the flowers of jannah. This means that the amount of joy and happiness one will experience on seeing the flowers of paradise, that same amount of joy and happiness is experienced when he looks at his children. And we know fully well that children can only be obtained through marriage.

4. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that when the status of a person is increased in jannah, he asks out of wonder: "How did I receive all this?" (That is, "How did I receive such a high status when I hadn't carried out so many good deeds to deserve such a status?") It will be said to this person that this high status is on account of your children asking for forgiveness on your behalf. In other words, your children had asked for forgiveness on your behalf. In return for that, you have been accorded this status.

5. It is mentioned that the child who is born out of a miscarriage (i.e. it is born before the due date) will "fight"(wrangle) with its Creator when its parents are entered into jahannam. In other words, this child will go to extremes in interceding on behalf of its parents and will ask Allawh Ta'âlâ to remove its parents from jahannam. Through His bounty, Allawh Ta'ala will accept the intercession of this child and He will be soft and lenient towards it. It will be said to this child: "O siqṭ (which means, miscarried foetus) who is quarrelling with its Lord! Enter your parents into jannah." So this child will draw its parents out of jahannam with its navel cord and enter both of them into jannah. We learn from this, that children of this sort, who are actually a by-product of marriage, will also be of help in the hereafter.

6. It is mentioned in a Hadith that when the husband and wife look at each other (with love), Allawh Ta'âlâ looks at both of them with mercy.

7. It is mentioned in a Hadith that Allawh Ta'âlâ has taken it upon Himself (i.e. out of His mercy, He as taken the responsibility) of helping the person who gets married in order to attain purity from that which Allawh has made ḥarâm. In other words, the person who marries in order to save himself from adultery with the intention of obeying Allawh Ta'âlâ, Allawh will help and assist him in his expenses and other affairs.

8. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that two rak'ats of salât performed by a married person is better than 82 rak'ats performed by an unmarried person. In another Hadith, 70 rak'ats have been mentioned instead of 82 rak'ats. It is possible that this means that 70 rak'ats are written in favour of the person who fulfils the necessary rights of his wife and family, and that 82 rak'ats are in favour of the person who apart from fulfilling their necessary rights, serves them more with his life, wealth and good habits.

9. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that it is a major sin for a person to be neglectful with regard to those whom he is responsible for (and to have shortcomings in fulfilling their needs).

10. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "I have not left behind any test and tribulation on men more harmful than women." In other words, of all the things that are harmful for men, women are the most harmful. This is because, out of his love for a woman, a man loses all his senses, so much so that he does not even take the commands and orders of Allawh Ta'âlâ into consideration. Therefore, a person must not fall in love with a woman in such a way that he has to act contrary to the Sharî'ah. For example, her demands for her food and clothing are more than what the husband can afford. In such circumstances, never accept any bribes in order to supplement your present income. Instead, give her from the ḥalâl earnings which Allawh Ta'âlâ has blessed you with. You should continue teaching your womenfolk and inculcate respect and good manners in them. Do not allow them to become impudent and disrespectful. The intellect of women is deficient, it is therefore incumbent to take special measures in reforming them.

11. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that you should not propose to a girl when your fellow Muslim brother has already proposed to her until he gets married or gives up this proposal. In other words, when a person has sent a proposal to a particular family and there is a likelihood of their replying in the affirmative, another person should not send a proposal to that same family. However, if they reject this first person, or he himself changes his mind, or they are not too happy with him and are still hesitant in giving a reply, it will be permissible for another person to send a proposal for the same girl.

The same rule applies to the transactions of buying and selling. That is, if a person is busy buying or selling something, then as long as they do not separate or abandon the transaction, another person should not enter into their transaction and should not offer a price above or below that which has been already offered when there is an indication that they are about to come to an agreement. Understand this well, and know that a kâfir is also included in this rule.

12. It is mentioned in a Hadith that a woman is either married because of her Dîn, her wealth or her beauty. Choose the one with Dîn, may your hands become dusty. In other words, a man may prefer a woman who is religiously inclined. While another may prefer one who is wealthy. While yet another may prefer one who is beautiful. However, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam says that one should choose a religiously inclined woman and that it is preferable to marry such a woman. However, if the circumstances are such that a woman is very pious but at the same time she is so ugly that one's nature does not find her acceptable and there is a fear that if he marries such a woman there will be no mutual understanding between them, and that he will be neglectful in fulfilling her rights, then in such a case he should not marry such a woman. "May your hands become dusty" is an Arabic mode of expression which is used on different occasions. In this context, it is meant to create a yearning and a desire for a pious woman.
13. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that the best wife is one whose mahr is very simple. That is, it is very easy for the man to fulfil her mahr. These days, there is the habit of specifying a very high mahr. People should abstain from this.
14. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that you should look for a good place for your sperms because a woman gives birth to children that resemble her brothers and sisters. In other words, marry a woman who comes from a pious and noble family because the children generally resemble the maternal relations. Although the father also has some influence over the child's resemblance, we learn from this Hadîth that the mother's influence is greater. If the wife is from a disreputable and irreligious family, the children who will be born will be similar to that family. But if this is not so, then the children who will be born will be pious and religious.
15. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that the greatest right that a woman has to fulfil is to her husband, and that the greatest right that he has to fulfil is to his mother. In other words, after the rights of Allawh and His Rasûl sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam the woman has a very great right to fulfil to her husband, so much so that the husband's rights supersede the rights of her parents. As for the man, after the rights of Allawh and His Rasûl sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam, the greatest right that he has to fulfil is to his mother. We learn from this that the right of the mother supersedes that of the father.
16. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that if anyone of you wishes to engage in sexual intercourse with his wife, he should recite the following du'â:
The virtue of this du'â is that if a child is conceived through this intercourse, shaytân will not be able to harm this child in any way.
17. There is a lengthy Hadîth in which Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam addressed 'Abdur Rahmân bin 'Auf radiyallâhu 'anhu asking him to have a walîmah even if it is with one sheep. In other words, even if you possess very little, you should spend. It is preferable to have the walîmah after engaging in sexual intercourse with one's bride. However, many 'ulamâ have permitted it immediately after the nikâh as well. It is mustahab to have a walîmah.

The Detestation of Divorce

1. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that of all the permissible actions, divorce is the most detestable in the sight of Allawh Ta'âlâ. The meaning of this is that divorce has been permitted at times of necessity. However, when there is no need, it is extremely detestable. The reason for this is that the purpose of marriage is to foster mutual understanding, mutual love, and comfort for the husband and wife. Divorce wipes out all these factors, shows ingratitude to the favours of Allawh Ta'âlâ, the husband and wife become distressed, and it results in mutual enmity. Based on this, it also results in enmity towards the wife, her family and her relatives. As far as possible, one should never ever intend to divorce one's wife. In all their dealings, the husband and wife should try and accommodate each other and live with love for each other. However, if there is no way that they can live together, there will be no harm in divorce. Understand this well.
2. It is mentioned in a Hadîth: "Marry and do not divorce (unnecessarily) because Allawh Ta'âlâ does not love those men who go around 'tasting' and those women who go around 'tasting'." In other words, Allawh Ta'âlâ does not like divorce to take place unnecessarily thereby resulting in the man entering into a second marriage and the woman entering into a second marriage. However, if there is a dire need, there will be no harm in this.
3. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that women should not be divorced except on account of immorality. This is because Allawh Ta'âlâ does not love a man who goes around 'tasting' and a woman who goes around 'tasting'. We learn from this that if there is any shortcoming in her purity and chastity, it will be permissible to divorce her. If there is any other similar reason, there will be no harm in divorcing.
4. It is mentioned in a Hadith that you should marry but do not divorce because by divorcing, the ('arsh) throne of Allawh Ta'âlâ begins to tremble.
5. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that shaytân places his throne on water and then sends out his armies in order to delude and distract people. From among all these armies of his, the closest to shaytân in rank and status is the one who was the most successful in spreading the most amount of mischief. From among these, one of them will come to shaytân and inform him: "I have caused so and so mischief". Shaytân will reply: "You have done nothing." (i.e. you have not really caused much mischief). From among them, another one comes and says: "I went to a particular person and did not leave him until I caused a separation between him and his wife." Upon hearing this, shaytân brings him close to him, embraces him and says: "You have indeed done a great job." In other words, shaytân's happiness is when husband and wife are separated. Therefore, as far as possible Muslims should not make shaytân happy.
6. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that the fragrance of jannah is harâm upon a woman who asks for a divorce without any real need. That is, she is committing a major sin. However, if she dies with 'Imân, she will eventually be entered into jannah after being punished for all her evil actions.
7. It is mentioned in a Hadîth that the muntazi'ât and the mukhtali'ât are actually munâfiqât. The muntazi'ât are women who tear themselves away from the control of their husbands by committing actions which cause the husbands to be displeased with them and thereby divorce them. As for the mukhtali'ât, they are women who ask for khula' without any real need. The meaning of munafiqât is that this trait is normally found in the hypocrites who expose a particular fact when in their hearts they conceal something else. Outwardly, nikâh is supposed to be forever, and here she is asking for separation! Such a woman is a sinner although she is not regarded as a kâfir.

A Few Masâ'il related to Divorce

1. When it becomes necessary to issue a divorce, there are three ways in doing so: (a) the most preferable method, (b) a good method, (c) a bid'ah and harâm method.

The most preferable method: is that the husband issues one divorce to his wife while she is pure, i.e. not experiencing hayd or nifâs. A further condition is that he must not have engaged in sexual intercourse with her in this entire period of her purity. He must not issue any other divorce till the end of the expiry of her 'iddah. The moment her 'iddah expires, the nikâh will come to an end and there is no need to issue any further divorce. This is because divorce has only been permitted at the time of extreme need. Accordingly, there is no need to issue several divorces.

The good method: is that the husband issues three divorces over a span of three periods of her purity. In addition to this, he should not engage in sexual intercourse with her during these three periods.

The bid'ah and harâm method: is that which is contrary to the above two methods, e.g. he issues three divorces in one sitting, he issues a divorce while his wife is in her hayd, he issues a divorce in her period of purity but he had already engaged in sexual intercourse with her in that very period of purity. In all these cases, although divorce will take place, he will be committing a sin for adopting such methods.

Understand all this very well. All the above situations (i.e. all the three methods) apply when sexual intercourse with the wife has taken place or they have at least met in privacy and solitude (the details of which have been mentioned in the relevant chapters). If they did not engage in sexual intercourse or did not meet in privacy and solitude, the rules are mentioned in the next mas'ala.

2. Once nikâh has been performed with a woman but they did not engage in sexual intercourse as yet, it is permissible to divorce such a wife irrespective of whether she is in her hayd or not. However, he should issue only one divorce.

BOOK XXX DEATH
1. When a person is about to die, make him lie down flat on his back. Place his feet towards the qiblah and raise his head so that his face could be towards the qiblah. Sit near him and recite the kalimah aloud so that by listening to you he will also commence reading. Do not order him to read the kalimah because this is a very difficult time and we do not know what he will utter.
2. The moment he recites the kalimah once, keep quiet and do not try to make him read it again and again until he passes away. Because the purpose of this is that the last words that are uttered by him are that of the kalimah. It is therefore not necessary that the kalimah be continuously recited until he passes away. However, if he starts talking of any worldly matter after having recited the kalimah, commence reciting the kalimah again. Once he recites it, keep quiet.
3. Once the breathing begins to stop, he starts taking quick breaths, the limbs get loose and he is unable to stand, the nose gets crooked and the temples begin to cave in, one should know that death has approached. At that time, the kalimah should be recited in a loud voice.
4. By reciting Surah Yaaseen, the severity of death decreases. This Surah should be recited by sitting near his head or anywhere else near him. If one cannot recite it oneself, one should ask someone else to recite it.
5. At that time, do not speak anything that will turn his attention towards the world because this is the time of leaving the world and presenting oneself in front of Allawh Ta'ala. Do such things and talk of such things that his heart turns away from the world and directs itself towards Allawh Ta'ala. In this lies full benefit for the dead person. To bring his family and children in front of him, or anyone else for whom he had a lot of love, or to talk of such things towards which his heart turns or whose love enters his heart is extremely detestable at such a time. If a person passes away with love for the world in his heart, then, Allawh forbid, it is a terrible death.
6. If at the time of death, he uttered some words of kufr, do not worry about it and do not announce it. Instead, think that due to the difficulty of death his mind is not normal and this therefore occurred. When one is not in one's senses, everything is forgiven. Continue making dua to Allawh Ta'ala for his salvation.
7. Once the person dies, straighten all his limbs. Close his mouth in the following way: take a cloth and tie it in such a way that it goes from below his chin and around both sides of his head. Thereafter, tie a knot so that his mouth does not open. Close his eyes and thereafter tie the toes of both his feet together so that his legs do not move about. Cover him with a sheet and thereafter, as far as possible, hasten towards his ghusl and kafan.
8. At the time of closing his mouth, recite the following dua:
Translation: "In the name of Allawh and on the creed, religion and faith of Rasulullah."
9. After he passes away, some incense should be burnt near him. A person upon whom ghusl is fard or a woman in her haid or nifaas should not sit near the dead person.
10. After a person dies, it is not be permissible to recite the Quran near him as long as he has not been given the ghusl.
Ghusl of the Deceased
1. Once all the preparations for the grave and kafan are complete and the deceased is about to be given a bath, a wooden bed or platform should be brought and incense sticks or any other type of perfume should be burnt around that wooden bed. After the incense is burnt for an odd number of times around the bed, lay the deceased person onto it and remove his clothing. Cover the area between his navel and knees with a piece of cloth so that this portion of his body remains covered.
2. If the place where he is being bathed is such that the water will flow away, then this will be good. If not, dig a hole under the wooden bed so that all the water will collect at that spot. If a hole was not dug and the water spread throughout the house, even then there is no sin in this. The object is that one should not have difficulty in walking about, and no one should slip and fall.
3. The method of bathing the deceased is as follows: First wash the private parts of the deceased. However, do not touch the private parts with your hands nor look at them. Instead, wrap your hands with a cloth and wash his private parts by inserting your hands under the cloth that was originally placed over the area between his navel and knees.
Thereafter, make wudu for him. However, do not gargle his mouth, do not pour water into his nose nor wash his hands upto his wrists. Instead, wash his face first, thereafter his hands upto his elbows, make masah of his head and then wash both his feet. It is also permissible to wet some cotton wool and cleanse his teeth, ear lobes, and nostrils. If the deceased was in a state of impurity or a woman was in her haid or nifaas, it will be obligatory to wash these parts in the way mentioned.
The nostrils, ears and mouth should be sealed with cotton wool so that water does not go inside at the time of wudu or ghusl. After making wudu for him, apply some soap or any other cleaning agent to his head and cleanse it. Thereafter, make the deceased lie on his left side and wash him with water that has been made hot with berry leaves (or any other cleansing agent). This water should be poured three times from head to toe until it reaches his left side. Thereafter, make him lie on his right side and pour water in the same way three times. Use such an amount of water that will reach his right side.
Having done this, make him sit up while leaning him back slightly and rub his stomach gently. If any stool or urine comes out, wipe it and wash it off. The expulsion of urine or stool will not affect his wudu and ghusl in any way and there is no need to repeat this. Thereafter, make him lie on his left side again and pour camphor water three times from head to toe. Thereafter, wipe his body with a cloth or towel and make him wear his kafan.
4. If there is no water that has been made hot with berry leaves, ordinary warm water will suffice. He should be washed three times in the same way mentioned above. Very hot water should not be used to bathe the deceased.
This method of bathing the deceased is the sunnah method. If someone does not bathe the deceased three times in this way but washes his entire body once only; even then the fard will be fulfilled.
5. Once the deceased is placed on the kafan, apply perfume to the head. If the deceased is a male, apply perfume to his beard as well. Thereafter, apply camphor to the forehead, nose, both palms, both knees, and both the feet. Some people apply perfume to the kafan, and even place a piece of cotton wool that has been immersed into perfume into the ears. All this is based on ignorance. Do not do anything beyond what the Shariah has mentioned.
6. Do not comb the hair, clip the nails nor cut the hair from anywhere. Leave all these things as they are.
7. If a man passes away and there are no men to give him ghusl, it is not permissible for any woman except his wife to give him ghusl. It will not be permissible even if the other woman is his mahram. If even his wife is not present, tayammum should be made for him. However, his body should not be touched with the bare hands. Instead, wear a glove and then make tayammum.

8. If the husband dies, it is permissible for the wife to give him ghusl and make him wear the kafan. But if the wife dies, it is not permissible for the husband to touch her with his bare hands (nor is it permissible for him to give her ghusl). However, it is permissible for him to look at her and touch her while she is covered.
9. A woman who is in her haid or nifaas should not give ghusl to the deceased. To do so is makruh and not permissible.
10. It is preferable for the closest relative to give the ghusl. If she cannot give ghusl, any other religious minded woman could do so.
11. If the person who is giving ghusl notices some blemish on the deceased, he should not mention it to anyone. If, Allawh forbid, the deceased's face became distorted or blackened at the time of death, the person giving ghusl should not even mention this to anyone nor should he announce it. All this is not permissible. However, if the deceased used to commit sins openly, e.g. if she was a dancer, a musician or a prostitute, then it will be permissible to mention these things. This is so that others will abstain from such things and repent to Allawh Ta'ala.
12. If a person drowns and dies in the sea, it is fard to give him a ghusl once he is taken out of the water,. Drowning in the water will not suffice for his ghusl. This is because giving ghusl to the deceased is fard on those who are alive and they did not take any part in his drowning. However, if at the time of taking him out, they make intention of ghusl and move him about in the water, the ghusl will be complete. Similarly, if any water falls onto the deceased or water reaches him in some other way, it will still be fard to give him ghusl.
13. If only a person's head is found somewhere, he will not be given ghusl. Instead, he will be buried just as he is. And if more than half of a person's body is found, it will be necessary to give him ghusl irrespective of whether he is found with his head or without. If it is not more than half but exactly half, then he will only be given ghusl if he is found with his head. If not, he will not be given ghusl. If less than half is found, ghusl will not be given irrespective of whether he is found with his head or not.
14. If a deceased is found somewhere and it is not known whether he is a Muslim or a kaafir, ghusl will be given to him and salaat will also be performed over him if he is found in Dar ul-Islam.
15. If the corpses of Muslims are found among the corpses of the kuffaar and they cannot be distinguished from each other, ghusl will be given to all of them. If they can be distinguished, the corpses of the Muslims will be separated and ghusl will be given to them. Ghusl will not be given to the corpses of the kuffaar.
16. If a close friend of a Muslim is a kaafir and he passes away, his corpse should be given to those who are of the same religion. If no one can be found or they refuse to accept his body, then due to necessity, it will be permissible for that Muslim to give him ghusl. However, this ghusl should not be given in the normal sunnah method. That is, he should not be given wudu, his head should not be washed thoroughly nor should camphor be applied to his body. Instead, he should be washed just as any other impure object is washed. By washing a kaafir, he does not become pure. So much so, that if someone offers salaat over him, that salaat will not be valid.
17. If rebels or highway robbers are killed, ghusl should not be given to the dead among them as long as they were killed in the actual battle.
18. If one who renounces Islam (murtad) is killed, ghusl should not be given to him. If the followers of that religion which he accepted ask for his body, it should not be given to them.
19. If a deceased person is given tayammum because of a lack of water and later water is found, ghusl should be given to him.

Kafan for the Deceased

1. It is sunnah to enshroud a woman with five pieces of cloth. That is, a shirt, loincloth, a head band, a sheet and a chest band. The loincloth should be from head to toe. The sheet should be slightly longer than that. The shirt should be from the neck till the feet. However, it should not have any side panels or sleeves. The head band should be 180cm x 90cm. The chest band should be as wide as the distance from the chest to the knees. It should be so long that it could be closed.
2. If anyone is not enshrouded in five cloths, but only three cloths, i.e. the loincloth, sheet, and head band, this is also permissible and this kafan will be sufficient. It is makruh and a sin to use less than three cloths. However, if there is a severe need or no other alternative, then to use less than three will also be permissible.
3. If the chest band extends from the chest till the navel, it will also be permissible. But it is preferable to have it till the thighs.
4. The kafan should be first smoked with some incense an odd number of times. Thereafter, the deceased should be enshrouded.
5. The method of enshrouding the deceased is as follows: firstly spread out the sheet, then the loin cloth above it, and thereafter, the shirt above it. Thereafter, lay the deceased on this and make her wear the shirt. The hair of the head should be parted and placed above the sheet on her chest. One part of the hair should be placed on the left hand side and the other on the right. Thereafter, place the head band over the head and hair. It should not be tied nor wrapped. Thereafter, wrap the loin cloth: first the left side and then the right side. Thereafter, tie the chest band. And then wrap the sheet: first the left side and then the right side. Thereafter, tie the kafan on the head side and feet side with a strip of cloth. Also tie another strip of cloth around the stomach so that the kafan does not get loose on the way.
6. If the chest band is tied after the head band but before wrapping the loincloth, this is also permissible. It will also be permissible if it is tied after all the cloths.
7. Once the kafan is completed, send the deceased away so that the men could offer the salaat and complete the burial.
8. It is also permissible for women to offer the janaazah salaat. However, since this does not happen, we will not mention the mas'alas concerning the salaat and the burial.
9. It is not permissible to place one's will or lineage of a saint in the kafan or the grave. Similarly, it is not permissible to write the kalimah or any dua on the kafan or the deceased's forehead with camphor or any pen. However, it is permissible to place the cover of the Ka'bah or the scarf (or any other clothing) of one's spiritual guide as a source of barakah.
10. A child that dies a few moments after birth or immediately after birth will also be given ghusl and kafan in the same way as mentioned above. Janaazah salaat will also be offered over him and he will also be buried in the normal way. This child should also be named.
11. A child that is stillborn, and there are no signs of life at the time of birth will also be given ghusl in the normal way. However, do not enshroud him in the normal kafan. Instead, wrap him in a piece of cloth and bury him. He should also be given a name.
12. If a woman aborts (miscarries) and the child is not formed as yet, i.e. it's hands, feet, face, nose, etc. have not formed as yet, it should not be given a bath nor a kafan. Instead, it should be wrapped in a piece of cloth and buried in a hole. If any of it's limbs are formed, the same rule will apply as that of a baby that is stillborn. That is, it should be named and given ghusl, but it should not be given the normal kafan nor should salaat be offered over it. Instead, it should be wrapped in a cloth and buried.
13. At the time of delivery, only the child's head appeared. At that time it was alive. Thereafter, it died. The same rule will apply as that of a baby that is still-born. However, if a major portion of the baby appeared and it passed away after that, it will be regarded as if it was born alive. If it was born from the head section, then upto the chest will be regarded as "a major portion". But if it is born the other way, then upto the navel.
14. If a young girl who is close to the age of puberty (but has not matured as yet) passes away, then the five pieces of cloth for the kafan which are sunnah for a mature woman will be sunnah for her kafan as well. If five pieces are not available, three pieces will suffice. In other words, the rules that apply to a mature woman will apply to a young immature girl as well. The difference is that these rules are emphasised for the mature woman while they are preferable for the young immature woman.
15. Five pieces of cloth are also preferable for the girl who is very young, i.e. not even close to maturity. Using two pieces will also be permissible, i.e. the loincloth and sheet.
16. If a boy passes away and you have to give him ghusl and kafan, then bathe him in the same way as mentioned above. The same method of kafan will also apply. The only difference is that the kafan for a woman consists of five pieces of cloth while the kafan for a man consists of three pieces: a sheet, a loincloth and a shirt.
17. If there are only two pieces of cloth for a man, i.e. a sheet and a loincloth, this will suffice. It is makruh to use less than two cloths. But if there is a necessity or there is no alternative, it will not be makruh.
18. The sheet which is placed over the janaazah, i.e. on the bed, is not included in the kafan. Kafan only consists of the pieces which we mentioned above.

19. The kafan and burial of a person should be done in that very city or town where he passes away. It is not good to move him to another place. However, there is no harm in moving him to a place which is only one or two kilometres away.
20. If a limb or half of the body of a person is found without the head, it is sufficient to wrap it up in a piece of cloth. If the head is also with half of the body, or more than half of the body is without the head, then the normal kafan should be given.
21. If a person's grave opens or his corpse is exhumed due to some reason, it is necessary to give him the normal kafan. This is on condition that the body has not disintegrated. If it has disintegrated, it will suffice to merely wrap it in a cloth (there is no need for the normal kafan).

The Janaazah Salaat

The janaazah salaat is in reality a dua unto Allawh Ta'ala for the deceased person.
1. All the conditions and prerequisites that have been mentioned for salaat will also apply for the janaazah salaat. However, there is one additional condition for the janaazah salaat. That is, one must have knowledge of the person's death. The person who is not informed of this will be excused and janaazah salaat will not be necessary on him.
2. There are two types of conditions for the validity of janaazah salaat: the first type is that which is connected to those offering the janaazah salaat. These conditions have been mentioned in the chapters dealing with all the other types of salaat. That is: purity, concealing one's private area, facing the qiblah, intention. However, "time" is not a pre-requisite for this salaat. Furthermore, if one feels that one will miss it, one can make tayammum, e.g. the janaazah has commenced and the person feels that if he makes wudu he will miss the salaat. In such a case he can make tayammum, as opposed to other salaats, because if one fears that the time is about to expire, it is not permissible for him to make tayammum.
3. These days, some people offer the janaazah salaat with their shoes on. For them it is necessary that the spot on which they are standing is pure, and that their shoes are also pure. If they remove their shoes and stand on them, then it is necessary that only the shoes be pure. If people are not mindful of this, their salaat will not be valid.

The second type of conditions are those that are connected to the deceased. There are six such conditions:

The First Condition: The deceased has to be a Muslim. Salaat over a kaafir or murtad is not valid. Even if a Muslim is an open sinner or a bid'ati, salaat over him will be valid. However, there is an exception for those who rebel against the ruler who is on truth or those who are highway robbers. This is on the condition that they are killed while fighting against the ruler. If they die after the fight or die a natural death, janaazah salaat will be offered over them.

Similarly, the person who kills his father or mother and he himself dies while being punished for this, salaat will not be offered over him. Salaat is not offered over these people as a way of punishment. Salaat over a person who commits suicide is valid.
4. If the father or mother of an immature child is a Muslim, this child will also be regarded as a Muslim. Salaat will be offered over him.
5. A mayyit or deceased person is he who is born alive and then dies. If a child is born dead, salaat over him is not valid.

The Second Condition: The body and kafan of the deceased must be pure from najaasat-e-haqiqi and najaasat-e-hukmi. However, if najaasat-e-haqiqi comes out from his body after giving him the ghusl, and his entire body becomes impure, there is no harm in this. The salaat will be valid.
6. Salaat is not valid over a deceased person if he is not pure from najaasat-e-hukmi, i.e. ghusl was not given to him, or in the case where ghusl was not possible he was not given tayammum. However, if it is not possible to purify him, e.g. he was buried without being given ghusl or tayammum and the grave has already been filled with sand, then it will be permissible to offer salaat over his grave. If salaat was offered over a person who was not given ghusl or tayammum and he was buried thereafter, and later it came to be known that ghusl was not given to him, then the salaat will have to be repeated over his grave. This is because the first salaat was not valid. Since it is not possible to give him ghusl, the (second) salaat will be valid.
7. If a Muslim is buried without salaat being offered over him, salaat will be offered over his grave as long as there is no possibility of his corpse disintegrating or decomposing. If one feels that his body has disintegrated, salaat should not be offered over his grave. The time that it takes for a body to disintegrate differs from place to place. It is therefore not possible to specify an exact time - this is the most correct opinion in this regard. However, there are those who have specified 3 days, 10 days and one month.
8. It is not necessary for the spot on which the deceased is placed to be pure. If the deceased is placed on a pure bed, or if the bed is impure, or if the deceased is placed on an impure piece of ground without being placed on a bed, then in all these cases there is difference of opinion. According to some ulama, it is a prerequisite for the spot on which the deceased is placed to be pure. If not, the salaat will not be valid. According to others, this is not a prerequisite. Salaat will therefore be valid.

The Third Condition: Those parts of the body which are wajib to be covered have to be covered. If the deceased is completely naked, salaat over him will not be permissible.

The Fourth Condition: The deceased has to be placed in front of those offering salaat over him. If he is placed behind them, salaat will not be valid.

The Fifth Condition: The deceased or the thing upon which he is placed, has to be placed on the ground. If salaat is being offered over the deceased while he is being carried by some people, or while he is placed on a vehicle or an animal, this salaat will not be valid.

The Sixth Condition: The deceased has to be present at that place. If he is not present, salaat will not be valid.

9. Two things are fard in the janaazah salaat: (i) To say Allawhu Akbar four times. Here, each takbeer takes the place of one rakaat. (ii) To stand and offer the janaazah salaat. Just as it is fard to stand up and offer the fard and wajib salaats if the person has no valid excuse, so is the case over here. The different valid excuses have already been mentioned in the chapters on salaat.
10. There is no ruku, sajdah, qa'dah, etc. in this salaat.
11. Three things are sunnah in the janaazah salaat: (i) To praise Allawh Ta'ala. (ii) To send salutations to Rasulullah sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam. (iii) To make dua for the deceased. Jama'at is not a condition for janaazah salaat. Even if one person offers the janaazah salaat, this fard duty will be fulfilled. This is irrespective of whether the person offering the salaat is a male, a female, a mature person or an immature person.
12. However, there is a greater need for a jama'at because this is a dua for the deceased. For a few people to get together and ask Allawh Ta'ala for a certain thing has a special significance in attracting the mercy and acceptance of Allawh Ta'ala.
13. The sunnah and mustahab method of janaazah salaat is as follows: The deceased should be placed in the front and the imam should stand in line with his chest. Everyone should make the following intention:

!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Translation: "I intend offering the janaazah salaat for the pleasure of Allawh Ta'ala and as a dua for the deceased."

After making this intention, he should raise both hands upto the ears just as he does for the takbeer-e-tahreemah. When doing this he should say Allawhu Akbar and thereafter tie his hands just as he does for any other salaat. He should then recite the thanaa'. Thereafter, he should say Allawhu Akbar again but he should not raise his hands. He should then recite the durood. It is preferable to recite the same durood that is recited in salaat. He should again say Allawhu Akbar without raising the hands. After this takbeer, he should make dua for the deceased. If the deceased is a mature male or female, the following dua should be made:

!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Translation: "O Allawh! Forgive our living and dead, present and absent, big and small, men and women. O Allawh! Whoever among us is kept alive by You, keep him alive on Islam, and whoever You give death, let him die on Imaan."

In some Ahadeeth, this dua has also been mentioned:

!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

It is better if both these duas are recited. In fact, Allamah Shaami rahmatullahi alayh, in his book Radd ul-Muhtaar, has written both these duas as one. Apart from these two, other duas have also been related in the Ahadeeth. Our jurists have also related these duas. One could therefore choose whichever dua one wishes.

If the deceased is an immature boy, the following dua should be recited:
!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
Translation: "O Allawh! Make him a source of happiness for us. And make him a reward and a treasure for us. And make him an intercessor for us and one whose intercession is accepted."
If the deceased is an immature girl, the same dua should be recited with the following changes: in all three places, instead of reading
this should be read
!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
and instead of
!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
this should be read.
Once this dua has been recited, Allawhu Akbar should be said once more without raising the hands. After this takbeer, the salaam should be made just as it is made for any other salaat. There is no at-tahiyyaat nor any recitation of the Quran in this salaat.
14. The janaazah salaat is the same for the imam and muqtadi. The only difference is that the imam will make the takbeers and the salaam in a loud voice while the muqtadi will make them softly. The remainder of the things, i.e. the thanaa', durood and dua, will be made softly by the muqtadi as well as the imam.
15. It is mustahab to make three saffs for the janaazah salaat. So much so that if there are seven people, one of them will be made the imam, there will be three people in the first saff, two in the second saff, and one person in the last saff.
16. Janaazah salaat becomes invalid by the very things which make other salaats invalid. The only difference is that by laughing aloud, one's wudu will not break. And if a woman stands in line with a man, the salaat will not become invalid.
17. It is makruh-e-tahrimi to offer janaazah salaat in a musjid which has been built for the five daily salaats, the jumu'ah salaat or the eid salaats. This is irrespective of whether the janaazah is offered inside the musjid or the janaazah is placed outside whilst the people are standing inside the musjid. However, janaazah salaat will not be makruh in a musjid which has been built specifically for this purpose.
18. It is makruh to delay the janaazah salaat with the purpose of attracting a larger crowd.
19. It is not permissible to sit down or sit on any vehicle and offer janaazah salaat if there is no valid excuse.
20. If there are several janaazahs to be offered, it is better to offer each one individually. However, it is permissible to offer one janaazah salaat for all the janaazahs. In such a case, a saff for all the janaazahs should be made. A good method of doing this is that each janaazah should be placed next to the other in such a way that all their feet are on one side, and their heads the other side. This method is preferable because all their chests will be in line with the imam. And it is sunnah for the imam to stand in this way.
21. If the janaazahs are of different types, their saff should be arranged in this way: the janaazahs of all the men should be placed near the imam, thereafter the boys', thereafter the mature women's, and thereafter the girls'.
22. If a person joins the janaazah at such a time that a few takbeers were made prior to his arrival, he will be regarded as a masbuq for the takbeers which he missed. Upon reaching the janaazah salaat, he should not immediately join in as he normally does for other salaats. Instead, he should wait for the takbeer of the imam. When the imam makes the takbeer, he should also do so. This takbeer will be regarded as his takbeer-e-tahreemah. When the imam makes his salaam, this person should complete the takbeers which he missed. There is no need for him to recite anything.
If a person reaches at such a time that the imam has already made the fourth takbeer, then with regard to this fourth takbeer, he will not be regarded as a masbuq. He should immediately make the takbeer and join the salaat before the imam can make salaam. On the completion of the salaat, he should repeat all the takbeers which he missed.
23. If a person was present at the time of takbeer-e-tahreemah or for any of the other takbeers and was even ready to join the salaat, but did not join due to laziness or some other reason, then he should immediately make the takbeer and join the salaat. He should not wait for the next takbeer of the imam. He will not have to repeat the takbeer for which he was present (but did not make) as long as he makes it before the imam can make the next takbeer. He must complete this takbeer even though he did not make it simultaneously with the imam.
24. If the masbuq begins to complete the takbeers which he missed, and he fears that if he will recite the dua he will get delayed and the janaazah will be carried away from the front, then he should not recite the dua.
25. If a person becomes a laahiq for a janaazah salaat, the same rules as for the other salaats will apply to him.
26. The most worthy person for the imamaat of janaazah salaat is the ruler of the time even if there are more pious people than him who are present over there. If he is not present, then his deputy, i.e. the one who is appointed by him, will be the most worthy even if there are others who are more pious than him. If he is not present, then the judge of the city. If he is not present, then his deputy. In the presence of these people, it is not permissible to appoint anyone else as the imam without their permission. It is wajib to appoint these people as the imam. If any of these people are not present, the most worthy will be the imam of the area. This is on the condition that there isn't anyone more qualified than him from among the relatives of the deceased person. Or else, those relatives of the deceased who have the right to succeed him, have the right of becoming imam. Or that person whom they give permission to. If anyone who is not worthy of imamaat, makes imamaat without the permission of the relatives, then they have the right to repeat the salaat. So much so, that if the deceased is already buried, they could offer the salaat over the grave until such time that the body has not started to disintegrate or decompose.
27. If a person who is worthy of imamaat, makes imamaat without the permission of the relatives, then the relatives cannot repeat the salaat. Similarly, if the relative of the deceased performed the salaat in the absence of the ruler or his deputies, then the ruler does not have the right to repeat the salaat. In fact, even if the relatives offer the salaat in the presence of the ruler, the ruler does not have the choice to repeat the salaat. This is despite the relatives getting the sin of not appointing the ruler. Because to appoint the ruler is wajib, as mentioned previously.
In short, it is not permissible to offer one janaazah several times. This is only permissible for the relatives if the janaazah was offered without their permission by a person who is not eligible to do so.

The Burial

1. It is fard-e-kifaayah to bury the deceased just as it is fard-e-kifaayah to give him ghusl and offer salaat over him.
2. Once salaat is offered over the deceased, he should immediately be carried to the grave which has been dug up for him.
3. If the deceased is a small baby or slightly bigger, he should be carried by the hands, i.e. one person should carry him with both his hands and thereafter pass him over to the next person. In this way, he should be continuously carried from person to person. If the deceased is an elderly person, he should be placed and carried on a cot or something similar to it. It should be carried by four persons, one at each corner. This cot should be lifted and placed on the shoulders. However, it is makruh to carry it on the shoulders in such a way as one carries luggage on one's shoulders. Similarly, it is also makruh to take the deceased by placing him on an animal or vehicle without any valid excuse. If there is a valid reason, it will not be makruh to do so, e.g. the grave yard is very far.
4. The mustahab method of carrying the deceased is as follows: First lift the front right leg of the bier and place it on the right shoulder and walk for at least ten steps. Thereafter place the back right leg of the bier onto the right shoulder and walk for at least ten steps. Thereafter, place the front left leg of the bier onto the left shoulder and thereafter the left back leg onto the left shoulder, and walk for at least ten steps. In this way, one would have walked at least forty steps when all four corners are added.
5. It is sunnah to walk briskly when carrying the deceased. But it should not be so fast that the deceased begins to move about and is thereby unsettled.

6. It is makruh for those who accompany the janaazah to sit down before the janaazah can be placed onto the ground. However, there is no harm in sitting down if there is some necessity.
7. If those who have not been accompanying the janaazah are sitting somewhere, then upon seeing the janaazah they should not stand up.
8. It is mustahab for those who are accompanying the janaazah to walk behind the janaazah. However, there is no harm in walking ahead of the janaazah. This will become makruh if everyone begins walking in front of the janaazah. Similarly, it is makruh to move in front of the janaazah while in a vehicle.
9. It is mustahab for those accompanying the janaazah to go on foot. If they are in any vehicle, they should move behind the janaazah.
10. It is makruh for those accompanying the janaazah to make any dua or zikr in a loud voice.
11. The depth of the grave should be at least half the height of the person. It should not be more than his height. The length of the grave should be according to his height. The incised-grave is better than the trench-grave. However, if the ground is very soft and there is a fear of the grave collapsing, the incised-grave should not be dug.
12. If the incised-grave cannot be dug, it is also permissible to place the deceased in a box irrespective of whether the box is of wood, stone or steel. However, it is preferable to spread some sand in the bottom of the box.
13. Once the grave is ready, the deceased should be lowered into the grave from the direction of the qiblah. The method of this is that the deceased should be placed towards the qiblah, and those who are going to lower him should stand facing the qiblah. They should then lift the deceased and lower him into the grave.
14. It is not sunnah to have an odd number of people to place the deceased into the grave. Four people had lowered Rasulullah sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam into his grave.
15. At the time of placing the deceased, it is mustahab to recite:
!!
16. After placing the deceased into the grave, it is mustahab to turn him with his right side facing the qiblah.
17. After placing the deceased into the grave, those strings which were used to tie both ends of the kafan should be loosened.
18. The deceased should then be covered with unbaked bricks or straw. It is makruh to cover him with baked bricks or strips of timber. However, if the ground is very soft and there is a fear of the grave collapsing, it will be permissible to place baked bricks or strips of timber, or even to place him into a box.
19. At the time of placing a woman in the grave, it is mustahab to cover the grave with a sheet. If there is a fear that the body of the deceased will get exposed, it will be wajib to cover the grave with a sheet.
20. Covering the grave with a sheet should not be done when placing a man in the grave. But if there is an excuse, e.g. it is raining or snowing or the sun's rays are very intense, then it will be permissible to do so.
21. Once the deceased has been placed in the grave, whatever soil that came out when digging that grave should be replaced into it. It is makruh to put too much of extra soil to the extent that it is more than one span in height. But if it is not too much, it will not be makruh.
22. It is mustahab to start from the head side when throwing sand over the grave. Each person should throw the soil with both his hands. The first time that he throws, he should read:
!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
the second time he should read:
!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
and the third time he should read:
!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
23. After the burial, it is mustahab to stand near the grave for a little while, make dua of forgiveness for the deceased, or to recite the Quran and send the rewards of this to the deceased.
24. After covering the grave with soil, it is mustahab to sprinkle a little water over it.
25. The deceased should not be buried in a house irrespective of whether he is big or small. This is because this is a speciality of the Prophets alayhimus salaam.
26. It is makruh to make a square grave. It is mustahab to have it in a mound, like the shape of a camel's back. It's height should be equal to one span or slightly higher.
27. It is makruh-e-tahrimi to have the grave very much higher than one span. It is makruh to plaster or cement the grave.
28. It is haraam to construct a dome over the grave for the purpose of decoration. If this is done in order to strengthen the grave, then it will be makruh. It is permissible to write something on the grave of the deceased as a means of remembrance. This is on the condition that there is some necessity, if not, it will not be permissible. But these days, since people have corrupted their beliefs and habits, then due to these harms even those things that are permissible become prohibited. Therefore, things of this sort will not be permissible in any way. Whatever needs or excuses they may offer are nothing but a delusion of their desires, and they themselves know this.

Rules Concerning the Martyr

Although the martyr is also a deceased person outwardly, all the rules related to a normal deceased person do not apply to him. Apart from this, there are many virtues of a martyr. It was therefore considered appropriate to outline the rules concerning him separately. Several types of martyrs have been mentioned in the Hadith. Some ulama have compiled entire books in which all the different types of martyrs are mentioned. But the martyr whose rules we wish to outline over here are specifically for that martyr who complies with the following conditions:
1. He has to be a Muslim. No type of martyrdom whatsoever can be established for those who are not Muslims.
2. He has to be mature and in his senses. If a person is killed while he is in a state of madness or not mature as yet, the rules which we are going to discuss later will not apply to him.
3. He has to be pure from hadath-e-akbar. If a person is killed while he is in a state of hadath-e-akbar, or a woman is killed while she is in her haid or nifaas, these rules of a martyr will not apply to them.
4. He has to be killed out of innocence. If a person is not killed out of innocence, instead he is killed because of a crime which he committed against the Shariah, or he was not killed but died a natural death, the rules of the martyr will not apply to him.
5. If he is killed by a Muslim or a Zimmi, then an additional condition is that he must be killed by an instrument that is used for killing. If a Muslim or Zimmi kills him by any other object such as a stone, the rules of a martyr will not apply to him. Steel is regarded as an object for killing even if it is not sharp. If a person is killed by the kuffaar, renegades, highway robbers, or he is found killed in the battle field, then this condition of being killed by an "instrument of killing" will not apply. So much so, that if they kill him with a stone, he will still be regarded as a martyr. In fact, even the prerequisite of them being the killers is not necessary. Even if they were the cause of his death, i.e. even if such conditions prevail which lead to his death, the rules of a martyr will apply to him. Examples which illustrate this are as follows:
(i) A kaafir trampled over a Muslim with his animal while this kaafir was riding the animal.
(ii) A Muslim was riding his animal when a kaafir gave chase to this animal. As a result of this, the Muslim fell off his animal and died.
(iii) A kaafir set fire to a Muslim's house or possessions as a result of which this Muslim got burnt and died.
6. As a punishment of that killing, no monetary compensation must be stipulated by the Shariah from the beginning. Instead, qisaas must be made wajib. If any monetary compensation has been stipulated, the rules of a martyr will not apply to that person who has been killed. This is even if he has been killed wrongfully. Examples which illustrate this are as follows:
(i) A Muslim kills another Muslim with an instrument that is not normally used for killing.

(ii) A Muslim kills another Muslim with an instrument of killing, but kills him mistakenly, e.g. he was pointing at an animal or some other target but the bullet hits some Muslim.
(iii) A person is found murdered in any place other than the battle field and his killer is not known.
Since monetary compensation becomes wajib in all these cases and qisaas does not become wajib, therefore the rules of a martyr will not apply over here. The condition of monetary compensation being stipulated from the very beginning has been attached because: if qisaas had been stipulated in the beginning and due to some reason it was forgiven and in place of it some monetary compensation was stipulated later, then in such a case the rules of a martyr will apply. Examples of this are as follows:
(a) A person was killed intentionally and wrongfully with an instrument of killing. However, a monetary compromise was made between the killer and the inheritors of the person killed. In such a case the rules of a martyr will apply because from the beginning qisaas was wajib and not any monetary compensation. This monetary compensation only became wajib after a compromise was reached.
(b) A father kills his son with a weapon. In such a case, qisaas became wajib from the beginning and not any monetary compensation. However, out of respect for the father, he was excused from qisaas and instead, a monetary compensation became wajib. The rules of a martyr will apply in this context.
7. After being injured, the person must not conduct any affair of this world which shows ease and comfort such as eating, drinking, sleeping, taking medication, buying and selling, etc. Nor should he live to the extent of one salaat time while he is conscious and in his senses. Nor should he be carried from the battle field while he is in a state of consciousness. However, if he is carried out of fear of being trampled upon by animals, there is no harm in this. If a person talks considerably after being injured, he will not be regarded as a martyr because to talk a lot is an attribute of those who are living. Similarly, if a person makes a bequest, he will be out of the category of a martyr if this bequest is connected to a worldly matter. But if this bequest is made for a Deeni matter, he will be regarded as a martyr.
If a person is martyred in the battle field and he does any of the above acts, he will be excluded from the category of a martyr. If not, he will not be excluded from this category. However, if he commits any of the above acts while the battle is still carrying on, he will be regarded as a martyr.
1. The martyr who fulfils all the above conditions will not be given ghusl nor will any blood be cleansed from his body. He will be buried as he is.
2. The second rule is that the clothes which he was wearing will not be removed from his body. However, if his clothes are less than the stipulated number for the kafan, more clothes could be added in order to complete the stipulated number. In the same way, if he is wearing more than the stipulated number, the extra pieces of clothing should be removed. If he is wearing clothing which is not good enough to serve as kafan, such as leather or fur, these should also be removed. But if he is not wearing anything else, these should not be removed.
3. His hat, shoes, weapons will have to be removed under all conditions.
4. All the other rules that are applicable to the normal deceased person, such as salaat, etc. will also apply to the martyr.
5. If any of the above conditions are not met with in a martyr, he will be given ghusl and will also be made to wear a new kafan.

General Rules of Janaazah

1. If one forgets to place the deceased towards the qiblah when burying him and only remembers this after burying him and filling the grave with sand, then it is not permissible to dig up the grave. However, if only the wooden strips have been placed and no soil has been thrown as yet, it will be permissible to remove the timber and place him towards the qiblah.
2. It is makruh-e-tahrimi for women to accompany the janaazah.
3. It is prohibited for wailing women and those women who give lectures to accompany the janaazah.
4. It is a bid'ah to give the adhaan while lowering the deceased into the grave.
5. If the imam makes more than four takbeers in the janaazah salaat, it is not permissible for the muqtadis of the Hanafi mazhab to follow him. Instead, they should remain standing silently. When the imam makes the salaam, they should also make salaam. However, if they do not hear the extra takbeers from the imam, but from the mukabbir, then the muqtadis should follow him and regard each takbeer as the takbeer-e-tahreemah. They should think that the four takbeers before this which the mukabbir had made were wrong and that the imam only made the takbeer-e-tahreemah now.
6. If a person passes away in a ship and the coast is so far away that there is a fear that the corpse will begin to decompose, then in such a case ghusl and kafan should be given to him and thereafter he should be lowered into the sea. But if the coast is not so far and there is hope of reaching land soon, the corpse should be left aside and upon reaching land, it should be buried in the ground.
7. If a person does not know the dua that is recited in the janaazah salaat, it is sufficient for him to recite the following dua:

Recite Surah Yaseen at the time of death and make the person lie on his right hand side facing the qiblah if this will not cause any pain to him. If not, leave him as he is. It is also permissible to make him lie flat on his back with his feet pointing towards the qiblah and his head slightly elevated. The person sitting nearby should recite the kalimah in an audible voice. He should not ask the person to recite the kalimah because it is possible that he will refuse.

On passing away, take a broad strip of cloth or band and tie it from below his chin and above his head. Thereafter, close his eyes. Place the large toes of each foot together and tie them with a strip of cloth. Place his hands at his sides and not on his chest. Thereafter, inform the people of his death. Hasten towards his burial. First of all, make the arrangements for the grave and thereafter request for the following items for the kafan:

1. Two water-pots. (if there are utensils in the house, there is no need for this)
2. A can to pour the water.
3. A wooden bed or platform which is generally kept in the musjid.
4. Lobaan (a kind of incense).
5. Cotton wool.
6. Gilly flower (or any other fragrant flower).
7. Camphor.
8. Strips of timber or sticks for the grave, the length of which will be according to the measurements of the grave.
9. A mat made of palm leaves according to the measurements of the grave.
10. Kafan. The kafan should be made in the following manner: for men, take a stick that is equal in length of the deceased person. Make a mark on the stick in line with his shoulders. Place a piece of cotton in line with his chest and take it around his body until one end of the cotton goes round and meets the other end of the cotton. Cut off the cotton and keep that piece aside. Thereafter, take a cloth that is as wide as or more or less the same as the length of that piece of cotton. If the width of the material is less than the cotton, complete it by joining another piece of material. Take some sheeting and cut out a piece of cloth that is the same length as that of the stick. This is called the loincloth. Take another sheet that is the same width as the previous one and cut out another piece of cloth that is about a quarter metre longer than the loin cloth. This is called the lifafah or sheet. Take another piece of cloth that is as wide as the width of the deceased. Place one end of it on the mark on the stick till the end of the stick and cut double this length. Hold both the ends of this cloth together and cut out a circle at the opposite end which will be large enough for the head of the person to go through. This is known as the shirt. This is not used for a woman. Apart from this, there are two other pieces of cloth (for a woman), one is the chest band and the other, the head band. The chest band extends from below the arm-pits till the knees. It will be as wide as the piece of cotton that was originally used for measuring. The head band will be about one and three quarter metres in length and about three quarters of a metre in width. These are the masnun measurements for the kafan. There are certain things which are connected to the kafan. They are as follows:

(i) The tahband should be about 18 centimetres longer than the width of the body. For a large person, one and quarter metre in length will be sufficient. And for the width from the navel to the calf, about 80 centimetres will be sufficient. There has to be two pieces of this.

(ii) The gloves should be approximately 33 centimetres by 16 centimetres. There should be two of these as well.

(iii) The upper semi-circular covering of the bier of a woman who is big in body should be about three and half metres by two metres.

(iv) Preparations for the kafan and other items should be made together with the preparations for ghusl.

(v) We now feel it relevant to enumerate the kafan in the form of a table so that it will be easier to understand:

!!

Note: For the kafan of a man, approximately 10 metres of material is required. For the woman, together with the upper covering of the bier, approximately 21 metres is required. The tahband and gloves are not included in this. The kafan for a child should be calculated as explained previously.

The Method of Ghusl and Kafan

Add two handfuls of berry leaves in a water-pot and heat the water. Thereafter pour this water into two water-pots. Dig two holes on either side lengthwise where the deceased will be placed. (This will not be necessary if there is a drain through which all the water will flow away. The wooden platform could be placed near this drain.) Place the wooden platform in the direction where the two holes were dug and smoke it three times with incense. Thereafter, place the deceased onto this platform and remove his clothing. Place the tahband over his private area and remove his clothing from underneath the tahband.

Rub the stomach gently and cleanse his private parts with three to five lumps of sand irrespective of whether any impurities come out or not. Thereafter wash his private parts with water. However, you should wear gloves when doing this. It is not permissible to wash the private parts without wearing these. Take a piece of cotton wool, moisten it and cleanse his lips and teeth with it and thereafter throw it away. Repeat this three times. Do the same for the nose and ears. Thereafter, seal the mouth, nose and ears with cotton wool so that no water may go inside.

Thereafter wash the head and beard with soap. Make wudu for the deceased: wash the face, the hands upto the elbows, make masah of the head, and then wash the feet. Thereafter pour water over the entire body. Make him lie on his left-hand side and pour water over him. Do the same after making him lie on his right-hand side. Thereafter wear another pair of gloves and cleanse his body. Replace the tahband as well.

Thereafter neaten the bed and place the sheet (lifafah) over it. Spread the loin cloth over it and then spread the bottom section of the shirt onto the loin cloth and gather the remainder of the shirt and place it near the head-section. Thereafter, lift the deceased from the platform gently and place him onto the bed. Take the remaining portion of the shirt and pass it through the head and extend it till his feet. Remove the tahband. Apply camphor to his head, beard and those parts of his body which touch the ground when in sajdah (i.e. the forehead, nose, the palms, the knees and the forepart of the feet).

Thereafter take the left side of the loin cloth and wrap it onto the right side, and take the right side of the sheet and wrap it onto the left side. Do the same with the sheet. Take two strips of cloth and use each one to tie the head side and the feet side of the kafan. Use the chest band to wrap the chest of the woman. The head band has been mentioned in the table. An upper covering is placed on the bier of a woman. This has already been mentioned previously.

Note: There are certain items which people have regarded as necessary in the kafan. These are not included in the masnun kafan. It is not permissible to purchase these items from the money of the deceased. These items are:

(i) A musAllawh - about one and quarter metres by 80 centimetres.

(ii) A girdle - about one and half metres by 80 centimetres. This is used to lower the deceased into the grave.

(iii) A mat - two and half metres by one and half metres. This is normally placed onto the bed on which the deceased is placed.

(iv) A scarf - two metres by one and quarter metres. According to one's financial position, four to seven of these are given to the poor. This is specifically for women.

(v) A sheet which is generally placed over the janaazah of the man - three metres by two and quarter metres. It is used to cover the bed on which the deceased is carried. It is necessary to have such a sheet for a woman. However, it is not included in her kafan. It is therefore not necessary for this sheet to be the same colour as the kafan. Any cloth will suffice as a cover.

Note: If one feels there is a need for a musAllawh, then any cloth from the house could be used. It is not necessary to obtain it from the possessions of the deceased. Any relative could also purchase it with his own money.

1. If any of the items which will be required for the ghusl and kafan are found at home and they are clean and pure, there is no harm in utilising them.
2. The material of the kafan should be of the same quality that the deceased used to wear most of the time while he was alive. It is a waste of money to go into unnecessary expenses.
3. If a child is born with some indications of life and thereafter dies, it will be named, ghusl will be given and salaat will also be offered over it. However, if no signs of life are found, it will be given ghusl, wrapped in a cloth and buried without any salaat being offered over it.

The deceased should be placed in the grave in such a way that his entire body is made to lie on its side facing towards the qiblah. The knots of the kafan on either side should be loosened. Isaal-e-thawaab should be made for the deceased as shown to us by our pious predecessors. This should be done without subjecting oneself to any custom or specifying any particular day. One should secretly help the poor according to one's ability and from one's halaal earnings. One should also recite the Quran according to one's ability and send the rewards to the deceased. Prior to the burial, in which a lot of time is wasted in futile conversations, one should recite the kalimah and send the reward to the deceased.

Accounting of deeds on the day of judgement

99. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "No person will be able to move from his place on the day of judgement until the following four questions are not posed to him: (1) How did he spend his life? (2) How much did he practice on the masâ'il that he had knowledge of? (3) From where did he acquire his wealth and where did he spend it? (4) In what did he utilise his body?"
In short, did he do all this according to the Sharî'ah or according to the dictates of his desires.
100. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "All rights will have to be fulfilled on the day of judgement so much so that a hornless goat will take its recompense from a goat with horns." That is, if the latter killed the former unjustly.

Remembering jannah and jahannam

101. In a sermon, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "There are two things which are very great - do not forget them." That is, jannah and jahannam. Upon saying this, he began weeping profusely so much so that his blessed beard got wet. He then said: "I swear in the name of that being in whose hands is my life that if you were to come to know that which I know about the hereafter, you will go away into the jungles and walk around pouring sand over your heads."
Note: O women! We have now mentioned 101 Ahâdîth. Many other Ahâdîth have been mentioned at various places in this book. Our beloved Rasûl sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "If anyone from my ummah learns 40 Ahâdîth and thereafter passes them on to others, he will rise with the 'ulamâ on the day of judgement." Make an effort to read these Ahâdîth to others. Inshâ Allawh, you will also rise with the 'ulamâ on the day of judgement. Such a great bounty can be attained with great ease.

THE SIGNS OF QIYÂMAH

The minor signs of qiyâmah

The following minor signs of qiyâmah have been mentioned in the Hadîth:
1. People will begin considering Allawh's wealth to be their own wealth. They will find it extremely difficult to pay their zakaat. They will consider the wealth which has been entrusted to them as an amânah to be their own wealth.
2. The husband will obey his wife, disobey his mother, consider his father to be an outsider, and consider an outsider to be his relative.
3. Knowledge of the Dîn will be acquired in order to earn a livelihood.
4. Leadership and political power will be given to those who are unqualified. That is, to those who have no self-honour, no manners, and those who are there for their own benefit. Tasks will be handed over to persons who are not suitable for those particular tasks.
5. People will honour and respect oppressors out of fear of being harmed.
6. Alcohol will be consumed openly.
7. The custom of singing and dancing women will become rife. Drums, fiddles, tambourines and other musical instruments will become rife.
8. The later generations will begin criticizing and speaking ill of their pious predecessors.
9. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said that at such a time, expect the following punishments: a red hurricane will come and some people will be drawn into the ground. Stones will rain down from the skies. The appearance of people will be transformed, i.e. they will be turned into pigs and dogs. Many other calamities will follow one after the other in quick succession just as when a string of beads breaks up and the beads begin falling off in quick succession.
10. Knowledge of the Dîn will decrease.
11. Lies and lying will be considered to be an art (to be admired).
12. The importance of amânah will disappear from the heart.
13. Hayâ' and shame will disappear.
14. The kuffâr will have power over everything and false ways will appear.
15. Once all these signs appear, the Christians will have control over all the countries. At that time, a person from the progeny of Abu Sufyân will be born. He will kill many sayyids and exercise his power and rule over Syria and Egypt. In the meantime, the Muslim ruler of Byzantine will wage a war with a group of Christians and make peace with another group. The warring group will invade Istanbul and rule over it. The ruler of Istanbul will flee to Syria, join forces with that group with which he had made peace, and engage in a severe war with the warring group. The Muslim army will gain victory. Within a few days, one of the Christians who had helped the Muslim ruler will come to the latter and tell him that we gained victory through the blessing of our "cross". The Muslim will reply that we gained victory through the blessing of Islam. This conversation will get more serious to the extent that each person (the Muslim and the Christian) will call his followers and a fight will ensue. The Muslim ruler will be martyred and Syria will also fall under the rule of these Christians. This Christian group will make peace with the group that was at war with the Muslims (in the beginning). The few Muslims who are left will go to Madinah. The Christians will exercise their power and rule up to Khaybar (a place outside Madinah).
The Muslims will then decide to search for Imam Mahdi so that they may overcome all these difficulties. At that time he will be in Madinah, but out of fear of being made ruler, he will go away to Makkah. All the pious people of that time will search for him. Many imposters will claim to be Imam Mahdi. But the genuine Imam Mahdi will be making tawâf of the Ka'bah and will be between the Hajr-e-Aswad and the Maqâm-e-Ibrâhîm. A few pious people will recognize him and impose upon him to become the ruler and they will give him the bay'ah. While giving him the bay'ah, a voice from the skies will come down and it will be heard by all those who will be present over there. This voice will say that this person is the khalîfah of Allawh (i.e. he has been chosen to be the ruler) and that he is Imam Mahdi.

The major signs of qiyâmah

Upon the appearance of Imam Mahdi, the major signs of qiyâmah commence. Once the incident of his bay'ah becomes known to everyone, the Muslim armies that were based in Madinah will go to Makkah. All the pious people of Syria, Iraq and Yemen will go to his service. Many other Arab armies will rally around him. Once this becomes known to all the Muslims, a person from Khurâsân will come with a large army in order to assist Imam Mahdi. The name of the person who will be the leader of the front section of this army will be Mansûr. On his way towards Imam Mahdi, he will kill many kuffâr. The person whom we had mentioned previously that he will be from the progeny of Abû Sufyân and that he will be an enemy of the sayyids - he will send an army to fight Imam Mahdi since Imam Mahdi will also be a sayyid. Once this army reaches a desert on the outskirts of Madinah, it will rest at a mountain. Once this army reaches this mountain, all the troops will sink into the ground. Only two persons will survive. One of them will go and inform Imam Mahdi of what transpired while the other will go and inform the Sufyânî (the person from the progeny of Abû Sufyân). The Christians from all around will gather their troops and prepare to fight the Muslims. This army will have 80 flags and there will be 12 000 soldiers under each flag, thus totalling 960 000.

Imam Mahdi will leave Makkah and go to Madinah where he will visit the grave of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. He will then depart for Syria. Before he can reach Damascus, the Christian army will confront him. Imam Mahdi's army will be split into three groups. One group will flee from the battlefield, one group will be martyred and the third group will gain victory. This martyrdom and this victory will take place as follows:
Imam Mahdi will prepare the army to fight the Christians. Many Muslims will swear to each other that they will not move from the battlefield until they gain victory. In this way, many of them will be martyred. A few of them will survive. Imam Mahdi will take them and incorporate them into his army. The following day the same thing will occur, i.e. many of them will be martyred after having taken an oath while a few will survive. This will also occur on the third day. Eventually, on the fourth day these few survivors will fight and Allawh will grant them victory. After this, the kuffâr will have no hope of political leadership.
Imam Mahdi will commence re-organizing the country and sending his armies all over. Once he accomplishes all these tasks, he will go to invade Istanbul. When he lands on the shores of Byzantine, he will take 70 000 people from the Banû Is'hâq. They will board Imam Mahdi's ships and together with him, they will make plans and strategies as to how they will conquer Istanbul. When they reach the city's walls, they will chant "Allâhu Akbar Allâhu Akbar" in a loud voice. Through the barakah of this voice, the city's walls will collapse, the Muslims will enter the city and kill the kuffâr. They will then administer the country with great justice. About 6-7 years will elapse from the time that the people had given the bay'ah to Imam Mahdi till the time of this victory.
While Imam Mahdi is busy with the administration of the country, a false rumour will spread that Dajjâl has made his presence in Syria and that he is causing strife in your (Imam Mahdi's) family. Upon hearing this, Imam Mahdi will travel towards Syria. He will send a few riders ahead of him so that they may be able to establish the truth. One of them will return and inform him that this rumour was false and that Dajjâl has not made his appearance as yet. Imam Mahdi will feel at ease upon hearing this. He will continue his journey towards Syria, but will slacken his pace and make several stops along the way inspecting the administration of the country as he proceeds. He will then reach Syria.
Within a short period of time, Dajjâl will make his appearance. He will be from the Jews. He will first make his appearance in Syria and Iraq and claim prophethood. He will then proceed to Isfahan where 70 000 Jews will join him. He will then make claims of divinity. He will travel through several countries until he reaches Yemen. During the course of his travels, many kuffâr will join him. Eventually he will stop at a place near Makkah. However, because of it being safeguarded by angels, he will not be able to enter Makkah. He will then try to enter Madinah but will not be able to do so because it will also be guarded by angels.
Madinah will experience an earthquake three times. All those who were weak and negligent in Dîn will come out of Madinah out of fear for the earthquakes. Once they come out, they will be trapped by Dajjâl. There will be a pious man in Madinah who will debate with Dajjâl. The latter will go into a rage and kill this pious person and bring him to life again. Dajjâl will ask him: "Now do you believe that I am god?" He will reply: "Now I am more convinced that you are Dajjâl." Dajjâl will try to hit him but will be unable to do so, nor will he be able to influence him in any way.
Dajjâl will then leave for Syria. When he will approach Damascus, Imam Mahdi will already have been there, making preparations for war. The time of 'asr salât will approach, the mu'adhdhin will call out the adhân and the people will be busy making preparations for salât. Suddenly, 'Îsâ 'alayhis salâm will descend from the heavens with both his hands on the shoulders of two angels. He will land on the eastern minârah of the jâme' musjid. A ladder will be placed and he will come down.
Imam Mahdi will want to hand over authority of all the war preparations to him but he will tell him to keep it with him and inform him that he ('Îsâ 'alayhis salâm) has come specifically to kill Dajjâl. The following morning, Imam Mahdi will get his troops ready for battle. 'Îsâ 'alayhis salâm will ask for a horse and a spear and advance towards Dajjâl. The Muslims will attack Dajjâl's army and a severe battle will ensue. 'Îsâ's 'alayhis salâm breath will have this effect that it will reach wherever his eyes can see. Any kâfir who gets even a whiff of his breath will be destroyed there and then. Upon seeing 'Îsâ 'alayhis salâm, Dajjâl will flee. 'Îsâ 'alayhis salâm will follow him until he will catch up with him at a place called Bâb Lud and kill him with his spear. The Muslims will begin killing Dajjâl's troops.
'Îsâ 'alayhis salâm will then go from city to city and console all those who were harmed by Dajjâl. Through the bounty of Allawh, there will be no kâfir left behind. Imam Mahdi will then pass away and all the affairs of the country will fall into the hands of 'Îsâ 'alayhis salâm. Thereafter, Yajûj and Majûj will appear. Their place of domicile will be in the extreme north where there is no civilization and where the sea is completely frozen on account of the extreme cold. In compliance with the order of Allawh, 'Îsâ 'alayhis salâm will take the Muslims to Mount Tûr. Yajûj and Majûj will cause a lot of turmoil. Eventually Allawh will destroy them and 'Îsâ 'alayhis salâm will descend from the mountain. After forty years, 'Îsâ 'alayhis salâm will pass away and will be buried with Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam.
A person from Yemen from the tribe of Qah'tân by the name of Jahjâh will take over the mantle of leadership. He will rule with justice and religiousness. Several rulers will come after him. Gradually, good deeds will decline and evil will begin to gain the upper hand.
At that time, a type of mist or smoke will envelop the skies and thereafter descend onto the land whereby the Muslims will catch a cold and the kuffâr will fall unconscious. The skies will become clear after forty days and the days of 'îd al-ad'hâ will fall soon thereafter. After the tenth (of Dhul Hijjah), a very long night will come. It will be so long that travellers will become restless, children will become tired and weary on account of sleeping too much, and grazing animals will begin clamouring to go to the fields to graze. However, dawn will not break. Everyone will become restless out of fear and anxiety. Once this night equals three nights, the sun will appear very dimly from the western horizon. At that particular time, no one's Imaan (accepting Islam) or repentance will be accepted. Once the sun reaches the position that it normally takes at mid-day, it will begin returning to the west and it will set as it normally does. Thereafter, it will continue rising normally according to its normal brightness.
A few days later, Mount Safâ, which is situated in Makkah, will be destroyed by an earthquake. From there, an animal of strange appearance and shape will appear and begin conversing with people. This animal will travel the entire earth very swiftly. It will have the staff of Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm with which it will draw an illuminated line across the foreheads of the believers. The result of this will be that the believers' faces will become illuminated. As for the kuffâr, it will stamp them on their noses or necks with the ring of Sulaymân 'alayhis salâm whereby their faces will become dark. Once this animal completes this task, it will disappear.
Thereafter, a lovely breeze will blow from the south whereby something will come out from the sides of the believers and with which they will die. Once all the Muslims die, the kuffâr will gain control of the entire world. They will destroy the Ka'bah, hajj will be ceased, the Quran will be removed from the hearts and from paper. Fear of Allawh and one's natural modesty will be removed. There will be no one to take the name of Allawh. There will be a lot of prosperity and abundance in Syria. People will start heading towards Syria on camels, vehicles and on foot. For those who will remain, a howling fire will start and drive them towards Syria. The wisdom behind this is that on the day of resurrection, all the creation will be gathered in this country. Thereafter this fire will disappear.
At that time, the world will progress tremendously. Three to four years will pass in this way when all of a sudden, on the morning of a Friday on the 10th of Muharram, when all the people will be preoccupied in their work, the trumpet will be blown. initially, the sound will be soft. Gradually it will get louder until everyone will die out of panic and horror. The land and the skies will be blown into smithereens and the entire universe will be destroyed. The time span from the rising of the sun from the west till the blowing of the trumpet will be 120 years. After this, the day of resurrection will commence.

The day of resurrection:

Once this entire universe is destroyed, 40 years will pass in this tranquility. Allawh Ta'ala will then issue the order for the trumpet to be blown a second time. The earth and the skies will come back into existence and the dead will rise from their graves. All of them will be gathered in the plains of qiyaamah. The sun will be very close, the heat of which will cause the brains of people to boil and they will perspire according to their sins.The people will be standing in this heat, hungry and thirsty, extremely worried. As for those who were pious, the ground will be turned into fine flour for them whereby they will satiate their hunger and they will go to the HUAD-E-KAUTHAR in order to quench their thirst.
Once the people get tired of standing in the plains of qiyaamah, they will all go to hadrat Aadam (alayhis Salaam) and thereafter to other prophets requesting them to intercede on their behalf so that the accounting of their deeds could be accomplished quickly. All the prophets will present some excuse and will not make any promise of intercession. Eventually, all the people will go to Rasulullah (sallAllawhu alayhi wasallam) and make the same request to him. On the orders of Allawh Ta'ala, he will accept this request, go to Maqaam-e-Mahmud and intercede on their behalf. Allawh Ta'ala will reply : " I have accepted your intercession. After manifesting myself in the land, I will now commence with the accounting of deeds "

Many angels will begin decending and surrounding the people from all sides. Thereafter, the throne os Allawh Ta'ala will descend and his splendour and manisfestation will be on it. The accounting of deeds will commence and the books of deeds will be distributed. The believers will receive their book of deeds in their right hands while the disbielivers will receive them in their left hands. These books of deeds will land automatically into the hands of the respective persons. The scale will be brought whereby all the good and evil deeds will be weighed and established. The order will then be given for everyone to cross the bridge called " siraat". Those whose good deeds were heavier in the scale will cross the "siraat" and enter paradise. As for those whose evil deeds were heavier and Allawh did not forgive them. will fall into hell. Those whose goods deeds and evil deeds are equal, will go to a place called "a'raaf" which is between jannah and jahannam. They will stay over there.

Thereafter, Rasulullah (sallAllawhu alayhi wasallam), the other Ambiyaa (alayhimus salaam), the aalim, the wali, the martyr, the haafiz of the quraan, and other pious servants will intercede on behalf of the sinners. Their intercession will be accepted. The person who has even an iota of imaan in his heart will eventually come out of jahannam and admitted into jannah. Similarly, those who were made to remain at "a'raaf" will be admitted into jannah. Only those who are absolute kuffaar and polytheists will remain in jahannam. Once all in inhabitants of jannah and jahannam have taken their respective places, Allawh Ta'ala will place "death" in form of a ram between jannah and jahannam. All the inhabitants of jannah and jahannam will be able to see it. In the presence of all of them, Allawh Ta'ala will have this ram slaughtered and announce that now no death will overcome the inhabitants of jannah. All of them will have to remain in their respective places forever. When they hear this, there will be no limit to happiness that hte inhabitants of jannah will experience. And there will be no limit to sorrow and grief that the inhabitants of jahannam will experience.

THE BOUNTIES OF JANNAH

1. Rasulullah (sallAllawhu alayhi wasallam said the Allawh Ta'ala says: " I have prepared and kept aside bounties for my pious servants which no eye has set on, no ear has heard about, nor did it occur in anyone's heart
2. Rasulullah (sallAllawhu alayhi wasallam) said: The building of jannah have one brick made of gold and the other made of silver. The cement the joins one brick to the other is made of musk. The pebbles of jannah are pearls and sapphires. The soil of jannah is saffron. The person who enters jannah will enter in peace. He will not see or experience any sorrow or grief. He will live there forever and never die. The clothes of the inhabitants of jannah will never get dirty. Nor will their youth be terminated"
3. Rasulullah (sallAllawhu alayhi wasallam) said: "there are two gardens in jannah where everything is of silver. There are another two wherein everything will be of gold.There are 100 stages in jannah and the distance of from one stage to the next is equal to the entire expanse of the earth and skies. i.e. a distance of 500 years journey. The bark of all the trees in jannah are nade of gold. The highest stage of jannah is firdaus. It is from here that the four rivers of jannah begin their course. The four rivers are of milk, honey. pure wine and water.

THE TRIALS AND TRIBULATIONS OF JAHANNAM

Rasulullah (sallAllawhu alayhi wasallam) sail: " Allawh Ta'ala fanned jahannam for a thousand years until its colour turned red. Thereafter he fanned it for a thousand years until its coulur turned white. He then fanned it for another thousand years until it turned black in color. Now it is absolutely black. If a heavy stone is dropped from one side of jahannam, it will continue descending for seventy years until it reaches the bottom of it. The person who will receive the lightest punishment in jahannam will be the person who will be made to wear shoes of fire whereby his brains will boil like a cauldron. He will be under the assumption that he is receiving the most severe punishment. The snakes of jahannam are as large as camels. If one of them had to bite once, its poison will continue rising for 40 years. The scorpions are as large as a pack saddled mule. If it had to bite once, the effect of its poison will last for 40 years. Once, after having performed the salaah, Rasulullah (sallAllawhu Alayhi Wasallam) climbed the pulpit and said " While I was in my salaat. I saw Jannah exactly as they are. I haven't seen anything better than jannah. Nor have I seen anything more harmful than jahannam.

BOOK XXXII

THE DISTINGUISHING CHARACTERSTICS OF PIOUS WOMEN FROM THE QUR'AN AND THE AHADEETH

Up to now, we have mentioned the stories of 100 women. The purpose of these stories was to show their good characteristics. We felt it would be suitable to quote Quranic verses and Ahâdîth which mention the characteristics of pious women, their praiseworthy mannerisms, and their status. When women read these and realize that Allawh and His Rasûl sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam has specifically mentioned them, their hearts will be filled with joy and they will have a greater desire for good deeds and good characteristics, and even difficult matters will become easy for them.

Quranic verses

Allawh has said that those women who are Muslims, who put their îmân in order, who are obedient, who give in charity, who fast, who protect their honour and chastity, who remember Allawh abundantly - Allawh has set aside forgiveness and a great reward for them.

Allawh has said that pious women have the following qualities: they are obedient, and they protect their honour even if the husband is not at home. Allawh has further stated that such women are good women, who are steadfast on the Sharî'ah, whose beliefs are in order, who are obedient, if they commit any act that is contrary to the Sharî'ah they repent immediately, who occupy themselves in the 'ibâdah of Allawh, and who fast.

Ahâdîth

1. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "Allawh's mercy descends on a woman who wakes up for tahajjud and awakens her husband as well."
2. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "The woman who passes away in her virginity, while delivering a child or while in her nifâs shall receive the status of a martyr."
3. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "The woman who loses three of her children and exercises patience considering it to be an act of reward, will be entered into jannah." A woman asked: "What if she only loses two children in this way?" He replied: "The reward for two is the same." Another narration mentions that a Sahâbî asked about one child and Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam also mentioned a great reward for such a mother.
4. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "The woman who miscarries, that child will draw its mother towards jannah as long as she exercises patience hoping to be rewarded."
5. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "The best possession is a pious wife: when the husband looks at her he is pleased with her, when he orders her to do something she obeys, when the husband goes out, she protects her honour and chastity and remains in her home."
6. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "Among the Arab women, the women of the Quraysh surpass all other women in two aspects: they are very compassionate to their children and they protect the wealth of their husbands."

Lesson: We learn from this that women should possess these two characteristics. These days, women spend the wealth of their husbands very lavishly. They should display far more compassion and attention to reforming their habits and mannerisms than what they display for their children's food and clothing. If they do not do this, their compassion and tenderness will be incomplete.

7. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "Marry virgin women because their relationship with their husbands is soft and tender, and they are pleased with the minimum that is spent on them."

Lesson: We learn from this that modesty, consideration and contentment are good characteristics in a woman. This does not mean that one should not marry widows. Instead, this is actually in praise of virgin women. There are certain Ahâdîth in which Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam made du'â for a certain Sahâbî for marrying a widow.

8. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "When a woman offers her five times salât, keeps the fasts of Ramadân, safeguards her honour, and obeys her husband; she can enter jannah from whichever door she wishes."

Lesson: This means that if she is steadfast on the necessary forms of 'ibâdah, there is no need to engage in other forms of 'ibâdah which are very taxing. The status and reward that one receives for engaging in the other forms of 'ibâdah can be obtained by a woman by merely obeying her husband, tending to her children, and fulfilling her domestic tasks.

9. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "The woman who passes away in such a state where her husband is pleased with her will enter jannah."

10. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "The person who has been blessed with four things has in fact been blessed with the treasures of this world and the hereafter. They are: a grateful heart, a tongue that remembers Allawh, a body that exercises patience at the time of calamities and difficulties, a woman who does not cause any taint or blemish with regard to her honour and her husband's wealth."

Lesson: In other words, she should not lose her honour nor should she spend her husband's wealth without obtaining his pleasure.

11. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "A noble and rich woman who is widowed and yet becomes dirty on account of serving and rearing her children to such an extent that they mature and live on their own or pass away, shall be close to me in jannah just as the index finger and middle finger are close to each other."

Lesson: This does not mean that there is more reward for a woman to abstain from remarrying. What this means is that if a woman feels that by her remarrying, her children will go astray and she has no inclination towards beautifying herself and no desires, then this will be her status.

12. A person said to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam: "O Rasûlullâh! A certain woman offers plenty of nafl salâts, fasts abundantly and gives a lot in charity. However she causes much verbal harm to her neighbours." He replied: "She will go into jahannam." The same person then said: "A certain woman does not offer many nafl salâts, does not fast abundantly nor does she give a lot in charity; she merely gives pieces of panîr (a type of cheese) in charity. However she does not cause any harm to her neighbours." He replied: "She will go into jannah."

13. A woman came to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam with two children, one she was carrying and the other she was holding by the hand. Upon seeing this scene, he said: "These women bear the children in their wombs, thereafter they give birth to them, and thereafter they display so much of love and compassion for them. Had their relationship with their husbands not been bad, and had they offered their salâts regularly, they would have went directly into jannah."

A selection of Ahâdîth from Kanzul 'Ummâl

1. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam addressed women and said: "Aren't you pleased that when a woman falls pregnant through her husband and he is happy with her falling pregnant, she will receive a reward equal to a person fasting in the path of Allawh and engaging in 'ibâdah at night in the path of Allawh? When she experiences labour pains, the things which are kept in store for her and which will provide her with comfort are not known to all those in the heavens and the earth. Thereafter when the child is born, for every drop of milk that he drinks and each time that he sucks her breast, one reward will be recorded in her favour. When the mother has to wake up at night on account of the child, she will receive the reward of freeing 70 slaves in the path of Allawh. O Salâmat! Do you know who these women are? They are those who, despite being pious and delicately brought up, are obedient to their husbands and are not ungrateful to them."

2. Rasulullah sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam said: "When a woman gives anything in charity from her husband's house without destroying it, she will be rewarded on account of her giving. The husband will also be rewarded because it is his hard-earned money. The person who has been entrusted to distribute the charity will also receive a similar reward. No one's reward will decrease on account of the other."

Lesson: A woman should not be under the misconception that if the income is the husband's she would not receive any reward.

3. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "O women! Your jihâd is performing hajj."

Lesson: Look at the concession that he has given. That is, by performing hajj, in which they do not have to bear the difficulties of jihâd, they receive the reward of waging jihâd which is the most difficult form of 'ibâdah.

4. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "There is no jihâd on women, no jumu'ah, nor do they have to accompany the janâzah."

Lesson: Here again, look at the rewards that they receive by merely staying at home.

5. When Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam took his wives on hajj, he said to them: "This hajj is sufficient for you. Now you must remain on your mats (i.e. in your homes)."

Lesson: This means that they should not undertake any journey without any dire need to do so.

6. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "Allawh loves the woman who has love and affection for her husband and safeguards herself from other men."

Lesson: This means that she should not consider it below her dignity to express her love and adulation for her husband as is the habit of certain proud and haughty women.

7. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "Women are also parts of men."

Lesson: It is a well-known fact that Hawwâ was created from Âdam 'alayhimas salâm. The meaning of this Hadîth is that rules that are applicable to men are applicable to women as well, except for certain specific rules. Based on this, even if their virtues are not mentioned separately, then too there is nothing to complain about. The virtues for good deeds which are mentioned with regard to men are applicable to women as well.

8. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "Allawh has prescribed jealousy for women and jihâd for men. If a woman exercises patience with îmân in the hope for reward on account of a certain action which may cause her to be jealous, such as her husband marrying a second wife, then she will receive the reward of a martyr."

Lesson: Look at the great reward that a woman receives on account of a little self-control and patience as opposed to the man who has to undergo so many difficulties to receive that reward (i.e. the reward of a martyr).

9. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "By doing your wife's work you will receive the reward of charity."

Lesson: Look at how the Sharî'ah has shown you the ways of providing comfort to women. It has promised to reward you in such a way that every Muslim will provide comfort to his wife in the hope for this reward.

10. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "The best woman is the one whom when her husband looks at her he is pleased with her, when he orders her to do something she obeys him, and she does not displease him by doing anything contrary regarding his wealth and honour."

11. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "May Allawh have mercy on women who wear izâr."

Lesson: On account of purdah, wearing the izâr is something that is natural to women. Despite this, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam has made du'â for such women. This is a great form of compassion towards women.

12. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "The immorality of one woman is equal to the immorality of 1000 men. The piety of one pious woman is equal to the 'ibâdah of 70 'auliyâ'."

Lesson: Look at the immense reward for a mere small act. If this is not in consideration of women then what is it?

13. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "The fulfilling of domestic tasks by a woman can cause her to reach the stage of jihâd - Inshâ' Allawh."
Lesson: How marvellous! There is no end to the bounties of Allawh Ta'âlâ.
14. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "The best woman among you is the one who is untainted with regard to her honour and chastity, and who loves her husband."
Lesson: To love the husband is actually happiness of the heart. Despite this, there is virtue and reward in it.
15. A person said to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam: "O Rasûlullâh! I have a wife. When I go to her, she says to me: 'Welcome to my chief and the chief of my household.' When she sees me sad and sorrowful, she says: 'Why are you worrying about the world? Your hereafter is being made easy for you.'" Upon hearing this, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "Inform her that she is from among all those who are working for Allawh (i.e. doing good deeds) and she is receiving half the reward of those waging jihâd."
Lesson: Look at the immense reward she received for this insignificant gesture of hers (which caused comfort to her husband).
16. 'Asmâ' bint Yazîd Ansâriyyah relates that she addressed Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam saying: "O Rasûlullâh! I have been sent as an envoy by other women. They are saying that men have surpassed us on account of their attending the jumu'ah salât, congregational salât, visiting the sick, attending the janâzah, hajj, 'umrah, and defending the borders of the Islamic state." He replied: "Go back to these women and inform them that for them to beautify themselves for their husbands or fulfil the marital relationships with them, to search for those things which will cause the husband to be pleased with them, and to be obedient to the husband equals all the above actions (which are carried out by men)."
17. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "The reward that a woman receives from the time that she falls pregnant until she delivers the child and commences breast-feeding is equal to the person who is guarding the borders of the Islamic state and who has to be ever ready to wage jihâd. If this woman dies in the course of this period, she will receive the reward of a martyr."
18. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "When a woman breast-feeds her child, the reward that she receives for every sip is as if she has given life to a dead person. When she commences breast-feeding, an angel taps her on her back (a form of congratulation) and says to her: 'All your past sins are forgiven. Now whatever you do will be recorded from the very beginning.'" That is, the sins that you may commit will be written for the future. Minor sins are referred to in this context. However, having one's minor sins forgiven is no small feat.
19. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "O women! Remember that the pious among you will enter jannah before the pious men. (Later when their husbands will enter jannah) they (the pious women) will be given a bath, perfumed and then handed over to their husbands on red and yellow conveyances. They will have children with them who will be like scattered pearls."
Lesson: O women! What greater virtue do you wish to have? You have already reached jannah before the men. Obviously, the prerequisite is that you should become pious and this is not difficult.
20. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "The woman whose husband is not at home, and she safeguards her honour, abandons beautifying herself, remains at home, abandons everything that is considered to be a form of beautification and offers salât with steadfastness will rise on the day of judgement as a virgin. If her husband was a true believer, she will be his wife in jannah. If he was not a true believer, e.g. if he passed away without îmân, Allawh will perform her nikâh with a martyr."
21. Abû Dardâ' radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates: "My friend, Abul Qâsim sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam, made me a bequest. He said: 'Continue spending on your house folk according to your ability.'"
Lesson: Those who act miserly when it comes to spending on their wives despite being able to spend should ponder over this Hadith.
22. 'Alî radiyallâhu 'anhu says: "A person will not become a manager over his house as long as he does not worry about how the house folk clothed themselves or how they extinguished the fire of hunger."
Lesson: Those men who do not worry about their house folk due to their (men) selfishness should take a lesson from these words of Hadrat 'Alî.

Additional Ahâdîth from Mishkât

23. Abû Hurayrah radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "Accept my advice of kindness towards women because they have been created from a rib...."
Lesson: In other words, do not expect to straighten them completely. Exercise patience over their lower understanding. Look at how we have been commanded to take them into consideration and be lenient towards them.
24. Abû Hurayrah radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that a believing man should not despise a believing woman (i.e. his wife) because if he does not like a certain habit or trait of hers, he is bound to like some other habit of hers.
Lesson: In other words, he should think about this and thereby exercise patience.
25. 'Abdullâh bin Zam'ah narrates that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "Do not strike your wife as you would your slave and thereafter engage in sexual intercourse with her at the end of the day."
Lesson: In other words, if you do this, how will she show affection towards you?
26. Hakîm bin Mu'âwiyah narrates from his father that he said: "O Rasûlullâh! What rights do our wives have over us?" He replied: "When you eat, you must also feed them. When you clothe yourself, you should also clothe them. Do not strike them on their faces. If you have any quarrel with her, it should be left in the house." In other words, if you have any quarrel with her, this quarrel should not go out of the house (or should not be mentioned to anyone).
27. Abû Hurayrah radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "The best among the believers is he whose character is the best. And the best among you is the one who is best with his wife."

ADVICES FROM THE QURAN AND HADITH CONCERNING CERTAIN SHORTCOMINGS OF WOMEN

When we mentioned the good characteristics of women, one can deduce that there are certain shortcomings which are also found in them. These shortcomings cause a blemish on their piety and spirituality. We will mention these shortcomings which have been referred to by Allawh and His Rasûl sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and regarding which they have advised against. In doing this, Inshâ' Allawh, women will adopt a repugnance for these evil habits and thereby attain total piety.

Quranic verses

Allawh says that the women regarding whom you know will not obey you should first be advised. If they do not take heed, abstain from sleeping, sitting, etc. with them. If they still do not take heed, strike them. If they obey you thereafter, do not search for things in order to cause harm to them.
Lesson: We learn from this that it is a very evil practice to disobey the husband.
Allawh says that when you walk, you should not stamp your feet on the ground causing the jewellery to tinkle, whereby strangers may able to deduce (who is walking, the age of the person, etc.).
Lesson: It is not permissible to wear tinkling jewellery at all. This verse is in reference to those that do not tinkle on their own, but do so when they touch other jewellery. One should understand well that if one has to be so cautious with regard to the feet (which constitute just a part of the body), how much more cautious a woman will have to be with regard to her voice and the exposure of her body.

Ahâdîth

1. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "O women! I have seen many of you in jahannam." They asked the reason for this. He replied: "You curse too much, you are ungrateful to your husbands, and when they give you anything, you despise it."
2. A woman who was in the presence of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam began cursing her fever (that she had contacted). He said: "Do not speak ill of your fever because your sins are forgiven because of this fever."

3. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "If a woman who is in the habit of crying in a shouting manner does not repent from this action, she will rise on the day of judgement in such a state that oil will be wrapped around her body just as a dress is wrapped around her body. This oil will be such that it catches on fire very quickly and the entire body will be afflicted by scabies. In other words, she will receive two types of punishment - one is that her entire body will be covered with scabies, and the other is that the fire of jahannam will devour her."
4. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "O women! No neighbour should despise anything that her neighbour sends to her even though it may be the hoof of a sheep."
Lesson: Many women have this evil habit of despising anything that is sent by their neighbours and cursing them as well.
5. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "A woman was punished because of a cat. She had caught this cat and tied it up. She neither fed it nor let it free. It died panting (out of hunger and thirst)."
Lesson: Similarly, it is punishable for one to domesticate an animal and thereafter be negligent in feeding it and tending to it.
6. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "Certain men and women engage in the 'ibâdah of Allawh for sixty years. However, at the time of death they make a bequest (waṣîyyah) that is contrary to the Sharî'ah and thereby become eligible for jahannam."
Lesson: For example, some people are in the habit of saying the following at the time of death: "A certain item of mine should be given to my grandson. Do not give it to my brother. The major portion of a certain item should be given to a certain daughter, while the other daughter should receive the lesser amount." All this is harâm. The masâ'il related to bequests and inheritance should be found out from an 'âlim and acted upon. Never act contrary to that which the Sharî'ah has prescribed.
7. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "A woman should not meet another woman in such a state that she describes her to her husband in such a way as if he is looking at her."
8. Once, two of Rasûlullâh's sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam wives were sitting with him. A blind Sahâbi was approaching so he asked his wives to observe purdah. Out of surprise, both of them said: "He is blind!" Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam replied: "But you are not blind, you can see him."
9. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "When any woman causes distress to her husband in this world, the hûr of jannah who has been set aside for this person says: 'May Allawh destroy you. He is your guest, very soon he will leave you and come to us.'"
10. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "I have not seen such women of jahannam who will be wearing clothes but will in fact be naked, they will walk in a proud swaying manner, they will tie their hair in such a way that it appears to be plenty - like the hump of the camel - such women will not enter jannah, in fact they will not even get the fragrance of jannah."
Lesson: This means that when the pious women will go into jannah, these women will not go with them. It is possible for them to enter jannah later, but only through the barakah of îmân.
11. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "If a woman wears gold jewellery for show, she will be punished with the same jewellery."
12. Once Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam was on a journey when he heard the voice of someone cursing. He asked: "Who was that?" The people replied: "A certain woman who is cursing the animal that she is riding." Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "Remove her from her camel and also remove all her possessions that are on it. According to her, this camel deserves to be cursed, so why is she using it?"
Note: Thus far, we have mentioned 5 Quranic verses and 52 Ahâdîth. At the beginning of this part, we mentioned many noble characteristics of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. It is necessary to adopt them all the time. In the previous parts of Bahishti Zewar we mentioned various pious acts and words of advice in great detail. Bear all these in mind and practise them. 'Inshâ' Allawh, you will attain great stages on the day of judgement. If not, you will meet the same fate as that of evil women. If at any time you are able to understand the Quran and Hadith, you will read incidents of many irreligious, evil-minded, disbelieving, and disobedient women. May Allawh guide you and I to live like the pious, die among them, and be raised among them. 'Âmîn.

SUPPLEMENT (B) TO BAHISHTI ZEWAR

When the eighth part (seventh of the English translation) of Bahishti Zewar was being written, I wrote stories of pious women and I had also written a few stories of evil women and women who had repented over their evil ways. However, on account of fearing that this book will get too lengthy, I only included the stories of pious women and at the end of the book I sufficed with writing on the shortcomings of women and giving them advice in this regard. The stories of evil women remained in their manuscript form and occasionally when I had reason to look at this manuscript I awaited an opportunity to print it. Coincidentally, a learned and experienced person of my village wrote an article on the shortcomings and defects of women with the intention of reforming their condition. Upon reading this article, I realized the importance of those stories which I had written but did not have the opportunity to print. I thought that it would be good to gather all those stories and include them in the eighth part as a supplement with the hope that such women will draw a lesson from these stories and thereby get the guidance of making taubah. Because the article that this person had written was a bit harsh and written in an angry tone, and at places he was a bit general, I wrote a balanced note in the beginning in order to compensate for this harsh tone and generality, and then his article was included. I have arranged this collection in the following manner: stories of evil women, stories of evil women who repented, thereafter the precautionary note, and then the article of that person. This collection could be regarded as a commentary of this part of Bahishti Zewar.

The story of 'Unuq

This woman lived in the era of Âdam 'alayhis salâm. She is the first person to commit adultery and thereby disgrace herself. Allawh punished her in this world by sending huge snakes as big as elephants, huge scorpions as big as camels, huge vultures as big as donkeys from the unseen. They all came and ate her up together.
Lesson: Look at the consequence of this evil deed. No one should think that it is not possible to be punished in this way anymore. Remember that it is only because of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam that we are not punished so severely in this world. However, we will get all the punishments in the hereafter. When there is no doubt about the approach of the hereafter, how is it possible for us to be so neglectful? Furthermore, no one should be under the misconception that one is disgraced only because of adultery. In fact, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam is reported to have said that the eyes, the ears, the tongue, the hands, the feet and the heart also commit adultery. If a woman peeps at a strange man, the bride-groom or the marriage procession (in which there are men), this will be considered to be the sinning of the eyes. If, without any compelling reason, she freely converses with him, this will be considered to be sinning of the tongue. If she listens to a male's voice in order to satisfy her nafs or listens to him singing songs, this will be the sinning of the ears. If she touches a person with whom she was supposed to be observing purdah, or places her hand on his shoulder or head, this will be the sinning of the hands. If she walks in order to go and meet such a person or she walks in front of him so that he may see her, this will be the sinning of the feet. If she thinks about him or tries to remember him all the time, this will be the sinning of the heart. The consequences and sin of adultery will therefore also apply in these cases. One should fear the power and anger of Allawh and safeguard oneself from all these evils.

The story of Wâ'ilah

She is the wife of Nûh 'alayhis salâm. However, she did not accept îmân. When the flood commenced and water began gushing out of the ground, Nûh 'alayhis salâm asked the believers to board his ship. He went to his wife and son and asked them to accept îmân and thereby board the ship. However, they did not accept îmân, nor did they board the ship. In fact, they did not even believe that the flood was approaching and mocked at Nûh 'alayhis salâm for holding such a belief. When the flood came, both of them drowned.
Lesson: Mention of this woman has also been made in the Quran in the same way that despite her being the wife of an accepted servant of Allawh (i.e. Nûh 'alayhis salâm), but because she did not tread the path of Dîn, her being his wife did not help her in any way and she was sent to jahannam. O women!

Understand this well and do not depend on the piety of your husband, father, brother or son. As long as your Dîn and îmân are not in order, the piety of any of your relatives will be of no avail.

The wife of Lût 'alayhis salâm

She was also a kâfir and she used to help the kuffâr in their evil ways. When the time approached for Allawh to send His punishment on the kuffâr, He sent angels to inform Lût 'alayhis salâm. They said to him: "Leave your residence the following morning because the punishment of Allawh is about to descend on this village. Take the believers with you and leave this village on this very night. No one should look back at this village." Acting on the orders of Allawh, Lût 'alayhis salâm left his village. This woman also joined them in order to save her life. When the time came for the punishment of this village, Allawh caused stones to rain down on them and there was a great uproar. All the believers lowered their heads out of fear and continued on their way. No one looked around. However, this woman, who had relatives among the kuffâr and whose way of life was just like their's, looked around to see what is happening to those people. The moment she turned around, a stone pelted her and she fell down dead.

Lesson: The story of this woman has been related in the Quran in a similar manner to that of Nûh's 'alayhis salâm wife (whom we have mentioned previously). That is, despite her being the wife of a prophet, this did not help her in any way because she herself was not on the path of Dîn. O women! Understand this well. It is only your îmân and your Dîn that will be of any benefit to you. Some women spoil their Dîn on account of their relatives by maintaining close contact with their irreligious relatives. Look at this woman! On account of her love for her relatives she was destroyed and she lost her life and îmân as well. Had she accepted îmân and abstained from looking back, she would have been saved from all calamities. Remember, you should not maintain any close contact with those who do not follow Allawh and His Rasûl sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam.

The story of Sadûf

She was a kâfir woman in the time of Sâlih 'alayhis salâm. Her ways and habits were not good. There was another woman whose ways and habits were similar to her's. She had many goats and other dairy animals in her house. It was the miracle of Sâlih 'alayhis salâm that through the power of Allawh, he took out a camel from a rock. A major portion of the water of that village was obtained from a particular well. All the animals were given water from this well. Ever since the camel was created, acting upon the orders of Allawh, the town people specified turns for drawing water in such a way that one day all the animals will receive water, and the following day this camel alone will receive water from this well. The reason for this system was that this camel was very powerful and used to consume a lot of water. If it had to drink on one day, there would be nothing left for the other animals. All the kuffâr did not like this system of distribution. These two women whom we have mentioned above complained to another two men who were of similar character by saying: "We have the most number of animals but they have to remain without water for one full day. You try and sort out this problem and we will be pleased with you and obey you in whatever you say." These two scoundrels rounded up a few friends of theirs, concealed themselves on the path of the camel and awaited its arrival. This camel was on its way to drink water. When it came in line with these scoundrels, they pounced onto it with their swords. They chopped off its legs, causing it to fall to the ground. Once it fell down, they killed it with their swords. The moment this happened, the punishment of Allawh descended on these people. On the first day, all their faces turned yellow, on the second day they turned red, and on the third day they turned black. On the fourth day there was a gigantic earthquake and fire began raining down from the skies. Thereafter, Jibra'îl uttered a piercing scream whereby all their hearts burst open, they all died and their bodies were reduced to ashes on account of the fire.

Lesson: Look! Because of the evil nature of two women, this calamity descended on every one. These two women planned this whole conspiracy because of their love for wealth.O women! Remove the love of wealth and possessions from your hearts. May Allawh save you because we don't know from where the evil consequences of this (love) will cause a calamity. As far as possible, you should have hatred for such evil women in your hearts. If you have to converse with them or meet them, do not adopt a soft attitude towards them. If you do so, there is a fear of you also being afflicted if any calamity descends upon them. If you display displeasure and hatred towards them, you will save yourself from sin and the punishment of Allawh.

The story of Arbîl

This woman was the wife of an idol-worshipping king during the time of Ilyâs 'alayhis salâm. She herself was an oppressive and merciless woman. She had killed many prophets. She had a neighbour who was a pious person. He had an orchard on which he was dependent for his living. This orchard was very beautiful and all the people used to speak in praise of it. This woman was very jealous of this and was always planning to appropriate it and kill this pious person. Coincidentally, her husband went on a journey and left her behind. It was his habit of leaving her in charge of the affairs of the kingdom. When he embarked on this journey, he handed over the affairs of the kingdom to her. After he left, she rounded up a few persons and instructed them to falsely testify in court that this pious person had spoken against the king. It was the rule of the king that if anyone spoke against him and was proven guilty, he would be killed. This woman had this pious person arrested and brought to court. She said to him: "I have heard that you have spoken against the king." He denied this allegation. She called for those persons whom she had trained before-hand to testify against him. They came and testified that he had spoken against the king. This woman therefore had this innocent person killed and seized his orchard. When the king returned from his journey, Allawh revealed to Ilyâs 'alayhis salâm that he should go to the king and inform him that an innocent Muslim has been killed and his orchard has been seized. If the king and his wife repent and return the orchard to the person's inheritors, well and good. If not, Allawh will destroy them. When Ilyâs 'alayhis salâm went and informed the king, he became very angry and instead of repenting, he became an enemy of Ilyâs 'alayhis salâm. Eventually, Ilyâs 'alayhis salâm left that place after Allawh ordered him to do so. A few days later, the king's son fell ill and passed away. Before he could overcome this grief, another king invaded his kingdom, captured it, and killed him and all the other kuffâr.

Lesson: Look at the consequences of this. O women! It is an act of oppression to commit the following acts: to intend to take away something that belongs to someone else, to say something to someone wrongfully, to hit or harm someone wrongfully, to cause harm to someone by taunting him, or to make ghîbah of a person. You have read the consequences of all this. You should therefore safeguard yourself from all this.

The story of Nâ'ilah

There was a tribe by the name of Jurhum which had settled down in Makkah when Ismâ'îl 'alayhis salâm was still a child. A woman by the name of Nâ'ilah belonged to this tribe. She had the audacity of committing adultery inside the Ka'bah. Allawh's punishment descended on her and the man who committed this evil act and they both turned into stone. The name of this man was Isâf. The people carried them to Safâ and Marwah and placed one of them on Safâ and the other on Marwah. They did this so that the people will look at them and fear the punishment of Allawh. They remained there for a long time. Eventually, a time came when ignorant persons began worshipping these two statues out of stupidity. It is for this reason that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam came, he had them removed and destroyed.

Lesson: May Allawh save us from His anger. This is the consequence of disobeying Him. If a person is saved in this world, how will he save himself in the hereafter? We learn from this that it is more serious to commit a sin in a holy place. In the same way, it is more serious to commit a sin at a sacred time. Some people do not even give up sinning in Ramadân and other holy months and days. The result of this is that the punishment is greater irrespective of whether it is ghîbah, oppression, spending money in prohibited things, etc.

The story of the wife of Bal'am Bâ'ûr

He was a very pious and abstinent person who lived in Syria. When the Muslims who belonged to the tribe of Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm joined Yûsha' 'alayhis salâm in order to free Baytul Maqdis from the hands of the kuffâr, the people of that place went to Bal'am and asked him to make a du'â against the Muslims so that they may be defeated. However, he refused and said: "It is extremely evil for a person to make du'â against a prophet and his followers. I will never do it." The people then went to his wife with a lot of wealth and gold and told her to contrive a plan to influence her husband in making the du'â. Because of her greed for all that wealth, she went to her husband and seduced him in such a way that he agreed to make the du'â. The moment he decided to make the du'â, he became bereft of his îmân and his tongue drooped up to his chest. When the Muslims gained victory, Bal'am Bâ'ûr was also killed.

Lesson: Look at what an evil thing greed is. For the sake of wealth and gold this woman destroyed her Dîn and her husband as well in that he lost his îmân and his life. O women! Even today, women who are overwhelmed by greed ask their husbands to receive bribes and are extremely proud to say that they have a lot of jewellery and a lot of money without even thinking for a moment that both husband and wife are preparing themselves for hell.

The story of the woman who killed Yahyâ 'alayhis salâm

There was a king who had a wife that had been married previously. This woman had a daughter from her previous marriage. When this woman became old, she felt that her husband (the king) will most probably become attracted to another woman. She therefore decided to get this daughter of hers married to her husband. She even got her daughter to agree to this liaison. This daughter also began making plans to attract the king towards her with various strategies. He also became attracted towards her. When Yahyâ 'alayhis salâm heard about this, he tried to stop the king from this. However, all three of them became his enemies and had him captured, brought before them, and be-headed. After this, the king decided to commit the prohibited act with this step-daughter of his. Yahyâ's severed head began speaking and said: "O you fool, she is not halâl for you!" But this wicked king paid no heed. Upon this, the blood from the head of Yahyâ 'alayhis salâm began to boil and overflow and did not subside. The 'ulamâ of that time said that as long as the blood of his killer is not made to flow (i.e. as long as they are not killed), this blood will not subside. There was a king of another neighbouring land. When he heard about this, he invaded this place and killed all the killers of Yahyâ 'alayhis salâm and 70 000 other kuffâr. Only then did the flowing of that blood subside.

Lesson: May Allawh save us from satanic acts. Can you see the consequences of following one's nafs: a prophet is killed, a sinful act is committed, even then the nafs was not satisfied, soon thereafter they were punished for this tyranny and all those people who had remained silent and did not express their displeasure at the actions of the king were all punished. We learn from this that following one's nafs, oppressing someone, and not expressing one's displeasure at seeing actions that are contrary to the Sharî'ah are actions that are extremely serious. One should safeguard oneself from all this. When the nafs prompts you to do something contrary to the Sharî'ah, don't ever obey it and don't ever abandon the Sharî'ah. Don't oppress anyone in any way irrespective of whether it is by causing him psychological harm, disgracing him or causing him financial harm - all this is considered to be oppression. If a person does anything contrary to the Sharî'ah, hate his action in your heart. If he cannot harm you in any way, show your dislike outwardly as well. By your liking such a person and maintaining contact with him, there is a fear that you will also be afflicted when he is punished.

The story of Shamsûn's Wife

When 'Îsâ 'alayhis salâm was raised to the heavens, this Shamsûn was a very pious and abstinent person. Allawh had blessed him with a lot of power. There was a kâfir king who was his enemy. He sent a message to Shamsûn's wife informing her that if she can capture Shamsûn and bring him to him, he will take her into his marriage. When Shamsûn fell asleep, this wretched woman fastened his hands and feet and handed him over to the kuffâr. They took him to the king. The king made an announcement that Shamsûn will be suspended on a cross and whoever wishes to see him may do so. Thousands of people gathered to watch this spectacle. It was at this time that Shamsûn made a du'â, the king's palace collapsed onto him, and he died. All the people rushed to remove the king's body from underneath the rubble. In the meantime, Shamsûn freed himself and reached safely home. Upon reaching home, he divorced his wife.

Lesson: Greed had completely overpowered this woman to the extent that she was even disloyal to such a good and pious husband. Despite this, she did not get what she desired for and even lost this good husband. This is how one is always punished for evil deeds. One should protect oneself from greed.

The story of the woman who accused Jurayj

In the time between the era of 'Îsâ 'alayhis salâm and Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam, there was a pious person by the name of Jurayj. He occupied himself in the ibaadah of Allawh at a young age. He distanced himself from society and built a house for his 'ibâdah in a jungle. Once he was busy offering nafl salât when his mother came and called for him. Because he was occupied in his salât, he could not reply to her call. However, his mother did not know that he was busy in salât. She therefore became angry and said: "O Allawh! Make it such that he sees the face of a prostitute." Since parents have a great right over the children, the ruling is that when they call for you while you are engaged in nafl salât and they do not know that you are busy in this nafl salât, you should break your salât and answer their call. However, Jurayj did not know this rule and therefore did not reply. In this way, he displayed a shortcoming in fulfilling the right of his mother. And it was for this reason that she cursed him. On account of this, a few jealous persons went to a prostitute and asked her to disgrace Jurayj in some way or the other. She fell pregnant on account of an illicit relationship with someone and alleged that Jurayj is the father of the child. The people went to his house and completely destroyed it. They harassed Jurayj and informed him that this woman claims that you are the father of this child. Jurayj addressed this small breast-fed child by saying: "Who is your father?" This small child (who had not yet reached the age where he could speak) spoke and gave the name of a certain shepherd. Upon hearing this, all the people became staunch adherents of Jurayj. They began embracing him and told him that they will rebuild his house with gold. He replied: "No, make it with mud, just as it was previously." Eventually, they made him a house as it had been previously.

Lesson: Look at how that woman was disgraced by accusing a pious person and how Allawh humiliated her. Don't ever accuse an innocent person. Some women have the habit of accusing another woman of adultery or stealing on the slightest suspicion. These are all sinful acts. We also learn that it is not good to curse the children all the time because we do not know when it will be accepted. Thereafter, the children are put into difficulty and on seeing this, the parents are also distressed. We also learn that parents have great rights over their children. These days, many people are neglectful in this regard. O women! Don't ever be neglectful in this regard, nor should you display any shortcoming in this regard.

It is mentioned in Bukhârî that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam mentioned a story from the Banû Isrâ'îl. There was a woman who had caught a cat and kept it enclosed without feeding it, giving it anything to drink, or leaving it open so that it could catch rats and thereby fend for itself. This cat soon died out of extreme hunger. Allawh admitted her into jahannam. It is mentioned in another narration that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam saw this cat walking on this woman's chest and scratching her with its nails and claws.

Lesson: You have read the consequences of mercilessness. Do not be merciless irrespective of whether it be a human or an animal. However, if a dog or cat troubles you a lot, it will be permissible to strike it. But it is a great sin to tease it. Some hard-hearted persons domesticate parrots, mynahs, and other animals - they encage such animals and do not even worry about their food and drink. Furthermore, they have no concern over their need to be in the sun or in the shade, nor do they even worry about freeing them. The consequence of teasing an animal in this manner is also disastrous in this world. Such persons are prone to various difficulties and have no peace of mind. As for punishment in the hereafter, you have already read what happened to this woman. O women! Safeguard yourself from mercilessness.

'Uthmân radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that there was a pious and abstinent person in the previous ummahs. An immoral woman desired him, so she sent her slave-girl to him with the following message: "I have engaged in a major financial transaction with someone. I need a witness for this purpose. There is a great reward in becoming a witness for the pleasure of Allawh. Please come and make yourself a witness." This person was a simple-minded person. He therefore went to her house. The moment he entered her house, the slave-girl locked all the doors. When he went further, he saw that immoral woman sitting down with a bottle of alcohol at her side and a small boy next to her. When she saw him she said: "I did not call you to be a witness but to break your piety. Either engage in sexual intercourse with me, drink this alcohol or kill this boy." This poor pious servant was at a total loss, not knowing what to do in order to save his life. After pondering over the matter, he came to the conclusion that drinking the alcohol is the lightest of all the sins. The moment he drank the alcohol, he lost his senses and thereby committed the other two sins as well.

Lesson: Sins have a special relationship in the sense that once a person commits one sin, it leads him to other sins as well. It is for this reason that one should abstain from all sins irrespective of whether they be minor or major. If not, the doors of all other sins are opened. It has been noticed that a woman wishes to marry her children according to the norms and customs of that place or her family thinking that although it is contrary to the Sharî'ah, it is not such a serious thing. She also has the money which she had estimated that it would cost her to have this wedding. After thinking over all these matters, she commenced with the preparations. Upon embarking on the preparations, she encounters so many complications, that many major sins are also committed. At times, the expenses go beyond the actual estimation and she has to take loans on interest. At times, she may mix her money with that of her orphan children and spend it without differentiating between the two. It is harâm for her to spend their wealth. That very harâm wealth is used to feed her guests. Look at how one sin led to another. In the same way, all other sins lead to many other sins.

Mûsû 'alayhis salâm filled a well with water and made such a du'â that the water had such an effect that if an immoral woman had to drink that water, her face would turn black in colour and she would die immediately. The effect of this water remained even after the demise of Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm. Once, a person suspected his wife of adultery. This suspicion of his was true. When the husband began talking about this and mentioned it to the judges of that time, they gave a ruling that she should drink the water from that well and summoned for her. She had another sister who looked very much like her. It was extremely difficult to distinguish the two. This woman deluded her sister into going on her behalf. She went and drank the water in the presence of everyone. Since she was pure, nothing happened to her and all the people were surprised. When she went home and met her impure sister, the moment her breath touched her, her entire face turned black. She died there and then, and everyone came to know of her treachery.

Lesson: Treachery and concealing something does not last for long. Allawh definitely disgraces the person. O women! You should keep your heart pure in your speech and dealings, and your tongue (speech) true.

The story of Umme Jamîl

She is the wife of the kâfir Abu Lahab. She is mentioned in the Quran in Sûrah al-Masad (chapter 111). She bore so much of hatred towards Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam that she used to go into the jungle, bring thorny twigs and throw them at night on the path which Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam would take so that they may prick his feet. Once she was walking with the bundle of twigs on her head with the rope of the bundle under her chin so that the bundle does not open up. All of a sudden, the bundle fell backwards and the rope that was under her chin slipped to her throat. It strangled her and she died.

Lesson: May Allawh save us. The consequences of hatred and malice towards the Dîn and pious people are terrible in this world and in the hereafter as well. Some women are in the habit of rejecting the masâ'il that are taught by the 'ulamâ. They mock at those who act on these masâ'il. This specifically happens when they act upon the masâ'il that are connected to weddings and funerals or advices in this regard. They do not like this advice and feel insulted. This is also regarded as bearing hatred towards the Dîn. You have already read the consequences of this in this world and in the hereafter. Repent from such actions and abstain from them in the future.

The story of the women who were killed on the day that Makkah was conquered Makkah was under the control of the kuffâr. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam expelled them and took control over Makkah. This incident is known as the conquest of Makkah. There were many women among these kuffâr who used to sing poems and songs denouncing Islam. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam issued an order to have such women killed wherever they are found. Among them, these four women were killed: Qarîbah, Fartanah, Arît, and Umme Sa'd.

Lesson: Our Rasûl sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam was extremely merciful and noble. He also prohibited the Muslims from killing the kuffâr women who participated in the battles. However, the evils of these four women were so extensive that it became the order of Allawh that they be killed because Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam did not do anything without the order of Allawh. The crime that they committed was that they denounced Islam and combined this with poetry and singing. Even today, some women have this sickness of saying whatever they wish against the Sharî'ah. Some women even sing songs against the 'ulamâ. They should fear the consequences of this.

The story of Zaynab bint Hârith

There was a place by the name of Khaybar which was inhabited by Jews. Rasûlullâh *sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam*had waged a war against them and defeated them. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam remained behind after the victory. A Jewish woman by the name of Zaynab came to him and gave him some food as a gift. This wretched woman had mixed some poison in that food. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and a few of his Sahâbah began eating it. Through the power of Allawh, he realized that this food had been poisoned. He immediately withdrew his hand and ordered his Sahâbah to stop eating. However, one Sahâbî had already died because of this poisoning. The effect of this poison remained with Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and eventually became the cause of his death as well. It is mentioned in some books of Hadith that after the Sahâbî died, this woman was questioned and she admitted to poisoning the food. She was therefore killed.

Lesson: The enmity of this woman towards Islam led her to this treacherous act. O women! Don't ever have evil thoughts about Islam and the Sharî'ah. You should accept it happily.

The story of Labîd's (a Jew) daughters

They all agreed to practice black magic in order to kill Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. He was saved from being killed but the effect of this was that his memory became weak - not in Dînî matters but with regard to eating, drinking, sitting, walking, etc. Thereafter, Allawh revealed Sûrah al-Falaq (chapter 113) and Sûrah an-Nâs (chapter 114). Through the barakah of these two sûrahs, the effect of this black magic disappeared completely.

Lesson: The enmity of these people towards Dîn debased them to the extent that they even planned to kill Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. Don't ever bear any hatred towards the Dîn and the pious.

The story of Salmâ bint Mâlik

This woman had become a Muslim in the era of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. He had predicted that she will not remain a Muslim. After the demise of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam she became crazed in establishing her own government and turned away from Islam. Many other kuffâr joined her. Eventually, the Muslim armies invaded her place and killed her together with her followers.

Lesson: Just as love for wealth can lead one astray, so can the desire to become a leader. Look at this woman who destroyed her religious and worldly life. O women! Consider yourself to be the lowest and adopt humility. Through this, Allawh will bless you with honour in both the worlds.

The story of Qatâmah

There is a heretical group which is known as the Kharijites. Kharijites claim to be Muslims but many of their beliefs are contrary to the Dîn. This group sprung up during the caliphate of 'Alî radiyallâhu 'anhu. He fought many battles against these Kharijites. They were his great enemies. Once, three members of this group got together in Makkah. At that time, 'Alî radiyallâhu 'anhu was living in Kûfah. They made a plan to kill him and two other Sahâbah. One person by the name of 'Abdur Rahmân bin Muljim volunteered to kill 'Alî radiyallâhu 'anhu. He went to Kûfah for this purpose. On reaching there, he met this wretched woman. After seeing her, he proposed to her. She replied: "If you can pay me my dowry, I will accept." He asked: "What do you want as dowry?" She replied: "You will have to kill 'Alî." This woman was a Kharijite. Her father, brother, uncle and husband were killed by 'Alî radiyallâhu 'anhu in battle. They were all Kharijites as well. It was for this reason that she had made this request. This person accepted her request, went to the musjid before the fajr salât, and concealed himself behind the door. When 'Alî radiyallâhu 'anhu entered the musjid, this person came out, struck him with his sword and escaped. 'Alî radiyallâhu 'anhu passed away on account of this wound. Later, this person was caught and killed.

Lesson: If this woman had any love for her Dîn, she would not have had any animosity towards 'Alî radiyallâhu 'anhu on account of the irreligiousness of her relatives. However, she herself was irreligious and therefore committed this crime. O women! Create love for the Dîn in your hearts. If not, major sins will be committed out of irreligiousness.

The story of Ju'dah bint Ash'ab

She is the wife of Hasan radiyallâhu 'anhu. She destroyed herself in the following way: Yazîd who was an enemy of Hasan deluded her into poisoning her pious husband. Yazîd had deluded this wretched woman by promising to marry her and giving her 100 000 dirhams. The strength of the poison cut his intestines and liver in such a way that they were excreted from his anus. He bore this difficulty for forty days and passed away. Thereafter, this woman sent a message to Yazîd asking him to fulfil his promise. He sent a clear reply that he is unable to keep her with him. In short, apart from committing the sin, this unfortunate woman was not even able to fulfil her worldly dreams.

Lesson: O women! All these evils took place because of love for the world. Whatever one acquires out of greed is always considered to be little (i.e. one is never satisfied). Remove this sickness from the heart and cleanse your heart from the desire of wealth, possessions, jewellery, clothing, etc.
Note: Thus far we have mentioned the stories of 20 evil women. We will now mention the stories of women who were evil in the beginning but reformed their ways later in life.

The story of Zulaykhâ

She was first married to the governor of Egypt. The governor had purchased Yûsuf 'alayhis salâm and handed him over to her, asking her to rear him as she would her own child. She began having evil thoughts but Allawh saved Yûsuf 'alayhis salâm. Thereafter, the governor felt it would be better to imprison Yûsuf 'alayhis salâm. Later, when the king of Egypt released him, the latter sent a message to the king asking him to ask the woman about him. When the king asked her, she replied that Yûsuf was innocent and that it was she who was at fault. Eventually, when Yûsuf 'alayhis salâm became the king and the governor had died by then, he married Zulaykhâ. Two daughters by the name of Ifrâ'îm and Mîshâ'îm were born to them.
Lesson: Look at what a great quality honesty is that when she had falsely accused Yûsuf 'alayhis salâm, her difficulties and problems continued to increase daily. When she spoke the truth, Allawh cut off all her difficulties and opened the doors for her success in the following way: her husband passed away, Yûsuf 'alayhis salâm became the king, and he married her. O women! Always speak the truth. If you make a mistake or commit a wrong, repent immediately. Do not be persistent in the mistake and do not be proud to admit your fault.

The story of a woman who was deluded by Qârûn

In the time of Mûsâ alayhis salaam there was a very rich and miserly person by the name of Qârûn. When Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm asked him to pay his zakât, he became angry and displayed animosity towards him. This wretched man went to the extent of trying to taint the honour of Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm. He got hold of an immoral woman, gave her a lot of money and jewellery and deluded her into accusing Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm of committing adultery with her. She agreed to this plan. Once Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm was delivering a lecture and explained that one is punished in a certain way for a certain sin. Qârûn stood up from his place and shouted: "If you commit such a sin, what will happen?" Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm replied: "I will receive the same punishment." Upon this he said: "A certain woman accuses you of the same thing." This woman was also present. Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm addressed her saying that she should take an oath and speak the truth. She began fearing Allawh and said: "O prophet of Allawh! You are pure and innocent. He had given me so much of money and jewellery and prompted me to accuse you. I repent and become a Muslim now." Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm became very angry at him and made a du'â to Allawh against Qârûn. Qârûn was devoured by the earth together with his wealth and was despatched to jahannam.
Lesson: When Allawh guides a person towards taubah and adopting the straight path, the means to fulfil this are provided there and then. The fear of Allawh is the root of guidance and repentance. O women! Develop this in your hearts and everything will be made easy for you.

The story of a woman who admitted her sin

A woman came to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and said that she was deluded by shayṭân into committing adultery. The ruling of the Sharî'ah in this regard is that if a husband or wife commit adultery, he or she should be stoned to death. This woman knew this ruling and also understood that although she will lose her life by admitting to this sin, her fear of the punishment of the hereafter prompted her to come to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. She related the entire incident to him so that he may mete out the punishment and thereby purify herself. Another ruling of the Sharî'ah is that if someone admits to committing a sin, the person should be deferred. Based on this, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam deferred this woman. However, she was so courageous that she came again and again admitting her sin and asking him to mete out the punishment. This woman was pregnant at that time so she was given a respite until the child is born and weaned. Once the child was weaned, she presented herself to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam out of her own accord so that he may mete out the punishment. At this stage, the punishment of stoning till death was meted out to her. When she died, someone uttered a few bad words about her. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam replied: "Do not utter any evil about her. Her taubah is so great in the sight of Allawh that if it were to be distributed among 70 people it would have been sufficient for their salvation. What can be greater than the fact that she gave her life for the sake of Allawh Ta'ala."
Lesson: The fear of Allawh is a very great bounty. Allâhu Akbar! What a great burden this woman bore. May Allawh also give us the good fortune of abandoning sins and making taubah. Now there are no standard bearers of the Sharî'ah. One should repent over the sins that are committed against Allawh. We also learn from this story that we should not look down upon someone who has made taubah, nor should we criticize the person. This is a major sin.

The story of a woman who repented for stealing

'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ narrates that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam had chopped off the hand of a woman who had stolen something. Thereafter, this woman used to come to my house. Whenever she wished to say anything to Rasulullah sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam, she used to say it to me and I used to pass over her message to him. In other words, she had made a good taubah from the bottom of her heart.
Lesson: Look at how clean-hearted she was that despite bearing such a great difficulty from the Sharî'ah and Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam, she did not bear any grudge towards him. This is how îmân and taubah should be - that one should not have any ill feeling on account of the ruling of the Sharî'ah. When one is afflicted by a calamity on account of a punishment from the Sharî'ah, one should not complain to Allawh. Instead, one should remember one's fault and be ashamed of it.

The story of Sajâh

After the demise of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam she concocted the madness of claiming prophethood. Many dim-witted persons joined her. There were many encounters which took place with her. Eventually she was unable to fight the Muslim armies any longer. She became a Muslim and repented.
Lesson: Glory be to Allawh! What a great thing taubah is. There isn't any sin that is greater than claiming prophethood. But when she repented and accepted Islam, this sin was also forgiven. O women! Do not delay in repenting. We also learn that it is a great evil to consider yourself to be great. It was the desire to become a leader over many people that prompted her to claim prophethood. May Allawh save us from this. It is best for one to consider oneself to be the lowest.
Note: We have now mentioned the stories of five evil women who repented over their sins and thereby completed the stories of 25 women.

A precautionary note

The condition of women that has been written in the following article is not applicable to all women but to evil women only. As opposed to these women, we also find women who fulfil the following qualities which Allawh has mentioned in regard to them - women who surrender themselves unto Allawh, who truly believe, devoutly obey His will, turn (unto Him) in repentance (whenever they have sinned), worship (Him) alone, and go on and on (seeking His goodly acceptance)...In the same way you get certain men who are unrivalled in their oppression, hard-heartedness, destroying the rights of others, vagrancy, and shamelessness. Their wives exercise patience with modesty and remain silent (over their husbands' evil ways).
The purpose of quoting this article which has been written by my fellow village person is that if any woman possesses the shortcomings that are mentioned therein, she should take heed and try to reform her ways. Alternatively, the man should try to reform her in a good and favourable manner. This is because the knowledge of the husband is necessary for reformation. And Allawh knows best. We will now quote that article.

Points to remember

I am writing this article in order to inform women on their lack of intelligence which is considerable and regarding which I have some experience. I do not consider it to be appropriate to conceal these shortcomings of theirs at this stage. I am writing this to serve as an example and that they may come to know of these shortcomings.
1. Generally, women of this nature reduce the honour and respect of their husbands in comparison to themselves. They impose themselves over their husbands in such a manner that it is as though the husband is a woman and the wife is a man.

2. Some women make this intention and claim from the very day of their marriage that they will live separately. The moment such a woman comes to the house of her in-laws, she plants the seeds of turmoil with her father-in-law, mother-in-law, sister-in-law, etc. She spends all her time thinking and planning of ways to cause trouble in the house.
3. This woman destroys the numerous hopes and wishes of the poor in-laws who bring a daughter-in-law into their home. She makes them taste the consequences of this marriage very quickly.
4. This daughter-in-law does not have the patience to wait for the ideal opportunity to separate from the in-laws. When the time comes, she will have to separate from them. If a person did not separate or move away from his family, we would not have had so many towns and cities. But she does not even have this intelligence to wait for the ideal opportunity. She wants everything to happen immediately.
5. She causes tension to her husband in this way and tells him various stories to the extent that even he cannot escape from being influenced by her. She has arguments with her father-in-law, mother-in-law, sister-in-law, and whoever else may be in the house. She engages in all these fights and arguments intentionally so that she may be able to go and live separately. Eventually, according to her wishes, the separation takes place very quickly because every person would like an end to arguments and fights.
6. The woman utters such words to her husband that he begins perspiring on account of listening to them. But what can he do apart from remaining silent? If he has to reply verbally, by indication of his eyes or physically with his hands, you must see the conflict that will ensue and see how the entire neighbourhood comes to know of it. The woman will cry out aloud and portray herself to the entire neighbourhood in such a way as though it is the man's fault.
7. If the woman presents herself according to the pleasure of her husband and obedience to her in-laws from the very day of her marriage, what is wrong with that? But no, she troubles her husband in numerous ways. If the husband feels that the sensible thing to do is to restrain himself and go outside, the stupid wife feels that he went outside because he is afraid of me. Later, she displays even more force.
8. Allawh has blessed the man with strength, vigour and courage. Where will he become afraid of the woman? He considers it prudent to restrain himself but the woman does not even worry about this. All that she is concerned about is to increase the arguments, fights, etc. that she had commenced with from the day she married him.
9. Such women do not realize that their husbands undergo numerous hardships and difficulties to provide for them and that they should appreciate this. However, they do not even ponder over this by mistake. One should think over this state of affairs.
10. When the husband sees that there is no way of reforming the woman's lack of discernment and her improper manners, he gives up and leaves home. He does not even think of returning home after several years. His heart becomes so hard towards his wife that he takes up a job wherever he finds one, earns a living for himself and uses this as a means to gain internal happiness. The woman remains at home fighting with her in-laws so that they may send her to her husband. But she does not realize that he left because of her. She does not even regret her stupidity.
11. If the woman does everything to please her husband from the very first day and obeys her in-laws in a way that they do not even realize that their daughter-in-law will go and live separately at some time in the future, she will turn the entire household into her slaves. If the husband or in-laws have certain shortcomings which are contrary to the temperament of the wife, she must try to reform their ways in a beautiful and appropriate manner with full wisdom and prudence that they do not even realize what she is doing. If she is able to do this, those shortcomings will disappear from them. But if she does this by imposing upon them or acting against their wishes, they will never be reformed. In fact, the husband will become more stubborn. If the woman cannot even maintain the love of her husband towards her, whose fault is it?
12. Some stupid women think that they have come from very rich homes and that they have brought many possessions to this house. It is therefore below their dignity to obey their husbands and in-laws. Some women go to the extent that they do not even speak properly with their husbands - serving them is very far-fetched. They will either lie around or sleep the entire day with a frown on their faces.
13. These days, women have innovated a new method of displaying their elegance and affluence. That is, they complain of being ill and do not even get out of bed. They will complain of a headache and cause discomfort to their husbands and in-laws. They will demand expensive medicines, silver leaves, a special fruit jam and other supplements. In short, even her headache is not given a chance. At times, she will complain of being overpowered by a demon.
14. These women make their husbands completely subservient to them in such a way that they lose their intelligence and senses and become absolutely dim-witted persons. The husband has no alternative but to agree to whatever she says. Alternatively, he has to execute her wishes and commands immediately. He has to remain subservient to her all the time, or else the consequences will be terrible.
15. On account of their short temper, their numerous arguments and their stupidity, such women destroy all the barakah of the house. They behave with their husbands as though he is an enemy. These days, some men find comfort only in the absence of their wives. When the husband receives a letter from his wife, the only thing it contains is stories of the fights that she had and complaints about the in-laws. Alternatively, she will ask for more money. At times she uses such concocted words that the moment he completes reading the letter, he tears it up immediately so that no one else may see it.
16. The husband earns a few rands and sends it to his wife. But the only thing she knows is to show that she owes a lot of money or send him some concocted calculations and demand for more money. She does not even think for a moment what difficulties he underwent in order to send that money. She does not realize that he has full concern of running the house, why should she write to him and put him under more stress and tension? She does not even think over what difficulties he underwent in that far away place and how he gave up many comforts in order to send her the money order. If the husband was living in comfort, how will he send you all this money so that you may live a comfortable life?
17. These ungrateful women do not express their gratitude to their husbands even by mistake. They do not even praise their husbands in the presence of his friends and relatives. What they will definitely do is cast thousands of accusations against him and continue complaining about their poverty and lack of resources at home in the presence of her entire family and outsiders as well. In short, they do not allow the honour of the husband to remain intact. You will not come across a woman whose husband has sent her plenty of money, using it to run the house in a beautiful manner, saving the extra money and handing it over to the husband the moment he returns home.
18. On the contrary, what she will do is that the moment he returns home she will ask him for money in order to fulfil her debts, and treating her debtors like enemies, she will summon for them to present themselves in front of her husband. As a result of this, the husband will regret his decision to return home and feel very sorry for falling into all these difficulties.
19. You will find many women demanding more money from their husbands on the pretext that they have many debts when in fact they are saving this money for themselves. They do not even mind having their husbands spending their entire lives in a far away place merely to fill their own bank balances.
20. These days, women have adopted this attitude that no matter what happens, they must set aside some money. When they go to their parents' house or relatives house, they secretly hand over this money to them without the in-laws coming to know of this. In short, the status and honour of the husband which is the result of all his earning is nothing according to her. The husband works in a far away place like an overworked wretch and dies, but the woman does not allow him to live at home in comfort and ease.
21. On account of the husband working far away, he does not know what type of clothing, jewellery, money, etc. is present at home. At times he might come home for a short visit and in the meantime the wife has given the household effects, clothing, jewellery, etc. to her brother or anyone else she wishes and no one has the courage to say anything.
22. When the husband brings anything from overseas for her, she looks at it scornfully and finds hundreds of faults. If she happens to fancy what he has brought, she does not express her happiness or her gratitude in the presence of her husband or his relatives. She will immediately keep it away and later do whatever she wishes with it.

23. Women are in the habit of imposing on their husbands at a time when relatives come to the house. They will start an argument over trivial matters and cause great embarrassment to their husbands and in-laws. It is as if they have become enemies at that time.
24. When the husband brings anything from overseas for his brothers, relatives, spiritual guide, etc. the wife does not allow the husband to give it and says to him that he cannot give it to anyone without her consent. You must see the consequences of this and how the entire neighbourhood looks at this spectacle. Out of anger, the wife will punish the husband and the other house folk for several days.
25. When the husband sends any money to the wife with someone, the wife immediately goes to purchase expensive jewellery, clothing, brocades, etc. which are well beyond her status and financial position and which are normally purchased by the very rich. The following day she writes a letter to the husband stating that the money that you have sent has been used to pay all the creditors and that there is no money left to run the house. Therefore send more money. In this way, she puts her husband under great stress.
26. These days, women are also in the habit of mentioning everything that transpires at their in-laws' houses to their parents. The woman does not even worry about whether it is true or false. Upon hearing these stories, her mother will mention them to her entire family after having multiplied them several times (i.e. she would exaggerate these stories). When her relatives go to the in-laws' place, the mother sides with the daughter and many arguments follow. This becomes known to the other relatives and at times they result in physical fights as well.
27. Let someone ask if such a woman has any love and affection towards her husband - definitely not. She is the lord and ruler over her husband. It is not possible for the rule of the woman to vanish or for any of her orders to be disobeyed. Let the man do something out of his own accord and you must see the scene that will follow.
28. The wife will ask the husband about what he is thinking or what's in his heart. The husband, under the assumption that she is his confidant, tells her everything. As a result of this, the woman becomes more daring and courageous and the husband loses all his honour. Everywhere, it is considered to be necessary to gain the upper hand over the husband and to bring him at the feet of the wife.
29. The woman develops a natural dislike for the husband's relatives, brothers, sisters, etc. and continues complaining about them irrespective of whether it is true or false. Her actual purpose of this is that they must not mix with them a lot and that all contact with them must be severed.
30. Such women have turned their husbands into real dim-witted persons, tied a nose-string in their noses and led them wherever they wish. They, owing to their high ambitions, follow their husbands like tails to foreign lands. All they wish to do is view all the attractions of rail travel, to experience the climate of foreign lands, and to experience the various pleasures they have to offer. The greatest objective is to make some arrangements to ensure that whatever the husband earns comes entirely into their possession because they are under the impression that the men are living in luxury and that they squander their money. Such women have rendered their husbands worthless. It has become very difficult for men to pursue employment without the womenfolk being around. It seems as though the women themselves are being employed. The women have resorted to such measures of sorcery and ta'wîz that the men have become ensnared in their traps, turning them into their disciples.
31. When there is any marriage or funeral in their family, the women get together and begin gossiping about their husbands and speak ill of them. The women in turn go back to their respective husbands and inform them of what transpired. The husbands then go and inform their friends and make a mockery of the whole thing. In short, the women spread stories that did not even occur.
32. These women have amulets and charms made for their husbands. They even request the women who come to their houses to have these amulets made for their husbands. In return for this favour, they give them some flour or pea-seeds without the in-laws coming to know of this. I am quite aware of some women who are forever in pursuit of an owl's tongue to feed it to their husbands no matter how obedient the husband is to her.
33. The actual reason for men losing their honour and the women gaining control over them is that they accompany their husbands on journeys and thereby become bold and courageous and gain full control of them. Once the woman realizes this, she has the courage to scold him several times a day. The poor husband listens to everything she has to say. At times, he even laughs and expresses his willingness and happiness.
34. All the above factors are found less among the wives of poor people and those living in the small villages. The reason for this is that they are not so intelligent, their pre-occupation with domestic tasks does not allow them to do this nor are they in the habit of picking fights all the time. They merely fulfil their tasks and pass their time in a good way. As for the woman who is self-opinionated, egotistic, self-centred, who is filled with the love for governing and comfort, and also has all these factors at her disposal will initiate numerous fights and arguments. This is because she has no work to do and no responsibilities. If she does not engage in all these arguments, what else can she do?
35. If such a woman is educated, then at times her ways and manners also become evil. These days, some enthusiastic people are clamouring for the education of women to be equal to that of men. It is due to this that all this vagrancy is present today and the evil consequences of this have already been experienced.
36. You will not find a woman (except a few) who advises her husband and informs him that she does not want any income other than that which is halâl. If a woman does this, her husband will never bring any harâm money or money that has been obtained by accepting bribes. On the contrary, women prompt and demand their husbands to bring such harâm income. In fact, some of them will go to the extent of telling the husband that he has no proficiency in earning any money. A certain person earns the same money as you but you don't have anything. He has everything in his house. In this way, they utter many other things in order to prompt the husband into bringing more money. It is due to the desires of such women that the husband becomes disgraced and even ends up in prison.
37. The women possess jewellery and other items on which zakât is wâjib. It does not even cross their minds that they are answerable to Allawh and that they should fulfil this obligation that is due to Allawh. If the husband decides to pay the zakât, the woman does not allow him to do so - thinking that all that she has collected is decreasing. No matter how much you give them, they always find it little.
38. On account of the husband working far away, the woman is free to do whatever she wishes and becomes so desirous of luxury and comfort that when the husband returns home, she considers it below her dignity to see to his needs or to feed him with freshly cooked food. At times she will also remark that the husband was better off away from home. Why did he have to come home now?
39. How sad that today men have lost their dignity, their honour and their masculinity in the presence of the women of today and have been rendered absolutely weak.
40. If such a woman is able to read and write and someone has to secretly write a letter to her, won't she reply to that letter? Even if she does not reply to it, she will definitely read the letter with great attention and think over it. Later they will begin corresponding to each other and lead to other factors as well.
41. These days women who are able to read and write obtain novels from the shops and occupy themselves all the time in reading them. They spend all their time thinking of ways of obtaining such novels.
Request: We request the reader to read the beginning of the precautionary note again - the essence of which is that every woman is not evil and every man is not a saint. Therefore, the above factors do not apply to all women but certain women only.

BOOK XXXIII

MISCELLANCEOUS RULINGS

INTRODUCTION

This part of Bahishti Zewar consists of things which would give one peace of mind in this world and at the same time prevent one from causing discomfort to others. Outwardly they may appear to be worldly matters. However, Rasulullah sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam has said that a complete Muslim is he from whose hands and tongue other Muslims are safe. Rasulullah sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam has said that it is not appropriate for a Muslim to place himself into any difficulty and thereby cause disgrace to himself. It has been mentioned in a Hadith that when Rasulullah sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam used to deliver a lecture, he would always take his listeners into consideration by ensuring that he does not put them into discomfort. Rasulullah sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam has said that when a person is a guest at someone's house, he should not stay there to the extent that he causes discomfort and disturbance to his hosts. We learn from all these Ahadeeth that it is contrary to the Deen to unnecessarily put yourself into difficulty or to put others into difficulty. Furthermore, it is also contrary to the Deen to act in a way which would cause difficulty and discomfort to others. It is for this reason that, together with Deeni matters, we have included such matters which would be of comfort both for oneself and others as well.

Matters of Etiquette and Comfort

1. When you begin shutting the doors at night, check around properly whether any dog or cat has not entered the house. Ensure that there is nothing in the house which could cause harm to your life or damage to your belongings. There are many things which can cause disturbance to your sleep.
2. Occasionally, keep your clothes and books in the sun.
3. Keep your house clean and ensure that everything is kept at the right place.
4. If you desire to maintain your health, do not seek excessive relaxation. Engage in some strenuous work. The best thing for women is to grind their own wheat, to pound with a pestle, or to use a spinning wheel. In carrying out these tasks, the body remains strong and healthy.
5. If you go to meet anyone or go to speak to someone, do not sit there nor remain speaking to the extent that it causes discomfort to the person or to the extent that it causes him delay in completing his work.
6. All the inhabitants of the house should be made to conform to the rule that everything has a specific place where it would be kept. When anyone takes it from there, he should replace it at that very place the moment he completes using it. This is so that others will not have to ask for it or search for it everywhere. By changing the place of an item, at times no one is able to find it. This causes great discomfort to everyone. As for the things which are used specifically by you, keep them in specific places so that when you need them, you are able to get them without even looking. In other words, because you are used to them being in a particular place, you will be able to obtain them by merely stretching out your hand.
7. Do not leave the sofa, any utensil, brick, etc. in the way. It happens very often at night and during the day at times, that a person walks without noticing these items. As a result, he slips and falls and even hurts himself.
8. When anyone asks you to do something, ensure that you reply verbally in the affirmative or negative so that the person knows exactly whether you are going to do it or not. If you do not reply verbally, it is possible that the person may be under the impression that you have heard what has been said when in actual fact you did not even hear him. Alternatively, he may be under the impression that you have agreed to carry out that task when in actual fact you do not wish to carry it out. This would result in that person unnecessarily relying on you to carry out that task.
9. When adding salt to the food, add a little less than normal. If those who are eating find it less, they can always add more. But if you add extra, you will not be able to lessen it.
10. When adding chillies to dhals, vegetables, curries, etc. do not cut the chillies. Instead, grind them into powder and then add them. By cutting them, the seeds remain intact and if these have to be eaten, they would cause the mouth to burn.
11. If you happen to drink water at night and the light is on, ensure that you look at it carefully prior to drinking it. If there are no lights, cover the mouth of the container or the tumbler with a cloth (or strainer) so that no harmful substance enters the water.
12. Do not throw or toss children when playing with them. At the same time, do not suspend them from a window or any other elevated place. Allawh forbid, it must not happen that the child slips out of your hand, falls down, and this playing turns into a tragedy. In the same way, do not chase them. It is possible that they will fall and get hurt.
13. Once a pot is empty, wash it and keep it upside down. When you wish to use it again, rinse it first.
14. When you intend keeping a pot (of food) on the table, do not do so without checking beneath it to see whether it is dirty or not. (This is especially so when it has been heated over a gas stove or fire because in such cases the pot most definitely turns black).
15. When you go as a guest to someone's house, do not ask for anything. The thing which you ask for may seem insignificant. However, it is something that is based on availability (i.e. it may have just got finished prior to your arrival). By your asking for it, you will be putting your host in an embarrassing situation.
16. Do not spit or clean your nose at a place where others are present. If there is a need to do so, excuse yourself and fulfil your need elsewhere.
17. When eating food, do not mention things which would cause disgust or nausea to others. This causes great discomfort to those who have very sensitive temperaments.
18. When in the presence of a sick person or his relatives, do not mention things which would cause them to lose hope in life and unnecessarily break their heart. Instead, console them by saying that Insha Allawh, all pain will go away, etc.
19. If you have to say anything secretive about a particular person and the latter is also sitting there, do not say anything by making gestures with your eyes or hands. This would unnecessarily put the person in doubt. This rule only applies if what you wish to say about the person is considered to be permissible in the Shariah. If it is not permissible, then it will be a sin to say such things.
20. When speaking, do not make excessive gestures with your hands.
21. Do not wipe your nose with your scarf, sleeve, edge of the skirt, dress, etc.
22. Always dust your shoes (or strike them against each other) prior to wearing them. It is possible that there is a harmful object or animal sitting inside. You should do the same with your clothes and sheets (prior to going to bed).
23. If a person has any sores, pimples, etc. in his private places, do not ask him where they are. This would cause unnecessary embarrassment to the person.
24. Do not sit at a place where many people are walking up and down. This would cause discomfort to them and to you as well.
25. Do not allow any smell to develop on your clothes or body (on account of their being dirty or not having a bath for a long time).
26. Do not sweep a place where others are seated.
27. Do not throw seeds (of fruit) and peels on anyone.
28. Do not play around with a knife, scissors, pins, etc. It's possible that you will mistakenly hurt yourself.
29. When any guest comes to your house, show him the toilet first. Do not worry about preparing a very elaborate meal which would cause a delay in his having the meal. Prepare the meals on time even if they may be simple. On the day of his departure, ensure that his breakfast is prepared quickly and early. In short, there must be no shortcoming in seeing to his comfort.
30. Do not come out of the toilet or bathroom while you are still tying your pants (or putting your dress in order). Do all this in the toilet or bathroom and then come out.
31. When anyone asks you anything, answer him first and then continue with your work.
32. When you say anything (to anyone) or give a reply to anyone, speak clearly so that the person understands you thoroughly.
33. When you have to give anything to anyone, do not throw it from far. It is possible that it will not reach him and would get damaged. Go to the person and give it directly in his hand.
34. When two persons are busy teaching and learning or busy in a conversation, do not go near them and begin shouting and screaming. Do not even talk to them.
35. When anyone is busy in a certain task or busy talking, do not commence speaking to him the moment you go to him. Instead, wait for the opportune moment. When he turns towards you, commence speaking to him.
36. When you have to give anything to anyone, do not release it from your hand until and unless that person has got a proper hold over it. Many a time, an item falls while it is being transferred from one person to the other and thereby gets damaged.
37. When eating, keep all the bones, peels, etc. at one place. Do not spread them all over the place. Once you have gathered all, dispose of them at the appropriate place.

38. Do not walk too swiftly nor should you walk by raising your head too high. It is possible that you would fall.
39. When closing a book, close it very carefully. Many a time the first and last pages get turned.
40. You should not speak in praise of any ghayr mahram male in the presence of your husband. Some men do not like this.
41. In the same way, do not speak in praise of any woman in the presence of your husband. It is possible that he will become inclined towards her and disinterested in you.
42. When you meet someone with whom you have a formal relationship, you should not ask her about her house conditions, jewellery, clothing, etc.
43. Set aside three to four days a month in which you would remove all the cob webs, clean the carpets and floors, and keep everything in order.
44. If any piece of paper or book is kept in front of someone, you should not pick it up and look at it. If the piece of paper has something hand-written on it, it is possible that it is of a private and confidential nature. If it is printed (such as a book), it is possible that a hand-written note is kept inside it (and this may be of a private nature).
45. Be extremely cautious when ascending or descending a flight of stairs. In fact, it would be preferable to place one foot on one step first and before going to the next step, the second foot should also be placed onto the first step. Once both the feet are on one step, the next step should be climbed. Do not place one foot on one step and the other foot on the next step. This is totally inappropriate for girls and women. You should also stop boys from doing this from a young age.
46. Do not dust a garment, book or anything else in such a way that dust falls on the person who is sitting nearby. Similarly, you should not blow with your mouth or dust with a cloth (when anyone is sitting nearby). You should do all this when there is no one nearby.
47. When you hear any sad news regarding the death of someone, someone being afflicted by a calamity or someone falling ill, do not mention this to anyone as long as you have not established and verified the news which you have received. It is more important that you do not mention it to the person's relatives and near ones. If it is established that the news which you received was incorrect, you would have put these people under unnecessary stress and tension. Furthermore, they will accuse you of taking out a bad omen.
48. In the same way, if you are afflicted by any minor illness or difficulty, do not write to your distant relatives informing them of your illness and difficulty. (This would cause them unnecessary worry).
49. Do not spit on the walls especially if it is while eating betel leaves. In the same way, do not touch the walls and doors with oily hands. Instead, wash your hands. Do not consider burnt oil to be impure, as is the habit of some ignorant women.
50. If there is a need for more curry on the dining table, do not take away the dish that is in front of those who are eating. Instead, bring more curry in another dish.
51. If a person is sleeping on a bed or couch, do not shake him. If you have to pass by, then do so in such a way that you do not disturb him in any way. If you have to pick up anything from the bed or leave anything on it, then do so very silently.
52. Do not leave any food or drink open. In fact, if you leave any food or drink on the dining table and that thing will be eaten later or right at the end of the meal, you should still cover it.
53. Once the guest has eaten to his full, he should leave a little bit of curry or a small piece of bread so that his hosts do not feel that he did not get enough to eat. This could cause embarrassment to them.
54. Utensils that are empty and have to be kept away in the cupboard should be turned over and kept away.
55. When walking, lift your feet completely from the ground. Do not drag your feet because this would cause your shoes to wear out quickly and at the same time this is considered to be ill-mannered.
56. You must be careful when it comes to wearing shawls and head-coverings in that their edges and corners do not touch the ground.
57. If anyone asks for salt or any other food item, bring it in a utensil or dish. Do not bring it by placing it in your hand.
58. Do not speak immoral and obscene things in the presence of girls. In doing so, their modesty and bashfulness also disappears.

A few shortcomings of women

1. One of the shortcomings of women is that when they are questioned, they do not give a proper reply which would satisfy the questioner. They introduce many irrelevant facts and even then the actual thing which was asked is not known thoroughly. Remember that whenever anyone asks you anything, ponder over the actual meaning of what has been said. Thereafter give the appropriate answer.
2. Another shortcoming is that when a woman is given a task, she remains silent. The person who has ordered her to fulfil that task does not even know whether she has heard what has been said or not. At times, the person is under the assumption that she has heard when in actual fact she has not heard what has been said. As a result, that task is not fulfilled and when she is questioned about it, she absolves herself by saying that she did not hear. In short, that task remains unfulfilled. At other times, the person is under the assumption that she has not heard. He therefore repeats his order and the woman angrily replies: "I have heard! Don't "eat" my head." We can gauge from this that in both instances this results in ill-feeling between the two. Had the woman replied in the affirmative (or negative) at the very outset, they would have saved themselves from all this misunderstanding.
3. Another shortcoming is that when a woman wishes to give a certain task to the domestic servant or anyone else in the house, she will shout from a distance. There are two harms in this: One is that this is a sign of shamelessness and immodesty for it is highly possible that her voice will be heard out of the house and on certain occasions it will also be heard on the street. The other harm of this is that when a person shouts from a distance and issues orders, it is highly possible that some of the orders will be understood while others will not be understood. Those that have been understood will be carried out while those that have not been understood will not be carried out. As a result of this the woman will become angry and ask the domestic servant as to why she did not execute a certain task and the latter will reply that she did not even hear it. This results in each person blaming the other and the task remains unfulfilled. In the same way, when the domestic servant has anything to say, she does not enter the house and speak clearly. Instead, she stands at the door and shouts. Even in this case, certain things are understood while others are not. Etiquette demands that the woman should go to the person whom she wishes to address. Alternatively, she should call for the person and thereafter inform her of whatever she wishes to be done in a cool and collected manner.
4. Another shortcoming of women is that when they like something, they act impulsively and purchase it immediately irrespective of whether they need that item or not and even if they have to purchase it on credit. Even if one does not purchase on credit, it is a sign of great stupidity to squander one's money on unnecessary items. Extravagance and squandering one's wealth is also a sin. When you have to spend your money on a particular item, first ponder and think if there is any Deeni benefit in purchasing the item or any worldly necessity that would be fulfilled by purchasing it. If you find any benefit or necessity after pondering over the matter thoroughly, purchase the item. But if you find no benefit or necessity, do not squander your money. As far as possible, do not incur any debts even if it means experiencing a little difficulty or inconvenience.
5. Another shortcoming of women is that when they have to go into the town or embark on a journey, they delay in getting themselves ready. As a result, they are delayed in departing. If it was a long journey, they reach their destination late. If night falls and they are still travelling, there is fear over their lives and possessions. If it was a hot day, they become tired and weary and at the same time put their children under great stress. If it was during the rainy season, there is the fear of rain. Furthermore, it becomes difficult for the vehicle to move in the rain and mud. As a result they are further delayed. However, if they leave early in the morning, there are all types of conveniences and many alternatives. Even if one had to go to a nearby district and had to hire a taxi, the taxi driver is made to wait (on account of the woman's delay). Leaving late will cause you to return late, your domestic tasks will be delayed, you will be delayed in preparing the meals, the meal may be spoilt because of your rushing to complete your cooking, on the one hand your husband will demand his food and on the other hand your children will be crying for their food. Had you left early, you would not have experienced all these difficulties.
6. Another shortcoming when travelling is that women like to take along many unnecessary items. This puts the animal (that is to be mounted, eg. a horse or the car in present times) under stress, causes a shortage in space, and most of all, causes great problems for the men with whom they are travelling. It is the men who have to guard all the goods, very often they also have to carry the goods and it is they who have to pay the porters for carrying the goods. In short, it is the poor men who have to shoulder all the responsibilities while the women sit indifferently in the vehicle. Always carry few items when travelling. In doing so, you will be at ease all the way. Bear this in mind when travelling by train as well. In fact, one has to be more cautious when travelling by train.

7. Another shortcoming is that when they board a train (or any other public mode of transport) they inform the men to cover their faces (i.e. to lower their gazes) or to conceal themselves in one corner. After she has boarded, she does not inform the men that she is no longer a need to observe purdah. The harm of this is that those poor men continue covering their faces (i.e. lowering their gazes) or concealing themselves thus causing them unnecessary discomfort. At times, the men are under the misconception that the woman has covered herself and they therefore uncover their faces or come out of concealment, when in actual fact the woman has not covered herself as yet, resulting in the men seeing her uncovered. This is the harm of the woman not informing the men a second time. Had she informed them a second time, they would have all come to know that she is in the habit of informing a second time, they would all await her announcement and no one will come forward without first knowing her actual state.
8. Another shortcoming is that when a woman goes to someone's house, then the moment she disembarks from the vehicle, she barges into the house without even announcing her arrival. Many a time the men of the house are present and she has to confront them. You should not do this. Instead, prior to your getting off the vehicle, send someone inside to inquire and at the same time inform of your arrival. If there are any men, they will leave the room. Once you have heard that there are no men present, get off from the vehicle and enter the house.
9. In most cases when two women are conversing with each other, one of them begins speaking even before the other can complete what she was saying. Many a time, both of them commence speaking simultaneously and none of the two can hear the other's speech. What is the benefit in such a conversation? You should always remember that once a person has completed whatever he wishes to say, only then should the other person commence speaking.
10. Women are in the habit of leaving their jewellery and money lying around. At times they will merely keep it under the pillow or on a shelf. Despite their having locks and keys, they do not keep such items safely due to laziness. Later, if something has to get mislaid, she accuses everyone (of stealing it).
11. Another shortcoming is that if a woman is sent for a certain task, she will undertake another task at the same time. She only returns after completing both tasks. In doing this, she causes great stress and discomfort to the person who has sent her because he estimated the task to take a certain amount of time. Once this time passes, the person begins to get worried. On the other hand, this woman says (to herself): "I've come till here, let me do the other task as well." You should not do this. Execute the first task first and thereby fulfil his request. Once you have done so, you can undertake the second task at your own pace.
12. Another shortcoming is that of laziness. Women tend to postpone a particular task for a later period. In most cases this results in inconvenience and harm.
13. Another shortcoming is that she does not have any sense of urgency in her temperament. She does not look at the need and the circumstance - the situation demands that I hasten, therefore let me hurry and complete the task as soon as possible. She always opts for "taking things very easily" and going into great pains in doing something (that does not require so much of attention and formality). At times, this attitude results in the actual task being spoilt and the opportunity (of fulfilling it) passing away.
14. Another shortcoming of women is that when they lose anything, they accuse someone without any investigation. In other words, if a person was known to have stolen before, they accuse that same person of stealing again when in actual fact it is not necessary for one person to commit all acts of evil all the time. In the same way, when other evil acts are committed and she suspects a certain person, she will develop such a powerful conviction that she will even accuse good, innocent persons.
15. Another shortcoming is that when two persons are engaged in a conversation, the woman will try to enter their conversation without being asked to do so. Furthermore, she will give her own advice and opinions regarding the matter under discussion (without being asked to do so). As long as anyone does not ask you for any advice or for your opinion, you should be silent and remain as if you are absolutely dumb.
16. When a woman returns from any gathering or function, she has the habit of mentioning the appearance of all the women that were present to her husband. She describes the jewellery, clothing and adornment of all the women who were present. If the husband becomes inclined towards one of those women and his heart becomes attached to one of them, what a great harm will be experienced by her!
17. When a woman has to speak to a particular person, she does not wait for that person to complete the task in which he is occupied or the conversation in which he is engaged. Instead, she will intrude and impose on the person while he is still fully occupied in his task. This is an evil practice. You should only speak to him when he turns his attention towards you.
18. Another shortcoming is that when they speak, they speak in half measures and when they have to convey a message, they convey only half the message. The consequence of this is that the meaning and the message will be misunderstood. At times this causes the task to be spoilt while on other occasions it causes ill-feelings between the persons.
19. When a person speaks to a woman, she does not pay full attention to the person who is addressing her. She continues with whatever task she is engaged in or continues speaking to someone else. This causes the person who is addressing her to feel dissatisfied and at the same time he does not have any confidence in the woman fulfilling the task which he had spoken to her about. This is because if she has not heard everything that he has said, how will she fulfil the task completely?
20. Another shortcoming is that a woman will not admit her fault or mistake. As far as possible, she will try to "cover up" her mistake or justify it irrespective of whether it is justifiable or not.
21. When anything is sent to a woman (as a gift) and the quantity of that gift happens to be less or it happens to be of an inferior quality, she will look down upon that gift, accuse the person who sent such a gift saying that there was no need to send such an inferior gift and that the person should be ashamed of himself for sending such an item, etc. This is a very evil practice. He could only bring this much to you. He did not cause any harm or destruction to your personal property in bringing such an item. Women treat their husbands in the same way. Very seldom will they accept any of his gifts happily. In most cases they will find fault with the gift and thereafter accept it.
22. Another shortcoming of women is that when any task is given to them they will babble something and thereafter carry it out. When they know that they will have to carry out that task, what is the benefit in babbling? At the same time, they have caused ill-feeling to the person who asked them to carry out the task.
23. Some women are in the habit of stitching clothes while they are actually wearing that very garment which is being stitched. At times, they even poke themselves. Why cause unnecessary harm to yourself?
24. At the time of arrival or departure, women are in the habit of crying even if they do not really feel like crying on such an occasion. They impose this crying upon themselves out of fear that the person will think that they have no feelings.
25. Women are also in the habit of leaving pins and needles lying around. Very often, unwary persons are pricked (and thereby harmed).
26. Another shortcoming of women is that they do not protect their children from the heat and the cold. When the children fall ill, they run around asking for ta'weezes (amulets). They do not bother about giving the proper medication nor do they bother about taking proper precautions for the future.
27. Women are in the habit of feeding their children even though the latter may not be hungry at all. Alternatively, they insist on their guests to eat something even if they are not hungry. Thereafter, the children or guests have to bear the harm of eating despite their not being hungry (causing harm to their digestive system).

Matters of experience and organization

1. As far as possible do not get both your sons or both your daughters married at once. This is because there will definitely be some difference in your daughters-in-law and sons-in-law. In your very sons and daughters there are differences with regards to their physique, appearance, dress, beauty, modesty and shame, and in various other matters. People are in the habit of gossiping, praising one and deriding the other. This unnecessarily causes ill-feeling.
2. Do not trust anyone and everyone. Do not entrust your house to anyone and everyone. As long as you have not tested or gauged a person's credibility, do not rely on him. In cities you will find many women who are charmers, fortune tellers, gypsies, etc. who barge into homes. Do not even allow them to come near your home. Such women have entered many homes and cleared them (of all goods).

3. Do not leave your jewellery box or hand-bag (or wallet) lying around. Always keep it locked or else, carry it with you.
4. As far as possible, do not purchase anything on credit. If you have no alternative but to purchase on credit, ensure that you find out the price of the item together with writing down the date. Once you have sufficient cash (to fulfil the debt) immediately go and pay the creditor.
5. As far as possible, try and suffice with the monthly allowance you receive and use it in an appropriate manner. In fact, you should try and save some of your monthly allowance.
6. Do not utter things which you do not wish to be mentioned to others in the presence of those women who frequent your home. Such women include maids, domestic servants, cleaners, etc. This is because such women are in the habit of mentioning your domestic affairs to various other people and various other homes.
7. Do not prepare your meals by using the various ingredients such as flour, rice, etc. by mere estimation. Use the ingredients according to your needs and ensure that you weigh them properly and use only that which would be sufficient. If anyone mocks or teases you for weighing all the ingredients (and not using them through estimation) do not worry about them.
8. When your daughters go out (for some work or to play) do not allow them to wear any jewellery as this would pose a danger to their lives and wealth as well.
9. If any man knocks on your door and claims friendship, claims to have an appointment or any dealing with your husband, father or brother, do not ever permit him to enter the house. Do not permit him to enter even if it may be behind a veil. At the same time, do not hand over any valuable item to him. Do not display excessive likeness or devotion to him until one of the menfolk of your house recognizes him. In the same way, do not accept anything which he gives or sends to you. If he feels hurt over this, do not worry about it.
10. In the same way if any strange woman comes with a car (or any other mode of transport) and informs you that so-and-so person has sent for you, don't ever sit in that car. In short, do not do anything by the mere information of strange persons. Nor should you give them anything from your house irrespective of whether they be men or women and irrespective of whether they ask for the item on their own behalf or in the name of some other person.
11. Do not keep any tree or plant in the house which could prove to be harmful or injurious.
12. Wear extra clothing in winter. Most women do not clothe themselves properly in winter. This causes influenza and colds.
13. Teach children the names of their father, mother, and grandfather as well. Occasionally, you should test them to see whether they remember these names or not. The benefit of this is that if a child gets lost somewhere and someone asks him his father's or mother's name, he will at least be in a position to inform them. Someone or the other will recognize the parents' name (and be able to trace them). If the child does not know the parents' name, he will merely say: "I am mummy's son" or "I am daddy's son" and no one will know who he is referring to.
14. Once a woman left a child at a certain place and went on an errand. In the meantime, a cat came and bit the child in such a manner that the child passed away. We learn two things from this. One is that you should never leave your child alone anywhere. The second thing is that one cannot trust cats, dogs and other animals. Some women are in the stupid habit of allowing cats to sleep at their side. If the cat has to scratch or bite them or hold them by the throat, what will they do?
15. When purchasing any medicine, always show it to your doctor so that he may check whether it is suited to you or not. If there is any dirt or dust on the packaging of the medicine, remove it thoroughly and check that you have received the correct medicine. At times, the pharmacist (or his assistant) gives the wrong medicine and its effect is disastrous. All left over medicines should be carefully labelled by clearly writing the name of the medicine and its purpose as well. At times, a person does not recognize the medicine and therefore has to throw it away. At other times, the person does not clearly remember the purpose of the medicine and therefore mistakenly uses it for another sickness thereby causing harm to himself.
16. Do not take loans from people who respect and honour you. (In taking loans from such persons, you will lose your respect and honour). At the same time do not give too much on credit or loan. If you have to give on credit, give an amount which you would be able to bear if it is not paid back.
17. If you have to undertake a major or new task, first seek advice from a knowledgeable and pious person.
18. Conceal your money, possessions and other valuables. Do not show them nor mention them to anyone and everyone.
19. When writing a letter to anyone, ensure that you write your complete address clearly. If you have written to the person previously, do not think that you had written your address in the previous letter therefore there is no need to write it again. How do you know whether the person still has your previous letter or not? If he does not have it, just think of the inconvenience that you would be putting him into. It is possible that he does not even have your address in his mind or that he is illiterate and was therefore unable to inform his scribe.
20. If you have to travel by train (or any other public mode of transport) ensure that you keep your travel tickets and other documents very safely. You could also give it to your menfolk for safe keeping. When in the train, do not sleep to the extent that you become absolutely unconscious of your surroundings. Do not mention any secrets to your fellow female travellers. Do not make any mention of your money, jewellery, etc. to them. If anyone offers you any edibles to eat, do not accept them. Do not wear any jewellery while travelling by train. Keep your jewellery in your bag. Once you have reached your destination, you can wear whatever jewellery you wish.
21. When travelling, always carry some money with you.
22. Do not speak to an insane person. When he is not in his senses, you do not even know what he is going to say or what he will do to you and thereby cause you unnecessary embarrassment and ill-feeling.
23. Do not place your foot in any place when it is very dark. Similarly, do not place your hand in any place when it is very dark. Switch on the lights first and then do whatever you wish to do.
24. Do not reveal your secrets to anyone and everyone. Some people are in the habit of mentioning their secrets and thereafter telling the person not to mention it to anyone. Such persons are more likely to mention it to others (i.e. especially when you tell them not to mention it to anyone).
25. Always keep some of the basic and necessary medicines in your house.
26. When embarking on any course of action, think of the consequences first and then commence with it.
27. Do not purchase too much of chinaware and glassware unnecessarily because a lot of money is wasted in such items (on account of their breaking very quickly).
28. When travelling, women should carry a book of masa'il, a pen, paper, a utensil for making wudu, etc.
29. When a person is leaving on a journey, as far as possible do not ask him to purchase anything for you nor ask him to bring a certain item of yours which is kept at a certain place. At the same time do not ask him to take a parcel or a letter for you (which has to be delivered to a certain person). In most cases such requests cause inconvenience to the person who is travelling. Furthermore, if that person is not very cautious or particular (in carrying out such tasks) he will cause more harm to you (in not delivering or bringing that item after you had depended on him to do so). If you have to send a letter, you could do so by post. If you have to send or request for a parcel, you could do so by sending it or requesting it through one of the courier services. If the item which you wish the person to purchase for you is available over here, even though it may be more expensive, then purchase it from here. It is not good to inconvenience others merely for a little benefit to yourself. The task may appear very simple, but there are many problems in taking the responsibility and making the proper arrangements. If you have no alternative and you wish that a particular item be purchased for you, then give the money for the item to the person before he can leave. If the person is going to return by train (or plane), then give him extra money so that he has sufficient money if he has to pay for excess luggage.
30. When travelling, do not eat anything that has been given to you by strangers. Some people add poisonous or intoxicating substances in the food and thereby steal all one's money and possessions.
31. When rushing to board a train, bear in mind the type of ticket which you have purchased. Do not sit in an upper class coach when in fact you have a lower class ticket.

32. When you are sewing and the needle gets stuck in the fabric, do not try to pull it out with your teeth. At times the needle breaks or pricks the person's palate or tongue.
33. Always keep a nail-clipper with you so that you can clip your nails whenever the need arises.
34. If you do not have full confidence in carrying out a particular task, do not give the responsibility to others as well. This would cause unnecessary harm and ill-feeling.
35. Do not give advice to others out of your own accord. However, if you have full choice over a person (e.g. your children, students, etc.) or the person himself seeks your advice or opinion, then there is no harm in offering your advice.
36. Do not insist on a person to eat or to stay over at your place. At times this causes discomfort and harm to the person. What is the benefit of expressing this type of love when it results in ill-feeling and dislike.
37. Do not carry any item that is extremely heavy. We have seen many persons who carried heavy weights in their youth thereby causing damage to themselves which resulted in harm for the rest of their lives. This is more applicable to girls and women. They have to be more cautious because the joints, veins and nerves of their bodies are weaker and softer.
38. Do not leave needles and other sharp objects lying around. It is possible that someone may sit on them mistakenly and poke themselves.
39. Do not give any heavy or dangerous object from an elevated place to any person. Similarly, no food or drink should be passed on from an elevated place. It is possible that the object will slip and fall.
40. If you have to hit a child or a student, do not hit him with a thick stick or by kicking and fisting him. Allawh forbid, if the child gets hurt or injured at a weak spot then you will find that the tables will be turned on you. You should also abstain from hitting a person on the face or head.
41. If you visit someone and you have already partaken of your meal (prior to going to the person's house), then the moment you go to his house inform him that you have already eaten. This is because your hosts will not ask you whether you have eaten or not and they will silently worry about preparing a meal for you irrespective of whether it is meal time or not. They will take the trouble of preparing a meal for you and when they present it to you, you reply that you have already eaten. How dejected they will feel at that time? So why don't you inform them before-hand? In the same way, if someone invites you for a meal or asks you to stay over for a meal, then seek permission from your house folk. If the situation demands that you have to accept without seeking permission, then inform your house folk before-hand so that they do not occupy themselves in preparing a meal for you.
42. It is not good to engage in transactions where there are many formalities or many things to be taken into consideration. In such places one is not able to speak clearly nor is one able to make the proper demands - one person understands something while the other understands something else. The consequences of this are not good.
43. Do not scrape or clean your teeth with a knife or any other sharp object.
44. Always feed your children who are studying with things that would give strength to their brains and minds.
45. As far as possible, do not spend the night alone in your home - only Allawh knows what can happen. If there is no alternative, it will be okay to do so. It has happened that some people passed away (while being alone in the house) and people learnt of this after several days.
46. When stones, rocks, bricks, etc. are left at one spot for a long period of time, invariably scorpions and other dangerous animals begin to inhabit that spot. If you have to pick up the stones, do not do so all of a sudden. Instead, be extremely cautious, check the surroundings, and then pick them up.
47. When going to sleep, dust the bed with a cloth first because it is possible that an insect or animal may be on it.
48. Place the leaves of the margosa tree and camphor in between the folds of silky and woolen clothing so that such clothing is not eaten by worms.
49. If you have to conceal any money in the house, inform one or two persons in whom you have total trust as to the whereabouts of that money. Once, a woman concealed 500 rupees of her husband's earnings and passed away soon thereafter. No one knew the exact location of that money. They searched the entire house but were unable to find it. The husband was a poor person - just try and imagine the pain he must have experienced.
50. Some people lock their valuables and leave the keys lying around. This is also a serious mistake.
51. If you have to count your money and other valuables at night, do so silently. Do not allow your voice to be heard out of the house as there are thousands of enemies outside.
52. Do not leave the house with a fire burning inside. In the same way, do not throw a burning match (or any other item such as charcoal, pieces of wood, etc.) without first extinguishing it. If you throw such an item, ensure that you extinguish it with your feet after having thrown it. Do not allow any sparks to remain.
53. Never allow your children to play with matches, fire or fireworks. Once my neighbour's child was lighting a match. In the process he caught on fire and his entire chest was burnt. At another place a child was playing with fireworks and lost his hand in the process.
54. When there are no lights and you have to carry a candle (or any other source of light) to the toilet, be extra cautious. Many people have burnt themselves in this manner. Using paraffin is even more dangerous.

Precautions with regard to children

1. You should wash the hands, face, neck, ears, groin, dirty clothes of your children daily. When any dirt and grime collects on the body, it causes a burnt effect on the skin. This later turns into a wound.
2. When the child relieves himself, wash him immediately with water. Do not suffice with wiping him with rags (or toilet paper) as this causes itching and inflammation. If it is winter and it is very cold, wash the child with warm water.
3. Make your child sleep separately and place two pillows on either side of him in order to protect him from falling off the bed. By having the child sleeping next to you there is the fear that one of his limbs might get smashed. We know for a fact that the limbs of children are weak. There is therefore nothing to be surprised about if they get injured. At one place a child got smashed in this way and was found dead the following morning.
4. Do not get the child into the habit of being rocked in a swing excessively because swings are not found everywhere. Similarly, do not get the child into the habit of being carried too much because this weakens the child.
5. Get the child into the habit of going to everyone. If a small child gets used to one particular person and later that person has to pass away or leave the job, this causes great problems for the child.
6. If you decide to obtain the services of a wet-nurse in order to breast feed your child, ensure that you get a wet-nurse whose milk is wholesome, who is young and whose milk is fresh, i.e. her child must not be more than six to seven months old. At the same time, she must be of good character and religiously minded. She must not be stupid, immodest, shameless, miserly or greedy.
7. Once the child commences eating solids, do not hand over the responsibility of feeding the child to the maid or domestic servant. Ensure that you feed the child yourself or you appoint a person who is mannerly and also reliable. This is so that the child does not eat excessively or too less and thereby falls ill. If you have to give any medication to the child, ensure that it is prepared in your presence and given to the child in your presence.
8. When the child reaches the age of understanding, inculcate in him the habit of eating himself. Wash his hands for him prior to eating and teach him to eat with his right hand. Inculcate in him the habit of eating less so that he is safeguarded from sickness and greed.
9. The parents should pay particular attention to the following. And if anyone is appointed over the child, he or she should also be instructed to pay attention to this fact, i.e. they should ensure that the child is neat and tidy all the time. When the hands and face get dirty, they should be washed immediately.
10. If possible, someone should be with the child all the time. When the child is playing around, do not allow him to run around and jump around excessively. Do not allow him to play in an elevated place. Ensure that the child plays with the children of good and respectable people. Do not allow him to play with the children of mean and wicked people. Do not allow the child to play among too many children. Do not allow him to play in alleys and on the streets. Do not go around in the bazaars and market places with the child. Teach the child appropriate manners and etiquette for different situations and circumstances. Stop the child from improper and unlawful acts.

11. If there is anyone appointed to play with the child, emphasise on the person not to take the child to improper and unsuitable places. If he has to give the child anything to eat or drink, he must first show it to the parents. He must not feed the child out of his own accord.
12. Get the child into the habit of asking from his parents and immediate family. He should not ask for anything from anyone else. Similarly, he should not accept anything from anyone without your permission.
13. Do not display excessive love and affection for the child or else he will become spoilt.
14. Do not make the child wear very tight-fitting clothes. Similarly, do not make the child wear very elaborate clothing (such as clothing that has gold and silver brocade, laces, etc.) excessively. There is no harm if the child wears such clothing on certain occasions such as eid.
15. Get the child into the habit of brushing his teeth with a miswaak.
16. In the seventh part of Bahishti Zewar (sixth part of the English translation) the rules and etiquette of eating, drinking, talking, walking, meeting people, sitting in gatherings, etc. are written in detail. Get the child into the habit of adopting all these etiquette. Do not depend on his learning them when he grows older or on the assumption that you would read them to him later in life. You should remember that a person does not learn anything on his own. Similarly, if anything is read to him, although he comes to know of it, the habit of putting that into practice does not come immediately. As long as a person does not get into the habit of adopting good manners and etiquette, then irrespective of how knowledgeable he becomes, he will always do things which are considered to be ill-mannered, inappropriate, and things which would cause pain to others.
17. Do not impose too much of work on the child in his studies. Set aside one hour for his studies in the beginning. Thereafter, increase it to two hours and then three hours. In this way, increase the work load in accordance with his capability and how much he can bear. It should not happen that the child is made to study the entire day. This is because he would become easily distracted on account of tiredness. Excessive work would damage his heart and brain. This would cause his mind and memory to become weak and he will become lazy like a sick person. This would result in his losing interest in his studies.
18. Apart from short holidays and without any real need, do not give the child holidays very often. This causes one to become dull and weary by nature.
19. As far as possible, obtain the services of a qualified and reputable teacher in whichever field the child is studying. Some people look for cheap teachers for their children. From the very beginning the method of teaching and studying is wrong and it becomes very difficult to set this right later on.
20. Easy subjects should be taught later in the day while difficult subjects should be taught in the morning. This is because one is tired and weary later in the day and will therefore become terrified of difficult subjects.
21. Teach your children, especially girls, to cook and sew.
22. When there is a big difference in age between the bride and bridegroom, this could be a cause of many problems.
23. At the same time, do not get your children married at a very young age. This is also very harmful.

A few words of advice

1. It is an evil practice to "pick out" a person on his past practices. It is an evil habit of women that when past ill-feelings have been cleared and forgiven and a situation arises wherein they get into an argument again, they begin to repeat the past ill-feelings. This is a sinful act and at the same time it causes ill-feelings to settle into the heart again.
2. Don't ever complain about your in-laws when you go to your parents' house. Some of these complaints amount to sinning and this act of complaining is regarded as lack of patience on your part. In most situations this complaining results in ill-feelings between the two families. In the same way, do not speak in praise of your parents' house at your in-laws. At times this amounts to the sin of pride and haughtiness. Furthermore, the in-laws will get the impression that this daughter-in-law of theirs does not value and appreciate them. This would result in their not appreciating you.
3. Do not get into the habit of speaking excessively or else you would inevitably mention something that is inappropriate. The consequence of this is ill-feelings in this world and sinning in the hereafter.
4. As far as possible do not ask others to fulfil your tasks for you - fulfil them yourself. In fact, you should take up the tasks of others as well. In doing so, you will be rewarded and at the same time you will win over the person as well.
5. Don't ever converse with women who are in the habit of carrying tales from anywhere and everywhere. Do not even lend an ear to them. Listening to such conversations is sinful and could also lead to problems.
6. If you hear any complaints about your mother-in-law, sister-in-law (husband's sister), wife of husband's younger brother, wife of husband's elder brother, etc. then do not keep these complaints in your heart. It would be better for you to consider these complaints to be false and thereby remove them from your heart. If you are unable to do this, go up to the person who made all these complaints and clear all misunderstandings. In doing so, there is no room for further problems and misunderstandings.
7. Do not be too strict with your workers and domestic servants. Also keep a watchful eye on your children that they do not mock or trouble the servants and their children. They might not say anything out of fear or taking you into consideration, but you must remember that they will definitely curse you in their hearts. Even if they do not curse you, you will still be committing the crime of oppression and you will therefore be a sinner.
8. Do not waste your time in unnecessary and useless conversations. Set aside some time in which you teach the Quran and read Islamic literature to girls. If you are unable to do much, then after teaching the Quran you should at least read this book, Bahishti Zewar, to them from the beginning till the end. You should also give importance to teaching girls some sort of handicrafts irrespective of whether the girls are your own children or someone else's children. However, as long as they have not completed the recitation of the Quran, they should not engage in any other work. Once they have recited the Quran (early in the morning), they should clean themselves. Thereafter, commence teaching them. After they take a break and eat, give them writing exercises. Thereafter, teach them how to cook and sew.
9. Do not ask the girls who come to study under you to carry out your domestic tasks. At the same time, do not ask them to take care of your children. Instead, treat them as you would your own children.
10. Do not take upon any responsibilities merely for name and fame. This would be considered to be a sin and would result in many problems and difficulties.
11. When moving from one place to another or travelling to a certain place, do not make it necessary upon yourself that you have to change your shoes, clothing, wear new jewellery, etc. This is because it means that you are going into all these formalities so that people may consider you to be great. Having such an intention is sinful. Furthermore, this causes a delay in departing which results in many other problems. You should adopt humility and simplicity. Occasionally, go with the very clothes that you are wearing at home. If the clothes are very dirty, then change as quick as possible without going into too many formalities.
12. When arguing with anyone, do not find faults with the person's family or any of his dead relatives. This is a sinful act and at the same time causes ill-feeling.
13. When you have someone else's item, return it immediately after having used it. If you do not find anyone to return it at that time, do not mix it with your own items. Keep it separately and safely so that it does not get mislaid. It is not permissible to use another person's item without his permission.
14. Do not get into the habit of eating sumptuous meals. One does not remain in the same financial position all the time. If his position deteriorates, he has to undergo many difficulties.
15. Don't ever forget anyone's favour upon you irrespective of how insignificant it may be. At the same time, do not show off your favours irrespective of how big they may be.
16. When you have no work at all, the best thing to do is read a Deeni book. Don't ever read books that are harmful.
17. Don't ever shout and speak. How embarrassing it would be if your voice is heard outside?

18. If you have to wake up in the middle of the night and the rest of the house folk are asleep, do not shuffle about and do not walk around loudly. If you have awoken for a particular reason, why should you awaken the others as well? Do whatever you have to very silently.
19. Do not laugh and joke with your elders. It is a sign of disrespect. Do not be informal with low-minded persons because they would become disrespectful of you and cause you displeasure. Alternatively, they will display their arrogance elsewhere and thereby disgrace themselves.
20. Do not speak in praise of your family or your children in the presence of others.
21. If everyone stands up in a gathering, do not remain seated as this is considered to be a sign of pride and haughtiness.
22. If two persons are in disagreement (and not speaking to each other), do not mention anything to any of them whereby if they reconcile, it would cause embarrassment to you.
23. As long as your work can be accomplished through money or softness, do not adopt a hard approach or throw yourself into any difficult or dangerous situation.
24. Do not display your anger to anyone in the presence of your guests. This would cause your guest to become reserved and he would not be as "open" as he was prior to your anger.
25. Display good character to your enemy as well. In this way, his enmity towards you will not increase.
26. Do not allow pieces of bread to lie around. If you see any bread lying around, pick it up, clean it and eat it. If you are unable to eat it, give it to some animal. If the table cloth has bits and pieces of food on it, do not dust it at a place where people walk.
27. Once you have completed your meal, do not leave the food behind and get up. This is a sign of disrespect. Pick up all the dishes first and then get up.
28. Emphasise on your girls not to play with boys because this causes both of them to become mischievous. When boys who are outsiders come into the house, the girls should leave their presence even if these boys are small in age.
29. Do not joke physically (such as tickling) with anyone. In most cases this causes ill-feelings and at times the person is also physically hurt. Do not joke excessively to the extent that the other person becomes serious. This also causes disputes. It is extremely shameful to joke in the presence of guests, such as in the presence of one's wedding guests.
30. Do not sit in line with your elders. However, if they order you to do so for some reason or the other, then etiquette demands that you obey them.
31. When you borrow anything from anyone, keep it very safely. Once you have completed using it, send it back to him immediately. Do not wait for the person to ask you for it. There could be several reasons for his not asking for it: (i) he does not know whether you have completed using it or not, (ii) he is probably feeling it difficult to ask you for it, (iii) he probably forgot that you have that item in your possession. Later when he looks for it, how much of difficulty you will be imposing upon him? In the same way, if you are owing any money to anyone and you have some money, then pay it to that person immediately. Reduce your debt as much as you can and as quickly as you can.
32. If you have to walk at night for some reason or the other (and you have no alternative but to walk), then remove your anklets and other types of tinkling jewellery. Do not walk around with all this tinkling jewellery.
33. If someone is alone in the house or room and the door is closed, do not open the door and barge in. It is possible that the person is naked, exposed, or sleeping and you disturb him unnecessarily (by barging inside). Instead, call out the person's name in a soft tone and seek his permission to enter. If he permits you, enter. If not, remain silent and try again later on. However, if you have very urgent work with the person and he does not reply, then shout out his name until he wakes up. But as long as he does not answer you or does not call you inside, do not enter.
34. If you do not know a person (and you are engaged in a conversation with him), then do not speak ill of a particular place or a particular family, tribe, people, etc. It is possible that the person is from that place or belongs to that particular group of people. This would cause you great embarrassment.
35. In the same way, if you do not know who was the person who fulfilled a certain task, then do not say: "Which stupid did this?" or any other words of similar tone. It is possible that someone whom you respect and look up to carried out that task. This would also cause you great embarrassment.
36. If your child does something wrong (thereby inflicting harm on someone else), never take your child's part. It is worse to take sides with your child in his presence because this would cause your child to become spoilt.
37. When seeking to get your daughters married, look for a boy who has the fear of Allawh and a religious temperament. It is such a person who can provide comfort to his wife. If the person is extremely wealthy but has no Deen in him, he will not fulfil his wife's rights nor will he be faithful to his wife. In fact he will not even give her any money. Even if he gives her any money, he will harass her more than what he gives her.
38. Stitch your name or any other sort of identification on your clothing so that it does not get mixed up with someone else's clothing. This would result in your wearing the other person's clothing and the latter wearing yours. This is a sinful act and also causes worldly harm.
39. It is the practice among the Arabs that when they wish to take something from a pious person (such as a spiritual guide or sufi shaykh) for the sake of acquiring the blessings from him, they give this pious person one of their own belongings (such as a kurta, shawl, scarf, etc.). This pious person uses the item for a few days and gives it back to the person who had given it to him. The pious person has no hesitance in doing this. However, if twenty persons ask him for one of his own items, he will not be left with even a rag. Our Indian people unashamedly ask the pious persons for their clothing. This causes inconvenience to them. If we also adopt the practice of the Arabs it will be very good.
40. If a person expresses his opinion in a particular matter and you have an opinion contrary to his, then express your opinion. However, do not express your opinion and attribute it to someone else. This is because if the person goes and mentions it to that person (to whom you attributed a particular opinion), it would cause unnecessary ill-feelings.
41. Do not accuse anyone of anything on mere suspicion as this would cause great pain to the person.

The Importance of Handicrafts

Some poor women have no means of obtaining or receiving food and clothing. Such women experience great difficulties and problems. The solution to their problem could be in two things: one is that they should get married. Alternatively, they should learn some sort of handicraft and thereby earn a living. However, ignorant people consider both marriage and a handicraft to be a shortcoming. And no one thinks about making proper arrangements for the expenses of these poor women. So how can these women live a proper life? O women! You cannot force anyone (to do anything for you). However, Allawh Ta'ala has given you the power of choice over your heart and your hands and feet. You should therefore try and influence your heart and do not worry about what others have to say. If you have reached the age of marriage, get married. If you have not reached the age of marriage, or do not feel like getting married (without considering it to be a shortcoming), or you are scared of further complications (by getting married), then in all these cases try and earn a living through a permitted handicraft. If anyone looks down upon you or mocks at you, don't ever worry about it. If there was anything wrong with such work, why would the prophets alayhimus salaam have taken up such occupations? Who is greater than them? It is mentioned in a Hadith that Rasulullah sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam used to graze sheep. It is also mentioned in a Hadith that there is not a single prophet who did not graze sheep. Rasulullah sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam said that the best source of income is that which has been earned with one's own hands and that Hadrat Daud alayhis salaam used to eat with the earnings of his own hands. All this has been mentioned by Rasulullah sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam. Some of the occupations of the prophets have been mentioned in the Quran. Others have been mentioned in other biographies of the different prophets. We will mention the names of a few of such prophets together with their occupations.

1. Hadrat Aadam alayhis salaam had done farming. He used to grind flour and make bread.
2. Hadrat Idris alayhis salaam used to do writing and tailoring.
3. Hadrat Nuh alayhis salaam cut wood and built a ship. This is the work of a carpenter.
4. Hadrat Hud alayhis salaam was a trader.
5. Hadrat Saalih alayhis salaam was a trader.
6. Hadrat Zul Qarnayn was a great king and, according to others, he was a prophet. He used to weave baskets.

7. Hadrat Ibrahim alayhis salaam used to do farming. He also engaged in construction work - he built the ka'bah.
8. Hadrat Lut alayhis salaam used to do farming.
9. Hadrat Isma'eel alayhis salaam used to make arrows and put up targets.
10. Hadrat Is'haaq alayhis salaam, Hadrat Ya'qub alayhis salaam and all their children used graze sheep and give them to their children.
11. Hadrat Yusuf alayhis salaam traded in grain when there was a drought.
12. Hadrat Ayyub alayhis salaam had the young of many camels and sheep. He had also done farming.
13. Hadrat Shu'ayb alayhis salaam had also grazed sheep.
14. Hadrat Musa alayhis salaam grazed sheep for several years. This tending of sheep was also his form of payment of mahr when he got married.
15. Hadrat Harun alayhis salaam was a trader.
16. Hadrat al-Yasa' alayhis salaam used to do farming.
17. Hadrat Daud alayhis salaam used to make armour which is the work of an ironsmith.
18. Hadrat Luqmaan alayhis salaam was a very wise person. Some scholars consider him to be a prophet. He used to graze sheep.
19. Hadrat Sulayman alayhis salaam used to weave baskets.
20. Hadrat Zakariyya alayhis salaam used to do carpentry.
21. Hadrat 'Isa alayhis salaam had dyed clothes at a person's shop.

We have already mentioned that Rasulullah sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam and all other prophets had grazed sheep. Although these prophets did not depend on the different occupations as a source of income, they however did all these things and did not consider them to be a defect or shortcoming. Many great auliyaa' and ulama who have written great works had also undertaken some sort of occupation. Some of them engaged in weaving, others in tanning of leather, others in repairing of shoes, while others engaged in the making of sweetmeats. Who can have more honour and a greater status than all these great persons?

SUPPLEMENT (A) TO BAHISHTI ZEWAR

(Part Nine)

A few important masa'il

1. It is not permissible to eat at a place wherein most of the things that are sold are haraam. However, if a person inquires with regard to a particular item that is being sold there and is given a reply that it is halaal, then he will have to check on the person who gave him the information. If the person is a pious and religious-minded person, one can act on his information without any hesitation. If the person is a sinful person, or one does not know whether he is a pious person or not, then one should check with one's heart. If the heart says that this person is honest, it will be permissible to act upon his information. But if the heart is not inclined towards believing him, it will not be permissible to act upon his information. For example, the selling of mangoes (or any other fruit) prior to the crop even appearing on the trees. You have read previously that this is haraam. If this practice is in vogue in a particular place and the mangoes sell at a lower price after maturity, then the above-mentioned mas'ala will apply. If you are given the information that certain mangoes were sold after maturity, it will be permissible for you to eat them. It will not be permissible to eat them if you do not know when they were sold (after maturity or before).
2. It is prohibited to speak ill or curse a sickness (that one is afflicted with).
3. If a kaafir woman (or man) comes willingly to you in order to accept Islam and there is no fear of any fight or civil strife in her accepting Islam, then make her a Muslim. The method of making a person into a Muslim is as follows: Make the person recite the kalimah and explain its meaning as well, i.e. There is none worthy of worship except Allawh and Muhammad is the Messenger of Allawh. She must also say: "I believe in all the prophets, all the books of Allawh, the angels, life after death and predestination (taqdeer). I have left my previous religion and accepted the religion of the Muslims. I will offer the five times salaat and keep the fasts of Ramadaan. If I have the stipulated amount of wealth, I will give zakaat. If I have sufficient funds, I will perform the hajj. I will follow all the orders of Allawh and His Rasul sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam and abstain from all the things which they have prohibited. O Allawh! Keep me firm on Deen and Imaan. Help me in fulfilling all pious and religious acts." Thereafter, all those who are present should make the following dua to Allawh: "O Allawh! Accept this person's Islam. Keep us firm on Imaan and make us die on Imaan as well."

4. Do not backbite.
5. Do not believe in rumours.
6. Some women are of the opinion that as long as impure clothes are not dried after having washed them, they are not pure and that salaat with such clothes is not permissible. This is incorrect. On account of not knowing this mas'ala, many women miss their salaats. Where will they ever make qadaa of these missed salaats? You should not think in this manner. Salaat with wet clothes is definitely permissible.
7. Clothing that causes the arms, hair of the head, neck, etc. to be exposed invalidates salaat. (This is applicable to women)
8. If a poor person is strong enough to work but still goes around begging, it will not be permissible to give him anything.
9. If you are travelling by train (or any other mode of public transport) and there is no water to make wudu, make tayammum and offer your salaat. Do not miss the salaat.
10. Some women do not observe purdah with their workers and labourers. This is a major sin.
11. Do not use items that belong to others without the owner's permission. This is irrespective of how insignificant the item may be. After using the item, do not leave it lying around. Instead, return it to the owner or inform him that you have left the item at a particular place.
12. The different rules, regulations and stipulations that have been laid down by the different authorities with regard to the different modes of public transport (such as buses, trains, planes, etc.) have to be followed. It is not permissible to act contrary to those rules, to cheat on the authorities, or to conceal anything from them. For example, if a person is travelling with a third class ticket by train, he is permitted to carry a certain amount of luggage (30-40 kilos or whatever the case maybe). If he has any luggage that is in excess of the stipulated amount, he will have to pay for the excess luggage according to whatever is stipulated per kilo. If a person takes this excess luggage into the train without having it weighed, even if the authorities do not spot him, he will be committing a sin. If he bribes the authorities into permitting him to take the excess luggage (without any additional payment), he will be committing a double sin - one for taking the excess luggage and another for bribing the authorities.

Similarly, they have a rule that if a child is under three years old, he can travel free of charge. If he is between three and twelve years of age, he will have to pay half the normal rate. If he is above twelve years, he will have to pay the full adult rate. Based on this, if a person takes a child who is above three years without paying for his ticket, or informs the authorities that the child is under three years old (despite being over three years old), he will be sinning. In the same way, if a child is above twelve years and the person informs the authorities that he is under twelve years and therefore purchases a half-ticket, he will also be sinning.

In all these cases, the person will have to pay on the day of judgement - not with money but by giving away his good deeds and he will have to bear the evil deeds of the authorities (whom he had cheated).

13. These days, young Muslim men read a lot of English literature. Many things which are contrary to the Deen are found in such books and magazines. Most of these youngsters who read such books have no knowledge of the Deen. This results in many of them having no Imaan in their hearts. Furthermore, many of them utter certain things which cause them to lose their Imaan. If a Muslim girl has married one of these youngsters, their marriage is not considered to be valid in the Shariah. If the marriage is not valid, it would mean that their entire lives are spent in sinning. The consequences of this will have to be borne by the parents in this world and there is the fear of punishment in the hereafter as well. It is therefore extremely important and necessary that just as you inquire about the family background and financial position of the boy who proposes to your daughter, it is much more important for you to inquire and check whether he is religiously-minded or not. If you do not know anything about his religiosity, don't ever give your daughter to him. A religious-minded poor person is a thousand times better than a rich person who has no Deen in him. It has also been noticed that the person who does not have any Deen in him is unable to fulfil the rights of his wife and does not even have any feelings for her. At times he will not even give her a cent to spend (on herself). When there is no tranquillity in such cases, why do people then crave for affluent partners?

14. If you make any mistakes in the recitation of the Quran, correct these mistakes immediately or have them corrected by someone. Do not leave it for a later date because it is highly possible that you will forget to have such mistakes corrected. If you do not have these mistakes corrected, you will read the Quran incorrectly forever and will also remain a sinner (for not correcting these mistakes).
15. Do not answer anyone's question if you do not remember a particular mas'ala properly or if you are unsure of it.
16. Some people are in the habit of deluding others in accepting their counterfeit notes. If they are unable to delude anyone, they try to use them by purchasing something at night (when others are unable to decipher the actual nature of the notes). This is a major sin. You should return the notes to the person who had given them to you. You could return them to him by warning him that they are counterfeit notes or you could use any other strategy in returning them to him. However, this will only be permissible if you know for sure that he is the one who had given them to you. If you have the slightest doubt regarding him, you cannot return them to him.
17. At times a person lies down and closes his eyes as if he is sleeping. Two persons, sitting nearby and assuming him to be sleeping, begin speaking certain private matters. Had they known that this person is not sleeping, they would have not engaged in this private conversation. In such a situation, it is wajib on the person who is lying down to get up and show that he is not sleeping. He should not eavesdrop on their conversation. If not, he will be committing a sin.
18. It is not permissible to transact in currency notes at a price that is higher or lower than the face value of the note. (Note: This applies particularly in the Indo-Pak subcontinent where old/torn notes are exchanged for new notes at a slightly higher price.)
19. It is not permissible to read a letter that has been addressed to someone else without that person's permission.
20. Do not throw around the hair that remains in the comb after having combed your hair. At the same time, do not leave that hair lying around whereby a ghayr mahram may see it. A woman has to conceal such hair as well. You should rather dig a small hole in the ground and bury that hair.
21. Whatever is prohibited from being mentioned orally is also prohibited from being mentioned in writing. For example, gheebah, speaking high of yourself, etc.
22. There can be several doubts in a message conveyed by telex. News regarding the sighting of the moon through telex messages is therefore not considered.
23. When a place is afflicted by a plague, it is prohibited to leave that place with the intention of saving yourself from the plague. The person who remains in that place and exercises patience shall receive the reward of a martyr.
24. Do not address anyone as a bastard, bitch, pig, or any other type of word which would be considered to be a form of swearing the person's parents. What have those poor persons done to you? Furthermore, when rebuking or scolding a person for a shortcoming or mistake which he may have committed, do not scold him more than the actual extent of his mistake.
25. It is makruh to smoke cigarettes, pipes, etc. unnecessarily. If one is forced to do so, there is no harm. However, one should clean one's mouth thoroughly prior to offering salaat. The mouth could be cleaned with a miswaak, brush or any other cleaning agent. If the foul smell remains in one's mouth while offering salaat, this causes discomfort to the angels. It is for this reason that this is prohibited.
26. If opium or any other drug is given as a form of medication and the quantity is such that no intoxication whatsoever results in this, it will be permissible to consume. However, some women are in the habit of giving their children opium so that the children may remain sleeping. This is not permissible.
27. A mature girl should not be made to study the Quran (or anything else) under a young man.
28. Scraps of paper that have something written on them should also be respected. They should not be thrown around. Waste paper and (old newspaper) that is used to wrap items should not be thrown around. Such paper should either be kept safely (for later use) or burnt. In the same way, if you find scraps of paper on the road and something is written on them, then pick them up, keep them safely or burn them.
29. Bits and pieces of bread that are left on the dining-table should not be swept away to places where they would be trampled upon. Instead, they should be swept to a corner or some other place that does not fall in anyone's path.
30. If anyone is busy writing a letter, it is prohibited to sit next to the person and look at what he is writing.
31. A person has wounds or sores in the lower portion of the body and water will be harmful to these wounds or sores. If such a person is in need of a bath and is unable to prevent water from falling on the lower portion of his body, it will be permissible for him to make tayammum.
32. It is permissible to recite durood even if a person is not in a state of wudu, in need of ghusl, or a woman is in a state of haid or nifaas.
33. It is prohibited to pierce the ear or nose of a boy.
34. It is prohibited to keep evil names for one's children. Good names should be kept. The names of prophets should be kept. Alternatively, the word "Abd" should be added to any of the many names of Allawh Ta'ala, e.g. Abdullah, Abdur Rahmaan, Abdul Baari, Abdul Quddus, Abdul Fattaah, etc. Alternatively, consult an aalim who would choose a name for your child.
35. It is the belief of ignorant women that once the salaat is offered, the musalla (prayer mat) should be folded, if not, shaytaan will sit on it. This is absolutely incorrect.
36. Ignorant persons believe that when a woman passes away while in labour (or giving birth) she becomes a ghost. This is absolutely wrong. In fact, it is mentioned in a Hadith that such a woman dies a martyr.
37. Ignorant persons believe that when a woman passes away, her husband cannot even touch the beams of the bier. This is incorrect. In fact, the husband can even look at the face of his deceased wife.
38. If a woman passes away while she is pregnant and it is known that the child is still alive, her womb should be opened and the child removed. In one place, a deceased woman was being given the ghusl. The women who were bathing her perceived signs of the child (that was in the deceased woman's womb) being born. The women got excited and completed the task of bathing quickly and hurriedly enshrouded her in the kafan. When the woman was placed in the grave, (the men who were burying her) perceived the birth of the child from within the kafan. It is extremely sad that no one opened the kafan to check. Instead, they immediately placed the wooden beams over the body and covered the grave with sand. It is a disgrace both to the women and the men. All this happened due to lack of knowledge of the Deen.
39. It is a major sin to cause events to be foretold or the names of a guilty person to be foretold irrespective of whether this is done through a jinn, a sandal, or through any other means.
40. Women are not in the habit of greeting each other with "As salaamu alaykum" and embracing each other. There is great merit in carrying out such acts. Women should be taught these things.
41. If you are a guest at someone's house, do not give anything to those who come begging.
42. The bladder of all animals is impure like the urine of those animals. The cud of an animal is impure like the excreta of that animal.
43. If a Quran or parts of the Quran has become so torn that one is unable to read in it, or there are so many printing mistakes in it that one is unable to correct the mistakes, then such a Quran should be wrapped in a clean cloth and buried at a place where no one walks. The Quran should be buried in such a way that no sand falls onto it. This could be done in two ways: (i) dig a hole similar to that of a grave which has a crevice or cleft on one side, (ii) dig a hole, place the Quran inside, place a piece of timber over it and then cover the entire hole with sand.

BOOK XVIL

THE LIVES OF PIOUS WOMEN

Zaynab bint Khuzaymah radiyallâhu 'anhâ
She was also the wife of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. She was so generous that she became known as the "mother of the poor". Her first husband was 'Abdullâh bin Jahsh.
Lesson: Look at what a great thing it is to be in the service of the poor.

Umme Salamah radiyallâhu 'anhâ
She is also the wife of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. A woman relates an incident and says: "Once I was in the company of Umme Salamah. After a little while, many poor persons came to her. There were men and women among them. They all stood there (demanding something). So I said to them: 'Go away from here.' Upon this, Umme Salamah said: 'We have not been commanded this. O girl! Give each of them something even if it means giving them one dry date.'" Her first husband was Abû Salamah radiyallâhu 'anhu.
Lesson: She did not become annoyed by the demands of the poor persons. Today, women produce feeble excuses and some of them go to the extent of cursing and abusing beggars. O women! Don't ever do this.

Zaynab bint Jahsh radiyallâhu 'anhâ
She is also the wife of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam had adopted a Sahâbi by the name of Zayd radiyallâhu 'anhu. Initially, it was permissible to adopt a son. When he became mature, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam decided to get him married. So he sent a proposal to her brother on behalf of Zayd radiyallâhu 'anhu. This brother and sister (i.e. Zaynab) did not consider Zayd to be equal to them in status and lineage.

They were therefore hesitant in the beginning. However, Allawh Ta'âlâ revealed a verse wherein He mentions that once the prophet decides on something, a Muslim should not make any excuses. They therefore accepted the proposal and the marriage was performed. However, the husband and wife could not live together in an amicable manner. The situation reached a stage whereby Zayd decided to divorce her. He came to consult Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam but he stopped him and tried to make him understand. However, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam gauged that these two will be unable to live together and that they were definitely heading for a divorce. He began thinking to himself that right from the beginning, the brother and sister were not happy about entering into this marriage, but they accepted after I told them to do so. If the divorce takes place, the brother's and sister's burden will be lessened but they will be broken-hearted. What could he do in order to console them? Eventually he came to the conclusion that if he marries her, she will be greatly consoled and relieved. Apart from this, he could find no solution. At the same time, he also realized that the disbelievers will begin accusing him of marrying his son's wife. Although an adopted son does not become one's real son, who can stop people from thinking and speaking in this way? More so when the disbelievers will begin making a mountain out of a mole-hill. He was still thinking and pondering over all this when Zayd radiyallâhu 'anhu divorced her. On the expiry of her 'iddah, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam was inclined towards proposing to her. Eventually, he sent his proposal. She replied that she will ask her Creator and that she is not going to make up her own mind in this regard. If He sanctions it, He will make the way easy. Upon saying this, she performed her ablution and offered salât. After the salât, she made a fervent du'â to Allawh. Allawh revealed a verse to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam mentioning that He has made your nikâh with her. He then went to her and recited the verse to her. Zaynab radiyallâhu 'anhâ used to mention this to her co-wives by saying: "Your nikâh was sanctioned by your parents while my nikâh was sanctioned by Allawh Ta'âlâ."

The first orders concerning purdah were revealed during her nikâh. She was very generous. She used to practice handicrafts and give in charity from the income that she received from these handicrafts. Once, all the wives got together and asked Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam: "Who will join you first after your demise?" He replied: "The one whose hands are the longest." This is an Arabic mode of expression to show generosity. However, this did not cross the minds of his wives. They were under the impression that it referred to actual length. They therefore took a stick and began measuring their hands. Hadrat Saudah's radiyallâhu 'anhâ hands turned out to be the longest. However, the first to leave this world after him was Hadrat Zaynab bint Jahsh radiyallâhu 'anhâ. It was only then that they all realized that it referred to generosity. In short, her generosity was also appreciated by Allawh and His Rasûl sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam.

'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ says: "I have not come across any woman better than Zaynab. She was perfect in her Dîn, feared Allawh a lot, very honest in her speech, very kind and cordial to her relatives, very charitable, and she used to work very hard with her handicrafts so that she could give more in charity." Speaking about her, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said: "She was very humble-hearted and used to beseech Allawh abundantly."

Lesson: O women! You have read about the greatness of generosity, the benefits of handicrafts and referring to Allawh for all your needs. Don't ever consider it disgraceful to do any work with your own hands. Do not look down upon any craft or occupation (provided it is acceptable in the Sharî'ah).

Umme Habîbah radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is also the wife of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. When the kuffâr of Makkah began oppressing the Muslims profusely, and the latter were not ordered to go to Madînah as yet, many Muslims went to Abyssinia. The king of Abyssinia who was known as Najâshi was a Christian. However, after the arrival of Muslims, he became a Muslim. Umme Habîbah radiyallâhu 'anhâ was also among the Muslims who had come to Abyssinia. Najâshi sent a person by the name of Abrahah to her informing her that he is sending a proposal to her on behalf of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. She accepted the proposal. Najâshi also sent some gifts with Abrahah, which comprised of two silver bracelets and a few rings. Her first husband was 'Ubaydullah bin Jahsh.

Lesson: How pious she must have been for her to leave her home solely to protect and safeguard her Dîn. In return for this effort of hers, Allawh gave her great comfort and honour in that she married Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and the king made all the necessary arrangements. O women! When the situation requires you to choose Dîn, do not give preference to worldly comfort, name and fame, wealth or your house and family. Everything should be sacrificed for Dîn.

Juwayriyah radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is also the wife of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. She was brought as a prisoner after a war with the kuffâr in a battle popularly know as Bani Mustaliq. She had fallen in the share of a Sahâbi by the name of Thâbit bin Qays or his cousin. She said to her master: "I will give you a certain amount of money and you must free me." He agreed to this so she went to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and asked him to help her with some money. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam felt sorry for her after seeing her piety and poverty. He said to her: "If you agree, I will pay for your entire freedom and take you into my marriage." She readily accepted this offer and the nikâh took place. When the people heard about this marriage, especially all the prisoners that belonged to her tribe who were under the Muslims, then most of these Muslims freed these slaves saying that now that they have a relationship with Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam because of this marriage, it is disrespectful to keep them as slaves. 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ is reported to have said: "We do not know of any woman who has been of so much benefit to her tribe (or family)." Her previous husband's name was Musâfi' bin Safwân.

Lesson: Piety is a great virtue. Despite her being a slave-girl, she was able to enter into the marriage of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. O women! There isn't anyone more honourable than Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. If he did not consider it to be a blemish to marry a slave-girl, do not consider it to be disgraceful or undignified if anyone marries a person of a lower social standing because of some reason or brings someone from a foreign place;. This is an evil sickness and also a sin. Look at how the Sahâbah radiyallâhu 'anhum honoured her in that they did not even allow themselves to disgrace her relatives and fellow tribes-men. How ignorant we are today in that we do not honour such a woman irrespective of how pious and religious-minded she may be. As for honouring her family, there is no hope whatsoever in this regard.

Maymûnah radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is also the wife of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. A great scholar of Hadîth relates that her nikâh with Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam took place in the following manner: She came to him and said: "I am gifting my life to you." In other words, I am prepared to enter into a marriage with you without even any mahr. He accepted this. Marrying in this manner (i.e. without any mahr) was permissible only for Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. A great mufassir relates that the verse which mentions a marriage of this nature was first revealed for this woman. Her first husband's name was Huwaytib.

Lesson: Look at how much love she had for the Dîn that she considered serving Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam as an act of 'ibâdah and was therefore prepared to forfeit her right to receive any mahr. This she did at a time when women used to receive the mahr in cash, i.e. without any delay. It was unlike today where the mahr is delayed until "qiyâmah" or death. O women! Consider Dîn to be the actual thing of value. Do not have too much love for the world to the extent that you waste your time thinking about it all the time. Twenty fours of the day are spent immersed in these thoughts: If one attains one's objective one is overjoyed irrespective of whether one receives a reward in doing so or a sin. If one does not obtain it, one is filled with sorrow, begins to complain, becomes jealous of those who possess it, and thereafter begins to have evil intentions.

Safiyyah radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is also the wife of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam A battle took place between the Muslims and the Jews at a place called Khaybar. She was brought as a prisoner after this battle. She fell in the booty of one of the Sahâbah. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam paid for her freedom and married her thereafter. She is from the progeny of Hârûn 'alayhis salâm. She possessed many forbearing and intelligent qualities. Her forbearance can be gauged from an incident: her slave-girl concocted two lies and informed 'Umar radiyallâhu 'anhu of them. One of these lies was that she (Safiyyah) still has a special attachment for Saturday. This day is a very sacred day of the week for the Jews. In other words, despite her accepting Islam, traces of her previous religion were still found in her. If this has to be looked at from another angle, she is not a complete Muslim. The second lie was that she gives and takes a lot from the Jews. When 'Umar radiyallâhu 'anhu went and asked her about this, she replied: "The first thing that she said is absolutely false. Ever since I accepted Islam and Allawh has blessed me with Friday, my heart has become totally detached from Saturday. The second thing which she said is true. The reason for this is that they (the Jews) are my relatives and it is not against the Sharî'ah for one to maintain good relations with one's relatives." She then asked the slave-girl: "Who asked you to concoct lies?" She replied: "Satan." Upon this, she replied: "You can go now, I have freed you." Her first husband's name was Kanânah bin Abil Haqîq.

Lesson: O women! This is what is known as forbearance. You should also overlook and forgive your domestics and your maids if they make any mistake. Taking revenge or compensation from them on trivial matters is a sign of lack of courage. Look at how honest Safiyyah radiyallâhu 'anhâ was. She clearly spelt out the quality that was found in her and did not try to cover it up. It is the habit of some people that they do not like to admit anything. They try to save themselves from any accusation by disguising and concealing anything that they may have done. It is also an evil practice to concoct stories.

Zaynab radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is the daughter of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. He loved her very much. She was married to 'Abû al-'Âs bin ar-Rabî' radiyallâhu 'anhu. When she accepted Islam and her husband refused to do so, she severed relations with him and migrated to Madinah. A few days later, her husband also followed her to Madinah and accepted Islam. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam performed their nikâh again. He also liked her a lot. When she had left Makkah for Madinah, an incident took place on the way: two disbelievers encountered her on the way. One of them pushed her and she fell on a rock. He had some desire for her but that also disappeared. She was badly injured from this fall to the extent that she did not fully recover right until her death. Eventually, this was the cause of her death.

Lesson: Look at her courage and her piety that she was prepared to leave her birth-place and her husband for the sake of Dîn. Furthermore, she bore the difficulties imposed upon her by the disbelievers to the extent that she passed away. Yet she remained steadfast on Dîn. O women! You should be prepared to leave everything for the sake of Dîn. If you experience any difficulties, endure them. If your husband leaves the Dîn, do not side with him.

Ruqayyah radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is also the daughter of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam Her first marriage was with 'Utbah, the son of the kâfir Abû Lahab. Abû Lahab has been mentioned in the Quran in Sûrah al-Masad (the 111th sûrah of the Quran). The father and son did not accept Islam and the former therefore ordered his son to leave her. Upon this, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam performed her nikâh with 'Uthmân radiyallâhu 'anhu. When Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam prepared to leave for the battle of Badr, she was sick at that time. Because of this, he asked 'Uthmân radiyallâhu 'anhu to remain behind and tend to her and informed him that he will receive the same reward as those engaged in jihâd and that he will also receive a share of the booty. She passed away on the very day the Muslims vanquished the disbelievers and returned to Madinah.

Lesson: Look at her greatness that tending to her was considered to be equal to waging jihâd against the disbelievers. This eminence of hers was on account of her piety. O women! Always try to strengthen your Dîn. Do not allow yourselves to commit any sin as this is a cause of weakness in the Dîn.

Umme Kulthûm radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is also the daughter of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. Her first marriage was with 'Utaybah who was also a son of Abû Lahab. Before she could even go and live with this husband, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam received prophethood. The father and son had not accepted Islam and the former ordered his son to leave her as well. When her sister, Ruqayyah, passed away, she married 'Uthmân. When Ruqayyah had passed away, co-incidentally, Hafsah had also become a widow. 'Umar radiyallâhu 'anhu (the father of Hafsah) wanted to get her married to 'Uthmân radiyallâhu 'anhu. However, the latter did not show any interest. When Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam heard of this, he said to 'Umar radiyallâhu 'anhu: "I will show you a husband for Hafsah who is better than 'Uthmân, and for 'Uthmân a wife that is better than Hafsah." Based on this, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam married Hafsah, and got 'Uthmân married to 'Umme Kulthûm.

Lesson: Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam spoke good of her and when he speaks good of anyone, it is based on that person's 'îmân. O women! You should also put your 'îmân in order.

Fâtimah radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is the youngest of all the sisters but the highest in status and the most beloved to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. He has referred to her as the piece of his flesh and the leader of all women. He has also stated that if anything causes her sorrow, it causes him sorrow as well. When he fell ill, he whispered into her ear and informed her of the approach of his death. Upon hearing this, she began to cry. He again whispered into her ear and informed her that she should not grieve because she will be the first to join him and she will be the leader of all women in jannah. Upon hearing this, she began smiling. Although all his wives begged her to tell them what he had told her, she did not do so until after his demise. She married 'Alî radiyallâhu 'anhu. Many other virtues concerning her have been mentioned in the Hadîth.

Lesson One: The reason for Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam loving her the most and being specially attached to her is that she was the most pious, the most patient and the most grateful. O women! Adopt Dîn, patience and gratefulness. You will also become beloved by Allawh and His Rasûl sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam.

Lesson Two: When we had first mentioned the life of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam, we also listed all the names of his wives and daughters.

Lesson Three: O women! There is one more point which you have to ponder over. You have read about Rasûlullâh's sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam eleven wives and four daughters. You must have realized for yourselves that out of the eleven wives, apart from 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ, all the others had been married previously. From his daughters, apart from Zaynab and Fâtimah radiyallâhu 'anhumâ, the other two were married prior to marrying 'Uthmân radiyallâhu 'anhu. No woman in the world is equal to these twelve women (the ten wives and two daughters who had been married previously) in honour and status. If entering into a second marriage was blameworthy or a blemish, would these women have ever done something that is considered to be a blemish? It is extremely sad that some ignorant people consider a second marriage to be a blemish. If one begins to consider something that occurred in the family of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam to be a blemish or to be immoral, how can one still have îmân? What type of Muslims are they that they find fault with the lifestyle of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and consider the lifestyle of the kuffâr to be honourable? We are saying this because keeping a widow at home without allowing her to get married again is actually the custom of the kâfir Hindus of India.

We have something else to add to this. There is a big difference between you and the widows of the past. They may have been ignorant, but they used to take great precautions in safeguarding their honour and chastity. They used to suppress their nafs and did not allow it to fall into sin. As for today, the widows surpass married women in trying to beautify themselves. It is for this reason that many incidents are beginning to occur which are not suitable to be mentioned. In these times, it is most certainly not permissible to refuse widows from getting married. This is because neither the women have any shame and bashfulness of the past, the men do not have any sense of honour, nor do the widows know how to live a life of widowhood and to undertake the necessary means for their food and clothing. Now the time is such that one should not even forgetfully think of refusing a widow from getting married. May Allawh give us understanding and success.

Note: After mentioning the lives of the women of the previous nations, we mentioned the lives of Rasûlullâh's sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam 11 wives and 4 daughters - totalling 15 women. We will now mention the lives of women who were present during the lifetime of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and with some of whom he had special relations.

Halîmah Sa'diyyah radiyallâhu 'anhâ

This woman breast-fed Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. When he waged a jihâd against the city of Tâ'if, she came to him together with her husband and son. He treated her with great respect, laid down his shawl and made her sit on it. All of them accepted Islam.

Lesson: Despite her having a special relationship with Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam she knew that this would not give her salvation in any way if she did not bring îmân. She therefore accepted Islam. O women! You should not be under the assumption that you are from the progeny of a certain pious man or that a certain son or grandson of yours is an 'âlim or a hâfiz and that they will grant you salvation. Remember that if you have Dîn in yourself, these persons can ask Allawh for something on your behalf. But if you do not have any Dîn, they will be of no help to you.

Umme Ayman radiyallâhu 'anhâ

Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to go and visit her occasionally. Once he went to visit her and she offered him something to drink. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam refused either because he did not feel like drinking anything at that time or because he was fasting. Because of the fact that she had brought up Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam she insisted that he drinks it. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to say that after my real mother, she is my mother. After his demise, Abû Bakr and 'Umar radiyallâhu 'anhumâ also used to visit her occasionally. Upon seeing them she used to think of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and begin to cry. They should also begin crying.

Lesson: What an honour it was to have Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and these two great Sahâbah visiting her. Her greatness is on account of her serving Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and being perfect in her Dîn. O women! Serving Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam means that you must serve his Dîn, direct women towards good deeds, teach them the Dîn, teach your children piety, and you yourself should remain steadfast on Dîn. Inshâ' Allawh, you will also receive a part of greatness.

Do not think that she must have went in front of all these visitors without purdah. To go and sit by someone and to speak or listen to good talks even though it may be behind a screen or curtain is sufficient to be called a ziyârah (visit).

Umme Sulaym radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is a Sahâbiyah of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam, the wife of Abû Talha radiyallâhu 'anhu, and the mother of Anas radiyallâhu 'anhu, who was the attendant of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. She is also an aunt of his. One of her brothers who was a Sahâbî, was martyred while participating in a battle with Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. On account of all this, he used to have a lot of time for her. He used to visit her occasionally. He is also reported to have seen her in jannah.

A strange incident occurred to her. She had a small child who fell ill and also passed away during the day. Look at her patience: when night approached, she thought to herself that if she were to inform her husband about his death, he will be distressed the entire night and will abstain from eating as well. She decided to remain silent about it. When her husband came home and asked about the child's health, she replied that he is at peace. This was not a lie because what can be more peaceful for a Muslim than returning to his original place of abode? However, the husband did not grasp this. She presented the meal to him which he partook of. Thereafter, he desired her and she did not even present any excuses. When everything was over, she asked her husband: "If anyone loans you anything and thereafter asks for it, does the person who borrowed it have any right to refuse?" He replied: "No." So she said: "Exercise patience over the (death of the) child." He became angry and asked her why she did not inform him prior to all this. The following morning he went and narrated the entire incident to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. He made du'â for her, and through the power of Allawh, she fell pregnant on that very night. She gave birth to a child who was named 'Abdullâh. He became a great 'âalim and many great 'ulamâ were born from his progeny.

Lesson: O women! Learn patience from her and learn the lesson of providing comfort to the husband from her. The example of asking back a loaned item which she mentioned is a beautiful and appropriate example. If a person can comprehend this example, he will not become impatient (and despondent) at any time. Through the barakah of her patience, Allawh Ta'âlâ granted her a child soon thereafter in whose progeny many 'ulamâ were born.

Umme Harâm radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is also a Sahâbiyah and the sister of Umme Sulaym radiyallâhu 'anhâ, whose story has just been mentioned above. She is also an aunt of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. He used to visit her as well. Once he went to her house, had a meal and fell asleep. He then woke up smiling. She asked him the reason for his smiling. He replied: "I had a dream and saw people of my ummah going on jihâd on a ship. Their possessions and clothing appeared to be that of the rich and the royalty." She said: "O Rasulullah! Make du'â that I am also from among them." He made du'â for her and fell asleep again. He woke up smiling for a second time, related the same dream, and that he saw more of the same type of people. She said: "O Rasulullah! Make du'â that I am also from among them." He replied: "You are already included in the first group of people." It so happened, that her husband, 'Ubâdah, went out for jihâd on a ship and she also accompanied him. Once they landed, she began climbing onto an animal. This animal became hysterical and she fell down and passed away.

Lesson: Rasûlullâh's sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam du'â was accepted because as long as the person does not return home, that journey is considered to be a jihâd. And once a person passes away while embarking on a journey for jihâd, he receives the reward of a martyr irrespective of how he dies. Look at how pious she was that she did not even worry about her life in order to attain reward. She asked him to make a du'â so that she is blessed with this. O women! You should also bear this in mind. If you experience any difficulty in fulfilling Dînî duties, do not become agitated or excited. Eventually, it is you who will be rewarded.

Umme 'Abd radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is the mother of a very illustrious Sahâbi by the name of 'Abdullâh bin Mas'ûd radiyallâhu 'anhu. She had such a great influence in the domestic affairs of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam that outsiders used to think that she was part of his household.

Lesson: This great contact that she had with the household of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam was only on account of Dîn. O women! If you safeguard your Dîn, you will also gain proximity to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam.

The mother of Abû Dhar Ghifâri radiyallâhu 'anhu

Abû Dhar Ghifâri is a Sahâbî. When the news of Rasûlullâh's sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam prophethood spread, he left his hometown and came to Makkah in order to establish the truth. After observing the situation in Makkah, he became a Muslim. When he returned home, his mother heard his entire story. She replied: "I have no objection to your Dîn. I am also becoming a Muslim."

Lesson: This is what is known as purity in nature and temperament. Once she heard the truth, she did not worry about the religion of her forefathers. O women! Even when you hear anything about the Sharî'ah, do not try to contradict it by substantiating your family customs and rituals. You should readily accept the matter of Dîn and act accordingly.

The mother of Abû Hurayrah radiyallâhu 'anhu

Abû Hurayrah is a Sahâbi. He used to explain the Dîn to his mother so that she may accept Islam. One day, she uttered something against the Dîn which disturbed him greatly. He went crying to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and said to him: "O Rasûlullâh! Make du'â on behalf of my mother that Allawh blesses her with îmân." He therefore made the following du'â: "O Allawh! Guide the mother of Abû Hurayrah." He returned home happily but found the door to the house locked. He heard the dripping of water as if someone was having a bath. When his mother heard the sound of his approach, she asked him to wait. After completing her bath, she opened the door and recited the kalimah:

!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

He was so overjoyed that he began crying out of happiness. In this very state, he rushed to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and related the entire incident to him. Upon hearing this, he expressed his gratitude to Allawh Ta'âlâ. Abû Hurayrah then said: "O Rasûlullâh! Make du'â that we, mother and son, have love for the Muslims and that the Muslims have love for us as well." He made this du'â as well.

Lesson: Look at the great benefit of having pious children. O women! Teach your children the knowledge of Dîn. In doing so, your Dîn will also be safeguarded.

'Asmâ' bint 'Umays radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is a Sahâbiyah. When the kuffâr of Makkah persecuted the Muslims, many of them migrated to Abyssinia. She was also among them. Later, when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam migrated to Madinah, all those who were in Abyssinia also joined him. She also went to Madinah. Rasûlullâh gave her the glad tidings by informing her that because she undertook two hijrahs, she will be greatly rewarded.

Lesson: Look at how she changed from one who had a home to a homeless person, and this was done solely for the Dîn. O women! If you have to bear any burdens for the sake of Dîn, do not display any laziness.

The mother of Hudhayfah radiyallâhu 'anhu

Hadrat Hudhayfah is a Sahâbi. He says: "Once my mother asked me: 'How many days have passed since you visited Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam?' I told her the number of days. Upon hearing this she began rebuking me. So I told her: 'I am going this very moment and I will offer the maghrib salât with him. Thereafter, I will ask him to make du'â for salvation on your behalf and my behalf.' I went to him, offered the maghrib and thereafter the 'ishâ salâts with him. After the 'ishâ salât he began leaving, so I followed him. Upon hearing a sound behind him, he asked: 'Is that Hudhayfah?' I replied: 'Yes.' He asked: 'What do you want? May Allawh forgive you and your mother.'"

Lesson: Look at what a good mother she was that she even asks her children whether they visited Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam or not. O women! You should also emphasise on your children to go and visit pious persons, learn matters of the Dîn from them, and acquire the barakah of good company.

Fâtimah bint Khattâb radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is the sister of 'Umar radiyallâhu 'anhu. She had accepted Islam before her brother. Her husband, Sa'îd bin Zayd, had also become a Muslim. 'Umar radiyallâhu 'anhu had not become a Muslim as yet. Both of them were keeping their Islam a secret out of fear for him. Once, 'Umar heard her reciting the Quran. Upon hearing this, he became very angry with both of them. Let alone his brother-in-law who was a man, even his sister informed him clearly and unhesitatingly that they had become Muslims and were indeed reciting the Quran. If he wished, he could hit them or leave them (it will not change their minds in any way). 'Umar replied: "Let me see the Quran as well." The moment he saw it and heard it, the light of îmân entered his heart, he went straight to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and became a Muslim.

Lesson: O women! You should also be firm in matters of the Dîn and the Sharî'ah. Do not say anything against the Shariah in exchange for monetary gain nor follow customs that are contrary to the Sharî'ah merely to please your family. If anything is contrary to the Sharî'ah, do not even go near it.

An Ansârî woman

Ibn Is'hâq narrates that the husband, father and brother of an Ansârî woman were all martyred in the battle of 'Uhud, in which they had participated with Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. When she was informed about this, she replied: "First tell me, how is Rasûlullâh?" They replied that he is well and alive. She replied: "If he is safe and sound, there is nothing to be sorrowful about."

Lesson: Glory be to Allawh! What great love she had for Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam! O women! If you wish to have love for him, follow his Sharî'ah in totality. In this way, you will develop a love for him, and on account of this love, you will receive a stage near him.

Umme Fadl Lubâbah bint Hârith radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is the aunt of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam, the wife of 'Abbâs radiyallâhu 'anhu, and the mother of 'Abdullâh bin 'Abbâs radiyallâhu 'anhu. It is mentioned in the Quran that if Muslims are living among the kuffâr and they are unable to render the 'ibâdah of Allawh, they should leave that place and settle down in a safer area. If they do not do this, they will be committing a major sin. However, women and children who do not know the way nor do they have anyone to accompany them, or are unable to undertake the journey are excluded from this rule. 'Abdullâh bin 'Abbâs radiyallâhu 'anhu says: "My mother was from among such persons who were unable to undertake the journey. She was a woman and I was a child."

Lesson: Look at the beauty of her intention. In her heart, she did not wish to live among the kuffâr. However, she was forced to do so. Allawh therefore had mercy on her and saved her from sinning. O women! You should also make a firm intention in your heart that you will act according to the Dîn. Thereafter, there will be hope of you being forgiven in those matters in which you have no alternative. The person who does not make an intention to act according to the Dîn cannot save himself from sinning.

Umme Sulayt radiyallâhu 'anhâ

Once 'Umar radiyallâhu 'anhu was distributing some shawls among the women of Madinah. Eventually, he was left with only one shawl. So he asked the people as to whom he should give it. They replied: "Give it to 'Ali's radiyallâhu 'anhu daughter, Umme Kulthûm, who is also your wife." He replied: "No. Umme Sulayt deserves to receive it." This woman is from the Ansâr and had also given the bay'ah to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. 'Umar radiyallâhu 'anhu said: "This woman was such that during the battle of Uhud she used to carry water skins and go around giving the Muslims water to drink. There was also another woman by the name of Khaulah who fought in the battle with a sword."

Lesson: Look at her courage in fulfilling the work of Allawh. It is for this reason that 'Umar radiyallâhu 'anhu valued her so much. Now the level of our courage is such that we cannot even offer our five times salât properly.

Hâlah bint Khuwaylid radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is the sister-in-law of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and the sister of Khadîjah radiyallâhu 'anhâ. Once she came to visit Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. She stood outside and asked for permission to enter. Because her voice was similar to her sister's, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam thought of Khadîjah radiyallâhu 'anhâ and became startled. Upon seeing her, he exclaimed (in the form of a du'â): "O Allawh! This is Hâlah!"

Lesson: From this du'â we learn that he loved her. Apart from her being his sister-in-law, he loved her on account of her piety. O women! You also become pious and Allawh and His Rasûl sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam will love you.

Hind bint 'Utbah radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is the mother of Mu'âwiyah radiyallâhu 'anhu, who in turn is the brother-in-law of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. Once she addressed Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and said to him: "Prior to becoming a Muslim, I did not desire anyone being disgraced more than you. Now that I have become a Muslim, I do not desire honour for anyone more than you." He replied: "I am also in the same condition."

Lesson: One of the things we learn about her is that she was honest. The other thing that we learn is that she loved Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and he also loved her. O women! You should also speak the truth. Love Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and carry out acts which will cause him to love you as well.

Umme Khâlid radiyallâhu 'anhâ

When the people migrated to Abyssinia, she was also present. She was a child at that time. When she returned from there to Madinah, her father went to meet Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. She also accompanied her father. She was wearing a yellow dress. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam had a small embroidered shawl. He made her wear it and said to her that she was looking very nice. Thereafter he made the following du'â: "May you get worn out and get old." This is a form of expression the meaning of which is that may you live long. Many people have narrated that they have not seen any woman as old as her, i.e. she lived for very long. The people used to refer to her and say that a certain woman has reached very old age. Once, when she was a child, she began playing with the seal of prophethood which was on Rasûlullâh's sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam back. Upon seeing this, her father scolded her. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam told him to leave her alone as there was nothing wrong in what she was doing.

Lesson: She was very fortunate. O women! The shawl of the Dîn is actually the shawl of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam, just as the Quran has referred to piety as clothing. If you wish to acquire this fortune, adopt Dîn and piety.

Safiyyah radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is the aunt of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. When his uncle, Hamzah radiyallâhu 'anhu was martyred in Uhud, he said: "I am thinking of the suffering of Safiyyah, or else I would have not buried Hamzah. I would have left him for the wild animals to eat of him and on the day of judgement he will arise from their stomachs."

Lesson: O women! Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam took her into consideration on account of her piety. You also become pious so that you can be eligible for the pleasure of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam.

The wife of Abul Haytham radiyallâhu 'anhu

She is a Sahâbiyah. She used to feel very sorry for Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. Once there was no food in his house. When he could not bear the hunger any longer, he went to her house. Her husband was gone out to bring drinking water. She was very hospitable to him. In the meantime, her husband also arrived. He was extremely pleased to have Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam as his guest and made the arrangements for a meal for him.

Lesson: If Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam was not satisfied with her sincerity and devotion, he would have returned after seeing that her husband is not at home. He knew that she was a very good woman. For Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam to be pleased with someone and to consider the person to be a good person is not something insignificant (instead, it is a great virtue in that person's favour). O women! When Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam went to her house, he was a guest at that time. You should also be pleased when guests come to your house. Do not display any niggardliness or meanness.

'Asmâ' bint Abî Bakr radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is the sister-in-law of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and the sister of 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ. When Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam was migrating to Madînah, he had a bag of food. However, he did not have anything to tie this bag with. She immediately tore a piece of cloth from her girdle which was used to tie the bag and the remainder of the cloth was used as her girdle.

Lesson: This type of love is found in a pious person who is prepared to tear something that she needs and give it away. O women! This is what love for the Dîn demands. That is, in order to safeguard the Dîn, the person does not worry about losing anything.

Umme Rûmân radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is the mother-in-law of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and the mother of 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ. A munâfiq had accused 'Â'ishah of committing adultery. Some naive Muslims had also joined this person. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam remained silent over the entire matter. Allawh revealed a few verses of the Quran absolving her and mentioning her chastity. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam recited these verses to his house folk. At that time, Umme Rûmân ordered 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ to get up and express her gratitude to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. Although she was greatly grieved over her daughter prior to this, was it possible that she utters even a word of complaint concerning Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam?

Lesson: Such forbearance and restraint on the part of a woman is extremely surprising because on occasions like this they generally blurt out something wrong. For example, she could have said: "How unfortunate that my daughter has been accused without any valid reason, more so now that her chastity has been established." At such a time, in most cases, one becomes very angry and annoyed and rebukes the person for having doubts on such a pure and chaste woman. At times of grief and wrangling, do not side with your daughter nor fight with her in-laws.

Another woman has also been mentioned in this entire incident. Her son, due to ignorance and naivety, also joined those who accused 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ This woman reprimanded her son and sided with 'Â'ishah. Her name is Umme Mistah. This is what you call standing for the truth. That she did not side with her son - she sided with the truth and even reprimanded her son.

Umme 'Atiyyah radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is a Sahâbiyah and participated in six battles with Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. She used to tend to the sick and wounded, bandage them, etc. She used to love Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam so much that whenever she mentioned his name, she used to say: "May my father and mother be sacrificed for you."

Lesson: O women! Strive in Dînî matters and love Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam just as this woman loved him.

Barîrah radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She was someone's slave-girl. 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ purchased her and set her free. She used to live with her and be in her service and the service of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. Once, some meat came for her. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam asked for it and ate some of it.

Lesson: What a blessed opportunity it is to be in the service of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. He had full conviction in her love for him. It was because of this that he asked her for something that belonged to her and ate it and understood that she will be very happy to give it to him. O women! Serving the Dîn entails serving Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. And this is the sign of love for him.

Fâtimah bint Abî Hubaysh, Hamnah bint Abî Jahsh, and Zaynab, the wife of 'Abdullâh bin Mas'ûd radiyallâhu 'anhu

It is mentioned in the Hadith that these three women came to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam to ask him a mas'ala. We have therefore mentioned them together. Furthermore, their circumstances are quite similar. The first woman came to ask about istihâdah. The second woman is the sister-in-law of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and the sister of Zaynab bint Jahsh radiyallâhu 'anhu. She had also asked him the ruling concerning istihâdah. The third woman had asked him a mas'ala concerning charity. She is the wife of 'Abdullâh bin Mas'ûd radiyallâhu 'anhu, a great Sahâbi.

Lesson: O women! This is what is known as desire for the Dîn. If you do not know any mas'ala, you should make it a duty to ask a pious 'âlim. If you are shy to ask a particular mas'ala, pose the question to the 'âlim's wife and she will convey it to her husband.

Note: After mentioning the stories of Rasûlullâh's sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam wives and daughters, we mentioned the lives of twenty five women who were present in his time. There are many other women, whose lives have been mentioned in different books. We have not mentioned them out of fear that this book will get too lengthy. We will now mention those women who came after Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam.

The female teachers of Imâm Hâfiz Ibn Asâkir

He is a great scholar of Hadith. Out of all the teachers from whom he acquired this knowledge of Hadith, more than 80 of them were females.

Lesson: How sad it is that a time has come when women do not even attain the status of being students in acquiring the knowledge of the Dîn.

Hafîd bin Zahr at-Tabîb's sister and niece

This is a famous doctor. His sister and niece also possessed great knowledge in this field. There was a great caliph by the name of Mansûr. These two women were appointed to treat all those who were in his household.

Lesson: This branch of knowledge has completely disappeared from women. If a woman wishes to take up this profession, has a good intention, does not engage in any cheating, does not prescribe any harâm medicine, and is not neglectful in fulfilling her Dînî obligations; then there is great reward in this and extremely beneficial to humanity at large. These days, many ignorant "doctors" have deluded many women. If they had knowledge, this degeneration would not have taken place. If those women whose father, brother or husband is a doctor make an effort to learn this branch of knowledge, they will be able to do so very easily.

The slave-girl of Imâm Yazîd bin Hârûn

He is a great imâm of Hadith. Towards the latter part of his life his eye sight became weak and he was unable to read any books. This slave-girl used to help him. She used to read the book, learn the Hadith and mention it to him.

Lesson: Glory be to Allawh! In those days slave-girls used to be 'âlimahs. Today, the majority of free women are jâhils. For the sake of Allawh, try to erase this black spot (from our society).

The slave-girl of Ibn Simâk

This person was a great 'âlim of his time. Once he asked his slave-girl: "How is my lecture?" She replied: "It is good, but you repeat the same thing over and over again." He replied: "I repeat it again and again so that those who are not intelligent will understand it." She replied: "By the time the less intelligent understand it, the intelligent will have become agitated and perplexed."

Lesson: To comprehend such an intricate matter from an 'âlim's lecture, can only be accomplished by an 'âlim. From this we can gauge that this slave-girl was an 'âlimah. O women! Do not become lower than slave-girls. Endeavour to acquire knowledge. If there is any 'âlim in your house, try and learn Arabic as well because complete enjoyment in knowledge is in this (learning Arabic). It is easier for you than boys since the responsibility of earning (a livelihood) is not upon you. You should occupy yourself in this (acquiring knowledge) with confidence. As for sewing and other related crafts, you can learn those in a few weeks. Why should you waste your entire life in that?

This person is a very great 'âlim. When he was young, his aunt used to take him to the great places of learning. All the things that he heard while he was young were such that by the time he reached ten years of age, he began delivering lectures like an 'âlim.

Lesson: Look at the concern that she had in order to impart Dînî knowledge to her children. She must have been very old at that time and yet she herself used to take him. The minimum that you can do is that as long as your child does not acquire Dînî knowledge, do not sink him into western education. Stop him from bad company and warn him against it. Stress upon him the importance of going to madrasah. Today the situation is such that mothers do not even have any desire to educate their children. If they have any desire, it is for western education with the hope that their children will become a tax-collector or an officer, etc. even if he goes to hell and takes his parents with. Remember, that the most important thing is Dînî knowledge. If a child does not have that, he does not have anything.

The mother of Imâm Rabî'atur Ra'y

He is also a very great 'âlim. Imâm Mâlik and Hasan Basri, who are very well known, were his students. His father's name is Farûkh. His father was employed as a soldier during the caliphate of the Banû Umayyah. He was sent out to fight in many battles. His wife was expecting Rabî'atur Ra'y while the father was away in battle. The father was away for 27 years. In the meantime, the son was born and became a great 'âlim. When the father was departing to go into battle, he gave his wife 30 000 gold coins. This courageous mother spent all this money in the child's education. When the father returned after 27 years, he asked her about the gold coins. She replied that all are kept safely. In the meantime, Rabî'atur Ra'y was busy teaching Hadith in the musjid. When the father went to the musjid, he noticed the scene before him and saw that his son has developed a massive following. He could not control himself out of extreme happiness. When he returned home, his wife asked him: "Tell me what is better. The 30 000 gold coins or this great bounty (referring to their son, Rabî'atur Ra'y)? Of what value are those gold coins?" When she informed him that she used all that money for her son's education, he was overjoyed and said: "I swear by Allawh that you have not wasted those gold coins."

Lesson: Have you seen what type of women these were! How they valued Dînî knowledge that this woman spent 30 000 gold coins for her son's Dînî education. O women! You too should not worry about how much you spend (on your children's Dînî education). In whatever way you can, make sure that they acquire Dînî knowledge.

The mother and sister of Imâm Bukhâri

There is no one who can equal Imâm Bukhâri when it comes to the knowledge of Hadith. He was fourteen years old when he began travelling in order to seek knowledge. His mother and sister undertook the responsibility of paying for all his studies, travels and other expenses.

Lesson: A mother sometimes pays for her child's expenses. But as for a sister who has no responsibility whatsoever in this regard, why should she pay? From this we can deduce that when the women of that time merely heard about Dînî knowledge, they were prepared to sacrifice their wealth and possessions. O women! You should also be like this.

The sister of Qâḍî Zâdah Rûmî

He was a great 'âlim. After acquiring knowledge from the 'ulamâ of Rûm, he had a desire to go abroad in order to further his studies. He began making preparations for the journey secretly. His sister came to know about his plans so she took out a considerable amount of her jewellery and concealed it with her brother's goods and did not inform him about it.

Lesson: How great this woman was. She had no desire for name and fame. All she wanted was that knowledge should exist. O women! There is great reward in helping to ensure that knowledge exists. Help the different madâris in whatever way you can.

Note: After mentioning the lives of the women during the time of Rasûlullâh ṣallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam we mentioned the lives of those who came after him and displayed great zeal for Dînî knowledge. We will now mention the lives of those women who were inclined towards sûfism.

Mu'âdhah 'Adawiyyah

She had a strange condition. At the approach of day, she used to say: "Perhaps this is the day in which I will die", and she used to abstain from sleeping till the evening so that at the time of death she will not be unmindful of the remembrance of Allawh. At the approach of night, she used to abstain from sleeping as well. When she felt sleepy, she used to run around the house and say to her self: "The time to sleep is still to come." Meaning that once I die, I will be able to sleep right until qiyâmah. She used to offer 600 rak'ats of nafl ṣalât in a day. She never ever raised her eyes to the skies. Ever since her husband passed away, she never lied down on her bed. She met 'Â'ishah raḍiyallâhu 'anhâ and heard Aḥâdîth from her.

Lesson: O women! This is what you call love and remembrance of Allawh. Open your eyes (and take heed)!

Râbi'ah 'Adawiyyah

She used to cry profusely. When she used to hear about hell, she used to faint. When anyone offered her anything, she used to refuse it and say: "I do not want the world." When she turned 80, her condition was such that when she walked she was about to fall. She used to keep her kafan with her all the time. Her place of prostration used to get wet with her tears. All her extraordinary and astonishing ways are quite well known. She is also known as Râbi'ah Basriyyah.

Lesson: O women! You should also develop some fear of Allawh and remembrance of death, after all she was also a woman (so it's not impossible for you to do the same).

Mâjidah Qurashiyyah

She used to say: "When I take a step, I think that death is going to be next." She used to say: "It is very strange - the people of the world have been informed of the departure (to the hereafter) but they are so unmindful as if they have not even heard about this departure and that they will live here forever." She also used to say: "No bounty of jannah and no pleasure of Allawh can be attained without any effort."

Lesson: O women! How beneficial these advices are. Let them sink into your hearts and practice on them.

'Â'ishah bint Ja'far Ṣâdiq

She had an eminent status. She used to say: "If I am put into hell, I will inform everyone that I used to regard Allawh as One and yet I am being punished."

Lesson: O women! Very few persons are blessed with such a status. Those who are blessed with it are done so on account of their total obedience. Adopt this obedience and remember that regarding Allawh to be One means: you should not worship anyone else, you should not hope from anyone else, you should not fear anyone else, you should not think of pleasing anyone else, you should not worry about displeasing anyone else, if anyone praises you, do not feel happy, if anyone insults you, do not feel sad, and if anyone troubles you, do not worry about him. You should merely think that Allawh wished it to be so. I am a servant - I should be pleased under all circumstances. The person who regards Allawh to be One in this way will not have to worry about hell in any way. This is what this woman meant - it is as if she was explaining the barakah and greatness of regarding Allawh as One in the manner that has been explained.

The wife of Rabâḥ Qaysi

She used to spend the entire night in 'ibâdah. When one eighth of the night used to pass, she used to say to her husband: "Wake up." If he did not wake up, she would awaken him after some time. Eventually, towards the latter part of the night she used to say: "O Rabâḥ! Wake up. The night is passing by and you are still sleeping." At times she used to pick up a blade of grass and say: "I swear by Allawh, in my eyes this world is more valueless than this blade of grass." After offering her ṣalât, she used to adorn herself with beautiful clothes and ask her husband if he had any desire. If he replied in the negative, she used to take out the clothes and occupy herself in nafl ṣalât till the following morning.

Lesson: O women! Have you seen how she used to engage in the 'ibâdah of Allawh and at the same time fulfil the rights of her husband and even urge him towards Dîn. You should try and put all these things into practice.

Fâṭimah Naysâpûrî

There was a very pious 'âlim by the name of Dhun Nûn Miṣrî. He says that he benefited tremendously from this woman. She used to say: "The person who does not remember Allawh goes and falls into every type of sin, and blurts out anything and everything that comes on his tongue. As for the person who remembers Allawh all the time, he becomes dumb to vain talks and begins to have shame and respect for Allawh." Abû Yazîd says: "I have not come across a woman like Fâṭimah." From wherever any news came, she used to have knowledge of it before hand. She passed away in the year 223 A. H. in Makkah while going for 'umrah.

Lesson: Look at the great advice that she has given. If one acts on this, one will be saved from all sins. We also learn that this woman used to get kashf, although this does not necessarily imply great status. However, if a good person experiences this, it is considered to be good.

Râyi'ah or Râbi'ah Shâmiyah bint Ismâ'îl

She used to spend the entire night in 'ibâdah and fast all the time. She used to say: "When I hear the 'adhân, I think of the angel who will call out on the day of qiyâmah. When I look at the heat (hot weather), I think of the heat of qiyâmah." Her husband was also a very pious personality by the name of Ibn Abî al-Hiwârî. She used to say to him: "I love you just as one loves one's brother." What she meant was that her nafs did not have any desire. She used to say: "When a person occupies himself in the 'ibâdah of Allawh, then He makes the person aware of his faults and shortcomings. Once a person becomes aware of his shortcomings, he has no time to look at the faults and shortcomings of others." She used to say: "I can see the jinns moving around, and I can also see the hûrs."

Lesson: O women! This is what you call 'ibâdah. See what a good cure she showed for the treatment of this sickness which you have, i.e. looking and searching for the faults of others. Look at your own faults and you will never see anyone else's faults. We learn that she also used to get kashf. We have already mentioned this above.

Umme Hârûn

She had great fear for Allawh, used to engage in a lot of 'ibâdah, and always used to eat dry bread. She used to say: "At the approach of night, my heart used to become very happy. But when day comes, I get very sad. I stay awake the entire night." She did not apply any oil to her hair for thirty years. However, when she used to open her hair, it used to be clean and shining. Once she came out of her house and heard a person telling another person: "Catch (seize)!" (Upon hearing this) the day of qiyâmah came to mind and she fell down unconscious. Once while she was in the forest, a lion confronted her. She said to it: "If I am your sustenance, eat me." This lion turned around and went away.

Lesson: Glory be to Allawh! How intoxicated she was in His remembrance and how much she feared Him! As regards the incident with the lion, that could be considered to be her karâmat. O women! You should also create this remembrance and fear of Allawh in your hearts. Qiyâmah is bound to come, so make some preparations for it.

'Umrah, the wife of Habîb 'Ajamî

She used to spend the entire night in 'ibâdah. Towards the latter part of the night she used to say to her husband: "The caravan has moved on and you are still sleeping." Once her eyes began paining. Someone came to ask her about it, so she replied: "My heart is in even more pain."

Lesson: O women! Develop this type of pain of the love for Allawh that all other types of pains are insignificant compared to this one.

'Amatul Jalîl

She was a great 'âbid and zâhid. Once, several pious persons were discussing the characteristics of a wali. Eventually they all decided to go and ask 'Amatul Jalîl. When they posed this question to her, she replied: "No minute of a wali passes without his being occupied with anything other than that which is connected to Allawh. If anyone shows him something else to do (and he does it), he is an imposter."

Lesson: How great she must have been for other male sûfis to go and ask her such questions. What a good means of recognition she showed them! O women! You should also have an urge for this. Give preference to the remembrance of Allawh over all your other pre-occupations.

'Ubaydah bint Kilâb

Mâlik bin Dînâr was a very great sûfi. This woman used to come and see to his needs. Some sûfis consider her to be greater in status than Râbi'ah Basriyyah. Once she heard a person saying: "A person can only be a complete muttaqi when he considers going to Allawh the most beloved of all things." Upon hearing this, she fainted.

Lesson: What a great desire and yearning she had to go to Allawh that the moment His name was mentioned, she fainted. Today the situation is such that a person does not even like to hear about death. The only reason for this is that love for the world has entered the heart and the person does not even feel like going. Remove this from the heart, only then will you have a desire to go to Allawh.

'Afîrah 'Âbidah

One day, many pious persons went to her and asked her to make du'â for them. She replied: "I am such a great sinner that if a person becomes dumb on account of sinning, I will not be able to speak," (that is, I will become dumb). However, it is sunnah to make du'â, therefore I will make du'â." Thereafter she made du'â for all of them.

Lesson: Despite her being a great 'âbid and zâhid, she humbled herself and considered herself to be a sinner. Today the situation is such that a person reads a few tasbîhs and considers himself to be a saint. Allawh does not like haughtiness. You should therefore consider yourself to be low and think to yourself that thousands of shortcomings continue to be filled into you. When you make any 'ibâdah, think of these things as well and you will not consider yourself to be great anymore.

Sha'wânah

She used to cry profusely and say: "I want to cry to such an extent that I have no tears left. Thereafter, I must cry blood to such an extent that I have no blood left in my body." Her servant says: "Ever since I set eyes on her, I benefited to such an extent that I never had any desire for the world nor did I look down upon any Muslim." Fudayl bin 'Iyâd is a very great and well known saint. He used to go to her and ask her for du'âs.

Lesson: Being able to cry out of Allawh's love or His fear is a very valuable gift. If you are unable to cry, at least adopt the expression of a crying person and Allawh will have mercy on such humbleness. Look at the great benefit in sitting in the company of the pious - as mentioned by her servant. You should also seek pious company and keep away from evil persons.

'Âminah Ramlîyyah

There was a sûfi by the name of Bishr bin Hârith who used to come and visit her. Once Bishr fell ill, so she came to visit him. Imâm 'Ahmad bin Hambal also came to visit him. He heard that this 'Âminah came from Ramlah to visit Bishr, so he said to Bishr: "Tell her to make du'â for me." Bishr asked her to do so. She made the following du'â: "O Allawh! Bishr and 'Ahmad are seeking refuge from jahannam. You grant refuge to both of them." Imâm 'Ahmad says that in the night, a piece of paper fell from above. On it, Bismillah was written and thereafter the following words were written: "We have accepted the du'â and We have many other bounties in stock."

Lesson: Glory be to Allawh! How her du'â got accepted! O women! All these blessings are on account of obedience. The person who fulfills the commands of Allawh, Allawh fulfills his du'âs. Therefore try to fulfil all His commands.

Manfûsah bint Zayd Abî al-Fawâris

Whenever any child of hers used to pass away, she used to take the child into her lap and say: "Your going away before me is better than your staying after me." What she meant was that by the child passing away before her, he will be able to intercede on her behalf and he himself will gain salvation. If he lived after her, it is possible that he may commit thousands of sins and Allawh knows best whether he will be eligible to intercede or not. She also used to say: "My patience is better than restlessness. Although there is remorse over your separation from me, there is more happiness over the reward."

Lesson: O women! If you console yourself in this way when anyone passes away, 'Inshâ' Allawh, it will be sufficient for you.

Sayyidah Nafîsah bint Hasan bin Zayd bin Hasan bin 'Alî radiyallâhu 'anhum

She is from the progeny of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam because she is the granddaughter of Zayd who is the grandson of 'Alî radiyallâhu 'anhu. She was born in Makkah in the year 145 A. H. She was brought up in 'ibâdah. When Imâm Shâfi'î went to Egypt, he used to visit her regularly.

Lesson: O women! Her knowledge and piety was the reason for such a great Imâm to visit her. You should also acquire knowledge of the Dîn, practice upon it, and thereby attain piety and greatness.

Maymûnah Saudâ'

A sûfi by the name of 'Abdul Wâhid bin Zaydân says: "I made the following du'â: 'O Allawh! Show me the person who is going to be my companion in jannah.' I was given a reply that my companion will be Maymûnah Saudâ'. I asked: 'Where is she?' I was given a reply that she is in Kûfah and belongs to a certain tribe. So I went there and inquired about her. The people replied that she is mad and that she tends to the sheep. I went into the jungle and saw her offering salât while the sheep and wolves were on one side. When she completed her salât, she turned to me and said: 'O ‘Abdul Wâhid! Go! The time to meet is in jannah (and not now).' I was very surprised that she knew my name? She replied: 'Don't you know that when the souls have already met over there (referring to the ‘âlam-e-arwâh), they become attached to each other and recognize each other?' I asked her: 'I see all the sheep and wolves together in one place. How did this happen?' She replied: 'Go and mind your own business. I have put my relationship with Allawh in order, and He made the relationship between the sheep and wolves in order (both of them are living in harmony without the wolves attacking the sheep).'"

Lesson: This woman was given the power of kashf and karâmat as well. All this barakah was on account of total obedience to Allawh. O women! Prepare yourselves for the obedience of Allawh.

Rayhânah Majnûnah

A sûfi by the name of Abû ar-Rabî‘ says: "Muhammad bin al-Munkadir, Thâbit Banânî, and I were guests at the house of Rayhânah. Before the expiry of half the night she woke up and said: 'The lover goes to his beloved, and the heart is filled with such joy that it seems that it would burst any moment. When half the night passed, she said: "One should not attach one's heart to such things which if you set your eyes on them, you perceive a difference (i.e. a decrease) in your remembrance of Allawh. At night, one should strive very hard in ‘ibâdah, only then can one become His friend.' When the entire night passed, she screamed and said: 'Oh! It has been destroyed!' I asked her: 'What happened?' She replied: 'The night is gone in which one can concentrate fully in Allawh.'"

Lesson: Look at how she valued the night. The person who experiences the sweetness of ‘ibâdah, will value the night greatly. O women! You should also set aside a certain portion of the night for your ‘ibâdah. Look at how well she explained the harm of directing your attention towards anything that distracts you from the remembrance of Allawh. You too should not worry too much about money, possessions, clothes, jewellery, children, properties, utensils, houses, etc.

A female murîd of Surî Saqtî

One of the murîds of this shaykh says: "My shaykh had a female murîd. She had a son who was studying in a madrasah. His teacher sent him somewhere on an errand. He fell into some water and drowned. When the teacher heard about this, he went to Hadrat Surî and informed him. Hadrat Surî got up and went to this female murîd's house. He then began speaking to her about patience, so she said: 'Why are you speaking on this subject to me?' He replied: 'Your son drowned and passed away.' She was very surprised and said: 'Are you sure it's my son?' He replied: 'Yes, your son.' She replied: 'It's impossible. My son did not drown.' Saying this, she went to the place where they claimed that he drowned. Upon reaching there, she called out: 'O Zâr!' Her son replied: 'Yes mother' and came out of the water alive. Hadrat Surî went to Hadrat Junayd and asked him to explain this incident to him. He replied: 'This woman has a special status and rank in that whatever calamity is to befall her, she comes to know of it before hand. She did not know of this drowning and therefore said that it did not happen.'"

Lesson: Each walî receives a different status and a different ranking. One should not think that this walî is higher than that walî who does not know what is going to happen to him before hand. Allawh has the choice to deal with whomsoever He wishes in whichever way He wishes. Be that as it may, it is still a great karâmat. All this is through the barakah of obedience to Allawh and Rasûlullâh sallallâhu ‘alayhi wa sallam. One should endeavour in this direction and thereafter if Allawh wishes, He will grant such a person a status like this, or one even greater than this.

Tuhfah

Hadrat Surî Saqtî says: "Once I went to a clinic. I saw a young girl tied in chains. She was crying and reciting love poems. I asked the guard about her. He informed me that she is mad. Upon hearing this, she cried out even louder and said: 'I am not mad, I am an ‘âshiq (lover).' I asked her: 'Whose lover are you?' She replied: 'I love the one who has given us all these bounties and who is present with us all the time.' That is, Allawh. In the meantime her master came and asked: 'Where is Tuhfah?' The guard replied: 'She is inside and Hadrat Surî is with her.' He entered and showed me great respect. I said to him: 'This girl is worthy of more respect than me. Why have you reduced her to such a state?' He replied: 'All my wealth has been spent on her. I purchased her for 20 000 dirhams thinking that I will be able to sell her at a big profit. But she does not eat anything, does not drink anything; the only thing that she does is cry all day.' I said to him: 'Sell her to me.' He replied: 'You are a poor person, how will you pay for her?' I went home and made an earnest du‘â to Allawh. After a little while, a person knocked on my door. When I opened the door, I saw a person standing there with many purses of money in his hand. I asked him: 'Who are you?' He replied: 'I am ’Ahmad bin al-Muthannâ. In a dream I was ordered to come and give you this money.' The following morning I went to the clinic. Co-incidentally, I saw the master crying. I told him not to be sad because I have brought the money. Even if he asks for double the amount, I will give it to him. He replied: 'Even if I get the entire world I will not sell her. I am freeing her for the sake of Allawh.' I asked him: 'What's this all about?' He replied: 'I saw in a dream that Allawh is displeased with me. You be a witness that I have left all my wealth in the path of Allawh.' When I turned, I saw ’Ahmad bin al-Muthannâ crying as well. I asked him: 'What's the matter with you?' He replied: 'I am also giving all my wealth as charity in the path of Allawh.' I said: 'Glory be to Allawh! It is the barakah of Tuhfah that these persons have been guided.' Tuhfah got up crying from there and went out. We followed her but after a little while lost track of her. We all went towards Makkah. ’Ahmad al-Muthannâ passed away on the way. The master and I reached Makkah. While making ţawâf, I heard a fearful sound. I went near the person and asked: 'Who are you?' The person replied: 'Glory be to Allawh! Have you forgotten? I am Tuhfah.' I asked her: 'What did you receive?' She replied: 'I have attached my heart to myself and separated it from others.' I said to her: 'Ahmad bin al-Muthannâ has passed away.' She replied: 'He has received high stages.' I said to her; 'Your master is also with me.' She said something silently and when I looked carefully, I saw that she was dead. When the master saw this condition of hers, he fell down powerless. When I shook him, I saw that he was also dead. I enshrouded both of them and buried them."

Lesson: Glory be to Allawh! How intense her love for Allawh was! O women! You should also have this desire. My shaykh, Hâjî Imdâdullâh Sâhib Muhâjir Makkî, has written this incident in his book Tuhfatul ‘Ushshâq in greater detail.

Juwayriyah

She was the slave-girl of a king. He freed her. Upon seeing the great ‘ibâdah of the sûfi ’Abû ‘Abdullâh Turâbî, she married him and used to engage in ‘ibâdah as well. Once she saw beautiful tents in her dream. She asked for who these were. A reply came that they are for those who recite the Quran in tahajjud. After seeing this dream, she abandoned sleeping at night. She used to awaken her husband and tell him that the caravan is moving on.

Lesson: O women! You should engage in ‘ibâdah yourself and urge your husband as well.

The daughter of Shâh bin Shujâ‘ Kirmânî

This pious servant of Allawh abandoned his kingship and adopted sûfism. He had a daughter. Another ruler proposed to her but the father refused. Upon seeing a poor, pious young man offering salât in a beautiful manner, he got her married to him. When she left her parents' home and came to her husband's home she saw a piece of dry bread which was hidden in a water-pot. Upon seeing this, she asked: "What is this?" The boy replied: "This is the left-over of last night. I have left it so that I may open my fast with it." Upon hearing this, she turned to go. The boy said: "I knew from the very outset that a king's daughter will not be happy with my poverty." She replied: "The king's daughter is not displeased with your poverty, instead, she is displeased that you do not have any trust in Allawh. I am surprised at my father who told me that you are a virtuous young man. How can a person who does not place his trust in Allawh be virtuous and pious?" This boy began apologizing. She said: "I don't want to hear any apologies. Either I remain in this house or this bread remains here." The boy immediately gave this bread in charity and she remained with him.

Lesson: O women! This girl was also a woman. You should also learn some patience and reduce your desire for wealth and possessions.

A young daughter of Hadrat Hâtim

He was a great sûfi. Once a rich man was on his way when he felt thirsty. Hadrat Hâtim's house was on the way. He came and asked for water. After drinking the water, he threw some money and continued on his journey. His house folk were all very poor, so they became very happy when this money was given to them. He had a young daughter who started crying. When the house folk asked her the reason for her crying, she replied: "An insignificant person saw our condition and we became rich. How sad it is that Allawh is aware of our condition all the time but our hearts are not happy."

Lesson: How intelligent this girl was! It is extremely sad that now even elderly women do not have the intelligence to have their trust in Allawh. Instead, they depend on His creation by thinking that a certain person will benefit them or a certain person will help them. For the sake of Allawh put your hearts in order.

Satt al-Mulûk

She was from Arabia. All the 'auliyâ' and 'ulamâ' of her time used to honour her. Once she went to visit Baytul Maqdis. At that time, a sûfi by the name of 'Alî bin 'Albas Yamânî was present over there. He says: "I was in the musjid when I saw a thread filled with nûr extending from the sky to the dome of the musjid. When I went to look, I saw this woman offering salât under the dome and the thread was attached to her."

Lesson: This nûr was the nûr of piety. It is formed in the heart of all pious persons. At times, Allawh displays this nûr outside as well. But the actual place of this nûr is the heart. O women! Adopt piety, do good deeds and stay away from that which is prohibited.

The slave-girl of 'Abû 'Âmir Wâ'iz

He says: "I saw a slave-girl being sold at a very cheap price. She was pale in colour and her stomach and back were almost joined (describing how thin and skinny she was). Her hair had become stuck together due to the dirt that was on it. I felt sorry for her and purchased her. I said to her: 'Go to the market and purchase some goods for Ramadân.' She replied: 'All thanks is due to Allawh that the entire year is equal in my eyes.' She used to fast during the day and engage in 'ibâdah at night. When 'îd approached, I intended purchasing something for her. She said: 'Your temperament is such that you are very attached to the world.' She then commenced offering salât. She recited a verse which made mention of hell. Upon reading this verse, she sneezed and fell down dead."

Lesson: This is what you call fear of Allawh. Be that as it may, it is beyond us to adopt such fear. However, the minimum you can do is that you should abstain from sins irrespective of whether they be connected with the limbs, with the heart or with the tongue.

Note: We have now mentioned the lives of 100 women: 25 from the previous ummahs, 15 that were of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam family, 25 that were present in his time, 10 that came after him and who had great love for Dînî knowledge, and 25 that were inclined to sûfism. There are many other stories, but these will be sufficient in order to learn a lesson from them.

Hawwâ 'alayhas salâm

She is the wife of Âdam 'alayhis salâm and the mother of all mankind. Allawh, with His absolute power, created her from the left rib of Âdam. Thereafter, He got her married to him and made them stay in heaven. There was a tree in heaven from which they were prohibited to eat. Shaytân deluded her into eating it mistakenly. Upon this, Allawh commanded them to leave heaven and go to the world. When she came to this world, she cried abundantly on account of her mistake. Allawh forgave her and made her stay with Âdam, from whom she had separated prior to this. Thereafter, numerous children were born to them.

Lesson: O women! See how Hawwâ admitted her mistake and repented. Some women try to defend their actions and do not admit their mistakes. There are many other women who continue sinning throughout their lives without even worrying about giving them up - this is more so when it comes to making ghîbah and holding on to baseless customs. O women! Abandon this habit. If you err or commit any sin, give it up immediately and repent.

The mother of Nûh 'alayhis salâm

It is mentioned in the Quran that Nûh had made du'â for his mother as well. It is mentioned in the books of tafsîr that his parents were also Muslims.

Lesson: The benefit of îmân is that the prophets also make du'â for those who have brought îmân. O women! Hold firmly on to your îmân.

Sârah 'alayhas salâm

She is the wife of Ibrâhîm 'alayhis salâm and the mother of Is'hâq 'alayhis salâm. Her speaking to the angels and the angels informing her that she is a source of Allawh's mercy and blessings on all families is mentioned in the Quran.

A story concerning her piety and acceptance of her du'âs has been mentioned in a Hadîth. When Ibrâhîm 'alayhis salâm migrated towards Syria, she also accompanied him. On the way they approached the village of an oppressive king. Someone went and informed him that a very beautiful woman has come to your state. He sent for Ibrâhîm 'alayhis salâm and asked him: "Who is the woman that is accompanying you?" He replied: "My sister in Dîn." He did not say that she is his wife because if he did so, the king would have killed him. When he returned to Sârah, he said to her: "Do not deny what I said (to the king) because you are my sister in Dîn." Thereafter, the king had her captured and brought to him. When she realized that he had evil intentions, she made wudû, offered her salât, and made du'â to Allawh saying: "O Allawh! If I have brought îmân on your prophet (i.e. Ibrâhîm 'alayhis salâm) and have always protected my respect and honour, then do not allow this kâfir to gain control over me." The result of this du'â was that the moment he tried to touch her, he was overpowered (by Allawh), he choked and began striking the ground with his feet (in agony). He said to her: Pray to Allawh for me and I will do you no harm." She thought to herself that if he dies, people will say that she killed him. She therefore made a du'â and he immediately recovered. He tried to touch her again, but she made another du'â (and he was overpowered once again). He repeated his promise, but broke it once more. She therefore made another du'â. In short, this incident took place three times. Eventually he shouted to his servants asking them: "What is this calamity that you have brought to me. Take her away and let her go." Hâjirah 'alayhas salâm who was from the Qibtî tribe was also wrongfully enslaved by him. Allawh had protected her honour as well. He handed her over to Sârah for her service. They both went back to Ibrâhîm 'alayhis salâm with respect and honour.

Lesson: O women! Look what a great thing piety is and how Allawh safeguards such people. We also learn that salât removes calamities and du'âs are accepted. If one experiences any problems and difficulties, one should immediately occupy oneself in optional salâts and du'âs.

Hâjirah 'alayhas salâm

The oppressive king who was mentioned in the above story had enslaved Hâjirah. This king handed her over to Sârah who in turn handed her over to Ibrâhîm 'alayhis salâm. Ismâ'îl 'alayhis salâm was born to her. Ismâ'îl 'alayhis salâm was still being breast-fed when Allawh wished to inhabit Makkah with his progeny. At that time, Makkah was not inhabited nor was the Ka'bah built. Allawh ordered Ibrâhîm 'alayhis salâm to take Ismâ'îl and his mother, Hâjirah, to Makkah and to leave them there. Allawh will safeguard them.

Acting on the order of Allawh, Ibrâhîm took them and left them at that deserted place which is today known as Makkah. He also left behind a water-skin and a bag of dates. When he left them and began departing, Hâjirah rushed behind him and asked him: "Are you leaving us alone and going away?" To this, he did not give any reply. She then asked: "Has Allawh commanded you to do this?" He replied: "Yes." She said: "(If He has commanded) there is nothing to worry about. He will take care of us."

She went back to where she was sitting. She began eating the dates, drinking the water, and breastfeeding Ismâ'îl. When the water was exhausted, she began worrying over her child who began crying and became angry out of thirst. The mother could not bear seeing her child in such a state. She climbed Mt. Safâ and looked all around her in the hope of spotting some water somewhere. However, she could not see any water. She therefore climbed down and went towards the mountain Marwah. In the open field between Safâ and Marwah there was a small stretch of land which was slightly lower. As long as she was on the flat open field, she could see Ismâ'îl. The moment she had to traverse the lower stretch of land, he was out of her range. She therefore ran swiftly across this lower stretch of land and came to the flat open field. Eventually she reached Marwah, climbed it and looked all around her for water. However, she could not spot any water. Out of helplessness she climbed down and ran towards Safâ again. In this way she ran seven times between Safâ and Marwah and whenever she reached the lower stretch of land, she crossed it very swiftly. Allawh liked this action of hers very much and therefore prescribed it for those who go on Hajj. That is, they have to run seven times between these two mountains and also run swiftly once they reach the lower stretch of land. This lower stretch of land has now been flattened.

When she was on Marwah during her last round, she heard a voice. She turned in the direction of the sound and heard it again. However, she could not see anyone. She therefore shouted and said: "I have heard a sound. If anyone can help me, please do so." Immediately thereafter, an angel appeared at the place where the well of zamzam is presently found. The angel struck the ground and water began gushing forth from there. She surrounded the water from all round with sand, filled the water skin, drank some water herself, and gave some to the child as well. The angel then said: "Do not fear anything. The house of Allawh (i.e. the Ka'bah) is here. This child will help his father in constructing this house and many people will come and inhabit this place."

Within a few days, everything came to life. A caravan was passing by. When the people saw the water, they stopped over and settled down over there. Ismâ'îl 'alayhis salâm got married. Acting under the command of Allawh, Ibrâhîm 'alayhis salâm also arrived. The father and son got together and built the Ka'bah. The spring of zamzam had also subsided. After some time, a well was built from which the zamzam water used to be drawn out.

Lesson: Look at the total trust that Hâjirah 'alayhas salâm had in Allawh. When she learnt that her being left behind alone in this deserted place was the order of Allawh, she became assured that nothing will happen to her. Look at all the things with which she was blessed on account of her trust in Allawh.

O women! You should also have trust in Allawh just like this. Inshâ Allawh, all your tasks and wishes will be fulfilled. Look at her great status that she was actually running in search of water but Allawh liked this act of hers to such an extent that He prescribed it as an act of 'ibâdah for those performing the Hajj. His relationship with His accepted servants is of a different level. O women! Try and fulfil the commands of Allawh so that you are also accepted by Him. If you do this, even your worldly matters will be considered to be Dînî.

The second wife of Ismâ'îl 'alayhis salâm

Prior to building the Ka'bah, Ibrâhîm 'alayhis salâm had come to Makkah on two occasions. However, on both occasions he did not find Ismâ'îl 'alayhis salâm at home. Neither was he (Ibrâhîm 'alayhis salâm) commanded to stay over in Makkah for very long (whereby he could have met his son). When he came to Makkah on the first of such occasions, the wife of Ismâ'îl 'alayhis salâm was at home. He asked her how she was managing. She replied: "I am in great difficulty." He replied: "When your husband returns, convey my salâm to him and tell him to change his door-frame." When Ismâ'îl 'alayhis salâm returned home and learnt everything, he replied: "That was my father and the door-frame that he was referring to is actually you. He wants me to leave you." He therefore divorced her and married another woman.

When Ibrâhîm 'alayhis salâm came a second time, he met the second wife of his son. She welcomed him and was very hospitable to him. He also asked her how she was managing. She replied: "Thanks to Allawh, I am experiencing a lot of comfort." He made du'â for her and said to her: "When your husband returns home, convey my salâm to him and tell him to maintain his door-frame." When Ismâ'îl 'alayhis salâm returned home, he was informed of what transpired. He remarked: "That was my father. He asked me to keep you with me."

Lesson: See the consequences of being ungrateful. One prophet became displeased with her, while the other prophet divorced her. The fruit of gratitude and patience was that one prophet made du'â for her and she was blessed with the opportunity of staying in the company of another prophet. O women! Don't ever be ungrateful. You must exercise patience and express gratitude irrespective of the situation in which you are.

The daughter of Namrûd

Namrûd is the oppressive king who threw Ibrâhîm 'alayhis salâm into the fire. His daughter, Ru'dah, was watching the scene from above. She noticed that the fire was having no effect on Ibrâhîm 'alayhis salâm. She shouted and asked him the reason for this. Ibrâhîm 'alayhis salâm replied: "Allawh has saved me from this calamity through the blessing of îmân." She replied: "If you permit me, I will also come into the fire." He replied: "Recite Lâ ilâha illallâhu Ibrâhîm khalîlullâh (translation: There is none worthy of worship except Allawh and Ibrâhîm is the close friend of Allawh). She recited this kalimah and immediately dived into the fire. The fire had no effect on her as well. She then came out of the fire and went and rebuked and censured her father. He subjected her to great difficulties but she remained steadfast on her îmân.

Lesson: Glory be to Allawh! How courageous she was that she did not abandon her îmân even when in difficulty! O women! You should also be strong-willed at the time of difficulties and do not act contrary to the Dîn even if it equals a hair's breadth.

The daughters of Lût 'alayhis salâm

When Allawh sent the angels to Lût 'alayhis salâm informing him that He is going to send a punishment to those who did not accept him (i.e. Lût 'alayhis salâm), He also ordered Lût to leave that place on that very night together with all those who were Muslims. His daughters were also Muslims. They were also saved from that punishment.

Lesson: Look at the blessing of îmân that when Allawh's punishment descends at a place, îmân saves one from that punishment. O women! Strengthen your îmân by following all His commands and abstaining from all sins.

The wife of Ayyûb 'alayhis salâm

Her name is Rahmat. When Ayyûb 'alayhis salâm fell ill and his entire body was engulfed with sickness, everyone stayed aloof from him. No one came near him. However, his wife remained in his service and bore all the difficulties in tending to him. One day, she was delayed in coming to him. Out of anger, Ayyûb 'alayhis salâm took an oath that when he recovers he will give her 100 strikes with a stick. When he recovered, he decided to fulfil his oath. Out of His mercy, Allawh ordered him to take a broom which has 100 bristles and to strike her once. (In this way he will fulfil his oath).

Lesson: See how patient she was that despite her husband's critical condition she remained in his service. From the oath which he took when he was ill we can deduce that his temperament had become a bit sensitive. However, she used to overlook this as well. On account of her service and patience Allawh saved her from those 100 strikes. From this we can deduce that she was very much liked by Allawh in that He lightened this punishment for her.

This mas'ala does not apply any longer. If anyone takes such an oath, by his striking with a broom the oath will not be fulfilled. Instead, the person will have to break this oath and pay compensation (kaffârah). O women! Be obedient to your husbands and endure their sensitive temperaments, you will also be beloved in the sight of Allawh.

Layyâ, the aunt of Yûsuf 'alayhis salâm

It is mentioned in the Quran that when Yûsuf 'alayhis salâm became the king of Egypt and there was a drought, all his brothers came to him asking for food. (At that time they did not know that he was in fact their brother whom they had thrown into the well). He then revealed his true identity to them and gave them his shirt asking them to pass it over their father's, Ya'qûb's 'alayhis salâm, eyes. He also told them to return with everyone. As a result of passing his shirt over his father's eyes, his eyesight returned to him. They then left their country and went to Egypt to meet Yûsuf 'alayhis salâm. When they came to him, Yûsuf 'alayhis salâm seated his father and his aunt onto his royal throne. He did this out of respect for them. It was at that time that the two of them and all his brothers fell into prostration before Yûsuf 'alayhis salâm. In those days, such a prostration in place of salâm was permissible. This is no longer permissible.

As for the Quran mentioning this woman to be his mother - the actual fact is that his mother had passed away and Ya'qûb 'alayhis salâm had married this woman. Other scholars have stated that this incident is in regard to his mother whose name was Râhîl. When they prostrated to him, Yûsuf 'alayhis salâm remarked: "This is the realization of my childhood dream." He had seen a dream wherein the sun, the moon and 11 stars were prostrating to him.

Lesson: How pious this woman must have been for a prophet to pay his respects to her.

The mother of Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm

Her name is Yûkhând. When the priests had informed Pharaoh that a boy will be born from among the Banû Isrâ'îl and will fight against his kingdom, Pharaoh issued an order whereby he instructed that all boys who are born to the tribe of Banû Isrâ'îl should be killed. Thousands of such boys were killed. Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm was born in this volatile situation. Allawh informed his mother by way of inspiration that she should continue breast-feeding him and that when she fears over his life, she should place him in a box and set him afloat in the river. And when We decide, We will send him back to you. Eventually, this is what she did and Allawh also fulfilled all His promises.

Lesson: O women! Look at the high level of trust and conviction that she had in Allawh and how the blessings of this trust manifested themselves.

The sister of Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm

Some scholars have stated that her name is Maryam, while others say that it is Kulthûm. When Mûsâ's 'alayhis salâm mother placed him in the river, she said to her daughter to keep a watch on him to see the outcome of this. The box floated down the river and landed at the palace of Pharaoh. When it was taken out of the river, they saw a beautiful child in it. Pharaoh wanted to kill this child. However, his wife who was a pious woman and who believed in Allawh, saved the child's life. The husband (Pharaoh) and wife decided to adopt the child for themselves. They needed a wet-nurse who would breast-feed Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm. However, he refused to drink the milk of all the wet-nurses who offered their services. Everyone was at a loss as to what could be done. It was at this time that Mûsâ's 'alayhis salâm sister went there and said: "I will show you a wet-nurse who is very good and kind. Her milk is also very good." Eventually, she directed them to Mûsâ's 'alayhis salâm mother. His mother was called, and he was handed over to her. Allawh's promise of returning him to her was thereby fulfilled.

Lesson: Look at how intelligent she was: she found him and risked her life in obedience to her mother without the enemy coming to know about it. O women! Obedience to one's parents, intelligence and prudence are great virtues.

The wife of Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm

Her name is Safûrâ. She is the eldest daughter of Shu'ayb 'alayhis salâm. When a kâfir was unintentionally killed by Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm in Egypt, Pharaoh learnt of this. He therefore informed his ministers that Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm should be killed. When Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm heard about this plan, he escaped secretly to Madyan. When he reached the boundary of this city, he noticed many shepherds drawing water from a well and giving it to their flock to drink. He also noticed two women sitting aloof from all the shepherds. (Later, the elder of the two was his wife and the other was his sister-in-law). Upon seeing this, he asked them the reason for their not being able to give water to their flock. They replied: "We have no male at home. We therefore have to fulfil this task on our own. Because we are women, we are waiting for all these men to go away. Once they all leave, we draw out the water for our flock." He felt sorry for them, drew the water all by himself and gave it to the sheep. When they went home, they related the entire incident to their old father. He sent his elder daughter to go and call this noble person. She came to Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm with full modesty and shyness and informed him that her father is calling him. He accompanied her and went and met Shu'ayb 'alayhis salâm. The latter consoled him and informed him that he wished to give one of his daughters to him in marriage. However, the condition is that he will have to tend to his sheep for eight or ten years. Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm accepted the offer and married the elder sister. After the completion of ten years, he returned home (to Egypt) with her. Because of the cold during the course of their journey, they needed some fire. He spotted a fire on the Mt. Tur so he went towards it. When he reached there, he saw the nûr of Allawh. It was at this place that he received prophethood.

Lesson: Look at how hard she worked in order to fulfil her domestic tasks. And when she had to speak to a stranger, how modestly and nervously she spoke. O women! You should also abstain from seeking comfort and abstain from laziness with regard to domestic tasks and duties. Furthermore, consider modesty and bashfulness to be necessary at all times.

The sister-in-law of Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm

She has been mentioned above. Her name is Safîrâ. She also used to fulfil the domestic tasks with her sister. She used to obey her father and serve him.

Lesson: O women! You should also serve your parents in this way and fulfil all the domestic tasks just as poor people do. Do not consider these tasks to be below your dignity. It is obvious that your status is not higher than that of the prophets' daughters.

Âsiyah

She is the wife of Pharaoh, the king of Egypt who had claimed to be god. Look at the power of Allawh that the husband was a shayṭân while the wife was so pious that the Quran praises her and our Rasûl sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam has spoken about her in the following terms: "There are many men who have reached stages of excellence. However, from among the women, no one reached a stage of excellence except Maryam and Âsiyah. It was Âsiyah who had saved the life of Mûsâ from the tyrant, Pharaoh."

As mentioned in the story of Mûsâ's 'alayhis salâm sister's story, it was already written in her (Âsiyah's) favour that she will bring îmân on Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm. She had a natural love for him since his infancy. When Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm received prophethood, Pharaoh did not bring îmân on him. However, she brought îmân on him. When Pharaoh heard about this, he became extremely harsh to her and imposed many punishments on her. However, she did not relinquish her îmân and left the world in this state.

Lesson: Look at how firm she was on her îmân. Despite her kâfir husband imposing severe difficulties on her, she did not succumb to him. Today, when one experiences minor difficulties, one begins uttering words of kufr. O women! îmân is a very great gift. Irrespective of the nature of difficulty, never ever do anything contrary to the Dîn. If the husband does anything irreligious, don't ever support or join him. In those days, marriage with a kâfir husband was valid. However, the rule in our Sharî'ah is that if the husband is a kâfir, the marriage is not valid. And if he becomes a kâfir after marriage, the marriage will be annulled.

The maid of Pharaoh's daughter

It is mentioned in the book Raudatus Safâ that Pharaoh's daughter had a maid who was under her command and who used to comb her hair, etc. She had believed in Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm. However, she did not expose her îmân out of fear for Pharaoh. Once while she was combing her (Pharaoh's daughter's) hair, the comb fell from her hand. When she bent down to pick it up, she recited Bismillah. The daughter asked her: "What was it that you recited just now? Whose name is that?" She replied: "It is the name of the one who created your father and also gave him a kingdom." She became astonished and remarked: "Is there anyone greater than my father!" Saying this, she ran out to her father and related the entire incident to her. Pharaoh became extremely angry, called for the maid, and threatened her. However, she unhesitatingly said: "Do whatever you wish, I will not leave my îmân." Nails were fastened to her hands and feet and thereafter hot ash and embers were placed on her. When this had no effect on her, a child who was in her lap was taken and thrown into the fire. While the child was in the fire, it said: "Mother! Be patient and don't ever leave your îmân." She remained steadfast on her îmân until she was also thrown into that fire. In Sûrah al-Burûj, mention is made of a trench. In that story a similar incident took place between a mother and her child.

Lesson: Look at how firm she remained on her îmân. O women! îmân is a very great bounty. Do not allow any shortcoming or defect in your îmân and Dîn on account of your desires, any motive or any difficulty. Don't ever do anything contrary to the commands of Allawh and His Rasûl sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam.

An old woman in the army of Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm

When Pharaoh began persecuting the Banû Isrâ'îl in Egypt, compelling them into labour, beating them and oppressing them, Allawh commanded Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm to leave Egypt together with the Banû Isrâ'îl on that very night so that they may be saved from the oppression of Pharaoh. Consequently, Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm left with the Banû Isrâ'îl. When they reached the Nile river, they forgot the road. No one could recognize the road. He became surprised and shouted out: "Whoever is acquainted with this area should please come forward and show us the way." Upon this an old woman came forward and said: "When Yûsuf was about to leave this world, he made a bequest to his brothers and nephews that if at any time you have to leave Egypt, you must carry my coffin, in which my body will be, together with you to wherever you are going. As long as you do not take the coffin, you will not find your way." Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm asked the whereabouts of the coffin. No one knew the place except for that very same old woman. When he asked her, she replied: "I will not show you the place until you guarantee me one thing." He asked: "What is that? She replied: "You must guarantee me that I will die on îmân and that I will be wherever you are in jannah." Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm raised his hands and said: "O Allawh! That which she is asking me for is not in my power." Upon this he was ordered: "You give the guarantee, I will fulfil it." He therefore gave her the guarantee and she showed him the place where the coffin could be found buried in the centre of the river. The moment the coffin was removed, they found the road.

Lesson: Look at how pious this old woman was in that she did not ask for any of the treasures of the world. Instead, she successfully organized the hereafter for herself. O women! You also abandon your lust and desire for this world. You will receive (of this world) whatever has been written for you. Instead, put your Dîn in order.

The sister of Haysûr

In the story of Mûsâ and Khidr 'alayhimas salâm it is mentioned that the latter killed a young boy in fulfilment of Allawh's command. Mûsâ 'alayhis salâm became alarmed and asked: "What did this innocent child do that you had to kill him?" Khidr 'alayhis salâm replied: "When this child would have grown, he would have been a kâfir. His parents were Muslims. There was the possibility of their also going astray out of love for him. It was therefore felt that it would be good if he was killed. In place of this boy, Allawh will give a daughter to these parents who will be pure from all evil and will be of more benefit to her parents." It is written in other books that this is exactly what happened. This girl married a prophet and from her progeny 70 prophets were born. The name of the boy is Haysûr and this girl is his sister.

Lesson: When Allawh praises a woman by saying that she is pure from all evil and of great benefit to her parents, how great such a woman must be! What a beloved and noble feat it is to be pure from all evil and to provide comfort and peace to one's parents! The result of this is that such a person is praised by Allawh. O women! Strive hard in acquiring these qualities.

The mother of Haysûr

Haysûr is the same boy who has been mentioned above. You have also read that the Quran has mentioned his parents as believers. The person whom Allawh refers to as a believer cannot be any ordinary believer who does not have strong îmân. It is obvious that such a person must be very strong in his îmân. We can therefore deduce that Haysûr's mother must have been very pious as well.

Lesson: Look! Having strong îmân is such a great thing that Allawh praised such persons. O women! Strengthen your îmân. This can be only done by following the orders of Allawh and abstaining from sins.

The mother of Sulaymân 'alayhis salâm

It is mentioned in the Quran that when Sulaymân made a du'â to Allawh, he also included the following words: "O Allawh! You have favoured my mother and father." We learn from this that his mother was also a pious woman because the greatest favour is îmân and Dîn.

Lesson: Îmân is such a great thing that it is even mentioned by the prophets in a good way. O women! Give beauty and elegance to your îmân.

Bilqîs

She was the queen of Saba. An animal by the name of Hudhud informed Sulaymân 'alayhis salâm that he came across a queen who worships the sun. Sulaymân 'alayhis salâm wrote a letter and asked Hudhud to hand it over to her. The following was written in the letter: "Accept Islam and come to me." She consulted her ministers and governors and eventually made the following decision: "I will send many rare gifts to him. If he accepts them, I will conclude that he is a worldly king. If he does not accept them, I will conclude that he is a prophet." When these gifts were given to Sulaymân 'alayhis salâm, he returned them and sent a message that if you do not become Muslims, I will come with my army to fight you. When she received this message, she was convinced that he is a prophet. She left her city with the intention of becoming a Muslim.

After she departed, Sulaymân 'alayhis salâm had her valuable royal throne brought to him in a miraculous way. He called for it so that Bilqîs will see the miracle. He removed the pearls and other gems that were on it and had them embedded in another way (different from the way they had been originally embedded). When Bilqîs reached his place, he decided to test her intelligence. He therefore asked her: "Isn't this your throne?" She looked at it carefully and said: "It looks like it. It seems that its appearance has changed slightly." From her answer he deduced that she is very intelligent.

Thereafter, Sulaymân 'alayhis salâm wanted to show her that his kingdom that was given by Allawh is far better than her worldly kingdom. In order to demonstrate this to her, he ordered a pond to be filled with water and that a crystal clear glass be placed on top of it in such a way that it cannot be seen. He then went and sat at such a place that if anyone wished to go to him, that pond will be in the way and he will therefore have to walk through the pond. Bilqîs was then summoned to him. When Bilqîs reached the pond, she did not notice the glass and felt that she will have to walk through the pond. She began lifting her pants (so that it will not get wet when she walks through the pond). Sulaymân 'alayhis salâm immediately informed her that it has been laid with glass and that she should merely walk on it.

When Bilqîs saw the miracle of her throne (being brought here) and this great piece of architecture (i.e. the glass on top of the pond), and that he has royal possessions far better than hers, she immediately recited the kalimah and became a Muslim. Some scholars have written that Sulaymân 'alayhis salâm married her soon thereafter. Others have written that she married the king of Yemen. Allawh knows best.

Lesson: Look at how selfless she was that despite being a queen and very rich, the moment she learnt the truth of Dîn, she immediately accepted it. She did not display any pride in accepting it nor did she hold on to the beliefs and customs of her forefathers. O women! You should also adopt this attitude. When you hear anything of the Dîn, do not consider it to be a blemish or something to be ashamed of. Nor should you hold on to the customs of your family. None of this will help you. Only your Dîn will help you.

A slave-woman from the Banû Isrâ'îl

It is mentioned in a Hadîth that a woman from the Banû Isrâ'îl was breast-feeding her child when a richly adorned caravan passed by. This woman made a du'â: "O Allawh! Make my child (rich) just like this." Upon hearing this, the child left her breast and said: "O Allawh! Do not make me like this." Thereafter the child continued drinking her milk. After a little while a group of people passed by taking a slave-woman with them in a disgraceful and oppressive manner. Upon seeing this spectacle, the mother made the following du'â: "O Allawh! Do not make my child like this." Again the child left her breast and said: "O Allawh! Make me just like this." The mother asked: "What is this you are saying?" He replied: "The person who was at the head of the caravan was a tyrant. The slave-woman was being accused of being a thief and being immoral when in fact she is pure from all these accusations."

Lesson: The meaning of this is that people value the person at the head of the caravan while in Allawh's sight he has no value. This slave-woman has no value in the eyes of the people while in Allawh's sight she has great value. One should therefore try to acquire the value of Allawh irrespective of what people may think. If a person is of no value in Allawh's sight, what benefit is there in acquiring the value and respect of the people? Look! It was the miracle of that slave-woman that a breast-fed child began speaking in order to attest to her purity and chastity. O women! It is the habit of some women to despise and look down upon poor people. On the slightest doubt, they take out faults with them and accuse them of stealing. This is an evil practice. It is possible that such poor people are better than you in the sight of Allawh.

A pious and intelligent woman from the Banû Isrâ'îl

Muhammad bin Ka'b relates that there was a great 'âlim and 'âbid in the Banû Isrâ'îl. He loved his wife very much. Co-incidentally, she passed away. This person was so grieved by this that he locked his door and abstained from meeting and conversing with people. A woman from the Banû Isrâ'îl heard about this so she went to him. She informed those who were guarding the entrance to his house that she wants to ask him a mas'ala and that it can only be asked directly to him. Saying this, she sat down stubbornly by the door. The person was informed of this and eventually permitted her to enter. She said: "I want to ask you a mas'ala." He replied: "Go ahead." She said: "I have a neighbour from whom I borrowed some jewellery. I am wearing it for quite some time now. Thereafter she sent a person asking for her jewellery. The question I want to ask you is that do I have to give it back to her?" The 'âlim replied: "Yes, you have to give it back to her." The woman replied: "That jewellery was with me for a very long time. How can I give it?" The 'âlim replied: "In such a case, you should give it even more happily because it was out of her kindness that she allowed you to use it for such a long time." When he said this, the woman replied: "May Allawh have mercy on you? Why, then, are you so sad? Allawh had loaned you something and when He wished, He took it back. (Because) it belongs to Him." Upon hearing this, the 'âlim realized his mistake and benefited tremendously from this conversation.

Lesson: Look at how this woman put some sense into this man who was a great 'âlim. O women! You should also bear this in mind when you have to encounter any difficulty or calamity. You should also explain this to others.

The mother of Maryam 'alayhas salâm

Her name is Hannah. Her husband's name is 'Imrân who is the father of Maryam. When she fell pregnant, she took a vow that when she gives birth to the child she will keep him free for the service of the musjid. That is, she will not allow him to get involved in any worldly activity. She was under the impression that she will give birth to a boy because only a boy can be of service to the musjid. At that time, vows of this nature were permissible. When the time of delivery of the child came, she gave birth to a girl. Out of sadness she said: "O Allawh! I have given birth to a girl." She was informed that this girl will be better than boys and that Allawh has accepted her. She kept the name of this child Maryam and made a du'â to Allawh that He should protect her and her progeny from shayṭân. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam said that shayṭân torments every child that is born. However, he was unable to torment Maryam and 'Îsâ 'alayhimas salâm.

Lesson: Look at the blessing of her pure intention in that Allawh blessed her with a pious child and accepted her du'â as well. We learn that Allawh favoured her greatly. O women! This is the blessing of pure intentions. Keep your intentions pure all the time. If you do any good act, do it for Allawh alone. In this way, you will also be valued by Allawh.

Maryam 'alayhas salâm

The story of her birth has been mentioned above. After she was born, her mother took her to Baytul Maqdis in fulfilment of her vow. When she reached the musjid, she informed the pious servants over there to take her because she had vowed this child for the musjid. Because she was from a pious family, all the pious persons who were based in the musjid wanted to rear her and bring her up. Zakariyya was also amongst them. He was the uncle of Maryam. He therefore had a greater right of taking care of her. But because all the others were clamouring to take care of her, they all agreed upon a certain system to determine who will take care of her. Eventually, the lot fell in the name of Zakariyya 'alayhis salâm. He took her and began looking after her. She began growing very quickly - much faster than other children of her age and very soon she appeared to be a grown up. From a young age she was very pious. Allawh has referred to her as a walî in the Quran. It has also mentioned that she used to miraculously receive different types of fruit when it was not even the season to receive such fruit. Zakariyya 'alayhis salâm used to ask her: "From where are you receiving all this fruit?" She used to reply: "From Allawh." In short, her entire life was something to marvel about. When she became mature, solely through the power of Allawh, she fell pregnant without any man touching her. It was from this pregnancy that 'Îsâ 'alayhis salâm was born. On seeing that she gave birth without a man, the Jews began accusing her of adultery. In order to prove them wrong, Allawh gave 'Îsâ 'alayhis salâm the power to speak while he was still a baby. He spoke of such great things that all those who possessed a just and open mind agreed that this is an example of Allawh's power; that he was in fact born without a father and that his mother was pure and innocent. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam has mentioned her piety by saying that from among the women, no one reached a stage of excellence except Maryam and Âsiyah. We had quoted this Hadîth in full when mentioning the life of Âsiyah.

Lesson: Her mother had devoted her to Allawh. She became very pious. She remained obedient to Allawh to the extent that she became a walî. The blessing of this was that Allawh saved her from the accusations of people. O women! Continue obeying Allawh and you will be protected from all calamities. Pay more attention to the Dînî affairs of your children and do not make them slaves of this world.

The wife of Zakariyya 'alayhis salâm

Her name is Îshâ'. She is the sister of Hannah and the aunt of Maryam 'alayhas salâm. Referring to her, Allawh says in the Quran: "We made his (Zakariyya's) wife fit for him." Some of the scholars have interpreted this as We have mended and corrected her ways. Yahyâ 'alayhis salâm was born to her while she was in her old age. Based on this, 'Îsâ 'alayhis salâm is the daughter's son of Yahyâ's 'alayhis salâm aunt. The daughter's son is often referred to as a son. It is for this reason that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam has referred to both of them as cousins.

Lesson: Good character is such a great thing that Allawh praised her for it. O women! Reform and mend your ways as we have explained in the previous part of Bahishti Zewar.

Note: The above 25 stories concerned the women of the previous ummahs. We will now mention the lives of the women of this ummah.

Khadîjah radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is the first wife of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. Great feats have been attributed to her. Once Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam informed her that Jibra'îl 'alayhis salâm has conveyed the salâms of Allawh to you. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam also said that the following four women are the best in the world: Maryam, Âsiyah (the wife of Pharaoh), Khadîjah, and Fâtimah.

Whenever Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to encounter any difficulties from the kuffâr, he used to come and inform Khadîjah radiyallâhu 'anhâ. She used to console him in such a way that all his worries used to go away. After her demise he used to think about her so much that when he used to slaughter a sheep, he would also send some of its meat to her friends. Prior to marrying Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam, she had married another person by the name of Abû Hâlah Tamîmî.

Lesson: The high level of value and appreciation that Allawh and His Rasûl sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam had for her was because of her Îmân and her obedience. O women! You should also endeavour in this direction. We also learn from this that it is considered to be a noble characteristic for the wife to console her husband when he is under emotional stress. Some women completely change the temperament of their husbands by putting them under great emotional stress. They do this by making demands on them or by nagging them all the time. Give up this habit.

Saudah radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is also the wife of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. She had given her day which he used to spend with her to 'Â'ishah. 'Â'ishah says: "I never desired to be like any woman except Saudah. Whenever I used to see her, I desired to be like her." The name of her first husband was Sukrân bin 'Amr.

Lesson: Look at her magnanimity that she gave her turn to her co-wife. These days, a woman unnecessarily fights with the co-wife and is jealous of her. Look at the justice of 'Â'ishah that she praises her co-wife. Today, they intentionally look for faults in the co-wife. O women! You should also adopt magnanimity and justice of this nature.

'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is a very beloved wife of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. He married her while she was still a virgin. She was so learned that great Sahâbah used to ask her questions. Once a Sahâbi asked Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam: "Whom do you like the most?" He replied: "'Â'ishah." This Sahâbi then asked: "And from among the men?" He replied: "Her father." That is, 'Abû Bakr radiyallâhu 'anhu. Many other virtues have been mentioned in her favour.

Lesson: Look at her: despite her being a woman, great 'ulamâ used to refer to her when they wanted to know any mas'ala. Today, let alone not having any knowledge, women do not even have the desire to ask the 'ulamâ any questions nor do they have the desire to read any Islamic books. O women! Acquire knowledge of the Dîn with full endeavour and zeal.

Hafsah radiyallâhu 'anhâ

She is the wife of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and the daughter of 'Umar radiyallâhu 'anhu. On one occasion, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam had issued one divorce to her. Thereafter, upon the instruction of Jibra'îl he revoked this divorce. Jibra'îl had spoken in her favour in the following way: "You should revoke the divorce which you issued to her because she fasts abundantly, engages in a lot of 'ibâdah at night, and she will be your wife in jannah." She had made a bequest to her brother 'Abdullâh bin 'Umar to give a certain amount of her wealth in charity. She had also made a plot of land waqf for Allawh Ta'âlâ. She had also made a bequest in this regard. Her first husband's name was Khunays bin Hudhâfah.

Lesson: Look at the barakah of piety that Allawh Ta'âlâ defended her and sent Jibra'îl to speak on her behalf in order to have her divorce revoked. Look at her generosity - how she made arrangements for charity in the name of Allawh and also made a plot of land waqf for Allawh Ta'âlâ. O women! Adopt piety and remove love and greed for wealth from the heart.

BOOK XVL

THE LIFE OF RAWSOOLULLAWH (S)

Rasûlullâh's sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam blessed name is Muhammad. His father's name is 'Abdullâh, who is the son of 'Abdul Muttalib, who is the son of Hâshim, who is the son of 'Abd Manâf. His mother's name is Âminah, who is the daughter of Wahb, who is the son of 'Abd Manâf, who is the son of Zuhrah. This 'Abd Manâf is not the same as the previous one.

He was born on a Monday in the month of Rabî' al-Awwal in the same year that a kâfir king invaded Makkah on an elephant and tried to destroy the Ka'bah. When he was five years and two days old, his foster mother handed him over to his actual mother. When he was six years old, his mother took him to the tribe of his grandfather, the Banû Najjâr. She remained there for one month with him. On their return, his mother passed away at a place called Abwâ'. A woman by the name of Umme Ayman was also with them. She took him to Makkah. His father had passed away when his mother was still expecting him. His grandfather, 'Abdul Muttalib, therefore took the responsibility of rearing him. On the death of his grandfather, his uncle, Abû Tâlib, took over this responsibility.

His uncle took him to Syria for business. On the way to Syria, a Christian scholar and mystic by the name of Buhayrah saw him and informed his uncle that he should protect him because he is a prophet. His uncle therefore took him back to Makkah. Later he went again to Syria with the goods of Khadîjah radiyallâhu

'anhâ. On the way, a Christian scholar and mystic by the name of Nasturah testified to his being a prophet. When he returned from Syria, Khadîjah radiyallâhu 'anhâ married him. He was 25 years old at the time while she was 40 years old.

When he was 40 years of age, he received prophethood. When he was 52 or 53 years of age, he experienced the mi'râj. After receiving prophethood, he remained in Makkah for approximately 13 years. When the oppression of the kuffâr of Makkah increased, he migrated to Madînah under the orders of Allawh. Within two years of reaching Madînah, the decisive battle of Badr took place. Several battles took place thereafter. All the major and minor battles total 35.

He had married 11 women, out of which two had passed away in his very lifetime. They are, Khadîjah and Zaynab bint Khuzaymah radiyallâhu 'anhumâ. When he passed away, he left behind 9 wives. They are: Saudah, 'Â'ishah, Hafsah, Umme Salamah, Zaynab bint Jahsh, Umme Habîbah, Juwayriyah, Maymûnah, and Safiyyah radiyallâhu 'anhunna.

He had four daughters, the eldest of whom was Zaynab radiyallâhu 'anhâ. After her was Ruqayyah radiyallâhu 'anhâ, thereafter Umme Kulthûm radiyallâhu 'anhâ, and the youngest was Fâtimah radiyallâhu 'anhâ. All these daughters were from Khadîjah radiyallâhu 'anhâ. He had three, four or five sons (there is no certainty in the number due to a difference in the narrations). They are: Qâsim, 'Abdullâh, Tayyib and Tâhir. All these sons were from Khadîjah radiyallâhu 'anhâ. There was one more son by the name of Ibrâhîm who was begotten by Mâriyah. She was the slave-girl of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam. This last son passed away when he had not been weaned as yet. In this way we get five. Some of the scholars say that the name of 'Abdullâh is also Tayyib. In this way we get four. Other scholars say that Tayyib and Tâhir are also names of 'Abdullâh. In this way we get three. 'Abdullâh was born after prophethood and passed away in Makkah. The other sons passed away before prophethood.

Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam remained in Madînah for 10 years. He fell ill on a Wednesday, two days before the end of the month of Safar and passed away on a Monday on the 12th of Rabî' al-Awwal at the time of châsht, at the age of 63. He was buried on Tuesday afternoon. According to some historians, he was buried on Tuesday night. The reason for this delay is that on account of the sorrow and sadness of the Sahâbah, they were unable to function properly.

From the daughters of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam, Zaynab radiyallâhu 'anhâ had a son by the name of 'Alî and a daughter by the name of Umâmah. However, the progeny of both did not continue. Ruqayyah radiyallâhu 'anhâ had a son by the name of 'Abdullâh but he passed away at the age of six. Umme Kulthûm did not have any children. Fâtimah radiyallâhu 'anhâ had two sons by the name of Hasan and Husayn radiyallâhu 'anhumâ. Their progeny spread far and wide.

The character and habits of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam

1. He was extremely generous. He never said no to anyone who asked him for anything. If he had anything to give, he would give it. If he did not have, he would inform the person in a kind manner that he does not have anything at present and that he would give him something later.
2. He was very honest in his speech.
3. He had a very soft temperament.
4. He liked ease in all matters (i.e. he abstained from causing difficulties and complications).
5. He used to have great concern for those who were in his company in that none of them should experience any difficulty on account of him. So much so that if he had to go out of the house at night, he would wear his sandals very silently, open the door very quietly and walk silently. When he came home and found everyone sleeping, he would carry out all his tasks silently so that no one's sleep is disturbed.
6. When he used to walk, he used to lower his gaze. When walking with many people, he used to walk in their midst (and not ahead of them). If anyone approached him, he was the first to greet.
7. He used to sit with great humility.
8. When sitting down to eat, he used to sit like a poor person. He never ate to a full stomach. He never ate bread made with fine flour. He never ate in elaborate or fancy plates.
9. He used to remain sorrowful out of the fear of Allawh. He used to occupy himself in this all the time. Due to this, he was never at ease.
10. He used to remain silent most of the time. He did not speak unnecessarily. When he spoke, he spoke very clearly so that the person addressed will understand everything that is said to him. His speech was not too lengthy to the extent that it is beyond necessity. At the same time, it was not so short that it is not understood. There was no harshness in his speech nor in his manner.
11. He did not dishonour or disgrace anyone who came to meet him.
12. He did not interrupt the speech of anyone. However, if anyone spoke anything that was contrary to the Sharî'ah, he used to either stop the person from doing so or he himself used to get up and leave that place.
13. He used to greatly value the bounty of Allawh irrespective of how small or insignificant it may be. He never used to find fault with it by saying that it does not taste good or that it has a foul smell, etc. However, if his heart was not inclined to anything, he did not eat it. At the same time he did not speak good of it nor complained about it.
14. He never used to become angry over any worldly matter, e.g. someone causing a loss or ruining a certain task. Anas radiyallâhu 'anhu says: "I remained in the service of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam for ten years. During this entire period, if I did anything, he never asked me the reason for doing it. If I did not carry out a particular task, he never asked me the reason for not doing it." However, if anyone did anything contrary to the Dîn, nothing could subdue his anger. He did not become angry in his personal affairs.
15. If he was displeased with anyone, he used to merely turn his face away from the person. In other words, he did not utter anything harsh or unpleasant. If he was pleased, he used to lower his gaze.
16. He was more bashful and modest than a virgin woman. If there was something to laugh about, he merely smiled, i.e. without emitting any sound.
17. He used to have a good relationship with everyone. He did not consider himself to be great and thereby withdraw from others. Instead, at times he used to joke in order to make the person happy. However, even his jokes were true.
18. He used to offer optional salâts to such an extent that his feet used to get swollen.
19. When he used to recite or listen to the Quran, he used to cry out of fear and love for Allawh.
20. He was so humble that he ordered the ummah not to raise his status too much. If any poor woman labourer informed him that she wished to speak to him in privacy, he used to reply: "Okay, let's sit down on the road and speak." He used to sit at the same place where the woman used to sit.
21. If anyone fell ill, he used to visit him irrespective of whether the person was rich or poor. He used to attend the funeral of anyone who passed away.
22. If anyone invited him for a meal, he used to accept it irrespective of who the person was. Even if anyone invited him to a meal of barley bread or distasteful fat, he did not offer any excuse in order to refrain from attending.
23. He did not utter anything useless.
24. He used to make everyone happy. He abstained from conducting himself in such a manner whereby the person becomes distressed.
25. He used to save himself from the taunts and provocations of the wrong doers in a good manner. At the same time, he used to meet them in a cheerful way.
26. If anyone from among those who used to visit him regularly failed to come on a certain day, he used to enquire about the person.
27. He used to execute his tasks in a scheduled manner. It did not happen that he did a particular task in a certain way on one day and changed the method on another day.
28. He used to stand up with the remembrance of Allawh and sit down with the remembrance of Allawh.
29. When he attended any gathering, he used to sit at the place where the gathering ended. He did not jump over all those who were seated and take the main seat for himself.

30. When he was addressing several persons, he used to look at each one of them individually. He did not focus his attention on one person to the exclusion of others.
31. He used to conduct himself with everyone in such a way that each person used to believe that he likes him the most. When anyone came and sat near him or began to speak, he remained silent. He only used to get up after the person gets up.
32. His manners were general with everyone.
33. When he used to go home in order to rest, he used to sit by leaning against a pillow.
34. He used to execute many of the domestic tasks with his own hands. At times he used to milk the goat, while on other occasions he used to clean his clothes. He used to do most of his work on his own.
35. Irrespective of how great a person may be, he used to meet him with kindness and never disheartened him.
In short, he was the best in character.
36. If anyone did anything unpleasant, he did not reproach him directly. He was not strict by nature nor did he adopt a strict expression as is the habit of some people who adopt an angry facial expression in order to frighten or warn someone and who also speak in an angry tone. Nor was it his habit to speak in a shouting manner.
37. If anyone caused him harm, he did not cause the person any harm in return. Instead, he used to forgive the person.
38. He never ever hit any slave, servant or woman. In fact, he did not even hit any animal. All this excludes punishing anyone in order to fulfil the command of the Sharî'ah.
39. If anyone wronged him, he did not take revenge.

The noble characteristics and habits of Rasûlullâh (sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam)

1. Barrâ' bin 'Âzib narrates that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam was the most handsome person and had the most pleasant manners. He was neither too tall nor too short.
2. 'Ismâ'îl bin 'Ayyâsh narrates that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam was the most patient over the harms by others that were inflicted on him.
3. In a lengthy Hadîth narrated by Hind bin Abî Hâlah the following is also mentioned: when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to walk, he used to lift his foot with force and when he used to place it on the ground, he used to place it in such a manner that he had to lean forward when doing so. He used to walk with great humility as if he was descending from an elevated place. When he had to turn and look at anyone or anything, he used to turn completely and look. He used to lower his gaze more towards the ground than raising it towards the heavens. He used to walk behind the Sahâbah (and not ahead of them). Generally, it was his habit to look at a person with a side glance. When anyone came to meet him, he was the first to greet.
4. Jâbir radiyallâhu 'anhu says that the pace of his speech was slow. In other words, he used to pause in his speech so that those who are addressed will understand everything thoroughly. However, he did not pause to such an extent that the addressee becomes bored. It is mentioned in a Hadith that he used to repeat whatever he said three times. In short, he used to speak in an excellent manner. He used to speak according to what the circumstances demanded. Some people are intelligent and able to grasp everything very quickly. In such a case it is not appropriate to repeat anything. Others take longer to understand and it is therefore appropriate to repeat something several times. Where there are all types of people, it would be appropriate to repeat the speech three times. This is because those who are quick to grasp something will understand it the first time. Those who possess an average intellect will grasp it the second time, while those who are intellectually weak will understand it the third time. If a situation arises where there is a need to repeat it more than three times, then good character demands that one should not abstain from doing so. Understand this well.
The fact is that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam was given the highest stage of good character and abiding by the rules. No one was granted this gift prior to him nor will anyone be granted it in the future. Despite being bound by administrative regulations, displaying good character is a great virtue. It was the blessed habit of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam of following the rules in the things which he executed himself. As for those who were neglectful in this regard, he did not rebuke them. However, he used to advise them in a good and soft manner solely for the purpose of reforming them. This is what the followers of the sunnah have to adopt. They should follow the administrative rules and regulations together with good character. At the same time, they should also urge others to do the same. However, they should not criticise the shortcomings of others merely to satisfy their nafs or out of anger. If their object is pure reformation and there is a need to display strictness, this will also be good. Understand this well.
5. 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ narrates that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to pause in his speech. Whoever listened to him speak, understood whatever was said.
6. 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ narrates that from among all evil habits, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam abhorred lying the most.
7. Anas radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that from all the different types of clothing, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam liked a Yamani shawl the most. It was of several colours.
Ibn Raslân says that the wisdom behind his preference for this cloth was that it is not a cloth of beautification (i.e. it is very simple) and at the same time it does not get dirty quickly. Glory be to Allawh! What a great status he had! He used to consider himself to be a traveller in this world. He was not attracted to its beauty nor did he pay any attention to its treasures. O Muslims! You should also adopt this way of life. According to your needs, wear clothes that cover your aurah, which are simple, and which do not become dirty quickly. This is so that their beauty does not prevent you from turning towards Allawh and you do not have to clean them very often as this takes up a lot of time. In certain narrations, he has also praised white clothing.
8. 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ narrates that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to like the 'ibâdah which could be fulfilled all the time. In other words, nafl salâts and other forms of 'ibâdah should be offered in such a way that one can continue with them. It should not be such that on one day a person does everything and the following day he does nothing. A little 'ibâdah which can be fulfilled regularly is better than excessive 'ibdah which is carried out occasionally, as mentioned in a Hadîth.
9. Mujâhid narrates that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to prefer the front portion of the sheep's meat.
10. 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ narrates that from among all the different drinks, he used to like cold and sweet water the most. Ibn 'Abbâs radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that he used to like milk a lot.
11. 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ narrates that he used to like honey water a lot.
12. Ibn 'Abbâs radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that from among all the curries, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to like vinegar the most.
13. Anas radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to perspire a lot. It is mentioned that Umme Sulaym radiyallâhu 'anhâ used to collect his perspiration and mix it with other perfumes because it used to be very fragrant.
14. Jâbir radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that Rasûlullâh's sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam beard had a lot of hair.
15. 'Â'ishah and Abû Hurayrah radiyallâhu 'anhuma narrate that from all the fruit, he used to like fresh dates and musk-melons the most.
16. Ibn 'Abbâs radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that he used to prefer shoulder-meat over all other parts.
17. Abû Wâqid narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to lead the people in prayer, he used to shorten his salât but when he offered his salât on his own, he used to lengthen it considerably. He shortened his salât for the people so that no one is inconvenienced. He lengthened his own salât because it was the coolness of his eyes. He used to experience peace and tranquillity whenever he offered his salât. What can be more peaceful than standing with humility in front of one's true beloved and seeking refuge in Him? The extent of his shortening and lengthening his salâts has been mentioned in detail in other Ahâdîth.
18. 'Abdullâh bin Bishr narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam went to anyone's house, he did not stand in front of the door. Instead, he used to stand on the right-hand side or on the left-hand side and then say "As salâmu 'alaykum". This is the sunnah method. When you go anywhere, do not stand directly in front of the door. Stand either to the right or the left of the door. In standing this way, there is no fear of seeing anyone being without purdah. However, if the door is closed, there is no harm in standing in front of it. One should inform the house folk of one's arrival by saying "As salâmu 'alaykum". If they do not hear you the first time, repeat it. Understand this well.

19. 'Ikramah radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that it was the habit of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam that when anyone came to him and he perceived happiness on the person's face, he used to take the person's hand into his hand. The purpose of this was that the person must become familiar with him.

20. Ghunbah narrates that when a person came to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and he had a name which he (Rasûlullâh) did not like, then he used to change it for him.

21. Imâm Ahmad and others narrate that when anyone used to bring his zakât to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam (for distribution), he used to say: "O Allawh! Have mercy on such-and-such person." We should also adopt this practice that when anyone gives us their zakât for distribution or gives us any donation for a particular cause, we should also make this du'â for the person.

22. 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to experience any happiness, he used to say:

!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

When anything displeased him, he used to say:

!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

23. Ibn Mas'ûd radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that when any slave men or women came into the share of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam (as booty), he used to divide them among his house folk so that there is no dispute among them. In other words, if some of them receive while others do not receive anything, there is a possibility of unpleasantness among them. We should also adopt this practice that when we have to distribute anything, we should not do it in a way which would cause any unpleasantness or disturbance among the people. This is irrespective of whether one is distributing among one's relatives, immediate family, students or disciples.

24. 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ narrates that when any food was brought to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam and there were others with him, he used to eat that which was in front of him. And when dry dates were brought to him, he used to eat from all sides.

25. Anas radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that when the first fruit of the season used to be brought to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam, he used to touch it with both his eyes, touch it with his lips and then make the following du'â:

!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Thereafter he used to give it to the children who were with him at the time.

26. Sâlim bin 'Abdullâh bin 'Umar and Qâsim bin Muhammad narrate that when the utensil containing fragrant oil, etc. was brought to Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam, he used to dip his fingers in that oil and apply it with his fingers wherever he desired.

27. Hafsah radiyallâhu 'anhâ narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to lie down in order to sleep, he used to place his right-hand under his right cheek.

28. 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam intended applying oil (to his head), he used to place it in his left hand and commence with his eyebrows. Thereafter, he used to apply some to his eyes and thereafter to his head. It is related in another Hadîth that when he intended applying oil to his beard, he used to apply to his eyes first and thereafter to his beard.

29. Anas and Jâbir radiyallâhu 'anhumâ narrate that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to relieve himself, he did not lift his clothes until he was as close as possible to the ground. He did this so that his 'aurah would not be unnecessarily exposed. One reveals one's 'aurah at the time of sitting down to relieve oneself. Therefore there is no need to reveal one's 'aurah before-hand. It is for this reason that he used to reveal his 'aurah at the exact time of need.

30. 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam was in a state of janâbah and intended to sleep (without having made ghusl), he used to make wudû first (and then sleep). If he intended eating or drinking something, he used to merely wash his hands. When a woman completes her hayd or nifâs, it will also be preferable for her to do the same.

31. 'Abdullâh bin Yazîd narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to bid farewell to the army, he used to make the following du'â:

!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

It would be appropriate to make this du'â when bidding farewell to anyone. This is actually a du'â for the person's success in this world and in the hereafter.

32. Anas radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam intended wearing a new garment, he used to wear it on a Friday.

33. 'Abdullâh bin Ka'b radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam completed using the miswâk, he used to give it to an elderly person. And when he used to drink water or anything else, he used to give the left over to the person who was on his right-hand side. He used to do this on account of generosity and in order that it may be a source of barakah for these persons.

34. 'Uthmân bin Abî al-'Âs narrates that when the northerly wind used to blow, Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to make the following du'â:

The reason for making this du'â is that at times such a wind is sent as a punishment for a certain nation. The translation of this du'â is: "O Allawh! I seek refuge in you from the evil that You have sent in this wind."

35. 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ narrates that whenever Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam was informed that a certain member of his family has spoken a lie even once, he used to remain displeased with the person until he repented. Once the person repented, he used to become pleased with him again. The reason for this is that speaking lies is a major sin in Islam and it is necessary to hate a sinner. Therefore, he used to turn away from such a person. This was his attitude to all sinners.

36. Abû Hurayrah radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to be distressed, he used to hold his beard in his hand and look at it.

37. 'Â'ishah and Abû Hurayrah radiyallâhu 'anhumâ narrate that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to be distressed, he used grasp his beard in his hand.

38. 'Uqbah bin 'Âmir radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to apply surmah to his eyes an odd number of times. In another narration it is mentioned that he used to apply it three times in each eye.

39. Anas radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to complete eating, he used to lick his three fingers. He used to do this so that the sustenance of Allawh does not go to waste.

42. Sakhar bin Wadâ'ah narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam intended despatching an army, he used to send it out early in the morning. This is because such a time is a blessed time. There is a greater possibility of one accomplishing whatever task one has departed for.

43. 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ narrates that it was the habit of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam that when he learnt of any evil practice of a particular person, he would not announce openly by saying: "What is wrong with a certain person that he is doing so-and-so thing and saying so-and-so thing." Instead, he used to say: "What is wrong with the people that they are doing so-and-so thing." Glory be to Allawh! What beautiful character he possessed and what type of scolding this was that he used to advise in such a way that he used to fulfil his objective, and the person concerned would not feel disgraced nor remorseful. Instead, he will value the advice and practice on it.

44. Abû Sa'îd Khudrî radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam ate in the morning, he did not eat in the evening. And when he ate in the evening, he did not eat in the morning. What this means is that he used to have only one meal in the day - either in the morning or in the evening.
45. 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to make wudû, he used to offer two raka'ât of nafl salât if it was not a makrûh time. He would then go to the musjid for the fard salât.
46. Ibn 'Abbâs radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that it was the habit of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam that when winter used to start, he used to commence sleeping inside his house on a Thursday night. !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

51. Hudhayfah radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam encountered any difficulty, he used to offer two raka'ât of nafl salât. 52. Sa'îd bin Hakîm narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam learnt of anything beautiful and he feared that his gaze will fall as "an evil eye", he used to make the following du'â:
!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
Only good can emanate from his gaze and no harm can befall the person who falls under his gaze. Despite this, he did this in order to teach the 'ummah that this is what it should do.
53. Mujâhid narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to propose to any woman and she refused, he did not mention it again. In other words, he did not insist. If she accepted his proposal, he would get married to her. If not, he did not disgrace himself by insisting or forcing someone. Once he proposed to a woman but she refused. Later, this woman came to him on her own accord and expressed her wish to marry him. He replied that he has already married another woman and that he does not need to marry at present.
54. 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to be alone with his wives, he used to portray a very soft and endearing nature, and speak to them in a good, joking manner.

61. Ibn Mubârak and Ibn Sa'd narrate that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to attend a janâzah, he used to remain extremely silent and speak about death in his heart.
Since a janâzah is a place from which one can draw a lesson, one should think about one's own death, about the loneliness in the grave, and fear the punishment after death.
62. Abû Hurayrah radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to sneeze, he used to cover his face with his hand or a cloth and stifle the sneeze.

In other words, it is the time for Munkar and Nakîr to question him. Therefore make du'â for him that he remains steadfast and is able to answer the questions correctly so that he does not experience any difficulty.
66. Abû Hurayrah radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to wear his kurta, he used to commence wearing it from the right-hand side. In other words, he used to insert his hand in the right sleeve first.

Anas radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that it was the blessed habit of Rasûlullâh *sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam*that when any of his Sahâbah met him (on the road), he would stop (walking) and the Sahâbî also used to stop. Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam would not leave as long as the Sahâbî did not leave. When any of his Sahâbah met him and wished to shake his hand, he would offer his hand to the Sahâbî and would not leave it as long as the Sahâbî did not leave it. Ibn Mubârak has added that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam would not turn his face away from the Sahâbî as long as the latter did not turn away. When any Sahâbî met him and wished to whisper something into his ear, he would lend an ear to the person and would not withdraw it until the person completed what he had to say and withdrew himself from Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam.

70. Ibn as-Sinnî narrates from the slave of an Ansârî that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam wished to call a certain person and did not know the latter's name, he would address him as O 'Abdullâh! (i.e. O servant of Allawh!)

In other words, the cloth that he used to sleep on was similar to the cloth that was used as a kafan. It was not expensive and extravagant. His musjid was in the direction of his head. In other words, it used to be till half his calves - as mentioned in other Ahâdîth. The sleeves of his kurtah used to be in line with his fingers. It is narrated in another narration that the length of the sleeves was till his wrists.
75. 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ narrates that the pillow of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam was made of leather and filled with the bark of the date tree.
76. Nu'mân bin Bashîr radiyallâhu 'anhu says that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam did not even have ordinary dry dates with which he could fill his stomach. All the treasures of the world were at his feet but he adopted abstinence. He regarded the comforts of this world as insignificant and meaningless and chose poverty of this type. He used to spend a major portion of whatever income he had in charity.
Dry dates are considered to be a very basic and ordinary diet of the Arabs because they grow profusely over there.
77. Anas radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam did not store anything (for himself) for the next day.
78. Ibn 'Abbâs radiyallâhu 'anhu narrates that when Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam used to walk, he did not move the people out of his way nor did he strike them.
It is the habit of proud people and rulers to have special servants who move the people out and scold them in order to clear the way ahead of them.
79. 'Â'ishah radiyallâhu 'anhâ narrates that Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam did not complete the recitation of the Quran in under three days.
80. Muhammad bin al-Hanafiyyah narrates that it was the habit of Rasûlullâh sallallâhu 'alayhi wa sallam of not stopping anyone from doing anything. However, if he was asked and he felt that it should be completed (or continued with), he would reply in the affirmative. If he felt that it should not be carried out, he would remain silent.

CHAPTER XVLI

4 TRUE STORIES

First Story

Rasulullah sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam is reported to have said: "A person was in a jungle when all of a sudden he heard a voice in a cloud saying: "Go and water the orchard of so and so person." On hearing that voice, the cloud moved and poured heavily on a stony place. All the water collected in a drain and began to flow. This person began following the water and saw that a man was standing in his orchard and was sprinkling water with a spade. This person asked the gardener: "O servant of Allawh! What is your name?" He gave the same name which this person had heard in the cloud. Thereafter, the gardener asked this person: "O servant of Allawh! Why are you asking me my name?" He replied: "I heard a voice in that cloud whose water this is taking your name and asking it to pour water onto your orchard. What do you do in it that it is so acceptable?" He replied: "Now that you have asked, I will have to inform you. I look at its total produce and from there I give one third to charity. Another third I keep for myself and my family, and the last third I re-invest into this orchard."

Lesson: Glory be to Allawh! How merciful He is that the person who obeys Him has all his work done through unseen ways without him even knowing about it. Without doubt, the person who becomes Allawh's, Allawh becomes his.

Second Story

Once Rasulullah sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam related that there were three men from the Banu Isra'eel. One of them was a leper, the other bald, and the third blind. Allawh Ta'ala wanted to test them, so He sent an angel to them. The angel first went to the leper and asked him: "What would you like best?" He replied: "I would like a nice complexion, a beautiful skin, and that this sickness goes away from me whereby people do not allow me to sit with them and which they hate." The angel passed his hand over the body of that person. He was immediately cured and a nice skin and beautiful complexion appeared. The angel then asked him: "What type of wealth do you like the most?" He replied: "Camels." So he gave him a pregnant camel and told him: "May Allawh Ta'ala give you barakah in this."

The angel then went to the bald person and asked him: "What would you like best?" He replied: "That my hair grows nicely and that this sickness which people dislike goes away from me!" The angel passed his hand over his head, he was immediately cured and beautiful hair began to grow. He then asked him: "What type of wealth do you like the most?" He replied: "Cows." So he gave him a pregnant cow and told him: "May Allawh Ta'ala give you barakah in this."

Eventually, the angel went to the blind person and asked him: "What would you like most?" He replied: "That Allawh gives me back my sight so that I may be able to see everyone." The angel passed his hand over his eyes and Allawh gave him back his sight. He then asked him: "What type of wealth do you like the most?" He replied: "Goats." So he was given a pregnant goat. The animals of all three delivered their babies. In a short time, the jungle was filled with his camels, his cows, and his goats.

Thereafter, under the orders of Allawh Ta'ala, that angel went in his previous form to the leper and said to him: "I am a poor person. All my provisions for my journey are finished. Today I have no means of reaching home except through Allawh and then through your help. In the name of that Allawh who has blessed you with a nice skin and a beautiful complexion, I ask you for a camel which I could ride and reach my home." He replied: "Get far away from here! I have a lot of other commitments to fulfil. I do not have anything to spare which I could give you." The angel said: "I think I recognize you. Were you not a leper, for which people despised you? Were you not very poor, and then Allawh blessed you with so much of wealth?" He replied: "What are you talking? I inherited this wealth from my ancestors." The angel said: "If you are lying, may Allawh return you as you were before."

The angel then went to the bald person in his previous form and asked him the same questions and he also replied in the same way. So the angel said to him: "If you are lying, may Allawh return you as you were before."

Eventually he went to the blind person in that same original form and said to him: "I am a traveller and all my provisions are finished. Today I have no means except Allawh and then you. In the name of that Being who returned to you your eye-sight, I ask you for a goat with which I could do my work and complete my journey." He replied: "Without doubt, I was blind. It was only out of His mercy that Allawh Ta'ala gave me back my eye-sight. Take as much as you want and leave behind as much as you want. By Allawh, I will not stop you from taking anything." The angel replied: "Keep your wealth with you, I do not want anything. I had only come to test you three. Now the test is over. Allawh is pleased with you and displeased with the other two."

Lesson: Just imagine, that because of the ungratefulness of those two, all those bounties were taken away and they were left as they were before. Allawh became displeased with them and they are forsaken both in this world and in the hereafter. Due to his gratefulness, that person's bounties remained intact, Allawh was pleased with him, and he is contented both in this world and in the hereafter.

Third Story

Once some meat from somewhere came to Hadrat Umme Salamah radiAllawhu anha. Rasulullah sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam liked meat a lot. She therefore asked her maid to keep the meat on the shelf. Rasulullah sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam will perhaps come and partake of it. So she kept it on the shelf. Just then a beggar came, and while standing at the doorway, shouted: " Give in the name of Allawh, He will give you barakah!" A reply from the house came: "May Allawh also give you blessings!" These words are used to show that there is nothing in the house which could be given. That beggar went away. Just then Rasulullah sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam arrived and asked: "O Umme Salamah! Do you have anything to eat?" She replied: "Yes" and said to the maid: "Go and get that meat." She goes to bring the meat, but there's no sign of that meat over there. Only a piece of white stone was kept there. Upon this Rasulullah sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam remarked that because she did not give it to the beggar, that piece of meat turned into a stone.

Lesson: Just think, that due to not giving in the name of Allawh, this misfortune occurred that the form of the meat changed and turned into a stone. In the same way, the person who deceives the beggar and yet eats himself, is actually eating a stone. The result of this is that mercilessness and hard-heartedness increases. Since Allawh Ta'ala has a lot of kindness and mercy on the family of Rasulullah sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam, He changed the form of the meat in front of their very eyes so that they may be saved from partaking of it.

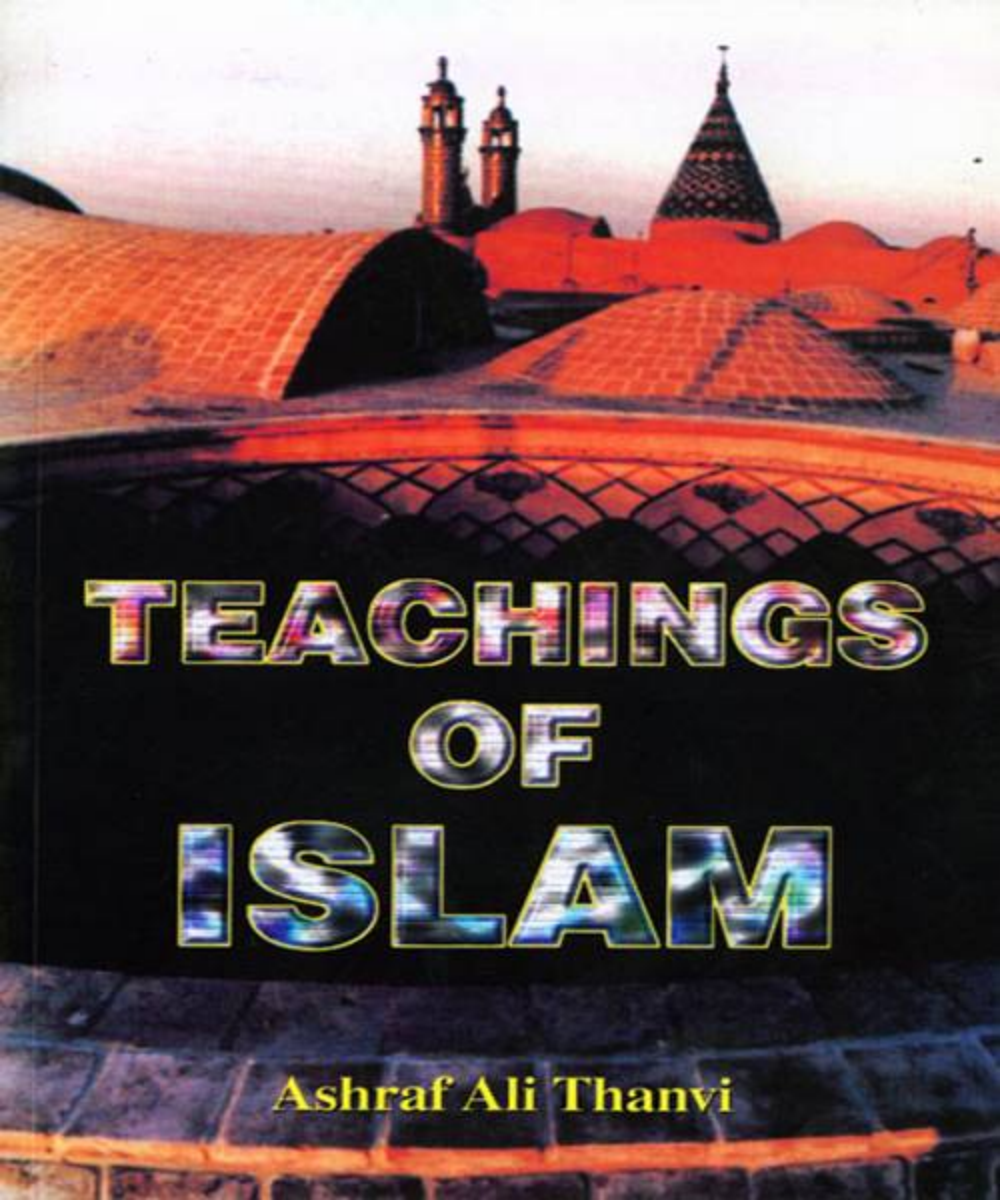
Fourth Story

It was the noble habit of Rasulullah sallAllawhu alayhi wa sallam that after the Fajr salaat he used to turn and face his companions and ask them: "Did anyone of you see any dream last night?" If anyone saw a dream, he would relate it to him and he would give some interpretation to it. As was his habit, he once asked them if any one of them had seen any dream. They all said that they had not seen any dream. He then said: "I saw a dream last night that two people came to me, took hold of my hand and led me towards a sacred place. I saw a man sitting and another standing with pincers in his hand. He was tearing open the sitting man's cheek until it reached his neck. He then did the same with the other cheek. In the meantime, the first cheek came back to its normal position, so he did the same to it again. I asked the angels: "What is this?" They replied: "Carry on further."

We continued further until we passed by a person who was lying down and another person was standing at his head-side with a heavy boulder in his hand. He took the boulder and, with full force, he burst his head. Once the boulder struck him, it fell and rolled away to a far distance. When he went to pick up that boulder and by the time that he returned, this person's head became normal again. So he burst it again. I asked them: "What is this?" They replied: "Carry on further."

We carried on further until we reached a cave which was like an oven. It was very wide at the bottom and very narrow on top. A fire was burning in it and it was filled with many naked men and women. When the flames rose, all of them rose with it until they were about to fall out. When the flames subsided, they all also went down with it. I asked them: "What is this?" They both replied: "Carry on further."

We proceeded further until we reached a river of blood. A person was standing in the centre of the river, and on the bank another man was standing with many boulders in front of him. The man in the centre walked towards the bank and when he was about to come out, the person on the bank threw a boulder on his face with such force that he returned to his original place in the centre. When he tried to come out again, he threw a boulder at him and sent him back. I asked them: "What is this?" They replied: "Carry on further."



We proceeded further until we reached a green and luscious garden. There was a huge tree and under it an old man and many children were sitting. Near the tree there was another man sitting. There was a fire burning in front of him which he was blowing. Thereafter my two companions lifted me up and took me on top of the tree. Within the tree, a beautiful house was being constructed. They took me inside it; I had never seen such a beautiful house. There were many old and young men and women, and many children inside. After taking me outside, we went to an even higher place. Over there was a house which was better than the first one. They took me inside; there were also young and old people in it. I said to those two persons: "You took me around throughout the night, now tell me about all these mysteries."

One of them said: " The one whose cheeks you saw being torn apart is a liar. He used to speak lies until they used to become famous everywhere. They will continue doing this to him right until qiyaamah. As for the one whose head you saw getting smashed, he was a person whom Allawh had given knowledge of the Quran. He was negligent of it at night and did not practise on it during the day. He will be punished right until qiyaamah in this way. As for those whom you saw in the cave of fire, they were all adulterers. As for the one in the river of blood, he was a devourer of usury (interest). The old man under the tree is Ibrahim alayhis salaam and all the children around him are the infants of other people. The person blowing the fire is the Guardian of Hell. The first house which you entered is for the general Muslims. The second house is for the martyrs. I am Jibra'eel and this is Mika'eel." He then said: "Lift your head." I lifted my head and saw a white cloud above me. He said: "This is your house." I said: "Let me enter my house." He replied: "Your life is not completed yet. There's still some time left. If it was complete, you would have entered it now."

Lesson: It should be known that dreams of prophets are revelations. All these incidents are true. Several things are learnt from this Hadith: (a) the severe punishment for speaking lies, (b) the fate of an aalim who does not practise on his knowledge, (c) the punishment for adultery, (d) the punishment for devouring interest. May Allawh Ta'ala protect all Muslims from all these sins.

CONCLUDING NOTE

This brings us to the end of this new English translation of Bahishti Zewar. I. Preface

يُسَبِّحُ لِلّٰهِ مَا فِي السَّمٰوٰتِ وَمَا فِي الْاَرْضِ الْمَلِكِ الْقُدُّوْسِ الْعَزِيْزِ الْحَكِيْمِ هُوَ
الَّذِيْ بَعَثَ فِي الْاُمِّيّٖنَ رَسُوْلًا مِّنْهُمْ يَتْلُوْا عَلَيْهِمْ اٰيٰتِهٖ وَيُزَكِّيْهِمْ وَيُعَلِّمُهُمُ
الْكِتٰبَ وَالْحِكْمَةَ وَاِنْ كَانُوْا مِنْ قَبْلُ لَفِيْ ضَلٰلٍ مُّبِيْنٍ ۙ وَّاٰخَرِيْنَ مِنْهُمْ لَمَّا
يَلْحَقُوْا بِهِمْ ۭ وَهُوَ الْعَزِيْزُ الْحَكِيْمُ ۭ ذٰلِكَ فَضْلُ اللّٰهِ يُؤْتِيْهِ مَنْ يَّشَاۗءُ ۭ وَاللّٰهُ
ذُو الْفَضْلِ الْعَظِيْمِ ۝

These days most people think that Islam teaches salah, fasting and some things of the Unseen on the day of judgement, beautiful women (Hoor) in paradise, snakes and scorpions in Hell and has nothing to do with the apparent and hidden related conditions. Think whatever you fancy to Allah and His prophet (sal-am). Do yours dealings as you wish. Do business as you like. Treat people as you wish. Eat, drink whatever you please. Have your sittings standing, meeting and way of life as you wish. Keep your self associated with whatever qualities you like. You are free to do whatever you please. They think of following the other nations in business, their philosophies in way of life, and those who claim to be god in selfish stages. In short they think there is no principles of being Allah, His Prophet(sal-am), no principles of dealing and business transations, no understanding of morals and manners, no realization of stages and elevation of self, etc. The result is as bad as can be imagined. The opponents of Islam say that Islam is incomplete not that they have incompletely learnt it. Some young educated people began to think this way too. They began to think that they neaded the modern civilization in some respects, and by their tongue, heart or action began to prefer other peoples way over their own. They began to laugh at their own beliefs. The result was that the general public began to only consult Ulema (learned scholars) in Salah, fasting, etc., but in legal cases, business etc. they felt totally independant. Neither was the details of monotheism one prophethood asked and discussed. To the extent that their some deeds convey polytheism in Divinity and prophethood specially ladies because involved in daily deeds, worship and enquiry of rules and regulations but lacke interest in dealing, morals, etiquettes, reform of the self and heart, etc. The result is that with increase of the knowledge in some aspects if the religion, there is also increase in pride, greed, love of the world and the like. The result on sufis was that they began to think shari'an ahd tariqah two different and unrelated things, the latter the real things and the former for administrative purposes. They became opposed to ulema and considered their inspirations as the highest authority. Their thoughts were inspirations and latter was alone above any doubt the ultimate truth. They did not feel like examing them with shari'ah or Ulema. Almost every group has this trouble. We belong to Allah and to Him we shall return. If you look at the Quran and Sunnah you will find all the teachings of Islam there in clear statements, for example: اَرْسَلْنَا فِيْكُمْ رَسُوْلًا

مَّا لَمْ تَكُوْنُوْا تَعْلَمُوْنَ ۝ اَلْيَوْمَ اَكْمَلْتُ لَكُمْ دِيْنَكُمْ وَاَتْمَمْتُ عَلَيْكُمْ نِعْمَتِيْ
وَرَضِيْتُ لَكُمُ الْاِسْلَامَ دِيْنًا وغیرہ ذلک ۔ آخر جس قرآن میں يُؤْمِنُوْنَ بِالْغَيْبِ وَ

وَيَزِيْدُهُمْ خُشُوْعًا الْاٰيَةَ وغیرہا من

Besides these there are verses of dealings, way of life, stages in education of self, etc. Similarly if you examine Hadith you will find faith, salah, Zakah, business, Nikah, Divorce, manners and morals, behaviour, etc. as chapters. Then how can you say that Islam has taught us belief and worship only but not dealings, way of life and Tasawwuf; If you are honest you will agree that Islam has taught all the full things and not left us looking for them elsewhere. Even in other nations there are some honest people who agree to this claim.

When I saw these ideas spreading in the general public, I decided due to Muslim sympathy to write this book in which all the five things be collected and dealt from Quran and Hadith for their benefit. Special mention is made to the mistakes of Sufis and their corrections and reforms in this work. Sufism means pleasure of Allah, and that comes by following rules and regulations. The rules one for all walks of life and all walks of life have to be reformed. First have the Islamic believes of Ahle Sunnah wal Jama'at; then learn salah, fasting, Zakah etc., and follow them then learn Halal or Haram in Islam, so that heart may be enlightened. Learn the Islamic way of life and rights and duties in Islam so as to fulfill these and do no tyranny. If you do tyranny, you can't have mercy from Allah and if you enter Tariqah you will not go astroy and are bound to succeed.

The five topics of Islam that one mainly treated have include the following: Belief, Deeds and worship, dealings and politics, Way of life and Etiquettes, Sulook, Tasawwuf and Tariqah.

O Allah help me and save me from mistakes.

(Mujaddid) Mohmmad Ashraf Ali Thanwi.

II Islamic Beliefs

Belief 1: The entire universe did not exist before. Then it came into existence by the creation of Allah.

Belief 2: He is since ever and will remain for ever.

Belief 3: There is nothings like Him, and He is unique.

Belief 4: He is alive. He has power over everything- Nothing is secret from His knowledge. He sees everything. He listenes to everything. He speaks whatever He pleases. He is worthy of worship. He has no partner. He is kind to His creatures. He is king(of kings).He is free from all defects. He saves His creatures from all troubles and calamities. He is respectful. He is the greatest. He is the creator. He is the forgiver of sins. He gives a lot. He is Mighty. He is the giver of sustenance, gives more to some, less to some. He elevates some, He degrades some.Give respects to some, Humiliates some whom He pleases. He is just. He is tolerant. He appreciates service. He accepts our prayers. He listen to us . There is wisdom in all His actions. He makes all the things. He created us for the first time. He will create us again on the day of judgement. He gives life. He takes life. We know Him by His qualities and virtues but nobody can know His self. He accepts repentance of sinners. He punishes those worthy of punishment. He gives guidance. He neither sleep nor dozes. He does not get tired of looking after the universe. He is holding everything. He has all similar virtues of excellence.

Belief 5: He is One. He does not need anyone. He did not give birth to anyone nor was born from anyone. There is no rival to Him.

Belief 6: He is free from the qualities of His creatures. And wherever in Quran or Hadith such things are mentioned leave its meaning to Allah, He knows its true nature and we believe as such or give it a meaning suitable to it with which we can understand.

Belief 7: Whatever good or bad happens in the universe Allah knows them all before hand and creates them according to His knowledge. This is fate or destiny. There are secrets in creating bad things which everyone does not know.

Belief 8: Allah has given His servants choice to do good or evil which they do by their choice. He is pleased by good deeds. He is displeased by bad deeds. But His servants can not create any work.

Belief 9: Allah has not ordered His servants anything what they can not do.

Belief 10: Allah is not obliged to do anything. Whatever favour He does is by His mercy and kindness.

Belief 11: Many messengers and prophets came to guide His servants. They are all innocent. Their number is known to Allah alone. Allah gave them miracles which other people could not perform to prove their truth. The first of them is Hadhrat Adam A.S. and the last is Hadhrat Mohammed (sal-am) and the rest were in between. Some are more famous such as Hadhrat Nuh, Hadhrat Abraham, Hadhrat Isa, Hadhrat Ismael, Hadhrat Jacob, Hadhrat Joseph, Hadhrat David, Hadhrat Soloman, Hadhrat Job, Hadhrat Mosa, Hadhrat Haron, Hadhrat Zekeryah, Hadhrat John Baptist, Hadhrat Jesus son of Mary, Hadhrat Al Yasaa, Hadhrat Jonah, Hadhrat Lut, Hadhrat Idris, Hadhrat Zul kifl, Hadhrat Saleh, Hadhrat Hood, Hadhrat Shoaib, Hadhrat Ilyas Alaihimus Salam.

Belief 12: Some messengers are higher in ranks than others. The highest in ranks is Hadhrat Mohammed (Sal-aw) No new prophet can come after him. He is the messenger of all those to be born till the day of judgement among men and Jinn.

Belief 13: Allah took our messenger while awake with his body from Mecca to Jerusalam (Baitul Muqaddas) and then to seven heavens and wherever He pleased and then brought him to Mecca. This is called Ascension or Meraj.

Belief 14: Allah created many creatures from light whom we can't see they are angels. We are not told whether they are male or female. They perform many functions. They never disobey Allah. Four of them are famous: Hadhrat Gabriel, Hadhrat Michail, Hadhrat Israfeel, Hadhrat Izraeel.

Belief 15: Allah created some creatures from fire. We can't see them. They are both good and bad. They have children also. The most famous is the devil shaitan (Iblees).

Belief 16: When a Muslim worships Allah, avoid sins, doesn't love the world, and obeys the prophet (Sal-am) completely he becomes friend of Allah or Wali or saint. Some times he can show things which other people can not do. These are called miracles (Karamat).

Belief 17: A Wali, no matter how great, can still not reach the rank of a Prophet.

Belief 18: It is obligatory for a Wali to follow the shariah. As long as the senses are right no worship (Salah, fasting or any other thing) is waived. The sins are never alright for him.

Belief 19: A person opposed to shariah can not be a Wali or saint. If he shows some strange things with his hands, these are magic, or devlish activity or selfish activity. Don't have faith with him.

Belief 20: A Wali can get to know some secrets with awake or sleeping. This is kasfh ilham or inspiration. Follow them if according to shariah, otherwise reject them.

Belief 21: Allah and His Prophet (Sal-am) have told all the things of religion on Quran and Hadith. There is no room for anythings new or innovation or Bidah which is a big sin. Earlier Ulema called Mujtahid have explained Quran and Hadith with the power of their knowledge and piety and explained many new things to others. Four of them are famous: Hadhrat Imamul Azam Abu Hanifah Rah. (the greatest Imam with the largest following), Hadhrat Imam Shafei Rah, Hadhrat Imam Malik Rah, Hadhrat Imam Ahmed Ibne Hanbal Rah, Followers of Imam Abu Hanifah are called Hanafi and are in majority in the Indo-Pakistan sub-cotinent. Eighty percent of all Muslims are Hanafi.

Similarly for the reform of self saints have devised methods from Quran and Hadith with the light of their heart, four of which are famous: Hadhrat Khawaja Moinuddin Chishti Rah, Hadhrat Abdul Qadir Jeelani Rah, Shaikh Shahabuddin Suhravardy Rah, Hadhrat khaja Bahauddin Naqshbandi Rah, Follow any Mujtahid you wish but don't insult others. Don't follow these if they have made a mistake somewhere in interpreting Quran and Hadith.

Belief 22: Allah has revealed many small and bigger books from heaven through the angel Gabriel to different Prophets that they may guide their people and nation. Four Books are famous. Torah to Hadhrat Musa (Moses), Psalms (Zaboor) to Hadhrat David (Daud), Gospols (Injil) to Hadhrat Isa (Jesus), and Quran to Hadhrat Mohammad (Sal-am), Quran is the last holy book. No book will come from Heaven now Quran's orders will prevail till the day of judgement. All other books are changed and mutilated by earlier people but Allah has promised to protect Quran. No one can change a word of it.

Belief 23: True Muslims who saw our prophet (Sal-am) are called companions (Sahabi). They were all great people. Love them and have God's faith with them. If you have any quarrel or war between them ignore it as a minor incidence. Do not rebuke them. The four best ones are in order of their caliphate: Hadhrat Abu Baker Rad. He sat on the place of the holy prophet (Sal-am) looked after the religion. He is the best of all Muslims, Next come Hadhrat Omar Rad., the second caliph. Next come Hadhrat Othman Rad., the third caliph. Finally come Hadhrat Ali Rad., the fourth caliph.

Belief24: The prophets wives and daughters were all highly respectable. Among daughters the highest in rank is Hadhrat Fatima Rad, and among wives the highest ranks were Hadhrat Khadijah Rad., and Hadhrat Aisha Rad..

Belief25: Faith remains valid when you accept as true all the sayings of Allah and prophet (Sal-am). If you doubt, call it a lie, find fault, joke them your faith is gone.

Belief26: Not to accept the obvious meaning of Quran and Hadith and find a twisted meaning to satisfy your selfish doing is irreligious.

Belief 27: You lose your faith of you consider sin as permissible (Halal).

Belief 28: As long as you consider a sin as sin and bad, your faith may be weakened but not lost.

Belief 29: To be fearless of Allah or to be hopeless of Allah's mercy is kufr(atheism).

Belief 30: To ask someone about the unseen and to believe it is kufr (atheism). However, the prophets are told by revelation, saints by inspiration and general public by sign can be told something of the unseen.

Belief 31: To call someone as kafir(atheist) or to curse someone by name is a big sin. You can curse the tyrants, liers, etc. Those people who have been named kafir by Allah and His prophet (sal-am) or cursed by them, you can curse them or call them kafir.

Belief 32: After death when a person is buried or in what state two angels(Munkar and Nakeer or Nakeerainh) come to him and ask who is your Lord? What is your religion? They ask about the Prophet (sal-am), who is he? If the dead is a Muslim, he gives correct reply. For him is all the blessings. Othewise he says, I don't know for all the question. They put to great hardship then. Some are waived by Allah from this examination. These things happen with the dead person, othen people don't see it. Like a sleeping person who dreams and sees every thing in his dream and an awake person sitting net to him is totally unaware of it.

Belief33: The dead receives our prayers, charity, reading of Quran and greatly benefits by them.

Belief34: All the sign told by Allah and His prophet (sal-am) about the day of judgement are going to happen Hadhrat Sayyid Imam Al-Mahdi will appear and will rule the world with great justice. One eyed Dajjal(Anti-christ) will appear among the jews and will curse much trouble on the earth. Hadhrat Isa (Jesus Christ) will desend from Heaven to kill him and he will kill him. Yajuj and Majuj (Gog and MeGog) are a naughty people, they will spread all over the world, then they will be destroyed by the wrath of Allah. A Peculiar animal will come out of earth and will talk with humans. Sun will rise from the west-Quran Majid will be lifted. In a few days all the Muslims will die, and the world will be full of infidels and there are other things to happen.

Belief35: When all the signs have appeared, preparation of the day of Judgement shall take place, Hadhrat Israfeel A.S. will by the order of Allah blow the long horn-like thoor (clarion) and the earth and the heavens will shatter to pieces. All the creatures will die. Those who are already dead, their souls will be unconcious except those whom Allah wants to save. A period of time will pass like this.

Belief36: When Allah would want to recreate the universe, a second time the Thoor will be blown and the entire universe will come to life. All the dead will be alive and gather in the field of judgement. They will be fed up of the troubles there and go to prophets for recommendation. Finally the prophet Mohammad (sal-am) will recommend and all good and bad deeds will be weighed and they will be judged. Some will enter paradise without accounting of deeds. The deed sheets of the good peoples will be given in their right hands and of the bad people will be given in their left hand. The holy prophet (sal-am) will offer drink from river kauthar which is whiter than milk and sweeter than honey. Then we have to walk in the bridge of serat. The good people will pass on the paradise, and the bad people will drop down to Hell

Belief37: Hell has been created. It has snakes, scorpions and varieties of punishment. Among the people of Hell who have a little bit of faith will after suffering for their sins with the recommendation of prophet and saints come out and enter paradise, no matter how great a sinner they are. The atheist and the polytheist will remain there, for ever and death will not come to rescue them.

Belief38: Paradise has been created. It has all sorts of comfort and happiness. The people of paradise will have no fear or worry. They will live there for ever. They will not come out of it and will not die there.

Belief39: Allah is powerful to punish on small sins or forgive bigger sins by His mercy altogether.

Belief40: Those who have been named to be people of paradise by Allah and His Prophet (sal-am) you can call them so but not certainly so far others. It is however, essential with good signs to have good faith, and hope for the best by Allah's mercy.

Belief41: The greatest blessing in paradise is the sight of Allah, before which all other pleasures are nothing.

Belief42: In this world, while awake, no body has seen Allah nor can anyone see Him.

Belief43: No matter how good or bad a person has been in his life, it is his condition at the time of death that decides whether he will be rewarded or punished.

(I) Kinds of Polytheism (Shirk)

قال الله تعالى وَمَنْ يُّشَاقِقِ الرَّسُوْلَ مِنْ بَعْدِ مَا تَبَيَّنَ لَهُ الْهُدٰى
وَيَتَّبِعْ غَيْرَ سَبِيْلِ الْمُؤْمِنِيْنَ نُوَلِّهٖ مَا تَوَلّٰى وَنُصْلِهٖ جَهَنَّمَ وَسَآءَتْ

يُّشْرِكْ بِاللّٰهِ فَقَدْ ضَلَّ ضَلٰلًا بَعِيْدًا ۝ اِنْ يَّدْعُوْنَ مِنْ دُوْنِهٖ اِلَّآ اِنٰثًا ۚ وَاِنْ
يَّدْعُوْنَ اِلَّا شَيْطٰنًا مَّرِيْدًا ۝ لَعَنَهُ اللّٰهُ ۘ وَقَالَ لَاَتَّخِذَنَّ مِنْ عِبَادِكَ نَصِيْبًا
مَّفْرُوْضًا ۝ وَّلَاُضِلَّنَّهُمْ وَلَاُمَنِّيَنَّهُمْ وَلَاٰمُرَنَّهُمْ فَلَيُبَتِّكُنَّ اٰذَانَ الْاَنْعَامِ
وَلَاٰمُرَنَّهُمْ فَلَيُغَيِّرُنَّ خَلْقَ اللّٰهِ ۭ وَمَنْ يَّتَّخِذِ الشَّيْطٰنَ وَلِيًّا مِّنْ دُوْنِ اللّٰهِ فَقَدْ

These verses shows the true nature of innovation (Bad'ah) Polytheism or paganism (Shirk), customs of ignorance and obedience to shaitan (devil). VII Sulook, Tariqah and Sufism Unfortunatly there are some fanatics who refuse to accept the validity of sulook, Tariqah and Tasawwaf(Sufism). Something will be said for them in brief first.

قَالَ اللهُ عَزَّوَجَلَّ فَفَهَّمْنَاهَا سُلَيْمٰنَ ج وَقَالَ رَسُوْلُ اللهِ
صَلَّى اللهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ وَلَقَدْ كَانَ فِيْمَنْ قَبْلَكُمْ مِّنَ الْاُمَمِ مُحَدَّثُوْنَ وَاِنْ يَّكُ
فِيْ اُمَّتِيْ اَحَدٌ فَاِنَّهٗ عُمَرُ مُتَّفَقٌ عَلَيْهِ وَقَالَ اللهُ تَعَالٰى وَعَلَّمْنٰهُ مِنْ لَّدُنَّا عِلْمًا ۝

Allah said hence we explained the event to Soloman A.S. and said the holy prophet (Sal-am) certainly before you people has passed in other nations who have received inspiration and anyone is in my Ummah it is Omar Rad.

Knowledgeable people say one who has not received any thing from the hidden knowledge may die on lack of faith. The least you can do is to accept it.

This is the summary of Imam Ghazali Rah.

اَلْاِحْسَانُ اَنْ تَعْبُدَ اللهَ كَاَنَّكَ تَرٰهُ فَاِنْ لَّمْ تَكُنْ تَرٰهُ فَاِنَّهٗ يَرٰكَ ۝ after this is described faith and Islam, which means besides Islamic beliefs and apparent worship there is some thing else called "Ihsan" in the Hadith. And talking its significance means that this is the hidden Tariq without which this peace of mind is not available. Thousands of people support it which the intellect can not reject that by sitting next to a Shaikh of Tariqah besides beliefs and Fiqh a new thing develops in your hidden self (which was not there before) and the result in increase in love of virtues and hatred for sin day by day. This is a strong proof that hidden thing is something.

Besides vision and inspiration of saints are so much recorded that with the following of Shariah this is a proof. This is what Qadhi. Thanaullah Rah. says, "Follow it or at least don't refuse it".

(29) Bait or Pledge.

It is the habit of Allah that you need a teacher or guide for perfection in any profession. When you plan to enter sulook look for a teacher. A Shaikh's qualifications are as follows.

(i) Knowledge in Shariah to a satisfactory extent by books or ulema so that he can save his followers from mistakes of belief and deeds.

(ii) Must be pious. Free from bigger sins and not insisting on smaller sins.

(iii) Leaving world and seeking the Hereafter. Following apparent and hidden worships. Otherwise it will have a bad effect on student's heart.

(iv) Look after his Mureeds (disciples) if any go astray correct him.

(v) He must have had the company of saints. Learnt from them. He should not necessarily show miracles. Must not be greedy. May not be apposed to earning.

The holy Prophet (sal-am) has taken Bait apart from Islam and Jihad. Also on welfare of Muslims, in front of Allah's orders not to worry about anybody's rebuke or any thing, not to beg from people. Thus there is no doubt that this is Sunnah.

Because of similarity with caliphate the earlier saints confined it to company. Then came Bait (pledge) and the title of Sufi was common in the second century (Qashiriyah)

(30) Struggle and Mujahidah

The essence are the following four things : (1) less talking (2) less eating (3) less sleeping (4) less contact with people. Ask the middle course from the shaikh. Neither too much to cause negligence or too little to ruin the health.

Self has two requirements (1) rights, keep them, save them, (2) pleasures, avoid them.

Grief is a good struggle. Humility and servitude develop from it. Constipation of the soul that comes in the way is a struggle and good thing. Don't complain. Keep on working with patience.

(31) Detailed Struggle

There are two kinds. One good manners and they are several stages or "Muqamat" such as repentance, patience, thankfulness, fear, hope, abstinence (zuhd), monotheism, trust, love, desire (shauq), sincerity, truthfulness, meditation (muraqabah), thoughtfulness. Except otherwise stated, these are taken from Ahyaul Uloom.

(a) Repentance (Taubah)

قَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰى يٰٓاَيُّهَا الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْا تُوْبُوْٓا اِلَى اللّٰهِ تَوْبَةً نَّصُوْحًا.

Allah says in Quran. o You who belive repent to Allah sincere repentance.

Hadith : O people repent to Allah.

Feel sorry on remembering sin. Leaving the sin, firm commitment not to do it in the future and prevent it at the time of desire. Think the punishment in Quran and Hadith on sins, this will create a burning and hatred in the heart, this is repentance.

If Salah and fasting are left fulfill them. If people's right are wasted, them ask them to forgive you.

(b) Patience

قال الله تعالى يا أيها الذين آمنوا اصبروا - وقال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم عجبا لأمر المؤمن إن أمره كله خير وليس ذلك لأحد إلا للمؤمن إن أصابته سراء شكر وإن أصابته ضراء صبر فكان خيرا له (رواه مسلم)

Allah says in Quran, O you who believe have patience. The prophet (sal-am) said in Muslim, everything of a beliver is good. If he is pleased he thanked, if he had hardship he had patience, thus every thing is good for him.

There are two powers in man. One encourages on religion and other on selfish desires. Then patience is to raise the one on religion above the selfish desires.

Weaken the selfish desires to obtain it.

(c) Thankfulness. Allah says be thankful to Me.

قال الله تعالى واشكروا لي.

Consider a blessing from the real owner. Two things will develop from this to be pleased with Allah and to please Allah in service and obeying his rules.

Think of Allah's blessings and mercy.

(d) Hope. Don't be hopeless of Allah's mercy.

Waiting for beloved things (mercy, forgiveness, blessing, paradise etc.) will create happiness in heart and to try to achieve them. One who wants for mercy and paradise but does not repent and do good deeds he is in false hopes. Just like a farmer does not sow the seeds and waits for crop is in false hope.

(e) Fear. Allah says in Quran وَاخْشَوْنِي fear me and the prophet (sal-am) said in Tirmizi, on who fears starts travelling in the night, one who travels in the night reaches the destination. Listen Allah's merchandise is expensive. Beware it is paradise.

Fearing of heart from something unpleasent that would happen in the future.

Think of Allah's punishment and anger to attain it.

(f) Abstinence (zuhd).

قال الله تعالى لكيلا تأسوا على ما فاتكم ولا تفرحوا بما آتاكم

So that you maynot be sorry for what you have lost, and be not proud with happiness on what We gave you. The holy prophet (sal-am) said the first good thing of this Ummah is faith and abstinence, and the first evil thing of this ummah is misery and talking to oneself.

To leave something you like for something which is better is Zuhd, for instance leave this world for the Hereafter.

To attain it think of the evils and temporary nature of the world and the goods and permanent nature of the Hereafter.

(g) Monotheism (Unity of God). Allah says in Quran: Allah has created you and all your deeds. And you don't like anything except what Allah likes. The holy prophet(sal-am) said if all men unite to award you a gain, they cannot do that except what Allah has written for you, and if all men unite to give you a harm, they can't do that except what Allah has written for you (Ahmad & Tirmizi)

(h) Trust. Allah say in Quran

قَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰی وَعَلَی اللّٰهِ فَلْیَتَوَکَّلِ الْمُؤْمِنُوْنَ let the believers have their trust on Allah. The prophet (sal-am) said when ask from Allah, when ask for help ask from Allah (Ahmed & Tirmizi).

Have the trust of your heart on the Maker.

To attain this think of His promises and kindness and you past successes.

(i) Love. Allah says in Quran

قَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰی یُحِبُّهُمْ وَیُحِبُّوْنَهٗ

Allah and Allah loves them. The prophet (Sal-am) they have said those who likes Allah's meeting, Allah likes to meet him, and one who dislikes meeting with Allah, Allah dislikes meeting with him. (Bukhari &Muslim).

It is inclination of a thing that gives pleasure to self. When strong, this is called love.

To attain this cut down wordly relationship, remove the love of other than Allah because two loves don't assemble in the heart. Think of Allah's virtues, qualities and blessings.

(j) Desire (Shauq).

قَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰی مَنْ کَانَ یَرْجُوْا لِقَآءَ اللّٰهِ فَاِنَّ اَجَلَ اللّٰهِ لَاٰتٍ (الآیۃ)

Allah says in Quran, one who hopes for meeting Allah, then Allah's time (death) is due to come.

The prophet (sal-am) said O Allah I want to see your face and desire to meet you.

If you know some thing a little and don't know all of it, to develop the desire to know Him perfectly and the natural wish to see the beloved.

To attain this develop love as desire comes with love.

(k) Affection (Uns)

قَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰی هُوَ الَّذِیْ اَنْزَلَ السَّکِیْنَةَ فِیْ قُلُوْبِ الْمُؤْمِنِیْنَ

Allah says in Quran, He is One who descended affection in the heart of the believers. The prophet (sal-am) said when people sit to do Zikrullah, but surround them angels of peace, and surrounds them Allah's mercy, and descends upon them affection and satisfation, and Allah remembers them in front of those with Him (the angels) (Muslim).

Take a beloved thing, you know something and hidden things you don't know if you look at what you don't know and want to know, Him this is "affection" (uns). When latter in extreme, you don't often remember the qualities of His Majesty and familiarity comes in his statements and actions.

To attain this, develop love (see love).

(l) Pleasure.

Allah says in Quran, Allah is pleased with them and they are pleased with Allah. The prophet (sal-am) said for a man it is good to be pleased with what Allah has destined from him.

Not to reject on destiny with tongue or heart, sometimes in extreme cases even the pain is not felt.

To attain this, develop love.

(m) Intention.

Allah say in Quran, O Mohammed (sal-am) don't be angry with those who call their Lord morning and evening (all the time) and like Allah. The Prophet (Sal-am) said actions depend upon intentions.

It is rising of the heart towards some thing good for him.

To attain this develop good deeds and the goodness of sulook way of the Hereafter, this will activate the heart.

(n) Sincerity. قَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰى وَمَا أُمِرُوْٓا اِلَّا لِيَعْبُدُوا اللّٰهَ مُخْلِصِيْنَ لَهُ الدِّيْنَ حُنَفَآءَ الآية

Allah says in Quran, they have been asked to worship Me with sincerity and away from other things. The prophet (sal-am) said when a man prays well in front of others and in loneliness also, then Allah says he is my rightful servant.

To worship Allah for the sake of Allah and without pleasures of others or self.

To attain this remove "show" (riya).

(o) Truthfulness.

قَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰى اِنَّمَا الْمُؤْمِنُوْنَ الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْا بِاللّٰهِ وَرَسُوْلِهٖ ثُمَّ لَمْ يَرْتَابُوْا وَجٰهَدُوْا بِاَمْوَالِهِمْ وَاَنْفُسِهِمْ فِيْ سَبِيْلِ اللّٰهِ ۭ اُولٰۗىِٕكَ هُمُ الصّٰدِقُوْنَ ۝ وَعَنْ عَائِشَةَ قَالَتْ مَرَّ النَّبِيُّ صَلَّى اللّٰهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ بِاَبِيْ بَكْرٍ وَّهُوَ يَلْعَنُ بَعْضَ رَقِيْقِهٖ فَالْتَفَتَ اِلَيْهِ فَقَالَ لَعَّانِيْنَ وَصِدِّيْقِيْنَ اِلٰى قَوْلِ اَبِيْ بَكْرٍ لَآ اَعُوْدُ ۔ رواه البيهقي في شعب الايمان

Allah say in Quran : those are faithful who believe on Allah and His prophet, did not hesitate and fought with their life and property in the way of Allah. There are the truthful ones. Aysha Rad. said the prophet (Sa-am) passed through Abu Bakr Rad. He was cursing his slave. The prophet (sal-am) said Siddiq and cursing? Abu Bakr (Rad.) said I will not do that again.

To need perfection in any stage (muqam) and leave not incomplete.

To attain it keep a watch of it and keep on perfecting.

(p) Meditation (Muraqabah).

قَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰى اِنَّ اللّٰهَ كَانَ عَلٰى كُلِّ شَيْءٍ رَّقِيْبًا وقال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم اَلْاِحْسَانُ اَنْ تَعْبُدَ اللّٰهَ كَاَنَّكَ تَرٰىهُ فَاِنْ لَّمْ تَكُنْ تَرٰاهُ فَاِنَّهٗ يَرٰاكَ (رواه مسلم) وقال عليه السلام اِحْفَظِ اللّٰهَ تَجِدْهُ تُجَاهَكَ (رواه احمد والترمذي)

Allah says in Quran : Allah is most certainly watchful over everything. Ihsan is to worship Allah as if you see Him, if you can't see him He does see you. The Prophet (sal-am) said think of Allah, you will find Him infront of you Know that Allah knows my apparent and hidden and knows everything all the time, know He is Great, Al-mighty, think of His punishment, then you will think of Him all the time and nothing will happen against His wishes.

Think with his heart of someone who is looking after him.

(q) Thoughtfulness. قَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰى وَيَضْرِبُ اللّٰهُ الْاَمْثَالَ لِلنَّاسِ لَعَلَّهُمْ يَتَفَكَّرُوْنَ ۝

Allah says in Quran, Allah gives examples for people so that they may think. The prophet (sal-am) said

Consequantly accept what is going to last over what is going to perish.

Take two things in your mind and desire the third, for instance you know that the Hereafter is permanent, and you now that permanent thing is preferable to temporary thing. From these two facts you desire the third hereafter is preferable.

By the reform of these stages all the others are also reformed, such as piety, contentment, certainty, servitude, steadfastness, modesty, freedom, manners, etiquettes, recognition of Allah etc. Which are descibed in Quran and Hadit as follows:

اِتَّقُوا اللّٰهَ مِنْ حُسْنِ اِسْلَامِ الْمَرْءِ تَرْكُهٗ مَا لَا يَعْنِيْهِ ۔ اَلْقَنَاعَةُ كَنْزٌ لَّا يَفْنٰى ۔ وَبِالْاٰخِرَةِ هُمْ يُوْقِنُوْنَ ۝ وَاعْبُدْ رَبَّكَ حَتّٰى يَاْتِيَكَ الْيَقِيْنُ ۝ اِنَّ الَّذِيْنَ قَالُوْا رَبُّنَا اللّٰهُ ثُمَّ اسْتَقَامُوْا الآية ۔ اِسْتَحْيُوْا مِنَ اللّٰهِ حَقَّ الْحَيَآءِ ۔ يُؤْثِرُوْنَ عَلٰٓى اَنْفُسِهِمْ وَلَوْ كَانَ بِهِمْ خَصَاصَةٌ ۚ قوله عليه السلام يَوْمَ الْقِيٰمَةِ يُعْرَضُ اُمَّتِيْ اُمَّتِيْ ۔ وَاِنَّكَ لَعَلٰى خُلُقٍ عَظِيْمٍ ۝ مَا زَاغَ الْبَصَرُ وَمَا طَغٰى وَمَا قَدَرُوا اللّٰهَ حَقَّ قَدْرِهٖ

It is obvious, therefore they are not described in detail.

(32) Bad Manners.

(a) Lust. قَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰى وَيُرِيْدُ الَّذِيْنَ يَتَّبِعُوْنَ الشَّهَوٰتِ اَنْ تَمِيْلُوْا مَيْلًا عَظِيْمًا ۔

Allah says in Quran, those people who follow their selfish desires or lust want you to deviate from truth a lot of turning away.

Needs struggle which has been described earlier.

(b) Evils of Tongue. وَقَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰى مَا يَلْفِظُ مِنْ قَوْلٍ اِلَّا لَدَيْهِ رَقِيْبٌ عَتِيْدٌ وَقَالَ رَسُوْلُ اللّٰهِ صَلَّى اللّٰهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ مَنْ صَمَتَ نَجَا رواه احمد والترمذی

Allah says in Quran not a word he utters but there is a watcher ready.

One who kept queit escaped punishment.

There are evils of tongue : talking contrary to shari'ah useless argument, fighting, artificiality in talk, rebukes curse, music, joke to hurt other person, disclose somebody's secret, false promises lie, false oath, false witness, backbiting, have two faces in talk, praise, to talk about Allah without knowledge, ask ulema useless things.

The cure is to think a little because Allah listens and watches one everything that He will not be displeased. This will stop sin from the mouth.

(c) Anger. قَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰى اِذْ جَعَلَ الَّذِيْنَ كَفَرُوْا فِيْ قُلُوْبِهِمُ الْحَمِيَّةَ حَمِيَّةَ الْجَاهِلِيَّةِ وَقَالَ النَّبِيُّ صَلَّى اللّٰهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ لَا تَغْضَبْ (رواه البخاری)

Allah says in Quran : When these people who become kafir in their heart did the anger of Jahilyya (ignorance). The Prophet (sal-am) said don't be angry.

It is the rushing of blood to take revenge.

The cure is to think that Allah has more power over me and I disobey Him too and if He gets angry what will happen. Think that nothing happens without Allah's permission so why should I object or resist. Say Aoozoo billahi. Sit down if standing, lie down if sitting. Make ablution with cold water. Finally remove the person or get away from him.

(d) Malice (Keenah).

Allah says in Quran forgive others, enjoin the right, and turn your face away form the ignorant people. The prophat (Sal-am) said (Bukhari & Muslim): Don't have malice.

When you cannot take revenge of anger in order to control it there is a hardship in heart called malice.

To cure is to forgive his sins, and start talking to him, in a few days malice will be gone.

(e) Jealousy. قَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰى وَمِنْ شَرِّ حَاسِدٍ اِذَا حَسَدَ وَقَالَ رَسُوْلُ اللّٰهِ صَلَّى اللّٰهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ لَا تَحَاسَدُوْا (رواه البخاری)

Allah says in Quran : I seek refuge with the Lord of the day break.....from the mischief of the enemy when he envy. The prophet (sal-am) said don't envy each other.

Somebody has a good condition and you don't like it and wish that he loses it.

Praise the man a lot and treat him with kindness, humility, giving. This will produce your love in his heart. Then he will treat you likewise. This will produce his love in your heart. Jealousy will be gone. This is the cure.

(f) Worldly love. قَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰى وَمَا الْحَيٰوةُ الدُّنْيَا اِلَّا مَتَاعُ الْغُرُوْرِ

Allah says in Quran, the worldly life is full of defect. And the prophet (sal-am) said world is a prison for the believer and a paradise for the kafir (Muslim).

World is a thing which has pleasure now but no reward in the Hereafter.

To cure worldly love remember death often and do not make long plans.

(g)Misery. قَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰى وَمَنْ يَّبْخَلْ فَاِنَّمَا يَبْخَلُ عَنْ نَّفْسِهٖ

Allah says in Quran : One who is miser does misery from himself. The prophet (sal-am) said a miser is away form Allah, is away from paradise , is away from people, is close to hell (Tirmizi).

To avoid spending where it is esssential according to Shari'ah.

To cure, remove the love of wealth from the heart and see worldly love .

(h) Greed. قَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰى وَلَا تَمُدَّنَّ عَيْنَيْكَ اِلٰى مَا مَتَّعْنَا بِهٖ اَزْوَاجًا مِّنْهُمْ زَهْرَةَ الْحَيٰوةِ الدُّنْيَا وقال رسول اللّٰه صلى اللّٰه عليه وسلم يَهْرَمُ ابْنُ اٰدَمَ وَيَشِبُّ مِنْهُ اِثْنَانِ الْحِرْصُ عَلَى الْمَالِ وَالْحِرْصُ عَلَى الْعُمُرِ (متفق عليه)

Allah says in Quran : don't cast your eyes towards the things we gave for benefit to different Kafir groups in this world. The prophet (sal-am) said man gets old but two things keep increasing : greed on his wealth and greed on his age.

It is the business of heart with wealth.

To cure, cut down the expenses so that more income may not be needed, and don't think of what will happen in the future. Think that a greedy person is always miserable.

(i) Love of Position.

قَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰى تِلْكَ الدَّارُ الْاٰخِرَةُ نَجْعَلُهَا لِلَّذِيْنَ لَا يُرِيْدُوْنَ عُلُوًّا فِى الْاَرْضِ وَلَا فَسَادًا وَالْعَاقِبَةُ لِلْمُتَّقِيْنَ وقال رسول اللّٰه صلى اللّٰه عليه وسلم مَا ذِئْبَانِ جَائِعَانِ اُرْسِلَا فِىْ غَنَمٍ بِاَفْسَدَ لَهَا مِنْ حِرْصِ الْمَرْءِ عَلَى الْمَالِ وَالشَّرَفِ لِدِيْنِهٖ (رواه الترمذى)

Allah says in Quran : this Hereafter is meant for those who do not have love for position or trouble-making, and the end is for those who fear Allah. The prophet (sal-am) said two hungry wolves on goats don't cause so much danger as greed of wealth and love for position ruins a man's religion.

It is the change of peoples heart that they may respect and obey him.

To cure, think that neither will I remain nor these people who are showing respect to me, so what good in being pleased with their temporary behaviour.

(j) Show. قَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰى يُرَآءُوْنَ النَّاسَ

Allah says in Quran : they show to the people. The prophet (sal-am) said:
(Ibne Majah), a little show is shirk (polytheism).

By a worship of Allah, to try to be respectful in the eyes of the people.

To cure, remove love of position from the heart as show is a part of it. Apart from Jama'at day other prayers and worship secretly. Hadrat Haji Imdadullah (my shaikh) Rah. said if you fear who in a worship do it lot and openly, no body will pay attention to it. The worship will become habit and then sincerity will come into it.

(k) Pride. قَالَ اللّٰہُ تَعَالٰی اِنَّ اللّٰہَ لَا یُحِبُّ الْمُسْتَکْبِرِیْنَ ۝

Allah says in Quran : Allah does not like proud people. The Prophet (sal-am) said in Muslim, whosoever has an atom's worth of pride in his beart will not go to paradise.

It is to consider oneself greater than others in virtues.

To cure, think of Allah's greatness, you will find your virtues nothing in fromt of Him. If you find yourself greater than a person, treat him with respect and humility until you get used to it.

قَالَ اللّٰہُ تَعَالٰی اِذْ اَعْجَبَتْکُمْ کَثْرَتُکُمْ

(l) Self pamperedness (UJB).

Allah says in Quran : when it looked good to you your being more in number. The prophet (sal-am) said, things which destroy are the selfish desires which you follow, misery is one which you act upon, and considering good of a person of himself is worst of all (Baihiqi).

It is to consider a virtue to yourself.

To cure think of it as a gift from Allah, and fear that it might be withdrawn.

(m) Deceit (Ghuroor). قَالَ اللّٰہُ تَعَالٰی وَلَا یَغُرَّنَّکُمْ بِاللّٰہِ الْغَرُوْرُ

Allah says in Quran : And let not satan deceive you. The prophet (sal-am) said stay away from the deceitful world (Baihiqi).

It is belief according to selfish desires, which is attractive, by the deceit of the devil (shaitan) self is satisfied with it.

To cure always judge your actions with Quran, Hadith and saint's sayings.

With the cure of these all other bad manners will be gone. Remember these short poems in Persian.

(n) Meditation. It includes "Musharitah" before the meditation and "Muhasabah" after it. Musharitah is to talk to yourself every morning don't do this and that evil or sin. Then keep an eye on this meditation or "Muraqabah." Then do the "Muhasabah" in the evening before going to sleep. Remember all the deeds. Thank God for good deeds. Feel sorry for the bad deeds or those with the intermingling of the self, repent, and fix some punishment and do it. Allah says- وَلْتَنْظُرْ نَفْسٌ مَّا قَدَّمَتْ لِغَدٍ (احیاء العلوم) (Ahyaul Uloom).

(33) Misclaneous Masails of Tariqah (Tasawwuf).

(a) Rejection. After receiving the goal nobody is rejected. If anybody is rejected it is before that.

(b) More Rewards to Saints. The saints (auliya) get more rewards in their worship and good deeds, because they are more sincere and have more servitude.

(c) Manifestation (Kashf). Breaking of habit takes place in many ways. One is manifestation or Kashf which is of two kinds: worldly manifestation and Divine manifestation. Worldly manifestation is where the distance in time or space may not be a curtain for him. He may come to know the things. Divine manifestation is where knowledge concerning sulook or concerning attributes and qualities of Allah may be manifested.

Second is inspiration. Some knowledge may be revealed on the heart of sufi, or hear some voice. There is "Tasawwuf" or influencing. Influencing means affecting the hidden of the Mureed by which he is attracted to Allah. Influencing also occurs by courage in prayer in worldly things. There are many stories from saints in there.

(d) Manifestation and Inspiration. Manifestation and Inspiration give knowledge with hesitation. If it is according to Shari'ah it is acceptable, otherwise will be disearded. Some companions said Azan (call to prayer) in their dream. The prophet accepted it and it was carried. The companions were hesitant in washing the prophet whether to take off the clothes and, a sleep came on them and they all heard a voice saying wash him with dress on, and it was carried on.

If there is difference in manifestation, then the latter one will be accepted of the same person.

If they are of two persons, then one of more intelligent person will be accepted. If both are intelligent then one whose manifastation is often according to Shari'ah will be accepted. If they are both equal then who is more pious his will be accepted. If both are equal then follow your hearts desire. If a kashf is opposed to a group of them, then follow the group. But if he alone is the best person, then follow him.

(e) Miracles. Miracles are not essential for sainthood. Some companions did not show a miracle all their life even though they are greater then all saints. Greatness lies in closeness to Allah and sincerity of worship. Hindu jogis show unusual things (miracles). This is a result of struggle. It is lesser in rank to Zikr of heart.

It is a miracle if saints to be steadfast on shari'ah and quest manifestation in finding out the ability of the mureed and train him accordingly.

Shaikh Akbar Rah. wrote that some saints wished on their death bed that they would have not shown any miracle. Then how would you knows he is a saint. Sainthood is a secret thing, why know it. If you want to benefit from their company then sit a few days and notice the change in your heart. You will know he is influencial.

(f) Search for a preceptor and number. It is essential to acquire hidden perfection and for that a preceptor is needed as is the habit of Allah without whom this way is not travelled. It is therefore, essential to find a "Pir" or preceptor. Meet different saints, do not hurry in :Bait"(or pledge) and do not reject quickly. Look if they are steadfast in Shari'ah. If not steadfast leave him even if he shows miracles.

Allah says in Quran: Don't listen to him O Mohammed (Sal-am) to any sinner or kafir. And don't listen to him whose heart has negligence and his work has crossed the limits. If he is steadfast on Shari'ah, he is a saint alright but you need training and perfection. Don't do Bait just now. Look for the effect on your heart : increase in Allah's love, and decrease in sins and worldly love. These are the signs of saints in Hadith : when you see them you remember Allah.

You may recognise this right away, so ask an intelligent, truthful "mureed" about the Shaikh. Allah syas in Quran :

The prophet (sal-am) said cure for sickness and ignorance is asking others. If several people give good witness then he is worth considering. After satisfaction, be a mureed and follows him.

If after a long time there is no gain, go somewhere else. The object is Allah and not Shaikh. But don't talk ill of the Shaikh. May be he is a perfect Shaikh and your share is not there. Similarly if the shaikh dies before your completion or you have no hope of seeing him, then go somewhere else. To benefit from tomb is not enough. You can not have training from tomb. Although a related person feels something in his events. There are thousands of tombs of saints and even prophets, no one should have done "Bait " for training and education.

(g) Bait (pledge). Don't do Bait more than one place. This removes the blessing and shaikh is disheartened. The relationship way disappear. He may earn a bad name.

(h) Love for Shaikh. If you feel some improvement in your heart, then consider the shaikh worth while. Follow him. Obey him. Please him. Don't do anything he does not like as think block the relationship read the surah Hojorat (Apartments) in Quran, the first few verses about the prophet (sal-am) : 1. O you who believe! do not be forward in the presernce of Allah and His messenger, and fear Allah. Verily Allah is hearing, knowing. 2. O You who believe! do not raise you voice above the voice of the prophet, nor shout loud to him in discourse, as you do to one another, lest you works ,may be rendered fruitless, which you perceive not. A shaikh is the follower of the prophet. Learn these etiquittes for him also.

(i) Best for Me. Consider your Shaikh as best for you. Allah says in Quran :

there is somone greater then a knowledgeable person. Believe that in my search I can not find a better person for me as explained by Hadhrat Haji Imdadullah Sahab Rah. (the shaikh of Moulana Thanwi).

(j) Shaikh not innocent. If by chance shaikh does something objectionable remember the story of Hadhrat Musa (Moses) and Khidhr A.S. and think about it. Either think of a re-interpretaion or that saints are not innocent. But if somebody has make a habit of sin, then leave him. He is not a saint.

(k) Shaikh not knower of the Unseen. Don't insult the saints and also don't elevate them higher then or equal to Allah or His prophet (sal-am) for instance to call them "Alimul-ghaib" knower of the unseen is kufr (paganism).

قَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰى لَا يَعْلَمُ مَنْ فِي السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْاَرْضِ
الْغَيْبَ اِلَّا اللّٰهُ وَقُلْ لَّآ اَقُوْلُ لَكُمْ عِنْدِيْ خَزَآئِنُ اللّٰهِ وَلَآ اَعْلَمُ الْغَيْبَ وَ لَا
يُحِيْطُوْنَ بِشَيْءٍ مِّنْ عِلْمِهٖ اِلَّا بِمَا شَآءَ

Allah says in Quran : Nobody knows of what is in the heavens and earth of the unseen except Allah; Say O Mohammed (sal-am) I do not say I have treasures of Allah nor I know the unseen; and people can not surround a little bit of knowledge except what Allah wishes. It is Kufr to consider saints capable of giving anything or taking away anything or giving children or sustenence or take from Allah by force.

قَالَ اللّٰهُ تَعَالٰى قُلْ لَّآ اَمْلِكُ لِنَفْسِيْ نَفْعًا وَّلَا ضَرًّا اِلَّا مَا شَآءَ اللّٰهُ

These are Kufr and shirk and some ways of sin and Bid'ah : offer salah to them (saints), doing prostration to their tombs and going round it (as to Kabah).

Allah says in Quran :

اَلدُّعَآءُ هُوَ الْعِبَادَةُ ثُمَّ تَلَا

We worship you and ask You for help. Going round the kabah in circles in worship like Salah.

Allah says in Quran : Ask me I will grant it. those who are proud to worship will enter Hell disgraced. Who you call besides Allah are servants like you.

(l) Shaikh (Saint) not prophet. A saint can not reach the rank of a prophet nor can worship be waived but it is more emphasized. But "Majzoob" (mad man) is excepted. Shaikh is not innocent nor can he reach the rank of a companion.

Allah says in Quran : You are best of Ummah. The prophet (sal-am) said the best period of Islam is my time. All agree on it. All the companions are just. According to Abdullah bi Mubarak (who was a "Tabei") the dust that went into the nostrils of Hadhrat Maavia Rad. horse is better than Hadhrat Owais Qarni Rah. and Hadhrat Omar bin Abdul Aziz Marvani.

(m) Tomb of Shaikh. All these are prohibited : To build high tombs, with dome on them, to have fare (Urs), lightning the tombs, to prostrate(do Sajdah) to any dead (or alive).

However, it is good to visit the tomb, do "Isale Thawab" or send blessings to them and for a man of relationship to obtain blessings from them.

(n) Shaikh Should Progress. A Shaikh should make progress should not claim to be perfect; should thank Allah for the blessings; should not be greedy or progressing the Tariqah; should be kind to Mureeds; forgive their mistakes; should not remove them in exchange for worldly people; should not ask " mureeds" to give him money; should be patient on troubles from people; like seriously; should not prefer one Mureed or another (disciple) except on piety; do not do such things as people may be disappointed or distressed (from Irshadut Talebeen bv Qazi Thanaullah

رَّبِّ زِدْنِیْ عِلْمًا دعویٰ کمال کا نہ کرے ہاں اظہار نعمت میں مضائقہ نہیں۔ قَالَ اللّٰہُ تَعَالٰی لَا تُزَکُّوْا اَنْفُسَکُمْ وقال اللہ تعالیٰ وَاَمَّا بِنِعْمَۃِ رَبِّکَ فَحَدِّثْ اور انشاء طریقہ پر جرلیس ہے۔ قال اللہ تعالیٰ حَرِیْصٌ عَلَیْکُمْ مریدوں کے ساتھ شفقت و محبت سے رہے۔ قال اللہ تعالیٰ بِالْمُؤْمِنِیْنَ رَءُوْفٌ رَّحِیْمٌ ان کی خطا قصور سے درگذرے قال اللہ تعالیٰ وَلَوْ کُنْتَ فَظًّا غَلِیْظَ الْقَلْبِ لَانْفَضُّوْا مِنْ حَوْلِکَ فاعف عنھم دنیاداروں کی خاطر سے ان کو علیحدہ نہ کرے۔ قال اللہ تعالیٰ لَا تَطْرُدِ الَّذِیْنَ یَدْعُوْنَ رَبَّھُمْ الی قولہ فَتَکُوْنَ مِنَ الظّٰلِمِیْنَ اور مریدوں سے متوقع دنیا و طالب نفع دنیوی کا نہ ہو۔ قال اللہ تعالیٰ تُرِیْدُوْنَ زِیْنَۃَ الْحَیٰوۃِ الدُّنْیَا وَقَالَ لَا اَسْئَلُکُمْ عَلَیْہِ اَجْرًا

(o) Imagining Shaikh. It is also called "Barzakh" "Rabita " and "Wasita". This does not mean that God is in the shape of the Shaikh. This is totally wrong. If you are mistaken by this Hadith. Allah created Adam on His qualities. Mouth nose is not only shape but shape is also quality. Human being are given hearing, sight, etc. so they are created on the shape or quality of Allah. This much is written in books of Tasawwuf. If you imagine shaikh a lot you would love him. This thought removes other thoughts and gives peace of mind. (Hadhrat Shah Kalimullah Rah. in Kashkol). It is good for the specialist but very harmful for the general public. Don't consider Shaikh present all the times or helping him all the times sometimes the shape appears before your face, sometimes it is someone from the unseen; the shaikh does not know it even Hadhrat Imam Ghazzali has prohibited it and such "Ashghal" which have manifestation.

(p) Ladies Bait. Don't take ladies hands in your hand. This is Haram. The prophet (sal-am) never did so. Let them hold a piece of cloth.

چند چیز موجود شود سماع آنگاه شنود. آں چیست مسمع است و مسموع و متسمع و آلہ سماع
ست فرمودند مسمع گوینده است می باید کہ مرد تمام باشد و کودک و عورت نباشد اما مسموع
آنچہ می گوید باید کہ ہزل و فحش نباشد و اما متسمع آنکہ می شنود باید کہ می شنود و مملو باشد از یاد حق و
اما آلہ سماع و آں مزامیر است چوں چنگ و رباب و مثل آں باید کہ در میان نباشد ایں چنیں سماع
حلال ست

Sama' activates the present situation in the person and if it is other than. Allah then that is activated in most people who go there. If love other than Allah is Haram then what do you speak of its source.

(r) Absorption (Istighraq). During absorption there is no progress in action and he gets lost. keep on acting, keep on progressing. This is best (Khajah Obaidullah Ahrar Rah.).

(s) Apparest Meaning of Quran and Hadith is valid. Don't speak against shaikh without situation and be kafir (Gulshan Raz).

(t) Statement under Intoxiation to be Rejected. Keep quite if a Sufi under intoxication says something objectionable. Don't follow him. Do object if public is going to get astray. Show him the mistake then.

(u) Apparent and Hidden Meanings of Quran and Hadith. It is kufr to deny the apparent meaning of Quran and Hadith. To accept the apparent and go towards the hidden is the right thing. For instance, in Hadith it is mentioned where thee is dog angels don't go. Apparent people said day is prohibited (but they kept the dog-like qualities in their heart). They have faith and will eventually go to paradise. Hidden people said this dog as alright, keep it. They said house is heart, dog is dog-like virtues, angels means heavenly enlightenment. They became kafir by rejecting Shaikh.

Those who are moderate, on the right path, said when dog is prohibited in the house, how can dog-like qualities will be allowed in the heart, this is right path

(v) Curtains. People of manifestation say that there are in lack pleasentry or anecedote 10,000 curtains dark and light each. There are 7 anecdotes, this 70,000 curtains. Zikr removes darkness and the light of ancecdote becomes visible to the salik. This is the sign of those curtains being lifted. For instance the curtain of self is lust, the curtain of heart is to pay attention to other than Allah, and curtain of intellect is to think in the meaning of philosophy, etc.

(w) Salik and Curtains. In Fawaidul Fuad it is written: "saliks" are who walks the way, "waqif" or stationary is one who stops in the middle, when salik is lazy in worship and he repents right away and does worship again he becomes salik again. But if he continues in negligiance then he is, I am afraid, going to be an "rajeh: or returner. There are 7 stages of a mistake : first is in differnce, if not repented it becomes a curtain, if still (insisted becomes a distance, if still went the wrong way then worship is withdrawn; further more of this "salbe qadeem" is satisfaction, and then in the end is enmity (from love). Inna lillah!

VIII Correction of Mistakes.

The important ones are described below.

اس غلطی کی اصلاح کہ فقیری میں اتباع شریعت کی ضرورت نہیں فتوحات میں ہے کُلُّ حَقِیْقَۃٍ عَلٰی خِلَافِ الشَّرِیْعَۃِ زَنْدَقَۃٌ بَاطِلَۃٌ اور اسی میں ہے مَا لَنَا طَرِیْقٌ اِلَی اللّٰہِ اِلَّا عَلَی الْوَجْہِ الْمَشْرُوْعِ لَا طَرِیْقَ لَنَا اِلَی اللّٰہِ اِلَّا الْاِتِّبَاعُ اسی میں ہے فَمَنْ قَالَ اِنَّ ثَمَّ طَرِیْقًا اِلَی اللّٰہِ خِلَافَ مَا شَرَعَ فَقَوْلُہٗ رُدَّ وَلَا یُقْتَدٰی بِشَیْخٍ لَا اَدَبَ لَہٗ حضرت بایزید فرماتے ہیں لَوْ نَظَرْتُمْ اِلٰی رَجُلٍ اُعْطِیَ مِنَ الْکَرَامَاتِ حَتّٰی یَرْتَقِیَ فِی الْھَوَاءِ فَلَا تَغْتَرُّوْا بِہٖ حَتّٰی تَنْظُرُوْا کَیْفَ تَجِدُوْنَہٗ عِنْدَ الْاَمْرِ وَالنَّھْیِ وَحِفْظِ الْحُدُوْدِ وَاَدَاءِ الشَّرِیْعَۃِ ۔ حضرت جنید فرماتے ہیں اَلطُّرُقُ کُلُّھَا مَسْدُوْدَۃٌ عَلَی الْخَلْقِ اِلَّا عَلٰی مَنِ اقْتَفٰی اَثَرَ رَسُوْلِ اللّٰہِ صَلَّی اللّٰہُ عَلَیْہِ وَسَلَّمَ اور فتوحات میں ہے ۔ فَمَا عِنْدَ اللّٰہِ مَنْ لَمْ یَتَعَلَّمْ بِحُکْمِ مَکَانٍ فَاِنَّ اللّٰہَ مَا اتَّخَذَ وَلِیًّا جَاھِلًا قِیْلَ اَنَّ الْاِبْطَالَ مَعَ الْعِلْمِ خَیْرٌ مِّنَ الْعَمَلِ مَعَ الْجَھْلِ.

Statement are from futoohat, Hadhrat Ba Yazeed Rah, Hadhrat Junaid Rah., Qashirya from Hadhrat Zun Noon Masri Rah., Hadhrat Siri Saqti Rah.,Hadhrat Abu Sulaiman Rah. Hadhrat Ahmed bin Abul Hawaris Rah., Hadhrat Abu Hafas Haddad Rah., Hadhrat Abu Uthnam Rah., Hadhrat Noori Rah., Hadrath Abu Saeed Khazzaz Rah., Daleelul Arefeen, Malfoozat Khaja Moinuddin Chishti Rah., Maktoobate Quddoosia by Hadhrat Qutbul Alam Abdul Quddoos Gangohi Rah, and Quwatul Qulobs by Abu Talib Makki, etc. These prove that in sufism (Tasawwuf) first you need the knowledge of shariah, then act according to it. The door does not open without it. No body can be a saint (Wali) by opposing the prophet by being an innovator. When this is the result with innovation (Bid'ah) what to talk about kufr and shirk. Ignorant people call knowledge the greatest certain (Hijabe Akbar) and action (freedom from action). This is wrong. Let me explain to you.

Hijabe-Akbar is the last curtain between you and the king. When you reach, this curtain, all the other curtain have been removed. After you cross this last curtain you will see the king. One who has not even acquired the knowledge is behind many many curtains. So acquired knowledge from books (such as Bahishti Zewar, English edition by Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanwi, Saroha and M. Abdullah) or from Ulema to come up to the last curtain. Let's take freedom. Freedom means escape from lust (not Allah's commandments).

گر تو خواہی حریٔ و دل زندگی — بندگی کن بندگی کن بندگی
زندگی مقصود و بہر بندگی ست — زندگی بے بندگی شرمندگی ست
جز خضوع و بندگی و افتقار — اندریں حضرت ندارد اعتبار
ہر کہ اندر عشق یابد زندگی — کفر باشد پیش او جز بندگی
ذوق یابد تا بداند طاعات پر — مغز یابد تا بداند دانۂ شجر

You are mistaken if youn think shari'ah is opposed to Haqiqah. Shariah is not Haqiqah but is not opposed to it. There are various laws. One thing illegal in one law does not become legal in other law. Imam Ghazali Rah. has said why keep Haqiqah secret". This is because they are not opposed to shari'ah but because they are difficult not conceivable by ordinary people and are harmful to them. Second (to be kept secret) are ways of teaching of sulook, if made public will bring disrespect and greed of Salik (Talib). Third thing (to be kept secret) are the resuts of struggle and manifestations or this will produce claim and show. They are not secret because they are opposed to shariah but if so they will be rejected. In summary, you meet Allah by the knowledge of Shari'ah and Sunnah. If any saint said otherwise he was intoxicated. May be he made a mistake and is forgiven or the stories are wrongly narrated. But ordinary people joke with it, oppose it, so that this is Kufr. This means don't do anything against shari'ah as like: going round the tombs in circles, prostration before Shaikh. Follow a shaikh as long he follows Shariah,, otherwise leave him. Hadhrat Noovi Rah. says one who speaks contrary to shari'ah in closeness, get away from him.

(34) Intermingling of Sexes is Harmful.

There is a story in Jawahire Ghaibi, a person was doing Tawaf(going round the circles to Kabah) and saying O Allah I seek refuge from You to You. On asking he told his story. Once he looked with lust to a beautiful boy and was slapped from the unseen and lost his eyes. Hadhrat Yusuf bin Husain Rah. says I saw the troubles of sufis in mixing with the boys and women. Shaikh Wasti Rah. says when Allah wants to disgrace someone throws him in dirty roads meaning boys. Hadhrat Muzaffar Qarminsi Rah. says being kind is good but with woman it is bad. People said to Hadhrat Shaikh Naseerabadi that we sit with ladies and our intentaion are good. He said as long as this body is there he is talking to her is Haram. Some ignorant people consider it a source of Allah's love. If so the protitutes were Auliya (saints). It is not ture that love of a woman is source of Allah's love, but be that woman your wife.

(a) Shaikh not Allah. It is wrong and has been discussed earlier in this book.

(b) Paradise and Hell Present. Anybody who doubts that goes against Quran clearly.

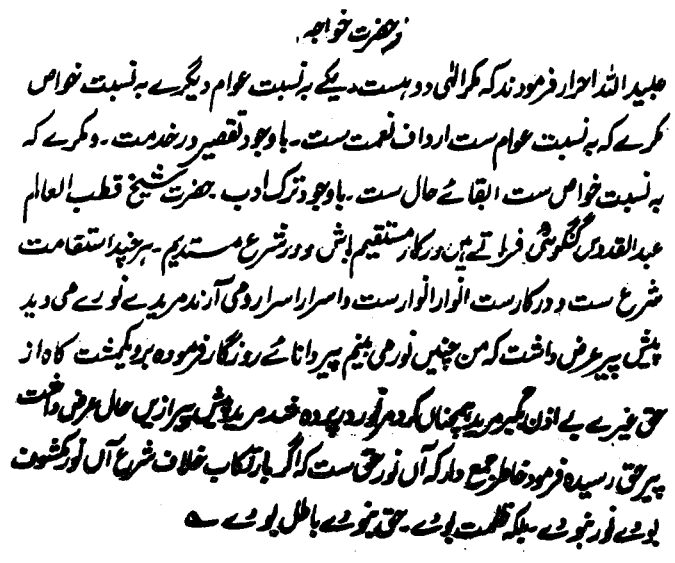
(c) Quran not Prophet's (sal-am) words. If Quran was Hadhrat Mohammed's (sal-am) words what does this verse mean this book which we have revealed towards you. Who is saying that (Allah)? Whom is He saying that (Mohammed)? Not only faith is gone but intellect is also gone.

(d) Protection of Tongue. Don't say anything that comes to your head. Think if it is the right manners (etiquette). You could become a kafir(atheist) by that.

بے ادب را اندریں رہ بار نیست — جائے او بر دار شد در دار نیست
از خدا جو میم توفیقِ ادب — بے ادب محروم ماند از فضلِ رب
بے ادب تنہا نہ خود را داشت بد — بلکہ آتش در ہمہ آفاق زد
ہر کہ گستاخی کند اندر طریق — باشد او در لجۂ حسرت غریق
ہر کہ گستاخی کند در راہ دوست — رہزنِ مردان شد و نامرد اوست
بد گستاخی کسوفِ آفتاب — شد عزازیلے ز جرأت رو بباب

There is no restriction in "Wahdatul Wajood." Sometimes called Allah a creature, sometimes called a creature of Allah. God forbid.

There is also no protection of stomach. They accept meal from there who take interest, from prostitutes and the like, and who accept money from them. This is all big sin.



(e) Rules of Shari'ah not waived. There is a mistake in the belief that at some stage in Sufism rules of Shari'ah are waived. This is Kufr. As long as you are aware they are never forgiven, although in unconciousness you are excused. Hadhrat Ibrahim bin Shaiban Rah. says: The knowledge of Tasawwuf depends upon unity of Allah, sincerity and correct attitude of servitude. All other than this is deceit and irreligiousness.

Hadhrat Junaid Rah. was told some people say we have reached the end why now bother about rules of Shari'ah. He said yes, they have reached the end of Hell. And he said a thing, an adulterer is better then someone with this belief. And he said if I live thousnad years I will not leave my Zikr recital.

(f) Boasting and Insulting Others. Another mistake that some people do is to boast and insult othres, Allah says

But if you say some thing as a gift from Allah and not your attribute, then it is alright. Allah says in Quran:

Some say my "Nisbat" (relationship) is so strong that sins don't change them. Some say we stare boys and prostitutes and this increases our relationship. Remember, this is Shaitan's relationship and this increase is called "istidraj" or "makr" . Such a person can never come on the right path.

(g) Authorities of Hadith. They are Ulema Shaikhul Hadith. It is not right to look the meaning in Urdu or Persian and start arguing. Among such false Hadith is

There is no word or meaning in authorities Hadith, there is a warning by the Prophet(sal-am) one who lies on me intentionally may make his abode the fire of Hell.

Another lie is that the prophet (sal-am) brought several thousand statements of Tasawwuf on Meraj night and told them to Hadhrat Ali Rad. How do you know that several thousand statements of Tasawwuuf given on Meraj night? There was so secrecy that angels did not know it. How did the claimant know it? The second lie is that it was told to Hadhrat Ali Rah. secretly. somebody asked Hadhrat Ali Rah. if the prophet (sal-am) told him some special things. He said no but the understanding of Quran which Allah bestows to people. This understanding came to him from the prophet (sal-am) and this has been transferred to date (from chest to chest). This is the meaning of Tasawwuf coming from chest to chest. This does not mean that the prophet (sal-am) said something secretly to Ali and it is being transferred now.

It is like this. A person may say that Hatim was very generous. It is written in the books. But I have information from chest to chest that he was a miser. Don't tell this to Mullahs, they will oppose you. You can bring anything chest to chest and there will be no authenticity.

The third lie is that only Hadhrat Ali Rah. was selected to know them, when the virtues of the best person after the prophets, Hadhrat Abu Bakr Rah. was ignored. How can this happen?

(h) Allah's vision not in this world . Another mistakes is that some people believe that Allah's vision will be on this earth (as in the paradise). In Quran in the story of Hadrat Musa A.S. when he wished to see Allah, the reply was you will never see Allah before death. Another Hadith in Muslim says His curtain is light. If He lifted it, it will burn every thing (all creations). After Quran and Hadith what is that thing they will believe? You can see Allah in dreams (in sleep).
(You can't see now). There is a Hadith

(i) Caution. There is a spiritual lighting. Sometimes a "salik" mistakes it for Allah and goes astray. A shaikh is needed to help you out.

(35) Some Clarification.

Some saints have used the word "Tajallie Zati." Let not be deceived by that. It means that " salik" is so absorbed in his attentions towards Allah that he does not notice anything else, not even His attributes. This is not seeing Allah. There is a difference between "tajalli" and sight. Tajalli means appearance. This is an attribute of Allah. Sight, is an attributed of the creature(man) and is not the same thing as appearance. Allah can appear but man cannot see Him. In the story of Hadhrat Musa A.S. negates seeing of Allah and is appearance.

We will see Allah in the Hereafter.

Another mistake is to consider Hadhrat Mohammed (salam) in his body as Allah. This is kufr (atheism). This creates thousands of mistakes. Whatever comes in your imagination, Allah is above that. Our senses and intellect can not reach Him.

كُلُّ مَا تَوَهَّمَهُ قَلْبُكَ اَوْسَرَّحَ فِي بِحَارِ فِكْرِكَ اَوْخَطَرَ
فِي مَعَارِضَاتِ قَلْبِكَ مِنْ حُسْنٍ اَوْبَهَاءٍ اَوْاُنْسٍ اَوْجَمَالٍ اَوْضِيَاءٍ اَوْشَيْخٍ اَوْنُوْرٍ اَوْ
شَخْصٍ اَوْخَيَالٍ فَاللّٰهُ تَعَالٰى بَعِيْدٌ مِّنْ ذٰلِكَ اَلَا تَسْمَعُ اِلٰى قَوْلِهٖ تَعَالٰى لَيْسَ
كَمِثْلِهٖ شَيْءٌ وَّهُوَ السَّمِيْعُ الْبَصِيْرُ۔

IX. Mistakes of Tariqah.

(a) Opposing Sunnah. It is a big sin, contrary to Tasawwuf. These days customs and insolvation are common and Tasawwuf is also a name of customs.

قَالَ رَسُوْلُ اللّٰهِ صَلَّى اللّٰهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ يُوْشِكُ اَنْ
يَّاْتِيَ عَلَى النَّاسِ زَمَانٌ لَا يَبْقٰى مِنَ الْاِسْلَامِ اِلَّا اِسْمُهٗ وَلَا يَبْقٰى مِنَ الْقُرْاٰنِ اِلَّا رَسْمُهٗ۔
رواہ البیہقی فی شعب الایمان۔

People are following customs, they even don't know the meaning of the technical terms of Tasawwuf. Shah Waliullah Rah. says :

صوفیہ غنیمتے ست کہ ریٰی و رسوم ایشاں ہیچ نمی ارزد۔

(b) Leave Ignorant Shaikh. One mistake is that you did "Bait" with a non observant of Shari'ah preceptor and kept on it for the rest of your life. When he is not perfect how would he perfect others. Hadhrat Bandarah Rah. says : company of innovators equals turning away from Allah.

صحبۃ اہل البدع تورث الامراض من الکبر

It is difficult to have faith with an ignorant sinner. But it is the rule that you need a perfect Shaikh , one who is master of the apparent and hidden. This does not mean a non-observant of Shariah preceptor but an ordinary shaikh who will be sufficient with my belief.

(c) Don't be Intimate with Boys. Don't watch woman and boys, don't sit with them, don't mix with them. This has been described above.

A saint was going with his Shaikh when he saw a handsome boy and asked his Shaikh, will Allah punish this face. The Shaikh said you have seen this boy, you will be punished. He said after 20 years I forgot my Quran. Mixing wih woman throws you miles away from Allah.

(d) Control you Tongue. It is a big mistake not to control your tongue to make false claims, claim on monotheism, insulting Allah and His Shariah. These have been described above.

(e) Going to Extremes in Struggle (Mujahidah). Don't struggle more than what Shaikh has advised you, You will soon be fed up and leave struggle altogether. This has happened to many people.

قَالَ رَسُوْلُ اللّٰهِ صَلَّى اللّٰهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ خُذُوْا مِنَ الْاَعْمَالِ مَا تُطِيْقُوْنَ فَاِنَّ اللّٰهَ لَا
يَمَلُّ حَتّٰى تَمَلُّوْا (رواہ الضیاء)

(f) Don't Rush in Results. Don't say that so many days have been since I was struggling but with no results. The result is either he loves faith with the Shaikh or leaves the struggle. Let Him understand that it takes time, once he was a baby then with time he grew up a man, once he was ignorant then with time he became knowledgeable. Read the following Persian poem if you feel worried.

قرنہا باید کہ تا یک کودکے از لطف طبع — عاقلے کامل شود یا فاضلے صاحب سخن
سالہا باید کہ تا یک سنگ اصلی زآفتاب — لعل گردد در بدخشاں یا عقیق اندر یمن
مانا باید کہ تا یک مشت پشم از پشت میش — صوفی را خرقہ گردد یا حمایے راد سن
ہفتہا باید کہ تا یک پنبہ از آب و گل — شاہدے را حلہ گردد یا شہیدے را کفن
بدونہا باید کشیدن انتظار بے شمار — تا کہ در جوف صدف باران شود در عدن

(g) Don't displease the Shaikh. Don't be angry with or enemy of your Shaikh. There is a Hadith : One who is an enemy of my Wali (friend), I declare war upon him.

مَنْ عَادٰی لِیْ وَلِیًّا فَقَدْ اٰذَنْتُہٗ بِالْحَرْبِ۔

X. Wills of Saints.

(36) Imam Qaishiry Rah.

First of all have the beliefs according to Ahle Sunnat wal Jama'at (see English Bashishti Zewar, Dini Book Depot, Delhi-6, India), Then learn the practices as the need be by learning or company of Ulema. In controversial matters follow caution. Repent from sins, and please those who have rights upon you. Break off relations of wealth and position. Don't oppose your Shaikh nor object to him. Don't hide from Shaikh your hidden circumstances. If opposed Shaikh, apologize promptly. Don't travel without need. Don't laugh too much. Don't quarell with anyone. Don't be jealous of your colleagues. Stay away from woman and children, don't talk freely with them. Without completion of your relation- ship, do not do Bait to anyone else. Follow the Shari'ah thoroughly. Don't be lazy in struggle and worship. Be alone. When in crowd leave them. Consider yourself less than them. Stay away from the company of worldy people.

(37) Shah Waliullah Sahib Rah.

Don't sit in the company of rich (unless necessary). Stay away from : ignorant Sufis, Ulema opposed to Tasawwuf, Muhaddith opposed to Fuqaha, Philosophers. Sit with a person who is learned and Sufi. He should be leaver of the world, lover of Zikrullah and Sunnah, neutral in Mazahib (Hanafi, Shafiie etc.) and Sufi orders. Should not say chishtiyyah are powerful and strong, naqshbandiyyah follow Sunnah, etc. Ignore the intoxicated people. Don't talk evil of them. Yourself do what the shari'ah says.

(38) Haji Imdadullah Sahib Rah.

First have the beliefs of Ahle sunnat wal Jama'at. Cure these views: greed, anger, lies, back, biting, misery, jealousy, show, pride, malice. Develop these good manners : patience, thankfulness, contentment, knowledge, certainty, trust, pleasure etc. Observe Shari'ah Repent from sin and do good deeds. Pray with Jama'at on time. Remember Allah all the time. Thank Allah on Zikr. Don't ask for manifestation and miracles. Don't tell his secrets to unqualified people. Remove the world from his heart. Stay away from the company of opposed to Shari'ah Sufis. Meet people, when needed, nicely. Consider himself inferior most. Don't worry, whatever happens is from Allah. Help in religious works. Have noble intention. Eat and drink with moderation. Earning livelihood is better but if you trust don't trust on human being. Don't hope or fear anyone. Thank Allah on his blessings. Don't get disheartened in starvation. Be kind to his colleagues. Keep forgiving him and accepting their a pologies. Don't backbite. Consider your weakness in front of you. Don't argue. Be a host and help the travellar. Be in the company of poor, Ulema and good people. Be content. Laugh less, cry a lot. Fear Allah's punishment. Be mindful of death all the time. Keep examining your deeds everyday. Thank for good deeds and repent for bad deeds. Don't go in anti religious meetings. Avoid the customs if ignorants, Visit the tombs of saints and general Muslim. Respect the Shaikh. Always pray for steadfastness.

(39) The will and Advise of Mujaddid Thanwi Rah.

(a) I ask my friends in particular and the general Muslim public in general emphatically that learning and teaching of religious knowledge is obligatory on each one of them and teaching this to them children. There is no way in escaping from the wordly troubles which are plenty. Do not waste this time.

(b) I ask the students not to be proud of learning and teaching. Its usefulness depends on the company of saints and shaikh. Hold them fast.

(c) Stay away form, the following: Do not follow anger and excessive sex. Do not rush things. Do not do anything without consultation: Do not backbite. Do not talk too much. Do not meet too many people, especially if you make them your secret bearers; this is dangerous. Do not eat too much. Do not take loan without great necessity. Do not be extravagent. Do not pile up unnecessary goods. Do not go to extremes in statements, actions, food and dress. Do not be rude to rich people and do not mix too much with them. Do not eat medicine without Doctor's advice. Save your tongue from useless things and sins. Do not interfere in any body's worldly affairs.

(d) Read surah Yaseen or Qul Huallaho Ahad 3 times every day for me but do not do any Bid'at.

(e) Do not attach themselves to the world. Do not be unaware of the hereafter. Be prepared for death anytime. Repent from morning sins in the night and night sins in the day. Fulfill the peoples duties,(see English Bahashti Zewar).

(f) Death on Islam is the best blessing. Pray for it after everday 5 prayers. Thank Allah for the available faith. Lain shakartum la-azidannakum! this is a good promise of good death.

(g) May Allah be with them who translate the Mujaddids Books from Urdu to English and Arabic as is much needed now. Amen. wa sallallah alan nabiyy.

XI. Shajarah

It is a good thing to read and to have the family tree (Shajrah) of your preceptor or Shaikh. This helps to develop a special relationship, affection and love for the preceptors of Tariqah and the holy Prophet (sal-am). INTRODUCTION

بِسمِ اللهِ الرَّحمٰنِ الرَّحِيمِ ط

الحمد لله الذى ضرب الله مثلًا كلمةً طيّبة كشجرة طيّبة اصلها ثابت و فرعها فى السماء تؤتى اكلها كل حينٍ باذن ربها ويضرب الله الامثال للناس لعلهم يتذكرون ـ والصلوٰة والسلام علٰى رسولهٖ وخليلهٖ وحبيبهٖ محمد الذى جعل الايمان بضعا وسبعين شعبة فافضلها قول لا اله الا الله وادناها اماطة الاذٰى عن الطريق والحياء شعبة من الايمان متفق عليه ورحمة الله وبركاته علٰى عباده العلماء الصالحين الذين استنبطوا هٰذه الشعب من الكتاب و السنة وعينوا لعامة الامة جعلنا الله تعالٰى من يقتحم هٰذه الشعاب ويدخل تلك الابواب ورزقنا عنده حسن مآب ويسرلنا فى يوم الحساب ـ

Know that from the above cited Ayat of Qur'an, a general inference is drawn that Iman has some Usul (basic principles) and some (farough) branches and in the above mentioned Hadith there number has also been fixed, some over seventy. In order to specify them and describe them in detail, they have been classified into three groups:-

(i) Inferior
(ii) Medium and
(iii) Superior,

so that research scholars (of Islam) Ulema-e-Mustambiteen and Mustakhrijeen could derive the remaining groups by their Allah given capability and tell the same to others. Ulema like Muhadditheen and Muhaqiqueen have assembled these all groups after having a deep thought in Qur'an and Hadith. They have written many books on this topic. May Allah give them better reward.

For quite some time I wanted to write these all branches of Iman in easy urdu language for the information of Muslim brothers of this country so that they will come to know that the Iman, which they are claiming, has so many branches and will try to think that out of these, how many things they are not having, so that they can assess the inadequacy or perfection in their Iman and will also try to achieve those things which they find lacking in their Iman and will also feel ashamed of claiming to have perfect Iman unless they achieve all these things. Though one gets inferior degree of Iman by only believing in the basic principles of Deen but that Iman is as good as a lame, blind, deaf, dumb and disabled person is called a man, every one knows that, of what use is such a person.

Second intention in narrating these branches of Iman is to tell the non-Muslims that the teachings of Islam are complete and perfect and Islam recognises only that person as perfect who has all these qualities of Iman. On seeing these imperfect Muslims, non-Muslims should not think that the teachings of Islam are inadequate and useless, since the purpose of Islam is to tell (the truth) not to make somebody forcibly Muslim. This is our fault and not the fault of Islam.

Brothers: be ready to listen the branches of Iman, and keep your courage strong so that you get all these things in order to become a perfect Mumin.

There are seventy-seven branches of Iman, of which thirty are related to Qalb, seven are related to tongue and other forty are related to other parts of the body. We will discuss these three types in three chapters.

Chapter----I

Thirty branches of Iman are related to Qalb

1. To believe in Allah.
2. To believe that everything other than Allah is created and Makhlooq.
3. To believe in Angels.
4. To believe in all His books.
5. To believe in all His Prophets.
6. To believe in Taqdeer (predestination).
7. To believe in the day of judgment (Al-Qiyamah).
8. To believe in Jannat.
9. To believe in Jahannam.
10. To love Allah.
11. To love somebody because of Allah and to hate somebody because of Allah.
12. To love Prophet Muhammad (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam).
13. Ikhlas (Sincerity)
14. Toaba (Repentance)
15. Khouf (Fear)
16. Rija (Hope)
17. Haya (Modesty)
18. Shukr (Gratitude, Thanks giving)
19. To fulfilll the promise.
20. Sabr (Patience)
21. Tawadhu (Humility)
22. Kindness to mankind.
23. To be happy with (Qadha-Ilahi) predestination.
24. To make Tawakkul (Trust in Allah).
25. To leave Ujub (self-conceit, vanity)
26. To leave Keena (hatred).
27. To leave Hassad (Jealousy).

28. To leave Anger.
29. To leave evil-wishing
30. To leave love of the world.

Now we will mention the excellence (Fadeelat) and some description of each of the above mentioned things in brief in different sections.

Section--I

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said,

> "Iman means to believe in Allah, His all angels,His all Prophets, His all books, the day of judgment (Aakhirch), and Taqdeer (predestination) and that all virtues and evils (are under His divine power).
> (Bukhari and Muslim)

To believe also in Jannat , Jahannum and revival after death have been, mentioned in a Hadith narrated in Muslim-Shareef (A famous book of Ahadith), in addition to the above things.

In another Hadith quoted in Tirmizi (Another famous book of Ahadith) it is narrated that:

> None can become a Mumin (one who has Iman) until he believes in Taqdeer in such a way that he believes without slightest doubt that whatever has to come, can never be avoided and whatever has not happened, would have never happened.

For having faith (Iman) in Allah, it is necessary to believe in His essence, His attributes and in His oneness i.e., to believe that He is one and only one.

Admonition No.1

It should be known that as Allah Ta'ala is unique and unparalleled in His essence, so is He unparalleled and unique in His attributes. Therefore, it is very dangerous to talk about His attributes by using imagination and specify their different states and causations. In this regard the Aqaids (beliefs) of majority of common Muslims are safe as they believe in the Sifaat (attributes) of Allah Ta'ala in general and do not bother to go in their finer details. Suhaba-Al-Kiram and Salf-i-Saaliheen also used to believe in the same way. Later on, when innovators [(Ahle-Bid'at) those who incorporated new things in Islam, which were not in Islam] increased in number, Scholastic philosophy (Ilm-e-Kalam) came into being. At this stage people talked more about the attributes of Allah which in turn led to carelessness in the law suits and other Ahkaam of Shari'ah.

For instance, Allah Ta'ala says in Qur'an:

اَلرَّحمٰنُ عَلَى العرشِ اسْتَوىٰ

"The most Gracious is firmly established on the throne."

Now to try to make inquiries about the word "Istawa", what is meant by it? and what are its different interpretations? Is really a job of great courage when one does not know the reality of one's own attributes, how can he know the attributes of the Creator (of all worlds).

One should, simply believe that whatever has been said [by Allah and His messenger, Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam)] is the absolute reality and that His "Istawa" will be like His essence, His existence (As His existence, essence is unique and unparalleled and impossible to appreciate in this world, as is His essence unique, so is His "Istawa" also unique, unparalleled and impossible to appreciate as it is). What is the need to make inquiries about it when it is neither our entrusted duty nor will we be asked about it. Of course, one should certainly believe that His "Istawa" will not be like our "Istawa", as Allah Ta'ala says:

لَيْسَ كمثله شئ

"There is nothing whatever like Him"

Now Question remains that how is this "Istawa", one should not argue about it. It should be left to Allah.

Similarly, In a Hadith it is narrated:

ينزل ربنا تبارك وتعالى كل ليلة إلى السمّاء الدنيا

"Our cherisher (Allah Ta'ala) descends towards the sky, which is immediately above the world, every night.

Now one will start thinking what is meant by this descent (Nazool) (as Allah Ta'ala is everywhere)' how does it take place? The purpose of Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) in informing the Ummat about this is first to make the people to get engaged in thikr and Ibadaat of Allah Ta'ala with eagerness, fervour and presence of mind during this time. One should try to do the same during this time (in which Allah Ta'ala makes a descent towards the Asman-e-Duniya), otherwise one will waste his whole life and will never be able to know the reality of these things.

نیست کس را از حقیقت آگہی

حملہ می میرند بادست تہی

No one knows this reality.

Everyone is dying without knowing it.

Allah Ta'ala says:

فاما الذين فى قلوبهم زيغ فيتبعون ما تشابه منه

ابتغاء الفتنة وابتغاء تانيله

"But those in whose hearts is perversity follow the part thereof that is not entirely clear, seeking discord and searching for its interpretation".

(3:7)

Admonition No.2

Two meanings of oneness of Allah or monotheism (Tawheed) have been proved from the legislator of law of Shari'ah i.e., Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam)

لامعبود الّا الله.

1. No one is worth worshipping except Allah.

لا مقصود الّا الله

2. No one is the purpose (of worship) except Allah .
   First meaning is quite clear.

Allah Ta'ala says in Qur'an:

يصحبى السجن ء ارباب متفرقون خيرام الله الواحد القهار

"O my companions of the prison! (I ask you): Are many lords differing among themselves better, or Allah, the One, Supreme and Irresistible?

ما تعبدون من دونه الا اسماء سمّيتموها انتم وابائكم ما انزل الله بها من سلطان ان الحكم الّا لله امر ان لا تعبدوا الّا اياه ذالك الدين القيم ولكن اكثر الناس لا يعلمون.

"What ever ye worship apart from Him is nothing but names which ye have named—ye and your fathers—for which Allah hath sent down No authority: the Command is for none but Allah: He hath commanded that ye worship none but Him: that is the right religion, but Most men understand not..

(12:40)

Allah Ta'ala says:

وما امروا الّا ليعبدو الله مخلصين له الدين حنفاء

"And they have been commanded no more than this: to worship Allah, offering Him sincere devotion, being True (in faith); to establish regular Prayer; and to practice regular Charity; and that is the Religion Right and Straight."

(98:5)

Holy Qur'an is full of such verses and this is the Tawheed, by its deficiency or loss one becomes Kafir or Mushrik (polytheist) and has to stay in hell forever. This is never forgiven.

Allah Ta'ala says:

ان الله لا يغفر ان يشرك به ويغفر ما دون ذٰلك لمن يشاء

"Allah forgiveth not (the sin of) joining other gods with Him: but He forgiveth whom He pleaseth other sins than this: one who joins other gods with Allah, hath strayed far, far away (from the right)."

The proof of the second meaning is like this that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) described hypocrisy (Riya) as Shirk-e-Asghar (Infidelity of smaller degree). It is obvious that in hypocrisy things other than Allah are not being worshipped but they are the purpose of the worship.

(For example a person is not offering Salaat regularly but when he sees somebody else, he starts offering Salaat just to impress him that he is regularly offering Salaat. This is hypocrisy-In this situation though he worships Allah in Salaat but his intention is not to please Allah but somebody else). When anything else other than Allah is made the purpose of worship, it is called Shirk, then Tawheed which is the opposite of Shirk, will mean that the worship should be done solely for the sake of Allah (only to please Allah) and there should not be slightest intention to please anybody else by one's worship. This is the meaning of

لامقصود الّا الله کے۔

"No one is the purpose of worship except Allah".

Now we quote that Hadith in which Hypocrisy has been labelled as Shirk.

It is narrated from Mehmood-Bin-Lubaid (RA) that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"Most dangerous thing, of which I am afraid about you, is Shirk-e-Asghar (smaller degree of Infidelity or polytheism). People asked as to what was Shirk-e-Asghar.

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"Hypocrisy (Riya) is the Shirk-e-Asghar."

(It has been narrated by Ahmad).

There are so many other Ahadith in this regard, quoted in Tafseer Mazhari at the end of commentry of Sura-Kahaf. We are not quoting them here.

Ikhlas (Sincerity) is lost if this second meaning of Tawheed (لاموجودالااللہ) is not achieved, on the basis of which (i.e., not having Ikhlas) one will deserve punishment but will not stay in Hell eternally.

In nutshell, we can say that Tawheed means that we should not only worship Allah but the purpose of our worship should also be only to please Allah . If we have the first thing and not the second, we are liable to be punished in Aakhirah.

UNITY OR ONENESS OF EXISTENCE OF ALLAH [WAHDAT-UL-WUJUD]

In this terminology of sofi sect, there is third meaning of Tawheed as well.

لاموجود الا الله

"No one is existing except Allah."

This is called unity of existence (Wahdat-ul-Wujud). To prove this meaning from Qur'an and Hadith is useless and wastage of time. It is sufficient to describe this in such a way that it does not contradict Qur'an and Hadith. This has become a problem these days. Since the issue is very delicate and the basis of its proof is only on Zoaq (spiritual taste) and Kashf (divine manifestation), so it is very difficult to get the proper words to express this thing and secondly whatever little or more interpretation is possible, it needs spiritual taste or Zoaq, congeniality with divine manifestation or Kashf and great depth in religious knowledge so that one can understand it.

These days one gets extremely pained to see the most of the so called claimants of Wahdat-ul-Wujud of today, They have neither knowledge nor the spiritual fervour. Their job is just vainful talk of pseudomystics without bothering to understand that these heretic and atheistic words which they are talking about will deprive one of his Iman. Neither they understand that other people who will follow them blindly will also start claiming the same, and will lose their Imaan, whatever, little they will be having, they will stop offering Salaat and observing fasts, thinking that they have become god, then what for Salaat and Saum-Allah forbid.

Unity of existence of Allah (Wahdat-ul-Wujud) never meant this, in fact it is a state understood by only those who experience it. It should neither be uttered purposely by tongue nor can other people understand it.

When this ecstasy dominates a person, his condition states:

Accommodated as you are in my eyes
Wherever I see, there only you and you.

Sometimes this state remains permanent and sometimes it vanishes, Insha Allah at some other time, we will discuss this issue in some detail,. here I stop with this sincere advice that for Allah's sake have mercy at your own life and at the Ummat-e-Muslima and do not indulge in excessive exaggerations about this issue.

To be very safe one should not believe it with certainty even after Kashf because there always remains a chance to err so far as the Kashf is concerned. One should remain busy with that thing which is needed and that is servitude. One should forget all talks with no substance.

Go on working
Forget talking!

Deeds not strength matters in mystic way
Strength does not come without deeds!

TYPES OF SHIRK
(Infidelity-Polytheism)

Shirk is of two types:

1. Shirk-fil-Aqueeda (Shirk as regards beliefs)
2. Shirk-fil-Amal (Shirk as regards deeds)

Shirk-fil-Aqueeda (Shirk in beliefs):-To think that anything other than Allah deserves worship. This is the Shirk.

AllahTa'ala says about it in the Qur'an.

إِنَّ اللهَ لَا يَغْفِرُ اَنْ يُّشْرَكَ بِهٖ وَ يَغْفِرُ مَا دُوْنَ ذٰلِكَ لِمَنْ يَّشَآءُ.

Allah forgiveth not (the sin of joining other gods with Him;) but He forgiveth whom He pleaseth other sins than this.
(4:86)

Shirk-fil-Amal (Shirk in deeds):- To deal with other things in the same way as one should deal with Allah. Most of the people particularly women are involved in this kind of Shirk. For example to take oath on the name of anything else other than Allah, to acknowledge the favour (Minnat) of somebody else other than Allah, to think that something is effective by itself (i.e., the effect produced by this thing is its own), to prostrate or to make sajda infront of somebody in his honour (Sajda-Ta'zema), to make circumabulation (Tawwaf) around anything or some grave thinking that this will cause him to be near (and dear) to the person who is buried in that grave, to tell somebody that Allah is above and below are you. There are thousands of such examples. They are grave sins. It is obligatory for every Muslim to see an end to all these things in his home.

Allah Ta'ala says in the Qur'an:

يَا اَيُّهَا الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْا قُوْٓا اَنْفُسَكُمْ وَ اَهْلِيْكُمْ نَارًا.

"O those who believe protect yourself and your family from fire (of Hell)".

TO LABEL ANGELS AS MALES OR FEMALES: Since Qur'an and Hadith has not specified any sex for Angels, whether they are male or female, so one should neither condsider them as males nor as females and leave it to the knowledge of Allah. The same thing is meant by following statement of scholastic scholars (Ahle-Kalam) لا يو صفون بذ كو رة ولا انوثة فافهم.

"They are not attributed with male or female characteristics- Thus understand".

NOT TO FIX THE NUMBER OF PROPHETS AND BOOKS: Since the exact number of Prophets is not proved by any argument (from Qur'an and Hadith), therefore, a Muslim should not believe in a fixed number, may be number is fixed up, may be less or more. Same way you should not fix up the number of divine books (which have been revealed by Allah to His Prophets), their number is also not definitely mentioned.

N.B. :-In believing in Aakhirah, following things are automatically included in this belief:

I. To believe in rewards and punishments in grave.
II. To believe in resurrection and resuscitation.
III. To believe in Pul-i-Sirat, a narrow bridge over the Hell providing the only way to Jannat.
IV. To believe in Haudh-Al-Kauthar.
V. To believe in weighing of deeds and all other such things mentioned in Qur'an and Ahadith about Qiyamah

ASCERTAINMENT ABOUT TAQDEER

The fact that the man definitely has some authority, power or option is unquestionable. It is because of this that the man feels very sorry, naturally or by constraint, on doing some odd job, otherwise his heart does not feel satisfied. A person having a tremor (a physical ailment) does not feel sorry or ashamed on his tremors, and does not apologise to others for his tremors, from this it is very much clear that the existence of authority or option (of man) is self evident truth but at the same time it is also clear that this attribute of his authority is created (Makhlooq) and every chain of all created things reaches to their Creator. Therefore, the authority of man will be compulsorily in the authority of some other thing and thus proves the state of powerlessness or helplessness or authoritylessness. So a man is neither completely helpless nor is he completely empowered or authorised having free will.

This is the summary of the issue of Taqdeer. There is no difficulty in understanding this much and we have also been ordered to know this much only about Taqdeer. More details than this were neither understandable for us nor have we been ordained to understand them. On the contrary we have been forbidden to make inquiries about the more details of this issue of Taqdeer, because great deal of knowledge both bookish as well as inspired including the fervour of divine manifestations or Kashf, is needed to understand this issue. Even after having these things, we still remain doubtful many a times. The answer to the questions which usually arise in the minds of people about this issue are given in a booklet named Jaza-ul-Amal at its end. They should be seen.

Section–II

Shaikhain have narrated from Hadhrat Anas (RA) that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"Three things are such, which if found in somebody, he will taste the sweetness of Iman viz:
Allah and His Messenger are dearest to him.
He loves anybody for the sake of Allah and he hates anybody for the sake of Allah.

And Abu Dawood and Tirmizi narrated that to love for Allah and to hate for Allah is from Iman.

LOVE WITH ALLAH AND HIS MESSENGER MORE THAN EVERY OTHER THING.

Perhaps someone may get surprised as to how is it possible to have the love of Allah and His Rasul (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) more than every other thing and even if it is possible then only three four persons in the world must be having it, which in turn means that whole world is without Imaan. Research scholars (of Islam) have answered this question differently, but I say that this wealth (of this grade of Iman) is in the possession of every muslim, even those having lowest grade of Iman. Test for it is that if the son or wife etc.,of a person [a person usually loves most (apparently) his son, wife etc.,] abuses Allah or His Messenger (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) in his presence, he will never tolerate it and will try to take revenge from them with whatever means available to him. If this person was not having love with Allah and His Messenger (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) of such grade then from where was this effervescence generated and how that love of his beloved (son, wife etc) got weakened or subdued. Thus it became clear that love of Allah and His Messenger (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) of such grade is found in every muslim. Thanks to Almighty Allah for the same.

Then question remains that why does disobedience of Allah then take place. Its reason is that this love of Allah is settled at the core of heart and it does not remain always present in mind (goes out of mind though being present in heart). When some stimulus comes, its light (Nur) spreads from top to toe. After the stumulus is gone it again remains hidden inside.

LOVE SHOULD BE ONLY FOR ALLAH

Love for Allah means that there should be no worldly motive or interest and according to Ahle-Zoaq there should not even be the motive of reward (Thawab) . Don't be surprised at this as well. You can understand it through routine dealings, you take a gift to your teacher or your Shaikh, that time your aim is neither any worldly thing nor any reward but just to please these people. According to me love for Allah with this meaning is existing (in people) in plenty, there is nothing surprising in it.

REVERENCE AND OBEDIENCE OF RASULULLAH(SALALLAHU ALAIHI WASALLAM)

Love of Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) also includes following things viz.,

1. To believe in the reverence of Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam).
2. To send Durood Sharief to Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam).
3. To follow path of Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam).

Allah Ta'ala says:

يا ايها الذين امنو الاترفعوا اصواتكم فوق صوت النبى ولا تجهروا له بالقول. الخ.

"O' ye who believe! Raise not your voices above the voice of the Prophet, nor speak aloud to him in talk".

(49:2)

In this there is a lesson for reverence. Research scholars said that the same respect is to be given to the sayings of Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) called Hadith i.e., when Hadith are being narrated one should keep his voice low.

Allah Ta'ala says:

انَّ الله و ملئكته يصلون على النبى يا ايها الذين امنو اصلوعليه و سلمو تسليما.

"And Allah Ta'ala sends blessings on the Prophet! Oh ye that believe! Send ye blessings on him and salute with respect".

(33:56)

And Allah Ta'ala says:

ما اتكم الرسول فخذوه و ما نهكم عنه فا نتهوا.

"Whatever (Allah's) Messenger gives you, take that and whatever he forbids you, leave that."

(59:7)

In this Ayat there is commandment for the obedience of Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam). Further Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said in a Hadith:

"Never can any of you attain perfect Iman until your passions become obedient to my order."

(Narrated by Asfahani in Targeeb and Tarheeb)

And Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"Hold on firmly to my path and the path of Khulfai-Raashideen with your teeth and keep your self away from every innovation (Bid'at) and every innovation is misleading"

(Tirmizi)

IKHLAS
(Sincerity in worship)

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"Three things are such that muslim's heart never hesitates in accepting them viz.,
1. Making of the deeds pure, unadulterated.
2. Obedience of the rulers.
3. Clinging to organisation (of muslims i.e., Jama'at)

(Ahmad)

TO LEAVE (RIYA) HYPOCRISY AND NIFAQ

Ibn Majah has narrated from Hadhrat Shadad-bin-Oas that Rasulul lah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"The thing which I fear most about my Ummat is to consider partner to Allah".

Remember that I don't say that they will worship either sun or moon or some idol but they will be doing some (good) deeds for the sake of Ghair-Ullah (Some other than Allah) and for hidden lusts of Nafs." In this Hadith the Tafseer of Shirk has been done by the word Hypocrisy (Riya).

N.B: The fact that hypocrisy is Shirk has been described in the section on Tawheed. It should be seen there. Nifaq means to express Islam by tongue when Kufr is hidden in the heart.

KINDS OF NIFAQ

Nifaq is of two kinds:

Nifaq as regards the belief (Nifaq-i-Aetiqadi). Its definition has been mentioned above (To express Islam by tongue when the Kufr is hidden in heart).

It is about this kind of Nifaq that following threat (Va-eed) has come.

ان المنا فقين فى الدرك الا سفل من النار.

"Indeed the Munafiq (Hypocrite) will be in the lowest depths of fire (of Hell)."

(4:145)

Second kind of Nifaq:

Nifaq-e-Amali: It means that the beliefs are correct like that of a (true) muslim but some deeds are performed which resemble the deeds of hypocrite (Munafiqs). As is narrated in Hadith from Hadhrat Abdullah bin Umru (RA) that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"There are four qualities, the person in whom all the four will be found is a complete munafiq and in whom one of these qualities will be found, this will be his one quality of Nifaq until he leaves that quality."

These four qualities are:

1. When something is entrusted to him he breaches the trust.
2. Whenever he talks, tells a lie.
3. Whenever he makes a promise, he does not fulfill it.

4. Whenever he quarrels, he starts using foul language and abuses.

(Bukhari & Muslim)

In this Hadith, Nifaq means this second kind of Nifaq-e-Amali is meant. As, when some person from a noble and honorable family does the uncivilised deeds (much) below his dignity and status) he is called a scavenger i.e., he does the deeds like those of a scavenger.

TO LEAVE THE DEEDS DUE TO THE FEAR OF RIYA (HYPOCRISY)

The catastrophies of Riya are great.One should exert much to save one's self from these calamities. But this should be remembered that this is also one of the ways of shaitan kidnapping and making one to leave the good deeds (Aamal-e-Saliha) by putting an apprehension (waswasa) in his mind that he should not do a (particular) deed otherwise he will commit the (sin of) Riya. At this time one should reply the shaitan (while taking the note of this apprehension which shaitan has put in his mind) that the Riya takes place only when our aim is to show our deeds to Makhlooq so that they become pleased and when we enjoy this idea (that people are seeing our good deeds and they are becoming pleased with us). On the contrary, our condition is such that we consider this thing bad and want to get rid of it (whether it goes or not), then how is it Riya. After saying this one should engage oneself with good deeds (Aamal-e-Saliha), one should not care even least about these apprehensions and evil suggestions (of shaitan). You will experience these apprehensions few times but then shaitan will get tired and will run away shamefully.

Hadhrat Peer-wa-Murshid, Qibla wa Ka'ba of devoted Maulana Alhaj Alhaafiz Imdad-Ullah used to say:

"Riya does not remain always Riya, firstly it is Riya, then it becomes a habit, and from habit it becomes Ibaadat and Ikhlas."

It means that we should not bother about the Riya which gets committed without any purpose and should not leave the Aamal-e-Saliha because of this.

TOABA
(REPENTANCE)

Allah Ta'ala says:

وتوبوا الى الله جميعًا ايها المومنون .

"And have recourse towards Allah, all, Oh ye believers so that you may get prosperity."

Many Ahaadith have been narrated regarding this topic.

Method of Repentance

One saint has defined repentance in very concise words:

"Development of burning sensation in heart on committing a sin."

The saying of Hadhrat Ibn-Masood (RA)

الندم توبة.

"To regret (by heart) is the (Toaba) repentance" supports the above mentioned definition.

There are so many Aadaab (etiquettes or rules) of Toaba.

Briefly understand that when a fault is committed about some great man, then how one apologises to him, folding hands dropping cap on his feet, using all sorts of words of praise and making a weeping facial pose i.e., one apologises with different methods. Similarly, when one is apologising in front of Allah, then at least one should do the same things, such, a Toaba, as per the promise of Allah, is definitely accepted by Allah.

KHOAF

Asfahani has narrated in Targeeb from Hadhrat Ma'az (RA) that:

" The heart of a Mumin (believer) does not remain fearless (of Allah) and his fear does not get tranquility by any means."

The method of developing fear (Khoaf)

Its method is that one should always think that Allah Ta'ala is always knowing his every word or deed (external as well as internal) and He will call me to account.

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" The excellence of a bondsman (of Allah) regarding his Iman is that he should believe firmly that Allah is with him wherever he is."

(Bahiqi,Tabrani)

RIJA
(HOPE)

Allah Ta'ala says:

انه لايیأس من رَوح الله الّا القوم الکٰفرون.

"Truly no one despairs of Allah's soothing Mercy except those who have no faith."

(12:87)

From this it is understood that to keep hope is the part of Iman.

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"To have good impression (Husn-e-zun) about Allah is from Husne-Ibadaat."

(Abu-Dawood, Tirmizi)

Nice method of keeping Husn-e-Zoan (goods impression) about Allah:- You should remember that method of keeping Husne-Zoan (good impression) and hope is to be His obedient fully. It is natural phenomenon that all hopes remain pinned on him, the one who is being followed and by whose disobedience one usually feels fear in heart and becomes a little hopeless. To keep hope after Toaba means that one should believe firmly, after keeping in view His vast mercy, that my plea will definitely accepted.

It seems that the legislator of Shari'ah, Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) meant two things by 'Rija'' (hope)

1. Reformation of deeds.
2. Repentance.

These days majority of people while remaining busy in sins and delaying Toaba put forward the same excuse of Husne-Zoan and Rija (good opinion about Allah and good hope). These people have done completely opposite to the purpose of Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam). May Allah give them proper sense. On the contrary, one should feel more humility and shame keeping in view the vastness of Mercy of Allah Ta'ala, Allahu Akbar.

اُدھر سے ایسے گناہ پیہم

اُدھر سے وہ دمبدم عنایت

"From here are sins constant"
"From there is kindness constant"

When the shame or humility will become dominant, one will never dare for disobedience.

MODESTY
(HAYA)

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"Modesty is a branch of Iman."

(Bukhari & Muslim)

Method of achieving Modesty (Haya)

Haya is a wonderful thing. If there is Haya from creatures (Makhlooq) no such deed will be there which is not liked by the creatures (Makhlooq) and if there is Haya from Creator (Khaliq) then one will keep one's self away from such deeds which are not liked by the Creator. To have Haya of the Makhlooq is a natural phenomenon but one has to know the method of achieving Haya of the Creator. Method of achieving the Haya is as follows: One should fix up a time of loneliness (Khalwat) while sitting in the solitude, one should start remembering one's disobediences and the bounties of Allah, In a few days the state of Haya will develop in the heart automatically and one will achieve a great field.

GRATITUDE
(SHUKR)

Shukr is of two kinds:

1. To be grateful of the Creator (Allah) who is the true benefactor. Allah Ta,ala says:

واشكر ولى ولا تكفرون.

"Be grateful to Me and reject not faith."

2. Second kind of Shukr is to be grateful to the creatures (Makhlooq) who are the medium or intermediary of divine blessings.

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

من لم يشكر الناس لم يشكر الله.

"One who is not grateful to people is not grateful to Allah."

Abu Dawood has narrated a Hadith that the person who has got a thing should pay in return, if he cannot pay in return, then he should at least praise the person who has given him that thing. Thus, one who says some praiseworthy words, he has shown the gratefulness and who has hid the praise (for that person) he has shown ungratefulness.

REALITY OF GRATEFULNESS IS TO APPRECIATE THE TRUE VALUE OF BLESSINGS (NI'MAT)

The reality of the gratitude is to appreciate the true value of the blessings. When one will honour the blessings, he will also honour the benefactor (one who gives the blessings) and will also honour the medium through which that blessing has reached him, that medium will also get honour and appreciation. In this way gratitude of the both Creator and the creatures will be paid.

Now understand that the thing whose great value is present in somebody's heart, that thing is loved and respected by him as well. Heart also feels compulsion to accept his word. Therefore the utmost gratefulness of the Creator (Allah) will be as follows:

1. Heart should be full of His honour and reverence.

2. His praises should be always on tongue. The different parts of the body should try to follow His commandments fully. (Amal-i-Saliha)

This is the secret of this meaning of Shukr that it should be accomplished with heart, tongue and other parts of body.

Second thing which should be necessarily understood here is that when gratefulness of the medium has been supposed to be necessary, from this it should be understood the rights of teacher and Shaikh (Spiritual teacher). These people (Spiritual teacher) became the medium or intermediary of true blessings of Islam, Irfaan and Yaqeen. As great the blessings will be so will be the right of the medium of that blessing.

From this can be understood that how great are the rights of teacher and Shaikh. Alas! these days both fields have become weak so much so that no body recognises their value.

Now we are writing separately the rights of both briefly, of course, guidance is from Allah:-

RIGHTS OF TEACHER

1. One should go to him with clean clothes and after having cleaned the teeth with Miswaak.
2. Face him politely.
3. See him with a look of sanctity and honour.
4. Listen carefully whatever he says.
5. Try to remember what he says nicely.
6. Take it as one's own fault, If any thing is not understood well.
7. Do not quote somebody else's contrary statement in his presence .
8. If somebody is saying bad about the teacher, try to defend him as much as possible, otherwise get up from there and leave that place.
9. On reaching near his audience say Salam to all those present and then say Salam to the teacher in particular but if he is busy in speech etc, do not say Salam that time.
10. Neither laugh nor talk more in his presence.
11. Do not look here and there.
12. Remain attentive towards him only.
13. Tolerate his rude behaviour.
14. Do not leave going to him because of his harsh tongue and do not lose faith in his excellence but try to interpret nicely his words and deeds.
15. Do not read when teacher is busy, hungry, thirsty, sleeping or is not having presence of mind or is having some other problem.

16. Take care of his rights in his absence as well.
17. Occasionally please him with gifts and by writing letters to him.

There are other so many rights, but for intelligent people, these are enough, he can understand other rights from these.

RIGHTS OF SHAIKH (SPIRITUAL TEACHER)

Also those rights which have been described for the teacher are the rights of the Shaikh as well. Some more are written here:

1. Believe that my purpose will be served through this Shaikh only and if I incline towards some other side then, that will deprive me of the blessings and favours of Murshid (Spiritual teacher).
2. Be obedient of the Shaikh in all respects and serve him with vigour and wealth because without the love of the Shaikh, nothing happens and this is the sign of the love.
3. Whatever Murshid says, obey that immediately, and do not follow any of his deeds without his permission because some times he is doing his job as per his status and level and the same may be dangerous for the student (Mureed).
4. Whatever Durood and Wazifah is advised by the Murshid, that should be read only and leave the rest whether they have been started on the somebody else's advice or one had started himself.
5. Be fully attentive towards him in his presence so much so that one should not get engaged in any thing other than Fardh and Sunnat, without his permission.
6. Try one's best not to stand at such a place where one's shadow will fall on the shadow of the Murshid or his clothes.
7. Do not place your feet on his Musalla.
8. Do not perform Wadhu on that place where he performs Wadhu.

9. Do not use his utensils.
10. Neither take meals nor drink water nor perform Wadhu in his presence, of course after permission there is no problem.
11. Do not talk to any one else in his presence and do not pay attention to any other side.
12. Do not spread your feet towards him.
13. Do not spit towards him.
14. Do not object whatever he says since whatever he says or does, it is in the light of the divine manifestation and if one does not understand anything, then remember the incident of the Hadhrat Musa (AS) and Hadhrat Khadhir (AS).
15. Do not expect any miracle from him.
16. If any doubt arises in heart, tell him immediately and if that doubt does not get solved, attribute it to your own defective thinking and if the Murshid does not give any reply then think that you are not worth it.
17. Tell him whatever you see in the dream and also tell him its interpretation if any, you have understood about it.
18. Do not part from the Murshid unnecessarily or without his permission.
19. Do not raise your voice over his voice and do not talk to him in a loud voice. Talk to him briefly and remain attentive towards his answer.
20. Do not reject his statements even if the student is apparantly ugent but should believe that the error of the Shaikh is better than student's correction.
21. Whatever will be the state of the student (Mureed), good or bad, should be told to Murshid only as, he is the spiritual doctor. He will correct that after getting the information. Do not think that Murshid is having Kashf (hence I need not inform him about my condition).
22. Do not engage yourself in any Wazifah in his presence. It is very much necessary to read something, read it in such a way that he is not seeing you.

23. Whatever favours or blessings are obtained, think that it is due to him even if it is seen in the dream or meditation that it has reached from some other Buzarg, thinking that it is some form of Lateefa of that Buzarg which has got manifested in the form of this other Buzarg.

when you have selected some spiritual teacher, hand yourself to him. Be under him same way as Musa (AS) under Khadhir (AS). Be patient with Khadhir (AS) who is without hypocrisy, so that he may not tell you, go away.

WARNING

These are the Adaab of an accomplished (Kamil) Shaikh. Now we will write some of the signs by which you can recognise him and the student of the reformation (Islah) may not get misled:-

1. He (the Shaikh) should be more famous (and more honourable) in the eyes of top Ulemaş and Faqirs than in the eyes of the common people.
2. In his company one should get inclined more towards Allah and mundane thoughts and passions should be seen decreasing.
3. His conversation should resemble the conversation of the former Buzargs.
4. He should have got permission for reformation of people (Islah-i-Khalq) from some Kamil Shaikh.
5. He should be pious (Mutaqi) and should not be insistant on any such deed which is against the Shari'ah. If any such deed happens occasionally, that is not against the Kamaal. If any word or deed from him is such that is apparently against the Shari'ah, there should be some suitable explanation for that.

If you find somebody of these qualities, take it as a blessing and remain as his slave from the core of your heart otherwise (if he is not having such qualities) leave him particularly if he is doing anything against Qur'an and Hadith, never adopt his company as his company will ruin your Din and Iman.

Many a Shaitaan are having human faces, so do not give your hand in everbody's hand. If some body is doing the deeds of the Shaitaan and he is called a Wali, then curse should be on such a Wali.

Arif Sheerazi Said: قال العارف الشیرازیؒ

N.B: Same way the other things which are included in Shukr are: To do justice with Ahle-Haqooq, i.e., parents, children, uncle, husband, wife, neighbour, common muslim, common man, animals etc. On this topic the book "Haqiqat-ul-Islam" written by Qazi Sannaullah Panipati should be read.

WAFA

(Faithfulness, loyalty, constancy)

Allah Ta'ala says:

يٰاَيُّهَا الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْا اَوْفُوْا بِالْعُقُوْدِ. (۵:۱)

"Oh, believers fulfill your promises." (5:1)

Allah Ta'ala further says:

وَ اَوْ فُوْا بِعَهْدِاللهِ اِذَا عَا هَد تُمْ.(١٦:٩١)

" Fulfill the promises of Allah when you make a promise."
(16:91)

And He says:

وَ اَوْ فُوْا بِالْعَهْدِ اِنَّ الْعَهْدَ كَانَ مَسْئُوْلًا ط.

" Fulfill the promise, verily, the promises will be asked."
(17:34)

i.e., In Qiyamah there will be this question that whether you fulfilled the promise or not? and it has been mentioned earlier in the Hadith that not to fulfill the promise is the sign of the Nifaq (hypocrisy).

Regret: Unfortunately in our time very few people fulfill their promises. They make disappoint others after making the promise and after giving the assurance. This needs high carefulness, one should make promise after thinking nicely and then should try to fulfill it in whatever possible way. Of course, if the promise is against the Sunnat, then to fulfill it is not permissible.

SABR

Hadith states (narrated by Hadhrat Ibne Masood (RA):

"Sabr is half of the Iman."

(Baihaqi)

Allah Ta'ala says:

اِنَّ اللهَ مَعَ الصّٰبِرِيْنَ.(٢:١٥٣)

"Indeed, Allah is with those who patiently persevere".
(2:153)

(HUMILITY)
(opposite of Takabbur)

One who thinks that every other person is better than him and behaves in humility, is said to have tawadhu.

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" One who adopts humility for the sake of Allah, Allah elevates him to higher status. Thus such a person is smaller in his own eyes but is bigger in the eyes of the people and one who has Takabbur (pride), Allah Ta'ala disgraces him."

Thus he becomes smaller in the eyes of the people and bigger in his own eyes, till he becomes as disgraceful as a dog or a pig in the eyes of the people".

(Baihaqi)

Hadhrat Ibne Masood (RA) narrated that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Neither will enter a person in Jahannum in whose heart will be Iman even as little as mustard seed, and nor will enter a person in Jannat in whose heart will be Takabbur as little as a mustard seed ", in some narrations, it is written as little as a speck or an atom (Zarrah).

One person asked Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) that man's heart likes that he should have good clothes and good shoes, (are all these included in Takabbur).

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) replied,

"Allah is graceful (Jameel) and loves the grace (Jamaal). Takabbur is to reject the right things (Haq) and to look down upon the people."

(Muslim)

That means, to have good disposition and cheerfulness in not Takabbur.

N.B.:- In humility (Tawadhu) to respect the elders is also included. Ahmad has narrated that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" One who does not respect our elders and is not kind to our youngesters, is not included in our Ummat."

COMPASSION AND AFFECTION
(Rehmat and Shafaqat)

Hadhrat Abu Hurairah (RA) narrated that he heard from Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) :

" The quality of kindness is not taken away from any one except from unfortunate one."

Hadhrat Abdullah Ibne Umar (RA) narrated that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Rehman (ALLAH)_ shows kindness to those who show kindness. You be kind to those who are on earth, Master of skies (Allah) will be kind to you."

(Abu Dawood)

Nu'min bin Bashir narrated that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" You will find the Muslims in sympathy, love and kindness like the parts of the body, if any part pains, the whole body becomes restless (and feels the pain)".

(Bukhari, Muslim)

Pleasure over divine decree, fate or predestination (Radha Bil Qadha)

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" The auspiciousness or good fortune (Sa-aadat) of man lies in asking Allah the virtues and remaining pleased (Raadhi) with the decrees of Allah and the misfortune (Shiqawat) of the man lies in abandoning the asking of virtues from Allah and in remaining unhappy over his decrees."

(Tirmizi)

N.B.:- For Raadha bil Qaadha it is not necessary that there should not be even a discomfort in the heart as this is a natural involuntary phenomenon, it cannot be controlled (being involuntary), but it means that the heart should like it as a person having an abscess, happily allows the surgeon to make an incision over it, despite the fact that he definitely feels pain of the incision. Yes, at times it is possible that one may not feel pain when over come by ecstasy but on the contrary at times these people (those overcome by ecstasy) may feel joy (instead of pain on getting the Nishter (incision)). This state (Haal) is experienced by those who are midway on the path of the Salook.

[Salook is the path described by the Kamil Mashaaikh (the excellent spiritual teachers) to their students (Mureed) which leads them to nearness of Allah after purifying their hearts from all animal and Shitaani instincts so that their hearts remain exclusively inclined towards Allah. The will of Allah becomes their will, hence they get the treasure of Raadha-bil-Qaadha, in the real sense of the word. Only those who walk on this path of Salook, can achieve these treasures and others just can't understand it.]

AHLE KAMAAL AND TAMKEEN

(Those people who have completed their journey on this path of Salook and have attained maturity) do experience the grief and agony as common people do, as compared to the people of Salook mentioned above who feel happiness in getting grief), but these people (Ahle Kamaal) do not utter a single word of complaint neither they do any such deed which is against the wishes of the real ruler (Allah). This thing is of more excellence that despite feeling grief and agony they control their feelings and when there is no grief and anguish, what difficult is it to control the feelings and the very existence of Sabr (patience) without grief and agony is impossible. Who can doubt the excellence of the state of the Sabr and Raadha of Hadhrat Yaqoob (AS). Every body knows as to what was his condition during the period in which Hadhrat Yusuf (AS) was separated from him. When his sons consoled him, he replied

انما اشكوا بثى و حز نى الى الله و اعلمو من الله مالا تعلمون. (١٢:٨٦)

" I only complain of my distraction and anguish to Allah, and I know from Allah that which ye know not."

(12:86)

When Hadhrat Ibrahim son of our Prophet (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) died, tears appeared in the eyes of Holy Prophet (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam). Hadhrat Abdul Rehman Bin Auf (RA) asked with surprise

"Oh Messenger of Allah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam), you also weep. Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) replied, "Oh Ibne Auf (RA)! this is a Rehmat, then he again wept and said "Indeed, eyes weep and heart becomes sad and with the tongue we will say the same words with which our Master will be pleased and verily we are sad in your separation-Oh Ibrahim."

(Bukhari & Muslim)

And Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Sabr is only when some fresh grief comes"

(Bukhari and Muslim)

There must have remained least doubt in our these claims after listening to these Ahadith.

TAWAKKUL
(Trust in Allah)

Allah Ta'ala says:

وَعَلَى اللهِ فَلْيَتَوَكَّلِ الْمُؤْمِنُوْنَ. (٣:١٢٢)

" Believers should trust only in Allah."

(3:122)

Hadhrat Ibne Abbas (RA) narrated that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Seventy thousand persons of my Ummat will enter Jannat without Hisaab (accountability). These are those people who do not indulge in incantation (magical formulas-mantar etc.) and do not take ill omen and trust in their Cherisher (Allah)."

(Bukhari and Muslim)

From this is meant that they do not do that incantation which is forbidden. Others have said that every kind of incantation should be avoided. And to take ill-omen means to get lurking fear when some body sneezes or feels unlucky if some animal passes from in front. Allah Ta'ala is the real effective (effect of any thing is as per His wish and will, nothing else is effective in itself), one should not get such lurking fear. Of course, to take good omen is nice though this also is in no way effective, but it becomes a means of developing hope of Mercy of Allah as compared to ill-omen which makes one hopeless from the mercy of Allah.

REALITY OF TAWAKKUL AND CORRECTION OF MISTAKES

These days Tawakkul is generally believed to mean that, you sit down (in isolation) after leaving all the efforts (Asbaab). This meaning is completely wrong. All the Aayat of the Qur'an and the Ahaadith are full of affirmations in favour of endeavour and exertion (Tadbeer and Asbaab) instead Tawakkul can never have this meaning. Ok, if you don't get something to eat from somewhere, then will you not even exert to put it into the mouth and chew it, you wouldn't even swallow it. These all are also Asbaabs and Tadbeers of obtaining food, then where is the Tawakkul. With this (meaning), this inference becomes mandatory that uptill now no Nabi or Wali has had Tawakkul. Who can believe such an inference! instead the reality of the Tawakkul is same as that of Tawkeel i.e., to engage a lawyer in a court case. Then does the petitioner leave altogether to follow the case, but despite this he thinks that his success in the court case depends upon the capability , eloquence and the efforts of his lawyer, he does not attribute it to his own efforts and endeavours.

Exactly same should be thought in this case of Tawakkul that one should undertake all Asbaab and Tadbeer, on this condition that they are not against the Shari'ah, but should not consider them as effective.

One should believe that his job can get accomplished only by the order and the grace of Allah and infact the effectiveness of any endeavor is only due to the order (and will) of Allah. Bandah (man) has not even least concern with it. For example, the seed has been sown in the field. This is its Tadbeer. Now to get rains at time, the growth of seedling and its protection from natural calamities, when are all these in his (man's) authority? So it is obligatory to believe that the success is the fruit of grace of Allah and this is the Tawakkul. From this it must have been understood that majority of muslims have Ni'mat of this Tawakkul. Of course, some people need reformation of their thinking and whenever people face some natural anxiety as regards to obtaining of their subsistence, its cause is not in the promise of Allah but the cause of this anxiety is only this that the methods and the time of success are not defined. Undefined situation naturally begets anxiety. Some people of Tawakkul (Muta-Wakkileen) have got some things without putting any effort (without asbaab). This is Karamat (Miracle) which is not from mandatory manifestation of Tawakkul and is not included in the Haqiqat (reality) of Tawakkul. Understand it properly.

TO LEAVE UJUB

(Vanity, Silly pride on one's beauty, health and wealth)

Tibraani has narrated a Hadith:

"Three things are such which ruin viz,
i. Greed which is followed.

ii. Lust which is followed.
iii. Vanity and self complacence, to praise one's own self by one's own tongue and to describe one's own excellence is also included in vanity.

Allah Ta'ala says:

فلا تزكوا انفسكم (الاية).

"Therefore hold not yourself purified."

(53:32)

Difference between Riya, Takabbur, and Ujub

The evils of Takabbur have been described in the section on humility.

It should be understood that these are three separate things, Riya, Takabbur and Ujub. This difference is not appreciated amongst them when seen superficially but they are different. Summary of their difference is that Riya (Hypocrisy) is always found associated with ritual Ibaadat and Deeni affairs only as compared to the other two, Takabbur and Ujub, are found associated with both Deeni affairs as well as worldly affairs. In Takabur one looks down upon others as compared to the Ujub in which one is in self praise and self concerted, though he may not look down upon others.

Removal of doubt about Ujub

At this stage there is one doubt, that if Allah Ta'ala bestows on somebody the quality of some excellence, then not to know this quality is ungratefulness and to know this quality of excellence is Ujub. Then what should one do?

The solution of this problem is that one should definitely consider it the quality of excellence but should not think himself to be deserving it and to be its real owner (Mausoof-i-Haqiqi) and should not boast upon it but should take it as a heavenly Ni'mat, gift of Allah, while thinking so he should be thankful and believe that it [the quality of Kamal or (excellence)] is an Amaanat (entrusted thing) with him and whenever He (Allah) wishes can snatch it from me. This gift is with me in the same way as some generous king keeps a very precious diamond with some ordinary cobbler as an Amaanat and take it back whenever He likes or He may never take it back through out his life time because of the generosity and may give him the permission to use for his benefit, making him extra ordinary in his colleagues. This (cobbler) does not boast upon it (and does not become proud) but remains in constant fear that there may not be any negligence (on his part) about the great value of this precious thing and that it may not get wasted or become lusterless. One who thinks his excellence like that is among the people of gratitude (Shaakireen) and not among the people of vanity.

TO LEAVE BACKBITING AND MALICE (Kewena)

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"Backbiting and malice (Keena are the things which take one to Jahannum. Both these things cannot get collected in the hearts of Mumin."

(Tabrani)

TO LEAVE JEALOUSY (Hasad)

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"Jealousy (hasad) eats the good deeds as the fire eats the wood."

(Abu Dawood)

TO LEAVE ANGER
(Gussa)

Allah Ta'ala revealed (the quality of good muslim) as follows:

وَالْكَاظِمِيْنَ الْغَيْظَ.

"They are such people who suppress anger."

Hadhrat Abu Huriarah (RA) narrated that one person requested Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) to say him few words of advice. Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) advised him not to have anger or wrath, this person repeated his question few times and every time Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) replied the same, not to have anger.

(Bukhari)

Although the suppression of anger may seem that time quite cumbersome but its end result is always good, even enemy becomes friend."

Allah Ta'ala says in the Qur'an:

اِدْفَعْ بِالَّتِيْ هِيَ اَحْسَنُ فَاِذَا الَّذِيْ بَيْنَكَ وَبَيْنَهٗ
عَدَاوَةٌ كَاَنَّهٗ وَلِيٌّ حَمِيْمٌ الآية

"Be equal. Repel (evil) with what is better: Then will he between whom and thee was hatred become as it were Thy friend and intimate!"

(35:41)

And Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said,

" (Great) wrestler is not that who overpowers the others in wrestling but great wrestler is one who keeps himself under control during anger."

(Bukhari and Muslim)

In the following lines Shaikh Saadi has translated the same Hadith as follows:

نہ مرد است ان بہ نزدیک خردمند
کہ باپیل دماں پے کار.....جوید
بلے مرد آنکس است از روئے تحقیق
کہ چوں خشم آیدش باطل نگوید

And Hadhrat Anas (RA) narrated that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Onewho keeps anger away from himself, Allah Ta'ala will keep away His chastisement from him on the Day of the Qiyyamah."

(Baihaqi)

Maulana Rumi (RA) says the same thing as:

گفت عیسےٰ را یکے ہشیار سر
چیست رد ہستی ز جملہ صعب تر
گفت اے جان صعب تر خشم خدا
کہ ازو دوزخ ہمی لرزد چوما
گفت از خشم خدا چہ بود امان
گفت ترک خشم خویش اندر زماں

Remedy of Anger

Anger amongst other things is one of the great ruinous things, if seen minutely malice (Keena) and jealousy are also the signs of Anger because when one cannot fulfill the wishes of the anger, then this anger gets reduced in heart to malice and jealousy. It is important to cure it from its inception.

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) has stated its remedy in a a Hadith like this:

"Anger is from Shaitaan and Shaitaan has been created from fire and fire gets extinguished by water, so if any one of you gets anger, he should perform the Wadhu with water."

(Abu Dawood)

And second remedy has been stated by Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) as:

"If anyone of you gets anger, if he is standing, he should sit down, if anger goes away, well and good, if not then he should lie down."

(Ahmad, Tirmizi)

In view of these Ahadith, some saints have stated some more remedies.

1. One should believe that on whom he is becoming angry, he is from Allah, so on whom to have anger.

2. Secondly, one should think that I am showering wrath on somebody, Allah Ta'ala has more power on me, if He showers anger on me, then in whose protection should I go.

3. Thirdly, one should immediately leave the place, should never stay there and if after anger, malice and jealousy have developed, their remedy is that one should make it a point to meet that person even unwillingly and try to behave nicely with him till he develops love for that person and accepts his kindness. This is natural that one who loves you and is kind to you, then malice and jealousy about him does not persist.

TO LEAVE ENMITY (Evil wishing)

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" One who is involved in evil wishing (enmity), he got separated from me."

(Muslim)

And Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

اَلدِّيْنُ النَّصِيْحَةُ.

" Deen is the name of well wishing and sincerity."

With bad wishing, suspicion or distrust also gets associated, that is also Haram.

Allah Ta'ala says:

يَا يُّهَا الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْا اجْتَنِبُوْا كَثِيْرًا مِّنَ الظَّنِّ اِنَّ بَعْضَ الظَّنِّ اِثْمٌ. (٤٩:١٢)

"O Ye who believe! Avoid suspicion as much (as possible): for suspicion in some cases is a sin:"

(49:12,

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Save yourself from suspicion (Badh-Guman) as to be suspicious is the biggest lie."

(Bukhari, Muslim)

Evils of suspicion and the behaviour with backbiting.

These days, among many factors, one of the strongest factor responsible for disunity and problems among muslims, is strong suspicion (Badh-Guman), as one sees his muslim brother with suspicion which is based on very weak doubt and false reports. Then with trivial reasons they go on supporting that false belief till that suspicion reaches the stage of firm belief. From this, these bad problems develop:

1. To look down upon others.
2. To hate him and to be jealous on him.
3. To attribute his good actions to some passion and lust of nafs.
4. To do his backbiting.
5. To be happy on his loses and dishonour and many other bad things are the result of this suspicion.

Muslims should try their best not to become suspicious of (the fellow muslims) even in the presence of strong evidences but should try to throw away this suspicion from their hearts by attributing it to something good. Hadhrat Eisa (AS) once admonished a person after seeing him stealing something, that person swore by Allah that he was not a thief. Then Hadhrat Eisa (AS) said:

" The name of my Allah is true, my eyes see false."

Of course, if it (suspicion) does not get away even after trying for it, then one will not be accountable for that, but to make a mention of it and to act upon as per its wishes is definitely a sin, particularly to become suspicious of somebody because of his backbiting. The straight remedy of backbiter is that firstly one should plainly prohibit him from backbiting, tell him that do not tell us backbiting of any body. If he does not agree, then catch the backbiter by hand and take him to the person about whom he was backbiting. Most likely this backbiter will prove a liar and then he will never indulge in backbiting and if this backbiter turns out to be true then that person will feel ashamed and will offer apology for that and in this way the mutual relations will be improved. The two persons who talk face to face, the chances of their backbiting are reduced.

To leave Duniya

It is narrated from Hadhrat Jabir (RA) that once Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) passed by a dead youngme of a goat who had cut ears. Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) asked (his Suhaba) that who amongst them will like to buy this dead youngme body of the goat in one Dirham, Suhaba replied that they would not like to purchase it even for the lower thing (for less than a Dirham). Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) told them, after swearing by Allah, that the Duniya (world) is more worthless near Allah than this dead goat baby is near you.

(Muslim)

Umar Ibne Auf (RA) narrated that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" By Allah, I am not afraid about you of poverty and hunger but I am afraid that you will be given plenty of Duniya as was given to earlier people, then you will start inclining towards it as these earlier people had inclined towards it and that (plentiness) of Duniya will destroy you as it had destroyed those earlier people."

(Bukhari & Muslim)

Abdullah Bin Umar (RA) narrated that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Indeed, he succeeded who became muslim and got the necessary subsistence and remained contented on that what Allah gave him."

(Muslim)

Allah Ta'ala says in the Hadith Qudsi,

" Oh son of Adam, keep (yourself) free for my worship, I will fill your chest with riches and will close down your indigence (poverty) and if you don't do like that (keep yourself free for My worship) then I will keep your hand busy with work (i.e., you will not get any time free in world to relax) and will not close down your indigence."

(Ahmad, Ibne Majah)

Suhail Ibne Asad (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" If the world would have been worth even the wing of a mosquito near Allah, then non-believers would have not got even a single sip of water to drink."

(Ahmad, Trimizi, Ibne- Majah)

Abu Musa Ashiari (RA) narrated that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" One who keeps friendship with world, he damages his Akhirah and one who keeps friendship with Akhairah, he damages his world. Thus prefer that which will persist over that which will perish."

(Ahmad, Baihaqi in Shoubul Iman)

Ka'ab bin Malik (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" If two hungry wolves are let free in a herd of goats, they will not cause so much havoc as is caused to one's Deen by greed of wealth and greed of grandeur ."

(Tirmizi, Dirami)

Ibne Massood (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) was lying down on a mat and when he got up from the mat, the marks of this (roughmat) were seen on his body. Ibne Massood (RA), on seeing this, requested, " Ya, Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) if you allow us, we will get some mattress for you." Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said: " What is my relation with this world? The example of this world and mine is like that traveler, who stands under the shade of a tree (for a while) and then leaves the tree there for onward journey."

(Ahmad, Tirmizi, Ibne Majah)

Ibne Umamah (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"Allah Ta'ala told me that he will make the land of Makkah golden for me. I requested, " oh Allah, I want that I should get one day stomach full and should remain hungry the other day. So that on being hungry, I will make suplication and lamentations to you and will remember you and when I will get stomach full, I will thank you and say your praises."

(Ahmad)

And besides these, the Ahadith in the condemnation of world, greed, Distant hopes, love of wealth and grandeur and in favour of Aakhirah and solitude, are so numerous, that it is impossible to count them all here.

Reformation of thoughts of progress mongers of world and the explanation of the favoured progress and condemned progress

These days there is a lot of noise about progress. When it was scrutinised, then the same distant hopes and greed of wealth and grandeur were found to be its reasons. Therefore, a person with Iman can never doubt this thing that motivation about this progress is a clear cut opposition of his Savant and kind Prophet (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam), though the same people make such a fascinating speech in favour of this progress that innocent people can get deceived. (they give reasons that they want Islamic progress but the time is such that the respect and the glory of Islam cannot be elevated without external splendour, therefore, worldly progress is also needed).

Friends! this argument is mere superficial colouring. Firstly this very fact is wrong that nobody has esteem of Islam without this external pomp and show. Islam has such Allah given beauty that it looks fascinating even in simplicity, Instead its beauty looks more charming in simplicity and external decoration conceals its natural beauty. Search from the time of Suhaba-al-Kiram, (you will see) that whosoever has attained perfection in Islam, all supporters and opponents of Islam have accepted his greatness and fear. We don't have respect without pomp and show, its reason is that our Islam has not reached perfection. We try to cover its defects (in our Islam) by external pomp and show. You should go and see those savants of Allah, even these days, who have attained perfection in Islam. Who does not remember, how rich persons and high officials used to show extreme respect for Hadhrat

Maulana Shah Muhammad Fazal-u-Rehman Sahib, when they used to go to see him. What kind of external pomp and show was there? There was Islam in the form of simplicity and it was the attraction of the same simplicity.

Arif Sheerazi says the same thing in these words:

ز عشق ناتمام ما جمال یار مستغنی ست
باآب در نگ و خال و خط چہ حاجت روئے زیبارا

Even if, for instance, this causation and sequence (that worldly progress is important for restoring esteem of Islam) is accepted and their sayings that their prime aim is the progress of the Islam and the progress of the world is just a means for it, then these claimants of such thing should have been trying for Deen in the same way as they are trying to attain worldly gains, even half or one-fourth, then we could understand that they are true in their claim and their real aim is Deen and worldly gains are just a necessity near them. Now we see most of them are so much engaged in worldly affairs, that they have neither consideration of Allah, nor remember His Rasool, nor are worried about beliefs and commandments. They are worth:

چو میرد مبتلا میرد چو میرد مبتلا خیزد

How can we accept their claim. Some of them present the progress of Suhaba-al-kiram as an example in their favour. Let us have debate on this.

See with the eyes of justice and depth that in which field Suhaba-al-kiram made progress, Deen or Duniya. If they made progress in conquering land, with this, had they meant progress of business, agriculture and industries or their aim was establishment of Salah, Saum, Tilawah of Qur'an and Thikrullah, Islamic law ordinances and justice? Qur'an Al-Kareem which is the truest history, testifies it. It says about Suhaba-Muhajireen.

الذين ان مكناهم فى الارض اقامو الصلوٰة

و اتو الذ كوٰة و امر وا با

" They are those who if we establish them in the land, they will establish regular Salah and will give regular Zakat, enjoin the right and forbid the wrong and with Allah rests the end (and decision) of (all) affairs."

(22:41)

And see from the Ahadith and the life history of these people, inspite of their great victories, they never ate stomach full, never slept full night and their days and nights were being spent in fear of Allah and His remembrance but on the other hand, on seeing these worldly plenty gains, they used to fear and weep. Whither progress of Suhaba-Al-Kiram and whither reversed progress of today.

ببیں تفاوت رہ از کجاست تا بکجا

Real fact is that greed and lust has surrounded from every side. temperament has become indolent one wishes to have all the luxurious things while the name of Islam should remain attached just as a sign of distinction and national symbol, Otherwise whose Salah and whose Saum (fast). Instead majority of them treat these things with contemption and ridicule.

Friends! What type of Deen is this?

قُلْ بِئْسَمَا يَا ءُ مُرُكُمْ بِهٖ اِيْمَانُكُمْ اِنْ كُنْتُمْ مُّؤْمِنِيْنَ. (٢:٩٣)

"Were filled (with the love) of the calf because of their faithlessness. Say: "Vile indeed are the behests of your faith if Ye have any faith!"

Clarification of a doubt

Nobody should get this doubt that I am forbidding from achieving worldly gains or I declare its means like learning of English language or invention of modern industries etc as haram. How can I become slanderer of Allah by calling it Haram without any reasoning of Shari'ah, just because of prejudice only. I never mean this. Earn as much worldly gains as you can, do the government service and provide their means, of course, external peace is often cause of internal peace as well.

But do not waste your Deen. Don't think (Deen) as worthless. In earning worldly gains try to stick to the commandments and laws of Allah. Do not prefer world over Deen. Whenever the two cannot go together, throw worldly gains in hearth. Do not forget Salah and Saum while you are busy in getting worldly education. Remain steadfast on Islamic beliefs.

Avoid bad company. If it is unavoidable, minimise unnecessary friendship and amalgamation with them. Do not hate the company of Ulema and pious men, go on improving your beliefs and deeds by remaining in their company. When you get some doubt, ask them. Do not keep your eyes on that which is not truth. Always think that Allah Ta'ala is seeing and knowing your words and deeds. Be afraid of accountability and punishment. In your dress and living style, keep Shari'at in consideration. Do not look down upon the poor people. Feel proud in serving and treating them well. Keep yourself with humility and austerity. Respect your elders. Do not show your wrath and tyranny on any one. Make your heart soft. Do not become stone hearted and careless. What ever you get with Halal means, be contented with that. Do not feel greedy in seeing people wealthier than you. Live with austerity so that you can avoid extravagance, then you will not have greed of more income. In the same way behave as per other Islamic codes of conduct. If with correct Islamic beliefs and strict performance of good deeds and manners, you go to London and become barrister, magistrate, deputy collector with distinction, my eyes will get brightened and my heart will be very happy.

SHUKR

All thanks to Allah that all these thirty branches about the Qalb along with their Fadhail (excellences) and related things have been written. If you see some quality of Qalb, if you ponder, on that you will see that that quality is included in any of these thirsty branches.

Oh ! Seekers of truth, try your best to reform your Qalb with those qualities. If Qalb gets corrected, the correction of tongue and other parts of the body is easy, as is stated in Hadith.

But don't do like this unless Qalb gets corrected and you will leave the Aamal of other parts of body. They are also obligatory in themselves. Sometimes interior gets reformed by the reformation of exterior. Now listen those branches which are about the tongue.

CHAPTER-II

This chapter is about those branches of Iman which are about tongue and they are seven.

1. To recite kalima Tawheed.
2. Tilawah of Qur'an Al-Kareem.
3. To learn knowledge.
4. To teach knowledge.
5. To make Dua.
6. To make Thikr.
7. To avoid forbidden and useless talks.

Like related things about branches of Qalb, the excellences and other related things about these branches are also briefly mentioned here in few sections.

SECTION---I

Hadhrat Abu Dhar Giffari (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" There is no servant of Allah who has recited Kalima La-Ilaha-Illa Allah and that he has not entered Jannat. I (Abu Dhar(RA)) asked Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) even if that person indulges in adultery and stealing. Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) replied, if he indulges in adultery and stealing. The same question and the same answer got repeated thrice."

(Bukhari, Muslim)

Abu Saeed and Abu Huriarah (RAA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Persuade your dying ones to repeat Kalima La-Ilaha-Ill Allah".

(Muslim)

Hadhrat Umar (RA) says that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" I have been ordered to fight with the people till they say Kalima La-Ilaha-Illa Allah."

Thus a person says kalima La-Ilaha-Illa Allah, he saves his life and property from me- except what is due to him (i.e., if he causes some harm to anybody's life and property, that compensation will be taken from him) and his accountability is handed over to Allah.

(Bukhari, Muslim)

Imam Ahmad narrates a Hadith as:

" Freshen your Iman. Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) was asked as to how should Iman be freshened? he said, by often repeating Kalima La-Ilaha-Illa Allah."

(Ahmad)

N.B:- The excellence of La-Ilah-Illa Allah has been proved by these Ahadith. Hazraat Sofi Al-Kiram have taught many methods of its exercise, here some points need consideration.

Ascertainment of the fact whether declaration of Iman by tongue is precondition or part of Iman

Existence of ascertainment in Islam is important near Ahle-haq while worth discussion here is declaration (iqrar by tongue) and deeds (by parts of body). In verbal declaration the point of discussion is whether it is a part of Iman or it is precondition i.e., whether it is included in it or not. When seen minutely, this controversy seems to be just due to difference in the headings, as every body agrees that the existence of Iman is impossible without verbal declaration, therefore it is known that part or precondition are not meant as their conventional meaning indicates, otherwise existence of nothing could have been possible without the existence of that part or precondition. But whosoever has said it to be a precondition, he has said so that external (Islamic) laws could be implemented and whosoever has said it to be a part, he has explained that this extra part is worth consideration. So both groups are in agreement in the meaning that verbal declaration is not essential for reality of Iman, but Islamic laws cannot be implemented without verbal declaration. To the same, some have said precondition and some have termed it part, hence no difference.

Ascertainment about the Aamal (good deeds) as part or precondition for Iman

The point of discussion in Aamal is that whether they are included in Iman or excluded. When this is also seen minutely, the difference seems to be in words only because those, who have said that Aamal are included in Iman, also believe that by not doing pious deeds (Aamal-e-Saliha), Iman is not snatched, those who have included Aamal in Iman, they have meant by it perfect Iman (Iman-e-kamil i.e., connected with Aamal). And those who have excluded Aamal from Iman, they have meant by Iman- the existence of affirmation. Thus Iman has two meanings, Salvation from entering jahannum and Iman with second meaning which will save from remaining in jahannum eternally.

Ascertainment of increase or decrease of Iman

Does Iman increase or decrease?

In fact this difference of opinion is also in words only. As the Iman connected with Aamal increases or decreases with the increase or decrease of Aamal and as the essence of affirmation is from ecstasy (kayfiyaat), there is no increase or decrease in it which takes place in quantities. Sometimes increase or decrease words are used for high intensity or weakness, with this (latter) meaning, there can be increase or decrease in affirmation (Tasdeeq) as well. In Qur'an Sharif, where ever the words of increase (regarding Iman have been used, there increase in intensity is meant. As per Ahle-Lugat, the word increase (as regards Iman) is common while as conventional- phraseologists believe that increase and intensity are different, thus doubt has been cleared.

TILAWAH OF QUR'AN MAJEED

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Recite Qur'an. Indeed Qur'an will come on the day of Qiyammah as interceding for its readers."

(Muslim)

Baihaqi has quoted a Hadith:

" Out of all Ibadaat in my Ummat, the best Ibadaat is recitation of Qur'an."

Imam Ahmad has quoted a Hadith as:

" People of Qur'an are people of Allah and are His special servants."

There are other Ahadith in favour of excellence of Tilawah of Qur'an Majeed.

Etiquettes (Aadab) necessary for recitation of Qur'an

Tilawah of Qur'an has some external and some internal or spiritual manners.

External manners are:

1. Recite Qur'an always when you are with Wadhu.
2. Clothes should be clean.
3. The place should be clean.
4. There should be no bad smell.
5. Better is to recite Qur'an while your face is towards Qibla.
6. Recite the words very clearly.
7. Don't recite when you do not feel interested.
8. keep your mind present while reciting Qur'an.

The easy method for that is to think before recitation that as if Allah Ta'ala has asked me to make Him listen some part of the Qur'an and I am reciting this time only to fulfill His wish and am telling it to Him. With this meditation (for a while before commencement of recitation) all other Aadab of Tilawah will be automatically followed.

Behaviour with Qur'an

Alas! unfortunately these days not only common people but even the special (religious people) have also become ignorant about Qur'an. Some people, Allah forbid, even think its learning and teaching useless. Others who have learnt under compulsion, do not try to remember it and those who always recite it, do not try to improve their short comings. Some students read Qur'an as:

گر تو قرآں بدیں نمط خوانی

پیر بریق مسلمانی

Those who correct their mistakes in wordings do not try to understand it, even if they read some translation or commentary, they do not read it with attention and interest and if they do that also but do not try to practise it by their deeds. This mistake is common that the majority of religious scholars are ignorant about seven types of Qirat- as if only one Qirat is proved from the Holy Prophet (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam). In short Qur'an Majeed has been left-back. One should be afraid of the fact that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) may not tell us on the day of Qiyamah as:

يا رب ان قومی اتخذو االقران مهجورا. (۲۵:۳۰)

Then the Messenger (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) will say:
" Oh my Lord! Truly my people treated this Qur'an with neglect."

(25:30)

To learn knowledge

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" With whomsoever Allah Ta'ala wishes betterment, He gives him knowledge of Deen."

(Bukhari, Muslim)

And Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" learning of Knowledge is obligatory (fardh) on every muslim."

(Ibne Majah)

To teach knowledge

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" One who is asked a thing about Ilm and he conceals it (after knowing it), Allah Ta'ala will bridle him with a bridle fire on the day of Qiyammah."

(Tirmizi)

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Indeed Allah Ta'ala and His angels and all those in skies and in earth even the ants in their holes and fish make dua for that person who teaches people virtue i.e., Deen."

(Tirmizi)

Excellence of Ilm-e-Deen and the types of obligatory Ilm

These excellences which have been mentioned above in favour of learning and teaching, they are all about Uloom-e-Deeni (knowledge of Deen) and their groups. And those branches of knowledge which are neither related to Deen nor are used for a Deeni purpose, have nothing to do with these Fadhail (excellences), about these types of knowledge, it is said that some of them are mere ignorance.

Shaikh Says:

علمیکہ رہ بحق نہ نماید جہالت است

" knowledge which does not lead to Allah is ignorance".

This Deeni Knowledge is of two types:

1. Fardh-Ain.
2. Fardh-kifaya.

1. Fardh Ain (Absolutely obligatory Ilm for every muslim):- It is that Ilm, the need of which has already taken place, e.g., Salah, it is obligatory for every one to know its rules and regulations. Zakah is Fardh on rich people, to know its rules is obligatory to rich people only. In the same way whatever condition is faced by one, to know the rules of that particular condition is Fardh for him.

Blame on Ulama for not earning subsistence and its answer

Fardh Kifaya is that in every locality there should be one or two such persons who can fulfill the Deeni needs of the people of that locality and can answer the doubts and accusations of opponents of Islam.

This thing has got proved with experience that one cannot get excellence in anything without completely devoting himself to it and complete devotion in a particular thing is not possible without shunning out other engagements. Therefore, to master Uloom-e-Deeni and to do Deeni-service is not possible while remaining associated with other engagements. So the blame, of majority of foolish people of these days, on the Ulema that they are of no other use, is a proof of their narrow mindedness.

Methods of obtaining Uloom-e-Deen

For learning the fardh Ain Ilm, knowing of Arabic is not essential, to learn the Ahkam in Urdu or Persian is enough.people should teach their children so much knowledge of Deen that, otherwise, it may not happen so,that after three or four generations they will feel ashamed even on revealing their connection with Islam. For Allah's sake, try to stop this storm of disgrace before it comes. If some body cannot read Urdu or Persian, he should sit in the company of Ulema and get his beliefs and masaail corrected and should advise his children to sit in the company of some pious Aalim. Their company has strange benefits:

ہر کہ خواہد ہمنشینی باخدا
گو نشیند در حضورِ اُولیاء

یک زمانے صحبتِ با اولیاء
بہتر از صد سالہ طاعت بے ریا

"If you want company of Allah, sit in the company of Auliyaa for one moment is better than hundred years of worship without hypocrisy."

DUA (SUPPLICATION)

Hadhrat Anas (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Dua is the kind of Ibadaat".

(Tirmizi)

Hadhrat Abu Huriarah (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" That no other thing is as worthy as Dua near Allah."

(Tirmizi)

Ibne Umar (RA) narrates a Hadith,

"Dua benefits against that misfortune which has come down and against that which has not yet come down (that misfortune ends which has descended and that misfortune gets avoided which has not descended.) make it obligatory on yourself to make Dua, Oh, servants of Allah".

(Tirmizi)

Hadhrat Jabir (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" No one is like this that he makes a Dua but Allah does not either give him the same thing as asked by him or stops some misfortune from him unless he makes a Dua of a sin or severance of relation."

(Tirmizi)

Abu Huriarah (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Make Dua to Allah Ta'ala with strong confidence of acceptance and remember that Allah Ta'ala does not accept the Dua made by unmindful Qalb."

(Tirmizi)

N.B:-From these Ahadith, quite a few things are learnt. First is the excellence of Dua and its effectiveness. Many people try many things when in trouble but they don't even think of Dua, when Dua is the best way out.

Second thing which we learnt is that Dua never goes waste, either some thing is got or some coming misfortune gets avoided or remains stored for him in Akhirah, as is narrated in a similar other narration. In any case Dua gets accepted. These days there is a strong doubt that our Dua is not accepted, so this doubt has gone.

Third thing which we learnt is that Dua should not be made against the (principles of) Shari'at.It should be made with the firm belief of acceptance and with the mind present (not absent mindedly).

These days there is carelessness about all these pre-requistes. Usually this thing is not thought that the thing we are asking for, may not be cause of Allah's displeasure. Neither Dua is made with presence of mind. But the condition is like :

بر زباں تسبیح و در دل گاؤ خر
ایں چنیں تسبیح کے وارد اثر

"On tongue is Tasbeeh and in heart are cows and donkeys. How can such Tasbeeh make any effect."

Since Allah Ta'ala sees the Qalb, the example of such intention of Qalb is like that application which is presented to some authority while standing with back towards him. The effect of (such nonsense) act is obvious. The biggest problem is that acceptance of Dua (by Allah) is doubted, it is not firm;y believed whether it has been acceptance or not. It can be understood with an example of a person who submits an application for some job to some authority. First he writes the words of flattery and in the end he writes " I don't believe that you will give me job." Everybody knows what will be the result of this nonsense application, it will be straight away rejected but on the contrary there is a chance that he may be even punished or banged for the same. Similarly is the case of making Dua to Allah Ta'ala without having the confidence of acceptance in Qalb as Allah Ta'ala sees the Qalb, how can such Dua be accepted.

Including all other conditions of acceptance of Dua, avoidance of Haram meals and clothing is also a precondition. This precondition is thought to be impossible these days. Halal subsistence is thought to be rare, which is wrong.

Shari'ah has given much laxity in the ways of earning Halal subsistence. Those things are Halal which are Halal as per Futwa of Ulema. Taqwa is the stage of Saadiqeen. Common people should act as per Futwa only.

ZIKRULLAH

Abu Musa Ash'ari (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" The example of that person, who does Zikrullah and that who does not do it, is like that of living and dead."

(Bukhari, Muslim)

Ibne Umar (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Don't talk much except Zikrullah because more talking except Zikrullah is responsible for hardening of Qalb."

(Tirmizi)

Abdullah bin Umar (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" For everything is a burnish clearer (saiqil) and the clearer (Saiqil) for Qalb is Zikrullah."

(Bihaqi)

Arabic way of Tasawwuf

From these Ahadith, the greatness of Zikrullah is proved. Sufiya Al-kiram do it with great regularity. They teach the different ways of it (Zikrullah). This Zikr is first by tongue only, then it slowly reaches the Qalb. With this the love of Allah develops naturally, which in turn becomes the cause for easy obedience (Ibadaat), the doer himself experiences the different stages. In short, Zikrullah is a wonderful thing. Everybody should do a little of it daily after learning its method from some Shaikh-e-kamil.

Istigafar

Istigafar is also included in Zikrullah. Hadhrat Abu Huriarah (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" By Allah, I make Istigafar and recourse towards Allah more than 70 time a day."

(Bukhari)

Ibne Abbas (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" One who makes on himself Istigafar a binding, Allah Ta'ala will salvage him from every difficulty and will free him from every sadness and worry and will give him subsistence from such ways which he could never imagine."

(Ahmad, Ibne Majah, Abu Dawood)

Abdullah Bin Bashir narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Congratulations for that person who will find Istigafar in his record of deeds in abundance."

(Ibne Majah)

To avoid useless and forbidden talk

Sahal Bin Sa'ad (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" One who guarantees me about that which is between his jaws i.e., tongue and that which is between his thighs i.e., private parts, I am responsible (guarantor) for his Jannat."

(Bukhari)

Uqbah Bin Aamir (RA) narrates that he met Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) and asked him :

" What is the way of salvation?" Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said: "control your tongue and your house should be enough spacious for you i.e., don't come out of your house unnecessarily and keep on weeping on your mistakes."

(Ahmad, Tirmizi)

Disasters of tongue

One of its disaster is that it looks very light but is very heavy, that is why Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) laid much stress on taking care of it because more of the disasters come due to of the tongue only. Until tongue does not start, there is no quarrel or litigation with anybody, when it starts, every such thing is there.Pious religious scholars have collected these disasters of tongue at one place after extracting them from Ahadith.

Hadhrat Imam Ghazali (RA) has written this topic in quite detail in his book, Ihya-ul-Uloom. In Urdu, Maulana Mufti Inayat Ahmad Sahib has written this topic sufficiently in his book Zamanul Firdous. It is must for every body to see this book, even daily. Author of these lines will enumerate only the sins of tongue and will refer the reader for details to above mentioned books. These disasters according to Imam Gahazali (RA) are 20.

1. To talk about the thing which has no benefit.
2. To talk more than needed.
3. To talk about nonsense things like telling stories of women, transgressors or tyrants with interest.
4. To indulge in (useless) debates and discussions.
5. To quarrel.
6. To talk with formality and artificiality.
7. To talk obscene language and to abuse.
8. To use fool language.
9. To say La'anat.
10. To sing and to read such poetry which is against the Shari'ah.
11. To chat and laugh more.
12. To laugh at others in which others are looked down, upon.
13. To reveal some body's secret.
14. To make false promise.
15. To tell lie unless it is extremely necessary and nobody's right is being snatched, there it is allowed.

16. Geebat (Backbiting):- This becomes one's food and gives rise to many evils. Many people say that they are speaking truth, how is it Geebat? This doubt is silly as Geebat takes place only when it is true, otherwise it is slandering. Of course, if there is a possibility of some Deeni or worldly harm to someone, then it is allowed to reveal his condition.
17. Double faced:-To say yes to everyone and in every group.
18. Flattering someone at his face. If it is felt that the listener will not feel proud instead may get more inclined towards virtue, then there is no harm.
19. Not to take care of minute mistakes during conversation as people say "above is Allah and below you." This is a bad thing, in it there is sort of equation between the Creator and the creature.
20. To ask Ulema such questions which are not related to you.

Methods of control of tongue

The remedy of it is that whenever you have to say something, don't say it abruptly, first think for two or three seconds that whether this thing which I am going to say, may not displease my real Owner Allah.If one is fully satisfied that it is not so, then one should say without hesitation but only whatever is needed (not more than that). If there is slightest doubt, then keep quite, Insha Allah, you will get saved from all the disasters of tongue easily.

Shaikh Sa'adi says:

مزن بے تامل بگفتار دم
بجو گوئی گردد بر گوئی چہ غم

May Allah give Tawfeeq.

Al-Humdu-Lillah, at this stage all the branches related to tongue have ended.

TAHARAH AND ALL KINDS OF CLEANLINESS

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Taharah is half of Iman."

(Muslim)

N.B:-It includes all kinds of cleanliness, since it has been said that five things are demanded by right minded nature (Fitrat-e-Saleema).

i Circumscision
ii To share off the pubic hair.
iii To cut the moustaches.
iv To cut the nails.
v To pull the hairs of Axillae.

(Bukhari, Muslim)

And Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Allah is pure and likes purity. So keep the places in front of your houses clean."

(Tirmizi)

See how beautiful lesson has been given by Shari'ah about cleanliness, but unfortunately we make others to laugh on us by leaving the teaching of Shari'ah. We also allow the others to raise the questions about our Shari'ah. that it is not enough for reformation of a society. While other communities have taken our teachings and are trying to own them and feel proud. "Inna-Lilllahi-Wa-Inna-Ilyhi Raajioon."

Live with simplicity but with cleanliness. Keep your body, clothes and house everything clean. Dirtiness is the cause of one's shame and causes harm to others.

SALAH

Abdullah Bin Umru Bin Al-Aas (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam), one day mentioned about Salah and said:

" One who protects his Salah i.e., always offers it with regularity taking full care of its all conditions and basic principles, for him that Salah will become means of light, manifestation (Burhan) and salvation on the day of Qiyammah. And one who will not protect his Salah, that Salah will neither be light for him nor manifestation nor means of salvation and that person will be in the company of Pharaon, Qaroon, Haamaan and Abi Khalaf."

(Ahmad, Dharmi, Bihaqi)

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Order your children to offer Salah when they reach the age of seven years and beat them for (not offering) Salah when they reach the age of ten years and seperate their beddings i.e.,when they become mature enough, make them to sleep on seperate beds."

(Abu Dawood)

N.B:-There are countless Ahadith in favour of excellence of Salah and as admonishment on not offering Salah, giving different excuses. The big excuse given is lack of time. Friends! if you get a strong urge for micturition or moving bowls during peak hours of your schedule, what will you do that time? Remain busy in your job or you will run to attend the call of nature leaving every important engagement there. Alas! Does Salah not have even this much importance and value? The biggest tragedy is that some Darvesh do not think it to be necessary and mislead the ignorant and commom people. Darveshi is undertaken so that there is increase in Ibaadat the thing which was difficult earlier on becomes easy and not that whatever little Salah, Saum was there that also goes. More worrying than this is the fact that on the top of that they try to prove their piousness by distorting the meaning of Qur'an.

Friends! Detailed answer to this is for students (of Deen).These people should be just asked that on whom Qur'an was revealed, was he (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) understanding Qur'an more or you are understanding more.

He offered Salah during his whole life, and then on what grounds are you leaving Salah. In fact, it is also the mischief of Nafs that in the garb of piousness the lust of Nafs is being fulfilled or during Salook there has been some deception which has lead to ignorance and pride, had they inclined towards some person who knows both Shari'ah and Haqiqah, their this (ignorance and) mistake would have got corrected. May Allah save from all the disasters.

Those people who have now started offering Salah, they should offer previous and missed Salah as well. These are not forgiven by Toaba only. For Qadha (missed Salah) it is not necessary that fajr Salah should be offered in the Fajr time and Zuhr Salah should be offered in the Zuhr time.

Qadha Salah is permissible in all times except at following three times:-

1. At sunrise
2. At sunset and
3. At midnoon.

Of course, people feel it easy to offer one Qadha Salah with one Adha Salah (Salah of that time).

SADQA

Abu Huriarah (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"The person whom Allah has given wealth and he is not giving its Zakah, Allah will transfer his wealth in the form of a bald snake with dots on his eyes (such snake is highly poisonous). That snake will be wound round his neck like a Iron Collar, then this snake will catch both corners of his mouth and will tell him, I am your wealth, I am your treasure." Then Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) recited this Aayat.

ولاتحسبن الذين يبخلون. (الآيته)

In this verse is also mentioned that wealth will be in the form of iron collar (of a slave)."

(Bukhari)

Reform, by logic of those who do not pay Zakah

Many rich people do not pay Zakah fearing that their money may get lessened. Friends; it has been proved by experience that by giving Zakah and Sadqa, the wealth does not decrease. If some part of it goes at one time, more than that comes at other time. This is also present in Hadith Shareef.

Secondly, even if it really gets decreased, then what, one is spending thousands of rupees in luxuries, that also decreases your wealth. If you have to pay taxes etc, if you don't give that you will be declared as culprit, these also derease your wealth, you can think it as a divine tax.

Thirdly, even if it seems to be decreasing here but it is getting stored there. After all you are depositing money in a bank or post office, that time it comes out of your possession, but still you remain satisfied that it is at a safe place and the profit is increasing. Similarly a person with Iman should have full trust in promises of Allah that it is getting stored there and that we will get on the day of Qiyammah along with the profit, at such time when we will need it most.Besides, you employ a gaurd for its protection, give him salary which in turn causes decrease in your wealth but you bear it to save the rest of wealth from robbery. Similarly think that paying of Zakah is its protection.

Hadhrat Aisha (RA) narrated that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"When ever Zakah remains mixed with the wealth, it always destroys it."

[narrated by shaafi (RA) and Bukhari in his history]

Hamidi has added to it that if Zakah got Wajib on you and you did not pay it, so this Haram will destroy your Halal. There is no one who has not to spend something for needy, if it is spent systematically, then it will be easy to pay Zakah.

SADQA FITR

Ibne Abbas (RA) narrates that he said during last days of Ramdhan, "take out Sadqa of your fasts (Saum). Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) has fixed up this Sadqa. It should be one Saa'a of dates or barly or half Saa'a of wheat. Everyone whether he is free, slave, man, woman, child, or old, has to give it." It is narrated from Ibne Abbas (RA) only that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) fixed this so that the fasts (of Ramdhan) could be purified from useless and dirty things and that the poor could get something to eat.

(Abu Dawood)

The Mas'ail (rules) of Sadqa Fitr should be taken from the books of Islamic jursiprudence.

There are other dues also in wealth other than Zakah

Removal of wrong notion

Some legal type of people think that when they have given Zakah, they have no other right to fulfill. Then the state of hardness of their hearts is such that, even if they see some poor dying of hunger and they have thousnads of rupees, yet they neither feel pity on him nor give him a single penny. They remain highly satisfied in their opinion that they have given Zakah and they have no other dues to pay now. This opinion is wrong, it is also stated in Hadith.

إِنَّ فِي الْمَالِ لَحَقًّا سِوَى الزَّكٰوةِ ثُمَّ تَلَا لَيْسَ الْبِرَّ الخ رواه الترمذي

"In wealth there are other dues than Zakah then he (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) recited the Aayat....."

(Tirmizi, Ibne Majah, Dharami)

After saying so, recited this Aayat in support of his statement as in this Aayat giving of wealth (in charity) has been stated first and then there is order for Zakah. From this it is interpreted that to give charity is in addition to giving of Zakah. Similarly many Haqooq (rights) are known from numerous Ahadith. In fact, Haqooq of wealth are of two kinds viz, fixed and non-fixed. Fixed one is Zakah which is to be given in a particular quantity.

Others are non-fixed Haqooq which depend upon the need of deserving people (Ahle-Haqooq). There is no hard and fast rule for this. For example, a needy poor man comes and he needs one rupee which we have in excess, is it not necessary for us to help him? Yes, it is definitely incumbent on us to help him. Similarly to lend money to some one, to give something for some time for use, to help in other matters as per one's capacity, is all necessary.

ROZAH
(SAUM)

Hadhrat Abu Huriarah (RA) narrated that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" For all good deeds of a man, there is a routine that one virtue increases from ten times to seven hundred times (in Thawaab) except for Rozah as Allah Ta'ala says that Rozah is mine as he (Rozahhdhar) has left his lust and meals for Him."

"For one who observes fast, there are two occasions of joy, one joy is at the time of Iftar and another is at the time of meeting his Cherisher-Allah."

"Of course, the bad smell, of the mouth of one who is observing Rozah, is more pure near Allah than the fragrance of the musk."

"And Rozah is (like) a shield."

"And if anyone amongst you observed Rozah he should not talk abusive language, should not raise noise and if anyone abuses him or quarrels with him, he should say, " brother, I am fasting (I have Rozah)."

Reform of those who show carelessness in Rozah

There are numerous Ahadith present in favour of observation of Rozah and in the condemnation of not observing Rozah. Alas! these days many luxurious minded people hesitate from observing fasts, saying that they cannot withstand hunger and thirst. This is strange enough, if a doctor advises them not to take meals for four times otherwise they will die, then these people will leave five times meals than four, quite willingly and happily. Alas! the order of Allah is not equal to order of a doctor (to these people). Alas! the life of Hereafter is not equal to life of this world.

Oh Allah, give good sense to our brothers and remove the dominance of Shaitaan and Nafs from them.

Rozah is of three kinds:-

1. Fardh:- Rozah of Ramdhan, Nazar (vow), Kaffara (compensation), Qadha (missed) and in place of Hadi (sacrificial animal of Hajj).
2. Nafl:- Six days of Shawaal, Nine days of Zil-Hajj, Day of Aashoora, 15th of the Shabaan.
3. Others are non fixed:-Forbidden on the day of Eid-ul Fitr, on the day of Eid-ul Azha, on three days after Eid-ul Azha.

HAJJ AND UMRAH

Abi Amama (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"One who is not stopped by poverty, tyrant king or illness from going to Hajj and then he does not perform Hajj, it is immaterial for him whether he dies as a Jew or a Christian."

(Dharmi)

Hadhrat Abu Huriarah (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"Performers of Hajj and Umrah are guests of Allah. If they make Dua to Allah, their Dua is accepted. If they make Istigafar, they are forgiven."

(Ibne Majah)

Hadhrat Abu Huriarah (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"One who leaves his home with the intention of performing Hajj, Umrah or Jihad and he dies on his way, Allah Ta'ala gives him Thawab of Hajj, Umrah and Jihad Mujahid respectively."

(Bihaqi)

Reforms of wrong notion about Hajj

Rich people always make lame excuses for not going to Hajj. Some make excuse of business, some say that they are afraid of sea and some are afraid of dacoits.

Friends! these all excuses are made because value of Hajj has not remained in our hearts, Attendance in the Darbar of Allah Ta'ala is not thought to be necessary. Hearts are devoid of love of Allah otherwise nothing could have come as a hurdle in this way. I give you a small example, if the Queen Elizebith sends you an invitation along with the traveling expenses, tell me honestly, will you make excuse at that time, of business, that you have nobody to look after your business or that you are afraid of sea or that there are dacoits at such and such places. My dear, your heart will not like to make an excuse, you will throw all your excuses in the hearth and will run with full enthusiasm. All difficulties will seem to be easy to you.

Actually, all difficulties become easy with determination, when one lowers his carriage and determination, then an easy thing seems difficult. As regards dacoits, there is nothing new, it is same as it is happening here. Just see the drivers if you keep them happy with tobacco or some eatable, they become your slave, if you tell them something rudely, they will cause many problems for you, similarly so many accidents take place in traveling a short distance despite all strict arrangements. On the other hand these accidents which take place there, are least. Whatever happens is because of carelessness of travelers, otherwise there is complete safety.

Many people feel it difficult because the country is strange and the language is strange. In the end I say even if every thing happens, then what? one tolerates all humiliation in somebody's love, Is even this much not the right of love of Allah.

Advice to Hajis

Hajis should take care of few things:

1. Do not miss Salah in plane. This is very bad that one leaves many Fardh for one Fardh.

2. Do not quarrel with anyone during journey nor trust any body.
3. You should appoint your leader, who knows the rules of Hajj and is sincere and honest.
4. Take enough expenditure along and do not be miser while spending, do not waste money so that you will become dependent.
5. Do not leave your group at any time.
6. Keep the guides happy.
7. Think this journey as the journey of love.

AETIKAF

(to stay in solitude in Mosque in Ramadhan)

Hadhrat Aisah (RA) narrates that:

" Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) used to stay in Aetikaf during last ten days of Ramdhan till his death. After that his wives used to perform Aetikaf."

(Bukhari, Muslim)

Ibne Abbas (RA) narrates that:

"Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said in favour of Moetakif (one who performs Aetikaf), that he abstains from all sins and he gets so much reward of his virtues as is got by doer of all the virtues."

(Ibne Majah)

Purpose of Aetikaf

As per research scholars its benefit is to find Shab-e-Qadr, as it is supposed to be in last ten days of Ramdhan, as per most Ahadith.

Much Fadeelat of Shab-e-Qadr has come in Ahadith.

Hadhrat Anas (RA) narrates that when the month of Ramdhan entered, Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" This month has come to you, in this there is one night which is better than thousand months (this is Shab-e-Qadr). One who remained deprived of its blessings, he remained deprived of all blessings and only that person remains deprived of it who is quite deprived."

(Ibne Majah)

Some people think that Aetikaf means to remain bound in mosques for ten days even if one remains busy there in worldly nonsense things. Such Aetikaf is meaningless. The kernel of Aetikaf is Zikr, Fikr, engagement in Ibadaat, Repentance (Tooba), Istigfar and waiting for Salat etc. One should spend one's time in these affairs. In odd nights (i.e., 21st, 23rd, 25th, 27th, 29th) there is most probable possibility of Shab-e-Qadr, so in these nights one should try to remain awake as much as possible. It is not necessary to remain awake whole night even when tongue is fibrillating . There is (frequent) Sahow (neglect) in Ruku and Sajdah and one is falling down with overwhelming sleep. In these conditions it is better to sleep for sometime. Shari'ah does not command you to kill yourself, real purpose is that there should be no laziness, shirking or negligence.

One should be fully concerned towards Ibadaat and should try his level best not to do any purposeful laziness. One should sleep nicely when tired. This type of rest is not less than Ibadaat.

HIJRAH

Hadhrat Abu Saeed Khudri (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" After a short time, the condition of muslim will be such that the best property of a muslim will be sheep after whom he will be wandering over mountain tops and places of rain, saving his Deen from Fitna."

(Bukhari)

Hadhrat Umru-Ibn-Ul-Aas (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"Hijrah erases the sins which had been committed before it."

(Muslim)

N.B:- If in any city, Mohallah or gathering, there is chance of getting some Harm to Deen, then it is Wajib to get separated from that place, if one has the capability of doing so. But in case this person is Aalim there, and people need him, then he should stay there and have patience. If people do not ask him anything and he does not expect any reform, then also he should leave.

Fulfillment of Nazar (vow)

Hadhrat Aaesha (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" One who takes a vow that he will do the obedience of Allah, then he should do it and one who takes a vow that he will do disobedience of Allah, he should not do so."

(Buhkari)

i.e., the vow which is as per Shari'ah, that should be fulfilled and one which is against the Shari'ah, that should not be fulfilled, for example, somebody takes a vow that if his son gets cured, he will arrange the party of dance, such Nazar is nonsense Nazar, it is not permissible to fulfill such a vow.

Some customary and forbidden vows

These days people take vows about many Bida'at and Makrooh things, women are particularly involved more in such things, viz,

1. To make Faqeer of Imam Hussain (RA).
2. To keep a Choti (a pyramidical tope of hair) or to wear a ring in somebody's name.
3. To send a Gilaf (pillow coverer, bigger cover) to somebody's graveyard.
4. To sacrifice goat of Shaikh Sadoo.
5. To celebrate Khudai Raat.
6. To observe fast (Rozah) of Mushkil Kusha.
7. And so many such nonsense customs are famous which have no basis in Shari'ah, but are totally forbidden, strange enough is the fact that many literate people are supporters of such things, particularly there are many who think that the goat of Shaikh Sadoo is Halal.

Friends! It is clearly written in Qur'an

وَمَا أُهِلَّ بِهِ لِغَيْرِ اللَّهِ

Ahlal is an Arabic word, it should be seen in dictionary. Halal and Haram is a subject of jurisprudence, It should be seen in Dur-

Mukhtar etc. The translation of Ahlal as Zabah in some commentaries is as a customary thing of these days.

Care of Oaths and its Aadaab

Allah Ta'ala says:

وَاحْفَظُوْا اَيْمَانَكُمْ.

There are so many things which come under the care of Oaths:

1. Do not swear by anything other than Allah.

Hadhrat Ibne Umar (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) used to say:

" One who swears by Gairullah (anything other than Allah), he becomes a Mushrik."

From this is meant Mushrik Amali (by deeds). Many people these days swear by their fathers or sons. One should be very cautious about it. Some people say that if he is lier, then he should not have any Iman, it is also strictly forbidden.

"It is stated in Hadith that if he is lier, then he lies, Iman goes and if he is truthful then also his Iman will not return towards safer Islam."

(Abu Dawood)

2. Swear truly when one swears by Allah.

Hadhrat Abu Huriarah (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Do not swear by Allah unless you are truthful."

(Abu Dawood, Nasai)

3. Do not take too many oaths (even by Allah), in this there is disgrace of name of Allah:-

Allah Ta'ala has listed the Hallaaf (one who takes too many oaths) with the people of condemned attributes, as in Surah Noon.

4. If one takes oath as per Shari'ah, then one should fulfill it:-

If an oath is taken against Shari'ah e.g., oath taken on any sin that one will do Zulm on someone or will snatch someone's right or one takes an oath that he will not talk to his father, brother or any other muslim or that one will not pay anything to such and such person his due, one should break such oaths (not fulfill them).

Since Hadhrat Abu Huriarah (RA narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" If someone takes an oath on something, then other thing looks nice to him then he should pay Kafarah and do that (nice one).

(Muslim)

5. Do not take twisted oaths in order to snatch some body's due (by deception):-

Of course, it is permissible if one is getting opressed (to avoid that). For example, you owe some money to someone and you want to take an oath and at the same time neither oath should be false nor should you have to pay anything and then say, "I am not having your money." If anybody listens this sentence he will think that he does not owe any money to him when this person in his heart, means by this statement that this time his money is not in his pocket.

This type of excuse is a sin. On the other hand, if some dacoit or Zalim tells you to show him your treasure, that time it is permissible to make such excuse e.g., you can say this time I don't even have a single penny, why are you teasing me? Some scholars have said that at such occasions even to tell a lie is permissible.

Hadhrat Abu Huriarah (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Oath takes place on the intention (Niyyat) of the oath taker."

(Muslim)

Reform of a wrong notion, Kafarah (compensation for oath) and its kinds:-

Kafarah has four kinds:

1. Kafarah Yameen.
2. Kafarah Qital.
3. Kafarah Zihar.
4. Kafarah Ramdhan.

All these kinds are mentioned in Qur'an and Hadith.

Kafarah Yameen
(compensation for oath)

When one breaks his oath, he should either feed ten people with two time stomach full meals or should give them a pair of clothes each or should free a slave. He has the option to choose any of these. If he cannot do so, (does not have such resources), then he should observe fast for three consecutive days. Many people observe the fast despite having the resources to feed the poor by the meals, this is not permissible, by this Kafarah will not take place. If some one gives the price of half of a Saa'a of wheat i.e., equal to 1.75kgs, to some poor, it is also permissible.

Kafarah Qital
(compensation for murder)

If someone kills some body unintentionally, accidentally, it is obligation on him to free one slave in addition to give Dheet or Khoon Bahar, the rules of which are written in detail in books of Islamic Jurisprudence.

Kafarah Zihar

If wife is compared to some part of anyone who is Muhrim eternally (like mother, sister etc.) this is called Zihar. (for example if husband tells his wife that your back to me is as good as my mother's back). This wife remains Haram to that husband until he gives Kafarah. It's Kafarah is to free a slave, if one cannot do that then observe fast for two months continuously, if one cannot do that then he should feed two time meals to 60 miskeen (poor people). Then that woman will become halal for him.

Kafarah Ramdhan

If some one breaks his fasts of Ramdhan purposely without any genuine reason, he has to pay Kafarah in addition to observing that fast as Qadha. This kafarah is similar to kafarah Zihar, in sequence also.

Warning

Continuity in fasts for two months is a necessary condition, if even one fast breaks with genuine reason or without genuine reason, then one has also to restart observing fast from number one again. But if a women gets menstruation during this time, this excuse is acceptable, but the woman has to start fasts soon after cessation of menses. If she delays just by one day, then she has to restart from initial again. Nifas (perpeural haemorrhege) is not acceptable excuse, she has to restart again.

To cover one's body

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" One who believes in Allah and the Day of Qiyamah, he should not go in Hamaam (common bath place) without lungi (a cloth that covers from umblicus to knees).

(Tirmizi)

Hadhrat Muaawiya Bin Haida (RA) narrates that he requested Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) that when should they cover their body and when should they leave it as such. Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Conceal your body from everyone except your wife or londi. Then he again asked that sometimes one stays with another (i.e., it is very difficult to conceal it all the time from a person with whom one lives at one place). Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said, " if you can conceal, do that". Then he asked that sometimes one is alone, then Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said that time it is better to have Haya of Allah."

(Tirmizi)

Important rules of Pardah

The reason for the statement,that do not go without lungi to Hamaam, is that in Hamaam many people go at the same time for a bath, hence Pardah is Wajib there.

The permission which has been given for remaining without Pardah in presence of Londi, it is not that Londi which is seen in the homes of rich people in India,because these women are free (not slave). Neither is it permissible to take bonded labour from them nor is it permissible to have intercourse with them.

They are like stranger free women. They should be treated like servants. Their service should be with their consent (like for salary or for clothes). They are free to marry any one, and are free to leave any time. There is not control over them.

From Hadith it is learnt that it is not permissible to remain naked even in solitude (either by full body or by its that part, covering of which is Wajib). One should have Haya of Allah and Angels. The rules of Pardah are written in detail in the books of jurisprudence. Here one should understand this much that it is obligatory to cover body from umblicus to Knees for men and for women from top to toe. It is permissible for that women, who has to go in front of some Naa-Muhrim (due to some compulsory job), to keep uncovered her face, two hands below wrists and two feet below ankles. In this case if someone looks at this women with bad intention, he will be sinful and no blame will be on her. The rest of the body should be covered with thick clothes, better is white and simple. It is not permissible to come in front of Naa-Muhrim for a woman who has used Scent. Women should try their best to keep their ornaments hidden. Woman should not talk with Naa-Muhrim men with frankness and informality.

In short what is permissible within the limits of need, becomes impermissible when it exceeds the limits of need. So, Oh men and women, be very careful about these things. Remember, Allah and His Rasool (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) are very kind to you, from whatever they have forbidden you, it is all for your benefit. These days neither there is Pardah of body nor of voice, of this so many vices develop.

May Allah give us Tawfeeq.

QURBANI

Hadhrat Zaid Bin Arqam (RA) narrates that Suhaba asked Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam), Oh! Messenger of Allah, What is Qurbani?

He (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" It is sunnat of your father Ibrahim (AS)." Then they asked what do they get out of it?

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) told them, "one virtue for every hair (of the sacrificial animal)." Then they asked what from the woolen animals, Oh Messenger of Allah?

He replied again,
" one virtue for every hair."

(Ahmad, Ibni-Majah)

Mistake of incharge of Madrasas in expenditure of the money got from selling sheep skin of Qurbani

The excellence of the Qurbani has been mentioned in many Ahadith. One can take sheep skin of Qurbani himself or can give to others as Sadqa or Hadya. The owner has full option but it is not permissible to use its price after selling it. If sold, then its money should be used as Zakah. Who has been made deputy for this job, he should do the same way.

Usually the Arabic Madrasas use the price of the sheep of Qurbani for any purpose, this is carelessness. It should be used as Zakah is used.

FUNERAL CEREMONIES
(Tajheez, Takfeen, Salat and Dafan)

Hadhrat Jabir (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Whenever anyone of you gives as Kafan (shroud) to his brother, he should give a nice one."

(Muslim)

Hadhrat Abu Huriarah (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"One who goes after the Janaazah of any muslim with the intention of thawaab and because of Iman, he returns with two Qirat of thawaab, each Qiratis equal to mountain Uhud and one who returns after Janaazah Salah before burial, he returns with one Qirat."

(Bukhari, Muslim)

N.B:-Many people show laziness in going upto the graveyard and thus lose a very great thawaab. The result of this laziness sometimes goes to this extent that after some Janaazah there are only four people left behind and if the graveyard is far away , they feel it shock like. Friends! this is a collective responsibility of all muslims and by this laziness all become sinful.

N.B:- The Duas of Janaazah as per Hadith

اللهم اغفر له وارحمه و عافه و اعف عنه و اكرم نزله ووسّع مُد خله و

PAYMENT OF DEBTS

Hadhrat Abdullah Bin Umru Bin Al-Ass (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" The death in the way of Allah (Shahadat) becomes Kafarah (compensation) for every thing other than debt."

Carelessness in Debt paying

Friends! What is greater than Shahadat, but it also cannot wave off debt, what else can wave it off. From this one can understand the severity of debt. Many people do not take care about it. There are many wrong practices which are practised in this regard.

1. To take debt unnecessarily:-

Often debt is taken for unnecessary things. Rarely debt is taken for some calamitouns condition. Often calamity stricken people do not get debts, it is usually got by rich wealthy people. What is the fun to become unnecessarily indebted, that too for wasting in marriages, construction of ivory tower buildings or in ceremonies of sorrow which are against the Shari'ah. In short, debt is taken for getting fame and that too is not got, by Allah's Fadhal. What is the benefit of such fame? and they are caring less for tomorrow's disgrace in Hereafter.

2. Second wrong practice is to keep one's own property, ornaments safe and to take debt from others:-

They get the debt on the interest which goes on multi-plying and a day comes when they have to waste their whole property in interest. In addition to sinful , they become loosers as well.

If one has such dire need, then one should sell the extra things which are in possession. Allah Ta'ala will send again. In place of one's comforts, these ornaments etc. have no value.

3. Third wrong practice is that after taking the debt, they become carefree:- Instead they should have remained bothered about it, paying little by little after curtailing the expenditure in unnecessary items. Otherwise such people become notorious, disgraced, and are called non-payers by the people. Next time people are hesitating in dealing with them. On top of that the accountability in Akhirah remains there on their heads. Of course, the debt which has been taken under dire necessity and that person tries his best to pay and if he cannot do so, It has been stated in Hadith that Allah Ta'ala takes the responsibility of his debt, either He may pay it in this world or may please the lender in Aakhirah.

SIDQ-FIL-MUAAMALA
(Honesty in dealing)

Hadhrat Abu Saeed (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Honest business man will be with Ambiyaa, Siddiqeen and Sadqeen (on the day of Qiyamah)."

(Tirmizi, Dhaarmi, Dhur Mukhtaar)

It is related from Hakim Bin Hazam (RA) :

" If the buyer and seller speak the truth and will reveal merits and demerits of their goods (correctly), then there are..... blessings (barkat) for them and if they hide and speak lie, then blessings are waved off from both of them."

(Bukhari, Muslim)

Hadhrat Abdullah (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Searching of Halal means of sustenance is Fardh after Fardh Ma'hood (Salah, Saum etc.)"

(Bihaqi)

Hadhrat Rafia Bin Khadij (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) was asked,

"which earning is most pure?"

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) replied,

" Handicrafts and that business which is free of cheating".

(Ahmad)

Hadhrat Jabir (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" That flesh will not enter Jannat which has grown from Haraam and that flesh which has grown from Haram is worth Hell."

(Bukhari)

N.B:- From these Ahadith few things are learned:

1. Earning of Halal is Fardh for that person who does not have any other means of Halal sustenance.
2. Out of all two things are better, Handicrafts and Business.
3. The honesty and truth should be considered in dealings and cheating should be avoided otherwise Barkat goes.
4. One should not be narrow minded and miser in dealings, making hue and cry for a penny or getting after somebody's life for petty things.
5. The end result of Haram is Jahannum.

The Masaial of dealings should be seen in books of jurisprudence and asked from Ulema. Here we write some common things which are highly spreading these days:

1. To take or give interest. It includes bank interest as well as profit given by the post office.
2. To finalise the deal before taking the goods in actual possession.
3. To publish a book with pictures or in which false stories of any Nabi, Ahle Bait or Suhaba are written.
4. To borrow gold or silver for more or less gold or silver from a goldsmith.
5. To take some rupees this time and others at other time.

Bearing witness

Allah Ta'ala says:

" Don't hide witness, one who hides witness, so heart will be sinful."

Hadhrat Zaid Bin Khalid (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Should I not inform you about best witness. It is that person who bears witness before he is asked for it."

(Muslim)

False witness, filing of false case and taking such cases as a lawyer

From the Aayat and Hadith, it is learnt that it is not permissible to hide the witness. On the other hand if the rights of a person are getting wasted and this person is not getting the witnesses and we are witness to this whole matter and have full information about it and that person does not know it that we know the things, then we should voluntarily go and appear as witness. We should not wait for his request for he does not know that we know this thing, how can he request? If he does not want us to be a witness even after telling him that we can give witness, then it is not necessary to go to court and involve oneself in it. This command is for the true witness. False witness, which is common these days, is a great sin.

Kharim Bin Fatak (RA) narrates that one day they offered the Fajar prayer with Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) and Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) stood up after completion of Salah and said:

" False witness has been stated equal to Shirk (i.e., in Qur'an). Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) repeated it thrice and then recited the Aayat.

فَاجْتَنِبُوا الرِّجْسَ

i.e., Save yourselves from dirty things (Idols) and from false word."

(Abu Dawood)

In this Aayat Shirk and false word (lies) has been mentioned together, thereby it is learnt that they have same relationship. In the same way filing of false cases and to take a false Oath are great sins.

Hadhrat Abi Zarr (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" One who stakes a claim for a right which is not in fact his, he is not from amongst us. He should make abode for himself in Hell."

(Muslim)

Hadhrat Abu Amaamah (RA) narrates that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" One who cuts the due (Haq) of Muslim (this is a word binding otherwise rights of all are equal) by Oath, so indeed Allah Ta'ala will make the Hell obligatory for him and will make Jannat Haram for him. Somebody asked even if that was an ordinary thing. Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) replied even if that was just a wooden stick of people."

(Muslim)

In the same way, it is Haram to be the lawyer of a false case , Allah Ta'ala says:

ولا تكن للخائنين خصيما

CHASTITY WITH NIKAH

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Oh, group of youth, who amongst you can keep a wife (i.e., can give her sustenance and have power for inter-course), should marry for it helps one to keep one's eyes down and private parts remain safe."

(Bukhari, Muslim)

N.B:-One who does not have power or need for his Nikah , it is not necessary for him,

Fulfillment of rights of family

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"Start from that person who is in your family."

(Bukhari, Muslim)

And Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" The best Dinar (money) is that which is spent on one's own family."

(Muslim)

And Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

"It is enough for one to be sinful that he wastes those whose rights (haqooq) are obligatory on him."

(Abu Dawood)

N.B:-If a person does not have more wealth, then his family is more deserving of that wealth (whatever he has) than others. Shari'ah does not like that charity in which own kith and kins will be in misery and one will be giving charity to others. Of course, if one can serve all, nothing like that.

N.B:-Slaves and servants are also included in your family, Their encouragement and help is also important.

"Some one asked Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) that how many times he should forgive his servant ? Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) replied seventy times a day."

(Tirmizi)

It means that one should not get annoyed with him on every word and tease him. One who gives you so many comforts if he causes a little inconvenience, one should tolerate that and think him to be innocent.

SERVICE OF PARENTS

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" The Allah's pleasure is in the pleasure of parents and Allah's non-pleasure is in the non-pleasure of parents."

(Tirmizi)

Hadhrat Ibne Masood (RA) asked Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam),

"Oh, Messenger of Allah, Which is the best deed ?"
Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) replied,
" Offering of Salah in time."
Then he asked. "Which is the next ?"
Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said,
"Service of parents."
Then he asked. "Which is the next?"
Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) replied,
"Jihad Fi Sabeelillah."

(Bukhari, Muslim)

N.B:-There are so many Aayaat and Ahadith in this regard. These days there is much carelessness in this regard. May Allah Ta'ala give correct thinking and Towfeeq for good deeds.

TRAINING OF CHILDREN

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" One who has three daughters and he teaches them education and good manners and brings them up and is kind to them, Jannat becomes obligatory for him, indeed."

(Bukhari)

Bukhari has narrated in Aadab from Ibne Umar (RA) that as you have the rights of father so you have the rights of children as well.

N.B:-As one has natural affiliation with children, so Shari'ah has not laid so much stress on the rights of children, as the girls are usually looked down upon, so Fadeelah of their up bringing has been mentioned.

Good relations with relatives

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" That person will not enter Jannat who misbehaves with his relatives."

(Bukhari, Muslim)

Obedience to Master

" A servant who does service to his master nicely and worships Allah nicely, will get double reward."

(Bukhari)

To do justice when in service

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" There are seven kinds of people whom Allah will bestow the shade of Arsh (on the day of Qiyamah), and one of them is just ruler."

(Bukhari, Muslim)

To follow the Jama'at

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" I command you of five things, of which Allah has commanded me:
1. To listen.
2. To obey.
3. To propagate Deen.

4. To migrate (Hijrah for Deen).
5. To stay with Jama'at, for anybody who leaves the Jama'at just for a distance equal to one's stretched hand only, he has thrown away the necklace of Islam from his neck un less he returns back to the Jama'at."

(Tirmizi, Nisai)

N.B:-It means that in beliefs and deeds one should follow the Jama'at of Ahle-Haq. The sign of that Jama'at is that they must be following Qur'an and Sunnah. Conformity with Qur'an and Sunnah is the sign of resemblance to pious group of earlier times (Salf-Saaliheen). As much as there would be resemblance with Sahabah and Taaba'een so much will be conformity with Qur'an and Sunnah.

Obeying the Ruler

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" I advise you to fear Allah and listen and obey the orders (of the ruler) even if he will be a Negroid slave."

(Abu Dawood)

N.B:-If a Negroid slave cannot become Imam or Caliph as per Shari'ah but in Shari'ah, as the obedience of Imam or Caliph is obligatory, so is the obedience of the ruler (Sultan) obligatory as well i.e.,, one who gets power and occupation and muslims can live in peace under him. There are not same pre-requisites for becoming a Sultan as are for becoming a Imam or Caliph. Of course, Islam is a pre-condition, if there is agreement with Kafir ruler than it is obligatory to fulfill it as Allah Ta'ala says:

وَأُولِى الْأَمْرِ مِنكُمْ. (الآية)

If there arises a need as per Shari'ah to break this agreement first inform him, as Allah says:

فَانْبِذْ إِلَيْهِمْ عَلَى سَوَاءٍ.

Otherwise there will be a great sin in revolt as Allah says.

إِنَّ اللهَ لَا يُحِبُّ الخَائِنِيْنَ.

MEDIATION FOR MUTUAL PEACE

Allah Ta'ala says:

" If two groups of muslims fight against each other, then make peace between them and then if one does the excess on the other, then fight with one who is doing the excess, till he returns towards Allah."

From this, two things are learnt viz first try to make peace between two warring groups. Secondly, if one group continues Zulm, then do not leave the oppressed alone, but help him and finish the Zulm of Zalim.

Assistance in virtuous deeds

Allah Ta'ala says:

" Assist one other in virtuous deeds and on Taqwa."

N.B:-These days if anybody stands up to do some virtuous work, then all the responsibility is left on his shoulders, thinking that it is his personal job. Nobody bothers about him. From this Aayat it is learnt that everybody should help him as much as possible.

Amar-Bil-Maroof and Nahi-Anil-Munkar (Commanding virtue and prohibiting vice

Allah Ta'ala says:

> " Amongst you there should be one such group which must be inviting towards good, commanding good things and prohibiting from bad things and these are the people who are going to succeed."

And Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

> " Anyone of you who sees a bad thing, he should stop it by his hand and if he has no power to do so, he should forbid it by his tongue and if he can't do even that then he should consider it bad in his heart and this is the weakest state of Iman."
> (Muslim)

N.B:-From this it is learnt that commanding of good things and prohibiting of bad things as per one's power is obligatory. One who can stop it by his hand, he should do it with his hand e.g. head of the family, officer of some people etc. One who stops it with his tongue, he should do that such as a preacher or that whose advice is heard by others otherwise one should keep quite.

There is no benefit in quarrels and disturbances (i.e., if there is apprehension of disturbances and fight on your saying say something), then one should think it bad in his heart. If somebody is not considering it bad even in his heart, then only Allah can help his Iman. This much only is Wajib (obligatory), of course, if some-one is courageous enough and can tolerate the troubles of people, then it is the greatness indeed.

Allah Ta'ala says:

قال الله تعالى . وَاصْبِرْ عَلٰى مَا اَصَابَكَ
اِنَّ ذٰلِكَ مِنْ عَزْمِ الْاُمُوْرِ ۝

IQAAMAT-E-HADOOD
(Establishing the Islamic laws or ordinances for punishment for certain sins)

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

> " Implementation of one Islamic ordinance (Hadh) out of Allah's Hadood is better than forty days rain in the land of Allah Ta'ala."
> (Ibne Majah)

And Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

> " Establish Hadood of Allah in your own people and in others and the criticism of the critics should not stop you from the Allah's ways."
> (Ibne Majah)

N.B:-Hadood are those punishments which have been decided for some sins. No kind of concession is permissible in the punishments. They are Fardh like Salah and fasts. For those (sinful) acts for which no punishment has been decided, the punishment is called Ta'zeer. This depends upon the choice of ruler. This can be lessened or forgiven due to some reason and that (forgiving) may be better at certain occasions as is mentioned in one Hadith.

Propagation of Deen

There are numerous Ahadith in favour of the excellence of propagation of Deen.

To pay the Amaanat

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" There is no Iman in that person who does not have the quality of trust worthiness."

(Ahmad)

Tabrani has quoted a Hadith,

" Be sincere in knowledge, for breach of trust (Khayanat) in knowledge is worst than 'Khayanat' in wealth, i.e., do not deceive somebody in knowledge. Do not tell him wrong thing, what you don't know, tell him that you do not know."

To lend money

There is a Hadith in Ibne Majah:

" In giving Sadqa, the Thawaab is ten times and in lending money to someone, the Thawaab is eighteen times."

The reason is that Sadqa is being asked without need and debt is asked by needy only.

Secondly after giving Sadqa, one becomes carefree where as after lending money , one remains inclined towards it and one gets pained particularly when one does not get it in the times of his need, that is why there is more Thawaab.

Point in the eighteen is that in Sadqa one gets ten times Thawaab i.e., for one rupee ten rupees and in lending it is doubled i.e., for one rupee two rupees, that means for each rupee one will get Thawaab equal to twenty rupees, since lender takes his rupee back, so two are deducted from twenty which remains equal to eighteen.

Entertainment of neighbours

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" One who believes in Allah and the day of Qiyamah, should not tease his neighbour."

(Bukhari, Muslim)

And Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Do good to your neighbour, you will become Mumin."

(Tirmizi)

And in one Hadith it is narrated:

" It is not Halal for a person to eat stomach full and his neighbour remains hungry."

Husin-e-Mu'aamala (Nice dealings)

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Tradesmen (taajir) will be raised on the day of Qiyamah as Faajir except those who feared Allah, practised dealings nicely and told the truth."

(Tirmizi)

Hadhrat Abu Huriarah (RA) narrates that one person made a claim of some due on Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) and he did so rudely. The companions of Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) intended to warn him, Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) told them not to say anything to him as the one whose right is due on some-one else, he has every right to ask for his due and asked them to buy a camel for him. They told Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) that the camel available is better than his camel. Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) told them to buy the same camel, for the best person amongst you is one who returns his due nicely.

(Bukhari, Muslim)

N.B:-Friends! you have seen the nice dealings of Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam). If anybody asks you his due, you lose your temper. Alas! we are the people who get bad name to our saintly people.

To spend in the right way (Infaaq fil haq)

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Allah Ta'ala has disliked for you the wasting of money."
And Allah Ta'ala said:

وَلَا تُبَذِّرْ تَبْذِيرًا.

" Don't waste money".

Honouring of Halal income

One should honour Halal income, it should not be wasted. By having money in one's possession, one remains satisfied, otherwise one remains disturbed if his income is not satisfactory.

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" There will come one time to people when nothing will be useful to them except Deenar and Dirham."

(Ahmad)

That means one who will have wealth, he will keep himself away from Haram earning, greed, jealousy, selling of Deen, begging and disgrace, going to the doors of rich and flattering them and from ruining one's Ilm Deen and Deen at the hands of cruel people by means of his wealth. Therefore, one should spend while holding hand back (i.e., cautiously). One should not spend in useless things even if they are permissible (Mabah). To spend in the things which are against Shari'ah is clearly Haram. It needs no mentioning. One should try to save something from his income, so that it can be of some use to him in the hour of need, old age and drought etc. There is no sin in it, on the contrary if intention is good, there is Thawaab in it.

Answering of Salam and Sneezing

Shaikhain have narrated that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" There are five rights of a muslim on the other muslims, viz, (two of them):

i) To answer Salam.
ii) To answer one who sneezes.

N.B:-In Qur'an Allah says that if someone says Salam to you, return it in a better way or in similar words. From this it is learnt that in answering of Salam, shaking of head or raising of hand is not enough. The words of Salam are اَلسَّلَامُ عَلَيْكُمْ. To say Aadaab, Bandagi etc. is Bida'at.If some body considers to say proper words of Salam very bad, then he may say Salamat, Taslemaat or Tasleem.

Answering of sneezing means that if one who sneezes says Al-Humdulillah, then other muslim should say "Yarhamkallah."

Not to tease anyone

Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Inconvenience (trouble) should be caused neither from one side nor from other side."

(Dar-u-Qutni)

And Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" Muslim is that person from whose tongue and hand people are safe."

(Bukhari)

N.B:-In the second Hadith harming muslims and from first Hadith harming of all people is prohibited, though that may be harm by tongue only e.g., to abuse someone, backbiting or complaining against someone, beating by hand or oppression etc.

Refraining from fun and useless pastime

Hadhrat Uqba bin Aamir narrated that Rasulullah (Salallahu Alaihi Wasallam) said:

" All things of fun and play are useless except:
1. Throwing of arrow from the bow.
2. Taming or training of horse (for obedient performance).
3. Playing with one's own wife.
   All these three kinds of play are useful.

(Tirmizi)

N.B:-Mostly recreational things waste precious time and are useless but these three things or those which resemble them have some benefit, so they don't matter. From this one can understand the state of chess, card playing, dice and other thousands of useless pastimes but on the other hand if one looks at their condemned signs, one can only label them as "Baatil". The benefits which are being described for these, are not more than a memorandum.

To remove a stone from road

In one Hadith, it is narrated that one person was walking along a path and was removing the thorny branches lying on the road with the intention that these may not harm anybody. Allah Ta'ala forgave him for the same.

In the Hadith of Shaikhayn, this act has been labeled as the lowest grade of Iman. And by the grace of Allah, on this ended all the branches of Iman.

Preface

بسم اللّه الرحمن الرحيم
الحمد للّه الذي بشر المؤمنين برضائه ، وسلى للمشتاقين بوعد لقائه ، والصلاة والسلام على محمد الحبيب المحبوب ، الّذي هو وُصلة بين الرب والمربوب ، وعلى آله وأصحابه الفائزين بالمَطْلَب الأقصى والمسند الأسنى .

APPROXIMATELY THREE YEARS ago a severe plague spread in the Muzaffarnagar district. Also, the severity of the plague remained for some time. Our little town, Thaanah Bhavan, which is also part of the Muzaffarnagar district was also affected by the plague. Due to the plague being severe and widespread, people were in distress. Some left their settlements and ran away; some were preparing to run away; some were perturbed, frightened and terrified. In short, there existed an astonishing situation. Since the muqaddas Islaamii sharii'ah has taken responsibility of treating all spiritual difficulties and inner sicknesses, and these hardships had come about as a result of possessing little sabr (patience); having weak reliance on Allah Ta'aala; not being content and satisfied with the commands of the Almighty; and not possessing yaqiin (confidence and trust). The basic cause of all this is solely a strong desire and inclination towards the dunyaa (material world) and keeping away from seeking the aa-khirah (hereafter). All know that the cure for any illness is to remove its cause. Hence, the sayings of Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam: "The love for the dunyaa is the root of all sin", and "Excessively remember the eraser of all pleasures, death" is the only secret of (treating) this.

Taking all these aspects into consideration, and in accordance with this principle, while paying attention to the reformation of the general public I began mentioning in my discourses and lectures the favours, joys and comforts of the hereafter, and creating a strong desire for the hereafter and to abstain from the pleasures of the dunyaa. Also, the attaining of all these favours and pleasures being dependent on maut (death). For this reason I mentioned death being a blessing and favour. When describing these favours of the hereafter, the qabr (grave), qiyaamah (day of reckoning), jannah (paradise), and the glad tidings for a mu-min was mentioned. In the same series, especially regarding every type of difficulty, virtues, reward, nearness to Allah Ta'aala, promise of acceptance, on which are based the glad tidings and good news of the favours and blessings of the hereafter were now and then mentioned in lectures and discourses. As a result clear and immediate results were witnessed, and the courage and confidence of the public set in. Signs of happiness and contentment began to manifest themselves. All distress and difficulties turned into contentment. Moreso, in some way a few people began to look forward to death. When these subjects proved so beneficial for these people, it came to mind that for many years, now and then, in many areas of India, plague keeps on spreading and it is not known till when such a situation will remain. Wherever plague spreads, the people become engulfed in the same type of distresses, fears and difficulties, as a result, surely loss and harm regarding the hereafter is experienced. Even during normal times, at the bereavement of a dear and beloved one, this same situation is experienced. Patience and tawakkul (complete reliance on Allah Ta'aala etc.) is not found. The life of this world becomes bitter. Therefore, everywhere people are in need of this prescription for strengthening the soul and heart. These subjects which benefited the local people, if collected in a written form and conveyed to people of other places, will, it is hoped from Allah Ta'aala, benefit them too. Hence, a firm intention was made to collect subjects pertaining to the hereafter. Since these subjects were delivered during lectures and discourses at various places, it was not possible to write it with the same detail. Therefore, it was intended that these type of ahaadiith be chosen from Shaykh Jalaaluddiin Suyutii's Sharhus Sudur and translated into simple language, because this will fulfil the original aim. About thirty such ahaadiith were in the process of being compiled when a copy of a Misrii (Egyptian) printed copy of Sharhus Sudur containing a commentary titled Bushraa al Ka-eeb, also by Shaykh Jalaaluddiin Suyutii was received from a friend. This copy especially contained those subjects which refers to the glad tidings after death. Since this booklet was more suitable for my desired intention, it was thought, that instead of choosing subjects from Sharhus Sudur, a great portion of this booklet be translated, and at places to complete or corroborate a subject, or mention some details, subject-matter be taken from other sources too, which should be regarded as an extended and collateral portion of the original. Where no kitaab reference has been mentioned, it is a translation from the original Bushraa al Ka-eeb. Reference sources of subject-matter taken from other kitaabs are also mentioned.

I have found it appropriate to name this booklet Showqe Watan because the hereafter is our original watan (abode, home country), and is worthy of being desired. Our negligence and carelessness have made us totally forget. This booklet will remove such negligence and make us desire our original abode. Now it is hoped, with the grace of Allah Ta'aala, that this book be so useful, that at times of sorrow, grief and fear, if it is read or read to others, or read at small or big gatherings, then In-Shaa-Allah instead of sorrow, happiness; instead of fear, peace of mind; instead of distress, contentment will result. Many chapters have been compiled herein. It must be remembered that the translation is made in simple language for the benefit of the layman. With hope of gaining barakah the original 'Arabic ahaadiith has also been given. It is also a source of more assurance, satisfaction and caution. Where deemed necessary details have been given under the caption of commentary. May Allah Most High accept this kitaab with the hope, and for the purpose and aim that is was compiled; make it a source for the desire of the hereafter; and with the desire give the taufiiq (divine guidance) to prepare for the hereafter, and with taufiiq grant acceptance and nearness to Him. Aamiin.

Chapter 1
The reward for illness and hardships

٥ – عن محمد بن خالد السلمي عن أبيه عن جده قال: قال رسول اللّه صلى االله عليه وسلم: ان العبد إذا سبقت له من اللّه منزلة لم يبلغها بعمله ، إبتلاه اللّه في جسده أو في ماله أو في ولده ، ثم صبَّره على ذلك حتى يبلغه المنزلة التي سبقت له من اللّه ، رواه أحمد وأبو داؤد ، مشكوة .

1. Sayyidina Abii Sa'iid Radiyallahu 'Anhu narrates from Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam: "Any Muslim who experiences any hardship, discomfort, worry, sorrow, grief, and distress, even a thorn prick, but Allah will make it an atonement for his sins." - Bukhaarii, Muslim, Mishkaat.

2. Sayyidina Jaabir Radiyallahu 'Anhu reports, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said to Sayyiditina Ummi Saa-ib Radiyallahu 'Anhaa: "Do not curse fever, for it removes the sins of Banii Aadam (offspring of Aadam 'Alayhis Salaam) in the manner that a furnace removes rust from iron." - Muslim, Mishkaat.

3. Sayyidina Anas Radiyallahu 'Anhu narrates that I heard Nabii Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam say: "When I afflict my bondsman with his two beloved possessions, he then exercises patience, I will grant him jannah in lieu of it. His two eyes are meant (here)." - Bukhaarii, Mishkaat.

4. Sayyidina Anas Radiyallahu 'Anhu reports, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "If a Muslim is afflicted with a bodily affliction (illness etc.), it is said to the angel (who records his pious deeds), continue recording the pious deeds he commited in his state of good health. If Allah grants him recuperation, He will cleanse him. If Allah grants him death, He will forgive and have mercy on him." - Sharhus Sunnah, Mishkaat.

5. Muhammad bin Khaalid As-Salamii narrates from his father, who narrated from his grandfather that Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "When a bondsman is going to be granted a certain status from Allah, which he cannot reach through his own deed. Allah Ta'aala afflicts him with some calamity in his body, or to his wealth, or children, then grants him sabr (patience), until he reaches that status which has been determined for him." - Ahmed, Abu Daawud, Mishkaat.

6. Sayyidina Jaabir Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "When the afflicted ones are given reward on the day of qiyaamah (judgement), the healthy ones will wish that their skins were cut with scissors in the world (so they may also attain the same rewards)." - Tirmidhii, Mishkaat.

7. Ummul Mu-miniin, Sayyiditina 'Aa-i-shah Radiyallahu 'Anhaa says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "When the sins of a bondsman increases, and he does not possess deeds which will atone for it, Allah Ta'aala will afflict him with sorrow to expiate for those sins." - Ahmed, Mishkaat.

Chapter 2

The virtues of plague

١ – عن أنس قال: قال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم: الطاعون شهادة كل مسلم ، متفق عليه ، مشكوة .

٢ – عن ابى هريرة قال: قال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم: الشهداء خمسة: المطعون ، والمبطون ، والغريق ، وصاحب الهدم ، والشهيد في سبيل الله ، متفق عليه ، مشكوة .

٣ – عن عائشة قالت: سألت رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم عن الطاعون ، فأخبرني أنه عذاب يبعثه الله على من يشاء ، وان الله جعله رحمة للمؤمنين ، ليس من أحد يقع الطاعون فيمكث في بلده صابرًا محتسبًا ، يعلم انه لا يصيبه إلَّا ما كتب الله له إلَّا كان له مثل أجر شهيد ، رواه البخاري ، مشكوة .

٤ – عن جابر ان رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم قال: الفارُّ من الطاعون كالفارِّ من الزحف ، والصابر فيه له أجر شهيد ، رواه أحمد ، مشكوة .

٥ – عن عليم الكندي قال: كنت مع أبي عَبَسٍ الغفاري على سطح ، فرآى قومًا يتحملون من الطاعون ، فقال: يا طاعون خذني إليك ، ثلاثًا ، ... الحديث ، رواه ابن عبد البر والمروزي وأحمد والطبراني ، شرح الصدور .

1. Sayyidina Anas Radiyallahu 'Anhu reports, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "Plague is a (means of) martyrdom for a Muslim." - Bukhaarii, Muslim, Mishkaat.

2. Sayyidina Abii Hurayrah Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "Five (categories of) people are martyrs: The plagued, the one who has disease in the stomach, the one who drowns, the one on whom a building falls, and a martyr in the Path of Allah." - Bukhaarii, Muslim, Mishkaat.

3. Ummul Mu-miniin, Sayyiditina 'Aa-i-shah Radiyallahu 'Anhaa said: "I asked Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam regarding plague. He informed me that it is (a type of) punishment (for some) which Allah Ta'aala sends on whom he wishes ('for some' here means the kaafirs). And Allah has made it a mercy for the Mu-miniin (believers). The one who remains with patience in his plague affected settlement, with the hope of gaining reward, and knowing, that only what Allah has decreed for him will happen. He will receive the reward of a shahiid (martyr)." - Bukhaarii, Mishkaat.

Commentary:
This reward is only attained if one remains in the affected place and does not run away. The reward for dying in a plagued area will be additional to this reward.

4. Sayyidina Jaabir Radiyallahu 'Anhu reports, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "The one running away from plague is like the one running away from jihaad. The one who stays steadfast with patience therein (affected place) will receive the reward of a shahiid (martyr)." - Ahmed, Mishkaat.

Commentary:
From the previous two hadiith it becomes clear that those affected by plague attain the reward of jihaad while remaining in their homes. The reward for jihaad is the best amongst all deeds.

5. 'Aliim Alkindii said: "I was with Abii 'Abas Al-Ghifaarii on a rooftop. He saw a group of people leaving the settlement because of plague. And said: 'O plague take me (because I am desirous) towards you.'" - Reported by Ibn 'Abdulbarr, Almarwazii, Ahmed, and Tabraanii. Sharhus Sudur.

Chapter 3
Preference for death over life

١ – عن عبد الله بن عمر قال: قال رسول الله ﷺ: تحفة المؤمن الموت ، أخرجه ابن المبارك ، وابن أبي الدرداء ، والطبراني ، والحاكم .

٢ – عن محمود بن لبيد ان النبي صلى الله عليه وسلم قال: يكره ابن آدم الموت ، والموت خير له من الفتنة ، أخرجه أحمد وسعيد بن منصور .

٣ – عن عبد الله بن عمرو بن العاص عن النبي ﷺ قال: الدنيا سجن المؤمن وسَنَتَهُ ، فإذا فارق الدنيا فارق السجن والسَنَة ، أخرجه ابن المبارك والطبراني .

٤ – عن انس قال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم: الموت كفارة لكل مسلم ، اخرجه أبو نعيم .

٥ – عن أبي مالك الأشعري قال: قال رسول الله ﷺ: اللّهم حبب الموت إلى من يعلم أني رسولك ، اخرجه الطبراني .

٦ – عن أنس ان النبي صلى الله عليه وسلم قال له: ان حفظت وصيتي فلا يكون شيئ أحب إليك من الموت ، أخرجه الأصبحاني .

٧ – عن أنس قال: قال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم: ما شبهت خروج ابن آدم من الدنيا إلّا كمثل خروج الصبي من بطن امّه من ذلك الغمّ والظلمة إلى روح الدنيا ، اخرجه الحكيم الترمذي .

1. Sayyidina 'Abdullah bin 'Umar Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "A (beloved) present for the Mu-min (believer) is death". - Ibnul Mubaarak, Ibn Abid Dardaa, Tabraanii and Haakim.

2. Sayyidina Mahmud bin Labiid Radiyallahu 'Anhu reports, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "Ibn Aadam (offspring of Sayyidina Aadam 'Alayhis Salaam) dislikes maut (death) whilst maut is better for him then fitnah (trials and tribulations in the diin)". - Ahmed, Sa'iid bin Mansur.

Commentary:
The benefit of death is, there is no fear that one's diin (religion) will deteriorate. If one lives, there is always the fear of this happening (deterioration) especially if one confronts causes that will lead to it. We seek Allah's refuge from turning astray.

3. Sayyidina 'Abdullah bin 'Amr bin Al'Aas Radiyallahu 'Anhu reports, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "The world is a prison (because of the many restrictions) for a Mu-min and a place of drought (both comfort, favours and affluence are deficient). When one leaves the world, one leaves a prison and place of drought (because comfort, favours and affluence are complete and widespread in the hereafter)." - Ibnul Mubaarak, Tabraanii.

4. Sayyidina Anas Radiyallahu 'Anhu narrates, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "Maut (death) is an atonement for (the sins of) every Muslim (Due to hardships confronted, sins are pardoned. For some all sins are forgiven and for some part of their sins are forgiven, according to the person's status)." - Abu Nu'aym.

5. Sayyidina Abii Maalik Al-Ash'arii says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "O Allah, make death beloved to the one who believes that I am your Rasul." - Tabraanii.

6. Sayyidina Anas Radiyallahu 'Anhu reports, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said to him: "If you remember and keep up my wasiyyah (advise) then nothing should be more beloved to you than maut (death)." - Isbahaanii.

7. Sayyidina Anas Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "I find the example of Ibn Aadam (human) passing away from this world but like that of a baby emerging from the narrow and dark womb of it's mother into the wide open world. (Before coming into the world the womb is thought to be a very comfortable place. After witnessing the comforts and pleasures of the world one does not wish to return there. In the same manner, whilst living in the world one fears the hereafter. But after going there one does not wish to return. This explanation has also been narrated in a hadiith)." - Ibn Abid Dunyaa, Tirmidhii.

Commentary:

Two questions arise here. One is, from this hadiith preference is given to death over life. From some ahaadiith it is found that life is given preference over death. For example, the hadiith in Bukhaarii and Muslim state Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "None from among you should hope and desire death, because if one is pious, good deeds will increase by longevity. If one is sinful, it is possible one will have the taufiiq of repenting." From this it is clear that life is better than death. The answer to this doubt is that laws differ according to different aspects. During life good deeds could increase and repentance from sin could also be made, as mentioned in the above hadiith. Death is the opposite, but the cause for this preference for life is temporary and lasts for a few days. The world in comparison to the hereafter is like the narrowness and darkness of a mothers womb. According to this, only death could be given preference, because leaving this world, and going out of this dark home and reaching into the vast and splendid home is not possible without death. The hereafter is much better than this world. The world is nothing in comparison to the hereafter. The hereafter is not temporary but everlasting. The preference for the everlasting is apparent over that which is temporary and mortal. By this answer there remains no difference, and life and death also do not remain equal. The preference for death remains.

The second question is that in the hadiith it has been prohibited to hope for death. If death is a good thing why is it prohibited to hope for it. The answer is that in the same hadiith this has also been mentioned "Min darrin asaabahu" (from difficulties confronted). That means one must not wish for death due to hardships or difficulties experienced, because this will be a sign of not accepting the Will of Allah Ta'aala. If hoping for death is due to yearning for the hereafter and saving one's self from fitnah, then it is not prohibited.

The benefit of a difficult death for some Mu-mins

Chapter 4

١ – عن ابن مسعود قال: قال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم: ان المؤمن ليعمل الخطيئة فيشدد بها عليه عند الموت ليكفّر بها عنه ، وان الكافر ليعمل الحسنة فيسهل عليه عند الموت ليجزى بها ، أخرجه الطبراني وأبو نعيم ، شرح الصدور .

1. Sayyidina Ibn Mas'ud Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "(At times) A Mu-min (believer) commits a sin. Hardship is experienced at the time of death to recompense for sins. (At times) A kaafir (nonbeliever) carries out a good deed, and to recompense for it, an easy death is granted." - Tabraanii, Abu Nu'aym, Sharhus Sudur.

Commentary:
Experiencing a difficult death is not a bad omen nor is an easy death a good omen. No doubt should remain regarding a difficult death as stated in the above hadiith.

The glad tidings, respect and honour for a Muslim at the time of death

١ – عن البراء بن عازب رضي اللّه تعالى عنه ان النبي ﷺ قال: ان العبد المؤمن إذا كان في انقطاع من الدنيا و إقبال من الآخرة ، نزل إليه ملائكة من السماء بيض الوجوه ، كأن وجوههم الشمس ، معهم أكفان من أكفان الجنة وحنوط من حنوط الجنة ، حتى يجلسوا منه مد البصر ، ثم يجيء ملك الموت يجلس عند رأسه فيقول: أيتها النفس المطمئنة اخرجي إلى مغفرة من اللّه ورضوان ، فتخرج تسيل كما تسيل القطرة من السقاء ، وإن كنتم ترون غير ذلك ، فيخرجونها ، فإذا أخرجوها لم يدعوها في يده طرفة عين ، فيجعلونها في تلك الأكفان والحنوط ، ويخرج منها كأطيب نفحة مسك على وجه الأرض ، فيصعدون بها ، فلا يمرون على ملاء من الملائكة إلّا قالوا: ما هذه الروح الطّيبة ، فيقولون: فلان بن فلان بأحسن اسمائه التي كانوا يسمونه بها في الدنيا ، حتى ينتهوا به إلى السماء التي تليها ، حتى ينتهي به إلى السماء السابعة ، فيقول اللّه تعالى: اكتبوا كتابه في عليين واعيدوه إلى الأرض ، فيعاد روحه في جسده ، فيأتيه ملكان فيجلسانه ، فيقولان له: من ربّك؟ وما دينك؟ ، فيقول: اللّه ربّي والإسلام ديني ، فيقولان له: ما هذا الرجل الّذي بعث إليكم

إلى روح اللّه وكرامته ، فإذا اخرجت روحه وضعت على ذلك المسك والريحان ، وطويت عليه الحريرة وذهب به إلى عليين .

٤ – عن ابن جريج قال رسول اللّه صلى اللّه عليه وسلم لعائشة: إذا عاين المؤمن الملائكة قالوا: نرجعك إلى الدنيا ، فيقول: إلى دار الهموم والأحزان ، قدموني إلى اللّه تعالى ، أخرجه ابن جرير وابن المنذر في تفسيرهما .

٦ – عن ابن مسعود قال: إذا أراد اللّه قبض روح المؤمن ، أوحى إلى ملك الموت ، أقرئه منّي السلام ، فإذا جاء ملك الموت لقبض روحه قال له: ربك يقرئك السلام ، أخرجه أبو القاسم بن مندة في كتاب الأحوال ، شرح الصدور .

٧ – عن زيد بن أسلم قال: يؤتي المؤمن عند الموت فيقال له: لا تخف مما أنت قادم عليه ، فيذهب خوفه ، ولا تحزن على الدنيا ولا

على أهلها وابشر بالجنة ، فيموت وقد أقر اللّه عينيه ، أخرجه ابن حاتم ، وفي شرح الصدور عنه أيضًا في الآية ﴿إِنَّ الَّذِينَ قَالُوا رَبُّنَا اللَّهُ ... إلى ... تُوعَدُونَ﴾ قال: يبشر بها عند موته وفي قبره ويوم يبعث ، فإنه لفي الجنة ، وما ذهبت فرحة البشارة من قلبه .

1. Sayyidina Baraa bin 'Aazib Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "When a Mu-min is in the state of leaving this world and approaching the hereafter, malaa-ikah (angels) from the sky come to him, whose faces are white and shine like the sun. They have with them kafn (dead person's shrouding) of jannah (paradise) and fragrance of jannah. They seat themselves until (the distance) where the eye can see. Then malakul maut (angel of death) comes and sits at his headside and says: 'O soul, who was content with the commands of Allah, come out towards the forgiveness and mercies of Allah'. It (the soul) comes out (with ease) like (water) drops flow out of a water bag, although (outwardly) you may witness a state other than this (that life comes out with difficulty. The difficulty is on the body, and the ruh [soul] experiences easiness). They (the malaa-ikah) take out the ruh. After taking it out the malakul maut does not leave it in his hands for a split moment, but puts it in the kafn and fragrance of jannah. Such a fragrance emits from it like the strongest mushk fragrance in the world. They go up with it. Whichever group of malaa-ikah they pass, they (those malaa-ikah) ask, who is this good and pleasant soul. They say: 'So-and-so, son of so-and-so, They mention the best names with which he was well-known in the dunyaa (world). (In the same manner) They take him towards the next sky (samaa-ud dunyaa), from there they carry on till they reach the seventh sky. Allah Ta'aala commands, record his name in the 'illi-yiin, and return him to the earth (for questioning in the grave). His ruh is returned to his body (pertinent to the barzakh and not the world). Two angels come to him and make him sit up. They both ask him: 'Who is your Rabb (Lord and Master); and what is your religion?'.

He will say: 'My Rabb is Allah and Islaam is my religion.'

They both then say to him: 'Who is this person who was sent to you and among you.'

He will say: 'He is the Rasul (messenger) of Allah (i.e. Muhammad Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam).'

They both then say to him: 'How did you know?'.

He will say: 'I read the Kitaab of Allah Ta'aala (Qur-aan), brought imaan (faith) on it and accepted it as the truth.'

A caller (from Allah Ta'aala) will then call out from the heavens: 'My bondsman has given the correct answer. Spread out for him a floor-covering from jannah; clothe him with the clothing of jannah; and open for him a door towards jannah.'

Hence a breeze of sweet fragrance blows towards him. His grave is widened as far as (the width) the eye can see. A well dressed person with a sweet smelling fragrance will come and say to him: 'News of glad tidings of happiness to you. This is the day that you had been promised.'

He will ask: 'Who are you? Your countenance conveys blessings and excellence.'

The person will say to him: 'I am your pious deeds.'

He (the deceased person) will then repeat: 'O Rabb (hasten) qiyaamah (the day of reckoning), O Rabb (hasten) qiyaamah, so that I may return to my family and possessions (which will be attained in the hereafter).'" - Ahmed, Abu Daawud, Haakim, Bayhaqii and others.

2. Ja'far reports from Muhammad, who reports from his father Ibnul Khazraj, who reports from his father, who said, I heard Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam saying: "I saw malakul maut (angel of death) at the time of a person's death from among the Ansaar. I said to him: 'O malakul maut, be gentle and kind to my sahaabii (companion) for he is a Mu-min.' Malakul maut said: 'Gladden your heart, cool your eyes and be assured that I am gentle with every Mu-min.'" - Tabraanii, Ibn Munabbih.

3. Sayyidina Baraa Radiyallahu 'Anhu narrates from Sayyidina Abii Hurayrah Radiyallahu 'Anhu that Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "When the time for a Mu-min's death comes, the malaa-ikah (angels) come with a (piece of) silk to him, wherein there is mushk, 'amber and rayhaan. His ruh (soul) comes out softly in the manner that a hair comes out of dough. It is said to him, O life, who was contented with the commands of Allah, come towards mercy, respect and honour, in the state that you are pleased with Him and He is pleased with you. Then when the ruh comes out, it is put on the mushk and rayhaan, covered with the silk and taken to the 'illi-yiin."

4. Sayyidina Ibn Jurayj Radiyallahu 'Anhu narrates, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said to Sayyiditina 'Aa-i-shah Radiyallahu 'Anhaa: "When a Mu-min sees the malaa-ikah (angels), they say: 'We will take you back to the dunyaa (world). (We will not remove your ruh -soul-).' He will say: '(You will return me) Towards a place of worry, anxiety, distress and affliction. Take me towards Allah Ta'aala.'" - Ibn Jariir and Ibnul Mundhir in their tafsiir.

5. Sayyidina Anas bin Maalik Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "When malakul maut (angel of death) comes to a walii (accepted bondsman) of Allah, he makes salaam to him. His salaam is saying this: 'Assalamu 'alayka yaa waliyullah, rise and leave the home that has been emptied, and go towards your home which has been furnished by you (i.e. from the world towards the hereafter).'" - Qaadii Abul Husayn bin Al'urayf, Abu Rabii' Al-Mas'u-dii, Sharhus Sudur.

6. Sayyidina Ibn Mas'ud Radiyallahu 'Anhu said: "When Allah Ta'aala intends taking the ruh (soul) of a Mu-min, He commands malakul maut (angel of death), convey My salaams to him. When malakul maut comes to take his ruh, he says to the person: 'Your Rabb (Lord and Master) says salaam to you.' (Subhaanallaah, what a blessing. May a thousand lives be sacrificed for such a death)." - Abul Qaasim bin Mandah in Kitaabul Ahwaal, Sharhus Sudur.

7. Zayd bin Muslim narrates that it is said: "Malaa-ikah are sent to a Mu-min at the time of death and (through them) it is said: 'Do not fear of what is coming to you. Hence his fear vanishes. Do not grieve (on the separation) for the world nor its inhabitants. Be happy with the glad tidings of jannah (paradise).'" He dies in such a state that Allah Ta'aala makes his eyes cool (He grants him contentment). - Ibn Haatim.

It is narrated from him too in the Sharhus Sudur regarding the tafsiir of the aayah ('Innal ladhina qaalu rabbunallaahu .... upto ... tu'adun'), that, he is given glad tidings at times of: death; in his grave, and on the day of judgement. When entering jannah too this happiness will not leave his heart."

The meeting and conversing of the ruh's after death

Chapter 6

٢ – عن سعيد بن جبير قال: إذا مات الميت استقبله ولده كما يستقبل الغائب ، أخرجه ابن أبي الدنيا .

٣ – عن ثابت البناني قال: بلغنا انّ الميت إذا مات احتوته أهله وأقاربه الّذين تقدمه من الموتى ، فهم أفرح به وهو أفرح بهم من المسافر إذا قدم إلى أهله ، أخرجه ابن أبي الدنيا .

1. Sayyidina Abii Ayyub Al-Ansaarii Radiyallahu 'Anhu reports, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "When the ruh (soul) of a Mu-min is taken out, then the marhum (deceased) bondsman of Allah Ta'aala come forward to meet him in the same manner that a bringer of glad tidings is met in the dunyaa. Then (some among them) say, give him a chance to rest, because he was in great distress (in the world). Thereafter they begin to ask him, how is a certain person and did a certain woman marry? If they happen to ask of a person who had died before him already, and he says that person died before me, they recite 'Inna lillaahi wa-innaa ilayhi raaji'un' and say he must have been taken to his abode, that is jahannam. It is a bad place to go to and a bad place to live in. He said, your deeds are presented before your family and relatives who are in the hereafter. If deeds are pious they become happy and joyful and say O Allah, this is Your Grace, Favour and Mercy, complete Your Benefaction on him, grant him death on it (favours, mercy etc.). The deeds of sinners are also presented before them, whereupon they say, O Allah, put piety in his heart, which becomes a cause of Your pleasure and nearness." - Ibn Abid Dunyaa, Tabraanii, Sharhus Sudur.

2. Sayyidina Sa'iid bin Jubayr Radiyallahu 'Anhu said: "When someone dies, his children (in the 'aa-lamul arwaah -abode of souls-) welcome him, like the one who returns after an absence." - Ibn Abid Dunyaa.

3. It is narrated from Thaabit Al-Bunaanii that this narration has reached us: "When someone dies (and at the time of reaching the 'aa-lamul arwaah) his family and relatives who had died before, surround him from all sides. They are happy and he is happy, much more than that traveller who returns home to his family." - Ibn Abid Dunyaa.

Honour and respect at the time of tajhiiz and takfiin*

Chapter 7

١ – عن عمرو بن دينار قال: ما من ميت يموت إلّا وروحه في يد ملك ينظر إلى جسده كيف يغسل وكيف يكفن وكيف يمشي به ، ويقال له وهو على سريره ، اسمع ثناء الناس عليك ، أخرجه أبو نُعَيم في الحلية .

1. Sayyidina 'Amr bin Diinaar Radiyallahu 'Anhu said: "The ruh of a deceased after dying remains in the hands of an angel, (from where) it observes how his body is being given ghusl; how kafn is put on; how it is being carried. While the body is still on the bier, the angel says to him, listen to the people praising you." - Abu Nu'aym in the 'Hulyah'.

Commentary:
The same type of narration has been narrated by Ibn Abid Dunyaa from Sufyaan RA, that the malaa-ikah say this same thing to him. The aim of the angel is to show the respect of the people at that moment and create hope for the future.

The respect and love for a Mu-min in the skies

Chapter 8

١ – عن أنس عن النبي صلى اللّه عليه وسلم قال: ما من إنسان إلّا له بابان في السماء ، باب يصعد منه عمله وباب ينزل منه رزقه ، فإذا مات العبد المؤمن بكيا عليه ، أخرجه الترمذي وأبو يعلى وابن أبي الدنيا .

1. Sayyidina Anas Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "For every human there are two doors in the sky. One from which his deeds ascend, and the other from which his sustenance descend. When a Mu-min bondsman passes away, both doors weep for him." - Tirmidhii, Abu Ya'laa, Ibn Abid Dunyaa.

The respect and love for a Mu-min on earth

Chapter 9

١ – عن عطاء الخرساني قال: ما من عبد يسجد للّه في بقعة من بقاع الأرض إلّا شهدت له يوم القيامة ، وبكت عليه يوم يموت ، أخرجه أبو نُعَيم .

٢ – عن ابن عبّاس قال: ان الأرض لتبكي على المؤمن أربعين صباحًا ، أخرجه ابن أبي الدنيا والحاكم ، شرح الصدور .

٣ – عن ابن عمر: ان النبي صلى اللّه عليه وسلم قال: ان المؤمن إذا مات تجملت المقابر بموته ، فليس منه بقعة إلّا وهي تتمنى ان يدفن فيها ، رواه ابن عَدِي وابن مَنْدَة وابن عساكر .

1. 'Ataa Al-Khura-saanii narrates: "Any bondsman who makes sajdah (prostrates) for Allah on any portion of the earth, that portion of earth will give evidence on the person's behalf, and weep for him on the day of his death." - Abu Nu'aym.

2. Sayyidina Ibn 'Abbaas Radıyallahu 'Anhu said: "The earth weeps for (on the death of) a Mu-min for forty mornings (days)." - Ibn Abid Dunyaa, Haakim, Sharhus Sudur.

3. Sayyidina Ibn 'Umar Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "When a Mu-min passes away, all (places of) graves decorate and adorn themselves on his death. There is no place (grave) among them which do not wish that he be buried therein." - Ibn 'Adii, Ibn Mandah, Ibn Asaakir.

The malaa-ikah accompanying the janaazah

Chapter 10

١ – عن ابن مسعود عن النبي صلى الله عليه وسلم قال: انّ داؤد قال: إلهي ما جزاء من شيع ميتًا إلى قبره إبتغاء مرضاتك ، قال: جزاؤه ان تشيعه ملائكتي ، فتصلي على روحه في الأرواح ، أخرجه ابن عساكر ، شرح الصدور .

1. Sayyidina Ibn Mas'ud Radiyallahu 'Anhu reports, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "Daawud 'Alayhis Salaam said: 'O Allah, what is the reward of the person who carries a dead person to his grave seeking Your pleasure'. It was said: 'His reward will be that my malaa-ikah (angels) will carry his janaazah, and they will supplicate on his ruh together with other (pious) ruhs'". - Ibn Asaakir, (Sharhus Sudur).

Commentary:
That which has been narrated in this narration that the person who takes part in carrying and burying a deceased person, his reward will be that the malaa-ikah will accompany his janaazah. The object is that more angels will accompany him, otherwise the malaa-ikah accompany all janaazahs. Briefly, in the ahaadiith of chapters eight, nine and ten the honour and respect stated for a Muslim mayyit (deceased) is clear. The skies weeping at the end of a Muslim's life. Every possible grave site of the earth wishing that a Muslim be buried therein. How great is his honour before the malaa-ikah. They accompany his janaazah like troops and battalions. Such respect and honour given by the malaa-ikah, who are a great creation of Allah, to a person, is not a trivial thing. In the world, this is not accorded to the greatest of kings. It is a thing to ponder about, when the deceased observes that I am so greatly honoured and respected, how much will he appreciate the hereafter, and regard the world as wretched and despicable. What a good fortune will he regard the leaving of this world and going to the hereafter. It is said regarding such things: ".... For this let (all) those strive who strive for bliss". - Surah At-Tatfiif, (Mutaffifiin), 26. and "For the like of this, then, let the workers work". -Surah Saaffaat, 61.

Upto here those aspects have been stated that occurs before burial. Some aspects that will take place are left for later, like the ruhs meeting one another, and becoming beloved of the earth etc.

1. Sayyidina Sa'iid bin Al-Musayyib Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Ummul Mu-miniin Sayyiditina 'Aa-i-shah Radiyallahu 'Anhaa said: "Yaa Rasulullah, since you have told me about the voice of Munkar and Nakiir, and the grave pressing its inmate, nothing is helping (consoling) me." He said: "Yaa 'Aa-i-shah, the voice of Munkar and Nakiir in the ears of the Mu-miniin (believers) will be like ithmid (surmah) in the eyes (which delights the eyes), and the pressing in the grave for a Mu-min will be (comfortable) like that of a compassionate mother to whom her child complains of a headache and she softly presses his head. But, Yaa 'Aa-i-shah, woe to those who doubt the existence of Allah, and complain about his commands, they will be pressed in their graves like a stone put on an egg and pressed." - Bayhaqii, Ibn Mandah.

2. Sayyidina Abii Sa'iid Al-Khudarii Radiyallahu 'Anhu narrates that Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "When a Muslim bondsman is buried, the grave says to him, marhaban and ahlan (welcome), you were the most beloved to me from among those who walked on the surface of me. Today when I have been made your servant, and you have come to me, you will observe my dealing with you. Hence it expands for him as far as his eyes can see, and it opens for him a door to jannah (paradise). Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said this too. The qabr (grave) is either a garden from among the gardens of jannah (for the pious), or a pit from among the pits of jahannam (hell) (for the sinful)." - Tirmidhii.

3. Sayyidina Abii Hurayrah Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "When a dead person is buried, two black angels with blue eyes come to him. One is called Munkar and the other Nakiir. They both ask him: 'What did you use to say regarding this person (Muhammad Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam)?'. He will say: 'He is the bondsman and messenger of Allah Ta'aala. Ash-hadu an-la ilaaha illallaahu, wa ash-hadu anna Muhammadan 'abduhu wa-rasuluh'. They both will say: '(After seeing signs) We knew that you are going to say this'. Then his grave is widened seventy dhiraa (cubits) by seventy dhiraa and then illuminated. The person then says: 'Allow me to go to my family, so that I may inform them'. They say to him: 'Sleep like a groom, who is awakened only by that person who is most beloved to him from his family, until Allah Ta'aala will resurrect you from that sleep (on the day of qiyaamah)'" - Tirmidhii, Bayhaqii.

Commentary:
A Mu-min bondsman will not fear these angels being black and having blue eyes. In a hadiith in Ibn Maajah the words "Ghayra faza-in wa-laa mash-ghufin" are stated, meaning the bondsman will not be distressed, belwildered or confounded.

4. Sayyidina Abii Hurayrah Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "I swear an oath in the Name of that Being in whose hands my life is, when a mayyit (deceased) is put in his grave, he hears the footsteps of the people when they leave him. If he is a Mu-min, his salaah comes and stand at his headside; his zakaah at his right; his saum (roza, fast) at his left; his good deeds, piety, and ihsaan to the people at his feet. If 'adhaab (punishment) comes to him from his headside, his salaah will say there is no entrance from my side. Then, it comes from the right side, his zakaah will say there is no entrance from my side. It then comes from the left side, his saum will say there is no entrance from my side. Then, it will come from the side of the feet, his good deeds, piety, ihsaan to the people, will say there is no entrance from our side. At the end of this hadiith it is stated then his body is returned to its original state of dust (This is the case with the majority, some bodies remain in the same state in the grave). His ruh (soul) remains (lying) in a gentle breeze, or in the 'arwaah tayyibah', i.e. in the form of a green bird in the trees of jannah. - Ibn Abii Shaybah, Tabraanii in the 'Awsat', Ibn Hibbaan in his 'Sahiih, Haakim, Bayhaqii.

Commentary:
From some ahaadiith of Sharhus Sudur it is stated that the ruh (soul) enters the grave with its body, and from this hadiith we find that the ruh goes into jannah in the form of a green bird. The explanation of both is that the ruh goes with the body in the grave, then subsequently it is taken into jannah as is apparent from those ahaadiith mentioned in Sharhus Sudur. Or, the ruh entering the grave with the body may mean, it has a strong connection with the body (as it is said, I am sitting here but my heart and thoughts are somewhere else). After some time when the body decomposes this connection decreases.

5. Sayyidina Ibn 'Umar Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "A Muslim male or female who dies on a Friday night or the day of Friday, is safe from the punishment and trials of the grave. He will meet Allah Ta'aala without giving account of his deeds. On the day of qiyaamah (judgement) he will come in such a state that he will either have witnesses who will give testimony for him, or he will have some sealed testimony." - Tirmidhii, Bayhaqii.

6. Sayyidina Ibn 'Umar Radiyallahu 'Anhu say, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "When a man passes away in a place other than his birthplace (or place of residence or domicile), his grave is widened from the place of his demise till the place of his domicile." - Ahmed, Nasa-ee, Ibn Maajah.

Commentary:
From this the virtue of passing away in a foreign land is proven, which lovers of the material world fear.

7. Sayyidina Ibn Mas'ud Radiyallahu 'Anhu narrates, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "Among all situations, Allah Ta'aala is most merciful with His bondsman when he is put in his grave." - Ibn Mandah.

8. Sayyidina Ibn 'Abbaas Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "When an 'aalim dies, Allah Ta'aala gives his knowledge a form. That form becomes his friend and companion till the day of qiyaamah, and removes the vermin and pests from him." - Daylamii.

Commentary:
If the vermin and insects etc. of the world are intended then this may apply to some special 'aalims. If the vermin and insects etc.

of the barzakh are intended which we cannot see, then every 'aalim may be included.

9. Imaam Ahmed reports from the kitaab 'Az-zuhd': "Allah Ta'aala sent wahii (revelation) to Musa 'Alayhis Salaam, learn khayr (i.e. knowledge of diin) and teach it to the people, because I keep the graves of a mu'allim (teacher) and a student illuminated, so that they do not feel dreary, lonely and unhappy in that place."

10. Sayyidina Abii Ayyub Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "The one that confronts an enemy, and preserveres till he is killed or overcome. He will not be examined (questioned) in his grave."

11. Sayyidina Abii Umaamah Radiyallahu 'Anhu reports that Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "The one that guards the border in jihaad, Allah Ta'aala will save him from the examination (questioning) in the grave." - Tabraani, Sharhus Sudur.

12. Sayyidina Salmaan bin Sard and Sayyidina Khaalid bin 'Arfatah Radiyallahu 'Anhuma say, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "The one who is killed by his (disease of) stomach, will not be punished in his grave." - Tirmidhii, Ibn Maajah, Bayhaqii, Sharhus Sudur.

13. Sayyidina Ibn Mas'ud Radiyallahu 'Anhu said: "The one who recites 'Tabarakal ladhii bi-ya-dihil mulk' (Suratul Mulk) every night, Allah Ta'aala will through its blessings save him from the punishment of the grave. In the nabawii period (time of Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam) we named this surah 'maani'ah' (the one that protects from punishment)." - Nasa-ee, Sharhus Sudur.

14. It is reported from Sayyidina Anas bin Maalik Radiyallahu 'Anhuma with a weak chain of narrators that, verily in the month of Ramadaan punishment is lifted from the dead, or that punishment is lifted from those passing away in the month of Ramadaan. - Sharhus Sudur.

Commentary:
In the translation of the hadiith where it is said, in the month Ramadaan from the dead, or, those passing away in the month of Ramadaan, both could be probable. The first will mean that when Ramadaan comes, punishment is lifted from all (Muslim) dead people. The second will mean, punishment is lifted from those passing away in Ramadaan. There is no harm if the chain of narrators are weak in such instances. Yes, it is harmful in matters regarding ahkaam (legal Islaamic decrees).

15. Sayyidina Jubayr Radiyallahu 'Anhu said: "I swear by Allah, Who is One and has no partner, that I put Thaabit Al-bunaanii in his grave. Hamiid At-tawiil was also with me. After having placed the mud bricks, one mud brick fell. (What did I observe?). I observed him perform salaah in his grave. He used to repeat in du'aa: 'O Allah, if You had granted anybody from among Your creation the performing of salaah in his grave, then grant it to me too.' Allah Ta'aala did not reject his du'aa." - Abu Nu'aym in the 'Hul-yah'.

16. Sayyidina Ibn 'Abbaas Radiyallahu 'Anhuma said: "Some of the as-haab (companions) of Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam sat on a grave, not knowing that it is a grave (as there was no sign of a grave). They heard a person reciting Suratul Mulk till he completed it. They came to Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam and informed him. Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "It (this surah) is 'maa-ni-'ah' (protects from the punishment of the grave), it is 'mun-jiyah' (saves), it saves a person from the punishment of the grave." - Tirmidhii.

17. Sayyidina 'Ik-ramah Radiyallahu 'Anhu said: "A Mu-min will be given a Mus-haf (Qur-aan) (in the grave), from which he will recite." - Ibn Mandah.

18. Suhaylii has stated in the 'Dalaa-ilun Nubuwwah', that, it is reported from some of the sahaabah (Radiyallahu 'Anhum), on an occasion a grave was dug. (Incidently there was another grave next to it). (While digging) A portion of the next grave opened. They saw a person on a bed, with a Mus-haf (Qur-aan) in his hand, from which he was reciting. Before him was a green garden. This took place at Uhud. It became known that he was from among the shu-ha-daa (martyrs) as he had a wound on his face." - Ibn Hibbaan in his tafsiir.

19. Sayyidina Abii Sa'iid Al-Khudarii Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "The one who recites the Qur-aan and passes away before he could memorise it, an angel comes to him in his grave to teach him. He will meet Allah in a state where he had already memorised the Qur-aan." - Abul Hasan ibn Shubraan in his 'Fawaa-id' from 'Atiyyah Al-'Awfii.

Commentary:
These deeds of reciting the Qur-aan and performing salaah is not a fard (compulsory) deed or trouble, but a deed of pleasure and enjoyment and a means of gaining a higher position (in the hereafter).

20. Sayyidina Qays bin Qubay-sah Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "The person who dies without making wasiyyah (Will and Testament), will not be allowed to talk to those who had already died. It was asked, Yaa Rasulullah, do the deceased converse among themselves. He replied: 'Yes, they visit one another too.'" - Shaykh Ibn Hibbaan in his 'Kitaabul Wasaayaa'.

21. Sayyiditina 'Aa-i-shah Radiyallahu 'Anhaa says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "The one that visits his (Muslim) brothers grave and sits by him. He becomes attached to him and replies to the salaam till the visitor gets up and leaves." - Ibn Abid Dunyaa in 'Kitaabul Maftun'.

22. Sayyidina Ibn 'Abbaas Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "Any person passing the grave of his Mu-min brother whom he knew in the world and says salaam to him. The deceased person recognises him and replies to his salaam." - Ibn 'Abdulbarr.

23. Sayyidina Ibn Mas'ud Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "The arwaah (souls) of the shu-hadaa (martyrs) are in the form of green birds, and go around in jannah wherever they wish. They go and settle on the chandeliers under the 'Arsh (Throne of Allah)." - Muslim.

24. Sayyidina Ka'b bin Maalik Radiyallahu 'Anhu reports that Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "The ruh (soul) of a Mu-min stays in the trees of jannah in the form of a bird until Allah Ta'aala returns it to its body on the day of qiyaamah (judgement)." - Maalik, Ahmed, Nasa-ee.

25. Sayyiditina Umm Bishr bint Al-Baraa Radiyallahu 'Anhaa said to Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam: "Yaa Rasulullah, do dead people recognise one another." He said: "May your hands be in dust (this is an expression of kindness), the nafs mut-ma-innah (tranquil soul) is in the form of a green bird in jannah. If birds in the branches of trees recognise one another (it is apparent that they recognise one another), then souls surely know one another." - Ibn Sa'd.

26. Tabraanii has extracted in the 'Maraasiil' of Damrah bin Habiib, that a sahaabii asked Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam regarding the arwaah (souls) of the Mu-miniin (believers). He said: "They live in the form of green birds in jannah, and eat, drink and go wherever they wish."

27. Sayyidina Abii Hurayrah Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "The arwaah of the Mu-miniin are in the seventh sky. (From where) They see their abodes in jannah (paradise)." - Abu Nu'aym.

Commentary:

There are many ahaadiith concerning the barzakh, but in this eleventh chapter only twenty seven ahaadiith have been copied as an example. In these twenty seven ahaadiith and in some of the previous chapters, the pleasure, enjoyment, comfort, respect, and honour in the barzakh have been fully stated, because the blessings, favours and happiness of the body and soul are: 1. To be safe from trials and tribulations. 2. To have a spacious home. 3. To be accepted and beloved of a ruler. 4. To be in the protection of a protector. 5. The ruler be kind and merciful. 6. To be with a companion who consoles and gives comfort. 7. Illumination in darkness. 8. Recite the Qur-aan. 9. Perform salaah (namaaz). 10. Visit and meet relatives and friends. 11. Attachment and friendship of visitors. 12. Abundance of food and drink, especially the delights and joys of jannah. 13. High quality furnishing and decor. 14. High quality clothing and apparel. 15. Have an airy and well ventilated home, especially when the breeze is from jannah. 16. Having gardens for recreation. 17. Listening to good news and recognising one another. Having luxurious homes. Seeing one's abode in jannah with one's own eyes.

In these ahaadiith all those aspects are enumerated which are needed to live a contented and luxurious life. This clearly proves that the dead do not just helplessly lie in their graves as is the belief of the common people, but they will enjoy better and superior luxuries in the barzakh than those found in the world. Yes, some enjoyments that are found in the dunyaa will not be available there, like nikaah (marriage) etc. The reason being that in the 'aalam-e barzakh the ruhaanii (spiritual) nature will be overwhelming. Bodily conditions and lust will be non existent, therefore, there will be no necessity of nikaah, etc. For this reason on qiyaamah, when one will enter jannah, one will again attain a body like the world. Hence those feelings and desires will come about again. One will be granted hurs. The desire for food in the barzakh may remain, because a weak body also craves food in the same way as children; the weak; and those recuperating from an illness. It has been narrated that the arwaah (souls) of the Mu-miniin will be in the form of green birds flying around and eating in jannah.

All that has been mentioned in this chapter are those things that take place with the dying person, of which some are ikh-tiyaarii (in one's choice and power) like accepting imaan; carrying out pious deeds according to the sharii'ah. Some are ghayr ikh-tiyaarii (where one does not possess a choice or power) like dying in a foreign land, or passing away on a Friday, or passing on due to stomach disease etc. (It is Allah Most High's great blessing that one is rewarded for ghayr ikh-tiyaarii happenings too). All these aspects end with the deceased. When these conditions end, then the rewards and blessings ordained for it also ends. But, there remains another mercy of Allah Ta'aala wherein He has planned two such ways from which the gaining of blessings and reward do not end and will remain for ever and keep on multiplying and increasing. One such way is, that some deeds have been planned and proposed, from which a deceased continuous to receive reward even after death. The second is, that the dead person did not carry out that deed during his lifetime, but by others doing it reward is being continuously attained. The first type of deed is termed in the sharii'ah as "baaqiyaatus saalihaat" (Those deeds with everlasting reward) and the second "iisaale thawaab" (transmitting or passing on reward). It was deemed appropriate to write regarding these two methods at the end of the chapter. Besides these two we come to know of another type from which a deceased person receives reward, although neither the deceased person nor a living being has any part in it. This has also been mentioned at the end of the chapter.

28. Sayyidina Abii Hurayrah Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "When a human passes away, his deeds come to an end, except from three things: sadaqah jaariyah (like a waqf etc.); or such 'ilm from which benefit continues to be derived (like teaching, writing books etc.); or a pious son who makes du'aa for him." - Bukhaarii, Muslim, Sharhus Sudur.

29. Sayyidina Abii Umaamah Radiyallahu 'Anhu reports from Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam that four people are such that their rewards continue after death. a. The one that guards the borders at the time of jihaad. b. The one that imparts (diinii) knowledge. c. The person who has given charity, and until that remains, reward will continue to be attained. d. The one who leaves a pious son who makes du'aa for him. - Ahmed, Sharhus Sudur.

30. Sayyidina Jariir bin 'Abdullah narrates a saying of Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam: "The one who revives a pious sunnah, will receive its reward, and the reward of those who adopt this sunnah thereafter, without any lessening or decrease in the rewards of any of them." - Muslim, Sharhus Sudur.

31. Sayyidina Abii Sa'iid Al-Khudarii Radiyallahu 'Anhu narrates a saying of Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam: "The one that teaches one aayah from the Book of Allah (Qur-aan) or a portion from (diinii) knowledge (even if it be one mas-alah). Allah Ta'aala will continue to increase the persons rewards till the day of qiyaamah." - Ibn Asaakir, Sharhus Sudur.

32. Sayyidina Abii Hurayrah Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "From among the rewards that a Mu-min continue to receive after death is: knowledge (of diin) that he had propagated; or left behind a pious son; or left in his estate a Qur-aan; or built a masjid; or a musaafirkhaanah (lodging for travellers); or had a water canal dug." -Ibn Maajah.

In a narration from Sayyidina Anas Radiyallahu 'Anhu: "The planting of a tree." is also added. - Abu Nu'aym, Sharhus Sudur.

33. Sayyidina Abii Hurayrah Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "Allah Ta'aala raises the status of some of the pious in jannah. The person will say, O Lord, from where (due to what act) have I been granted this? It will be said, due to your children making du'aa of maghfirah for you." - Tabraanii, Sharhus Sudur.

34. Sayyidina Abii Sa'iid Al-Khudarii Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "On the day of qiyaamah some people will possess rewards equivalent to mountains. He will ask, from where is this? It will be said, by your son making du'aa of maghfirah for you." - Sharhus Sudur.

35. Sayyidina Ibn 'Abbaas Radiyallahu 'Anhuma says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "A dead person in the grave is like a drowning person expecting (help in the form of) du'aa from his father, or mother, or son, or friend. When it (du'aa) reaches him it will be more beloved to him than the world and what it contains. Allah Ta'aala transmits the du'aas of the people of the world (in the form of rewards) the equivalent of mountains. The gift of the living to the dead is to seek maghfirah (forgiveness) for them." - Bayhaqii in Shi'abul Imaan.

36. Sayyidina Sa'd bin 'Ubaadah Radiyallahu 'Anhu narrates that he said: "O Rasulullah, my mother passed away. What is the best charity (for her)?" He replied: "Water." He dug a well and said: "This (rewards of the well) is for Umm Sa'd." - Ahmed, Sharhus Sudur.

37. Sayyidina Ibn 'Umar Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "When anyone among you gives voluntary charity, then give on behalf of your parents (too). They will receive its reward without any decrease of reward for the one giving the charity." - Tabraanii, Sharhus Sudur.

38. Sayyidina Hajjaaj bin Diinaar Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "After serving (parents during their lifetime) another (method of) serving (after their demise) is, when performing salaah, to perform (send rewards of) salaah on their behalf. When fasting, to fast on their behalf too. When giving charity, to give on their behalf too. (i.e. To confer on them the rewards of any nafl devotion)." - Ibn Abii Shaybah, Sharhus Sudur.

39. Sha'bii narrates that it was the practise of the Ansaar, that when a person passed on, they used to go to his grave and recite the Qur-aan for him. I said, if they did not believe that the reward reached the dead person they should not have recited the Qur-aan (at the grave). Their belief is not without proof. (Their proof can only be due to the sayings of Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam) The reward of the recital of the Qur-aan reaching the deceased has thus been proven (according to the sayings of Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam). - Sharhus Sudur.

40. Sayyidina Ibn 'Abbaas Radiyallahu 'Anhu narrates that it was said, O Rasulullah, does a pious neighbour benefit in the hereafter? He asked: "Does he benefit in the world?" He replied: "Yes." He (Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alaayhi Wasallam) said: "In the same manner they will be benefit in the hereafter." - Maalinii.

41. Sayyidina 'Abdullah bin Naafi' Al-Muzanii Radiyallahu 'Anhu narrates that a person in Madiinah passed away and was buried. A person saw him (in a dream) that he was from among the inmates of the fire (hell). He became saddened. He then saw the dead person again after seven or eight days and he was in jannah. He asked the dead person (the reason). He replied: "A person from among the pious was buried with us. He interceded for forty people among his neighbours (those buried around him). I was among them." - Ibn Abid Dunyaa, Sharhus Sudur.

42. Sayyidina Ibn 'Abbaas Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam passed two graves. He said: "They are being punished." In the same hadiith it is stated, he took a green palm branch and split it in two and implanted one in each grave. They (people) said: "O Rasulullah, why have you done so?" He said: "It is hoped that till these (branches) do not dry out their punishment will be lightened." - Mishkaat.

43. Sayyidina Qataadah Radiyallahu 'Anhu narrates that Abaa Barzah used to advise us that when I die put with me in my grave two palm branches. - Ibn Asaakir.

It is mentioned in the Sharhus Sudur that this hadiith is the origin from where the planting of a tree at a grave has been taken.

44. Wahb bin Munabbih narrates that (the prophet) Sayyidina Armi-yaa 'Alayhis Salaam passed some graves, whose inmates were being punished. After a year he passed the graves again and found that the punishment had subsided. He said: "O my Lord, I passed these graves and its inmates were being punished. This year I passed it again and the punishment had subsided." A call came from the sky: "O Armi-yaa, O Armi-yaa, their kafn have become torn and hair decomposed and their graves levelled (having no sign). I saw them (in such a state) and felt merciful on them. I do the same with the inmates of those whose graves have no sign left, and whose kafn tears apart and hair decomposes." - Ibnun Najjaar, Sharhus Sudur.

Commentary:

An answer to a doubt: These ahaadiith can only create a longing for death if there are no other narrations wherein it is mentioned that for some people death and the period after death is a great tribulation. The answer to this doubt is: Firstly, the causes of these tribulations, that is sin, is a thing of choice, where one has the option of safeguarding one's self. The one who has been afflicted, is the result of one's own choice and actions. One has the choice of making a deliberate intention to sin or avoid sin. Then why should one fall into such troubles and tribulations.

Our aim in writing these ahaadiith is for us to ponder on death and what takes place after death. The fear that people normally have regarding death will be removed by reading or listening to these ahaadiith. It is clear and explicit, that what are the ways required to attain those virtues, blessings and favours. It is incumbent to act upon them. We do not mean that these have been promised without any conditions. Secondly, when pondering on these ahaadiith, it becomes evident that the tribulations that a sinner confronts is not only skin deep, but some ease is granted occasionally. These too are not without a cause. Some such ahaadiith are collected here:

45. In the 'Firdaus' a saying of Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam is narrated from Sayyidina Ibn 'Abbaas Radiyallahu 'Anhuma that, when Allah Ta'aala commands malakul maut to take the souls of those sinners from among my ummah on whom the fire has become incumbent, He says: "Give them the glad tidings of jannah after avenging such and such (deeds), the amount they have sinned by confining them in the fire. For verily Allah Ta'aala is the Most Merciful of the mercifuls."

46. Sayyidina 'Ataa bin Yasaar Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said to Sayyidina 'Umar bin Al-Khattaab Radiyallahu 'Anhu: "O 'Umar, what will be your condition at the time of death. They will measure out for you a grave three and half cubits long and one and half cubit wide. They will come back and give you ghusl and put on a kafn and fragrance for you. They will carry you till they reach the grave and put you therein. They will then put earth on you. When they go away from you, two examiners, the Munkar and Nakiir will come to you. Their voices will be like intense thunder and eyes like a heavy streak of lightning. They will jostle and hustle you and speak harshly to you and make you terror-stricken. At that time what will your situation be O 'Umar?"

He asked: "O Rasulullah, at that time will I possess my full senses?"

Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "Yes."

He replied: "I will find a way out."

In one narration it is stated that Sayyidina 'Umar Radiyallahu 'Anhu said: "Will our senses and intelligence be returned to us?"

Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam replied: "Yes, in the same state that you have it today." ... - Ahmed, Tabraanii, Sharhus Sudur.

47. Hakiim Tirmidhii narrates the saying of Sayyidina Hudhayfah Radiyallahu 'Anhu that: "One reckoning will be in the grave, and one in the hereafter. The one who has accounted for deeds in the grave has been saved. The one who has to give account on the day of qiyaamah has been punished." Hakiim Tirmidhii says: "A Mu-min gives account in the grave so that it may become easy tomorrow on the day of qiyaamah. Therefore in the barzakh he is purified (punished for sins committed), so that he may emerge cleansed on the day of qiyaamah." (A non-Muslims accounting will be left for the day of qiyaamah, and the punishment in the barzakh does not lighten the burden of accountability). - Sharhus Sudur.

Commentary:

From the first narration it is proven that sinners are also given glad-tidings at the time of death. In the second narration it has been proven that the Mu-miniin are given a general glad-tiding that they will be able to answer correctly to the questions posed by the Munkar and Nakiir in the grave. In the question put forward by Sayyidina 'Umar Radiyallahu 'Anhu the word "our intelligence" and Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam replying in the positive clearly indicates that this is not particular to Sayyidina 'Umar Radiyallahu 'Anhu, but all Mu-mins are included. It also proves that at the time of questioning the faculties of every Mu-min will be sound. Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam has also informed us that with a sound intellect a correct answer is given. This strongly strengthens those hopes. From the third narration it is proven that hardship in the grave is not without purpose or a benefit. One is saved from the hardships and tribulations of the hereafter. From the three ahaadiith these three aspects have been clearly ascertained. This strengthens our claim that the hardship a sinner goes through is not void of mercy and hopes.

Comfort and ease in the Mah-shar (place of resurrection)

٦ – عن أبي هريرة قال: قال رسول اللّه صلى اللّه عليه وسلم: ان حوضي أبعد من إيلة إلى عدن ، لهو أشد بياضًا من الثلج ، وأحلى من العسل باللبن ، ولآنيته أكثر من عدد النجوم ، وإني لأصد الناس عنه كما يصد الرجل إبل الناس عن حوضه ، قالوا: يا رسول اللّه ،

1. Sayyidina Abii Hurayrah Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "Allah Ta'aala will grant seven people shadow on the day there will be no shadow but His shadow (under the 'Arsh -Throne-): 1. A just ruler; 2. A young person who grew up in the devotions of Allah; 3. A man whose heart remains attached to the masjid from the time he leaves there till he returns; 4. Two persons who kept mutual love for the sake of Allah. They get together for His sake and part for His sake; 5. The one who remembers Allah in solitude and tears flow from his eyes; 6. A man whom a woman of noble descent and beauty seduces, and he says I fear Allah; 7. A person who gives charity in such secrecy that his left hand does not know what the right hand has given." - Mishkaat.

2. Sayyidina Abii Hurayrah Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "People will come to the mah-shar separated into three groups. One group will come walking; some will be riding; and some on their faces." -Tirmidhii, Mishkaat.

The commentators have said, those walking will be the Mumins who have mixed good deeds with bad deeds. And they said, those riding are of a high stage who are complete in their imaan. (The nonbelievers will be brought crawling on their faces.)

3. Sayyidina Ibn 'Abbaas Radiyallahu 'Anhu narrates from Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam in a long hadiith: "The first person to be clothed on the day of qiyaamah will be Sayyidina Ebraahiim 'Alayhis Salaam." - Agreed upon in Mirqaat.

The accepted ones will rise from their graves in the state of undress, but they will be given their kafn to wear. They will be transported on she camels to the grounds of the mah-shar. The wearing of these clothes (as stated in the hadiith) is attributed to divine robes of honour and dressing of jannah, that will be given to the chosen group to wear.

4. Sayyidina Ibn 'Umar Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "Allah Ta'aala (at the time of reckoning) brings a Mu-min closer to Him under the cover of His protection and conceals him. Allah Ta'aala will say: 'Do you remember such and such sin?' The person will reply: 'Yes, my Rabb.' He will confess all his sins and think in his mind that now I am doomed. Allah Ta'aala will say: 'I had concealed those sins in the world and I forgive those for you today.' Then he will be given his Book of Good Deeds." - Mishkaat

5. Sayyidina Abii Sa'iid Al-Khudarii Radiyallahu 'Anhu reports that he came to Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam and said: "Please inform me who will have the strength to remain standing on the day of qiyaamah (a day that will be very long)?" He said: "It will be made light and easy for a Mu-min till it becomes for him like (the duration of) a fard salaah." It is stated in a narration that Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam was asked regarding the day, the length of which is fifty thousand years (i.e the day of qiyaamah). He gave the same answer. - Bayhaqii, Mishkaat.

6. Sayyidina Abii Hurayrah Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "My haud (reservoir) will be very wide, more than the distance between Eelah and 'Aden. It will be whiter than ice; sweeter than honey with milk; its utensils will be more than the count of the stars. I will turn away strange people in the manner that a person turns away strange camels from his haud." The people inquired: "Will you recognise us on that day O Rasulullah?" He said: "Yes, you will have a sign which no other ummah will possess. You will come to me in such a state that your faces, hands and feet will glitter due to the effects of wudu." - Muslim, Mishkaat.

7. Sayyidina Abii Dharr Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "I know the last person who will enter jannah (paradise), and the last to come out of jahannam (hell). He will be a person who will be brought forward on the day of qiyaamah. It will be said, present to him his minor sins and lift his major sins (i.e. do not present these to him). His minor sins will be presented to him. It will be said to him, on a certain day you committed a certain thing. He will reply: 'Yes.' He will not be able to deny them. He will now dread the presentation of his major sins. It will then be said to him: 'For you, in place of every sin there is a good deed.' He will say: 'O my Rabb, I have committed things (sins) which I do not see here.'" (The intention here is the major sins, that, for these too, reward must be given. The narrator says:) I observed Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam laugh till his teeth began to show. - Muslim, Mishkaat.

8. Sayyidina Anas Radiyallahu 'Anhu reports that Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "My sha-faa'ah (intercession) is for those from my ummah who have committed major sins." - Tirmidhii and others, Mishkaat.

9. Sayyidina Anas Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said while portraying the condition and state of the inhabitants of jahannam, a person from the inhabitants of jannah will pass before them. A person from among them will say to him, O person do you not remember me, I am the one who gave you (water) to drink. One will say, I am the one who gave you water for wudu. That person (of jannah) will intercede on their behalf and have them entered into jannah. - Ibn Maajah, Mishkaat.

The bodily and ruhaani (soulful) pleasures in Jannah

١٥ – عن صهيب عن النبي صلى الله عليه وسلم قال: إذا دخل أهل الجنة الجنة يقول الله تعالى: تريدون شيئًا أزيدكم ، فيقولون: ألم تبيض وجوهنا ، ألم تدخلنا الجنة وتنجنا من النار ، قال: فيرفع الحجاب ، فينظرون إلى وجه الله ، فما أعطوا شيئًا أحب إليهم من النظر إلى ربهم ... الحديث ، رواه مسلم ، مشكوة .

If you desire recite the aayah (so that it may be attested): 'No soul knoweth what is kept hid from them of joy, ...'" - Surah Sajdah, 17, Mishkaat.

2. Sayyidina Anas Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "If a woman from among the women of jannah takes a glimpse towards the dunyaa (world), it will illuminate everything between the skies and the earth. It will also fill it with a fragrance. The covering that she has on her head is better than the whole dunyaa and what it contains." - Bukhaarii, Mishkaat.

3. Sayyidina Abii Hurayrah Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "There is a tree in jannah, where a rider cannot complete the distance under its shadow in a hundred years." - Agreed upon, Mishkaat.

4. Sayyidina Abii Hurayrah Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "The first group to enter into jannah will be in the form of the fourteenth moon. Then those who follow them will be like very intensely glittering stars. All hearts will be like one heart. They will have no differences between them nor hatred. Each of them will possess two wives from among the hurul 'een (light-complexioned wide-eyed damsels of jannah). The marrow behind the bones and flesh of their shanks will be visible due to their intense beauty." - Agreed upon, Mishkaat.

5. Sayyidina Jaabir Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "The inhabitants of jannah will eat and drink therein. They will not spit, nor urinate, nor defecate." - Muslim.

You will forever remain young and never turn old. You will forever remain in comfort and never experience hardship." - Muslim.

7. Sayyidina Abii Sa'iid Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "Allah Ta'aala will say to the people of jannah: 'O people of jannah.' They will reply: 'Here we are O our Rabb and we are ready to obey. And all good is in Your Hands.' He will say: 'Are you satisfied and contended?' They will say: 'O our Rabb, why should we not be happy, when You have given us that which You have not given anyone from among Your creation.' He will say: 'Must I not give you something better than that.' They will say: 'O our Rabb, what can be better than that?' He will say: 'I have forever bestowed My favour and pleasure upon you. I will never ever become angry (with you) after this.'" - Agreed upon, Mishkaat.

8. Sayyidina Abii Hurayrah Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, I said: "Yaa Rasulullah, how will the structures of jannah be?" He said: "One brick will be of gold and one of silver. Its bonding will be of pure mushk, the stones of which will be of pearls and sapphires, and its sand of za'faraan (saffron)." - Ahmed, Tirmidhii, Daarimii, Mishkaat.

9. Sayyidina Abii Hurayrah Radiyallahu 'Anhu also narrates that Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "There is no such tree in jannah, but the trunk of it is of gold." - Tirmidhii, Mishkaat.

10. Sayyidina Buraydah Radiyallahu 'Anhu narrates that a person said: "Yaa Rasulullah, will there be horses in jannah?" He said: "May Allah enter you into jannah. hadiith: "If Allah Ta'aala enters you into jannah, you will attain whatever your nafs (psyche) desires, from which your eyes will gain pleasure." - Tirmidhii, Mishkaat.

11. Sayyidina Abii Sa'iid Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "The one having the lowest rank in jannah, will possess eighty thousand servants and seventy two wives. And with the same chain of narrators there is this hadiith that Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "There will be crowns on the people of jannah, the most base type of pearl on it will illuminate between east and west." - Tirmidhii, Mishkaat.

12. Sayyidina Hakiim bin Mu'aa-wiyah Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: There is in jannah an ocean of water; an ocean of honey; an ocean of milk; and an ocean of wine. From these (oceans) rivers will flow." - Tirmidhii, Mishkaat.

Blessed and fortunate are those who are for us and we for them."- Tirmidhii, Mishkaat.

14. Sayyidina Jariir bin 'Abdullah Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "You will openly see your Rabb." In a narration it is stated: "We were sitting by Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam. He observed the moon of laylatul badr (the fourteenth night of the lunar month) and said: 'You will see your Rabb in the same manner that you are seeing this moon. You will not endure trouble when seeing Him. (Like people are troubled when going to see the regal and notables of this world).'" - Agreed upon, Mishkaat.

15. Sayyidina Suhayb Radiyallahu 'Anhu narrates that Nabii Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "When the people of jannah enter into jannah, Allah Ta'aala will say: 'Do you want Me to increase anything for you?' They will say: 'Did you not illuminate our countenance; did You not enter us into jannah and save us from jahannam.'" He (further) says: "Then the veils will be lifted and they will see the countenance of Allah. From whatever they had been granted, nothing will be more beloved then seeing their Rabb." - Muslim, Mishkaat.

16. Sayyidina Ibn 'Umar Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "The one with the lowest rank from among the inhabitants of jannah will be that person who will be able to see his gardens, wives, luxuries, servants and things of enjoyment to the distance of one thousand years. The one with the highest stage will be the person who will see the countenance of Allah Ta'aala morning and evening. ... " - Ahmed, Tirmidhii, Mishkaat.

17. Sayyidina Jaabir Radiyallahu 'Anhu reports from Nabii Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam that: "The inhabitants of jannah will be indulging in blessings and pleasure. Suddenly, a nur (light) will rise before them. They will raise their heads and see Allah Subhaanahu Wa Ta'aala appear before them. It will be said: 'Assalamu'alaykum O people of jannah.' This is also the tafsiir of the aayah: "The word from a Merciful Lord (for them) is: Peace!' -Surah Yaasiin, 57. Allah Ta'aala will see them and they will see Allah Ta'aala. While they see the countenance of Allah Ta'aala they will not turn towards any of the other blessings and pleasures till He conceals Himself. His nur (light) will remain." - Ibn Maajah, Mishkaat.

Commentary:
Ponder a little over these ahaadiith. Such quiet, deceitless and everlasting blessings are not available to any king of the whole world.

Appendix:

READERS MAY REMEMBER that the delights and favours of the barzakh were mentioned in the eleventh chapter. There appears to be a doubt therein. In the twelfth chapter the favours of qiyaamah are stated. Therein too appears to be a doubt, as was in the eleventh chapter. That doubt is, that a desire for the delights and blessings of jannah can only come about when there is no mention of the punishment of jahannam. After becoming aware of the punishment and trials of jahannam one's desire becomes dampened and one fears the name of the hereafter. Instead of the hereafter, one will regard it as a good fortune to remain in this world, because, till one remains in the world, one is safe from the punishment of the hereafter. The intelligent also say the warding off of troubles and hardship is more important than attaining comfort. Here too, this doubt has two answers as was mentioned in the eleventh chapter. First, to save one's self from hell is something of which one has an option. All those aspects that makes one worthy of the punishment of jahannam are all a thing of choice. If one abstains from sin, one has saved one's self from hardships and jahannam. The second is, although committing sin, if imaan remains, one will experience remission from the trials and hardships of jahannam. Besides these hardships it is certain that we will gain freedom from it. It will do the work of an ointment on a wound. Whatever enjoyments and pleasures there may be, but the thought of the hardships of the hereafter makes everything everything gloomy and sullen. This proves that for a Mu-min the troubles of the hereafter are superior than the enjoyments and pleasures of the world, because with the hardships of that place the certainty of attaining jannah is attached (i.e. after being punished one will surely enter jannah). With the enjoyments and pleasures of the world, there is the danger of the hereafter. A third answer to this doubt has also been mentioned in the eleventh chapter, that some sinners will be totally saved from the punishment of jahannam through the intercession of someone or merely through the Grace of Allah Ta'aala. Punishment of others will cease after some time. For the second and third answer a proof is necessary, therefore some narrations are stated here:

٢ – عن أبي سعيد قال: قال رسول اللّه صلى اللّه عليه وسلم: يخلص المؤمنون من النار فيحبسون على قنطرة بين الجنة والنار ، فيقتص ببعضهم من بعض مظالم كانت بينهم في الدنيا حتى إذا هذبوا ونقوا أذن لهم في دخول الجنة ، رواه البخاري ، مشكوة .

٣ – وعن أبي سعيد في حديث طويل قال: قال رسول اللّه ﷺ: (بعد ان ذكر المرور على الصراط) حتى إذا خلص المؤمنون من النار ،

فوالّذي نفسي بيده ما من أحد منكم باشد مناشدة في الحق قد تبين لكم من المؤمنين للّه يوم القيامة لإخوانهم الّذين في النار ، يقولون: ربنا كانوا يصومون معنا ويصلون ويحجون ، فيقال لهم: اخرجوا من عرفتم ، فيحرم صورهم على النار ، فيخرجون خلقًا كثيرًا ، ثم يقولون: ربنا ما بقي فيها أحد ممن أمرتنا به ، فيقول: إرجعوا ، فمن وجدتم في قلبه مثقال دينار من خير فأخرجوه ، فيخرجون خلقًا كثيرًا ، ثم يقول: ارجعوا ، فمن وجدتم في قلبه مثقال نصف دينار من خير فاخرجوه ، فيخرجون خلقًا كثيرًا ، ثم يقول: ارجعوا ، فمن وجدتم في قلبه مثقال ذرة من خير فاخرجوه ، فيخرجون خلقًا كثيرًا ، ثم يقولون: ربنا لم ندر فيها خيرًا ، فيقول اللّه: شفعت الملائكة ، وشفع النبيون ، وشفع المؤمنون ، ولم يبق إلّا أرحم الراحمين ، فيقبض قبضة من النار ، فيخرج منها قومًا لم يعملوا خيرًا قط ، قد عادوا فحمًا ، فيلقيهم في نهر في أفواه الجنة يقال له نهر الحيوة ، فيخرجون كما تخرج الحبة في حميل السيل ، فيخرجون كاللؤلؤ في رقابهم الخواتم ، فيقول أهل الجنة: هؤلاء عتقاء الرحمن ، ادخلهم الجنة بغير عمل عملوه ولا خير قدموه ، فيقال لهم: لكم ما رأيتم ومثله معه ، متفق عليه ، مشكوة .

1. Sayyidina Abii Sa'iid Radiyallahu 'Anhu says, Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "Those who are truly the inhabitants of the fire (the kaafirs - nonbelievers) will not die nor live therein, but some people from among you (Muslims), due to their sins will experience effects of the fire. Thereafter, Allah Ta'aala will give a special type of death till they become like coal. Permission will be given to the intercessors to intercede for them". (Some say that after experiencing punishment for some time they will die. Some say this similitude of death is given because of the light punishment they will experience). - Muslim.

2. Sayyidina Abii Sa'iid Radiyallahu 'Anhu reports Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "Muslims will be freed from jahannam and stopped at a bridge between jannah and jahannam. They will account for rights due to one another in the dunyaa (world) until these rights are re-compensated and settled. When they are cleansed (from sin), they will be allowed to enter into jannah." -Bukhaarii, Mishkaat.

3. Sayyidina Abii Sa'iid Radiyallahu 'Anhu reports in a long hadiith that Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "(After mentioning the crossing of the siraat - bridge over jahannam) When Muslims will be freed from jahannam. I swear an oath in the Name of that Being in Whose Hands lie my life, one does not press so much for the redressing of one's proven rights of this world, in comparison to the persistence Muslims will make on behalf of their brothers who are in jahannam. They will say: 'O our Rabb, these people used to fast with us; perform salaah; and perform haj'. It will be said to them: 'Take out whomsoever you recognise, and there will be no trace of the fire on them'. Hence they will take out a huge amount from the creation. They will say: 'O our Rabb, there is no one left from those that You have commanded us to take out.' He will say: 'Go back. Bring out those you find that had a diinaar's equivalent of imaan.' They will take out a huge number from the creation. Then He will say: 'Go back. Bring out those you find that possessed half a diinaar's equivalent of imaan.' They will take out a huge number from the creation. Then He will say: 'Go back. Bring out those who have an atom's equivalent of imaan.' They will take out a huge number of the creation, then say: 'We have not left out anyone who possessed imaan.' Allah will say: 'The malaa-ikah (angels) interceded. The ambiyaa (prophets) interceded. The Mu-miniin interceded. Now besides the Arhamur Raahimii n (The Most Merciful of the mercifuls) no one is left. He will take a handful from the fire. From it will come out a people who had never ever done any good, as a result they burnt and became coal. He will throw them in a river that will be on the tip of jannah called nahrul hayaah (river of life). They will emerge therefrom fresh like the grain that sprouts out after floods have passed. Hence they will come out like pearls. They will have a special mark on their necks. The people of jannah will call them the one's that were freed by the Rahmaan (Merciful). Allah Ta'aala has entered them into jannah without committing any good deed or having presented any good for the hereafter. It will be said to them: 'For you is what you have seen, and with it an (extra) addition of the same.'" - Agreed upon, Mishkaat.

Commentary:
Those that will be taken out of jahannam at the end solely by the Mercy of Allah are surely Muslims. It has been categorically refuted in the sharii'ah that a kaafir will be pardoned. A kaafir will stay forever in jahannam. It is possible that these people are those to whom the message of no prophet had reached, therefore, they may be classed as kaafirs. Being kaafirs they may remain forever in jahannam. Nor can they be regarded as Mu-min, as people that believe in a nabii are called Mu-min. Since the message of a nabii did not reach them they are not Mu-mins, and did not enter jannah with other Mu-mins nor did anybody intercede for them. Apparently this is meant by the words of the hadiith, because, in this hadiith the words: "Bi ghayri 'amalin 'ami-luhu wa-laa khayrin qadi-muhu", there are two words, 'amal and khayr, which means they did not do any 'amal nor any khayr (good). By khayr, it is understood that only imaan is intended. Now a question may arise, that when the message of a nabii did not reach them, they were unaware of good and bad. Why were they then sent to jahannam. It is possible that the answer to that may be that some sins are not dependent on the message of a nabii. These could be understood through one's intellect too, like zulm (oppression) etc. They may have been involved in such type of sin, therefore they were thrown into jahannam. After being cleansed they were taken out of jahannam by the Mercy of Allah Ta'aala. It may be possible that these people were Mu-mins, but their imaan was of such an inferior and weak state, that no nabii or walii may have recognised them. Only Allah Ta'aala knew of their status. And Allah knows best.

Synopsis of the kitaab:

UNDERSTAND THIS KITAAB to be a prescription for spiritual diseases of the heart. Now its method of use is explained. After having read this kitaab, and to derive benefit from it, i.e. the method of yearning for the hereafter, is, that during the day or night set aside some free time, bring together in the heart all the subjects that have been written here, even if it may be in thought only, that this world is the house of sorrow and hardship. Which day will that be, when the separation from the original and permanent home comes to an end, and the angels of mercy come to fetch me. Before death there may be some illness, due to which my sins will be forgiven and I will become pure and clean. At the time of death I will hear the glad tidings from the angels that have been mentioned in the kitaab. The angels will take me away with respect and honour. I will witness such and such things in the grave and I will meet the ruhs (souls) of the elders, relatives and friends. I will move about in jannah. If my deeds are the baaqiyaatus saalihaat type, or after my death some Muslim brother makes du'aa for me, through its barakah the blessings will multiply. On the day of qiyaamah there will be comfort and ease. There will be so and so great apparent and hidden enjoyments. Briefly, in one's spare moments concentrate on these and enjoy one's self. When punishment comes to mind, then remember it is possible to save one's self from it. If I abstain from such acts which brings about punishment, then how can I be punished. By occupying one's self with such thoughts, it increases the yearning for the hereafter, and love for this material world will diminish. Instead of love for the material world one will begin to detest and hate it. Where once there was fear for the hereafter, now one will be looking forward and begin to love it. This act in itself is also an 'ibaadah (devotion). The sharii'ah has commanded us to observe it. Many of its virtues have been narrated. The proof of these are mentioned in the ensuing ahaadiith:

٣ – في شرح الصدور ، قيل يا رسول الله ، هل يحشر مع الشهداء أحد؟ ، قال: نعم ، من يذكر الموت في اليوم والليلة عشرين مرة ، قلت: ومن راقب كما ذكرت كان ذكره له أكثر من عشرين للكثرة في الروايات التي هي محل المراقبة .

1. Sayyidina Anas Radiyallahu 'Anhu reports from Nabii Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam: "Abundantly remember death, for it wipes out sin and makes one renounce the world. ..." - Ibn Abid Dunyaa. Sharhus Sudur.

2. Sayyidina Wadiin bin 'Ataa Radiyallahu 'Anhu says: "When Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam observed the people becoming lax from (remembering) death, he would come and hold the side of the door and call out three times: 'O people, O people of Islaam. Death has come to you necessarily and compulsorily. Death has come with its attachments. Death has come with cheerfulness, comfort and great blessings, for the people of jannah and the accepted one's of the Rahmaan (Merciful), who strived and strongly desired jannah. ...'" - Bayhaqii. Sharhus Sudur.

3. It is stated in the Sharhus Sudur, that it was said: "Yaa Rasulullah, will anybody be resurrected with the shu-hadaa (martyrs)?"
He said: "Yes, the one that remembers death twenty times during the day and night."
I say: "The one that meditates as stated, then his remembering of death will exceed twenty times."

Keeping one's hopes on a moderate level:
Muslims may know that complete imaan is not solely based on fear, or hope, but, between fear and hope, as is proven by the Qur-aan and hadiith. In this booklet matters relating to hope only have been written. Absolutely nothing regarding fear has been written. It should not be misunderstood that our intention is that one should only rely on hope and completely forget fear. Our intention in writing such subjects is to create a dislike for the material world and love for the hereafter. To fulfil this aim subjects on hope plays a great role, because when one has the desire for the hereafter, then naturally one will have the courage to do good deeds. This courage is the actual aim. The conveying of matters regarding hope and fear are both equal to reach the aim. The mentioning only of subjects on hope in reality supports the subjects on fear (because the aim of subjects on fear is attained by these mentioned on hope as well). Allah Ta'aala explains regarding complete imaan in the following terms: "And those who are fearful of their Lord's doom- Lo! the doom of their Lord is that before which none can feel secure-" - Surah Ma'aarij, 27, 28.

Research regarding long life:

At the end of the third chapter a doubt and its answer have been mentioned. (The doubt being that we find from the hadiith death is given preference over life, but in some ahaadiith it has been prohibited to wish for death. The answer was that life could be given preference over death, because, if life is lengthened than piety and reward will increase, or one may be able to repent from sins, otherwise preference is for death, as, all blessings of the hereafter can only be attained after death.) Now here this same answer is being given a bit more clearly. If it is pondered upon, then it will be proven that in those ahaadiith where preference for life over death seems evident, in reality such hadiith support those that give preference to death over life. In those hadiith it is stated that death must not be wished for, for the reason that in a long life piety and reward can increase and repentance can be offered. By increasing in lifespan a better and easier death can occur, therefore the lengthening of life is better, otherwise just a long life on its own is not the aim, hence, the preference is for death, as is evident from the ahaadiith of the third chapter. It is also proven from the following hadi th:

١ – عن زرعة بن عبد الله ان النبي صلى الله عليه وسلم قال: يحب الإنسان الحيوة والموت خير لنفسه ، أخرجه البيهقي ، شرح الصدور .

1. Sayyidina Zar'ah bin 'Abdullah narrates that Nabii Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam said: "A human loves life, while death is better for him." - Bayhaqii. Sharhus Sudur.

1. Sayyiditina 'Aa-i-shah Radiyallahu 'Anhaa says, I heard Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam say: "There is no such nabii who was not given the choice between the dunyaa (world) and the hereafter. Severe contraction of voice affected him in his last illness before death. At that time I heard him say: 'I wish to live with (those Whom You have blessed) the ambiyaa, siddiqiin (truthful), shuhadaa (martyrs), and saalihiin (pious).' I understood that he has been given a choice." - Agreed upon, Mishkaat.

2. It is stated in the Musnad Ahmed that the malakul maut came to Sayyidina Ebraahiim 'Alayhis Salaam to take his ruh (soul). Ebraahiim 'Alayhis Salaam said: "O malakul maut, did you see a friend take the ruh of a friend." Malakul maut ascended to his Rabb. It was said: "Say to him, did you see a friend dislike meeting His friend." Malakul maut returned. He said: "Take my ruh this instant." - Sharhus Sudur.

3. It is narrated from Sayyidina 'Umar Radiyallahu 'Anhu that he said: "O Allah, my strength has weakened; my age has increased; my subjects (citizens) have spread far and wide. Take me towards You, in such a manner that I am not astray nor negligent." He did not complete that month when he was taken. - Maalik, Sharhus Sudur.

4. Hasan Basrii RA said: "There was an 'aabid in this town of yours. He came out of the masjid. When he put his leg in the stirrup, malakul maut came and said to him: "Marhaba (welcome), I was longing for you." And took his ruh. - Marwazii, Sharhus Sudur.

5. Khaalid bin Ma'daan RA said: "There is no such living creature in the land or sea, who will make me happy to give itself as a ransom on my behalf for death. If death had a sign where people could run and reach there, then nobody could have won me to reach there, besides that person who would win me due to his strength." - Ibn Sa'd. Marwazii, Sharhus Sudur.

6. Abu Mis-har RA said: "I heard a person saying to Sa'iid bin 'Abdul 'Aziiz At-tanukhii: 'May Allah lengthen your life.' He replied: 'No, but may Allah hasten me to His mercy.' - Ibn 'A-saakir, Sharhus Sudur.

7. 'Ubaydah bin Muhaajir RA said: "If it was said, the one that touches this wood will die. I will immediately get up and touch that wood." - Abu Nu'aym, Sharhus Sudur.

8. Sayyidina Abii Hurayrah Radiyallahu 'Anhu narrates that a person passed and said to him: "Where are you intending to go?" He replied: "The market." He said: "If you can purchase death for me before you return, surely do so." - Ibn Abii Shaybah, Ibn Sa'd, Sharhus Sudur.

9. It is narrated that 'Abdullah bin Zakariyya used to say: "If I was given a choice between living for a hundred years in devotion to Allah, and the other that my life be taken on this day or this moment. I will choose this day or this moment due to love and desire for Allah, His Rasul, and His pious bondsman." - Abu Nu'aym, Sharhus Sudur.

10. It is narrated from Ahmed bin Abul-hawaarii that I heard Abaa 'Abdullah Al-baajii say: "If I was given the choice that the whole world be for me since the day I was created, in such a manner that I live in it in a halaal manner and on the day of qiyaamah there will be no questioning, and the other that my life be taken at this moment, then I will choose that my life be taken this moment. Do you not desire to meet those who are obedient." - Abu Nu'aym, Ibn 'A-saakir, Sharhus Sudur.

Commentary:
If death is a thing of desire, why did Sayyidina Musa 'Alayhis Salaam treat the malakul maut harshly. The answer is that Sayyidina Musa 'Alayhis Salaam did not recognise him. It is narrated in a hadiith at that time the angel appeared in a viewable form. It is clear in a hadiith of the sah-haah that Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallahu 'Alayhi Wasallam could not endure the seeing of Sayyidina Jibra-eel 'Alayhis Salaam in his original form in this world. It becomes obvious that no one can see an angel in its original form. It is also apparent that the angels appeared in the form of a human in those days. Therefore, not recognising malakul maut is not strange, nor does it negate the desire for death.

Extracts from the discourses of Maulana Ashraf 'Ali Thaanwi

ALLAH MOST HIGH says in the Qur-aan: ".... and it is judged between them with truth, and they are not wronged". -Surah Zumur, 69. This will not happen that someone had carried out a minute pious deed and it will not be recorded in the book of deeds, or an evil deed that was not committed is recorded in the book of deeds. But, by the requirement of "My Mercy has taken preference over my anger", it will so happen that a good deed will be written for a person that has not even been carried out. There, beneficence, bounty and reward will be vast. Mercy will be granted at every juncture. Some will be forgiven for only removing a thorn from a path. A woman will be forgiven on that, she observed a thirsty dog at the mouth of a well licking wet sand. She felt sorry for the animal, took her leather shoe, fastened it with her orni (head covering - scarve) and took out water from the well and gave the dog to drink. That woman was of loose morals, but Allah Ta'aala said, she had mercy on Our creation, therefore We are having mercy on her. Both these incidents have been mentioned in the hadiith.

There exist many such divine inspirations. For example, there was a pious man who passed away. Someone saw him in his dream. He asked the person, say what has transpired with you. The person replied: "Here the great endeavours and religious exercises did not help (as they were not of a complete nature that it could be worthy of reward). It was said, go you are forgiven for one day you had shown kindness to a kitten. The kitten was shivering from cold and you covered it in an eiderdown. For this We have forgiven you." A minute deed must not be regarded as insignificant and worthless. The hadiith states: "O 'Aa-i-shah, do not regard a good deed as worthless. ..." On the day of qiyaamah there will be a pretext for reward for little little things. It will not happen that someone will be accused of something that had not been done. 'Wa-hum laa yuz-lamun', they will not be oppressed.

Zulm is that a person's rights are usurped and the person is not rewarded for pious deeds. 'Adl (justice) is that punishment is meted out for sin and proper reward given for pious deeds. Rahmah (mercy) is to disregard sin and grant forgiveness and increase many fold rewards for pious deeds. Forget Allah Ta'aala making zulm on (oppressing) His bondsman, He will not even treat them with 'adl, but forgive many of their sins and grant rewards more than is their due. Normally, one will receive ten rewards for one good deed. It is stated in the hadiith that on the day of qiyaamah the Mu-miniin will be treated in such a manner, that they will find in their book of deeds such rewards written for them that had not even been carried out. With some this will take place that their minor sins will be presented to them and major sins left aside. Then it will be decreed that the minor sins be forgiven and reward be granted instead. At that moment the person will fear that the major sins will be revealed. When he will observe that rewards have been granted in lieu of the sins, he will himself say, I have committed other greater sins, where are they and why are they not revealed. It will be said to him that if rewards are granted in place of minor sins then in place of the major sins major rewards will be granted. While hoping for great rewards he will say where are my major sins. Subhaanallaah, is there a limit to mercy? Some sins will be such that they will not even be recorded in the book of deeds, these will be sins that one had repented for. According to the Ahlus-Sunnah sins can be forgiven without repentance. Allah Ta'aala merely through His Grace will forgive sins.

Jannah (paradise) will long for the people of jannah, like one waiting for a beloved visitor, or a son returning from a far place after a long time. In the manner that a person of jannah longs for jannah, likewise, jannah also longs for the person of jannah. Even the servants, retinue, attendants, hurs etc. therein will all yearn for him. It has been established in the hadiith that doors will close just upon an indication. They will stroll about with leisure and behold its adornments and decorations. Suddenly doors will open or according to another saying there will be open doors. Jannah and what it contains will yearn for him. They will enjoy ruhaanii pleasures. "... say unto them: Peace be unto you! Ye are good, so enter ye (the Garden of delight), to dwell therein; ..." - Surah Zumur, 73. This is honour and respect, and a display of magnificence that the malaa-ikah will greet and congratulate them, for staying well. Now have ease and tranquility and go into jannah for eternity. What a moment of happiness this is. The people of jannah will in excitement say: "Praise be to Allah, Who hath fulfilled His promise unto us (upon accepting imaan He promised us Jannah, and He has fulfilled that promise)". - Surah Zumur, 74.

" ... and hath made us inherit the land", i.e. the land of Jannah, as is mentioned hereafter, and not of a stipulated place but, "sojourning in the Garden where we will!", - Surah Zumur, 75 wherever we wish, we will take a place in jannah. One will have the freedom of taking a place where one chooses. One will go wherever one pleases. It wont be like house arrest, where a person lives in a garden or a city and cannot go out of that place. There will be no boundaries for the people of jannah. There will be no restrictions upon them. They will go wherever they please. Meet friends, live in an underground chamber, etc.

According to Maulana Muhammad Ya'qub Saahib one will possess a small amount of divinity (nature of Allah). By little it is meant, that in complete divinity everything happens according to authority, discretion and control. Whereas, in little divinity these are not found, but things will happen according to one's volition. It will mean that whatever one chooses to do, immediately that thing will happen with the command of Allah. This is the meaning of the aayah: "... and therein is all that souls desire and eyes find sweet. And ye are immortal therein". - Surah Zukhruf, 71. The word 'maa' in Arabic is general. Whatever one desires will happen. For example, one is sitting in a house with a roof. One now desires that there should be no roof. The roof will be removed immediately. Or, one is sitting in an open field and one desires that there should be a house here, then immediately through the command of the Almighty Allah in a moment's time a house will be there. A beautiful bird is sitting in a tree. One thinks that kabaab (skewered or grilled meat) of its meat will be delicious. Immediately kabaabs will be presented. One will be eating the kabaabs whilst the bird will still be in the tree. There is life in the air of jannah. The Qur-aan states that the fruits of jannah will remain forever and will not perish or diminish. A fruit will come from a tree and immediately in its place there will be another one. If one desires sunshine there will be sunshine, if one desires shade there will be shade. The sunshine of jannah will not be like that of the world, which is unbearable and troublesome. The sunshine of jannah will be suitable to jannah with no trouble encountered. It is stated in the Qur-aan: "... they will not find there neither (heat of) a sun nor bitter cold". - Surah Dahr, 13. From this aayah we gather that there will be no heat of the sun, and I have said if someone wishes for sunshine there will be sunshine for him. The object is that the sunshine will not be such that it is unbearable, or from which one is troubled. Some will wish to have a child. Some will wish to have a farm. Immediately they will receive what they had wished for. Sayyidina Rasulullah Sallallaahu 'Alayhi Wasallam was asked regarding farms in jannah. A sahaabii said the one asking for a farm in jannah must be from among the Ansaar, because the Ansaar were farmers.

My respected ustaadh, may Allah have mercy on him, whose knowledge was vast, must have seen in a narration, that in jannah it will so happen that one takes a fruit to eat, but suddenly a hur will emerge therefrom and greet one. In some it is stated that a set of clothing will come out from the fruit. It will also be one's good fortune that some unknown thing will be suddenly created for him. Upon receiving blessings and favours one feels happy in every way, but where things are received unexpectedly, one gains a wonderful and amazing pleasure.

I heard from my ustaadh a story of a rich person. Two visitors from a small town came to visit him. The chef placed breakfast before them, consisting a small table cloth, one small bowl of qormah, a plate of sweet rice and four very thin chapaatis. Seeing such a paltry breakfast the visitors heart sank and thought that these rich people eat little themselves and think others also eat so little. Well, reluctantly they ate up the food and sat quietly. The servant urged them to eat. They became more agitated and said what must we eat. The servant took the bowl, broke it and put it before them saying this is salted hardened cream. Thereafter he presented the plate saying this has been fashioned from sweet cream. He then lifted the table cloth, broke it into pieces and presented it to them saying, do not fear there is still a lot of food left. This table cloth has been made from baaqir khaanii rotii. They could not finish eating the table cloth. Then their eyes opened. If the visitors had been told beforehand that the tablecloth, plate and bowl is made from such and such ingredients, they would not have gained so much pleasure. They gained more pleasure from unexpectedly being made aware, then eating food prepared in such a manner. This proves that more pleasure is gained from receiving something in a novel and unexpected manner.

A Muslim raajah (ruler) once had a pomegranate made of sweetmeats by an artisan chef for a Lieutenant Governor. The shape of the sweetmeat was exactly like that of a pomegranate including the seed and skin, but it was a sweetmeat and one hundred and fifty rupees (a large sum in those days) was spent on its creation. Envisage Allah's blessings. One hundred and fifty rupees was spent to prepare a pomegranate and that too an imitation. The vast sum spent an on imitation cannot equal the original made by Allah Ta'aala. Subhaanallaah, the original can be purchased for a few cents.

A person narrated that at an invitation jasmine flowers were brought in a plate. In reality it was cooked rice. It was the artistic ingenuity of the chef. The chef prepared a special masaala and dipped half of each grain of rice therein and cooked it. The result was that half portion of a grain sprouted out like a flower. When the jasmine flowers were dished out it became evident that it was rice. How much trouble and complications had been gone through because some pleasure may be derived from it. In the same manner different types of pleasures will be attained in jannah. A comedian described these as becoming a vagrant. In reality it is not so. In the dunyaa it may be regarded as bad because it turns one away from attaining perfection. A human needs many perfections in the world. For example, learning and writing; skill, trade and manufacturing; earning money; building homes; having children etc. For all these hard work is necessary. Becoming a vagrant is an obstacle and hindrance in achieving an aim, therefore, it is regarded as a defect. In jannah no perfections have to be accomplished. There Allah Ta'aala has taken the onus of providing everything. We do not have to keep ourselves busy in any occupation. In reality it will be the fruit of having attained perfection. One will be so free that no additional perfection will have to be accomplished. Imaam Shaafi'ee says I began wishing for jannah after hearing that one would be able to meet friends there. Meaning it is a great thing to meet friends, and such a blessing that makes one hope for jannah.

Everything of jannah is of a superior quality than those things of the world. Things of jannah cannot be compared to those of the world. The Qur-aan states: "Wherein is fruit, the date-palm and pomegranate". - Surah Ar-Rahmaan, 68. also "Therein are rivers of water unpolluted, and rivers of milk whereof the flavour changeth not, and rivers of wine delicious to the drinkers, and rivers of clear-run honey;". - Surah Muhammad, 15. All names mentioned are like those of the world. In reality its quality are unlike those of the world. The dates, pomegranates, grapes and other fruit are not like those of the world, nor is the water of jannah like that of the world. It has been explained as unpolluted. The water of the world changes after some time. The milk of jannah is not the same. Its flavour and taste will not change. No one has seen the wine of jannah. It is not like that of the world which is unclean, has a repugnant taste and intoxicates and makes one lose one's senses, but has a delicious taste. It is termed tuhur, i.e. something that cleans excessively, whereas that of the world is polluted and a pollutant. The hadiith states that Allah Ta'aala says regarding jannah: "I have prepared for My pious bondsman what no eye has seen, nor ear has heard, nor any human heart a conception of."

Dua'aa for the desire of the Aa-khirah

UPTO THIS POINT in the kitaab, the ahaadiith and events written for the remembrance of the hereafter are all means and procedures towards achieving that aim. It is imperative and most important that the means and procedures mentioned not be regarded as sufficient, but supplication made to Allah Ta'aala for assistance in this sphere. Therefore, it is deemed appropriate that at the end some du'aas pertaining to this subject be added from the Munaajaat Maqbul. So that with the various subjects of the kitaab these du'aas could also be submitted to Allah Most High. Since the understanding of du'aas plays a great role in its effects and acceptance, translation of the du'aas has been given.

Translation:

1. Creator of the heavens and earth! Thou art my Protecting Friend in the world and the hereafter. Make me to die submissive (unto Thee), and join me to the righteous. -Surah Yusuf, 101.

2. O Allah I ask You such blessings and comfort that does not end, and such coolness of the eyes that does not cease, and contentment upon what You have decreed, and a happy and cool life after death; and the bliss and pleasure of seeing Your Countenance; and the craving desire to meet You without harmful detriment and trials that lead astray.

3. O Allah teach me the proof of imaan at the time of death.

4. O Allah forgive my sins, and keep my shaytaan away from me, and open my bond, and make my scale weighty, and make me from among the high ranks.

5. O Allah I ask You triumph in my fate, and the hospitality of a martyr, and the living of the pious, and the companionship of the ambiyaa (prophets), and victory over enemies. Verily You hear supplications.

6. O Allah, there is no life but the life of the hereafter.

7. O Allah, make my love for You the most beloved thing to me, and my fear for You the most fearful thing to me, and remove from me all worldly needs and wants by instilling a passion for meeting You, and when You have given the people of the world the pleasures of their world, make the coolness of my eyes (pleasure) in worshipping You.

8. O Allah help me during the difficult and unconscious moments at the time of death.

9. O Allah forgive me and have mercy on me, and unite me with the Most Lofty Companion.

10. Allah is sufficient for me at the time of death, Allah is sufficient for me at the time of questioning in the grave, Allah is sufficient for me at the scale (when deeds are weighed on the day of qiyaamah), Allah is sufficient for me on the siraat (bridge over jahannam), Allah is sufficient for me, there is none worthy of worship but He, on Him I have relied and He is Lord of the Great 'Arsh (Throne).

A word from the Publisher

There is no doubt that Almighty Allah sent the great scholar of Islam Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanawi as the Renovator and Spiritual Leader. He spent his entire life in the work of ameliorating the Muslim Ummah. There is no aspect of the religious or the worldly activities of humanity in which he did not guide the Muslims with his writings and speeches. He has many compositions and publications to his credit which cover the subjects of Islamic culture and civilisation, devotion social dealings and transactions, economic and social aspects of life, in fact, all branches of human life. In addition to his compositions on highly scientific and research works, he has left behind very simple books easy to understand and assimilate - all this for the benefit of the general public and those who are on a lower level of education.

The book under consideration is a recombination of four of his books which are brief but comprehensive, useful and easy to understand.

1. Rights of Islam
2. Rights of Parents
3. Etiquettes of social living
4. Common Errors

This book shall, God willing, form a beacon of guidance for the Muslims. What is needed is that it should be made available to every Muslim household to derive from it maximum benefit.

May Allah help us all to follow the true Islamic teachings. Amen!

بِسْمِ اللهِ الرَّحْمنِ الرَّحِيْمِ

Rights of Islam

All praise to Allah who has honoured us by saying in His Book: Indeed Allah commands you to restore to their owners the trusts (deposited with you) and to judge justly if you (ever) judge among men. (4:58)

Salutation and blessings on His Messenger, our master, Muhammad, who warned us by his saying: He who has done wrong to his brother in the matter of his dignity, wealth, should free himself there from today, before there is no Dinar nor any Dirham, i.e. on the Day of Judgement. Salutation and blessings also on his household and Companions who joined every branch to its roots.

It has been established by way of tradition as well reason that we have been called upon to discharge some rights, some of which are due to Allah and some to His servants. Of the rights due to the servants some concern religion and some this worldly life. Rights concerning the worldly life are also diverse, e.g., those due to near relatives, other relatives, particular persons, Muslims in general, elders and youngers, equals and so on and so forth.

Some men are either totally ignorant of these rights and obligations or are deliberately unmindful of them. Hence, this brief pamphlet for general information and benefit. Qazi Sanaullah's pamphlet entitled "Haqeeqat-ul-Islam, as referred to by me in the Furu-ul-Islam, was considered quite sufficient on this topic. The entitled pamphlet 'Aadaab-i-Zindagi is a short summary of 'Haqeeqat-ul-Islam' with certain additions here and there. This pamphlet in hand is entitled "Huquq-ul-Islam". It contains a few chapters, each dealing with a particular category of rights.

Rights of Almighty Allah

The foremost right imposed upon the servants of Allah is that we owe to Allah Himself, who created and preserved, as a gift to His servants, blessings of many kinds. He brought them out of error to guidance. He gave them glad tidings of diverse blessings as a reward for following the path of right guidance.

The rights which the servants owe to Allah are as follows:

1. To have faith in the existence and attributes of Almighty Allah according to the injunctions given in the Holy Qur'an and the Traditions.
2. To adopt such beliefs, deeds, dealings, conduct and character as conform to the Qur'an and the Traditions and to give up such of them as conflict with the Qur'an and the Traditions.
3. To accord preference to Allah's pleasure and love over the pleasure of anyone other than Allah.
4. One should not harbour love or malice for anyone, and do good or bad to anyone except for the sake of Allah.

Rights of the Prophet

(assalamu alai him)

It is through the guidance of the Prophet (P.B.U.T.) that we came to know the relevant features of the divine existence, attributes and facts about Allah's pleasures and displeasures, likes and dislikes which were revealed to them through Angels. Many matters of worldly losses and gains, therefore, came to light through the Angels. Many Angels have been appointed to do work which are beneficial to us and they are discharging their duties with Allah's leave. That is why Allah's rights also include the rights due to the Prophets and the Angels (P.B.U.T.). The favours granted to us by the last of the Prophets, Muhammad (P.B.U.H.) being the greatest of the Prophets, his rights due by us are also the greatest. Some of those rights are as follows:

1. To believe in the prophethood of the Holy Prophet (P.B.U.H.).
2. To obey him in all commands and injunctions.
3. To glorify and love him heart and soul.
4. To send him blessings and salutations (Darud & Salam) regularly.

The rights of the Hon'ble Angels are as follows:

1. To believe in the reality of their existence.
2. To believe that they are innocent and can commit no sins.
3. To pronounce the salutary words "peace be upon them".
4. To avoid entering a mosque after eating things emitting foul smell or emitting[1] wind in the mosques, as these offend the Angels. There are many other acts that offend and annoy them which must be avoided, e.g., to keep photos and pictures, to keep and tame dogs, unless this is permissible under the laws of the Shari'ah, to tell lies; to delay, through laziness, taking bath to purify the body from coition (Ghusi-el-Janabat), thereby missing prayers, to lay bare the body even in privacy without a necessity recognisable in the Shari'ah.

Rights of the companions (R.A.A.) and the Prophet's Household

The Holy Companions and the members of the Prophet's household are related to the Holy Prophet (P.B.U.H.) by religious as well as worldly relations. Therefore, the rights of these respectable personalities are included in the rights of the Holy Prophet (P.B.U.H.). These rights are as follows:

1. e.g. Raw garlic, onion, radish, betel-leave, tobacco, burning kerosene lamp, lighting match, etc. in a mosque.

1. To obey these respected personalities.
2. To love these respected personalities.
3. To believe that they are just and truthful.
4. To love those who love them and to hate those who hate them.

Rights of the learned and the spiritual saints (Ulama and Masha-ikh)

As the learned men in the apparent and the secret sphere of religious learning are inheritors of and successors to, the Holy Prophet (P.B.U.H.), their rights are also included in the rights of the Holy Prophet (P.B.U.H.). They are as follows:

1. To pray regularly for the Jurists, Legists, Doctors, Traditionalists, Professors, Religious Saints of the mystic orders and composers and compilers of religious books.
2. To follow them according to the injunctions of the Shari'ah.
3. To respect and regard with affection such of them as are still alive and not to hate and oppose them.
4. To give them monetary help according to one's capacity.

Rights of Parents

The persons mentioned above are a means in the earning of religious blessings and benefits. There are persons whose rights are established and admitted in the laws of the Shari'ah. As an example, it is the parents who are instrumental to the birth and upbringing of their children. Their rights are as follows:

1. Not to harm and offend them, even if they commit some excess and offence towards their children.
2. To respect and honour them by word and action.
3. To obey them in all matters that are lawful in the Shari'ah, and to help them with money even though they may be unbelievers.

Rights of Parents after their death

1. To pray regularly for their salvation and divine mercy from Allah and to send them benefits and rewards of optional prayers and monetary donations in charity.
2. To deal with their friends and acquaintances with monetary concessions, physical services and nice behaviour.
3. To visit their graves and offer "Fatiha" from time to time.

Rights of paternal and maternal Grandfathers and Grandmothers

According to the laws of the Shari'ah they occupy the same rank and status as the parents. As such they should be allowed the same rights, regard and respect as the parents. Therefore, the mother's and the father's sisters are like one's mother and the mother's brother (maternal uncle) and the father's brother (uncle) are like father. The husbands of mother's sister and the father's sister are also like father in the matter of rights. This has been indicated in a Tradition.

Rights of Sons and Daughters

The children have also their rights over their parents, just as their parents have rights over their children. Those rights are as follows:

1. Parents should marry them with righteous women, so as to have good issues from them.
2. To bring them up during their childhood with affection which has been considered as an act of great virtue. It has specially been emphasized that one should not feel disgusted with daughters. It is also an act of real virtue to take care of, and bring up, daughters. If it becomes necessary to engage a foster mother to give suck to a newly born baby, a foster mother of good character and right religious belief should be engaged, because the milk has an effect on the conduct and character of the suckling baby.

3. To give them religious education and discipline.
4. To marry them as soon as they reach marriageable age.
5. If the girl becomes a widow, then look after her well and bear all the expenses necessary to support her, till her second marriage.

The Rights of the Fostermothers

A fostermother is also just like the child's own mother, because she suckles, the baby; she also has prescribed rights and these are as follows:

1. To behave with her with due respect and regard.
2. If she stands in need of money and any other help, it should not be denied if the person concerned is able to render such help.
3. To purchase a slave or maid and place him/her at her disposal for service, if this is possible.
4. The fostermother's husband is her master and she is his maid. The husband should, therefore, be regarded as the master of the mistress, and treated, as such, with honour and goodwill.

Rights of a Stepmother

The stepmother is the father's wife and companion and the command is to do good to the father's friends and companions. She has, therefore, also some rights. The good deeds advised to be done for the sake of deceased parents are sufficient as described above. These should also be done for the stepmother after her death.

Rights of Sisters and Brothers

It has been mentioned in a Tradition that an elder brother is just like a father. As such, a younger brother is like a son. The reciprocal rights among them will be just like those existing between the parents and their children. The rights of an elder sister and younger sister may be determined on this analogy.

Rights of Kinsmen

The rest of the relatives have also been granted their rights. These are :

1. If one's close relatives are needy and unable to support themselves with the bare necessaries of life, nor are they able to earn anything for themselves, then they should be helped with food and other necessaries to enable them to keep body and soul together, as one does with one's own children, as a matter of an obligation. To help distant relations with necessaries of life is not so obligatory, yet it is necessary to do something for them also.
2. Visits should be paid to them from time to time.
3. The bonds of relationship with them should not be severed. If anyone of them ever does some harm, it is better to tolerate that.
4. If someone becomes a slave of his close relative he at once becomes a freeman as a result of his relationship with the master.

   (Note : this is not applicable in our times)

Rights of teachers and spiritual guiders (Pir)

As a teacher or a spiritual guide (Pir) imparts to his disciple education and spiritual guidance, he is just like a father. He and his children and relatives, therefore, deserve the same treatment as one's own father and children and relatives. This is also one of the meanings of the Quranic Verse.

(I do not ask of you any return except love among the relatives 42:23). This also implies the respect and regard which the Sadat (relatives and descendants of the Holy Prophet (P.B.U.H.) deserve).

The pupils of the teacher or the disciples of the spiritual guide (Pir) should be treated as brothers in the matter of rights. They are also included in the meaning of the Quranic words (the fellow-traveller).

Rights of Pupils and Disciples

Pupils and disciples are just like sons and daughters. Therefore, they have rights like sons and daughters in the matter of kindness and affection.

Rights of Husband and Wife

The wife has the following rights over her husband:

1. The husband should not hesitate in meeting the cost of her living as far as his means permit.
2. He should teach her religious problems and insist upon her to do good deeds.
3. He should allow her from time to time to see her close relatives and tolerate her shortcomings. If disciplinary action is ever needed he should be moderate in this.

The husband has the following rights over his wife:

1. The wife should leave no stone unturned in obeying, respecting, serving and pleasing her husband, except that she should politely apologise to him in matters that are unlawful in the Shari'ah.
2. She should not ask her husband more than what he can easily afford.
3. She should not spend his money without his permission.
4. She should not offend the husband by being harsh to his relatives. She should take particular care to respect and honour her-in-laws by regarding them as her masters.

Rights of Rulers and Subjects

In the rights of the Rulers are included the rights of the King, Deputy King and master etc. In the subjects are included the servants and the general public.

The rights of the subjects are as follows:

1. They should not be subjected to severe laws.

2. If two members or groups of the subjects differ from each other in some matter the rules should be neutral and just in settling their difference.
3. He should always think of providing protection, comfort and amenities of life. He should make it easy for complainants to get access to him to receive justice.
4. He should not be faultfinding but should try to forget and forgive if some indiscipline and disregard are committed towards him by someone unintentionally.

The rights of the Ruler over the subjects are as follows:

1. The subjects should obey the Ruler and be his well-wishers, except that there is no obedience to orders which are against the Shari'ah.
2. They should be tolerant, if the Ruler's behaviour is sometimes unpleasant. In such a situation they should not curse and agitate; they should rather pray for the leniency of the Ruler and take to righteousness and obedience that Allah may make the Ruler kind and sympathetic. This policy has been recommended in a Tradition.
3. If the subjects receive help and comfort from the Ruler, they should express gratitude. They should not rise against him out of selfishness. In places where slaves exist, it is compulsory to support them with necessaries of life and on the other hand it is forbidden for a slave to run away from his master.

As for the rest of the subjects, they are freemen and freewomen. They will have rights and liabilities while living within the jurisdiction of a government, but after going out of that jurisdiction they will become free and independent.

As for the rest of the subjects, they are freeman and freewomen. They will have rights and liabilities while living within the jurisdiction of a government, but after going out of that jurisdiction they will become free and independent.

Rights of In-Laws

Almighty Allah has mentioned in the Holy Qur'an the relatives in-laws also along with the ancestral relations. This clearly shows that the mother-in-law, the father-in-law, brother-in-law, sons-in-law and daughters-in-law and step children have also some rights. It is, therefore, necessary to show kindness, nice behaviour and sympathy with such relatives as well.

Rights of Muslims in General

In addition to near and dear ones and common Muslims have also some rights. Isbahani has mentioned these rights in his book Targhib wa Tarheeb from a narrative of Hazrat Ali (R.A.A.). These are as follows:

1. If a Muslim brother commits a fault, excuse him.
2. Show him mercy when he weeps.
3. Conceal his weaknesses and shortcomings.
4. Accept his apology.
5. Try to remove his difficulties.
6. Wish and work always for his well-being.
7. Protect and love him.
8. Give him concession, if he is indebted or burdened.
9. Pay him visits when he is sick.
10. When he dies take part in his funeral and burial.
11. When he invites you accept his invitation.
12. Accept his gift.
13. Repay his good turns with goodness.
14. Give him thanks when you receive some blessings from him.
15. Help him in times of need.
16. Help and protect his family and children.

17. Supply his needs.
18. Respond to his prayer.
19. Accept his recommendation.
20. Do not disappoint him, if he asks you for anything.
21. If after sneezing he says "Al-ham-du lil-laah" (praise be to Allah), respond to him by saying "yar-ha-mu-kal-laah" (may Allah have mercy on you).
22. If you come across his missing things, convey them to him.
23. Respond to his greeting.
24. Talk to him politely and amicably.
25. Always do good to him.
26. If he swears for anything, trusting upon you, fulfil his oath.
27. Help him, if someone does him wrong, so as to stop the wrongdoer from his wrongdoing.
28. Be friendly and do not be inimical to him.
29. Do not defame him.
30. Desire for him what you desire for yourself.

Some other traditions contain the following additional rights:

31. Salute him, and better, shake hands with him when you meet him.
32. If by chance a quarrel occurs between you and another Muslim reconcile the difference soon and do not stop conversation with him for more than three days.
33. Do not think ill of him.
34. Do not envy and hate him.
35. Enforce the rights and forbid the wrong to the best of your ability.
36. Be respectful to elders and kind to youngers.

37. If two Muslims fall out with each other, try to make peace between them.
38. Do not backbite another Muslim.
39. Do not cause him harm in any way, neither in wealth nor in honour.
40. Help him if he is unable to mount a conveyance or to load something on it.
41. Do not occupy his seat by depriving him of it.
42. Where there are three persons the two of them should not talk to each other by ignoring the third person. It should be remembered that the rights up to No. 30 are of a special nature, but the holders of those rights are also entitled to the rights mentioned at 31 to 42.

Rights of Neighbours

If the persons considered above, that is the common Muslims, acquire any other peculiarities, they become entitled to special rights. An example is the neighbour. He has the following rights:

1. Deal with him with goodness and leniency.
2. Protect the honour of his family.
3. From time to time send him and his family gifts. You must help him with some food, if they are reduced to starvation.
4. Do not cause him trouble and inconvenience, nor quarrel with him on small matters.
5. The laws of the Shari'ah allow him preference over others in matters of sale and purchase. The learned men of Islam have said that there are two kinds of neighbours: the one who is living in your vicinity and the other with whom you happen to travel from the very start or come across him by chance during the journey. In the Traditions the former has been called a permanent neighbour, and the other a temporary neighbour. They both are entitled to equal rights, which may be summarised as under: Prefer his comfort to your own instead of giving him trouble, as some passengers do during railway journeys. This is very bad, indeed.

Rights of the Weak and Orphans

There are some men who are entitled to additional rights. They are : Orphans, widows, disabled ones, weak, poor, sick, decrepit persons, travellers and beggars. They have the following additional rights:

1. To help them with money.
2. To work for them with your own hands, feet, etc.
3. To please and solace them. Never to reject their demands and requests.

Rights of Guests

Likewise the guests have the following rights:

1. To express feelings of joy and happiness on their arrival and on departure to see them off at least up to the door.
2. To arrange for their usual practices and requirements in order to provide them ease and comfort.
3. To behave with them with submission, respect and friendliness. To serve him personally.
4. At least for one day to entertain him with food of a moderately improved quality, such as may neither be obliging to the guest nor financially burdensome to the host, and host him at least for two days. This is the guest's right. As for stay for additional days, it is, however, not becoming for the guest to cause inconvenience to the host, neither by prolonging his stay nor by making undue demands, nor by interfering in the host's scheme of entertainment.

Rights of Friends

In the Qur'an there is a mention of friends along with those and distant relatives. They have the following rights:

1. It is necessary to make a close observation of the beliefs, deeds, behaviour and dealings, conduct and character of those with whom one intends to make friends. If they are found right minded and righteous, they may be befriended, otherwise avoided. Great emphasis has been laid on shunning bad society. Experience and observation also expose the harm of bad society. If one comes across a person of like habits, belief and character, there is no objection to befriending him, as it is recognised universally that a friend is the greatest source of comfort and solace.

2. Never hesitate in sacrificing for him even your life and wealth.
3. If something unpleasant comes from him connive at it. If some quarrel occurs by change settle it at once instead of prolonging it, because even temporary differences among friends have some pleasant aspects.
4. Do not be neglectful in wishing your friends well or in giving them good advice. Give ear to his advice with sincerity and accept it if it is practicable. There is a custom in the Indian sub-continent of adopting someone as a son and conferring on him all the rights of a real son. In the Islamic Shari'ah an adopted son has no such rights, he has simply the rights of a friend. Such a one has no share in the heritage which is subject to definite laws and is not a matter of someone's personal choice.

It is inferred from this that the practice followed in India of debarring a son from inheritance is invalid in the Shari'ah and has, therefore, no legal force.

Rights of Non-Muslims

Many rights arise out of relationship among persons on sharing the same religion of Islam. In the same way some rights arise out of being members of the species, viz., humanity. In other words a Muslim has to admit and recognise the rights of his fellow man although he may not be a Muslim. Such rights are:

1. No harm should be done to the life or property of any human being without a cause or justification.

2. Bad language should not be used in conversation with anyone without a sufficient cause which is permissible in the Shari'ah.
3. To help a non-Muslim with food, drink and medical treatment, if he is in distress, hungry or suffering from some disease.
4. If he deserves some punishment under the law of the Shari'ah no excess should be committed in that punishment nor should he be tortured.

Rights of Animals

1. Men as well as animals are living beings. As such, animals too have some rights. An animal should not be captured and confined without sufficient cause. It is cruelty to remove young ones of birds or animals from their nests or dens and torture their parents in this way.
2. Animals are useful creatures for humanity. They should not be killed simply for the sake of fun. Hunters are generally involved in this sin.
3. To take good care of such animals as are in our service by giving them food and drink and providing them rest and shelter. They should not be beaten too much. If it is necessary to slaughter animals, they should be slaughtered with sharp knives or otherwise killed quickly without causing them to writhe or flounce. An animal should not be killed while hungry or thirsty.

Self-imposed Obligations

The foregoing obligations are those the discharge of which initially devolves on man. In addition to these there are some obligations which man himself has imposed upon himself.

Some of these rights are due to Allah which are of three kinds.

First Kind

A right that arises out of some sort of worship to Allah is called Nazar (a votive offering). If a man pledges to perform some prescribed worship it is called Nazar. It is an obligation to offer that worship. On the other hand, if it is an un-prescribed worship, its offering is only a desirable act. If the worship falls in the category of permissible acts it is meaningless and ignorable. If the pledged offer is a sin, its fulfillment is unlawful. To make pledges of offer in a name other than Allah's name amounts to Shirk (idolatry).

Second Kind

It is a right that arises out of some permissible act. For example the expiation of a permissible oath and fasting as compensation for the fasts missed by a traveller or a sick person during Ramazan; it is compulsory to discharge these rights.

Third Kind

These are rights which arise from the commission of some sins, as the legal punishments and expiations which become due as obligatory rights on account of breaking fasts without any legal cause or murder by mistake or Zihar (calling one's wife as mother). It is obligatory to discharge these rights also. These are rights which arise from optional causes. Of these some rights are due to the servants of Allah. They also fall into three kinds.

First Kind

To keep a promise in a form of obedience. It is imperative. To be negligent in keeping promise has been described as a mark of hypocrisy.

Second Kind

The right that arises out of a permissible affair as the liability of a debt. There are liabilities which are just like debt, e.g., to accept a sale; submission (to her husband) by a married wife of her self; to hand over the property concerned to the pre-empter; to pay the price of purchase; to pay the dower; to pay the wages of a labourer; to repay a debt and return a trust. These are all obligatory duties.

Third Kind

That right which arises out of some sin/crime, e.g., to commit murder; to steal or betray a trust; to defame anyone by foul talk or backbiting. To compensate for these crimes or get them forgiven is an obligatory liability, failing which in the Hereafter one will have to surrender the rewards of one's worship and good deeds or undergo severe punishment.

Conclusion

All rights/liabilities must be discharged. As regards the rights of Allah if they are in the form of some worship they should be observed. For example, if prayers, fasts, Zakaat (obligatory tax) and the like are outstanding against someone, he should discharge these liabilities after reckoning them. In case he is unable to do so for want of time or money, he should have in his heart the intention to discharge his liabilities without demur as and when this becomes possible for him. If he has committed sins, he should make a solemn pledge to give them up for ever. God willing, the liabilities will be written off and forgiven.

As regards the rights of the servants of Allah; due by anyone, the liable persons should repay those which are repayable to get them forgiven, just as a debt or betrayal of trust. He should also try to get sins like backbiting, abusing, etc., forgiven. If for some reason he is unable to obtain forgiveness for his sins from the right-holders, he should always pray to Allah for their forgiveness in the Hereafter. It is quite possible that on the Day of Judgement Allah may, by His mercy, make them pleased to forgo their rights in favour of the sinners. In case the defaulter is able to repay the debt or obtain forgiveness for his excesses, he should not fail to achieve this.

As regards his own debts or rights outstanding against others, he should try to realise his rights with leniency from such as can discharge their liabilities. As for sins committed against him like backbiting, abusing etc., the compensation for which cannot be realised in this world, compensation in the form of good rewards are expected in the Hereafter. Yet it has been declared as a matter of greater virtue to grant pardon. Thus it is much better to grant total pardon, specially when a debtor or a wrongdoer asks for remission and forgiveness.

Removal of exaggerated emphasis on the rights of Parents

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful
Praise be to Allah and blessings on His Prophet

The compiler of this pamphlet has observed since long that many Muslim brethren exaggerate in discharging the rights of Parents to such an extent that this leads to violations of the rights of other claimants. In this way they also disobey Almighty Allah, and they insist that what they are doing is according to the rules of the Shari'ah. They try to justify their stand by quoting irrelevant Quranic verses and traditions. As this is all very painful I decided to compile with the help of Allah a pamphlet to bring out the truth about the rights of Parents vis-a-vis the rights of others, so that the rights of one group may not be ignored by giving undue importance to the rights of another group.

It may be noted that Almighty Allah has created us for his own worship and obedience which is the main aim of our lives and the duties which Allah has imposed on us of serving and obeying others of His creatures are subordinate to the Main Aim. The Main Aim, viz., Allah's obedience and worship have, therefore, preference over all other forms of service and devotion. With the help of Quranic verses and Traditions I am going to clarify in this pamphlet what is the Main Aim and what are subordinate matters.

The intention of this pamphlet is to put all high and low on the right path and to remove from their minds the confusion about the due rights and liabilities of all persons as determined in the law of the Shair'ah.

وَاللهُ يَقُولُ الْحَقَّ وَهُوَ يَهْدِي السَّبِيلَ اللّٰهُمَّ تَقَبَّلْ مِنَّا إِنَّكَ أَنْتَ السَّمِيعُ الْعَلِيمُ

Introduction to the objectives of this Book

وَقَضَى رَبُّكَ أَلَّا تَعْبُدُوا إِلَّا إِيَّاهُ وَبِالْوَالِدَيْنِ إِحْسَانًا ط إِمَّا يَبْلُغَنَّ عِنْدَكَ الْكِبَرَ أَحَدُهُمَا أَوْ كِلَاهُمَا فَلَا تَقُلْ لَهُمَا أُفٍّ وَلَا تَنْهَرْهُمَا وَقُلْ لَهُمَا قَوْلًا كَرِيمًا ۞ وَاخْفِضْ لَهُمَا جَنَاحَ الذُّلِّ مِنَ الرَّحْمَةِ وَقُلْ رَبِّ ارْحَمْهُمَا كَمَا رَبَّيَانِي صَغِيرًا ۞ رَبُّكُمْ أَعْلَمُ بِمَا فِي نُفُوسِكُمْ إِنْ تَكُونُوا صَالِحِينَ فَإِنَّهُ كَانَ لِلْأَوَّابِينَ غَفُورًا ۞ وَآتِ ذَا الْقُرْبَى حَقَّهُ وَالْمِسْكِينَ وَابْنَ السَّبِيلِ وَلَا تُبَذِّرْ تَبْذِيرًا ۞

Translation: Your Lord has decreed that you should worship none except Him, and that you should show kindness to parents. If one of them or both of them attain old age with you, do not say: "Fie" to them nor repulse them, but speak to them gracious word. And lower to them the wing of submission through mercy, and say My Lord! Have mercy on them both as they did care for me when I was a little child. Your Lord is best Aware of what is in your minds. If you are righteous, then surely He is ever Forgiving to those who turn to Him (in repentance). Give the kinsmen, the needy and the wayfarer their dues and do not squander (your wealth) in recklessness. (17:23-26)

Old age calls for showing more regard and respect to parents, and at this stage they require more service. Such regard and respect are due to Parents in all stages but special emphasis has been laid on these services and kind behaviour in the old age, as the Parents are liable to become irritated and their children are negligent sometimes.

The Quranic verse No. 15 of Surah Luqman وصاحبهما في الدنيا معروفًا (And associate with them in the world with kindness), firmly confirms this injunction, as giving trouble to parents goes against this divine injunction. One should note carefully that the word the uttering of which to parents in their old age has been forbidden is a cause of distress to them, so neither say "Aye" to them nor scold them, but say a word of respect to them and treat them with all possible submission and humiliation, as they took pains in bringing you up and taking care of you in your infancy. If sometime by chance you displease them, then at once seek their pardon, and when they are no more in this world seek forgiveness for them from Allah as often as possible. Pay to the relatives, the needy and the wayfarers their dues and do not squander your money, but be moderate in all things. Allah has also commanded side by side to discharge the rights of other claimants, instead of according preference to one group over another. It is, however, implied in the divine injunction that the rights of the parents have priority over those of others.

Note : This verse proves that it is unlawful to utter the contemptuous word "Fie" to parents, because the utterance of this and other like words hurt them, as they are insulting and derogatory. Thus the overall rule is that every word or act which really[1] hurts parents stands prohibited by the Shari'ah. Children should keep in mind the implications of this injunction always and in every place. There is no verse in the Holy Qur'an which lays emphasis on the rights of parents as emphatically as this verse.

If the word, i.e., "Fie" or some other word like this is used among a people as a word of respect, then it will be lawful to use it for parents. Fuqaha (Jurists) have clarified this point. Some further observations on this point are furnished in the following pages, supported with Traditions.

1. Some Tabi'een are reported as saying: He who prays for his parents five times daily has paid their dues, because Allah has said: Give thanks to Me and to your parents. To Me is the ultimate resort. 31:14. Accordingly, giving thanks to Allah consists in praying to Him five times daily and similarly so is praying for the parents five times daily, thus said Faqih Abullais (R.A.). The Holy Prophet (PBUH) said; If there had been in the knowledge of Allah a lesser degree of disobedience than the word "Fie", He would have forbidden that too. So the disobedient son may do whatever he likes, he shall never enter Paradise.

   On the other hand, the obedient son may do whatever he likes, he will never enter the Fire (of Hell). The said Faqih narrated this. I said: He should give something in charity on behalf of his parents at the time of paying Zakat, etc. The Holy Prophet (PBUH) said: If a son finds that his father is a slave, he should purchase him, then set him at liberty. (Narrated on the basis of correct authority).

Matters in which it is not necessary to obey Parents

1. It is right to undertake a journey (whether it is due to trade or Hajj) without the permission of parents, provided the journey is not obligatory, nor does it involve probable hazards of life. If the parents forbid such journey, it is not necessary to give up this journey because the parents order that it be given up. This problem is available in Durr-e-Mukhtar and Alamgiri. This ruling will be applicable with greater force to a journey which is obligatory, as is quite obvious. This is subject to the condition that either the parents are not in need of any service or if they need it they have someone who can provide them this service. It is obvious that in such cases the parents do not have to suffer from any real or significant inconvenience and difficulty. In such a situation it is neither unlawful nor disgustful to disobey the parents.
2. If parents do not require money to meet their needs recognised in the Shari'ah, such as food, clothes, repayment of debt, etc., and ask their sons to meet such needs it is not necessary for the latter to meet such demands even if they have surplus resources.
3. It is not necessary for sons to obey their parents if the parents stop their sons from offering optional prayers or from other unimportant work without needing any service. However, if the parents need some urgent service and the engagement of their children in optional prayers causes inconvenience to them, while there is no one else to serve them, then it is imperative for the sons to give up the optional prayers and serve their parents.
4. Smoking the pipe is near forbidden. The compiler of the "Majalisul Abrar" has proved the vice of smoking by means of a detailed study and research on this issue. It is, therefore, not binding on the sons to obey their parents in the preparation of the smoking pipe, as it will be committing a disgustful act which is disapproved in the Shari'ah.

On the other hand if the pipe is of a special kind which is harmless and does not cause any foul smell in the mouth or smoking is indicated as the only possible treatment, then it is allowed. If the parents smoke pipe under compulsion and as a medical treatment and ask their children to prepare the pipe for them, it is binding on the children to carry out their order.

5. If anyone's wife is not a real source of trouble to the parents, yet they ask their son to divorce his wife, the husband son is not bound to obey this order. It is rather a kind of oppression against the wife to divorce her. Divorce is a contemptible act in the sight of Allah and is permissible only under very pressing and unavoidable circumstances. To resort to divorce without justification is an oppression and it is near-forbidden. Marriage is intended for uniting. How can separation without justification be allowed? Ibnul Humam (R.A.) has made a detailed investigation about it in Fat-hal-Qadeer.

6. It is forbidden to obey the parents and it is an obligatory duty to oppose them, if they order their sons to commit some sin, e.g., if they order not to support the truth, not to pay Zakat or not to impart religious education or the like. This is subject to the condition that the acts which they forbid are necessary. However, they may be really hardpressed by sickness and they have no servants to help them, and the prayer time has approached, but if they are left unattended, they may have to suffer great hardship. If the parents ask their sons to miss the prayer in such odd hours, the prayer may be missed and compensatory prayer may be offered later on. If they stop their sons from some act which is desirable for the sake of genuine and reliable need of their own, the it is compulsory to obey their order, but if they interfere unnecessarily their obedience is not binding.

7. If the parents ask one of their sons to give some money to another son who is not at all needy, it is not at all compulsory for the former to give the required amount of money to the latter despite ability to do so.

It has been discussed so far with the help of precedents and examples on what occasions it is compulsory or forbidden or permissible to comply with the orders of parents. The intention is to clarify that obedience to parents is not binding on each and every occasion.

The correct meaning of doing good to Parents

It occurs in a Tradition that to do good to parents is better than Prayer, Fasting, Hajj, Umrah and Jihad in the path of Allah. This Tradition is not authentic and is, therefore, not reliable. It does not deserve to be called a Tradition, Imam Shaukani (R.A.) has briefly narrated it in the Fawaid-e-Majmoo'ah. This is also not in conformity with the Rules of the Shari'ah.

It is mentioned in Chapter Al-birr Was-silah of the Mishkat on the basis of a narrative of Tirmizi that the pleasure of Allah lies in the pleasure of the parents. This means that Allah's pleasure or displeasure depends upon the pleasure or displeasure of the parents.

Note: This may lead one to misconstrue that every good deed depends on the pleasure of parents; without it is a sin. This, however, is not the injunction. The Tradition means that Allah's displeasure is incurred only in such cases of negligence in which obedience to parents has been imposed by the Shari'ah as binding and a son will be considered disobedient only when he fails in discharging important duties. Thus this injunction (reg: the pleasure or displeasure of Allah) is not absolute, but it is implied in the overall Rule formulated in the beginning to the effect that it is compulsory to shun an act which is troublesome to the parents. The cause and occasion leading to this Tradition and the peculiarity of its statement imply the rights of parents and the objective mentioned above. This has been mentioned in the book "Ashi'atul-lama'aa". The intention is to tell that if injunction was given to a son to obey his parents and to a wife to obey her husband in every matter, many people would be deprived of the virtue of worshipping Allah which is the main aim of man's creation and also of the remembrance of their real Beloved and the true taste of His remembrance and the high accomplishments resulting from it.

These are blessings without which a seeker of Almighty Allah cannot find solace: This alone is the desired object as has already been stated in the introduction.

The Real Object of Man's Creation

وَمَا خَلَقْتُ الْجِنَّ وَالْإِنسَ إِلَّا لِيَعْبُدُونِ

The Qur'an says : I did not create the jinn and mankind but to worship Me. 51:56

And there is a Divine Tradition which expresses the same idea. Although it is weak in authority, yet it is authentic in the sight of those who can see hidden things through their spiritual eyes, and it is also not prejudicial to our objective. The Tradition is:

كُنت كنزاً مخفيًا فأحببتُ ان أُعرفْ فَخَلَقْتُ الخلقَ

I was a concealed treasure, but wanted that I should become known, so I created the Creation.

Thus it becomes well-known that the objective of Creation is Allah's worship and acquaintance with the True Beloved. This objective will, therefore, be accorded preference everywhere, and over every other objective.

To Divorce or not to Divorce a Wife on Parent's Bidding?

4. It is mentioned at the said place in the Mishkat on the authority of a narrative of Hazrat Abu Darda that a man called upon him and said: I have a wife and my mother orders me to divorce her. Should or should I not divorce her? Hazrat Darda replied: I have heard the Holy Prophet (PBUH) saying: The father (also the mother) is a better entrance to Paradise, i.e., a cause to get admission into Paradise. In other words, a better entrance to Paradise is the Father's (Mother's) pleasure. So it is up to you to protect that entrance or destroy it. Tirmizi and Ibn-Majah have narrated this Tradition. It appears that the man's mother had a (genuine) grievance against that woman (her daughter-in-law) and desired her to be divorced, or otherwise divorce without justification is oppression and, in turn, to assist oppression is also oppression. So how could Hazrat Abu Darda permit divorce which was oppression in the said situation? This answer also applies to the Tradition about Hazrat Umar (R.A.)[2] who wanted his son to divorce his wife but the son did not like to do so. Hazrat Umar (R.A.) then brought the matter to the notice of the Holy Prophet (PBUH) for a ruling. The Holy Prophet (PBUH) advised divorce.

Now it is quite obvious that a companion of Hazrat Umar's status and honour could not do wrong to anyone. If he supposedly did how could the Holy Prophet (PBUH) tolerate this and assist a wrong? Hazrat Imam Ghazzali (R.A.) has explained the meaning of this Tradition in his book Ihyaul Uloom in a like manner.

The Glad Tidings of paradise as a Reward for discharging Parents' Rights

5. Baihaqi has recorded in the said chapter of the Mishkat, a narrative of Hazrat Ibn Abbas (R.A.) to the effect that the Holy Prophet (PBUH) said: If a man who gets up in the morning as one who is obedient to Almighty Allah in discharging the (imperative) rights of one's parents, he gets up in the morning with two doors to Paradise opened for him. If only one of his parents is alive and he behaves with the parent in the said manner, one door to Paradise is opened for him. On the other hand, if a man who disobeys Almighty Allah in discharging the (imperative) rights of the parents then two doors to Hell are opened for him and if only one of the parents is alive the only one door to Hell is opened for him. A man asked: Even when the parents do wrong to their sons (i.e., should the sons obey their parents even when the parents commit all sorts of excesses to their sons?)? The Holy Prophet (PBUH) said three times: if both the parents do him wrong, even then he is bound to obey them. Let it be noted carefully that it is meant to emphasize that the sons should not be negligent in discharging such rights of the parents as are binding upon them, because of their excesses, i.e., the sons should never repay the misbehaviour of their parents with similar misbehaviour.

2. Tirmizi and Abu Dawood have narrated this Hadith

Nobody's order to disobey Allah should be carried out

It is not the intention to say that parents should be obeyed even if they order to do something which is a transgression in the Shari'ah, because according to a Tradition, "There is no obedience to a created being in a matter which involves disobedience to the Creator". This Tradition carries in its import a peremptory command that in no circumstances a command given by a created being which means disobedience to Allah should be carried out. This needs to be understood well.

When is it compulsory to bear the cost of living of the Parents?

6. A man is liable to bear the cost of living of his relatives, other than his wife, only when he possesses such amount of money as makes him liable to pay the Sadqah Fitr. This ruling equally applies to the parents also. As regards the wife, her cost of living is obligatory for the husband in all circumstances, whether he is rich or poor (see Margin Sharh Wiqayah). This shows that unless a man has the amount of money mentioned above, it will not be obligatory for him to meet the parents' (necessary) cost of living. This exposition does not mean that a man should be unsympathetic with his parents, negligent in discharging their rights and ungrateful to them, as this would be something very bad. The intention by this entire discourse is to eliminate all exaggerations in this matter, by stating those rights of parents which are obligatory as well as those that are unimportant, desirable and permissible. The parents are masters and sustainers (after Allah) of their children and deserve to be treated with great respect and obedience. The rights of the parents are too well known to be mentioned. The real objective of this book is to eliminate exaggeration about the rights of parents and in the said situation they are highly desirable. It is therefore, desirable that unless there is some special handicap, a son should help his parents even when he has not the requisite amount of money (nisab), even if this entails him hardship and inconveniences.

It is not obligatory to eat money of doubtful purity on the order of parents

7. It does not become binding on the children to eat money of doubtful purity in compliance with the order of the parents. This is because by this action the parents face no recognised and genuine distress. It is, however, permissible for the children to obey their parents by eating such money to the minimum extent of their need, if the children are facing starvation, they have no access to pure money and their parents insist on them to eat money of doubtful purity. If the person advised to eat such money is a saintly person of pure and pious heart, he should not resort to the use of such impure money, because such money harms his apparent and secret spiritual and moral integrity. The damage done to spiritual and moral character by the use of money of doubtful purity is realised and proved by actual experience. To obey the parents in this matter is to court one's own moral destruction and it involves disobedience to Allah which is strictly forbidden. It is not right to incur the Creator's displeasure by obeying the commands of creatures. It is a matter of great reward in the Hereafter if in such an awkward situation a man prefers death to using impure money.

In Jihad it is lawful for a son to kill his disbelieving father

8. It is recorded in the "Lubal-bun-Nuqool" that in the battle of Badr Hazrat Ubaidah-bin-Jarrah[3] (R.A.A.) was on the side of Allah's group of the Muslim Army, while on the side of the Satan's group of the Infidel army was his father who was a Mushrik and was trying to kill his son. Hazrat Ubaidah (R.A.A.) saw that his disbelieving father was trying to kill him because of his Islam. While trying to save himself Hazrat Ubaidah was able to kill his father. On this occasion the following verses were revealed.

3. He is a very righteous companion.

Hazrat Abu Bakr (R.A.A.)'s father Abu Qahafah[4], while he was an unbeliever, uttered some undesirable words for the Holy Prophet (PBUH). Hazrat Abu Bakr (R.A.) at once slapped him and he fell down. Then the victim lodged a complaint about this incident to the Holy Prophet (PBUH). On being questioned, Hazrat Abu Bakr (R.A.A.) told the Holy Prophet (PBUH), that if he had a sword he would have cut off his neck for uttering such insulting words. Then these verses were revealed. These two incidents are the cause of revelation of these verses, which occur in Surah Mujadalah (58:22). Their translation runs thus:

> You will not find people who believe in Allah and the Last Day, loving those who oppose Allah and His Messenger, even though they be their fathers or their sons or their brethren or their clan. As for such, He has written faith upon their hearts and has strengthened them with a spirit from Him; and He will bring them into Gardens underneath which rivers flow, wherein they will abide for ever. Allah is well-pleased with them and they are well-pleased with him. They are Allah's party. Beware! Is it not Allah's party who are the successful?

These verses make it quite clear that the rights of parents are nothing as compared with the rights of Almighty Allah. It is now established that it is quite right to kill one's own father with one's own hands in Jihad (Holy War).

There is a ruling in the Hidayah that one should not himself kill one's father but beckon to someone else to do so. This latter ruling is desirable in order to observe the father's right of respect, and at the same time to attain the objective. This is possible only when another person is available on the occasion to do the job. The fate of disbelief and perversion is disgrace. As such, the regard and respect due to a disbelieving father cannot be fully protected.

4. He embraced Islam later on.

Admonish perverted parents with a good grace

If the parents are perverted, they should be admonished in a very nice manner. It is not a sin but a good deed[5] if, when necessary, they are scolded. It is not lawful to concede to anyone in a religious matter, except that, as far as the Shari'ah allows. One should be civil[6], and polite and should not be rude and should be calm and considerate in one's behaviour.

As regards Hazrat Ibrahim (A.S.), he did not offend his father in spite of the latter's disbelief and disobedience, because he hoped that the father would accept the admonition given with goodwill and politeness. It was due to this affection that he made a promise to ask forgiveness for him. However, when Hazrat Ibrahim (PBUH) lost hope and came to know that his father was Allah's enemy and seeking forgiveness for him would not be useful for him, he became disgusted with his father.

9. It is mentioned in the book Ihyaul Uloom that Allah sent a revelation to Hazrat Moosa (A.S.) that he who is disobedient to Allah but obedient to his parents, is recorded in the Sheet of Deeds as righteous because of his obedience to the parents, but the one who does otherwise is recorded as a sinner. If the authencity of the narrative is correctly established one may misconstrue from it that the status of obedience to Allah and His rights is always inferior to that of the parents. This, however, is not the truth. The meaning of the Tradition is that a person who obeys his parents in matters in which their obedience is lawful, whether the obedience is obligatory or only desirable, then on account of the blessings of this obedience, the person concerned is excused from the liability towards Allah's rights. On the other hand, if a person fails to discharge the necessary rights of the parents, then this failure in disobeying obligations relating to the rights of Allah;

5. What Az-Zamakh Shary has narrated from Huzaifah (RAA) proves this. He sought the permission of the Holy Prophet (PBUH) to kill his father who was fighting on the side of the Mushrikeen. He (PBUH) said: Let this be done by someone other than you.....

6. The Quran clearly forbids to repulse parents. If the parents insist on some sin, their children should pray for their guidance and avoid hurting their hearts - Khulasatul-Fatawa.

so the person is recorded as disobedient. This is because if a person does not discharge his liabilities towards the servants of Allah in spite of his capacity to do so or does not obtain remission from them his liability is not written off, because Allah is want-Free but His servant is needy. It is not the meaning that a person will be recorded as disobedient by disobeying unimportant orders of his parents, notwithstanding that he is discharging the rights of Allah. This fine difference needs to be noted carefully.

It is an obligatory duty of Parents to provide good education to their children

10. A man complained to Hazrat Umar (R.A.) against his son because he used to cause him trouble and distress. Hazrat Umar (R.A.) inquired from his son the cause, admonishing him to fear Allah in the matter of the father's rights. The son replied that according to injunctions of a Tradition he had three rights: (1) Naming him a good name, (2) giving him good education and (3) marrying him in a good family (according to the rules of the Shari'ah), so that the people might not taunt him for having a bad and lowly wife. His father did not discharge any of the son's rights. (How can an uneducated person find out the rights and liabilities to be able to discharge them?) Hazrat Farooq, the Great (R.A.) did not demand anything from the son and said to the father; you say that your son causes distress you, but you have done the same to your son before hand. Get away from here. Imam Faqih Abullais has narrated this Tradition which has been mentioned here only in brief. The Islamic Shari'ah has considered and distributed everybody's rights and liabilities and according to this distribution are the actions and duties demanded of each person.

Imam Allamah Suyuti (R.A.) has written in the Tazkirah that Hazrat Sa'eed-bin-musayyib is a great Tabi-ee. He surpassed all the Tabi-een in learning and was a miracle-working saint, but he had broken away from his father and totally relinquished him (for some religious cause). This break-up continued till one of them died. Praise be to Allah that men of Allah show no concession to anyone where Allah's disobedience is involved. In no circumstances do they tolerate disobedience to Allah, irrespective that anyone likes this or not.

11. Remembrance[7] of Allah is better than rendering financial help to the parents or others, or rendering other unimportant services. Educational service is still much better. This is proved by a Tradition.

Praise be to Allah that so far it has become amply proved that it is not lawful to obey parents' orders in violation of the injunction of the Shari'ah. Those occasions have also become known on which obedience to parents is an obligatory or desirable duty. To conclude, it is not binding to carry out each and every order of the parents. According to authentic Traditions "Keep men in their right places". Do not go beyond the limits in praising or degrading anyone. The best of humanity, the master of the Prophets (PBUH) has himself forbidden people to attribute to him undue praise, although his status is much higher than that of parents and others.

وآله اجمعين وسلّم

(And our last call is that all praise be to the Lord of the Worlds and blessings and peace be upon the Master of tne Messengers, his household, all of them).

A useful Appendix

The Rights of Teachers, Spiritual Guides (Pirs) and Husband and Wife.

1. Teachers and Spiritual Guides have numerous rights, yet in lesser degrees than those of the parents. Those people are mistaken who have given preference to the rights of Teachers and Spiritual Guiders over those of the parents. Perhaps they argue that the parents bring up their children in their outwardly and physical development and the Teachers and the Spiritual Guides give them inner and spiritual education. The superiority of the soul over the body is quite obvious, but this argument is weak and unreliable, because the superiority of one to the other is only partial, not total. The superiority of some thing to another thing from one aspect may negate the superiority of the latter to the former from some other aspect. The Qur'an and the Hadith also do not attach any special importance to the rights of Teachers and Spiritual Guides as they do with regard to the rights of the parents. The rights of Teachers and Spiritual Guides arise from their service in education and spiritual training only. As against this, the parents bring up and breed their children with great painstaking and selfless love. They do not withhold their natural love, attention and care for their children in spite of their impudence and rebellion. They sacrifice their heart and soul for their children. On the contrary, the Teachers and the Spiritual Guides do not tolerate the least offence and disrespect. Reward is in proportion to work. As the work of the parents is harder and more difficult, their status is also greater and higher. In very exceptional cases some parents are found less loving and sympathetic with their children than the Teachers and the Spiritual Guides. But this happens very rarely and is ignorable. It cannot form a basis for the general rule. Mind carefully that the basis is that which has been stated above. Discharge the rights of Teachers and Spiritual Guides heart and soul as you receive from them attributes of humanity and Allah's pleasure, yet mind the prescribed limits. This brief essay is sufficient for the occasion.

7. For details see Sharh Mishkat by Ash-shaikh of Delhi.

Some say that it is binding to divorce a wife at the order of a Teacher. This is a sheer lie. And as has already been explained even the parents do not deserve such rights on all occasions. They, however, deserve only regard and respect and service when needed as is done to other elders. It is not necessary to obey them like parents, but mind carefully that they may be next to parents in deserving obedience. One should not be negligent in showing respect to a Teacher and in discharging in his rights even if the latter is a disbeliever and sinful. Such a teacher should, however, be condemned inwardly.

Husband's rights over wife

2. The wife is duty-bound to serve her husband and fulfil his wishes. She cannot do some permissible act which hinders in the service of the husband. There is none in the world who holds a right over anyone greater than the right which a husband holds over his wife. There is a Tradition in the Mishkat in which the Holy Prophet (PBUH) is reported to have said: if I were to allow anyone to prostrate himself before anyone other than Allah, I would ask a wife to prostrate herself before her husband. This proves beyond doubt the high status of a husband that if worship of anyone other than Allah was permitted, none other than a husband would deserve such worship from his wife. It is, however, not essential for the wife to obey without hesitation and negligence in all matters (which do not violate the Shari'ah) which would, in the case of disobedience, put the husband to trouble or deprive him of some service. This topic has been dealt with in some detail concerning the rights of the parents. The same injunctions apply here also but with greater emphasis. I state below some problems by way of example and clarification.

According to the Rules of the Shari'ah the possessions of a husband and his wife are quite separate

1. The possessions of husband and wife are considered in the Rules of the Shari'ah quite separate from each other's. The property the right of whose purchase, sale and disposal vests in the wife is her exclusive property. Similarly, the property in respect of which the husband enjoys such rights is his exclusive property. If by mixing together or misappropriation the value of the property goes down below the level of Nisab (limit prescribed for Zakat), the Zakat and the like will not get absolved. If the husband asks his wife not to pay Zakat on the plea that their properties are not separate but are one and the same the wife should not obey her husband in this matter, because this involves disobedience to Allah. Obedience to a man at the cost of obedience to Allah is strictly forbidden, but people generally ignore this point.

What is Obligatory, Essential and Sunnah cannot be abandoned at the husband's Bidding

2. The wife is not bound to obey her husband, if he stops her without any Shara'ee cause from spending the money in her exclusive possession for some lawful purpose. It is. however, not good to resort to quarrel with each other; they should live together in complete harmony and cooperation as far as possible on such occasions. To avoid trouble and disruption a wife may obey her husband in lawful and permissibly disgustful matters, except that she cannot give up, at her husband's bidding, all that is obligatory, essential and Sunnah.

3. It is lawful for a wife to swear allegiance to a Spiritual Guide (Pir) with her husband's permission, subject to the condition that this allegiance does not lead to some quarrel and breach of harmony. For example, if the husband stops her from this, but she want to swear allegiance, then she should do this; placing reliance on Allah, if she has courage enough for that. If this brings upon some sorrow and distress, she should bear this with patience without expressing ingratitude. The servants of Allah have to face such tortures. Such men will be raised to great ranks in the Hereafter. The same injunction applies to such acts as are near forbidden but the husband orders his wife to do them.

Orders about optional worship in the presence of the husband

4. If the husband is at present at home the wife should not engage herself in optional prayers, fasting, etc. without his permission, lest there should be some shortcoming in his service. She can do so with his permission. The Tradition prohibits this while the husband is at home; no permission is necessary if the husband is away. The same Tradition lays down that it is not lawful to do such acts without the husband's permission, as are liable to hinder the discharge of the husband's rights; it is, however, all right to do all other acts according to the rules of the Shari'ah.

5. If the husband desires his wife without any duress to do some work for some of his relatives or some stranger such as baking bread, sewing clothes or the like, the wife is not bound to do this. If the husband gives such order under some duress and he will be in some trouble if his order is not obeyed then the wife should do the work (Faidah Jalilah). If a wife does sewing work for some stranger (without any emergency), there is no sin in this; provided that the man is religious and there is no fear that an untoward situation will arise. If that man is irreligious and there is a fear of some ugly situation to arise on this account, it is not right to do sewing work. Some bad characters take delight from such work.

This brief account has been written to save wives from falling into exaggeration, so that they may be advised about the occasion on which it is necessary to obey husbands and husband as far as possible according to the rules of the Shari'ah is a great boon. A woman obedient to her husband shall obtain a high rank in Paradise. She should also take care of the optional prayers and virtues, because the main objects of man's creation is to worship Allah. A detailed description has already been given about the circumstances in which Allah's remembrance is better than unimportant obedience to the parents. The same injunctions apply here also:

One should not attach his Heart to the temptations of this world.

It is a place to learn lessons,

It is not a pageant.

Praise be to Allah that this Useful Appendix is now complete. May Almighty Allah accept it and render it useful, in honour of the merciful Messenger; blessings and peace be on him.

The Five Branches

Of the five constitutional branches of Islam Muslims in general nowadays regard only two branches as being integral parts of the Deen. These are Aqaa-id (beliefs) and Ibaadaat (worship). The Ulama-e-Zaahir (those Ulama concerned only with the external dimension of Islam - with only the letter of the law) consider the third branch, viz., Muamalaat (mutual dealings and transactions) also an integral part of the Deen. The Mashaaikh (of Tasawwuf) consider the fourth branch, viz. Akhlaaq (Moral character) also part of the Deen. However, the fifth branch, viz., Aadaabul Muasharat (Social Etiquette) has been excluded from the Deen by all three groups excepting a few among them. In fact, it is believed that this branch is totally unrelated to the Deen. This is the view of the majority. It is precisely for this reason that the other branches of the Deen are more or less all dealt with and discussed in lectures and discourses. On the contrary, no mention whatever is made of this fifth branch (Muasharat). Hence, this branch has been assigned to the limbo of oblivion both theoretically and practically.

The main cause for the dissipation of mutual love and affection is corrupt behavioural attitudes. As a result of such corruption of behaviour and manners mutual resentment and dislike for one another have set in among people. This state of affairs impedes and eliminates tranquillity of heart which is of pivotal importance for mutual love in the members of society.

The Qur'aan, Ahadith and the statements of the Wise men refute the claim that this branch (Social Etiquette) has no relationship with the Deen. Some of these statements shall be cited here in substantiation.

*Allah Ta'ala says:

> "O People of Imaan! When it is said to you to give space in a gathering, then make space. When it is said to you: Stand up!, then stand up."
> (Qur'aan)
> "O People of Imaan! Do not enter homes besides your own homes as long as you have not sought permission and greeted the inmates of the houses. That is best for you so that you ponder.

Then, if you do not find any one therein (in the homes), do not enter therein unless permission is granted you. And, if it is said to you: 'Return! then turn back. That is purest for you. Allah knows well what you are doing."

These verses exhort consideration for others, for those who happen to be present in a gathering and for the inmates of the house.

* Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) ordered that while eating in company one should not take two dates at a time without having obtained the consent of one's friends. Such an insignificant act has been prohibited solely on account of disrespect and because of dislike which this act will engender in others.

* Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said that the one who eats raw garlic and onions should remain aloof from us. Since the odour will be annoying to others. Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) forbade this insignificant act.

* Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said that it is not lawful for a guest to stay for such a length of time which imposes a difficulty on the host. In this prohibition, an act which causes inconvenience to others has been prescribed.

* Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said that when eating in company one should continue eating until the others have completed even though one has eaten to satiation. By discontinuing to eat, those who are still eating are put to shame. It is thus clear that one should not act in any way which embarrasses others. Some people on account of natural shame, refrain from taking something in a gathering although they wish for it. Others again feel it difficult to refuse a request in a gathering although they have no desire of giving. Such persons should not be given things in a gathering nor should anything be asked of them in a gathering.

* In a Hadith it is narrated that once Hadhrat Jaabir (radhiallahu anhu) came to the house of Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam). On knocking at the door, Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) enquired: "Who is it? Jaabir (radhiallahu anhu) replied: "It is me." Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) in annoyance, said:

"It is me. It is me." From this we learn that statements should not be made ambiguously. One should speak with clarity to enable the listener to fully understand. Ambiguous statements which cause confusion perturb people.

* Hadhrat Anas (radhiallahu anhu) stated that there was no person dearer to the Sahaabah than Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam). Inspite of this, he says, the Sahaabah would not stand in respect for Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) because of his aversion for this mode of respect. This establishes that any etiquette, way of respect or any form of service which is displeasing to a person should not be rendered to him. One should give priority to the wishes and feelings of others not to one's own desires. Some people by their insistence to render certain acts of service to the Auliya are in actual fact inconveniencing them.

* Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said that it is not permissible for a person to intrude in the company of two people without obtaining their consent. Such intrusion constricts the hearts. Thus, it is necessary to abstain from acts and attitudes which inhibit or cause inconvenience to others.

* According to the Hadith, Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) would cover his mouth with his hand or a handkerchief when sneezing. In this way he stifled the sound to avoid causing annoyance to others. This establishes that one should not annoy or scare or inconvenience one's companions by means of loudness and shouting.

* Hadhrat Jaabir (radhiallahu anhu) narrates that the Sahaabah would sit down in any place where they reached in the gathering of Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam). They would not pass through others in order to obtain seating place ahead. This attitude of the Sahaabah establishes the aadaab (etiquettes) of a majlis (gathering). The slightest inconvenience to others was avoided.

* Hadhrat Ibn Abbaas, Hadhrat Saeed Bin Musayyib and Hadhrat Anas (radhiallahu anhum) narrate in ahadith of different categories that when visiting the sick one should not remain for a long time. The visit should be short. This narration indicates the degree to which one should go in refraining from inconveniencing others. Sometimes a sick person due to his condition suffers inconvenience by the lengthy presence of others. However, the presence of such persons who are a source of comfort and solace to the sick are excluded from this prohibition.

* Hadhrat Ibn Abbaas (radhiallahu anhu), explaining the reason for the need to take ghusl (Bath) on Fridays, says that in the initial period of Islam most people were poor labourers. Soiled garments and perspiration caused bad odours. Hence ghusl was decreed waajib (obligatory) in the beginning. later, the incumbency (wujoob) was abrogated and ghusl for Jumma' was retained as a Sunnat act. It thus transpires that it is incumbent to refrain from causing the slightest inconvenience and annoyance to anyone.

* In Sunan Nisaai there appears a narration in which Hadhrat Aishah (radhiallahu anha) speaks of Rasulullah's (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) exit from the house on the Night of Baraa'at. He opened the door silently so as not to disturb the sleeping ones. Similarly, he closed the door silently. He did not commit any act which produced the slightest noise. He totally abstained from any disturbance to ensure that no one's sleep is disturbed nor anyone be suddenly awakened.

* In a lengthy hadith in Sahih Muslim, Hadhrat Miqdaad (radhiallahu anhu) says that once a group of them were the guests of Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam). After Isha the guest would go to bed. Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), on arriving much later, would make Salaam (greet) in such a whisper that if anyone was awake he could hear and if anyone was asleep he would not be disturbed thereby. This Hadith as well indicates the lengths to which Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) would go in order to refrain from causing the slightest inconvenience to others.

Numerous similar narrations bear ample testimony to this fact

* In the narrations of Fiqh (Jurisprudence) it is categorically stated that one should not greet a person who is engaged in eating, teaching, etc. From this it emerges that according to the Shariah it is detestable to divert the mind or attention of a person who is engaged in some necessary activity.

* The Fuqaha have ruled that it is permissible to prevent from the Musjid a person who suffers from the disease of bad odour emitting from the mouth. It is quite clear from these examples that it is essential to prevent anything which is a cause of inconvenience or annoyance to others.

A comprehensive perusal of these proofs (of the Qur'aan and Hadith) very clearly shows that the Shariat has established a very lofty system of life in which no facet of man's behaviour, attitudes and actions will constitute the slightest difficulty, harm, displeasure, detestation and ill-feeling to another fellow being. His behaviour should not be a cause of worry, confusion or fear to anyone. In this regard Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) did not confine this lofty attitude and behaviour to only his own statements and acts, but whenever any among his close companions displayed the slightest neglect in this matter, he would compel them to observe correct behaviour. Furthermore, Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) practically demonstrated this lofty degree of behaviour by the imposition of tasks and duties on the Sahaabah. A Sahaabi once presented a gift to Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam). However, he entered the presence of Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) without permission and without greeting.

Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) ordered:

"Go out; say Assalamu Alaikum, may I enter?"

In actual fact the secret underlying beautiful conduct with people is to save them from inconvenience and annoyance. Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) summed up this lofty concept of behaviour and conduct most beautifully and comprehensively in the following hadith.

"The true Muslim is he from whose tongue and hand Muslims are safe."

Any act which causes inconvenience, annoyance or difficulty is an act of misbehaviour even though it may ostensibly be financial aid, physical labour or honour and respect according to general prevalent custom because comfort is the soul of good character, and this has priority over service which in actual fact is the outer shell. The shell minus the kernel is obviously useless.

Although the Department of Muasharat (Social Etiquette) is posterior to the Departments of Aqaaid (Beliefs) and Ibaadaat-e-Fareedhah (Compulsory acts of worship), nevertheless, since a rupture in Aqaaid and Ibaadaat brings about personal detriment while a rupture in Muasharat results in harm to others, the latter will enjoy priority over the former two from this angle. Harming others is graver than harming oneself. In Surah Furqaan Allah Ta'ala says:

"They walk on earth in humility and when the ignorant ones address them, they say: Salaam."

This aayat indicates Beautiful Conduct (Husn Muasharat) and it appears before mention is made of Salaat, Fear, Tauheed and moderation in spending. Afterall, there must be some reason for the Qur'aan according it priority over the Departments of Aqaaid and Ibaadaat-e-Fareedhah. This priority over Fardh (compulsory acts of worship) is in regard to certain matters. However, in so far as Nafl acts of Ibaadat are concerned, Muasharat has greater emphasis in all respect. Thus, the condition of two women was explained to Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam). One woman while engaging in abundant Salaat, Saum (Fasting) and Thikr was in the habit of causing difficulty and inconvenience to her neighbours. The other woman, although not engaging in an abundance of Salaat and Saum, refrained from harming her neighbours, Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) described me the first woman as an inmate of Jahannam and the second woman as an inmate of Jannat.

Although Muasharat does not take precedence over Muamalaat (transactions and contracts) in this respect since a rupture in Muamalaat also results in harm to others, it (Muasharat) nevertheless enjoys priority over Muamalaat from another angle. Only the elite (the Ulama) consider the Department of Muamalaat to be an integral part of the Deen. On the other hand, only the special among the elite regard Muasharat to be included in the Deen. Many among the elite do not regard Muasharat as being part of the Deen. Although some among them do consider Muasharat to be part of the Deen, they do not regard it as important as the Department of Muamalaat. It is for this very reason that very little practical acceptance is accorded to Muasharat. The reformation of the baatin (the nafs) has the same order (hukm) as compulsory acts of Ibaadat. The angle of priority which was explained earlier applies in this case as well, i.e. priority of Muasharat over Muamalaat.

Inspite of the great importance of Muasharat, numerous people among the general public and some among the Ulama as well offer extremely little attention to it for practical purposes. Even those who give practical expression to Muasharat, totally abstain from instructing others in this regard. This state of affairs engendered in me the desire some time ago to write something on Aadaab-e-Muasharat with which I am confronted at most times. For quite a long time now I have been verbally admonishing and directly those associated with me. In most lectures too I emphasise on these matters. There has been a great delay in preparing this treatise. In the Knowledge of Allah Ta'ala the time for this treatise has been ordained for the present.

I have compiled this treatise without according much regard to systematic order. I wrote as things came to mind. If this treatise is taught to children and even to elders, then, Insha'Allah, the pleasure of Jannat will be experienced right here on earth.

The five branches of the Shariat

The Shariat consists of five branches or parts:

Aqqa-id, A'maal, Muamalaat, Akhlaaq, Husn-e-Muasharat.

1. AQQA-ID (Beliefs), e.g., beliefs in the Oneness of Allah Ta'ala and the Risaalat (Prophethood) of Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam).

2. A'MAAL (Righteous deeds), e.g., Salaat, Saum.

3. MUAMALAAT (Transactions, Contracts), e.g. trade and commerce.

4. AKHLAAQ (Moral character), e.g., humility, generosity, etc.

5. HUSN-E-MUASHARAT (Beautiful social conduct) i.e, good relationship with people, e.g. abstention from acts which cause others inconvenience, such as disturbing a person in his sleep.

The above mentioned five departments are collectively known as the Shariat. It is essential for Muslims to adopt all five departments of the Shariat. But, in the present age people have abbreviated the Shariat. Some have taken only Aqaa-id, believing that only the proclamation of La ilaaha il lallaahu suffices for immediate entry into Jannat. Such persons, while they believe Salaat, Saum, etc., are Fardh, do not obtain the good fortune of practically executing these acts of worship. Others again, along with Aqaa-id-observe Salaat, Saum, etc., as well. However, they have discarded Muamalaat. In their transactional dealings they are not concerned with the Deen, whether their acts are lawful or not. They are indifferent to the question of halaal and haraam regarding their earnings and dealings. Then there are those who maintain their Muamalaat on a healthy footing, but are unconcerned with the reformation of their moral character. Those who are concerned about Akhlaaq are exceptionally few. In fact, there are even such persons who spend considerable time to reform others while others are inconvenienced and annoyed by their behaviour and attitude. They remain unaware of the difficulty they are causing others by their actions and behaviour. They are completely uncaring about their own detestable condition. There are numerous such persons who will not venture to offer Salaam to a poor Muslim along the road. On the contrary, they wait in expectation of the Salaam to be initiated by the poor.

Some people, along with Aqaaid, A'maal and Muamalaat, are concerned about the reformation of Akhlaaq, hence they adopt ways and measures for the treatment of their morals. But, they have discarded Husn-e-Muashrat. In fact, they have excised it from the Deen. They assert that there is no relationship between the Shariah and social conduct with people. They, therefore, behave as they please, thinking that the Shariah has no say in such matters. Many people are pious with good qualities such as humility, but in Muasharat they are lacking. They are not concerned whether they annoy and inconvenience others by their behaviour. In most insignificant things they bring about difficulty and inconvenience to others. Their attention is totally diverted from little things which cause difficulty to others while in the Hadith there are numerous incidents narrated which show that Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) cared for the little things just as much as he cared for important matters.

Muasharat an integral part of the Deen

It should now be realized that Muasharat is an inseparable part of the Deen. A perfect Muslim will, therefore, be one who adopts all the branches of the Deen. In all aspects he has to behave like a Muslim. There has to be no resemblance with the Kuffaar.

People have generally understood Muamalaat and Muasharat to be beyond the scope of the Deen. It is indeed surprising that a person regards his dealings and his social conduct beyond the confines of Divine Law, but at the same time he acknowledges that his dealings and social conduct are governed by the laws of worldly governments. No one ever ventured to tell the state authorities that the government has no right in our private business enterprises, etc. People readily submit to governmental laws and restrictions applicable to their trade and commerce, etc.

Beautiful social conduct is more important than beautiful dealings of commerce

The need for proper observance of Muasharat is of greater importance than Muamalaat. Rectitude in Muamalaat largely ensures the protection of material wealth while Husn-e-Muasharat (Beautiful conduct with others) ensures the protection of the hearts of the Muslims. It is quite obvious that the rank of the heart is greater than that of material wealth. In the rectification of Muasharat is also the protection of the honour and reputation of others. After the protection of Imaan, safeguarding honour and reputation is of the greatest importance. Man is prepared to sacrifice everything in the endeavour to safeguard his honour. On the occasion of Hajjatul Wida, Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) declared the sanctity of the blood, honour and wealth of the Muslimeen. Until the Day of Qiyaamah the honour and reputation of the Believers have been declared sacred. This sanctity cannot, therefore, be violated.

The Muasharat of Islam is unique

Islamic Muasharat has no parallel. There is absolutely no need for Muslims to emulate the conduct of others. Muasharat should not be confused with pompous styles and the possession of material goods of pride and show. Takabbur (pride) and pomp destroy the roots of Muasharat. The proud man desires to be the superior of others. He will, therefore, not deal with others sympathetically and justly. The Islamic teaching of Muasharat, in contrast, inculcates humility in man. Without humility, sympathy and unity are not possible. These are, in actual fact, the foundations of Muasharat. True Muasharat is, in fact, only Islam.

Consider for example, the Islamic conduct pertaining to eating and drinking. Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) demonstrated this conduct both verbally and practically. Thus, he said: "I eat as a slave eats."

It was the noble character of Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) to eat sitting in a humble position with his body bent. He would eat quickly with relish. In contrast, we eat in great pomp and style. There is not a sign of humility on us when we eat. This type of proud conduct is the consequence of the reality (of life) being hidden from us. When the reality becomes revealed to a person and he realizes that whatever we are eating is from the Court of the King of kings (Ahkamul Haakimeen) and He is observing our every act, then automatically the humble manner of Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) will be adopted. When the greatness of a being is rooted in the heart, then all stages will be traversed with ease. The fact is that we lack the ability to realize that Allah Ta'ala is watching us. He observes our every act. Now when Islam possesses its code of Muasharat in a state of perfection, then what need is there for Muslims to look askance to aliens? Honour, self-respect and our claim of the superiority of our Deen demand that even if our Muasharat was imperfect (on assumption), then too, we should not direct our gaze at alien cultures. Our old and tattered blanket is better than the borrowed shawl of another.

Islamic and non-islamic social conduct : A comparison

Even in dressing, our brethren have adopted the conduct and style of aliens whereas there is no culture which can compare with Islam in matters of dress. Many rules and restrictions govern the dressing styles and garments of non-Muslims. They are supposed to be liberal and they always proclaim the slogan of freedom. But, in actual fact, they are fettered to numerous restrictions in both dress and eating habits and styles. While the Islamic style of dressing and eating is one of simplicity, the methods and styles of the non-Muslims have many restrictive etiquettes. Indeed, their styles are veritable prisons for those imprisoned in elaborate customary rules pertaining to dressing and eating styles.

There are wonderful barkaat (blessings) in simplicity. A simple person is saved from many difficulties and hardships. Pomp and pretence bring in their wake numerous difficulties. In contrast, there is sweetness and comfort in simplicity. While everyone desires simplicity and a simple life-style, pride and the thought of disgrace prevent them from adopting a simple conduct of life.

Reformation of Muasharat is imperative since it is an essential branch of the Deen. Just as Salaat and Saum are compulsory, so, too, is Muasharat incumbent. Nowadays Muasharat is not even considered to be a part of the deen whereas in the Hadith many chapters have been compiled in this sphere of life. But, no one was prepared to pay any heed to this vital department of the Shariat. After ages has Allah Ta'ala now opened the avenue of reformation.

The Aadaab (etiquettes) of Muasharat are continuously disappearing by the day although these are natural things. But, rectitude has in fact vanished from the hearts of people. A greater evil is the laxity of attitude. The capacity to ponder and reflect is absent. If Muslims contemplate, their gaze will reach all sides.

The remedy for frustration

The Shariat aims to eliminate frustration. In every condition, the Shariat endeavours that man is at peace. Whether it be in sorrow or in happiness, it is the Shariat's aim that one should be in the state of peace, not of frustration. The Shariat teaches the way of lightening grief and sorrow. Its teachings regarding peace augment the factors of peace so that these are not destroyed. If the correct principles are adopted, no one will become frustrated. There is no frustration in the Deen whether it be in the realm of Ahkaam-e-Zaahirah (the external laws) or Ahkaam-e-Baatinah (the internal laws) pertaining to the soul.

The Aadaab of Salaam

1. In a gathering where a talk or discussion is taking place, the person entering should not draw attention to himself by making Salaam. He should not become an interference in the talk. He should lower his gaze and silently sit down. When later the opportunity arises, he may make Salaam.
2. Adopt the practice of mutual Salaam. Whenever meeting a Muslim, say : ASSALAMU ALAIKUM. In reply say : WA ALAIKUMUS SALAAM. All other ways are baseless.
3. When a person conveys the Salaam of another to you, reply: ALAYHIM WA ALAIKUM SALAAM. This is best. If someone replies: WA ALAIKUMUS SALAAM, it will also suffice.

4. One person of the group making Salaam will be representative of the whole group. His Salaam will be adequate on behalf of the group. Similarly, if from the gathering one person replied, it will suffice on behalf of the whole gathering.
5. The one who initiates the Salaam obtains greater thawaab.
6. When replying to the Salaam of a person, the Salaam should be made verbally, not by a sign of the hand or a nod of the head.
7. Better repayment for a favour will be when the repayment is somewhat more than the act of favour rendered. Thus, the reply should be more than the Salaam (greeting). If ASSALAMU ALAIKUM was said, the better reply will be WA ALAIKUMUS SALAAM WARAHMATULLAH. If WA BARAKAATUHU is also added it will be an added merit.
8. It is waajib (obligatory) to reply to the Salaam which is written in a letter. This reply may be in writing or verbally.
9. The Fuqaha have said that in reply to the Salaam which is written in a letter, one may say ALAIKUMUS SALAAM or even ASSALAMU ALAIKUM.
10. In a letter in which a Dua is written, the Salaam should be written first since this is the Sunnat method.
11. Instead of writing or saying the Salaam, to say any other term or to adopt the greeting of any other community is bid'ah. Such an alien greeting is in fact alteration of the Shariah.
12. A person who is engrossed in a conversation or in some work should not be greeted. The new-comer should not intrude with his hand-shaking. Such an act is uncultured and causes distress to others.
13. It is Makrooh to greet a person involved in Deeni or natural activity. Thus, to make Salaam to a person eating is Makrooh while it is not Makrooh to engage in conversation while eating.

14. It is not permissible to bow and make Salaam.
15. Before entering a house or any place of privacy it is necessary to seek permission. Do not enter without permission.
16. Stand outside and proclaim the Salaam, then ask permission in any language. Use such terms which convey the full meaning. However, as far as the Salaam itself is concerned only the terms of the Shariah should be used.
17. When answering the call of nature neither reply to anyone's Salaam nor offer Salaam.
18. On promising to convey a person's Salaam, it becomes waajib to do so, otherwise not.
19. When making Salaam to elders adopt a low voice. Do not express yourself in such terms which convey arrogance or disrespect.

The Aadaab of Musaafahah

1. Do not shake hands (musaafahah) with a person when his hands are involved in such an act or activity which necessitates him emptying his hands. On such occasions, Salaam is adequate. Similarly, when someone (e.g. the leader in a gathering or the Ustaadh or the Shaikh) is engaged in something (e.g. giving a talk), then do not remain standing in expectation of obtaining consent for sitting. Merely be seated.
2. If someone is hurrying alone the road, do not stop him for hand-shaking. Such a person should not be stopped and engaged in conversation. You may be holding him up from something important.
3. When arriving in a gathering do not make musaafahah with everyone present. Make musaafahah with only the person whom you intend to see.

4. Some people are under the impression that mere handshaking is sufficient for restoring the peace between two antagonists or persons who have quarrelled. While the malice remains in the hearts musaafahah is of no benefit. Firstly, clear the air by solving the dispute. Thereafter, make musaafahah.
5. Musaafahah should be made on arrival and on departure.
6. When making musaafahah, the hands should not contain anything. Some people holding money in their hands make musaafahah. In this way they present a gift. This is improper. Musaafahah is a Sunnat act which is an Ibaadat. It should not be corrupted with a worldly deed.
7. Do not wait in expectation of musaafahah. Do not wish that people come forward to shake your hands.
8. The Sunnat method of musaafahah is only to shake hands. In some places there is the custom of kissing the hands after making musaafahah. This practice should be discontinued.

On the occasion of Hijrat (Migration from Makkah to Madinah) Hadhrat Abu Bakr Siddique (radhiallahu anhu) accompanied Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam). On their arrival at Madinah Tayyibah the Ansaar (Helpers or the Sahaabah of Madinah who assisted the Sahaabah of Makkah Mukarramah) came out in crowds to welcome Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam). The ansaar had not seen Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) as yet hence on account of Hadhrat Abu Bakr's (radhiallahu anhu) advanced age they mistook him for the Rasool. Under this impression they began making musaafahah with him. It is very significant that Hadhrat Abu Bakr (radhiallahu anhu) did not decline when the people mistakenly shook hands with him. This act of his is indicative of the perfection of his intelligence. He continued making musafahah with all of them. Since Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) was very tired on account of the arduous journey, Hadhrat Abu Bakr (radhiallahu anhu) did not wish to impose the inconvenience of crowds making musaafahah on Nabi-e-Kareem (sallallahu alayhi wasallam). By substituting himself, Hadhrat Abu Bakr (radhiallahu anhu) saved Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) from considerable inconvenience. If someone adopts this method today in the presence of his Shaikh, he will be regarded as a highly disrespectful person and will be severely criticized and reprimanded.

Nowadays external etiquettes of respect are regarded to be service. True service is to ensure the comfort of the one whose service is intended even if one has to undergo inconvenience and difficulty in the process. This is the meaning of muhabbat (love). the Sahaabah practically demonstrated this.

9. When making musaafahah, take into consideration the pleasure and the comfort of the one with whom you intend to make musaafahah. Refrain from adopting a method which will displease and inconvenience him.
10. Making musaafahah after Salaat (as in the practice in some places) is bid'ah.
11. Do not make musaafahah with one who is engrossed in some work. Just as there are rules for Salaam so are these rules for musaafahah. According to the Hadith musaafahah is the completion of Salaam.
12. In some places while making musaafahah the thumbs are pressed. It is claimed that in the thumbs are the veins of love. This is baseless and the narration is a fabrication.

Aadaab of a Majlis (Gathering)

1. When you have to wait for someone in a gathering, do not sit in such a place or in such a way to convey that you are waiting. This action will create unnecessary anxiety for the one whom you are waiting for. Sit down quietly at a distance from the person in an inconspicuous way. (An emergency or urgency will obviously be excluded from this rule).
2. When going to meet a person then on arrival notify him in some way of your presence. Such notification may be by Salaam, speech or by sitting down (in a gathering) where you may be observed. (This rule does not apply to a public gathering, e.g., a public lecture in a Musjid or other public venue). Without having informed the person concerned of your arrival do not sit down in such a place which conceals your presence. It is quite possible that he may engage in some conversation which is not meant for your ears. In this way the private affairs of another person may be unwittingly overheard. It is not permissible to overhear the secrets and private affairs of others without their consent. On such occasions if it transpires that someone is engaging in a private conversation without having knowledge of your presence, then immediately leave the place. If this happens while the speaker is under the impression that you are asleep, then immediately reveal that you are not asleep. In the matter being discussed pertains to the infliction of harm or loss to you or to any Muslim, then it will be permissible to overhear such schemes and plots to enable you to protect yourself.

3. When sitting in the company of a person do not sit in such close proximity as to cause inconvenience to him nor sit so far away that it become difficult to conduct the conversation with ease.
4. Don't sit staring at a person who is involved in some work. This distracts his attention and disturbs his peace.
5. It is disrespectful to unnecessarily sit directly behind someone in close proximity. The person in front is disturbed thereby.
6. When someone is sitting and engaged in some work do not stand in his presence waiting for him to attend to you. Sit down and address him as soon as he is relieved of the work.
7. When going to meet a person do not sit with him so long as to inconvenience him or to cause an impediment in his work.
8. Where people are gathered do not spit or clean your nose in their presence unnecessarily. For such acts leave their presence.

9. When leaving a gathering which was organized to discuss certain issues, do not leave without the consent of the leader of the assembly.
10. It is not permissible to remain in a gathering where any law of the Shariat is being violated. Participating in such a gathering is not lawful.
11. Hadhrat Jaabir (radhiallahu anhu) narrates that Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said that gatherings are held in trust. It is, therefore, not permissible to publicize the discussion of the gathering. However, according to the Hadith if the gathering is a conspiracy to destroy the life, property or reputation of a Muslim, then it will not be permissible to conceal such a plot. If by publicizing the private discussion of the gathering some harm will be caused to a person then such an act will be sinful. If the harm concerns the general public then to a greater extent will it be sinful to advertise or reveal the talks of the private gathering.
12. While the talk in a gathering is in progress, the newcomer who enters should not make Salaam or Musaafahah. So doing is an interference which disturbs the speaker and distracts the attention of the audience.
13. When arriving at a gathering early, sit in front. Latecomers should sit at the back wherever they are able to find place. They should not attempt to force their way to the front. Some people arriving late on Fridays at the Musjid, penetrate the rows ahead of them in their attempts to obtain sitting place infront. Such inconsiderate action has been severely criticized in the Hadith. Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said that such a person will be transformed into a bridge of Jahannum to be trampled on by people. The practice of cutting through the musallis in order to reach the front rows in the Musjid contains four severe evils:

Causing hurt to a Muslim, pride, despising a Muslim and show. Each one of these is a grave crime from which one should abstain.

14. Without a valid reason do not lean against the wall when in a gathering listening to a discourse. This is highly disrespectful.

15. If there is ample sitting place available, do not sit with your back towards anyone.

Aadaab of Speech

1. Some people do not speak clearly. They speak ambiguously and with formality. They consider the use of indications to be respectful. The listener sometimes does not get the message clearly and sometimes he understands wrongly. This causes much inconvenience. Therefore, speak up and speak clearly, without ambiguity.

2. Speak from in front of a person, not from behind. Speaking from behind a person is perplexing.

3. When renewing a request to a person, then mention it fully inspite of it having been stated before. Do not express yourself incompletely or ambiguously relying on an earlier explanation. It is possible that the earlier explanation has been partly forgotten, hence the listener may misunderstand the request if it is renewed without clarity.

4. Some people sitting at the back in a gathering clear their throats or cough in order to attract attention to themselves. If there is a real need to say something, go to the front and explain. However, this should not be done unnecessarily. It is improper to disturb a person involved in some work. Wait for the person to complete his task then address him.

5. Until such time that one topic has not been completed do not introduce another. While someone is speaking do not interrupt with another subject.

6. On making an enquiry reply in full, without ambiguity, when you are questioned. Do not reply with confusing statements which necessitate repeated questioning.

7. While eating do not mention such things which nauseates or disgusts others. The disposition of some persons is delicate and cannot tolerate to hear the mention of disgusting things while eating.

8. In the presence of a sick person or his housefolk do not make such statements which cause them grief and to lose hope in life. Make encouraging statements to alleviate the pain and sorrow, saying Insha'Allah.

9. If you have to speak privately about a person who happens to be present, do not indicate this to another by means of the sign of the hand or eye. Do not let him realize that you are at all discussing him. This will apply if the discussion regarding him is permissible. If the discussion is now lawful, then discussing him will be sinful.

10. On hearing news of someone's illness, death, etc. do not publicize it until you have confirmed the truth of the news.

11. Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said:

"Do not speak much besides Thikrullah. Verily, abundant speech hardens the heart and the one with a hard heart is furthest from Allah."

This applies to futile speech even though the talk may be lawful.

Imaam Maalik (rahmatullah alayh) narrates that Hadhrat Isaa (alayhis salaam) said:

"Do not speak in abundance for your heart will be hardened."

In other words, fear and humility will be eliminated from the heart. Experience confirms this fact.

12. Hadhrat Ali (radhiallahu anhu) said that one should speak to people what they are able to understand. Do not discuss with them things which are beyond their intellectual capacities. Hadhrat Ali (radhiallahu anhu) added :

"Do you wish them to refute Allah and His Rasool?"

Some people will not hesitate to reject such Deeni narrations which they unable to comprehend.

Hadhrat Ibn Mas'ood (radhiallahu anhu) said:

> "When you mention to people such things which are beyond their intellectual capacities, then such talks will most certainly become a cause for the corruption of some people."

13. Do not unnecessarily adopt the speech styles and slang of those who are ignorant of the Deen.
14. Be moderate in speech. Do not expand the discussion so much that people become tired and perplexed nor abbreviate the talk to such an extent that the aim and object of the discussion are not understood.
15. A female should exercise care when speaking. She should not allow her voice to be heard by men unnecessarily. In like manner a man should not express himself sentimentally in the presence of females. It is obligatory that a man abstains from reciting poetry and expressing himself melodiously in front of females (i.e., such females for whom the Shar'i law of Hijaab applies).
16. Do not mumble when speaking. Speak with clarity.
17. Be to the point. Do not beat about the bush when speaking.
18. Think before speaking. Sometimes a wrong statement uttered without thinking leads one to Jahannum. One will obtain salvation from this calamity by inculcating the habit of thinking before speaking.
19. Do not insult anyone. Do not say to anyone:

    'Faasiq, Kaafir, Maloon (cursed), the enemy of Allah.
20. Do not be two-tongued, expressing views in the presence of a person calculated to please him, but when in the company of one holding another view, then speaking to please him.

21. Never engage in gossip, slander and scandalising.

    However, it will be permissible to speak contrary to fact and reality in order to restore peace and good relationship between antagonists or enemies.
22. Do not flatter anyone.
23. Do not become embroiled with anyone in obstinate debate and argument. When you realized that the person is not prepared to accept the truth, maintain silence. Do not become intransigent and bigoted. Bigotry is exceptionally evil.
24. Abstain from statements in which there is neither Deeni benefit nor worldly benefit.
25. Do not curse or speak ill of time (the age). Time is blameless. By implication the criticism is directed to Allah Ta'ala, Nauthubillaah!
26. Do not praise those who are not upholders of the Deen (Abstention from praising them should not be construed to mean permissibility to hold them in contempt. It is not permissible to despise them nor to adopt a holier than thou attitude.)
27. It is haraam to speak ill (gheebat) of even children, insane persons and non-Muslims.
28. To deliberately listen to gheebat being spoken is as if one has made gheebat.
29. Juniors should not call their seniors by their names. They should adopt a name or title of respect and honour.
30. When meeting someone casually, e.g., along the road or by chance, do not engage in a topic which you will not be able to complete in the short while you are with him. If by the time of separating, the topic has not been concluded, you will either waste your time to complete the story or you will depart with the story unfinished. This leaves the listener in suspense and doubt.

31. If a person mistakes you for another, then immediately rectify him and state your identity.
32. In the presence of others do not use such terms which are considered uncultural. Express yourself in a cultured way, e.g., say 'the call of nature'; etc.
33. Where the company consists of three persons, two should not speak by whispering to each other, nor should they ask the third one to leave, nor should they speak in a language which the third person does not understand. This causes distress to him.
34. While two persons are speaking, a third one should not interrupt nor should he present his views unless asked to do so.
35. When someone is about to relate an accident to you, then even if you are aware of it do not silence him by saying that you know about it. With the intention of pleasing him listen to his talk.
36. When someone speaks ill of your seniors, do not inform them thereof. Informing them will cause grief to them.
37. Do not camouflage your error giving it an interpretation to avoid the error being known. Acknowledge the error and offer an apology. Even acknowledging one's error fifty times does not appear as bad as offering a devious interpretation once.
38. Do not indulge in story-telling unnecessarily. Do not waste the time of a busy person by prolonging the conversation with small talk.
39. Do not answer unnecessary objections. When you discern that the objector's motive is only to object, not to learn or understand the truth, maintain silence or tell him : "Go! You have understood it so."
40. On obtaining the answer for your question, do not maintain silence. If you have understood the answer, declare it in some way. If you have not understood, then ask for clarification.

41. Most people suffer from the malady of stating their case incompletely. This causes great perplexity. State your case fully.
42. Even on entering your own home, announce your arrival. Enter with consent. One does not know in which condition the womenfolk in the home may be or may be a na-mahram female is present. (Na-mahram female is a woman for whom hijaab is incumbent). Entering without permission is uncouth and uncultural.
43. Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said that among the rights of a Mu'min is that he be addressed with respect and affection. The prevalent custom among the Arabs (during the early time) was to address people by their family name. Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) himself called Hadhrat Abu Bakr (radhiallahu anhu) by the title "Ateeq", Hadhrat Umar (radhiallahu anhu) by the title, "Farooq", Hadhrat Humzah (radhiallahu anhu) by the title "Asadullaah" and Hadhrat Khalid Bin Waleed (radhiallahu anhu) by the title, "Saifullah".
44. When meeting a person for the first time introduce yourself sufficiently. Provide your name and place of residence (town or country).
45. Speak the truth, but not harshly and unculturally. Declare the truth respectfully and in soft words. Do not speak in such terms calculated to hurt the feelings of others.
46. Do not speak regarding a matter which you have not confirmed.
47. Do not speak sarcastically.
48. Do not crack such jokes which are hurting to others nor speak in a way which embarrasses people.
49. Do not call people by detestable nicknames. Nicknames which are hurting or which proclaim some defect in a person fall within the category of gheebhat (gheebat means to mention such a truth about a person which he dislikes.) Thus gheebat is a true statement about a person, which he detests or which hurts him. If the statement is false, it will be known as Buhtaan (slander). About gheebat Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said: "Gheebat is worse than fornication". (The evil and sin of buhtaan are worse).

50. Do not speak mockingly of anyone.

51. Do not speak on the basis of mere suspicion. While you are entitled to safeguard yourself on the basis of suspicion, it is not permissible to blame someone or accuse on the basis of suspicion.

Some Malfoozaat (Sayings, statements, advices and admonition) of Hakimul Ummat Hadhrat Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanavi (rahmatullah alayh)

1. Some people do not speak clearly. They regard formality and ceremonial expressions and speaking in ambiguous terms as respect and honour. Sometimes the listener does not fully understand the purpose of what is being said. This causes immediate perplexity. Therefore, proclaim your case very clearly.

2. On enquiring from a newcomer of his time of departure, he (the newcomer) replied: "When you command." Hadhrat Thanavi (rahmatullah alayh) then educated him in the following manner:

   "What can I understand of your condition from a meaningless answer? What do I know of the time at your disposal. In your reply you should have expressed your intention. If you indeed subscribe to this degree of respect, obedience and submission, then after having informed of your intention you should say: This is my intention, but I leave it to your order. "Do not reply in a manner which is perplexing."

3. Hadhrat Thanavi (rahmatullah alayh) enquired about the whereabouts of a worker from a student (who was studying at the Madrasah of Hadhrat Thanavi). The student said that the worker was sleeping. Afterwards it was established that the worker was awake in his room. The student was admonished in the following manner:

   "Firstly, it is wrong to make a categoric statement on the basis of an assumption. If you were speaking on the basis of an assumption, you should have mentioned this. You should have said: 'Perhaps he is asleep.' This is the most that may be said: However, the actual and proper reply should have been:' I do not know. I shall go and find out.' Then, after having investigated, the correct information should be furnished.

Secondly, I consider it a merciless act to unnecessarily awaken a sleeping person. Thus, under this impression that he is sleeping and because I loathe disturbing a resting person, I would have tolerated some harm or loss in some work (which had to be executed by the worker). But, when later it transpired that he was not sleeping, it would have caused me unpleasantness. At the same time, I would be angry with the informer. All this annoyance is the consequence of speaking without investigation. Always bear this in mind."

4. On the arrival of a man, Hadhrat asked: "What has brought you? Do you wish to say something?" In reply, the man said: 'I have come only to meet you.'

   After the Maghrib Fardh (before even performing the Sunnats) he requested a Ta'weez. Hadhrat Thanavi commented:

   "There is a time and a place for everything. This is not the time for Ta'weez. When you had arrived, I specifically asked you if you have any need. You said that you merely came for mulaaqaat (to greet). Now, what is the meaning of this request at this time? You had immediately to make your request when I had asked. People consider such an attitude (as was adopted by the man) as respect, but I regard it as being highly disrespectful. It (your attitude) implies that others are your servants. Service may thus be taken from them at whim and fancy. You yourself reflect a bit. I have many duties to attend to now. The Sunnats and the Nafl Salaat have yet to be performed. I have to address some Thaakireen and Shaaghileen (those who are engaged in Thikrullah and spiritual devotional exercises). I have to hear to their requests. I have to see to the feeding of the guests. Alas! In our time respect and culture have totally been effaced from this world. You can come again some other time for a Ta'weez. Remember! Wherever you go, first state your purpose, especially when you are asked. In fact, on the arrival of a person I immediately enquire the purpose of the visit so that he may say whatever he wishes to. This saves him from inconvenience and it saves me from inconvenience.

"I generally ask for the purpose of the visit because most people who come have some need or the other. Some are bashful and are unable to express themselves freely in a gathering. They are not able to reveal a private matter in the gathering. On asking them, they will indicate that they wish to say something in private. When I find the opportunity I call them in privacy and give them audience. But when a person does not open his mouth, how can I understand? I do not possess knowledge of the ghaib (unseen things)."

5. One student, while Hadhrat was involved in Ta'leem (teaching those present) and before the termination of the talk, commenced to explain a dream which he had seen. Hadhrat Thanavi said:

   "What is this act? Before one topic has ended, you interrupt with another. The talk of an intelligent man has a beginning and an ending. Don't interrupt a discussion with another topic. An intelligent man will not speak while another is involved in discussion. Your interruption implies that the aim is to explain a dream. Ta'leem (teaching) and Talqeen (instruction) are futile to you. In otherwords my lengthy talk is worthless. In future never repeat this mistake. Now get up and leave. The meaning (of your dream) will be explained at some other time. Presently you have dishonoured Ta'leem."

6. Hadhrat Thanavi said :

   "I detest stories and narrations. people squander my time with futile talks. Sometimes, out of politeness, I say nothing. One should involve in useful things."

7. A man came to Hadhrat Thanavi with some salt for the purpose of reciting on it. (This is a valid and permissible act. As a result of the blessings of the recitation of the Qura'anic words, the substance on which the recital is directed acquires healing properties). However, the man did not explain his case fully and clearly. Hadhrat, therefore, commented:

   "When you have stated your case fully, then only will I recite."

Directing his attention to the gathering, Hadhrat said: "It comes in the Hadith that once a man entered in the presence of Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) instructed one person to teach him the correct etiquette of seeking permission before entering. This establishes that practical instruction is Sunnat. People with dense minds cannot remember without practical demonstration."

8. Once Hadhrat commented:

   "I become highly perplexed with vexing talks. I wish statements to be clear, without ambiguity. I state a matter with clarity and I expect others to do likewise. But, most people lack the habit of speaking clearly."

9. A newcomer on arrival, after making musafahah (shaking hands)' presented another person's letter, saying that a certain man had sent this letter. Hadhrat said:

   "You' should firstly introduce yourself. I have not recognized you. You should give priority first to yourself, then be concerned about others (in such matters)."

The newcomer replied: "I am a student studying in a certain Madrasah" (he mentioned the name of the Madrasah). Saying this much, he remained silent. After a brief pause, Hadhrat said:

"By saying this much, you consider it sufficient introduction."

The newcomer again remained silent. Once again Hadhrat asked:

"You have no name nor hometown?"

The student again remained silent. Hadhrat then commented:

"I have no remedy for this. Even after I have complained, he has not introduced himself. If my asking and questioning seem futile and unintelligent to you then get up and sit over there (at a distance). It is futile for you to sit near to me."

10. A newcomer remained silent after Hadhrat enquired about his hometown and the purpose of his visit. Hadhrat commented:

    "Brother! Say whatever you wish to. At least introduce yourself so that I may know the purpose of your long journey and the reason why you have spent so much time and money. What is your purpose? How can another person know what is in your mind without your speaking? There is no Ilm-e-ghaib (knowledge of the unseen) here by which the purpose of your leaving and undertaking this journey may be known. After all, you must be having some purpose and motive. State it clearly. What intricacy is involved in stating your aim."

Even after this admonition, the newcomer maintained silence, not saying anything. Hadhrat said:

"No one considers these acts (of perplexity) of those who come here. They do not see what these people are doing. But, they complain when I admonish them. This is just as a person silently pricking another with a needle. When the injured person exclaims in pain and agos all hear it, while no one sees the cause of exclamation and screaming. People have heard the name of Islaah (self-reformation) but they are totally ignorant of the meaning and reality of Islaah. A man becomes a true man only after great difficulty and striving."

11. A man, on presenting a letter, attempted to engage in a verbal discussion. Hadhrat said:

"Why this confusion? A letter as well as a verbal discussion! Either you should have stated your whole case verbally or in writing. If for some reason you wished to do both, then the correct method is to first state the matter verbally and then only mention the letter. Now by simultaneously combining both, I am perplexed for I do not know if the subject in the letter is the same or different from what is said verbally. Such acts bring about unnecessary perplexity and concern. But, they do not discern this although others are inconvenienced. I do not understand whether the whole world is filled with people of bad understanding or such persons have been ordained as my share after they have been picked out from the rest (or mankind). What was the wisdom in presenting the letter and simultaneously commencing a verbal discussion?

The man expressed his profound apologies after acknowledging his error.

12. Admonishing a man who made a statement without having investigated the matter, Hadhrat said:

"How could you have made this statement without having made an investigation? It appears as if you are suffering from the malady of speaking much, hence without investigating the incident you commenced blabbing. When this is the condition of such cultured people (as yourself), then what complaint can one have of others?

13. In reply to a question by one Molvi Saheb, Hadhrat said:

"Inspite of having acquired so much education you do not know the etiquette and way of questioning. You have learnt the Kitaabs merely in parrot fashion. If you had studied the Kitaabs with understanding, you would not have posed your question in such an uncultured manner. I have been severely disturbed by this manner of your questioning. Afterall, what constrains you people to be so careless? You speak without thinking. Whatever comes on your tongue, you proclaim it. When this is your condition, then what can we say about the poor laity?"

The Molvi Saheb replied:

"Truly I have erred. Insha'Allah, in future, it will not happen. I shall take care. Forgive me."

Hadhrat further commented:

"Alas! Your condition is extremely regrettable. To what extent should I maintain sabr (patience)? If I admonish and draw attention to such errors of speech, I stand criticized. If I maintain silence and do not admonish you, you will become (spiritually and morally) corrupted. Anyhow, you have promised to exercise care in the future. It is best that you now again pose your question so that I may see if you do not repeat your error."

The Molvi Saheb repeated his question and Hadhrat commented:

"Now it is correct. Look! With slight reflection the question has been corrected. I always maintain that in most cases the cause underlying errors is not bad understanding, but is carelessness. The present case testifies that if the question (which the Molvi Saheb had made at first) was the result of bad understanding, then how did he manage to correct it so quickly? On having reflected, he corrected the error."

14. Admonishing a man on an error, Hadhrat said:

"Why did you not state your case fully? What were you afterall waiting for? You ventured an answer only after being questioned and that too, incomplete."

He replied: "Hadhrat you were busy writing."

Hadhrat commented: "Did I have to discontinue writing on account of your presence. Do I possess knowledge of the unseen by which I may know that a certain person has arrived and he has something to say? Why have you spoken now? Now, too, I am busy writing. You people resort to meaningless interpretations. Why do you trouble yourselves as well as others? Even now you have not spoken correctly nor replied correctly. Even now you have repeated the same perplexing statement. What harm will I suffer? I have diagnosed your pulses. When your condition is such that you conceal your faults and errors, then what hope is there for your reformation? Afterall, what is the reason underlying the concealment of maladies? I fully understand it. I am involved in this activity for a long time now. Let me inform you of the sickness."

The man said: "Hadhrat, now forgive me. In future I will be more careful. Truly, I have erred."

Hadhrat commented: "You are forgiven, but the malady in you will not be cured by forgiveness. The malady is jaah (the love for fame). This causes concealment of faults. Treat it. If you do not, then remember you will lose whatever you have gained (spiritually and morally). I desire that maladies be cured with ease. But, you people choose difficulty. I have no remedy for that."

15. Admonishing a newcomer, Hadhrat said:

"Neither can you state your case nor can you understand the next man. Under the circumstances it is futile to converse with you. When you cannot even introduce yourself, speaking futile things, then what hope is there that you will act correctly in future? I do not wish to strike up an association with such a person. Now get up and leave."

Thereupon the newcomer fully introduced himself. Hadhrat then commented:

"From whence did you obtain the understanding so quickly? It is but what I am always saying, viz., people suffer from the disease of carelessness. Now when concern asserted itself, the mind and the heart began operating and executing their functions. Without a whip the horse will not work."

16. A rural dweller came and said: "Hazratji give me a ta'weez." Hadhrat said: "I have not understood." The man exclaimed loudly: "Give me a ta'weez." Hadhrat replied: "I am not deaf. I have heard you, but I have not understood you." The man remained silent. Hadhrat commented: "Now you sit as if you are dumb. Why you do not state your case fully? Have you taken an oath at home that you will come and trouble me?" He said: "How should I say?" Hadhrat said:

"Go outside and enquire from someone, then come. Inform (whoever you ask) that I have said this." He left and after enquiring from someone he returned and said:

"Yes, my statement was incomplete."

On this occasion he stated the type of ta'weez he required. Hadhrat commented: "This villager never went to the station and said: 'Give me a ticket'. He never refrained from asking for a ticket to proceed to a specific place. Similarly, he never went to the bazaar to purchase something without clearly stating the product he required. It seems that all ignorance has been ordained as my lot. What! Is it death for you to state your full case?

The man said: "We are village-dwellers. Our understanding as such." Hadhrat commented: "You people are very clever.

Now since your understanding is such, go and return after an hour for the ta'weez. When you come, state clearly your request. Do not rely on what you have already asked (i.e. the type of ta'weez). I will not remember afterwards.

After an hour he returned and expressed himself fully and satisfactorily. He then left with the ta'weez. Hadhrat commented:

"He will never forget this lesson. He will hence forth speak fully even if he goes elsewhere. If I don't adopt this method, ignorance will not be dispelled."

The Aadaab of listening to talk

1. Listen attentively. If any part of the talk is not clear or a doubt lingers, seek its clarification from the speaker immediately. Don't act on what has been said on the basis of your opinion.
2. When someone calls you, reply immediately so that the caller knows that you have heard him.
3. When someone speaks to you, do not listen with indifference. This attitude will hurt his feelings. This applies to a great extent when someone speaks for your benefit or answers your question.
4. When someone assigns a task to you, express your intention verbally. Say yes or no, etc. Perhaps you have no intention of doing the work and by your silence the speaker gains the impression that you have agreed to undertake the task.

5. When someone speaks ill of your Ustaadh, then remain silent. If it becomes unbearable, leave the place.
6. When your Ustaadh speaks, apply your whole attention to him.
7. After having attentively listened to your Ustaadh's discourse, if you do not understand anything, do not attribute it to your Ustaadh. On the contrary, regard your inability as a result of your defective understanding and inattentiveness.
8. It is not permissible to listen to music and singing. The heart is corrupted thereby. Evil dominates the nafs. Music gives impetus to the evil qualities of the lowly nafs. The inclination to commit wrong is thus stirred in man. Whatever leads to haraam is likewise haraam.
9. Avoid listening to the voice of females and young boys. A woman should exercise caution in this regard. She should ensure that her voice does not reach the ears of ghair mahram males (i.e. males for whom hijaab is compulsory).
10. Do not get up and leave while someone is addressing you. This will hurt the feelings of the speaker, and will exhibit your unappreciativeness of the talk. (This applies to lawful talk. If the talk is not lawful, then it will not be permissible to listen to it.)
11. When listening to a lecture, do not engage in any other conversation. Pay attention to the discourse. It is disrespectful to engage in a conversation at such a time and it displays lack of appreciation of the discourse.
12. When someone calls you from behind a partition, etc., reply immediately to put the caller at ease. Do not remain silent, for then the caller will persist in calling.

13. When someone assigns a duty to you, listen to it well and after having executed it, notify him of its accomplishment. This will avoid suspense and anticipation.

14. If you have not understood, say so. Do not pretend that you have understood. Do not say, 'yes, yes'.

15. On announcing yourself, e.g., by having made Salaam, if the inmates of the house have not recognised you and they ask, 'Who is it?, do not say: It's me:' State your name.

16. It is highly disrespectful to remain silent after having heard the question. Similarly, it is disrespectful and cause for much annoyance to reply after some delay.

Some Malfoozaat of Hadhrat Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanavi (rahmatullah alayh) pertaining to listening

1. Hadhrat Thanavi had granted a certain Thaakir (one who passes his time in Thikrullah) some time for discussion after Maghrib at his request. After Maghrib, Hadhrat called him because he was seated at a distance. Although the Thaakir stated to come towards Hadhrat, he did not answer the call to indicate that he had heart it. But, Hadhrat was not apprised of his coming, hence he called a second time. Meanwhile the Thaakir had arrived. Hadhrat asked:

   "Why did you not answer? By answering, the caller will know that the one who has been called has heard the call. By not replying, there is uncertainty and this necessitates repeated calling. This inconvenience is the result purely of your negligent attitude. What difficulty was there in saying, 'yes!? Nowadays, academic knowledge is imparted in every place. But, there is a dearth of Akhlaaq (moral character). Now I have been annoyed and perplexed. I will give you another time. Remember this."

2. A man presented a paper to Hadhrat who wrote a ta'weez and explained its method. After having heard the method of the ta'weez, he remained silent. He did not say whether he had understood or not. Hadhrat asked:

   "Have you understood the method explained by me?"

   The man said: "I have heard it." Hadhrat said: "Then why do you not say, yes or no?" He replied: "My hearing is not good." Hadhrat said: "You said that you have understood the method. In other words, you said that you have understood it without having heard it. In the beginning you should have said you cannot hear properly. Answer me. Have you understood what I have said?" He replied: "I have understood a bit." Hadhrat said: "You should have answered and informed of whatever you have understood. By answering, the other person will be relieved." The man said: "I have erred." Hadhrat commented: "Do not repeat again such an error." Thereupon, addressing the gathering, Hadhrat said: "It is not the fault of these poor people. It is the fault of the elders who refrain from admonition."

Aadaab of Mulaaqaat (meeting one another)

1. When you go to meet a person do not disturb him by intruding while he is busy. If, for example, he is engaged in Tilaawat, Wazeefah or he is in privacy or sleeping or preparing to sleep or involved in something else in which he will be disturbed if you intrude or he may be inconvenienced by your intrusion, then at such a time do not greet or shake hands. Either go away and return later or wait elsewhere (where his attention will not be attracted). If the matter is urgent and requires immediate attention, seek his permission first.

2. When having arrived at the venue of the person whom you wish to meet, inform him of your presence either by Salaam, speech, etc. Do not sit in a concealed place or in such a way that he has not learnt of your presence. Perhaps he wishes to say something which is not intended for your ears. It is evil to listen to another person's secrets without his consent. If you realise that the discussion in progress is not for your ears, immediately take leave.

3. When meeting someone with whom you have no informal association, do not ask him about the condition of his home affairs. Similarly, do not ask him about his source of earning, possessions, etc.
4. On meeting a person do not linger too long so as to cause him inconvenience or to constitute an impediment in his activity.
5. When meeting someone, do so pleasantly and smilingly so as to please him.
6. When meeting someone, for the first time, remember the following things:
   * Introduce yourself. State your name.
   * State your hometown or the country or city from where you are coming.
   * State the purpose of your visit.
7. When meeting a person, do not pick up any letter, paper or book from nearby to read.
8. When someone comes to meet you (and if you are sitting) get up or move slightly. In this is respect for the visitor.

Some Malfoozaat

1. A newcomer entered, made musafahah and departed without saying anything. Hadhrat commented:

   "Is this also some form of humanity? He pleased himself and disturbed the heart of others. When a stranger comes it is only natural to wonder who he is, from where he has come, for what purpose has he come. Has he thought me to be an idol, merely putting his hands in my hands and moving off as if I am lifeless. These are natural things (which do not require instruction)."

2. Some people commit the error of arriving without notifying. They have not yet eaten, but arrive at such a time which creates difficulty in preparing food. If it is realised that the time of arrival will be improper, then make your own food arrangements. After having eaten, proceed to meet the person and on reaching there inform him that you have already made your food arrangements so that he does not labour in suspense and uncertainty.
3. One should not wait in expectation of being asked to introduce oneself. At the first available opportunity introduce yourself. At the time of greeting, make your introduction and state your purpose. It is necessary for the host to make himself available for this purpose. At the time of meeting, he should leave off his activity.

The Aadaab of the guest

1. The guest should immediately notify the host if he has no intention of eating there for some reason or the other. It should not happen that the host prepares food and then all goes to waste. This will cause much grief to the host who underwent inconvenience and laboured to make hospitable arrangements for the guest.
2. The guest should inform the host of his whereabouts so that the latter (host) does not have to search for him when meals are ready to be served.
3. The guest should not accept anyone's invitation without the consent of the host.
4. The guest should not interfere in the arrangements and system of the host. However, there is nothing wrong if the host assigns an arrangement or an act to the guest.
5. The guest should never adopt a demanding attitude or tone. He should tender his wishes with humble request.
6. If the guest is on a diet, he should inform his host immediately on arrival. Some persons exhibit ill-manners in this regard at the exact time of eating when the food has been served.

7. The guest should not ask the host for something, for perhaps the host is unable to fulfill the request and is thus put to shame. (Necessities are excluded).
8. The guest should leave a little food over so that the host does not think that may be the food was not enough and the guest has not eaten sufficiently. This will put the host to shame. (This does not mean that the guest should leave some of the food in his plate uneaten. He should clean, the plate with his fingers. This is Sunnat. Some food should, however, be left in the serving utensils.)
9. Do not accompany an invited person to his host's residence. The host, merely out of shame, may be constrained to ask you to remain for meals while in actual fact he has no intention of doing so. This causes difficulty to the host. Some persons very quickly accept such instant invitations which are made by coincidence. The host may feel belittled if he does not ask you to remain for meals.
10. Do not inconvenience the host nor put him to shame by making a request at the time of departure. The time for fulfilling your request may be too less and the host will suffer shame by not being able to satisfy the guest.
11. If several varieties of food are served, the guest should taste a bit of every variety. This is a right which the host has over the guest. However, if the guest is ill or on a prescribed medical diet, then this will be an exception.
12. Do not initiate an intricate topic while eating. The talk should be light, otherwise the pleasure of the food will be destroyed. While eating, the greater part of one's attention should be directed to the food.
13. It is not permissible for a guest to give any food to a beggar or anyone else (i.e. from the food which the host has served). Similarly, if some food is presented in a utensil, it is not permissible to eat from the utensil. Remove the food into your own utensil. However, if the form of the food will be destroyed by emptying it in another utensil, then it will be permissible to eat from the utensil in which it was sent, e.g., pudding.

14. When going to a place for some work, etc., and while there you go to meet an acquaintance, then immediately inform him of your staying arrangements so that he does not gain the impression that you are his guest.
15. The Ulama should be extremely careful when going to eat at the place of their host. They should not impose on the hospitality of the host by taking along with them a group of friends/students/mureeds.

Malfoozaat

1. A student came as a guest to Hadhrat Thanavi (rahmatullah alayh). He had come once before, but had stayed elsewhere. While he intended to stay over here this time, he did not make this known. Thus, food was not sent to him. Afterwards, when he was asked, it transpired that he intended to stay here (at the Khaanqah of Hadhrat). Meals were then sent. Hadhrat advised him as follows:

   "When you intend staying, you should make this known yourself. How can one know of your intention if you do not state it?

   Since you had stayed elsewhere the previous time, how could you conclude that you would be asked of your intentions?".
2. Guests have no relationship with futile task. One guest to another: 'Meals are ready'. He had no right to say this.
3. A guest asked water from the servant of his host in a demanding tone. Hadhrat commented: "Never adopt a commanding tone. This is bad character. Say: 'Please give me some water.'
4. Once after Isha, a certain person (who was staying as a guest at the Khaanqah) said: 'I shall go to a certain place to fetch a blanket'. It was said to him that the gates of the Madrasah have already closed, and if he calls for the gate to be opened up, he will be disturbing those who are resting. Someone gave him a blanket. Alas! was he sleeping the whole day? Why did he not make his arrangement earlier.

5. OUR CONDUCT

Nowadays our conduct is of a new kind. It is considered contrary to culture to ask the guest of the duration of his stay. Some guests make their own food arrangement without informing the host. The host undergoes much difficulty to prepare meals for guests and to make them comfortable, but just when meals are about to be served, they inform the host of their own arrangement. The host will suffer considerable grief by this rebuff. A guest who was here brought along his own food but did not inform me. At the time when meals were about to be served, he opened up his food. I said to him: You should have informed me that you had brought food with you. There is nothing wrong in this. Since you did not inform me and imposed a difficulty on me, take this food and sit elsewhere to eat. Do not sit to eat it here.

When I go on a journey and intend to stay over in Saharanpur for a while and if my arrival coincides with meal-time, I immediately inform on arrival of my intention that I have brought along food or I have arranged to eat at a certain place. If I had taken along some food, then on arrival I will immediately hand it over to the host who can decide what to do with it.

6. Hadhrat said to a mureed:

"If you have to come on a Friday, bring along your food. If you come some other day, then, if, possible we may entertain you. We have announced to all that whoever comes on a Friday is not our guest. He has come for Salaatul Juma'h. Furthermore, on Fridays numerous people come from nearby towns (for Juma'h). I do not operate a feasting-house here. Eat at home, then set out. However, those who have journeyed from distant places intending to be my guests, they may arrive any day. They are my guests."

7. Wherever Maulana Muzaffar Hussain (rahmatullah alayh) would go, he would immediately inform: "I shall be your guest for one day or two days." One day this saint was the guest of Hadhrat Maulana Gangohi (rahmatullah alayh). In the morning Maulana Gangohi asked Maulana (the guest) to have breakfast. Maulana Muzaffar had to go to Rampur that morning, and fearing a delay, he said to Maulana Gangohi:

"If you have anything left over from last night's food, bring it."

Maulana Gangohi brought the simple food (which was left over of the previous night) and some stale bread. Maulana Muzaffar Husain took the food along and departed. On reaching Rampur, Maulana Muzaffar Hussain spoke highly of Maulana Gangohi in the presence of Hakeem Ziyauddin. Hakeem Saheb commented:

"He is a saint." Maulana Muzaffar Hussain said: "I am not praising his sainthood. I am saying that he is a good man. If you don't understand, then ask." Hakeem Saheb said: "Hadhrat, inform me." Maulana Muzaffar Husain said: "Look, what a good man he is. He asked me for meals, but on my request, he brought, without any qualms, whatever leftovers he had. For this reason I said that he is a good man."

8. Once Hadhrat Maulana Gangohi (rahmatullah alayh) was the guest of Hakeem Mueenuddin, the son of Hadhrat Maulana Muhammad Ya'qoob (rahmatullah alayh). The host is very informal type of a person. On that particular day there was no food in the house to serve. The host said:

"Today there is no food by us. However, most friends are eagerly inviting you. If you agree, I can accept an invitation."

Maulana Gangohi replied: "I am your guest and will remain in the condition in which you are." Thus, they remained without food.

The Aadaab of the host

1. The host should not insist that the guest eats. This is contrary to the well-being of the guest.
2. If there is a need to serve more food, do not remove the utensil (in which there is still some food) from the presence of the guest. Bring more food in another utensil.
3. If the intention is to invite some of the associates of one's Buzrug (Shaikh, Ustaadh, etc.) along with the Buzrug, then do not ask the Buzrug to bring them along. It is disrespectful to extract service from him. Take permission from him and do the inviting yourself. The associates should also seek permission from the Buzrug before accepting the invitation.
4. Be hospitable to the guest and tend to his needs and comfort. Feed him a sumptuous meal (within one's means) at least on one occasion. The guest has a right of three days.
5. When sending food to the guest, ensure that it is covered.
6. When the guest is departing, see him off the door. This is Sunnat.
7. The host should not overwhelm the guest with his continuous presence. He should leave the guest free. The guest should be left to eat as he pleases.
8. People sometimes stare at the guest while he is eating, taking note of what and how much he is eating. The guest is irked by this behaviour.
9. When the guest arrives, show him the toilets so that he is not inconvenienced if he suddenly has to answer the call of nature.
10. As soon as the guest arrives, make arrangements for his eating. Whatever is easily available and could be prepared quickly should be arranged. If by the means, more sumptuous meals may be arranged later.

11. Do not go out of your way in acquiring things for the guest. Whatever good things are easily available, make do with them. Do not be unnecessarily formal.
12. The host should not merely deliver the food to the guest and leave thereafter. He should remain to see to the further needs of the guest. While keeping a watchful eye on the guest, the host should not stare at the guest nor make him aware of his attention. He should merely cast an occasional glance to ascertain whether the guest requires anything more.
13. When there are two guests, treat them with equality.

Malfoozaat

1. A guest (dhaif) is one who arrives solely on account of friendship. The right (Haqq) of such a guest devolves solely on the person whom the guest came to visit.

   A traveller (musaafir or ibnus sabeel) is one who has come for some work or need. In the process he arrives to greet. The right of the musaafir is over all the neighbours (in the locality) in the Kifaayah category, i.e,. a single person entertaining the musaafir will suffice to discharge the duty on behalf of the entire neighbourhood.

2. When I went to Dhaka on the invitation of the Nawaab, Ulama from various parts of Bengal came to meet me. I told all of them to make their own food arrangements. When this reached the ears of the Nawaab he instructed his manager in charge of the food arrangements to notify me that all the Ulama should have their melas at his place. I informed him that they (the Ulama) were my honoured friends. They were not people who merely tagged along with me. I shall not tell them. He should himself invite them if he so wishes and if they accept, it is their pleasure. He then invited them all individually. In this method their respect and esteem were ensured whereas this would not have been the case if they had joined in the eating merely on my account.

3. Once a bid'ati durwaish (saintly person) was the guest of Hadhrat Maulana Nanotwi (rahmatullah alayh) who honoured the guest considerably. Someone informed Maulana Gangohi (rahmatullah alayh) of this. Maulana Gangohi said that "this was not good". The informer narrated this comment to Maulana Nanotwi who said:

   "Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) honoured even kuffaar guests."

   This informant conveyed this reply to Maulana Gangohi, who commented:

   "In honouring a kaafir there is no danger (to imaan), but in honouring a bid'ati there is danger."

   When the informant once again conveyed this comment to Maulana Nanotwi, he reprimanded him and forbade him from carrying messages to and fro.

4. We should steadfastly adhere to Islamic simplicity. When we desire to be somewhat extravagant in entertaining guests, we should bear in mind the limits of Islamic moderation. Be not wasteful. In observance of moderation is our respect. But, nowadays Muslims regard respect and dignity obtainable in emulating western culture. They emulate western dress, appearance and styles in all facets of life. Truly, there is no respect and honour in such emulation.

5. Once Imaam Shaff'i (rahmatullah alayh) was guest of a certain person. It was the practice of this host to hand a written menu to the servant who would prepare all the foods listed for the occasion. One day Imaam Shaff'i took the menu from the slave and added to the list a certain delicacy of which he was very fond. When the host saw the new dish, he enquired from the slave the reason for the additional variety. The slave informed his master that the food was prepared at the request of the guest. This pleased the host so much that in happiness he emancipated the slave.

6. It is one of my practices to differentiate my guests at meal times. If a number of guests are present I do not gather them all at once to have meals together. If the guests are strangers to one another, I do not feed them together. However, if I join them, then only do I have a single session for meals, for then I act on behalf of them all.

   The reason for this practice is that people are of different temperaments, cultural background and persuasions. When strangers are seated together for meals, some people are not able to relax and eat freely and informally. They feel inhibited.

The Aadaab of Khidmat (service to others)

1. Some persons do not prefer accepting service from others. The one who wishes to render service to such persons should not insist on doing so. The one who is served is perplexed and inconvenienced by such service. The attitude of a person can be understood either by his explicit refusal or by some other indication.

2. Upon accomplishing a duty which someone has requested of you, inform him after it has been done. In most cases, he will be waiting in expectation.

3. Rendering physical service to one's Shaikh on the first occasion of meeting him is very irksome to him. Should one be eager to render service to the Shaikh, one should first establish an informal and friendly relationship.

4. While there is comfort in khidmat, there are three conditions to it (khidmat).

* Sincerity : The motive of rendering the service must be nothing other than muhabbat (affection). Most people utilize khidmat as a medium for the attainment of motives.

* Congeniality: The hearts of the khaadim (the one who renders the service) and the makhdoom (the one who is being served) should be at one. There should be congeniality (munasabat) between them. They should not be strangers.
* Ability : The Khaadim should know how to render the service he is to undertake.

5. Service rendered to Muslims in Makkah Muazzamah should be regarded as worship and good fortune provided there is no Shar'i prohibition involved in rendering the service.
6. Respect and honour people according to their rank.
7. As far as possible aid a person in need. If you are unable to assist intercede on his behalf so that someone else may render the assistance. However, when interceding first establish whether your intercession will not inconvenience the person.
8. By assisting orphans one will be blessed with the companionship of Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) in Jannat.
9. Those who earn and see to the needs of widows and needy relatives, obtain the thawaab of Jihaad.
10. Aiding the mazloom (one against whom injustice or oppression is committed) is very necessary. Sympathy for the zaalim (oppressor) is to prevent from committing injustices.
11. The service of giving people water to drink is an act of great thawaab. Rendering this act in a place where water is available in abundance is the equivalent of emancipating a slave. Where water is less, the thawaab of rendering this act is the equivalent of resurrecting to life a dead person.
12. By assisting someone with insignificant items, e.g. some salt for the food, the thawaab is as if one has prepared the food.

13. Serve your parents even though they happen to be non-Muslims. Obey parents in all things lawful in the Shariat. (In the process of serving and obeying non-Muslim parents, the law of the Shariat should not be violated). If, for example, one's non-Muslim father dies and one's mother wishes one to participate in the funeral service, such obedience and service will not be permissible. In short, service and obedience to parents should be within the confines of Islam.)
14. Meeting with and rendering service to the friends of one's parents after their death are also acts which are regarded in Islam as service to parents.
15. If one's parents had died while they were displeased with one, then one should always make dua and istighfaar for them. It is hoped that Allah Ta'ala will ensure that they become happy with their children. (Thus the relationship will be restored on the Day of Qiyaamah). Be kind and render service to relatives even though they may be unkind to you.
16. Service to neighbours occupies a very important place in Islam. Be kind to them. Tolerate their indiscreetness and disturbances. Do not do anything which will upset them or annoy them. If they are in need, tend to them as best as you can

The Aadaab of Hadyah (Gift)

1. If you wish to make a request to a person for something, then do not make any gift to him. The one to whom the gift is made under such circumstances is either put to disgrace or is indirectly compelled to comply with the request of the person who presented the gift. (Such a gift will in fact be a bribe).
2. When talking a gift along the journey to present to someone, do not take so much as to create difficulty for you along the journey.

3. Immediately after accepting a gift it is not proper to give it (the gift) in charity in the presence of the person who made the gift. Contribute it in the absence of the person in a way which will not be known to him, otherwise he will be grieved.
4. The motive for making gifts should be only muhabbat (love and affection), not the fulfilment of one's needs or request. Therefore, if you have a need to present to a person, do not make a gift to him at the same time. It will then appear as if the gift was motivated by the ulterior motive.
5. The actual purpose of making a gift is to strengthen the bond of affection. Therefore, such ways which inconvenience the one for whom the gift is intended, should not be adopted.
6. Make the gift in privacy, not in public. The muhda ilayh (the person to whom the gift was made) is entitled to make public the gift.
7. If the gift is in kind (i.e not cash) then endeavour to ascertain the likes and preferences of the muhda ilayh. Present something which the muhda ilayh prefers.
8. The amount of the gift should not be so much that it constitutes a difficulty for the muhda ilayh. It does not matter how less or of little value the gift may be. People of piety are not concerned with the amount of quantity of the gift. They look at the sincerity of the one who makes the gift.
9. If for some reason acceptance of the gift is refused, then respectfully request the reason for the refusal. For the future bear it in mind. But do not insist to obtain the reason at the time. If the gift is refused because of a misunderstanding created by a baseless supposition or misinformation which reached the muhda ilayh, then it is correct, in fact better, to immediately notify him of the error.

10. Do not make a gift to anyone as long as he is not convinced of your sincerity.
11. Do not make gifts in such a way that taking delivery of it becomes difficult and onerous on the muhda ilayh.
12. A gift tendered with the motive to obtain some benefit in lieu is, in fact, bribery. It is not hadyah.
13. If the motive underlying the gift is to obtain thawaab in the Aakhriat, then too, it is not hadyah, but will be Sadqah (charity).
14. Some people labour under the impression that when going to visit a Saint it is necessary to present a gift to him. This is incorrect. To make it a rule to present him with a gift whenever one visits him is harmful to all parties concerned.
15. Accept gifts from such persons who do not expect anything in return, otherwise it will lead to ill-feeling ultimately. However, the one who has accepted the gift should endeavour to reciprocate. If you are not by the means to give anything in return, at least praise the person and express your gratitude. Mention his favour in the presence of others. Expressing gratitude by saying :

    "May Allah reward your goodness."

    will suffice. One who does not express gratitude to a person who did a favour, does not express gratitude to even Allah Ta'ala.
16. It is improper to obliterate (i.e. to forget about) a gift which one has received, for this displays lack of appreciation. Similarly, it is improper to advertise with pride the great value or abundance of the gifts received.
17. It is not permissible to accept gifts from mentally deranged persons.
18. It is not permissible to accept gifts from na-baaligh (minor) children.
19. A gift should not be refused because of its slight value or small quantity.

20. A gift should not be refused on account of pride or arrogance.
21. If one detects that a gift is not presented because of sincerity, but is motivated by some ulterior motive, then such a gift should be refused.
22. It is permissible to refuse a gift if one detects that the gift is made on account of one's need or poverty.
23. A Qari who has recited the Qur'aan should not be given a present (hadyah) because of his recital. If a gift is made to him, he should refuse acceptance.
24. Hadyah (gift) should not be presented while making musaafahah (shaking hands).
25. When sending hadyah with someone, ensure that the person whom you are sending is reliable so that there be no need to obtain a receipt or acknowledgement letter from the muhda ilayh (the one to whom the gift is made). Requesting acknowledgement from the muhda ilayh is an irksome imposition on him and it is uncultural.
26. When a gift is made, the price of the item should not be asked of the one who makes the gift. Similarly, others who happen to be present when the gift is made should also not query the price or value of the article in the presence of the muhdi (the one who makes the gift).

Malfoozat regarding Hadyah

1. During a journey the people of a certain town had decided to make a collection and present me with a gift on my departure. When I was informed of this, I forbade them. I warned them never to do this. One evil in this method of collecting is that sometimes the donor does not contribute wholeheartedly, but gives as a result of indirect pressure since the collectors may be prominent men of the town. Secondly, the purpose of hadyah is to increase the muhabbat and friendship. Thus, even if the contributor gave wholeheartedly, the aim of the hadyah is lost since the identity of the giver will not be known to the muhda ilayh. Thirdly, sometimes it becomes necessary to refuse the gift because of some valid reason. This reason is related to the muhdi (giver). But, in view of his identity being unknown, this becomes difficult because of the collective hadyah. Therefore, whoever wishes to present a gift, should do so himself or without having been exhorted, he should send it with some reliable person. Alternatively, an accompanying letter may be sent with the gift.

2. During one journey some persons, taking me to their homes attempted to present hadyah to me. I prevented them from this. I advised them that if others come to know of this, they may gain the impression that it is customary to present gifts in this way. Those who are unable to afford will be put to anxiety when they call me to their homes. They will not know whether they should call me or not. If they do, they will not be able to present gifts and if they do not call me, they will be left with regret. Whoever wishes to make a gift should come to my place of residence, talk with me so that my liberty is not curtailed.
3. When some people present gifts to me it appears to me that either it is onerous on them or onerous on me. I feel like refusing such gifts. However, since it is in conflict with the Sunnah to refuse gifts. I used to be bothered about this. But, I obtained clarification in this regard from one Hadith. Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said that when a pillow or perfume is presented, accept it. Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) stated the reason for this acceptance in the following terms:

   "For verily, it is light in weight."

   This implies that if a gift is onerous on one's disposition, it may be refused.
4. Once a great Aalim and Aarif raised the query of accepting gifts after having anticipated them. He said:

"Sometimes when seeing certain sincere friends who usually present gifts, the thought arises in the mind that perhaps they will give hadyah. Then, it just happens that they make gifts. On such occasions there is some trepidation in the heart since this form of hadyah is known as Ishraafun Nafs. In the state of Ishraafun Nafs acceptance of hadyah is contrary to the Sunnah. I, therefore, hesitate to accept such gifts."

(Ishraafun Nafs means anticipation by the nafs which expected to obtain a gift.) Hadhrat commented:

"The Hadith does not intend this type of Ishraaf. The ishraaf mentioned in the Hadith is that which is followed by dejection if the person does not present a gift. If the muhda ilayh is not dejected when the person does not make a gift, then there is no harm.

5. Someone sent a money order as a hadyah to Hadhrat Thaanvi (rahmatullah alayh). The money order was returned to the sender. Along with the money order the sender had requested the reason underlying certain Shar'i rulings. In reply, Hadhrat wrote:

   "As long as we are not well known to each other and congeniality (munaasabat) has not been created, I feel embarrassed to accept a gift. Mutual understanding and munaasabat are acquired by frequent meeting or correspondence. Both these acts are within your control, not in mine. I have not recognized who you are merely by you having written your name. I have there for returned your money order. The proof of the lack of mutual understanding and congeniality is quite apparent from your letter.

   You have asked the reason for the masaa-il (rules of the Shariah), but you have no right for this. Without having established sufficient mutual understanding and congeniality, do not again send the gift. As long as I do not accept the money it does not become my property. As far as Shariah is concerned, you need have no concern since it remains your property which you may bring into your own use."

6. A man presented a gift of one paisa (a coin of very little value). He gave one anna and requested the change of three paisa. The anna was converted into four paisa in the gathering and three paisa were returned to him while Hadhrat kept the one paisa. Hadhrat commented:

   "There can be no question of riya (ostentation or show) in this gift."

7. Without consulting Hadhrat a man purchased some sweetmeats from the bazaar and presented it to Hadhrat who indicate his displeasure. Hadhrat commented:

   "Since you have bought the sweet meats from here you should have unhesitatingly asked me first. You have spent your money, but the sweet meats are of no use to me. I have no children. My wife and myself do not relish sweet meats. Now it may be distributed only to others although the favour remains on me.

   What pleasure can there be in accepting such a hadyah? However, taking into consideration your feelings, I say: Half for me and half for you so that you too may understand the effect of eating something without the heart having been pleased."

8. A stranger presented a prayer-carpet to Hadhrat. Hadhrat said:

   "My practice is not to accept gifts on the occasion of the first greeting, especially from a person with whom I do not have close and informal contact."

   The stranger said: "I have brought it by the command of Allah. I was commanded to purchase a prayer-mat and present it to you."

Hadhrat said:

"The command of Allah does come to Ambiya.

It does not come to those who are not Nabis."

The stranger:

"It was inspired into my heart."

Hadhrat: "It has been inspired into my heart to refrain from accepting gifts which are presented improperly."

Stranger: "Show me the proper way."

Hadhrat:

"You present me with a gift and you ask me to show you the way! You have no shame. Do you want me also to become shameless and without honour?"

9. Once Hadhrat said:

   "Whenever the need arises for me to refuse a gift, I start to shiver with fear. Is it perhaps not ignoring of a ni'mat (favour of Allah)?"

   For if it is, bounties from Allah Ta'ala will be terminated."

10. "After much experience did I formulate principles regarding the acceptance of gifts. I know what transpires in this regard, hence my sternness. Even Hadhrat Maulana Muhamad Qaasin (rahmatullah alayh) who was an embodiment of moral excellence held similar views regarding gifts. He would say:

    "A gift which is presented by a person who thinks us to be in need, is not acceptable even though in reality we may be in need. However, the one who presents the hadyah has no right to give us hadyah thinking that we are in need. Gifts given in muhabbat (love and affection) should be accepted."

It was also among the practices of Hadhrat Maulana Qaasin Saheb to refuse gifts which were given to him while he was on journey. Explaining his reason for this, he said:

"On seeing us, the urge to present the gift entered into the heart. It is, therefore, quite possible that the gift was not motivated by true muhabbat. It is also possible that muhabbat may be the motive, but the gift was given in a moment of enthusiasm. After the dissipation of the enthusiasm it is possible that the giver may regret (his act of having given a large amount)."

These men are wise men. "There is great wisdom and knowledge in their statements."

11. Frequently people tender gifts (of money) to saintly people while making musaafahah (shaking hands). This is highly improper and wrong. Musaafahah is an act of pure ibaadat.

    Worldly considerations should not be mingled with it.

12. A man was presented a Tasbeeh (rosary) to Hadhrat. Another person who was looking at the beautiful tasbeeh enquired the price of it. Hadhrat said:

    "When a hadyah is presented the value should not be asked. This is among the etiquettes of hadyah. The giver is displeased by this on account of the possibility that the gift will not be appreciated if it is of little value."

The Aadaab of intercession

1. The way adopted to intercede (on behalf of another) should not in any way curtail the liberty of the one with whom you are interceding. Nowadays, intercession is in fact compulsion. Indirect pressure is applied. A man will take advantage of his prominence or rank to compel another to submit to his request. This is not intercession. Such intercession is not permissible.

2. If someone extracts service, etc., from another on the strength of his relationship with a man of province or rank and it becomes discernible that the service or aid is not offered freely and wholeheartedly, but has been forthcoming solely on account of the relationship which the taker of the service enjoys with some prominent person, then acceptance of such aid or service is unlawful. As a result of the relationship, the one who supplies the aid entertains the notion that if he does not provide the requested assistance, the man of prominence will be displeased. Thus, to make a request to someone to fulfil a need or supply some aid on this basis is haraam.
3. In any matter, intercession should not be made without having made investigation.
4. It will be permissible to intercede on behalf of another if the work or deed happens to be a waajib (compulsory) act.
5. It is not permissible to impose any kind of pressure, direct or indirect, on the person to whom the intercession is directed.
6. In actual fact, intercession (sifaarish) is a branch of mashwarah (advice) which cannot be imposed on anyone.
7. If a person rejects the intercession, he will be acting fully within his right. It is improper to take offence if one's intercession is not accepted.
8. If by indications one realizes that the intercession cannot be rejected, e.g. the person is under some obligation, hence he has no alternative other than complying, the such intercession is not permissible.

Malfoozaat pertaining to intercession

1. A father, bringing along his son, commenced to complain about a certain maktab (elementary Deeni School). He complained that the principal had expelled his child. I (Hadhrat Thaanvi) explained to him nicely that I have no say in that maktab. The man commented: "I heard that you are the head of that maktab." I informed him that my only relationship with the maktab was that the salaries were given via myself. I have no say in the management of the maktab. The man again started to complain about the principal. I told him that there is no beneficial result in this conversation other than gheebat. After a while, when he was about to leave and shake hands, he repeated his complaint and accused the principal of having been unjust for having expelled his son. In view of the fact, as mentioned earlier, I had informed him of the actual position and had stopped him from continuing the discussion of the complaint. I was very much perplexed by his repeated renewal of the complaint, hence I questioned him with some abruptness. He attempted to present some excuses, but all futile and in vain. He departed in this very condition.

2. Hadhrat Bareerah (radhiallahu anha) was an emancipated female slave. While she was yet a slave she was in the Nikah of Hadhrat Mugheeth (radhiallahu anhu). On being emancipated she invoked her right of abrogating the Nikah. Hadhrat Mugheeth loved her dearly, hence he wandered around the streets sobbing at the separation. Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), overcome with pity, interceded on his behalf and advised Bareerah:

   "O Bareerah! Marry Mugheeth."

   The reality and nature of intercession will become apparent from the ensuing discussion. Hadhrat Bareerah asked:

   "O Rasululluh! Is this a command or an intercession?"

   Indeed her question was wonderful and subtle. In reply, Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said:

   "It is an intercession."

   Bareerah said: "I do not accept it." Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) remained silent. Let some mureed today say to his shaikh that he does not accept his (the Shaikh's) intercession. The peer (spiritual guide) will quickly retort that the mureed has become a renegade.

Nowadays spiritual mentors should not intercede. It has become common nowadays to accuse one of refusing to assist even verbally when one refuses to intercede on account of the general corruption prevalent today. One is accused of being miserly. Truly, it is easier to spend wealth, but where I detect that a person will accept the request on account of our pressure, then to make an intercession seems like maut (death) because of the suspicion that the person may sustain some loss by having been constrained to act according to the intercession.

3. A gentlemen said to Hadhrat Thanavi (rahmatullah alayh):

   "I wish my son to learn dentistry. If Hadhrat will write a letter of intercession to the dentist in Lahore, it is hoped he will pay greater attention."

   Hadhrat replied:

   "I have no objection in writing the letter. But the main thing is that there has to be munaasabat (congeniality) between the teacher and the pupil. It is not proper to first apply the pressure of sifaarish (intercession). The consequence is that whether one approves or not and whether there is munaasabat or not. One is constrained to act accordingly. If an intercession is first made, then the conditions which he (the particular dentist) normally stipulates for acquiring this profession cannot be applied freely on account of his liberty having been curtailed by the intercession. Anyway, commence the work. Afterwards, I shall intercede for special attention. On the contrary, an intercession in the very beginning will constrict his heart. If all things are done correctly on the basis of principles then there is no difficulty and no perplexity."

4. Although those who wish me to intercede are not favourably disposed to my way of intercession, nevertheless, I regard transgression of this method (of mine) as a violation of the Shariat. People request that I should write the intercession in forceful terms to apply pressure so that the request is accepted. Since when is it ever permissible to apply pressure on others? How can a person be pressurized into acceptance of the request? My abstention from this pressurizing method is described as bukhl (miserliness) by people. In reply I say: To benefit a person is Mustahab. But to impose a difficulty on a person is haraam.

5. A newcomer arrived and requested Hadhrat to intercede on his behalf in some matter. Hadhrat said:

   "Regarding intercession first listen to an introduction. Allah Ta'ala had commanded Nabi Musa (alayhis salaam) to go to Khidr (alayhis salaam) for the purpose of gaining knowledge (in a certain branch of (esotericism). When Musa (alayhis salaam) met Khidr (alayhis salaam), he (Khidr) asked the reason for his coming. Musa (alayhis salaam) replied: May I follow you so that you teach me of the knowledge which has been imparted to you?' Inspite of Khidr's knowledge being insignificant compared to the knowledge of such a great Nabi as Musa (alayhis salaam), the latter said: 'May I follow you.....' It is noteworthy that Musa (alayhis salaam) did not say: 'I have been sent by Allah Ta'ala'. If in fact Musa (alayhis salaam) had mentioned this, it would have amounted to a very high category of intercession. From this should be understood that the type of intercession which one is nowadays required to write out, sometimes weighs heavy on another person. Truly speaking, the Ambiya are the true repositories of true knowledge. It is most significant that Musa (alayhis salaam) did not reveal that Allah Ta'ala had sent him because on hearing that his arrival was by the command of Allah, Khidr (alayhis salaam) would not have had any liberty to speak freely or to stipulate any conditions. Thus, Khidr (alayhis salaam) had freely imposed conditions on Musa (alayhis salaam). We learn also from this episode that one should not attempt to derive benefit from someone's companionship without his consent. From this it is learnt that the practice of some visiting students to join in classes without consent is erroneous."

The Aadaab of training children

1. Playfully do not do any act with a child which may be a danger to life or limb, e.g., in playfulness do not fling a child up in the air; do not playfully hold its hands and suspend it from a window, etc.
2. Do not playfully chase a child, for perhaps he may slip and hurt himself.
3. Do not speak shameful things in the presence of children.
4. While the thawaab is considerable for training children in general, caring for and training girls are acts of greater merit and more thawaab.
5. When training children neither be too strict (harsh) nor too lax.
6. Children should be taught not to eat things people give them. They should bring such things home and eat them in the presence of their parents if they consent.
7. Teach them to wash their hands before eating and to eat or drink with their right hands.
8. Inculcate in them the habit of eating less so that they are saved from sickness and greed.
9. Inculcate in children the habit of cleaning their teeth, especially with a Miswaak.

10. Teach them to refrain from asking any of their needs from anyone other than their seniors (parents, grand-parents, etc.).
11. Teach them never to accept gifts from anyone without the consent of their elders.
12. Do not assume that they will automatically acquire manners and etiquette when they have grown up. Inculcate good character in them from a tender age. No one learns of his own accord. By reading they will gain the knowledge of good culture, but still they will lack the essential training which was denied to them in childhood. Lack of training will result in the grown-up children always behaving unculturally. Furthermore, they will, without thinking, cause difficulties and inconvenience to others.
13. Teach children to act with shame, especially when answering the call of nature. They should not reveal themselves to others.
14. When your child has wronged someone or is at fault, never act partially. Do not side with your child, especially in his presence. To do so is to corrupt his character.
15. Be watchful of your children's behaviour towards servants and the children of servants. Ensure that they do not trouble the servants or their children. On account of their inferior social rank, they may not complain, but in their hearts they will curse. Even if they do not curse, the misfortune of sin and injustice will be tasted.
16. As far as possible, endeavour that they learn under suitably qualified teachers.
17. Do not punish them while in anger. Either remove them from your presence when you are angry or go away. Later, when the anger has subsided, reflect thrice and then only mete out appropriate punishment.
18. When the need arises to punish, do not use a heavy stick nor fists. Do not kick the child nor slap it in the face. Also do not hit on the head.

19. Teach children the full names of their parents and grandparents as well as their addresses. Now and then ask them about this so that they remember. The benefit of this is that, Allah forbid, should they get lost, they will be able to state their identity to the one who finds them. In this way they will be returned home.
20. Children who are studying should be given such nutrition which is good for the brain.
21. When the need arises for girls to leave the home precincts, do not adorn them with jewellery.
22. Emphasise to girls that they should not play with boys. The character of both boys and girls will be corrupted by such intermingling.
23. If a boy from another house comes to your home, instruct the girls to go out of sight even though the boy may be small.
24. If any children come to you for education, do not take service from them. Treat them like your own children.
25. Teach children not to face the Qiblah in the toilet nor to turn their back towards the Qiblah in the toilet. Teach them the rules of tahaarat (purification) of cleaning themselves in the toilet.
26. Do not take children along to invitations. Many people do so. Their habits are corrupted by doing so.
27. When a child is obstinate in demanding a thing, do not fulfil its demand.

Malfoozaat pertaining to children

1. The practice of employing unqualified teachers for the elementary education of children is erroneous. People labour under the impression that the elementary kitaabs are simple, hence there is no need for a highly qualified Aalim. I say that for elementary education there is a need for a highly qualified expert.

2. Most people make no proper arrangement for the training of children during their childhood. They say: 'They are still kids'. Habits are inculcated during early childhood days. Habits inculcated in childhood are enduring. Childhood is the time for developing moral character and for inculcating good moral habits and culture.
3. A person once made a statement of great wisdom. It deserves to be written in gold. He said that if a child requests something, either fulfil the request the same time or, if you have refused the request, then do not fulfil its stubbornness. Even if it then obstinately demands and cries for it, do not fulfil the request under such circumstances. If you submit to the child's obstinacy, it will develop this habit. Much wisdom is required when training children.
4. Nowadays people rear their children in the way cows are reared. They are well-fed and fattened. The ultimate end of the fattened cattle is the slaughter-house. Similarly, people feed their children well, adorn them with garments and jewels and rear them in luxury. The ultimate end of such children is Jahannum (hell). In the process the parents are also punished since by their provision of luxuries and abstention from training, the children grew up ignorant of Salaat, Saum, etc. Some unintelligent parents exceed all limits in that they keep their children entirely unaware of all things of Islam.
5. I am always advising that during school holidays, children who are attending schools should be left in the suhbat (companionship) of Ahlullah (saintly persons - the Shaikhs of Tasawwuf). Even if they do not perform Salaat there, at least their ideas and beliefs will be rectified.

Freedom has now exceeded all limits. Such unbridled freedom was not seen among those who acquired western education in earlier times. Pious persons reared and trained them, hence they did not fall prey to unbridled liberalism. Now, the training is under the instruction of westernized persons. The danger for the future is greater. This is a very delicate age, an age to be extremely careful.

6. Gentlemen! How sad and lamentable is it! There is time for sports but there is no time for moral training. It is imperative that for your children you appoint a time daily for moral training. Just as you have fixed times in the daily programme for various activities, so too, have a time for your child to go daily to a Musjid or an Aalim where he can sit down and acquire Deeni guidance. If such a spiritual guide is not found in your town, then during the holiday season send him to a place where there is such a Bazrug. During the holiday season the child has nothing to do. The unfortunate child during the holiday season wanders around day and night not even performing Salaat nor fasting. But the parents remain blissfully happy on account of themselves being regular with Salaat and Saum. However, they remain unaware that on the Day of Qiyaamah they will enter Jahannum along with their children since they were the actual cause of their offsprings' deflection from Islam. These are the children of Muslims..... children who have been reared in the laps of Muslim ladies, but will be assigned to Jahannum. You are happy that you have made your child a B.A., a M.A. But, you have left them on the brink of Jahannum. The eyes have become so blind that the Road leading to Jannat is not visible.

The Aadaab of correspondence

1. Do not read the letters of others. If a letter is not intended for you, do not read it.
2. Do not read any correspondence which is in front of a person. Perhaps the correspondence was meant to have been kept hidden from you. Even if the papers in front of a person happen to be printed matter (not letters), then too, do not read them. It is quite possible that the person concerned does not wish it to be known that he has in his possession that type of literature. (Some people when sitting by an acquaintance or friend have the habit of picking up letters/printed papers, etc., which may be in front on the desk. It is not permissible to do so).
3. Write very clearly. The topic should not be expressed ambiguously.
4. In each letter write your address fully. It is not the duty of the addressee to remember one's address which may have been furnished in an earlier letter.
5. If, in a letter, reference is made to a matter which was mentioned in an earlier letter, then include a copy of the earlier letter. This will save the addressee the inconvenience of searching for the earlier letter. Often one cannot even remember the facts stated in the earlier letter. (This rule will not apply where the practice of systematic filing exists, e.g., as we find nowadays in all offices. However, where private persons are concerned, a copy of the earlier letter should be included. - Translators).
6. Do not write so many questions in a single letter, which pose an inconvenience to the addressee. After receiving a reply, write the further questions.
7. If the addressee is one who has many occupations, do not encumber him with requests to convey your Salaams to others; similarly, do not impose this task on any of your seniors.
8. It is disrespectful to write to a person a request pertaining to something involvement in which is not appropriate for the addressee.
9. When a reply is wanted, enclose a reply-paid self-addressed envelope.
10. Do not write illegibly nor in such faint pencil which makes reading difficult. Do not cram the words nor the lines one on top of the other.
11. It is not permissible to utilize the stationery of one's employers for one's private letters.

12. Some people, instead of sending a pre-paid self-addressed envelope, enclose stamps to cover postage. This is incorrect. It is necessary to enclose a self-addressed, postage-paid envelope. This will save the addressee the inconvenience of having to procure an envelope, address it and affix stamps to it.
13. Do not be wasteful with writing paper. If a letter consists of only a couple of lines, do not use the whole page. Tear the blank portion off.
14. If the paper is of good quality, then use both sides to write on. Do not waste the one side. Allah Ta'ala says in the Qur'aan Majeed: "Do not waste. Verily, the wasteful one's are the brothers of the shayaateen."
15. Do not use extravagant titles or flattery when writing. Be moderate in addressing.
16. Do not be too brief in writing. Address elders with appropriate titles of respect.
17. A single letter should not comprise different topics.
18. The letter should be written in the language of the addressee.
19. When there is a need to discuss more than one subject in a single letter, do not write confusingly. Number the subjects and write in different paragraphs.
20. Explain the question thoroughly or clearly so that the addressee is not constrained to write seeking clarity.
21. An important letter or a letter for which a reply is required should be sent by post, not with a person who happens to be passing by.
22. Think before writing a sentence. Do not write whatever you feel. Consider the feelings of the addressee.
23. Fold the letter neatly and insert it correctly in the envelope. Do not insert it carelessly in such a way that the adhesive on the envelope sticks to the letter as well. This creates a difficulty for the addressee. Sometimes a portion of the letter is torn while opening it.
24. Do not unnecessarily write lengthy letters. Replying lengthy letters is onerous on the addressee.
25. It is nonsensical and futile to write a letter regarding a matter which can be stated verbally, e.g. the person concerned resides in the same town and is easily reachable.
26. When sending a money order indicate the purpose of the money in the space provided for a message. It is an error to desist from stating the purpose on account of a letter which will explain the purpose of the money. Sometimes the letter goes astray in the post and the addressee is left in the dark.
27. The letters of females should be endorsed with the signature of a mahram male (husband, father, etc.). This closes the door to mischief.

Malfoozaat pertaining to writing

1. In a letter someone posed several questions. In the same letter he informed that he was sending a money order of five rupees. In expectation of the money order Hadhrat did not immediately reply the letter. The intention was to reply after receipt of the money order so that the receipt could also be sent together. Several days passed by and it is not known for what reason the money order did not arrive. Finally after waiting a number of days, Hadhrat wrote to the sender (of the letter).

   "Either you should not have informed in your letter of your intention to send the money order or in the same letter you should not have written queries for which replies were required."

2. From a certain place an insured envelope containing 50 rupees arrived. Without opening the envelope it was not possible to ascertain the purpose for which the monev was sent. It was quite possible that after opening the letter I would have discovered that money was intended for a purpose which I was not able to fulfil. In that event I would have had to return the money. It was also possible that the purpose for the money might have been unclear, necessitating a letter of query from me, and until I had not acquired clarification I would have been constrained to hold the money in trust (amaanat). In the event of having to return it, I would have had to unnecessarily undertake the responsibility of returning it. In the past, it did happen that without my asking, people had called me to their place and had sent along travelling expenses, but I was unable to go. If the avenue of expenditure for the money was not defined properly or may be it was defined correctly, but it required investigation in order to dispense the money in the stated avenue necessitating a letter of query from me to the sender, then while awaiting a reply which may be delayed, I would be obligated to him. Once who has many duties to attend to is greatly vexed by such things. For this reason I returned the envelope.

With persons of my disposition it is essential to firstly write requesting or seeking permission, then only should the money be sent. Even with those who do not have the attitude which I have, it is meritorious to first write informing them and seeking their permission. Alternatively, when sending a money order specify the purpose of the money in the space provided for a message so that the addressee knows exactly what to do - to accept it or to return it.

3. The essence of all these aadaab is that others should not be burdened or inconvenienced by any act or statement. There should be no difficulty or perplexity imposed on others.

   This in fact is the essence of noble conduct. By remembering this principle there is no need for elaborate explanation. In regard to this principle it is required that one reflect before making a statement or doing an act. Think if your word or deed is not perhaps hurtful to others.

   By adopting this habit, commission of errors will be less. After a few days of practice the correct disposition will be inculcated. Then there will be no need for reflection. Speaking or acting correctly will become one's nature. In fact, these things are all natural in man.

4. The prohibition of reading the letters of others

Question:

Is it permissible to read someone's letter without his permission?

Answer:

It is not permissible. However, its prohibition is conditional. Among the reasons for this prohibition is the intention of causing harm to the writer of the letter.

The Hadith states:

"A true Muslim is one from whose tongue and hand Muslims are safe."

Revealing the secrets of others is an act of harm or hurt to the persons concerned. In most cases this is the motive for the desire to surreptitiously read the letters of others.

If the desire is not to harm anyone and the letter is read out of curiosity then it will be known as a laghw act which is also forbidden. Allah Ta'ala says in the Qur'aan Shareef:

"They (the Mu'mineen) turn away from laghw (futility)."

If the purpose of reading the letter is not the desire to harm nor is it laghw, but is motivated by a genuine good intention, then the prohibition will be waived, e.g., parents censoring the letters of their children; an Ustaadh reading the letters of his pupils; a shaikh reading the letters of his mureeds or a sultan reading the letters of his subjects in the interests of the safety and security of the land. Such acts of reading are at times permissible and at time necessary. Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) had ordered that the letter of Haatib Ibn Balta- ah be forcibly taken from his messenger.

5. From Pakistan came a letter from a person who desired his islaah (reformation). The writer had left one side of the page blank and commenced on another page. In my reply I asked him for the reason for leaving the one side of the sheet blank. Is this not waste? Allah Ta'ala says : 'Verily, the wasters are the brothers of the Shayaateen'. After a few days he wrote back saying: 'Your brief comment has reformed me. When even such an insignificant matter falls within the purview of waste and is sinful, then undoubtedly, all other wasteful expenditures will be major sins. I have now abandoned israaf (waste.)"

(This particular malfooz is of Hadhrat Maulana Masihullah Saheb, the Khalifah of Hadhrat Maulana Ashraf Ali Thanavi (rahmatullah alayh).

6. Hadhrat Thanavi wrote a reply on half a sheet and tore off the other half. He commented:

   "This extra piece of paper can be used for the purpose of writing Ta'weez. If I had not torn it off, it would have gone wasted."

   If the paper was sent by the writer (to be used for replying), Hadhrat would make use of the excess paper only if the sender was a close associate. If not, he would return the excess sheet to the sender.

7. Even if I write a letter to any of my students for any of my needs. I enclose a prepaid self-addressed envelope. Why should I impose any inconvenience and difficulty on them especially when the need is mine? This appears in conflict with intelligence. Some sincere friends even complain to me about this action of mine, saying that there is no need for sending reply-paid enveloped to them. My answer to them is: Brother! This is best. Allow me to remain free and light.

8. If worldly people keep up a correspondence with Ulama, then slowly they will develop a love for the Deen. Fear (of the Deen) will not remain in them. Afterall, they are Muslims and Muslims heed admonition.

9. Above the address on an envelope was written:

   "In the protection of Shaikh Ma'roof Karkhi."

   The belief of these people is that by writing thus, the item will be protected. Take for example this very letter. The sender is under the impression that his letter can never be lost. Such beliefs are clear-cut shirk (association in the worship/power/dispensation of Allah Ta'ala). Ignorant people have fabricated this type of stores in the names of the Auliya.

10. When writing a question the words should be few but conveying the full meaning. Some people pose a question in such a way that if the addressee is not already aware of the matter he will not fully understand the question. This will necessitate the writing of a letter seeking clarification. The question should 'therefore' be fully explained, but in few words, (i.e. the question should not be unnecessarily expanded nor should the writer assume that the addressee is aware of the matter).

11. The condition of educated people today is such that whatever comes to mouth, they utter and whatever they wish to say, they write. They do not for a moment exercise restraint nor reflect on the grief and inconvenience they are causing others by their actions. There no longer remains any culture. If someone is able to write, but he lacks culture and manners, then this too is a form of Allah's Wrath. Such a person will only cause grief to others with his writing since others suffer as a result of disrespect and ill-manners.

12. It is nonsensical to write a letter when it is possible to convey the message verbally. The limits are being totally ignored. People are not in the habit of pondering and thinking before acting. Whatever they feel like doing, they do regardless of whether their action is irksome, difficult and onerous to others. They are not concerned about the peace and comfort of others.

The Aadaab of Istiftaa' (Asking a question to obtain the ruling of the Shariah)

1. When the need arises to obtain a Shar'i ruling for one's practical purposes, not for debating and arguing, then pose the question to a reliable, authoritative Aalim on whom you have confidence.
2. Ask only the mas'alah (the rule or the law). Do not ask the daleel (the proof of the rule or the basis on which the ruling is given).
3. Once a question has been posed to a reliable and an Authoritative Aalim, do not unnecessarily ask the same question to another Aalim. If, despite having taken into consideration the aforementioned facts, you are not satisfied with the answer, then refer the matter to another Aalim of the same qualifications and attributes. If his answer contradicts the answer of the first Aalim, do not refer it to him (the first Aalim) nor inform the second Aalim of the reply of the first Aalim. Fear Allah Ta'ala and remembering the Reckoning of the Aakhirah, act according to the answer which satisfies you. This act of choosing between the two contradictory rulings for one's practical purposes may be resorted to only if one had heard or learnt of something conflicting against this view prior to having referred it to another Aalim.

These are the aadaab which should be remembered whether the istiftaa' is written or verbal.

4. The question should be posed very clearly, without ambiguity, and so should be the writing: clear and legible.
5. Do not include futile and unnecessary statements in the question.

6. Write your name and address clearly. If several letters are written to the same place seeking answers. then write your name and address on each letter.
7. Send sufficient stamps to cover postage on a suitable self-addressed envelope.
8. If several questions are asked, do not write these on a postcard.
9. Number the questions and keep a copy by you.

   Inform the addressee that you have a copy of the letter, hence he should not take the trouble of repeating the questions in his answer.

Errors in general

1. Some people refer the same question to several places. Sometimes different answers are received. They are then faced with the dilemma of adopting one of the conflicting answers. Alternatively, they simply adopt the ruling which appeals to their nafs. This attitude sometimes develops into a habit and the motive for posing questions is merely to obtain a ruling to soothe the nafs. It is quite obvious that such an attitude is contrary to piety and is purely obedience to the desires of the nafs. In addition, it constitutes mocking of the Deen.
2. Sometimes the answer of one Aalim is conveyed to another Aalim. In view of temperaments differing and because of the style of the narrator in conveying the answer, sometimes an inappropriate statement or word slips from the mouth of the one to whom the answer has been conveyed. Then, in turn this statement is conveyed to the first person who had answered the question. In the passage of such messages and statements to and fro, words and meanings are changed by the carriers of the comments. In this manner the flames of a great controversy are ignited.
3. One error is to ask unnecessary questions.

4. It is wrong to ask for the dalaa-il (proofs or basis) of the masaa-il. Academic knowledge is necessary for the correct comprehension of the dalaa-il. Since this is lacking, the dalaa-il are not properly understood by laymen. When the Aalim refuses to provide the proofs, the questioner interprets the refusal as ill-manners.
5. Another error is to acquire a fatwa (ruling) merely to substantiate one's view which one had presented in a discussion. The fatwa is then displayed to the antagonist merely to silence him. In turn he writes for a fatwa to substantiate his case. In this manner a tug of war, leading to mutual dispute, rivalry and ill-feeling is initiated.

The Aadaab of the Musjid

1. Do not perform Salaat in such a place in the Musjid that the free movement of the musallis is impeded, e.g. performing Salaat at the entrance, thus preventing others from passing. Take up a position near to the Qiblah wall in corner.
2. Do not unnecessarily stand immediately behind someone's back to perform Salaat. The person in front is perturbed by this action.
3. When removing your shoes, do not shove aside the shoes of others nor remove their shoes from a place in order to put your shoes there. The place occupied by the shoes of a person is the haqq (right) of that person. On emerging from the Musjid if he does not find his shoes there, he will become worried.
4. Enter the Musjid with the right foot, reciting the Masnoon dua. When leaving, come out with the left foot, reading the appropriate Masnoon dua.
5. Maintain silence inside the Musjid and sit down respectfully. Before sitting down perform two raka'ts Tahyatul Musjid salaat. When visiting the same Musjid several times during the day, performance of Tahyatul Musjid once will suffice.

6. Do not stare about the Musjid. You are in the Court of Allah Ta'ala, hence sit with fear and in humility, engaging yourself in Salaat or Thikr.
7. Do not recite anything loudly inside the Musjid. This disturbs and distracts the musallis.
8. Do not indulge in worldly conversation.
9. Do not become involved in any worldly activity, e.g., buying, selling, worldly meeting, in the Musjid.
10. Do not enter the Musjid without wudhu.
11. Maintain silence even in the wudhu khaanah (ablution block).
12. Be dressed properly and respectfully when coming to the Musjid. (Some people enter the Musjid with T-shirts, denims or some other disrespectful and unlawful style of dress. This is highly disrespectful and is a violation of the sanctity of the Musjid.
13. The Mu'takif (one who is in I'tikaaf) should not pass wind inside the Musjid. He should go outside just as he does when having to answer the call of nature.
14. The Musjid should not be used as a short-cut to get to the other side. This is not permissible.
15. Items which have a bad odour, e.g., tobacco, fish, etc., should not be brought inside the Musjid. Similarly, after having eaten garlic or onion one should not enter immediately. First cleanse the mouth thoroughly. The same applies to those who smoke.
16. Acts rendered for worldly purposes are not deeds of thawaab. Such activities should not be carried out inside the Musjid. This applies to even writing of such ta'weez which are for worldly purposes.
17. It is disrespectful to unnecessarily climb on top of the Musjid.
18. The Imaam of a Musjid, after having given the Athaan, should not go to another Musjid for Jamaa't Salaat. Even if he happens to be the sole musalli present, he should perform his Salaat alone in the Musjid. His salaat in his Musjid is superior because to populate a Musjid is nobler than performing Salaat with Jamaa't.

19. Do not utilize haraam wealth or haraam objects in the Musjid.
20. Sometimes spray perfume inside the Musjid. (NB. It is not permissible to use perfumes containing alcohol nor is it permissible to use the type of aerosols in vogue nowadays).
21. Do not use the Musjid to make worldly announcements, e.g., for a lost item.
22. Whenever you have the opportunity, go to the Musjid and engage in Deeni acts such as Thikrullah, Tilaawaat, Nafi Salaat, etc.
23. It is not permissible to remove any of the Musjid's items or goods for personal use. All the property of the Musjid is Waqf. Every musalli has an equal right in the use of the Musjid items.

The Aadaab of things in general use

1. Anything which is used by a number of persons should be replaced in its original place after use. Replace it in the same place from where you have taken it so that someone else does not have to search for it when required.
2. Having used an item, e.g., a chair, do not leave it in the way or in a place where it becomes an obstacle for others.
3. When giving someone an item, do not throw it at him from a distance. Give it in his hand.
4. When passing something heavy, hot or a liquid or food to another, do not pass it over someone's head. Perhaps it may slip.
5. If a needle becomes stuck in cloth while sewing, do not pull it out with the teeth. It may break and hurt you.

9. Do not throw peels or any other harmful objects the pathway or road.
10. During winter wear suitable garments to give warmth. Many females wear insufficient garments during winter. This causes either colds or fever.
11. Before lying down to sleep, dust the bedding with a cloth. Sometimes harmful insects settle in the blankets.
12. After having eaten, do not leave without having removed the food. It is disrespectful to leave the food and move off. First send away the food then get up.
13. Left-overs which you are not able to eat and crumbs should not be thrown into the dirt-bin. Birds and animals eat such food. Put it in a place where animals and birds may acquire it.
14. Do not throw away a lighted match. First extinguish it.
15. Do not leave a burning lamp unattended at home. If no one is present, extinguish it.
16. When handling dangerous items such as a burning candle, boiling water, hot oil, etc., be very careful. (Some people are in the careless habit of leaving a cup of hot tea/water at the edge of the table. A small child may grab it and spill the boiling contents on him. Women are in the careless and dangerous habit of leaving cooking utensils with their handles protruding from stoves. A passing person may bump against the handle and spill the contents with grave consequences. - Translators).

17. Do not purchase unnecessary crockery or utensils. This is wasteful.
18. Always keep a stock of essential medicines at home.
19. Along a journey do not eat foods given by a stranger.
20. On a journey do not accept responsibility of caring for the goods or anything of strangers nor undertake to deliver any letter or parcel for them.
21. Take additional money with along a journey.
22. If you are in debt, then remember to pay immediately you can afford something. Pay whatever you are able to.
23. Do not give such large loans which will put you into difficulties in the event of non-payment.
24. Do not use medicine without it having been prescribed by a qualified physician, especially eye-drops.
25. Safeguard and treat with care an object which you have borrowed. After use, return it immediately. Do not wait for the owner to request the return of the item.
26. Do not use the articles of others without their permission. To do so is sinful. However, if someone did commit this sin, he should return the item to its original place so that the owner experiences no difficulty in locating it.
27. Have fixed places for your things. Always replace them in their fixed places after use.
28. Do not lift very heavy objects. Many people suffer life-long ailments and physical dislocation as a result of having lifted very heavy burdens in their younger days. In this regard women should exercise exceptional care.
29. Do not throw anything, e.g. a pebble, in playfulness. It may strike someone in the eye of hurt another.
30. If you have to pass in a gathering with a sharp instrument, keep the point or sharp edge down, covered or concealed, to avoid accidental injury to anyone.

31. Do not in jest point a sharp instrument to anyone. This is dangerous and forbidden.
32. Do not give an open knife in someone's hand. Place it down so that he may lift it himself.
33. If a hard-pressed person offers an item for sale, do not take advantage of his situation to acquire the article at a ridiculous price. Either aid him or purchase it for a fair price.
34. Do not cut off a tree which provides shade and rest for people or animals, especially if the tree is not your property. By doing so, people and animals are put to hardship. This results in athaab (divine punishment).
35. The thawaab for giving people insignificant items such as salt or a match to light the fire is as much as the thawaab one can obtain by preparing the whole meal for another.
36. Giving a drink of water to someone in a place where water is available in abundance is the equivalent in thawaab of having emancipated a slave. Giving water in a place where water is scarce is equal in thawaab to reviving dead person.
37. Do not sleep on a balcony or roof which has no protecting barrier around it.
38. Do not sit with part of your body in the sun and part in the shade.
39. Do not sleep on your stomach.
40. When a morsel of food falls from your hand, pick it up, clean it and eat it. Do not discard it in pride. Food is the ni'mat from the Divine Court. Respect it and be grateful.
41. When eating such food falls which does not require the use of all the fingers, use only three fingers. After having eaten, lick the fingers and clean the plate with the fingers. Do not leave crumbs and morsels in the plate or scattered on the cloth. In cleaning the fingers in this way, barkat increases.

42. It should be impressed on every member of the household that whenever something, e.g., food is presented by someone, they should return the utensils immediately.

The Aadaab of a promise

1. Fulfil a promise made. Do not act in conflict with a promise without any valid reason.
2. Do not make promises in haste.
3. Do not make promises pertaining to unlawful things. It is not permissible to fulfil such unlawful promises.
4. Do not make a promise if you have no intention of fulfilling it.
5. If a child is enticed with something, it will also be a promise which should be honoured. Hadhrat Abdullah Ibn Aamir (radhiallahu anhu) narrated that one day (while he was a child), his mother called him saying that she had something to give to him. Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) who happened to be present asked:

   "What do you intend giving him?"

   Aamir's mother replied: "I intend to give him some dates."

   Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) commented:

   "Verily, if you do not give him anything, a lie will be recorded against you."

Malfoozaat pertaining to promises

1. The mudarris (Deeni teacher) of the Maktab in Jalalabad became ill. The principal of the Maktab requested me to send someone for a few days to teach in the place of the mudarris. To avoid any pressure being exercised on anyone, I informed the principal to come here and himself arrange with one of the students to come over for a new days. If anyone voluntarily agrees to go, he has my consent.

The principal convinced one thaakir (a person who passes his time in Thikrullah) to take the place of the mudarris for a few days. The thaakir agreed, but said that he would first obtain my consent. The principal meanwhile had left. The following day the thaakir came to me and informed me of his reason for having decided not to go. I told him that he should have explained his reason to the principal. This thaakir had made a promise to go on condition I consented. Now by refusing to go, the principal will labour under the impression that although the thaakir wanted to come, I had prevented him from so doing. "Do you want an accusation to be levelled against me? This act is extremely improper. Now go to Jalalabad and explain to the principal that I have given you permission, but you are unable to be present because of a certain reason. It is indeed very bad to cause suspicion against others."

2. Someone requested some surmah from Hadhrat. He did not promise that he would give it. Instead he said: "Send a child and I shall give it to him." A child was sent after Zuhr and Hadhrat gave the surmah. Hadhrat commented:

   "Acting according to principles and methodically, everything proceeds well. People describe this system as strictness. If I had said: I shall bring the surmah, and then forgotten about it, but was later reminded about it, then it would have been violation of a promise as well as a delay in fulfilling the request. But in this method which I had adopted the work was done with ease."

The Aadaab of Qardh (Loans)

1. Do not borrow from such a person who is unable to refuse inspite of not being disposed to lend. Whether it be Qardh of Aaryah do not borrow from him if by some signs or indications you are able to discern that he is not well disposed to lend. (Qardh is a loan of cash. Aaryah is an item which is borrowed for a short while). If it is a person whom you know will not regard it onerous or difficult to give the loan or he may regard it onerous but is one who will not readily refuse, then a loan may be sought from him.

2. As far as possible avoid taking a loan. If circumstances compel you to obtain a loan, be concerned about repayment. Do not adopt an uncaring attitude regarding repayment.
3. If the creditor rebukes or speaks harshly to the debtor, the latter (i.e. the debtor) should adopt Sabr and listen on in silence. The creditor has the right to rebuke his debtor for default of payment.
4. If you owe anyone anything, be it cash borrowed or an article borrowed, make a note of it as a wasiyyat (directive) so that one's heirs will know what to do in the event of one's death.
5. When repaying a debt, make a dua as well for the creditor and express your gratitude.
6. If the debtor is in difficulty, the creditor should not pressurize him. He should happily consent to an extension. If the creditor is by the means he should waive the debt or part of the debt for a hard-pressed debtor. There is a tremendous amount of thawaab for waiving debts. Allah Ta'ala will further lighten the hardships of Qiyaamah for one who waives debts.
7. There is greater reward for granting a loan than for giving charity. Consider it, therefore, as an act of goodness and good fortune to give a needy person a loan.
8. If the debtor is unable to pay and he wishes to make arrangement with another person to assume liability for payments, then readily agree to this arrangement. Do not unnecessarily refuse this arrangement if there is reasonable hope for payment to be forthcoming. Such an arrangement is known as Hawaalah in Islam. There is much thawaab in it.
9. Poor and needy persons should not keep in trust (as amaanat) any articles of others. It is quite possible that in their moments of need the nafs overwhelms them and they make use of the article or sell it.

10. When obtaining a loan, keep a record of it and when making payment, then too.
11. Taking a loan is indeed a very lamentable act. If one dies without having liquidated the debt, the rooh (soul) remains suspended, entry to Jannat being blocked.
12. Loans and debts should not be incurred for the acquisition of items of luxury. Exercise patience and be contented with what you possess. Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said: "To ask is disgraceful." One who does not detest debt is an unscrupulous person. A debtor who deliberately neglects to pay his debt is a very selfish person. He transfers his burden onto another and then adopts a careless attitude.
13. The act of postponing payment when one is by the means to pay is an act of zulm (injustice). Some people have the evil habit of causing the creditor to run to and fro. They attempt to avoid payment by making false promises and tendering excuses while they are in position to pay. In the discharge of the right of the creditor they are just not bothered.

The Aadaab of illness, iyaadat and ta'ziyat

(Iyaadat means to visit the sick. Ta'ziyat is to visit the home of the deceased to console relatives)

1. If a person suffers from an illness, wound, sore, boil etc. located in the region of his private parts, do not ask him about the nature of the illness, etc. It is very embarrassing to do so.
2. Do not express yourself in the presence of the sick or his family in a manner which makes them lose hope in life. Comfort them by telling them that, Insha'allah, all difficulty will come to an end.
3. Should you obtain some information regarding injury, illness or death of a person, do not speak about it until you have reliably confirmed it, especially as far as his relatives are concerned. Never inform them without confirmation. If the information was false, unnecessary consternation and grief would have been caused.

4. If medical treatment has been exhorted, one should adopt it.
5. Do not use haraam ingredients in medicine. (Where a pure and halaal medicine is not available, it will be permissible to use a medicine containing haraam ingredients - Translators).
6. Never use talismans (ta'weez) which are in conflict with the Shariah.
7. Superstition is a kind of shirk. Hence abstain from this.
8. If the indisposed person is suffering from such an ailment which causes inconvenience to people, he should remain aloof from them.
9. Do not force the indisposed person to eat much.
10. A person visiting the sick should not linger around much. He should not engage in unnecessary conversation nor should be enquire from the indisposed person the details of his illness. The sick person is inconvenienced by such behaviour.
11. Do not inform far-off relatives of slight ailments. This creates unnecessary anxiety.
12. Some people never bother to visit the sick. This is not correct. There is great thawaab in visiting the sick.
13. It is improper by a physician to inform the patient that his illness cannot be remedied or that all hope is lost. Some even specify a time limit for the patient's life.
14. While people do visit sick relatives and friends they do not visit any sick person purely on account of his being a Muslim. Wherever the opportunity arises to visit the sick, do so even if they are not relatives or friends.
15. People also accompany the Janaazah of only relatives and friends while they abstain from the Janaazah of a Muslim who is a stranger to them. The Janaazah of any Muslim should be accompanied, be the mayyit an acquaintance or a stranger.

16. When going for Ta'ziyat, console the family of the deceased. Do not do or say anything to augment their sorrow. Nowadays, people instead of comforting the relatives of the mayyit, increase their grief and sorrow by joining them in crying and wailing. On arrival, they sit down to cry. This is not Ta'ziyat. On the contrary it is takleef (giving hardship to others). They utter statements such as: 'I am grieved to hear this news' our heart, must truly be shattered' 'Indeed his death is a great loss', etc. This applies more to women. Their statements on such occasions are poisonous. Their statements are harmful to both the body and the Deen.
17. When going for Ta'ziyat do not enquire about the details of the deceased's illness and circumstances of his death.
18. Ta'ziyat consists of two acts: To console the bereaved and thawaab for the mayyit (deceased). Everything else beside this is nonsensical and baseless.
19. The practice of visitors coming from far off, the seventh day, tenth day and fortieth day customs are all baseless.
20. For people living in the same town the period of Ta'ziyat according to the Shariah is three days. After the third day they should not go for Ta'ziyat. The aim of Ta'ziyat is to console, not to revive the grief and sorrow.
21. Ta'ziyat is permissible after three days for those who are the residents of other towns. Since the person arrives from another town or city, the bereaved person will be consoled by his words of sympathy. In fact, if the outsider merely sits without uttering a word of consolation, the bereaved may feel hurt and consider the attitude of the visitor as a display of insensitivity. Thus, the Shariat has permitted an outsider to go for Ta'ziyat even after the third day while the period of three days is fixed for local residents.

22. Only very close relatives who are able to console the bereaved should go for Ta'ziyat. Close friends from whose companionship the bereaved derives comfort should also go.

23. When consoling the bereaved, do so with statements such as:

Whatever has happened, has happened. Crying will be of no avail. Act in the interests and benefit of the mayyit. Recite the Qur'aan Shareef, perform Nafl and make Thikrullah so that the thawaab reaches the mayyit. Make dua of forgiveness on behalf of the mayyit. Have confidence that he is entering Jannat where the comfort is greater. After a time we too shall depart and will meet up with the mayyit."

The Aadaab of presenting a request

1. When going to someone with a need or request, state this immediately on meeting him. Do not wait for you to be asked. Some people going with the intention of asking something, on being asked of the reason or purpose of the visit say that they had come merely to meet. Afterwards they present their need at inopportune times which causes much inconvenience.
2. When the person to whom you have made your request, be it of a Deeni or worldly nature, questions you, do not answer ambiguously. Do not confuse him.
3. Do not ask a need from such a person who you know feels obligated to comply even though he may not be disposed to assist.
4. Some people will present their request for fulfillment at the exact time of their departure. The host finds it difficult to comply at such an inopportune time.

5. If you have been told to come at a certain time for fulfillment of the need, then be there at the appointed time.
6. If you have a request to be made to a particular person and coincidentally he makes an appearance, do not ask him at that time. Ask him at another time. He may gain the impression that by visiting you he will be put to the difficulty of fulfilling your requests.

The Aadaab of eating

1. While eating do not mention such things which nauseate or are repugnant to others. People of delicate disposition are disgusted with such behaviour.
2. Do not spit or clean your nose in close proximity of people eating.
3. When there is a need to bring more food to the guests do not remove the utensil, but bring in another utensil.
4. Before and after eating, wash the hands.
5. Recite Bismillah when commencing to eat.
6. Eat and drink with your right hand.
7. Eat in humility. Do not lean against something in the style of proud people when eating.
8. All should eat together. There is more barkat in this way. (However, it is permissible to eat alone as well. Translators).
9. Eat from in front of you. However, if in the tray or utensil there is a variety of things, then you may eat from any side.
10. If the food is less and the people present are many, then do not eat to satiation.
11. When foods such as sweetmeats, grapes, dates, etc. are served, take one at a time. Do not take two at a time. Doing so displays greed and lack of culture.
12. Where there is no need to use all fingers, eat with three fingers.

13. After having eaten lick off the food from the fingers.
14. If a morsel of food drops from the hand, pick it up, clean it and eat it. Do not throw it away on account of pride. Do not think that it is against your dignity to do so. Food is the bounty of Allah Ta'ala. Value it and appreciate it.
15. If you have completed eating before the others seated with you, continue nibbling here and there to convey the impression that you are still eating. Do not put the others to shame by stopping completely. Those who have not completed may do likewise.
16. After having eaten, clean the plate out thoroughly. Do not leave crumbs, etc. in the plate. There is barkat in cleaning out the plate with one's fingers.
17. If for some reason you are constrained to leave while the others are still eating, excuse yourself.
18. When having eaten, do not get up while the food is still spread on the eating-cloth. First wait for the food to be removed, then get up.
19. After having eaten express your shukr (gratitude) to your Raaziq (Provider). Recite the appropriate Masnoon Dua.
20. Similarly, after drinking water recite the Masnoon Dua.
21. It is haraam to eat from utensils of gold and silver. Similarly, it is not permissible to use silver or gold cutlery.
22. Cover foodstuff which is sent to others.
23. Do not stand and eat nor drink whilst standing if there is no valid need for this.
24. Do not drink water in a single gulp. Remove the cup from your mouth when taking breath.
25. Do not drink from the broken or chipped side of a cup.
26. When passing food or water to a number of people, start from the right side. (This should be the practice even if a small child happens to be sitting on the right side).

27. Gather bones and peels to one side. Do not spread these all over the cloth.
28. Do not leave foodstuff uncovered even for a short while.

Aadaab of Istinjaa

Istinjaa is to purify oneself after answering the call of nature.)

1. In the toilet use water to purify the affected parts.
2. Enter the toilet with the left foot and emerge with the right foot.
3. Before entering the toilet recite the Masnoon Dua. Similarly, recite the Masnoon Dua after having emerged.
4. Do not enter the toilet bare-headed.
5. Abstain from talking while in the toilet.
6. Do not cough or clear the throat unnecessarily inside the toilet.
7. Do not recite anything inside the toilet.
8. Do not take into the toilet any paper or object on which is written an aayat of the Qur'aan, any Hadith, name of Allah or of an Angel, or Nabi or Saint. However, if such an item is wrapped in a cloth and kept in the pocket, then it will be permissible.

   Similarly, if a ta'weez is thoroughly wrapped up it will be permissible to have it on one's person in the toilet.
9. It is Makrooh (detestable) to stand while urinating. However, this will be permissible for a valid reason.
10. When relieving oneself in the toilet do not be entirely in the nude.
11. Use the left hand when cleaning yourself in the toilet. It is Makrooh to use the right hand.
12. Do not use cloth, writing paper, newspaper or any material the purpose of which is not for toilet use nor any impure object for cleansing oneself in the toilet. Istinjaa should be made with soft clay-stone which is absorbent and which has cleansing properties. (It is permissible to use toilet paper. - Translators).

13. Do not face the Qiblah in the toilet nor have the back towards the Qiblah.
14. When having to answer the call of nature in an open veld, etc., sit as concealed as possible and as far away from the gazes of people as possible. Do not expose yourself to others in the slightest way.
15. Do not relieve yourself along the road nor in the shade of a tree. People taking rest under trees will be highly inconvenienced and put to difficulty.
16. Do not urinate in a hole in the ground, for perhaps it is inhabited by some poisonous animals (snake, etc.) which may suddenly emerge.
17. Do not urinate in stagnant water no matter how abundant it is.
18. Do not urinate in such a place or in such a way that urine splashes against you. Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said that carelessness in this regard results in punishment in the grave.
19. Do not urinate in the bathroom.
20. When having to relieve yourself outside, do not face the sun and the moon nor against the wind.
21. When going into the toilet remove your ring on which there is an inscription bearing the Name of Allah or of Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam).

Aadaab of Parents

Ahaadith pertaining to parents

1. Service to parents results in increase in rizq (earnings, livelihood) and in longer life.

2. A gaze of love and mercy cast at parents is the equivalent of an accepted Hajj.
3. Service to parents is superior to Jihad.
4. By rendering service to parents, one obtains the thawaab of a Hajj, Umrah and Jihad.
5. Jannat lies under the feet of your mother.
6. Gazing with anger at one's parents is disobedience to parents.
7. Disobedience to parents is among the kaba-ir (major) sins.
8. He who is disobedient to parents will be disgraced. (The curse of disgrace is repeated thrice in the hadith).
9. Abusing parents is among the major sins, even the utterance of a harsh word or a word of disrespect.
10. Allah curses the one who displeases his parents.
11. The one who troubles his parents will be punished here on earth (in addition to the punishment in the Aakhirah).
12. The one who disobeys his parents and displeases them, will not enter Jannat. (He will first have to suffer his punishment before being admitted into Jannat).
13. The Doors of Jahannum are open for the one who disobeys his parents.
14. A murderer of parents will be among the worst-punished in the Aakhirah.
15. The pleasure of the parents is the pleasure of Allah and the displeasure of the parents is the displeasure of Allah.
16. Service to parents is among the noblest acts by Allah Ta'ala.
17. Parents are either the Jannat or the Jahannum of their children. Cultivation of their pleasure leads to Jannat while displeasing them paves the way to Jahannum.

18. A mother's dua for her children is accepted with swiftness.
19. Jibraeel (alayhis salaam) cursed offsprings who displease their parents in their old-age.
20. The best Door to Jannat is one's father. Either guard it or destroy it.
21. Whoever desires increase in earnings and long life should be kind and obedient to parents. Kindness to parents secures forgiveness for sins.
22. The calamity of disobeying parents will be experienced before death as well as after death.
23. Neither the Fardh nor the Nafl Ibaadat is accepted of a person who is disobedient to his parents.
24. Among the major sins, the worst is to commit shirk with Allah Ta'ala. This is followed by the sin of disobedience to parents.

The story of Alqamah (radhiallahu anhu)

Alqamah (radiallahu anhu) was a very pious person. He spent his time in Salaat and Saum. At the approach of death he was unable to proclaim the Kalimah Shahaadat inspite of repeated talqeen (instruction) by those Present. Alqamah's wife sent a messenger to Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) to inform him to Alqamah's grave condition.

Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) enquired whether the parents of Alqamah were alive. He was informed that Alqamah's mother was alive. Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) asked the aged mother about Alqamah. She replied :

> "Alqamah is a very pious person. He passes his time in Salaat and Saum. He performs Tahajjud, but he always disobeys me for the sake of his wife. I am, therefore, displeased with him."

Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said:

> "It will be best for him if you forgive him."

However, she refused. Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) ordered Bilaal (radhiallahu anhu) to gather firewood and to burn Alqamah in the fire. On hearing this order, Alqamah's mother asked in consideration:

> "Will my child be burnt in the fire?"

Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said:

> "Yes! Compared to the punishment of Allah, our punishment is light. I take oath by Allah that as long as you remain displeased with him, neither his Salaat nor his Sadqah is accepted."

The old lady said:

> "I make you and all people present witness that I have forgiven Alqamah."

Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), addressing the gathering, said:

> "Go and see if the Kalimah is on the tongue of Alqamah or not."

After returning from Alqamah the people informed that he was reciting the Kalimah. Thus, he left this world with the Kalimah on his lips.

After burying Alqamah, Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said:

> "The curse of Allah is on the one who causes difficulty to his mother. The curse of the angels and the curse of mankind be on him. Allah Ta'ala neither accepts his Fardh nor his Nafl Ibaadat as long as he does not repent and obeys his mother. He has to gain her pleasure as best as he can. Allah's pleasure depends on the mother's pleasure and His Wrath is concealed in her wrath," (Ahmad, Tibrani).

Relationship with parents

1. Never be disrespectful to parents. Do not say a harsh word to them.

2. Even if parents are unjust, it is not lawful for children to ill-treat, disobey or displease them.
3. Obey them in all lawful things. If they instruct you to do anything which is unlawful in the Shariah, then politely and with respect and apology decline. Never refuse rudely nor argue with them.
4. When parents abuse, scold or even beat their children, they should submit to such treatment with humility. Never should they utter a word of disrespect or complaint, nor should they display on their faces any indication of disgust or anger. Bear their treatment in silence and with patience. Make dua for them.
5. Assist them in all lawful ways even if they happen to be non-Muslims.
6. Whenever you see them, greet them.
7. If you are living with them, take their permission before going anywhere. Inform them of your whereabouts.
8. If you are engaged in Nafl Salaat and your parents call you, break your Salaat and answer their call even if there is no urgency or importance in their call. If you are performing Fardh Salaat and you detect urgency in their call, then break even the Fardh Salaat to answer their call.
9. Do not call them on their names. Address them with a title of respect and honour.
10. After their death, make Dua-e-Maghfirat for them. Pray for their forgiveness and within your means, practise virtuous deeds with the intention of the thawaab thereof being bestowed on them by Allah Ta'ala.
11. Pay the debts of your parents.
12. If they had made any lawful wasiyyat (bequest), fulfil it if you are by the means to do so.
13. Be kind, respectful and helpful to the friends of your parents.

14. When entering the private room of parents, seek their permission before entering.
15. Always be cheerful in their presence.
16. Speak kindly and tenderly with them.
17. When speaking to parents, keep your gaze low. Do not stare them in the face.
18. Do not raise your voice above the voices of your parents.
19. Be humble in their presence.
20. When accompanying parents on a walk, do not walk in front of them nor on their right or left side. Walk slightly behind them.
21. Even in their absence speak highly and respectfully of them.
22. Do not give preference to the wife over them (this does not apply to the rights of the wife). Where parents instruct their son to violate or discard the obligatory rights of his wife, it will not be permissible to obey them in this case. - Translators).
23. Always endeavour to keep them happy.
24. Do not embark on a journey without their permission.
25. When they question you, do not inconvenience them by delaying your reply.
26. It is highly disrespectful to refrain from answering them.
27. If at any time you were disrespectful to your parents, regret your action and hasten to obtain their pardon.

Aadaab of elders

1. When you are in the company of an elder, do not embark on any activity without his consent.
2. When a senior makes a request, execute it and also inform him when the task has been accomplished.

3. When having any work or any request for a senior, approach him directly. Do not forward your request via an intermediary.
4. Do not extract any service from your seniors (be it your Shaikh, Ustadh or other relatives).
5. When inviting your Shaikh or Ustadh (for meals) and it is your intention to invite his associates as well, then do not invite them via your Shaikh/Ustadh. Do not tell him to bring along so and so. Do the inviting yourself directly to those whom you intend to call. However, take his permission before inviting his associates. The associate who is invited should seek the consent of the Shaikh/Ustadh before accepting such an invitation (i.e. where the Shaikh has been invited too.)
6. Listen to their talk attentively.
7. In the Hadith it is said

   "Whoever does not honour our elders is not of us."

   Hence, exercise particular care in this regard. Never be disrespectful to seniors. Since juniors no longer respect their seniors, goodness and blessings have become effaced. Bounties come in the wake of respect.
8. Disrespect is more harmful than sinning.
9. True adab (respect) and ta'zeem (honour) are related to love and obedience. A mere external display of etiquette and service is not of much worth.
10. Do not offer such forms of respect which are irksome and hurtful to others.
11. Juniors should at all times keep in mind the seniority of elders. Do not regard yourself to be equal to seniors.
12. Juniors should not have the desire that seniors should address them by their titles. They should cherish simplicity and be happy to be called by their names.
13. In respect and honour offered to elders, keep in mind the respective ranks of the various elders, e.g., a father's right has priority over the rank of the Shaikh (spiritual mentor).

14. One's Ustaadh and Shaikh hold great rights over one, hence obey them as far as possible. Keep them happy in all ways. They are the guides who guide one out of the darkness and into the light. They set one on the course leading to the True Beloved, viz., Allah Ta'ala. What greater act of kindness can there be than this?

MALFOOZAAT

1. A village-dweller while speaking to Hadhrat Maulana Ashraf Ali Thaanvi (rahmatullah alayh) was at times making disrespectful remarks. Someone in the majlis (gathering) sought to prevent him by making a sign. Hadhrat Thanavi, observing this commented:

   "What right have you to prevent him? You desire to awe people. You wish to make my gathering like the gathering of Fir'oun. If it is said that he (the village-dweller) was being disrespectful, then understand that Allah Ta'ala has given me a tongue to prevent disrespect. Why do you intrude?"

   After this reprimand, Hadhrat said to the village-dweller: "Whatever you wish to say, do so with liberty."
2. Hadhrat Thanavi said:

   "Annihilation and submission are best in front of seniors. In their presence abandon your opinion, intelligence, experience and rank. Annihilations means to consider oneself as one of no significance. This is, infact, adab (respect).
3. "Disrespect is the effect of pride and arrogance. The wrath of Allah descends because of pride. Juniors should keep in mind the rank of elders. They should not hold any opinion of their own greatness or rank. Self-esteem is the greatest proof of defective intellect, more so when seniors are present."

4. It is not sufficient to merely refrain from thinking highly of yourself. Do not ever regard yourself on par with seniors. The image of a junior who equates himself with a senior will commence declining even though he may be having some rank. His fall will continue. Therefore, it is imperative that he considers himself as being of no significance. He must always bear in mind his insignificance.

5. "One can only regard oneself to be insignificant if the respect, honour and love of seniors are embedded in the heart. Thus, a person who has such love and respect in his heart will not be neglectful. Neglect and a careless attitude indicate lack of love or respect. If one lacks both love and respect then employ intelligence. Ponder before acting. In this way one will be able to observe the aadaab and huqooq (right) and abstain from causing hurt and inconvenience to seniors."

6. "It is lamentable that nowadays the degree of respect shown to spiritual mentors is not offered to parents despite the fact that respect and obedience to parents are Quranic injunction. If one's father requests one to rub his feet and one's Shaikh (spiritual mentor) orders one to engage in the performance of Nafl Salaat, then according to the Shariah it is waajib (obligatory) to obey the father. He who disobeys his father's request and engages in Nafl Salaat is sinful. The relationship of the Shaikh with one is of a lesser degree than that of one's father. It is possible to sever links with the spiritual mentor if' for example' his instructions conflict with the Shariah. But, it is not possible to sever ties with one's father. His respect is always compulsory on the son."

7. "In Islah-e-Inqilaab I have proved that the rights of parents come first. After parents come the Ustadh' then the Shaikh. But people do the opposite. They accord priority to the rights of the peer (spiritual mentor). After the peer they consider the rights of the Ustadh and only then do they consider the rights of parents."

8. "Some people say that they have no feeling of affection in their hearts for their parents. This indeed is a great weakness and a spiritual disease. The remedy for this malady is to serve them much. By serving them, love for them will be engendered.

9. "Appreciate, value and remember the Deeni favours which your parents have bestowed to you. Appreciate especially the Deeni education which they have arranged for you. It is necessary to always bring this to mind. Four words of the Deen taught by parents are superior to four whole villages left by them for you."

10. If sometimes parents act unjustly, bear their injustice with patience. Reflect on the suffering and hardship which they had to bear since your infancy".

11. "When the need arises to say something because of some wrong or sinful action of parents, then speak to them tenderly, politely and respectfully. Adopt a soft tone and beautiful terms. Do not adopt a harsh tone and an independent stance nor speak to them by way of raising objections."

12. "Never hurt their (parents') feelings by any deed or word. This can be ensured by thinking before speaking or acting. Alas! nowadays careless and neglect have become rampant. This is precisely the reason for the abundance of errors which people commit. If one reflects before speaking or acting, errors may then also be committed, but will be very less. Errors committed seldom do not weigh heavily on the heart and mind. By virtue of the habit of pondering, the heart overcomes the slight adverse effect produced by occasional errors. This is the difference between errors in the state of fikr (to be concerned) and errors committed as a result of carelessness."

13. "Do not enter into the private quarters of your parents without their permission." Hadhrat Atae Bin Yasaar (radhiallahu anhu) narrates that someone asked Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam):

"Should I obtain permission from my mother before approaching her?"

Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) replied in the affirmative. The Sahaabi said: "I live together with my mother in the same house."

Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said:

'Seek permission'.

The Sahaabi said: 'I have to serve her'.

Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) replied:

'Then too obtain consent. Would you like to see your mother naked?'

The Sahaabi replied: 'No'

Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam): "Then obtain permission".

There are various ways of obtaining permission. It will suffice of one's presence in any way.

Aadaab of the Shaikh

(Shaikh here means a spiritual guide).

1. Honour and respect Islam and its laws. Be steadfast in the observance of Islam's commands. Pay special care to Islam's teaching of appointing someone as one's senior spiritual (Deeni) guide. Be obedient to him. It is not sufficient to accept him as one's senior merely on paper and addressing him with lauding titles. Obedience and acting in accordance with his (the Shaikh's) ta'leem (instruction) are the actual things for practical adoption.
2. It is necessary for every person to appoint someone (capable and qualified) to act as his Shaikh. This is compulsory.
3. The necessary condition is to become subservient to the People of Allah (the Auliya) who are (the spiritual guides).

Cast aside your desires and pride and annihilate yourself in front of them. Act according to their instructions.

4. In the sphere of roohani (spiritual) training the Shaikh's concern and affection are similar to a father's affection in the sphere of worldly training. In fact, the spiritual mentor has greater affection than even a father. The spiritual mentor executes such tasks which a father is incapable of rendering. He unites man's rooh (soul) with Allah Ta'ala. He transforms man into Aarif (one who possesses deep knowledge and insight of the spiritual realm) and a waasil (one who has attained the goal of Divine Pleasure). Thus, in this holy process of spiritual training the bond between the two parties (Shaikh and Mureed) can never be sufficient irrespective of any high degree the association may have attained.
5. Without being under the guidance of a Shaikh-e-Kaamil (a qualified spiritual mentor), there always lurks danger in every step taken. The need is vital to act in conformity with the instruction of a Shaikh-e-Kaamil. Annihilate all your wishes, desires and intentions. Submit yourself to your Shaikh.
6. Do not raise the slightest objection against the ta'leem of your Shaikh. While honouring and respecting all Shaikhs, do not accept for practical adoption their ta'leem. Adopting the ta'leem of another Shaikh while one's Shaikh is living is detrimental. Objecting to one's Shaikh's ta'leem will deprive one of spiritual progress.
7. The less one's confidence in one's Shaikh, the less the benefit.
8. Do not recite poetry in the presence of your Shaikh.
9. I regard it as disrespectful to write poetry in letters to the Shaikh. There is no harm if such verses are written spontaneously because of momentary enthusiasm and feeling. But poetry should not be written to seniors by deliberate design. It implies the desire to impress and to display one's ability. The student should not adopt such an attitude with his instructor.

10. One should not sit with a rosary (Tasbeeh) in the presence of seniors or in the presence of a person whom one wishes to accept as one's Shaikh. This is contrary to adab (respect). It implies a claim of piety.

11. It is highly disrespectful to display any ability or rank in the presence of one's Shaikh, e.g. to demonstrate one's knowledge. To exhibit one's excellences in order to gain acceptance among the masses is a worse malady. Abstention from this is imperative.

12. Noor (spiritual light) is created by having true respect in the heart for the Auliya. Imaan is strengthened and one's Deen becomes firmly grounded thereby. I greatly fear disrespect shown to the Masha-ikh (plural of Shaikh) and Ulama because the consequences are most dangerous (to Imaan).

13. When someone speaks ill of those whom you regard as the Masha-ikh, then immediately admonish him. Politely tell him:

    "Brother, your attitude grieves me. Do not speak in this way in my presence!"

    (For a better understanding of Tasawwuf and the Mureed's relationship with his Shaikh, read the book, Shariat and Tasawwuf by Hadhrat Masihullah Khan, available from the publishers, Price: R6{3 U.S. Dollars}.

MALFOOZAT

1. Taqwa (piety) has its role in the attainment of Sharh Sadr. In this regard, adab (respect) too, plays a vital role (i.e. showing respect to the Auliya). (Sharh Sadr is the heart's state of firm conviction. The mind opens up to fully comprehend the subject. All doubt is eliminated in this state. Translators).

2. Once a man was sitting on the river bank making wudhu.

He observed that on his left side on a lower level Imaam Ahmad Bin Hambal (rahmatullah alayh) was seated, also making wudhu. Thinking that it is disrespectful to allow his used water to flow in the direction of the Imaam, he (the man) got up and seated himself at a distance on the left side of the Imaam. After his death Allah Ta'ala pardoned him his sins on account of this act of adab. Adab is indeed a great asset.

3. Maulana Gangohi (rahmatullah alayh) said:

    "People who criticize, insult and vilify the Ulama of the Deen, their faces in the grave are turned away from the Qiblah."

Aadaab to be observed by seniors for juniors

So far most aadaab dealt with, concern the respect which people have to uphold for either their contemporaries or their seniors. Some aadaab which seniors should observe for juniors will now be mentioned.

1. Seniors should not be too fussy. They should not lose their temper for every little thing. Just as juniors are disrespectful to you in certain acts, you too, are disrespectful to your elders in some respects. Therefore, be tolerant and once or twice admonish the errant junior tenderly. When soft measures have failed, then sterner measures may be adopted having in view the welfare and betterment of the junior. If you as a senior totally refrain from toleration, you will be depriving yourself always of the benefits of Sabr.

2. In view of the fact that Allah Ta'ala has appointed you a senior (to guide others), various types of people with different temperaments, dispositions, intelligence and attitudes will refer to you. All cannot be moulded overnight. Remember the following hadith:

    "The Mu'min who mingles with people and patiently bears their difficulties (which they cause) is better than one who neither mingles nor bears the difficulties of people."

3. If you believe that a person will not fulfil your request, then never ask him to do something which is not obligatory in the Shariah.

4. When someone renders service or makes gifts to you (as the senior) without you having requested for it, then too, take into consideration his comfort and welfare. Do not accept so much service which tires him nor accept gifts of such amount which may be beyond his means. If he invites you for meals, impress on him not to prepare excessive food nor permit him to invite too many of your colleagues.

5. When expediency dictates that you (as the senior) should display displeasure or sometimes when you are truly displeased, then at some other time gladden the person. If truly you had committed an excess and wronged him, then apologize to him without any hesitation. Do not be proud, for on the Day of Qiyaamah you will be equals.

6. If in conversation a person's disrespectful attitude distresses you and brings about a change in your temper, then it is best not to talk to him directly. Pursue the discussion via the medium of someone who is capable of understanding and conducting the conversation culturally and politely. By adopting this method, your change of temper will not affect others nor will his disrespect affect you.

7. Do not exalt nor grant so much proximity to your khaadim (voluntary assistant) or your associate that others should hold him in awe. When he (the khaadim) conveys to you the stories and affairs of others, forbid him therefrom. If you do not do so, others will become fearful of him and as a result of his narrations you will entertain suspicions on others.

   Similarly, when he comes with someone's proposal or he intercedes on behalf of others, then sternly forbid him so that people do not regard him as a medium (to gain audience with you). If they gain the impression that he is your medium, they will be constrained to flatter and please him. They will make gifts to him or he himself will put his requests to them.

In short, you (as the senior) should be in direct contact with people. Do not keep intermediaries. There is no harm in having one or two persons close by as assistants, but they should not interfere at all in the affairs of those who have to deal with you (as the senior).

7. You (as the senior) should not entrust the arrangements for guests to others. You yourself attend to them, even if you have to undergo much pressure as a result. At least others will have comfort and rest. In fact, it is only natural for seniors to undergo difficulties and sustain pressure.

8. Some people (seniors) behave arrogantly. They totally disregard others. In so doing they harm people. Even great people are involved in this malady. There is a need to exercise, exceptional care to refrain from this type of attitude.

9. If a senior does not behave affectionately, but adopts arrogance and pride, resorts to uncalled for dictatorship, then his image and rank will decline.

10. Service should not be taken from one who is in the employ or under the jurisdiction of another person without first having obtained the consent of the latter. Even if the person in charge happens to be your junior or under your jurisdiction, his consent should still be obtained.

11. Juniors are to be regarded as the complements of seniors. Both are in need of each other. Sometimes juniors acquire certain excellences from which seniors are totally deprived. Therefore, never despise juniors or those under your authority.

12. When juniors draw the attention of seniors to the truth, the latter should immediately accept it. The Qur'anic term (urdu) means "admonish one another"; "advise one another". Thus, seniors should admonish juniors and vice versa. This Qur'anic form of commanding mutual admonition has alerted seniors to the fact that while they should admonish and advise juniors, they (juniors) too have the right of proclaiming the truth to seniors. Thus, seniors have no justification for taking offence when a junior states the truth to them. On the contrary, they should concede the truth. However, juniors should address seniors with respect and honour when the need arises for them to proclaim the truth to their seniors. Only an intelligent person will adopt the correct attitude.

13. Acting in an unprincipled manner with even juniors is improper. While juniors should not hurt and inconvenience seniors by word or deeds, seniors too should reciprocate. Nowadays no care is taken to avoid inconveniencing others. The concern is primarily to obtain fulfilment of one's personal motives and needs irrespective of any hurt or harm caused to others in the process.

14. The Shaikh-e-Kaamil (the qualified spiritual mentor) is a person who comforts the Taalib (the searcher of Allah) and supports him during his conditions of despondency and frustration. He provides encouragements and solace to the Taalib.

15. People wholly ignore the rights of their wives and children. They are proficient in only exercising dictatorial authority. They do not stop to think that those over whom they are exercising authority have rights to be fulfilled. They have excluded Muasharat (social relationship) from the scope of the Deen. Considerable deficiency exists in this regard. The cause for this lamentable situation is the unconcerned attitude of seniors. They have become unconcerned about the Deen.

16. So-called religious persons who are deficient in discharging the rights of their associates are in fact unaware of the Deen. In reality they are not religious, even though people regard them as being pious.

Malfooz

While I do not issue a Fatwa (Deeni verdict), I do advise that the husband should either hold the reins of the home affairs (expenses, etc.) himself or permit his wife to have this control. He should not assign this control to others, whether they happen to be brothers, sisters or even his parents. Handing over control of the home-affairs to others distresses the wife considerably. The husband should handle the home-budget himself or assign it to his wife. Among all relatives she is the one most entitled in this respect.

The rights of the wife are not confined to food and clothing. In addition, it is essential to keep her happy. Her happiness is of such importance that the fuqaha (jurists of Islam) have ruled that it is permissible to speak, even a lie to keep her happy. (By a 'lie' is meant a statement calculated to make her happy even though it be contrary to fact, but as long as the statement does not infringe on anyone's right nor does it bring about any violation of the Shariah, e.g. it will be permissible to express love to the wife even though the husband's heart is devoid of love for her. - Translators).

This ruling of the Fuqaha is very significant. The importance of the right of the wife can be adequately gauged therefrom. For the sake of her happiness even Allah Ta'ala has waived one of his rights, viz., his prohibition on lies.

CONCLUSION

I now conclude this discussion of etiquettes and rules on a dictum which is beyond the scope of rules and principles, viz., some of the aadaab have a general application. They concern all people at all times. However, associates who are very close to each other between whom there is no relationship of formality - are excluded from observing certain aadaab and rules. Since the realisation of the degree of formality and closeness necessary for the relaxation of rules is dependent on intuition and temperament, the fixation of such aadaab (for relaxation) will be left to the individuals' intuition and temperament.

I now end this treatise with the following verses:

طُرق العشق كُلّها آدابٌ
ادبوا النَفْس ايُها الاصْحَابُ

(Translation: All ways of love are aadaab (etiquette and respect). O Friend! impart the lessons of aadaab to yourself.)

Beliefs

Problem 1

It is generally believed that when a man embraces Islam he should be given some laxative to purify him. This is quite baseless.

Problem 2

It is generally believed that by abusing any one, the sinner remains an unbeliever for forty days and if he dies during this period he dies an unbeliever. This is untrue but the sin of abusing lies on him.

Problem 3

Some men believe that Satan is the spiritual guide (Pir) of him who has no Pir. This is false.

Problem 4

Some men wrongly believe that the Aqsa Masjid is on the fourth sky and the Jami' Masjid at Delhi is its prototype. Both these beliefs are false. The Masjid Aqsa is situated in Jerusalem and Jami' Masjid Delhi is in Delhi (India), which is not a prototype of the former.

Problem 5

Most people, women in particular, believe that it is not good to take medical treatment for the disease of smallpox and measles and some attribute these diseases to the influence of Satan and the evil spirits. This is quite false.

Problem 6

Some women believe that if a new bride locks her box or house, etc., then her house is locked up, that is it is ruined. This is quite wrong.

Problem 7

Some men think that he who rehearses the Surah "Qul'a-oo-zu-birab-bin-naas" is ruined. This is quite false. On the other hand by rehearsing this Surah he is saved from misfortunes.

Problem 8

Some men, particularly women, say that he who takes meal under a door-sill gets into debt. This is quite false.

Problem 9

Some people believe that on every Thursday evening the spirits of the dead visit their homes and standing in a corner see who offers them reward (of virtues). If they get some reward they are happy, otherwise they return in disappointment. This is baseless and false.

Problem 10

Some women do not go nor sit with those women whose children do not survive. They also prevent their children from going to them saying that child-death will touch them. This is a very bad attitude. It is a sin to think and do so.

Problem 11

Some people, particularly women, think that the third, the eighth, the thirteenth, the eighteenth, the twenty-first, the thirty-eight, the forty-third and the forty-eighth year of their lives is difficult year. This is a false and bad belief.

Problem 12

Most people believe that when dogs weap some epidemic disease is going to break out. This is baseless and wrong.

Problem 13

It is a common belief that if it is desired to cause enmity and quarrel in a household, the thorns of a porcupine should be placed in that household. As long as the thorns remain there the members will be quarrelling with one another. This is totally false.

Problem 14

It is a custom among the illiterate that when someone goes on a journey, the women say that the house should not be swept because of the journey. This is false.

Problem 15

It is a common belief that when it is snowing, a threshing pestle should be coloured black and thrown out and this act will stop the snowfall. This is quite false.

Problem 16

It is commonly believed that in a grain-stack food should not be taken after washing the hands as by so doing one has to wash his hands off the stack itself. This is quite wrong.

Problem 17

It is a common belief that if a woman dies during menstruation or pregnancy she should be buried with a chain. This is because she turns into a witch and eats up whomsoever she meets. This is Shirk (the sin of idolatry).

Problem 18

It is a common belief that a candle should be lighted for three days at the place where bath is given to a dead body. This is quite baseless.

The Book of Cleanliness and Pollution

Problem 1

It is a common belief among some women that when a crow puts its bill into a water pitcher, then to purify it water should be poured into the pitcher until it begins to overflow. This is baseless. If the food eaten by an animal becomes detestable or polluted, then the overflowing of the pot does not remove the pollution and if that animal is such that the food eaten by it does not get polluted them the overflowing of the pitcher is not at all necessary.

Problem 2

Some men say that if the finger nails get into water it becomes detestable to use that water. This is quite false, but if there is filth under the nails, this is against the principle of elegance and nicety.

Problem 3

It is a common belief among the people that the oil in an oil lamp is impure. This is not correct. May be that someone may have said it by way of precaution as some time the lamp is placed at a place where dogs may lick the oil. But for this, the oil is not impure. People have also been heard saying that the oil becomes impure because a wick burns in it. However, burning has nothing to do with impurity. Both the arguments are meaningless.

Problem 4

The common people also believe that the water put into the water-pot of a smoking pipe is impure. It is essential to avoid it for the sake of elegance and nicety, but this does not mean that it is impure.

Problem 5

Some people think that if a dog touches something like clothes, pot, etc., the thing so touched becomes impure. It is quite wrong to say so. However, it becomes impure if the dog's saliva affects these things.

Ablution and Bath

Problem 1

It is a common belief that if the part of the body which is to be concealed according to the law of the Shari'ah (called Satr) is bared, the ablution becomes invalid. This is quite wrong.

Problem 2

It is a common belief that the ablution becomes void by seeing a swine. This is baseless.

Problem 3

It is a common belief that one should not perform ablution with the water left after use in the latrine. This is quite false.

Problem 4

Some say that any of the five prayers should not be offered with the ablution with which a funeral prayer has been offered. This is quite false.

Problem 5

Some women think that ablution becomes void by going out. This is quite false, but it is undesirable for women to go out without necessity.

Tayam-mum and Mas-h

(Ritual substitute for ablution and rubbing over)

Problem 1

Some men perform Tayam-mum on cloth or on a pillow. If sufficient dust is not on it, Tayam-mum is not valid at all.

Haiz and Nifas

(Menstruation and post-delivery bleeding)

Problem 1

It is a common belief that unless a lying-in mother has taken bath it is not right to eat anything touched by her. This is quite false. It should be noted that the hands do not become impure on account of menstruation and post-delivery bleeding.

Problem 2

Some men say that the husband should not enter the delivery room during the period of forty days following the delivery. This belief is baseless.

Problem 3

The common people say that if a woman who dies during the menstrual period or child-birth should be given a second bath. This belief is baseless.

Problem 4

Women, in general, think that it is not lawful for a woman to offer prayer in the deliver-room for forty days, even when they become clean before this period. This belief is against the laws of the Shari'ah. The maximum period of post-delivery bleeding is forty days and there is no limit of the minimum period. She should take bath and start prayers as soon as she becomes clean. Similarly, if bleeding does not stop even after forty days then after the expiry of this period she should consider herself to be clean and start players.

Azan, Iqamat and Imamat

(Call for the prayer, establishing the prayer and conducting it under an Imam)

Problem 1

It is a common belief that the Azan should be called in the mosque on the left side and the Iqamat/Takbeer should be called on the right side. This has no basis in the Shari'ah.

Problem 2

It is a common belief that if the Muqtadi (the follower) is putting on a turban and the Imam (the conductor of the prayer) is wearing only a cap then the prayer is detestable., This belief has no basis. It may, however be noted that if a man feels uneasy in going to the market or to an assembly of friends while wearing a cap, it is detestable for him to offer prayer without putting on a turban, irrespective of that he is a Muqtadi or an Imam.

Problem 3

Some people think that it is unlawful to cross a man who is calling the Azan or busy with Du'a (supplication). This belief has no basis.

Problem 4

It is a common belief among the arrogant classes of the people that it is not right to pray behind an Imam in whose family the Pardah (veil) system is not observed. It may be noted that if the wives of these opponents also appear unveiled before strangers, they also will be counted among the unveiled women. They and the Imam will, therefore, be alike in violating the Pardah (veil) system. The belief is, therefore, baseless.

Problem 5

Some people at some places call the Azan where the plague epidemic is raging. This practice too is baseless.

Prayer, Congregation and Khutbah

(Sermon)

Problem 1

It is a common belief that by praying on a cot the Namazi turns into a monkey. This is baseless.

Problem 2

It is a common belief that at the times of the lunar and the solar eclipses it is forbidden to eat and drink. This is baseless. These are times when men should turn to Allah. It is quite another thing if they refrain from eating and drinking on that account. To give up eating and drinking but doing all worldly things and coming sins during these times is changing the laws of the Shari'ah and this is an innovation.

Problem 3

After offering prayer some women consider it necessary to turn back a corner of the prayer-cloth lest Satan should pray on that. This is totally baseless.

Problem 4

It is a general practice among the Namazis that a sick Namazi praying in a sitting posture sits at the extreme left of the row, as if it is undesirable to sit somewhere in the middle of the row. This practice is baseless.

Problem 5

Some people think that one should not sleep after the Tahajjud (midnight) prayer, and if he sleeps the prayer goes waste. Many persons are deprived of the blessings of Tahajjud, because they can not remain awake till the morning. It may be noted that it is lawful to sleep after Tahajjud.

Problem 6

It is a common belief that it is unlawful to offer prayer in darkness. This is quite false. However, one must be sure that one does not deviate from the direction of the Qibla while praying on account of darkness.

Problem 7

Some women say that if many women offer prayer while standing at one place it is not right to stand one after another. This is false.

Problem 8

Some people say that after doing the Sajdah Tilawat (prostration during recitation of the Quran) one should also offer "Salaam" (Salutation) in both directions. This is quite false.

Problem 9

It is a belief among the common people that because of sleeping before the Isha prayer the Isha prayer is lost and after getting up from sleep one should offer a compensatory prayer for the lost one. This is quite wrong. It should be noted that it is undesirable to sleep before the Isha prayer without a justification. Even if a man has not slept, the time after midnight is a detestable time for the Isha prayer.

Problem 10

It is a common belief among the women that women should offer prayer before menfolk. This is quite false.

Problem 11

Some women believe that there should be two prostrations for one prostration verse. This is quite false.

Problem 12

It is a common belief among the people that if the right toe slips from its place during prayer, then the prayer is lost. This is quite false, but to move the toes without justification is a bad habit.

Problem 13

Some men say that one should not speak after a Sunnat prayer even if one has been trampled upon under a horse's hoof. This is baseless. To act upon such belief is bad faith. Moreover, in so doing there is a possibility of missing an essential duty of the Shari'ah such as teaching someone a religious rule or responding to someone's call for help.

Problem 14

During a railway journey some persons offer their prayers while sitting and in the wrong direction without justification and consider this to be lawful. Note that no rules are changed in the Railway turn. There may be some difficulty but one faces a little difficulty in praying at home also. Similarly, some women who are used to praying' offer prayer while sitting in their horse-carriage. It should be noted that if there is no danger in stopping the carriage, it should be stopped for praying on the ground. The usual veil for screening is sufficient as Purdah.

Problem 15

Some persons give up prayer because they are suffering from diseases in which it is difficult to maintain the purity of body and clothes. They think that in such a situation the prayer cannot be lawful. It is wrong to think like that. It is imperative to offer prayers even in such situations after consulting the Ulama. Prayer becomes valid even in a situation when it is very difficult and painful to wash the body or it is feared that the illness will be aggravated and there are not enough clothes to change.

Problem 16

It has also been observed that some men when they visit the mosque for the Friday prayer first of all sit down in the mosque and then stand up to offer the Sunnat prayer, even though they do not come from a long distance nor do they require to calm down their breath. This is baseless. The breath can be calmed down even by standing a little and it is not necessary to sit down as they do.

Problem 17

It is a common belief that if the Sunnat of the Fajr (morning) prayer of anyone is missed the omission can be made good by sitting at his place till the sunrise and then offer it. This is also a wrong practice. It is quite lawful that the man may engage himself in any work and then offer the Sunnat prayer after sunrise.

Problem 18

Some men say that the lamp of the mosque should not be put out but let it burning. This is baseless. The lamp should be put out when light is not needed. To leave it burning alone when there is none in the mosque is extravagance and it is prohibited.

Problem 19

While forming the row for the congregational prayer (Jama'at) some people have been seen straightening the row by joining together their toes. This is wrong. The row is straightened by joining the shoulders and the ankles.

Problem 20

It has often been observed that while listening to the first part of the Friday sermon some persons fold both their hands, and while listening to the second part of the sermon they place their hands on their thighs. This practice too is baseless.

Problem 21

On hearing the name of the Holy Prophet (PBUH) during the Friday sermon some people recite the DROOD loudly. This is not lawful. DROOD may be recited only in the heart and not with the tongue.

Problem 22

Some people think that if the left elbow remains naked the prayer becomes defective (Makrooh). The nakedness of the left elbow has no peculiarity in this matter. The correct position is that when both or any one of the two elbows, whether the left or the right, remains naked then the prayer become disapproved.

Qira-at and Tajweed

(Recitation of the Quran strictly according to the rules of Recitation)

Problem 1

Some people have written that it is unbelief to join together two letters of the Holy Quran at wrong places while reciting it; more than this, they have also written that by joining some letters in the Surah Al-Hamd the name of Satan is formed. There is no truth in any of these statements. It is correct that according to the rules of Recitation joining the letters on these two occasions is wrong and hateful but the story about the formation of Satan's name is only a fabrication.

Problem 2

It is a common belief among the Huffaz and some others that Allah's name is not recited in any circumstances when starting the recitation of the Surah Bara-ah. The correct position is that only in one condition Allah's name is not recited, i.e. when the recitation of this Surah is started in continuation of the recitation of the preceding Surah. it is necessary to pronounce Allah's name if recitation is started with this Surah or when its recitation is started after some pause of the recitation in-progress.

Du'a, Zikr Azhar

(Supplication, rehearsal of Holy Words)

Problem 1

It is a common belief among the people that it is not right to recite DROOD without ablution. This is totally wrong. It is all right to recite even the Quran without ablution. The Quran should, however, not be touched with the hands without ablution.

Problem 2

It is commonly believed that it is forbidden to recite the Quran at midday. It is quite wrong. Offering prayers and not recitation is forbidden at this time.

Problem 3

Even the practitioners of religion do not pay any attention to the fact that they write the Qur'anic verses without ablution or hand over the Quran to a man who is not with ablution. It should be noted well that writing and touching the Quran with the hands without ablution are unlawful acts.

Problem 4

Some spiritual guides say that the rehearsal of Holy Words of names (Zikr) loudly is unconditionally lawful. This is quite wrong. One very important condition of its lawfulness is that neither the heart of a person who is offering prayers nor a sleeping person should be disturbed. Where there is a possibility of such disturbance Zikr should be carried on in low voice, although it may have been advised to perform Zikr in loud voice.

Mortal diseases and Funeral

Problem 1

It is a common belief that the widow cannot even hold the leg of the coffin-carrier. This is quite wrong. The widow has a greater right to do so than strangers.

Problem 2

It is a common belief that when death occurs in a house or in the same Mohallah (sector) it is a sin to eat and drink until the dead body is taken to the graveyard. This is quite baseless.

Problem 3

The common people believe that it is not right to tread upon the place where the bath water of the dead body has fallen. With the same belief they dig a pit so that the water may collect there. This is quite false.

Problem 4

Some people think that it is necessary to put fresh earth on the graves during the month of Muharram. This is also a baseless belief.

Problem 5

Some men take great care to ensure that bath to a dead body should not be given by using pots available in the house but this should be done with unused newly-purchased pots and these pots should not be used in the house but they should be donated to the mosque or destroyed. This belief too is baseless.

Problem 6

It is observed that while uttering the Takbeerat (Allahu Akbar) during a funeral prayer the people raise up their faces towards the sky. This is a baseless practice.

Problem 7

It is a custom in most places that while burying the dead body people lay the dead body in the grave face upwards and then turn only its face towards the Qiblah. This is not correct. The entire body should be turned towards the Qiblah.

Problem 8

Most people think it necessary to make the dying person drink some syrup and blame those who do not do this, although this is neither essential nor blameworthy. The belief of syrup service is in itself bad.

Fasting

Problem 1

It is a common belief that it is not good to fast only on a single day. This belief is also baseless.

Problem 2

It is a common belief among some people that none should fast on the tenth day of Muharram, because Yazid's mother fasted on that date. This is totally wrong.

Problem 3

It is a common belief among some people that he who fasts for six days after the Eid festival must fast on the day immediately following the Eid, otherwise the fasting will lapse. This is totally wrong.

Problem 4

Some people think that it is not necessary to take the pre-dawn meal (sihri) for optional fasts. This is not correct. Sihri is necessary for obligatory as well optional fasting.

Problem 5

Some people say the optional fasts are broken after the Maghrib (sunset) prayer. This is also baseless.

Zakat, Hajj, Qurbani, Aqiqah and Nazar

Problem 1

Some persons say that on the Eid-al-azha day one must fast until sacrificing the animal. This is baseless. However, it is desirable not to eat anything before the sacrifice, but it is not obligatory to avoid eating, nor does it bear the recompense of fasting, nor has one to make the intent (Niy-yat) of fasting.

Problem 2

Some people think that it is not right to use for Ihram a cloth-sheet of two pieces stitched from the middle. This is baseless. Only that stitching is forbidden for a man which makes the Ihram cloth fit on the body, for example shirts, trousers, etc.

Problem 3

Some people think that it is not lawful to sacrifice a castrated animal. This is false. On the other hand the sacrifice of such an animal is better. Our Holy Prophet (PBUH) has himself sacrificed a castrated fat-tailed ram.

Problem 4

It is a very common belief that the meat of an animal sacrificed for Aqiqah should not be eaten by the parents, maternal and paternal grandfathers and grandmothers. This is baseless. This meat of sacrifice is governed by the rules of Qurbani meat.

Problem 5

Some people think that if Zakat money is paid to anyone without telling him that it is Zakat money, then the obligation of Zakat is not discharged. This is quite wrong, as Zakat is discharged even without telling the recipient that it is Zakat money. It is, however, essential to do so after making intent in the heart that the payment is for Zakat.

Problem 6

Some people think that Zakat is not due on such silver and gold ornaments as are being worn daily. It should be noted that ornaments whether worn or kept in safe custody are equally liable to Zakat.

Problem 7

Some men are heard saying that if one turns the thump of the left hand at the time of taking oath, the oath does not become effective. This is quite false.

Problem 8

It is frequently seen that the people distribute the sweet-meat of vows and offerings among the Namaziz of a mosque among whom may be Sayyids and rich persons. The vow is not fulfilled by distributing the offering among them.

Nikah, Talaq, Khula and Zihar

(Marriage, Divorce and Zihar)

Problem 1

At some places people think that Nikah (marriagetie) materialises even without witnesses, only with the mutual agreement of husband and wife and they name such marriage. Tan Bakhshi (body offer). This is in no way a real marriage. Such union of a man and a woman is pure lewdness.

Problem 2

It is a common belief that it is not lawful for a spiritual guide (pir) to marry his female disciple. This is totally wrong. Our Holy Prophet (PBUH) was a Pir of all his sacred wives.

Problem 3

It is a common saying that the matrimonial tie is broken after the twentieth issue. It is totally false.

Problem 4

Some men say that the matrimonial tie is broken by speaking ill of Eve. This is also false. But it is not lawful to speak ill of Eve.

Problem 5

It is a common belief among the people that it is lawful for a widow to go out of her house to another house before the departure of the coffin of her deceased husband but it is not lawful after the departure of the coffin. As if, according to these people, the Iddat (widow's waiting period) commences not from the time of death but from the time of the departure of the coffin. This is totally wrong.

Problem 6

It is a common practice that if an unbelieving woman embraces Islam then as soon as she is formally initiated in the Islamic faith the people marry her to some Muslim. This is a serious mistake. If an unbelieving woman embraces Islam in a non-Muslim country, her divorce will materialise after the expiry of three menstrual periods, then she will have to complete her iddat (the waiting period after divorce). In other words her marriage with a Muslim will be valid after the expiry of the six menstrual periods.

Problem 7

Some people believe that if a wife calls her husband father then the matrimonial tie is broken. This is entirely baseless. The matrimonial tie will remain intact even if the husband calls his wife mother or daughter, but all this is an insolence. However, if a husband says to his wife: To me you are mother/daughter then under certain circumstances the wife becomes unlawful for the husband. The details of this aspect of the issue may be inquired from the learned jurists.

Problem 8

Some people feel doubt whether or not the matrimonial tie remains intact during the menstrual period. This doubt is baseless; the matrimonial tie remains intact. It is, however, not right to look at or touch the part of the body from the navel to the thigh.

Problem 9

The people in general do not consider it lawful to marry a material aunt, an aunt and a step mother-in-law. This belief is wrong. It is, however, another thing if some person does not marry these relatives out of regard for them.

Problem 10

Some people believe that if a man divorces his wife in anger or simply to threaten her, such divorce is not effective, but this belief is wrong.

Problem 11

There is a common belief among the people that a marriage should not be solemnized between the two Ids, because such marriages are not successful. The belief is against the law of the Shari'ah and quite false.

Purchase and Sale, Rent, Mortgage, Right of Pre-emption etc.

Problem 1

It is a common belief that trade in grain is unlawful. It is quite false. It is however, unlawful to hoard grain during famine days when grain is not available at any price and when by holding back its sale the people will face distress.

Problem 2

There is a custom to demand from the seller some additional quantity of the thing that has already been purchased. Some people think that it is a sin to do so, but this is not correct. There is no harm to take some additional quantity if the seller gives it with a good grace, otherwise it is unlawful to tease him for this purpose.

Problem 3

Some landlords think that self-growing grass becomes their property which they can sell, simply because they protect it and stop others from cutting it. Both these matters are quite wrong.

Problem 4

Some landlords have also been heard saying that although it is not lawful to sell an orchard before its trees bear and bring out fruits, but if the rent of some land is included in this sale and transaction becomes lawful. This is quite wrong; the sale agreement cannot become lawful by the inclusion of this renting of the land.

Problem 5

The landlords in general think that in a mortgage deed if the mortgager declares the profit of the mortgaged land to be lawful for the mortgagee, then it becomes lawful. This is altogether wrong. If the mortgage deed contains this condition of utilisation of profit, it will become unlawful and illegal.

Problem 6

Some men believe that the practice of mating together assess and horses is undesirable, but this is not correct. It is, however, not lawful to charge some fees for this.

Problem 7

Some men believe that the right of pre-emption is restricted to ancestral relations. This is quite wrong.

Problem 8

It is a common belief prevailing among some people that a man, having children, wants to gift the whole or a part of his property, such gifting can be effective only when the property concerned was acquired by the marker of the gift himself and is not an inherited property. This is not correct as acquired and inherited properties are governed by the same law.

Hunting and Slaughtering

Problem 1

It is a common belief that he who slaughters an animal will not get salvation; this is quite false.

Problem 2

Some say that it is necessary for a slaughtered animal to be lawful that there must be three nails in the knife with which the animal is slaughtered. This is quite wrong.

Problem 3

It is a common belief that the animal slaughtered by a bastard is not lawful. This is quite wrong.

Problem 4

Some people think that it is not lawful for a woman to slaughter an animal. This is quite wrong.

Problem 5

It is a common belief among the people that it is essential for the helper of a slaughterer also to pronounce Allah's name at the time of slaughtering. This is quite wrong.

Problem 6

Some people think that if the helper of a slaughterer, one who holds the animal, is a non-Muslim, the slaughtered animal is not lawful. This is quite wrong.

Problem 7

It is a prevailing belief that at the time of breaking eggs words like the following should be pronounced.

White egg quite saturated, neither it has legs nor a head. Sunnat of Hazrat Khalilullah (A.S.) Allah Akbar. This is quite baseless.

Problem 8

It is generally said that it is not lawful to eat the meat of an animal slaughtered by a woman. This is quite wrong.

Clothes, Decoration and Purdah (veil)

Problem 1

It is a common belief among the people that a female disciple need not observe Purdah before her spiritual guide (Pir). This is quite wrong. There is no difference between Pirs and others in the matter of Purdah.

Problem 2

Some women believe that it is detestable to take water from the hand of a woman who has no bangles on her hands, nor has she coloured at least one of her nails with Menhdi (a colour yielding plant). This is quite wrong.

Problem 3

It is a common belief among some persons that a man becomes accountable by wearing new shoes and new clothes, but he is exempted from accountability if he wears them on last Fridays from the months of Rajab to Ramazan or on last Fridays. That is why new clothes should be worn during the said period. Some men wear many suits all at once for this reason. This is all quite wrong.

Problem 4

Some women believe that a woman must have on her left hand some token of womanhood, e.g., bangles, rings, etc. This is quite wrong.

Problem 5

Some women believe that to cover their heads with something before a stranger (na-Mahrm) is essential only during iddat (the period of Shara'i isolation) and not at other times. It is quite wrong.

Problem 6

It has been observed that while wrapping turbans round their heads those who are standing sit down and those who are sitting stand up. This is quite baseless.

Problem 7

Salutation, hand-shake' living and mixing together (co-living)

While bidding salutation (Salam) some persons put their hands on the forehead or bend their heads or put their hands on their chests. All those extra actions are baseless and against the laws of the Shari'ah.

Food and Drink

Problem 1

It is a well-known saying that one should not leave a banquet hungry. This has no basis.

Problem 2

It is a well-known saying that there is virtue in drinking in a standing posture that water which is left after some other's drink. There is no evidence to prove that this is correct.

Problem 3

Some men say that meat without bone becomes detestable. This is baseless.

Problem 4

Most women believe that it is forbidden for them by the Shari'ah to take meals before their men have taken their meals. This is baseless.

Problem 5

It is a custom among men that when a person is taking meals and invites some other person to the meal and if the person invited does not want to share the meal he expresses his inability by saying: With the name of Allah. This is not proved by any injunction of the Shari'ah. So this custom should be given up and some other words should be used instead, for example: May Allah bless you, etc.

Fortune Telling and Augury

(Superstition)

Problem 1

Some believe that if such and such animal utters a cry, death spreads. This is baseless.

Problem 2

In the matter of their lessons some students believe in this saying: If Sabbath is missed the lesson is missed. If this is taken as a matter of sheer chance it is all right, but if it is taken to be a matter of certainty, then it is baseless and a fabrication and it comes within the belief that days have something to do with events and fortunes. This is in fact a branch of astrology.

Problem 3

It is observed that some students commence a new book on Wednesday and ascribe this practice to some narrative, but there is no narrative to this effect.

Problem 4

Some men think that if the left eye of a man and the right eye of a woman twitches then it is an indication of some imminent mishap or sorrow; or of happiness and good fortune if the twitching of the eyes is vice versa. This is totally wrong belief.

Problem 5

Some people consider it ominous and inauspicious to pronounce the names of certain places or animals, e.g., Nanutah, Kirana, snake, swine' etc. This is quite foolish and baseless.

Problem 6

Some persons consider it good or bad to commence a journey on a particular day or hour. This is the belief of the non-Muslims or the astrologers.

Problem 7

Most people say that the itching of the palm is a sign of getting money and the itching of the sole or one shoe getting on the other is a sign that the need of a journey will arise. These are foolish and baseless superstitions.

Problem 8

If the crow caws on the parapet of a house, some women take it as the sign of the visit of a guest. It is a sin to entertain such notions.

Problem 9

Most people believe that if a man is struck with a wooden ladle he becomes gluttonous. This belief is quite baseless.

Problem 10

It is a common belief prevalent among the people that if a broom in a man's hand by chance touches the body of another man the later takes it ill and retorts by saying; I shall drop salt into the well on account of which there will appear dark spots on your face. This is quite baseless.

Problem 11

Some people believe that by striking someone with a broom the body of the man so stricken dries up. As a precaution against this one should make a spitting sound towards the direction of the broom. This is quite baseless.

Problem 12

It is a custom prevalent among us that if a man is going somewhere and you call him from behind, he will be ready to pick up a quarrel with you because he thinks that the purpose of his journey will be defeated. This belief has no base in the laws of the Shari'ah.

Problem 13

In our society the women take from the cawing of the crow an indication that a guest is coming. This is baseless.

Problem 14

Similarly, if the handle of the hand flour-mill goes out of the hand suddenly our women take it as an indication that a guest is coming. This is foolish and baseless.

Problem 15

It is a common belief among the women that when the flour flies out of the kneading pan, a guest will arrive. This is quite wrong.

Problem 16

Some people think that when one shoe gets on the other, there is a possibility of the need of going on a journey. This is baseless.

Problem 17

There is a belief that itching on the palm on the hand is an indication that money is coming from somewhere. This is quite baseless.

Problem 18

It is a common belief prevalent among the people that if the cock crows in the evening it should be slaughtered at once, because this evening crowing is an ill omen. This is baseless.

Problem 19

It is prevalent among the people that if a hen crow, it is a sign of the outbreak of some epidemic. So slaughter the hen at once. This is also quite wrong.

Problem 20

If two men go out to bring a physician for a patient, it is taken as a sign that the patient shall not recover and as such it is regarded ominous. This is quite wrong.

Problem 21

If a new bride has to go to the well to draw water, it is advised that a lamp should be lighted at the brink of the well before drawing the water. This is wrong, rather Shirk (idolatry).

Problem 22

It is a custom that when someone sneezes when a person is just starting a journey, the man comes back thinking that the objective of his journey will not be achieved. This is wrong.

Miscellaneous Problems

Problem 1

It is a common belief among the people that it is not good to eat and drink between the 'Asi (late afternoon) and the Maghrib (sunset hours). A reason for this has been invented that at the time of death Satan presents during these hours a cup of urine to the dying man to drink. If he is not used to eating and drinking at this time he will reject Satan's offer. This has no place in the Shari'ah.

Problem 2

It is a common belief that it is not proper to hold a cane in the hand, because Yazid had a cane in his hand. This is incorrect.

Problem 3

It is also not correct to say that the use of the jahoo plant (a river side plant with thin sticks of which baskets are made) is not permissible.

Problem 4

It is generally said that husband and wife should not make themselves disciples of the same spiritual guide (Pir), lest they should become brother and sister. This is totally wrong.

Problem 5

It is generally held that something which is ill-gotten and unlawful becomes lawful by direct purchase or exchange. For example, a person stole something or purchased trees before bearing fruits and the stolen thing or the fruit came to the market for sale, the buyer of such goods thinks that as he has bought these things with his money so they are lawful for him. Similarly, if a person takes bribe then exchanges this ill-gotten money for another man's money, he thinks that the money so exchanged has become lawful for him. Both these transactions are unlawful. There is another issue which the people have misunderstood.

Problem 6

It is generally believed that it is not lawful to drink water drawn from the well by means of Dhekli[8]. This is quite wrong.

Problem 7

It is a common belief that one should not shake a tree during the night, because the tree is disturbed and teased. This is baseless.

Problem 8

Some people believe that a rosary has right and wrong sides and in counting the beads the right and wrong sides should be taken into consideration. This has no basis and is quite wrong.

Problem 9

It is said that while sleeping, a man should not spread his legs in the direction of the polestar. This is also baseless.

Problem 10

Some women believe that if a cat does some harm it should not be beaten except with a threshing pestle wrapped with a layer of cotton. That is how the Holy Prophet (PBUH) had punished a cat. The problem as well as the Tradition referred to are both wrong.

---

8 It is an out-dated crude device used in the villages for drawing water from the well.

Problem 11

People think that it is unlawful to talk in a bath or latrine. This belief has no basis, but it is not right to talk in these places unless it is very urgent.

Problem 12

There are spells and charms which are practised to find out the names of thieves and the people consider them lawful and reliable. It should be noted that such practices are not at all reliable; they are entirely subject to the trend of thought of the practitioner. If two names of two suspected persons are suggested of two practitioners, the results of their practices will each disclose a different name. This clearly proves that these occult practices are nothing.

Problem 13

It is a widely prevalent practice that if some disrespect is unintentionally committed towards the Holy Qur'an, then the person concerned gives in charity grain equal in weight to the Quran. The main objective of this act is very good and beneficial that charity is practised as an expiation and penalty and the soul is warned to be careful in the future. But two things in this practice are baseless and deserve correction. Firstly, the Holy Quran is placed on one side of the scale to weigh it against grain. Secondly, people consider it as an obligation in the laws of the Shari'ah. There is no harm if grain is given in charity on the basis of a liberal estimate.

Problem 14

Some men say that women should use razors to eliminate the unwanted impure hair. This is not correct. It may not be proper medically, but it is not forbidden by the Shari'ah.

Problem 15

Some people consider it vicious to sweep some place at night, to put out a lamp with the mouth or to comb anothers' hair even with his/her permission. These are all baseless.

Problem 16

Some men say that if it becomes necessary to stamp something twice, it must be done thrice. This has no basis.

Problem 17

I have seen some men teaching others a special method of supplication that with its help they may be able to know some past or future events. The Shari'ah does not recognise any supplication for this purpose. According to the laws of the Shari'ah Istikharah is a method which removes the hesitation in doing or not doing something. It is not intended to disclose some past and future events. It is unlawful to believe in the results yielded by such supplication as the people have invented.

Problem 18

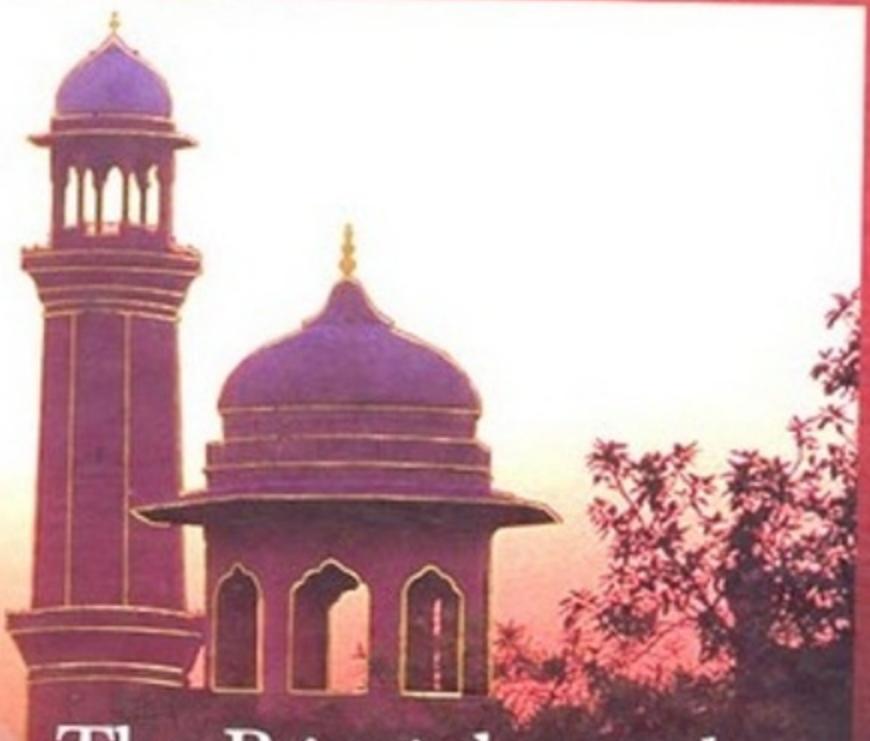
I have seen some practitioners of the occult arts, even though they are learned men in religion, giving special weight to certain days in their practices. This is a branch of astrology which should be given up. It is wrong to say that it is a necessary condition of such practices. So far as I am concerned, I have totally excluded this condition from such practices and yet, by the Grace of Allah, there is no decrease in the desired effect. The effect of the practice depends on the trend of thinking of the person concerned. Conditions play no part in this matter. These are empty claims of the practitioners.

Problem 19

It is a common belief among a section of the people that if a man drops salt on the ground, on the Day of Judgement he will have to pick it up with his eyelashes. This is quite baseless.

Problem 20

Some men say that if a man does not place his hand on his mouth at the time of yawning, Satan spits in his mouth. This is quite false. However, it is established by a Tradition that if the hand is not placed on the mouth on yawning Satan enters the belly and laughs there.



Problem 21

It is a common saying that if anyone has to go out to call a physician to treat a patient, he should not place a saddle on the horse's back. This is quite false.

Problem 22

Some persons say that at the time of applying antimony to the eyes the staining needle should be used only when it has been blown over three times with the recitation of the Quranic Surah Ikhlas. This is baseless.

Nafa` laazim is in itself an objective and the nafa` muta`addi is an objective by request (secondary) 84

A verbal form of reformation (islaah) is not sufficient for an active (practical) fasaad (act of immorality/mischief), in fact practical reformatory steps and propagation are essential 85

An important warning 106
The labelling of a Mubaah act as Makrooh or Haraam due to some factor of fasaad or it being a preamble to Haraam, is not the forte of just anyone 106
If a thing is permissible for an individual, but by others looking at him and taking a wrong cue, where this becomes a testimonial for them (to carry this out which will lead them into fasaad beliefs etc.), then this act will also be impermissible for this individual 106

Preface:

Few words about Hadhrat Moulana Ashraf Ali Thanwi (A.R) (1280 – 1362 / 1864 – 1943 – India)

He was responsible for academic and religious revival in India. One who dedicated his entire life for upliftment of the understanding of Islaam. Born in 1864 (1280) of the lineage of Hadhrat Umar ibn ul Khattab, in Tana Bawan.

He grew up in a pure religious environment. Memorised the Quraan e Kareem and completed most of the Islaamic sciences at a very tender age. Shy by nature, not inclined to play and found performing Tahajjud at the age of 12. At the age of 15 he travelled to Darul Uloom Deoband to study under Moulana Mahmood ul Hassan (A.R), Moulana Yacqooub Nanotwi (A.R), Moulana Qasim Nanotwi (A.R) and Moulana Sayid Ahmad Dehlawi (A.R). He spent 5 years and did not even accept meal invitations from relatives.

He debated with Hindus and Christians but later avoided all. Completed studies in Deoband in 1884 (1300). He proceeded on the advice of his teachers to Al Fayd Al Aam in Kanpur Jami ul Uloom from which many renown scholars eminated.

He wrote about a 1000 books. He wrote on Tafseer, Ahadeeth, Fiqh, Aqeedah, Tasawwuf, Dawah, General Guidance, Dhikr, Seerah. His talks have been published in 20 volumes stretching over 600 pages per volume. His explanations were simple and clear.

He took allegiance at the hands of Haji Imadadullaah al Makki. He performed Hajj in 1892 – 93 (1310) and stayed with his Shaykh for 6 months.

He is regarded by many as the true revivers of valid Tasawwuf. He expanded the pure essence of Tasawwuf without extremism.

He stayed in Kanpur for 14 years. He returned to Thana Bawan until demise in 1943 (1362) as head of his Shaykhs Khanqah.

He did single handed what organisations academics, institutions and groups could not do (for much more information see "Muslim scholars of the 20th Century" by Shaykh Shuayb Ahmed P128 – 132)

About the Book.

The book "The Principles and Codes of law in Hanafi Fiqh" is a good summary compiled by Moulana Muhammad Zahid Mazhari Nadwi.

From the first chapter commencing with "What is Fiqh?" till the end of the 5th Chapter is technical, tedious and difficult reading especially designed for the benefit of the Ulema. From the 6th Chapter starting from "The definition of Sunnat" is excellent material for the non – scholars.

Our humble suggestion is that the 1st part should be studied by Ulema in group so that subsequent, immediate, discussions, deliberations and inter actions may ensure whilst the second part should be taught by the Ulema to the non – scholars by rendering further explanations.

The depth, intensity, extent, insight, foresight and vastness of the Ilm and understanding of the Deen possessed by Hadhrat Moulana Ashraf Ali Thanwi (A.R) shines like daylight in this wonderful compilation.

We make duaa Allaah Jalla Majdahu grants us proper understanding of Deen and ability to practice.

CHAPTER ONE

What is Fiqh?

Fiqh is the understanding and comprehending of the object of nusoos (text). This is something which Allaah Ta'ala had bestowed the pious predecessors with. Imaam Abu Hanifah, Imaam Shaafi (rahmatullah alaihima), etc. were Imaams because of their deep understanding of this knowledge. All the Aimmah-e-Mujtahiddeen excel in this quality and field of knowledge. None (in present times) can ever match them. The question of who is the best of them all should never arise. This discussion should never emerge from our mouths. We are not qualified to grade the Aimmah-e-Mujtahiddeen, because it is beyond our limitations. Secondly, we do not know the proper limits and in lauding the one we are bound to degrade the others.

The Definition of Fiqh

Imaam Sahib (rahmatullah alayh) has defined Fiqh as follows: "The recognition of the soul (insofar as its objective in life and its journey to Aakhirah)." This is a general definition which encompasses both the external (zaahiri) and internal (baatini). What is then the difference between tasawwuf and fiqh? The predecessors used to combine fiqh and tasawwuf.

Amongst the salf, fiqh was not only the knowledge of the zaahiri (external factors), in fact, it was the combination of both the zaahiri and baatini knowledge. This included tasawwuf as well.

The reality of Tafaqquh-fi-Deen (in-depth understanding in Deen)

Tafaqquh-fi-Deen (understanding in Deen) is not merely the literal understanding of the words (in the kitaabs). The kuffaar also understand written words. So if the mere understanding would be Tafaqquh then the kuffaar would also be amongst the Ahle Khair (chosen, good people). The real meaning of Tafaqquh-fi-Deen is that together with understanding the literal import of the words, it is the recognition of its reality, as well. There are many amongst the Hanafi scholars who qualify. [ibid. page 387, vol.4]

Fiqh is amongst the most difficult and delicate from the other faculties and sciences (of Deen)

Moulana Ashraf Ali Thaanwi (rahmatullah alayh) says that in his opinion, the science of Fiqh is the most difficult. He also humbly states that he does not have much compatibility with this science. He says it renders him helpless. [Majaalis Hakimul Ummat, page 330]

The science of Fiqh is very profound. This is the reason why I do not encourage or compel any student to study other Fiqh kitaabs besides those of the Hanafi Fiqh. [Ashraful Ma`moolaat, page 9]

The science of Fiqh is very subtle. I don't fear anything more than when a ruling or mas`alah is presented before me (to solve or give a ruling). Many thoughts and possibilities conjure up in my mind. This is the reason why nowadays I refer fatwas to others. Some people are more daring in it (i.e. issuing fatwas), whereas there has to be extreme caution in this. [Al-Ifaadhaatul Yoymiya, page 299, vol.8]

Fiqh is not the mere superficial reading of kitaabs

Fiqh would not be defined as the mere superficial perusing of kitaabs. Fiqh is a celestial light (noor) which subsists in the heart. It is the blessing of this that the holder thereof gains an understanding of Deen. It is this very noor which Allah Ta`ala sometimes snatches away. This is something which is not in the control of man. Now, you can read and study thousands of kitaabs, but because you have no understanding of the Deen, you will never become a Faqeeh.

This noor of fiqh increases with obedience and wanes with sin. That 'Faqeeh' who is not obedient or pious, is a Faqeeh of the kitaabs

(and not of the Deen). He is not a haqeeqi (real) Faqeeh and is not included in the class of fuqaha regarding whom Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) gave glad tidings.

And since we are aware that fiqh is the understanding of the Deen, what doubt can there now be that a Faqeeh is also a soofi. All our Fuqaha, as many as there were, were all Sahib-e-Nisbat and Sahib-e-Ma`rifat (i.e. Walis who followed the Path of Tareeqat). The proper and total understanding of the Deen cannot be acquired without nisbat and ma`rifat. This is the reason why it has been mentioned regarding the Fuqaha, "One Faqeeh is harder on shaitaan than a thousand `aabids." The person who understands the Deen well, will be privy to the deceptions and ploys of shaitaan. He will not allow a single trick to entrap him. As for the unlearned `aabid, shaitaan can manoeuvre and manipulate him as he pleases. [At Tableeghul Hajil Mabroor, page 138, vol.2]

The rank and acceptance of the Fuqahaa

The truth of the matter is that the rank and status of the Fuqahaa is the highest, because they have understood and recognised the specialities and meanings of the Deen, contrary to the Hukama, whose knowledge and specialities are only limited to the external body. [Majaalis Hakimul Ummat, page 197, vol. 2]

I always maintain that there are two groups that protect and safeguard the Deen,

1. The *Fuqahaa and
2. The *Soofiya.

The existence of the Fuqahaa is a great boon and blessing to the Muslim Ummat.

The Ulama have written that no person knows his status by Allaah Ta`ala, as to whether Allaah Ta'ala intends good for him or not, besides the Fuqahaa. Because it is stated in the Hadith,

"That person for whom Allaah intends good, He grants him understanding (fiqh) in Deen."

Someone saw Imaam Muhammad (rahmatullah alayh) in his dream, after his demise and asked him what transpired with him. He replied that when he was presented before Allaah Rabbul Izzat, then Allaah Ta'ala asked him, "O Muhammad! Ask whatever you wish for." He responded, "Forgive me." He was told, "If We had not intended forgiveness for you, We would not have blessed you with the knowledge of Fiqh. We have granted you the knowledge of Fiqh because We desired forgiveness for you." However this does not necessitate safety from any reckoning.

It does not mean that there is absolutely no fear of an evil death for a Faqeeh. One should not sit contented with this hope, because if Allaah Ta'ala intends punishment, then He will merely snatch away this knowledge. [Alhajjul Mabroor, page 138, vol.2]

It is impermissible to make any criticism on a Mujtahid by means of Usool-e-Fiqh

To avoid Ikhtilaaf is difficult. People have formulated laws and rules for its codification (Usool-e-Fiqh), but these laws are not all-encompassing. The example of this is like the laws of Arabic grammar, where the laws have been formulated in order to dissect and understand the formation of sentences. This knowledge is very beneficial. The reason for this codification was not so that the people who speak the language adhere to these grammar laws, or that all aspects have been totally encompassed. These laws were formulated for the benefit of the non-Arabic speaking people, to assist them in understanding the language and to be able to converse with the Arabs. Hence, if any type of speech is found amongst the Arab-speaking and this is not listed in the laws of grammar, then it will not be said that this speech is incorrect and the people speaking it are wrong, rather it will be averred that the laws of Arabic grammar which we know are deficient in that it did not encompass this part.

Similarly, it would not be correct to hold a Mujtahid to the Usools of Fiqh. In fact, it may sometimes occur that a statement or ruling of a Mujtahid does not conform to the Usools, in which case we may say that the Usools of Fiqh are deficient. Thereafter, it will be said with difficulty that the Mujtahid did not have any (concrete) proof for his ruling. [Husn Azeez, page 47 and 354]

The status and ranking of Usool-e-Fiqh

To prefer one nass over another in cases where they are conflicting, is the forte of the Mujtahiddeen. As for the Usools of Fiqh which are listed in the various kutub, these were non-existent (in this form) during the era of the Mujtahiddeen. The latter Ulama had in fact, extracted these from the various rulings of the Mujtahiddeen, in order to save this Ummat from mischief and confusion. This was done so that not anyone can have free reign in making Ijtihaad. Hence, it is as if these Usools are the result and consequence of the various Masaa`il, (i.e. they originate from them), and the Masaa`il do not branch out from the Usools. Also, to codify from them is simpler. [Al-Kalaamul Hasan, page 123]

The difference between the Usools of the earlier Mujtahiddeen and the latter

One speciality of the Mujtahiddeen is that they would extract such Usools from the Nusoos which could not be disputed or argued away. Whereas those Usools which the latter Ulama have extracted from the definitions of the Mujtahiddeen can be broken up. [Kalaamul Hasan, page 46]

If there is any doubt in the Masaa`il enumerated by the Mujtahiddeen, then we are not responsible for it

If there is any doubt or uncertainty in a Mas`alah, then it is not our responsibility to respond or give a reply to it, because we have not formulated the Masaa`il. Like for example, if there is a doubt or misgiving in any law (of a country), then the solution and answer for it is to be given by the Law-Makers of the country, and not the judge or lawyer. [Tarbiyatus Saalik, page13, vol. 1]

The ruling regarding the proclaimed laws of the Fuqahaa

If we realise that a ruling or part thereof is contrary to a clear, unambiguous mansoos (divine text), then it will be abandoned. This is not contrary to Taqleed. There were some occasions where the statements of Imaam Sahib were discarded. Yes, if the Hadith has several possibilities (of meanings and practice), we will adopt the practice of the Mujtahid.
In fact, if Imaam Sahib were around, and if it were asked of him, then too, he would advise the same. Hence, it is as though in this abandonment there is obedience. [Al-Kalaamul Hasan, page 65]

The Sufiya do not have the trait of accommodating and catering for the (welfare of the) general public, therefore (with them) many actions pass off as permissible. Whereas, the Fuqahaa have the quality of catering for the general public, hence there are many such actions which may be permissible or even advisable, but because there is a fear of the masses falling into deviation because of it, it is prohibited from. This is the reason why the Fuqahaa have placed a blanket prohibition on Simaa`. [Al-Kalaamul Hasan, page 16]

The difference between the Fuqahaa and Muhadditheen

The objective of the Muhadditheen is to narrate (Ahaadith) whereas the Fuqahaa delve into its understanding and import. For example, according to the Muhadditheen, singing is permissible without instruments, because of a technical connotation in the Hadith, whereas, the Fuqahaa opine that singing, even without instruments is impermissible, because they understand the illat (reason/cause for prohibition in Hadith). The illat for this prohibition is fear or fitnah, and this same illat is present in singing as it is in the instruments. The Muhadditheen do not delve further than the literal and external content of the narrations, whereas the Fuqahaa, investigate and probe to the objective and import of the narrations. [Hasnul Azeez, page 345, vol. 4]

The rank and status of the Fuqahaa and Muhaqqiqeen

The Faqeeh is supposed to be an embodiment of many traits. He is a Faqeeh, a Muhaddith, a Mutakallim (expert in Ilm Kalam), he should also have a political mind, in fact, sometimes, there is a need for medical expertise as well, because occasionally there is a need to explain and dilate on such matters.

The sight of a Muhaqqiq should be very deep. He should stick to the reality and not become involved in vain and useless matters. This was also the quality and trait of the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum). [Hasnul Azeez, page 362, vol. 4]

The quality and attribute of the Muhaqqiq should also be that he understands the reality (of matters). There are many sides to the reality (of anything). The encompassing of every side and aspect is the speciality of Allaah Ta'ala. Every aspect has to be studied individually, because there is no uniformity between them. An in-depth understanding is realised when he dislikes using large descriptive words for other Muhaqqiqeen. The differences amongst the Aimmah-e-Mujtahideen are of this calibre. Another trait of a Muhaqqiq is that he abstains from vain and frivolous discussions. He does not engage in (intellectual) discussions with a non-Muhaqqiq or a person with a dense mind. In fact if any discussion with an inane person commences, then he quickly maintains silence. This is regarded as a sign of defeat by the masses. The reason for this silence is not that the Muhaqqiq has no proof to present, but the fact of the matter is that this type of (intellectual) discussion is difficult for the thick-skulled person to comprehend. [Hisnul Azeez, page 347, vol. 4]

The comparison between the Fuqahaa and us

The Fuqahaa also explains his proofs and codes of law with regard to his research, but the example of these proofs are like the eyes. His walking is not dependant on a walking-stick. Allaah Ta'ala has blessed the Fuqahaa with 'eyes', which is the instrument of Ijtihaad. They are not in need of the walking-sticks, but we are. Our example is like that of the blind person, whose entire trust and reliance is on the stick. If he walks without the stick, the he will fall into a ditch. [Al-Ifaadhaat, page 73, vol. 1]

Some things are (attained) intuition and flair (zawq). Someone asked how is true zawq acquired, the reply was that it is acquired by the company of the Ahle Zawq. [Al-Ifaadhaat, page 174, vol. 1]

CHAPTER TWO

THE DISCUSSION ON THE PROOFS OF THE SHARIAH

There are four proofs of the Shariah

Kitaabullaah, Sunnat, Ijma of the Ummat and Qiyaas. If any matter complies with one of these four proofs, then it is regarded as being credible and of consideration in the Shariah, if not, it is rejected. It is a grave error not to accept any one of these four proofs, or to pay no heed to them. [Da`wat `Abdiyat, page 119, vol. 15]

PART ONE – IJMA

The proof and evidence for Ijma

Someone once asked Imaam Shaafi (rahmatullah alayh) if Ijma is proven from the Qur`aan Majeed or not. Seeking an answer to this, he completed (scanned through) the Qur`aan Majeed four times. He concluded that the following Aayat provided the relevant proof, "And whoever contradicts and opposes the Messenger after the right path has been shown clearly to him, and follows other than the believers' way…" [Al-Ifaadhaatul Yawmiya, page 371, vol. 9]

The reality of Ijma

The reality of Ijma is that all the Ulama in a particular era had unanimously agreed on a Deeni ruling. If anyone abstains from this unanimity purposely or mistakenly, then he will not have a suitable and appropriate proof and he will not be excused from having erred also. The general rule is that non-adherence and non-acceptance to the Ijma does not affect the (validity or veracity of) Ijma, otherwise it would be difficult to claim and prove the continuity and immunity of the Qur`aan Majeed, because it is reported in Bukhaari Shareef that Hadhrat Ubai (radhiallahu anhu) opined the abrogated Aayaat as part of the Qur`aan Majeed, and Hadhrat Abu Darda (radhiallahu anhu) regarded the words وما خلق in Surah Lail and Ibn Mas`ood (radhiallahu anhu) the Muawwazatain as being not part of the Qur`aan Majeed.

Not even for a minute does any one aver that the Qur`aan Majeed is un-Protected or changed, in fact, all through the ages it has been accepted as being completely unadulterated. Since these personalities have certainly erred in their proofs, the Ulama of all ages have never regarded these views as being contrary to or even affecting the Ijma. However, because of their doubt, we will excuse them…[Al-Iqtisaad, page 38]

Zanni Ijma

The object of Ijma is either the consensus of the majority of the Ummat or such Ijma is zanni (conjectured). However, for a zanni claim, a zanni proof is sufficient. [Ibid. page 70]

PART 2 – QIYAAS

Definition of Qiyaas

"Take lesson, O who with insight" – this Aayat shows that Qiyaas is also a proof (in the Shariah). [Da'wat 'Abdiyyat, page 122, vol. 15]

Only Fiqhi Qiyaas is a proof in the Shariah, which is obtained due to a necessity, using a common illat. The maqees alayh is compared to the maqees. Since the original ruling is derived from nass, and the illat us taken from here hence, the ruling in the maqees is also just as authoritative. [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 394, vol. 2]

An example of Qiyaas

According to the Hadith, "All intoxicants are Haraam." Opium is also an intoxicant, therefore it is also Haraam. Here the prohibition of opium has been established using the nass. [Malhoozaat Jadeed Malfoozaat page 113]

The ruling regarding when to make Qiyaas and when not

If there is a Fiqhi ruling to be made, then the Aayat, "And take lesson, O you who have insight", applies and Qiyaas should be made. If the matter at hand is not a Shar`i one, then the Aayat, "And do not delve in that which you have no knowledge", applies and Qiyaas is prohibited. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 784, vol. 1]

Do the angels also make Qiyaas?

At first, my opinion was that the angels do not make Qiyaas, and that they only follow the clear-cut rulings, until the following Ahaadith came to my attention:

"Indeed he (Jibraeel – alaihis salaam) thrust sand into the mouth of Firoun, fearing that the Mercy will reach him (i.e. that he may recite the Kalima)", and the Hadith where the angels of mercy and punishment differed on the plight of the murdered who repented. These narrations denote that the angels also make Ijtihaad. [Al-Ifaadhaat, page 96, vol. 1]

Regarding the Hadith of the difference of opinion between the angels in respect of the murderer who repented, it is clear that the angels also make Ijtihaad and they can also err in their judgement. This is also apparent that the angels are made aware of the general rules and codes when the occasion of Ijtihaad arises. [Malhoozaat Malfoozaat, page 70]

PART 3 – THE DISCUSSION ON RECOGN`AINIBLE KNOWLEDGE

The reality of Ilm-e-I`tibaari

The reality of this knowledge is the clarity achieved when one thing (mushab-bah) is compared to another (Mushab-bah Behe). It is not established or proved, in fact, the mushab-bah is established through another proof. This is not included or classified under majaaz, be it majaaz-e-mursal or isti`aara. The reason being that in majaaz there is some contextual factor that indicates to the inappropriateness of the Maudoo` lahu meaning, hence the ghair Maudoo` lahu meaning is taken. Whereas in this case, neither is there contextual evidence indicating to the non-application of the Maudoo` meaning, nor is the ghair Maudoo` meaning implied. This is also not classified under kinaayah, because in kinaayah, the Maudoo` meaning is not discarded, in fact, the actual import of that sentence is the Maudoo`.

Hadhrat Ibn Abbaas (radhiallahu anhu) interpreted the word ارض (earth) in the Aayat, "Know that indeed Allaah revives the earth after its death." This is also from Ilm-e-I`tibaari. He is not contradicting the commonly accepted interpretation that this refers to the earth proper, in fact he is making the listener aware that they must not suffice on only the superficial meaning and that they must look further, just as the earth dies and revives, so too is the condition of the hearts. This full narration is present in my Kitaab, 'Masaailus Sulook'. It has been established from these narrations that Ilm I`tibaar is not a Bid`ah of the Sufiya. Its origin is in the nusoos. Hence those people who label those Sufiya who consider Ilm I`tibaar as zindeeq, are committing a grave error. [At-Tableegh no.12, page 228-239]

This is amongst the lataa`if, nukaat and Ta`weelaat (finer, delicate and deep interpretations). It is not Tafseer and cannot be said to be knowledge of the Qur`aan Majeed. [Ashraful Jawaab, page 314, vol. 2]

The different types of Qiyaas – Tafaawul, I'tibaar Ta'beer

Ilm I'tibaar is more honourable than Ilm-e-Ta'beer (interpretation of dreams) and the reason for its higher rank is that Ta'beer only deals with supernatural affairs whereas Ilm-e-I'tibaar centres around pure Shar'i rulings. [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 396, vol.2]

The difference between Fiqhi Qiyaas and Qiyaas-e-Tasarrufi and their respective rulings

Ilm I'tibaar is to evaluate some occurrence with one's present situation and derive lesson therefrom. When two things bear a semblance to each other then one can be compared to the other, thereby resulting in a lesson being learnt. [Badaa'i, page 241]

Fiqhi Qiyaas is where something which is not found in nass, is compared with another which is present in the nass and a common ruling is extracted.

The Qur`aanic proof for Ilm I'tibaar

The origin of both is established from the Qur`aan Majeed. The nomenclature and name for this second type (I'tibaar) is in fact derived directly from the Qur`aan Majeed. It is stated in the Qur`aan Majeed: فاعتبروا ياولي الابصار . This Aayat follows the incident of the expulsion of Banu Nazeer. Allaah Ta'ala is warning the readers that they should take lesson and abstain from the actions of those people who were punished, lest they fall in the same hole. This in essence is Ilm-e-I'tibaar, where two situations are compared to each other and a lesson is derived. [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 397, vol.2]

An example of Ilm-e-I'tibaar

The sufiya have interpreted the Aayat, "Go to Fir'oun, indeed he has rebelled" , as "Go, oh soul, towards your nafs and strive against it, indeed it has rebelled" The object of the Sufis is not Tafseer, their intention is to make the reader of the Qur`aan Majeed aware that the Qur`aan Majeed is not mere story-telling, in fact lessons are to learned from it. The incidents which are mentioned in the Qur`aan Majeed are actually done so with the intention of learning lessons therefrom. Allah Ta`ala says in the Qur`aan Majeed, "Indeed there is in their stories, a lesson." therefore when you recite the Aayat regarding Hadhrat Moosa's (alayhi salaam) confrontation with Fir'oun then you should realise and take lesson that in you also you have a (similarity to) Moosa (alayhi salaam) and a (similarity to) Fir'oun. That is, your soul is an inviter to good, which is compared to Hadhrat Moosa (alayhi salaam) and your nafs a caller towards evil, like Fir'oun. Hence you are also expected to overpower and overcome your nafs with your soul. Such lessons are learnt and derived through Ilm-e-I'tibaar. [Badaa'i, page 240]

The proof for Ilm-e-I'tibaar (Qiyaas-e-Tasarrufi)

This question remains that does the nusoos also use Ilm-e-I`tibaar in the same way the Sufis do? I reply that, all praise to Allaah Ta'ala, such examples are to be found in the Qur`aan Majeed, and this is not from my mouth, but Shah Waliullaah (rahmatullah alayh) has also mentioned the same. Such a great sheikh had written two Ahaadith in the Kitaab, Fauzul Kabeer.

Once Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) mentioned regarding the mas`alah of taqdeer, "'There is not anyone of you except that a place in The Fire and Jannat has been reserved for him', The Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) asked, 'O Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), should we not then rely on our Kitaab (taqdeer) and abandon (good) deeds?'"

Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said, "(Continue to) Do good actions, (because indeed) everything has been made easy for that which has been created for him, for him who is (destined to be) amongst the fortunate ones, good actions have been made easy for him." Thereafter, Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) recited the following Aayat, "As for him who gives (in charity), and keeps his duty to Allaah and fears Him, And believes in Al-Husna (the best/ reward), We will make smooth for him the path of ease (goodness), But he who is greedy…."

Now one may ask: where is mention made of Taqdeer in this Aayat? The import of this Aayat is that The path to Jannat is made easy for the one who gives in charity and is pious, and Jahannum is made accessible to the one who is a miser. The answer to this is given by Shah Sahib, that Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) had by means of Ilm-e-I'tibaar, compared this Hadith to this Aayat. This similarity was meant to be demonstrated that just as some good deeds make the path of Jannat easy and other deeds make the path to Jahannum easy, similarly, through Taqdeer, good deeds are made easy for some and evil for others. This similarity is given for purposes of simplification in explaining that the easiness which is created through Taqdeer is like the easiness which is created through the execution of deeds. This dilation is done by means of comparison. Shah Sahib has, through this Hadith, proven the origin of Ilm-e-I'tibaar in the Qur`aan Majeed. [Badaa`i, page 243]

Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) has used Ilm-e-I'tibaar in the Ahaadith. I am saying this on the strength of a great personality and not on my own. This is a grand claim. If anyone does not accept the statement of Shah Sahib, then I will ask him to comment and explain the Hadith. Indeed the (explanation of) knowledge of these Ahaadith, which was rendered by Shah Sahib, is acquired through a gifted knowledge, otherwise (normally) such things cannot be understood. [Ibid., page 246]

PART 3 – THE DISCUSSION ON ILLAT AND HIKMAT

To extract the illat of a ruling through Ijtihaad and then to make it causative is permissible

Just as it is permissible to extract ruling by way of Ijtihaad, is it permissible to extract an illat from the Hadith and practice thereupon. Like the ruling regarding the acts of Ibaadaat, or to make a mutlaq (general ruling) into a Muqayyid (conditional), or not to practice on the literal meaning, etc. Such Ijtihaad is also permissible. [Al-Iqtsaad Fit Taqleed Wal Ijtihaad, page 14]

Who has the right to extract an illat and on what occasions?

Every person does not have the right to discuss illats. Only the Mujtahid has this right, and even he does not have the right to do this on just any occasion. He is only allowed to do this when the occasion arises and where there is a need to apply such a ruling. As for those acts of Ibaadat, where Ijtihaad is not occasioned, then he has no right to make Ijtihaad. This is the reason why the Fuqahaa have not discussed illats with regard to Salaat, Zakaat, fasting and Hajj. Since they are acts which are Fardh, they are clear-cut and absolute. [Anfaas `Aini, page 417]

Not every person has the right to extract illats

I had written to them asking what right they have in extracting illats for Shar`i rulings. If such things are done, then Halaal will no longer remain Halaal and Haraam no longer Haraam, because every person will extract an illat to suit him, be it Halaal or Haraam. If for example, someone says that the illat for the Hurmat (prohibition) of adultery is the confusion in lineage, which means that if many men fornicate with one woman and she conceives, then it will be possible that every one of those men wall lay claim to the child (claiming that his lineage applies). There is a real fear of arguments and fights which this will result in. or it is also possible that each one of them refutes fatherhood, then all this will result in great difficulty and strife for the woman and child.

And then I ask you, what if someone devises a plan for the woman not to conceive. Or a person seeks a woman who is barren, or he finds such a group of women from whom there is no fear of fighting and arguments regarding parenthood of the possible offspring. Then in all these cases, fornication will be (Allaah Ta'ala forbid!) permissible, because the illat (which was 'extracted') is no more present. What confusion will reign thereafter!

Will such reasoning ever make fornication Halaal? Never! [Hasnul Azeez, page 99]

It is not correct for every person to ask the illat of a ruling

If the Haakim (ruler/governor) issues an instruction, then the illat (reason) for this ruling can never be asked of him, because the Hukkaam (plural for Haakim) enjoy a status and proof is not asked of them. Therefore, when Allaah Rabbul Izzat issues a decree and the illat is asked for that, then a grave doubt regarding that person's respect and awe for Allaah Ta'ala arises. The crux of the matter is that as a subject, to ask for the illat of the decree, is nothing other than foolish and absurd. Yes, to ask it as a learner, who desires this knowledge to further his understanding, it will be in order, but that only applies to the student of Deen.

Consider this, that when a law is proclaimed then no one asks for the illat. What a shame that the Ulama are regarded as even more contemptible than a sweeper or scavenger. The Ulama are in reality the conveyors of the Message, they do not formulate the laws. Therefore, if asking them for the illats (to the various Shar`i laws) is not plain stupidity, then what else is it?

It is improper to discuss the illats of the various Shar`i laws with the masses

Hadhrat Moulana says that the discussion on illats should never be made in front of the public, in fact the codes of law should be adhered to, otherwise there is a great fear of mischief. If for example, a judge orders the punishment of a criminal, and the punishment is meted out instantly. Now this criminal cannot, in fact, it would not be proper for him to ask the illat (reason) for the prescribed punishment. If he does, then he will be chastised and told that we do not make the laws, we merely implement them, regardless of whether we are aware of the illat or not.

Is this then justice, that we blindly and readily accept the rulings of a worldly Haakim, and we will never question him, whereas we have thousands of objections to Shar`i laws. This makes it apparent that we do not hold the Shariah in as much esteem as we do worldly Haakims. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 138, vol. 12]

The Fiqhi ruling regarding the underlying mysteries of rulings

It is Waajib not to adhere to these. However there are some amongst them, which are also indicated towards in the Kitaabullaah and Sunnat. In such cases, it would be permissible to accept them. If they are contrary to the Kitaabullaah and Sunnat, then it is necessary to refute them. If they neither have any effect on the Kitaabullaah and Sunnat nor are they contrary to them, then there is scope in adopting either path (i.e. one may accept or refute them). [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 771, vol. 2]

The difference between illat and hikmat

Nowadays there is a disease prevalent amongst the masses that they seek the illat of the rulings, and when they fail in finding any illat then they concur that the hikmat (wisdom) is the illat and they present it as an answer. Whereas the reality of the illat is: That upon which the ruling is based, and the reality of hikmat is: That which is based on the ruling.

The pinpointing of the hikmat, since it is mostly not mentioned in nass, and is extracted and deduced by Qiyaas. And there is a possibility of an innovated hikmat being of a doubtful nature, hence this would result in casting doubts in the divine laws. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 66, vol. 19]

An illat is defined as that upon which the ruling is based and hikmat is itself based on the ruling, hence there is a noted difference between the two. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 100,vol. 5]

The proof of rulings not being based on the hikmat

1. The refutation and answer to those people who base acts of Ibaadat on innovated advantages, can be found in the praise Allaah Ta'ala lauds on Hadhrat Abu Bakr (radhiallahu anhu) when he bought Hadhrat Bilaal (radhiallahu anhu) and freed him, "And have in his mind no favour from anyone for which a reward is expected in return, Except only the desire to seek the Countenance of his Rabb, the Most High." In this the reason for the negation and exclusion of his actions is based on the words, "seek the Countenance of his Rabb", whereas there was also the one advantage of sympathy for fellow beings.

2. On the other hand another great harm is that if worldly advantages are found from some other avenue and Islaam is made subservient to this, i.e. Islaam is no longer looked upon with reliance and confidence, because the worldly objective then will now become the real purpose, then this will result in Islaam being ignored and people will seek out and look upon other ways, means and objectives.

3. Thirdly, these advantages which are estimates and conjectures, can very easily (be shown to be) doubtful and if they are ever (proven to be) doubtful and uncertain, then the Shar`i ruling will also be regarded as such, because they have based and regarded the ruling of the Shariah to be on this (innovated advantage).

The mansoos hikmat is also not the basis of the ruling

A ruling is not based nor dependant on its hikmat, neither is its (the rulings) existence and execution dependant on the hikmat. For example, the raml in tawaaf had a certain hikmat behind it, but this was not the basis for this ruling. [Bawaadir, page 177, vol. 2]

The clear distinction between illat and hikmat with examples

Together with any Shar`i ruling, if any advantage is stated, then it will either be the illat or the hikmat. The existence and non-existence of the ruling is centred around the illat, but not around the hikmat. That is, if the hikmat has to be altered, then it will not affect the ruling. The proper understanding of this is the speciality of the Raasikheen fil Ilm. Therefore, in the ruling regarding the beard and moustache, Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) mentioned the part, "to oppose the Mushrikeen" as a hikmat, and not as an illat.

The basis of this prohibition is the altering of the natural state of man, and not (merely and only) to oppose the non-believers. The proof of this lies in the fact that in other Ahaadith where this ruling came, it appeared in general, like, "Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) has cursed the Mukhanniseen amongst the men."

An example of this will be if some Haakim has to instruct his people not to create commotion and disorder like such and such nation (i.e. the reason for not creating disorder is to oppose that nation), and then if perchance that other nation abandons their usual trait (and come onto order and peace), does that mean that this opposition must still be in force (and now this Haakim's people must become tumultuous and disorderly)? [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 222, vol. 4]

The status of the illats mentioned in the Qur`aan Majeed

In the Qur`aan Majeed, wherever a laam-e-ghaayat appears, it is not to show an illat, but rather a hikmat. The object is that this effect is consequential to this ruling. It does not mean that the ruling is based on this. [Anfaas `Aini, page 417, vol. 2]

The preferred view regarding research into the underlying mysteries of rulings

There is no doubt that the establishment and proof of the basis of Shar`i rulings lay in the Shar`i nusoos. Nevertheless, there is also no doubt that similarly, notwithstanding this, there are many advantages and mysteries underlying these rulings. But the foundations and essence of the rulings are not based on these. But these have the benefit that they create more reliance and comfort in the rulings. Although the Raasikheen and their likes do not require or depend on these factors, nevertheless, weaklings (like us) take comfort from them. The mysteries and benefits of the various rulings are frequently discussed by great Ulama, the likes of Imaam Ghazaali, Khattaabi, Ibn Abdus Salaam, (rahmatullah alayhim), etc. [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 105]

If any hikmat of a ruling is realised, then this should not be understood as being the crux of the ruling. If this is adhered to them there is no harm in studying the hikmats. [Anfaas `Aini, page 417, vol. 3]

A safe path to adopt would be to say that there are most certainly many wisdoms in the various rulings, but to be specific and list all of them, because Allaah Ta'ala has not done so, is not appropriate for us to do also. Our subservience is to the decrees of Allaah Azza Wa Jall, whether we know the underlying wisdoms or not. If there was any need to research into these, then the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) were more worthy of doing it than us. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 67-9, vol. 19]

PART 5 – THE DISCUSSION ON ZANN

The various meanings of zann

The Qur`aan Majeed was revealed in dialogue (format) and it is understood accordingly, so the meaning of zann is not only that which is mentioned in Mullah Hasan, etc. When perusing some junctures in the Qur`aan Majeed, I say that in the dialogue, the meaning of zann is not necessarily confined to the preferred view of the ruling. Allaah Ta'ala says in one Aayat, " وانها لكبيرة .....الذين يظنون....", here the word zann (think) means yaqeen (certainty), because the meeting with Allaah Ta`ala is for certain. At another juncture, Allaah Ta`ala states regarding the statement of the kuffaar on the Day of Qiyaamah,

"ان نظن الا ظنا و ما نحن بمستيقنين", here also, the meaning of zann is not according to its literal and dictionary definition, because the thoughts and doubts of the kuffaar of their being presented at the Final meeting place was not an overwhelming one. They were in fact total deniers and refuters of this event. The Qur`aan Majeed itself states this in the Aayat, "Indeed they (the kuffaar) refute and belie The Final Hour." Hence here the meaning of zann is not doubt, because the kuffaar have no perception or possibility of Qiyaamah.

After reflecting on all this, I reach the conclusion that the meaning of zann in dialogue (context) is notion, whether this notion is true one or a spurious one. If one keeps this in mind, then it will be easy to understand these Aayaat, without laving any misgivings and doubts. However, in the Aayat, انّ الظن لا يغني من الحق شيئا, the word zann refers to pure conjecture without proof. [Badaa`i, page 195]

The Shar`i definition of zann and its proof

The Shar`i zann because it is beneficial refers to the thought, notion or opinion with proof. It gains the status of being of consideration and a proof owing to its Shar`i proof. Everyone agrees that there are some Aayaat in the Qur`aan Majeed which are brief and difficult (to understand). Every Aayat is not mufassir or muhkam, and since there are some which are brief and complicated, hence their tafseer (interpretation) is not absolute and has to be of zanni category. Now, if zann were not acceptable, then these Aayaat would have to be left alone and without compliance, whereas this is not the case. [Badaa`i, page 196]

Places and junctures where zann is taken into consideration

Zann* is not acceptable or used in matters of Aqaaid, but in Fiqhi issues, because in fiqh there is a need to execute actions and deeds. The students of Deen should remember this. [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 882]

Rulings can be based on zann-e-ghaalib and not on imagined issues

If there is an imagined benefit in a certain thing and an overwhelming harm, then such a thing is Haraam. For example, journeying to the moon has imagined benefits and it is unnecessary, but the harms and dangers are real and overwhelming, hence such a trip is Haraam. Allaah Ta`ala says in the Qur`aan Majeed, "And do not kill yourselves." [Anfaas `Aini, page 390, vol. 1]

The requirement of being zanni

A necessary side to being zanni is that there will always be a doubt on it being otherwise. If you have this doubt, then know that the zanniyat of the mas`alah at hand is confirmed and strengthened. There is no harm in such doubt and uncertainty. [Majaalis Hakimul Ummat, page 172]

The final state of husn-e-zann (good opinion)

The ultimate of husn-e-zann is that a suitable interpretation is found for the act, which conforms to the Shariah, and it is subservient to the Shariah. It should not be such that it alters the Shariah and makes the Shariah subservient to it. [Bawaadir, page 191, vol.1]

The standard (yardstick) by which zann is classified as praiseworthy or censured and acceptable or unacceptable

With regards the Aayat, انّ الظن لا يغني من الحق شيئا, the Ahl-e-Ilm have reservations about the validity and worth of zann in the Shariah. Khabar-e-waahid* and Qiyaas are based on zann whose sources and proofs are the related to nass. Khabar-e-waahid is zanni, but its origin is not zanni-us thuboot, the zann factor only came about in the chain of narrations (sanad), otherwise insofar as the actual words being from Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), this is absolute. Similar is the case with Qiyaas, although its formulation is zann, it is not established by itself (alone), in fact it is a muzhir (like a mirror), which gains its rank owing to nass, wherefrom its ruling originates.

Only that zann is liable for criticism which is no proven from nass, and is based on baseless conjecture.

Those conjectures which are not extracted from the valid Shar`i proofs are not endorsed. The Deen is not based on those views which are not proven from the Shariah.

The condition of Deen has been placed on this because it is not necessary that all such conjectures are not beneficial. The science of tibb (medicine), which is not a matter of Deen, is nonetheless, of benefit and consideration.

However, it is impermissible to execute such acts which pertain to worldly matters wherein zann is prohibited. The object is that in Deen matters, conjecture and opinions are irrelevant regardless of how great the status or intelligence of the one tendering these opinions. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 119]

The types of zann and their rulings

Zann has many types. One is Waajib which includes the zann fiqhi ghair mansoos, and to have husne zann about Allaah Ta'ala. Another is Mubaah, like the opinions in social matters. It will be permissible to hold an opinion of fisq of such a person who outwardly displays such traits, like socialising in and around beer-halls and dancing-women. However one will not be absolute in labelling him a faasiq. It is also not sinful to harbour bad thoughts and opinions which surface involuntary, on the proviso that one does not act on them and tries to eliminate them.

The third type is Haraam. That is to hold opinions on fiqhi matters without absolute proof. It is likewise Haraam to hold the opinion of fisq for the person who does not display such signs and has a pious outward appearance. [Bayanul Qur`aan, page 47, vol. 11]

The ruling on having ill-feelings in transactions

To carry out and put in effect an ill-feeling is Haraam. For example to disgrace him or cause him any harm. [Ibid. page 47, vol. 11]

One should have reservations and be suspicious when transacting and have good presumptions in matters of belief. The meaning of having reservations in transactions is that one will not give credit or loan money to someone regarding whom one has no experience (stranger). [Anfaas `Aini, page 619, vol. 2]

The proof of considering contexts

Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) had prohibited from eating the food of haughty people. It is apparent that no one proclaims himself to be haughty. This is deduced by his actions and mannerisms. If this (a person being haughty) was not ascertained by context (of his actions and deeds), then what was the use of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) saying what he said? It would not have been a practical instruction. This makes it clear that it is permissible, to take into consideration the context and external factors. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 152, vol. 19]

PART 6 – The Shar`i status and ruling regarding the information given by witchcraft, jadoo, jinnaat, soothsayers, etc.

The common ruling regarding all of them is that since a matter is proven in the Shariah via a certain avenue, then as long as that matter is not established through that medium, it will not be permissible to attribute it towards that. It has also been established that the Shariah has not placed any consideration on ilhaam, dreams and kashf or approved of them as a basis or proof for any ruling. Therefore, to label anyone as a thief or sinner based on any of these things, would be a grave sin and Haraam.

To give a ruling or verdict based on those factors which the Shariah has not granted any credence to, is a grave and aggravated sin. Like for example to indulge in useless, fictitious and senseless acts (like witchdoctors do by 'throwing bones', etc) to discover the name of thief, etc. are useless and worthless acts.

Worse than this is to engage in black-magic (sihr), visit a soothsayer, pundit (witchdoctor), etc. and to have faith in whatever they say. This is absolutely Haraam, nay, it is close to kufr. To suspect someone of a crime on the basis of such flimsy claims are totally impermissible. The true and real basis for any Muslims is ilm and amal. Now reflect that since the Shariah has not granted any credence to these things, why should we? [Islaah Inqilaab, pages 397 and 389]

The ruling regarding tasarruf, sihr, amaliyaat and taawizaat

The Shar`i ruling regarding tasarruf is that it is permissible, but it depends on the aim and objective (of practicing these things). If they are carried out for a good and laudable reason, then they will be regarded as such, like the tasarrufaat of the Mashaikh and Sufiya. If it is executed for an evil and malevolent reason, then the sin and gravity of its prohibition will be likened (i.e. in accordance) to the objective. [Bawaadir, page 683]

If any words of kufr, like seeking the aid of a jinn or stars, are used in sihr, then this is clear-cut kufr, regardless of whether this is done to harm or benefit someone.

If the words used are not decipherable or legible, then due to the possibility of it being linked to kufr, it is Waajib to abstain from them. This will be the ruling regarding all such amulets, taweez, etc. [Badaa`i, page 71]

There are two types of aml insofar as their effects are concerned, one is that type which renders a person's mind in control and overpowers the mind. Such amals are not permissible for those things which are not Waajib in the Shariah, like making nikah with a particular man.

The second type is where the person upon whom the amal is done becomes attentive towards the desired objective and not overwhelmed or totally in control. These will be permissible for the desired objective. Ruqiya* (taweez) are permissible to use, but are inadvisable. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 88 and 99, vol. 4]

The rulings of dreams and states of ecstasy

Dreams and states of ecstasy are not proofs in the Shariah. It neither confirms the unconfirmed, nor renders the preferred unpreferred nor vice versa. Every ruling remains in its place and unchanged by virtue of these (dreams and ecstasy). However, only that may be considered which conforms to the Shariah and precaution is adhered to. [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 771]

It is not permissible to base Masaa`il on dreams. [Anfaas `Aini, page 153, vol. 1]

What consideration can be given to dreams? Firstly it is not established that dreams can be used as proof, and then for its correct interpretation to be understood is also not necessary… Dreams are not illat for any condition. It is type of sign, and signs can sometimes be correct and sometimes incorrect. Therefore one has to look at and study that thing for which it is a sign. [Ifaadhaat, page 208 and 210, vol. 9]

The ruling of kashf

Many things which are merely makshoof (established through kashf) and famous, whereupon their not being a proof is established by valid Shar`i substantiation – to have firm belief in their meaning and import, or to adhere firmly to their practice, or to regard them as being an object in itself, as we see in many matters nowadays, is excessiveness in Deen (Ghuloo fid Deen).

If kashf is not conflicting with the Shariah, then it holds two possibilities, either correct or not, regardless of whether this is one's own kashf or that of some Akaabir. [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 71]

Two types of kashf-e-quloob and the ruling of Masaa`il-e-kashfiya

One trait of Masaa`il-e-kashfiya is that it does not conflict the nass. That is, there is no nass which contradicts or negates it. An effort will be made to endorse it with the Shariah. If there is a possibility that it can be accommodated into some nass, then it will remain in the level of being a possibility. If it is regarded as anything more or higher than this, then it will be ghuloo (excessive). If it bears no semblance or finds no endorsement in the nass and then to claim it to be endorsed, will be nothing other than tahreef (altering) the nass. However, if this claim is not done as a tafseer (interpretation) or ta`weel, but rather as a form of Ilm-e-I`tibaari, then if that ruling is endorsed by some other nass, then that i`tibaar will be considered and valid, but if it is not endorsed by another nass, then it will be takalluf (exaggerated). [Al-Bawaadir, page 784]

There are two types of kashf-e-quloob, One which is purposely directed towards another person to ascertain his faults. This is impermissible. It is a form of spying, because spying is exactly that, when someone tries to hide his faults and wrongs and you try to divulge and unearth them. The second is when it occurs involuntarily. This is a karaamat (miracle). [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 136, vol. 19]

The ruling of firaasat (insight/sagacity/intuition)

The actual ruling and origin of (the concept of) firaasat lies in the Hadith, "Fear the firaasat of a believer." This is a type of kashf, and just like kashf does not constitute a valid proof in the Shariah.

The reality of Ilm-e-Qiyaafah and its ruling

Once Moulana Muhammad Ya`qub Sahib gave the gist of Ilm-e-Qiyaafah that this is when Allaah Ta`ala makes apparent or divulges some condition or sign which reveals a hidden shortcoming or evil in someone, so that others may be privy and aware of him, thereby exercising caution. This, in a nutshell, is Ilm-e-Qiyaafah. However such signs and hints do not constitute Shar`i proof. [Al-Ifaadhaat, page 74, vol. 9]

The ruling of Ilhaam and kashf

Issues of kashf are not in any level proof in the Shariah. The only upside of it is that if it does not conflict with the Shariah, then the person upon whom the kashf manifested itself, and his followers, may practice upon it. They cannot be dogged on its execution. Its non-observance may result in worldly harm and not harm in the hereafter. [Husn Azeez, page 520]

To oppose ilhaam may result in some worldly castigation, like illness or some other misfortune, but not so in the hereafter, because ilhaam is not a valid proof for the Shariah, hence its opposition is not a sin, which warrants punishment in the hereafter.

However, opposition to wahi (divine revelation to a Nabi) is a punishable offence in the hereafter. [malhoozaat, page 181]

The ruling of a weak Hadith

That which is classified as a weak Hadith according to the Ahle Ilm, cannot be a criterion or proof for a Shar`i ruling. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 226, vol. 4]

The ruling of idraak

Sheikh Abdul Haq (rahmatullah alayh) has written that there was such a person in their midst that by merely looking at someone's face, he could tell that person's name. Allaah Ta`ala has also bestowed me with this blessing that by engaging in a discourse with someone, I can tell his nature and disposition. However such idraak (perception) without valid Shar`i evidence is not a proof. [Badaa`i, page 251]

The ruling regarding the Shariahs before us

If anyone has a doubt that the Shariahs before us do not constitute a valid proof for us, then the answer to this is that if any Shariah of the people before is mentioned and no refutation is made of them, then this is a valid proof for us. [Al-Ifaadhaat, page 421, vol. 28]

There is one famous condition for this Usooli ruling that if it is mentioned then its negation is also not made. This much is necessary to know that it is not essential that the negation be done then and there on the same occasion. Any negation in any nass will prove sufficient. Otherwise the Sajdah of respect which was made by the angels for Hadhrat Aadam (alaihis salaam) and by the brothers of Yusuf (alaihis salaam) for him, would have been binding upon us, but these were negated in some other nass. [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 108]

CHAPTER THREE

THE TYPES OF AHKAAM (RULINGS)

Insofar as being proof and evidence, there are three types of rulings

Mansoos, Ijtihaadi and zawqi. Ijtihaadi refers to that Ijtihaad which the Fuqahaa intend and such Ijtihaad whereby rulings are proven and which are in actual fact, confirmed by nass. These are merely made apparent and perceptible through Ijtihaad. That is why it is said, "Qiyaas is a muzhir (makes apparent) and not a Muthbit (endorser)."

The difference between Ahkaam-e-Zawqiya and Ijtihaadiya and their respective rulings

Zawqi* are those rulings which are not proven through nass. Neither without medium which is a trait of nass nor with a medium, like Ijtihaadiya. In fact these rulings are intuitive. The difference between zawq and Ijtihaad is that the rulings of Ijtihaad are proven from nass and zawqi are not proven from nass. This is the reason why such rulings are not related by the Mujtahiddeen, nor are such rulings binding upon anyone. The intuitions of the Ahle Zawq are the origins of these rulings. Nevertheless, there are some such rulings which are corroborated by the indications of the Qur`aan Majeed and Sunnat. In such cases their proclamation would be permissible, but if they contradict the Qur`aan Majeed and Sunnat, then their rejection is Waajib. If they are corroborated by the Qur`aan Majeed and Sunnat and not contradictory of them, then there is scope on both fronts, i.e. they can be accepted or rejected.

Ijtihaad* is a fiqhi component and zawq a soofi component. [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 771, vol. 2]

The basis of the rulings of Ijtihaad and zawqiyah

The basis of Ijtihaadi rulings is the illat, which gives rise to the ruling, whereas the basis of zawqiyaat is merely the (underlying) wisdom, and this is also not from nass which naturally does not give rise to a ruling. Neither is the existence and implementation of the rulings centred around it. For example in the raml of tawaaf, there was wisdom behind it, but the ruling is not centred around this wisdom. [Ibid. page 771, vol. 2]

The second type of ruling

From another angle, rulings are of two types: maqaasid and muqaddamaat. The rulings of zawqiya are amongst the muqaddamaat, and not maqaasid. The maqaasid comprise of only the nusoos or Ijihaadi. The rulings of nusoos and Ijtihaad are the Shariah. The rulings of zawqiya are not classified as Shariah, rather as Asraar-e-Shariah (underlying mysteries of the Shariah). [Ibid.]

There are two types of rulings with regard to their order/arrangement, asli and aardhi

The rulings of the Shariah are of two types: asli and aardhi, i.e. the ruling is sometimes applied while looking at the actual issue and sometimes while considering the attributes. The rulings of these two types also differ accordingly. Since a ruling is placed according to the majority, if any person is unique or different, then he will not be considered. Considering these attributes, he will be prevented. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 246, vol. 4]

The mas`alah regarding naqli and `aqli is a universally accepted one. Rulings are sometimes original and fundamental and sometimes temporary.
For example trading in armour and gunpowder should be, considering all other types of trade, be allowed without any restrictions. This is the actual ruling. However, considering the harms and tumult which may result in this type of free trade (in such types of commodities), the law has placed the restrictions of having a licence to trade in such merchandise. The actual ruling regarding trading in fruits is that in all conditions and places its trade is permissible, but this natural state is prohibited from during times of plague. These respective rulings depend on the external factors and attributes. The harms of free trade in armour and gunpowder is ever-existent, hence this restrictions in its trading will be always in force, whereas the restriction in fruit-trading is limited to the season of harm, hence it will not be enforced once the prohibitive factor is removed. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 194, vol.4]

The proof of the stated ruling

An example of this is Masjidul Haraam. As long as the mushrikeen of Makkah were controlling it, Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) used to perform Salaat there and also make tawaaf of Baitullaah. The time came when Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) came from Madinah Munawwarah to make Umrah and the mushrikeen prevented him from entering. Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) entered into a treaty with them that he will come the following year and spend three days in Makkah Mukarramah and perform Umrah. Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) signed the treaty and remained there for a time and returned to Madinah Munwwarah. All this happened when Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) was not in control of Makkah Mukarramah. Owing to a valid reason, Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) abided to this temporary set-up. When Allaah Ta`ala granted Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) total control over Makkah Mukarramah, then he fulfilled the asl ruling. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 194, vol. 4]

Two types of masaa`il: qat`iyah and zanniyah

Masaa`il are categorised into two types, one type has a side of haqq and another of baatil, whether this is sam`an or aqlan, these are called masaa`il-e-qat`iyah. The second type is that in which both sides have the possibility of haqq and correctness. This is called masaa`il-e-zanniyah. The masaa`il-e-kalaamiyah (regarding aqaa`id) belong mostly to the first type and some to the second, and masaa`il-e-fiqhiyah belong mostly to the second type and some to the first.

Details on the masaa`il of qat`iyah, zanniyah and ijtihaadiyah and their respective rulings

Some masaa`il are qat`i. there is no scope for differences in opinions regarding them. Some are ijtihaadi and zanni, and all along, through the ages of salf and khalf, differences of opinions existed in these types of masaa`il between ustaad and student; mureed and peer; small group and big group and between one person and many. The Ulama have never refuted any of them, neither has the one party called the other 'deviant' or 'sinners' and neither has the one forced and compelled the other to accept their view.

The differences of opinions in masaa`il-e-ijtihaadiyah and zanniyah are of two types. One is the difference that exists in the proofs, like that between the Hanafis and Shaafis on the recitation of Surah Faatiha behind the Imaam.
The second is the difference that exits regarding the incidents or attributes, like the difference between Imaam Sahib and Saahibain regarding the mas`alah on nikah saa-ibaat…[Al-Ifaadhaat-e-Ashrafiya, page 6]

The Aayat, "Whosoever exceeds the limits of Allaah, has indeed oppressed himself", applies to those who accept the view of one side in a masaa`il-e-ijitihaadiya, and criticise the other.

Occasions where dalaa`il-e-sam`iyah and naqliya are applicable

If any action is only intended for a fun (science/study) and not for the Deen, then there is no need for its proof to be sam`i (i.e. a Hadith, etc) any other proof will also suffice, on the proviso that it is not baatil in the Shariah. For example, holding the breath is not a requirement of the Deen, then this practice does not need proof from the Hadith, etc. however it must be established from such source which the Shariah has not negated or refuted. But if it is something which is desired in the Deen, then it must have a sound sam`i proof, like compliance to those actions which are ordered and the abstention from those actions which are prohibited from. [Tajdeed Tasawwuf, page 466]

What types of proofs are required for aqaa`idi-e-qat`iyah and zanniyah

1. For aqaai`id-e-qat`iyah such proofs are essential which are qat`iyuth thuboot and qat`iyud dalaalat.
2. For aqaa`id-e-zanni, zanni proof is sufficient, provided that it does not conflict with an aqaa`id-e-qat`i. If it does, then the qat`i will be opted for instead of the zanni.
3. The statement of a ghair ma`soom (not innocent person - non Nabi) cannot be used a proof in aqaa`id-e-qat`iyah and the statement of a non-mujtahid cannot be used as a proof in aqaa`id-e-zanniyah. [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 44]

The two types of Wujoob – Waajib biz Zaat and Waajib bil Ghair

A thing can be Waajib or necessary in two ways; one is where an instruction has been specifically encouraged in the Qur`aan Majeed and Hadith, like Salaat, fasting, etc. Such an obligation is called Waajib biz Zaat. The second type is where an action itself has not been instructed or ordered in the Qur`aan Majeed or Hadith, but some other acts have been instructed in the Qur`aan and Hadith, which normally cannot be effected without being coupled to this first act. Hence this act is also now considered necessary. This is what the Ulama actually refer to as Waajib.

Proof and example

There is no emphasis in the Shariah to compile and write down the Qur`aan Majeed and Hadith, in fact the following Hadith clarifies the fact that kitaabat (writing) is not essential or Waajib, "It has been reported from Ibn Umar who said that Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said, 'Indeed we are a nation that does not write…". Now, since general kitaabat is not Waajib, how can it be for special cases. However, we have been instructed and emphasis has been laid on protecting and safeguarding the noble texts, and experience has shown that without writing and recording something down, its protection is difficult, nay almost impossible. This is the reason why it is deemed necessary and compulsory to write down the Qur`aan Majeed and Hadith. This obligation is upon the entire Ummat in all ages to come. Such a necessity is called, Waajib bil Ghair. [Al-Iqtisaad fi Taqleed wal Ijtihaad, page 34]

For it to be Waajib to abandon something, that thing does not have to be necessarily bad or harmful in itself, but it is sufficient if the harm is due to another external factor. This is the reason why the Fuqahaa have on many occasions prevented permissible acts as a means of closing the doors for greater evil and harm. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 72, vol. 4]

Miscellaneous

1. The Hukm-e-Asli (original ruling) was that all Musaajid must be freely accessible at all times. Nobody can be prevented from performing Salaat in any Musjid whenever he pleases, neither should anyone be prevented from entering a Musjid, etc. This ruling applies at a time when Muslims have control and there is no fear of tumult or fitnah in the Ummat. The temporary ruling will be according to a treaty which was agreed to by the Muslims and this will now be in place until such time that the Muslims have no control to effect the asli ruling. [Malfoozaat Ashrafiyya, page 399]

2. The Fuqahaa have written that the recitation of Durood Shareef by a trader when he opens his wares or sells them and the recitation of tahleel by the guard when he awakens his sleeping companions, are all impermissible. This prohibition lasts for the duration of the said events. [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 814, vol. 2]

3. There are certain occasions when the memorisation of the Qur`aan Majeed is prohibited. For example if a person wishes to memorise the Qur`aan Majeed, which is a Mustahab act, but because he is married and there is no other means of support for his wife and children (besides him working), then in such a case, it will be Haraam for him to spend his time in doing hifz, since this is causing a disruption in his Waajib duty (which is to support and maintain his family). [Malhoozaat Jadeed Malfoozaat, page 180]

4. That Sunnat act which prevents or disturbs from a Fardh act is prohibited. [Malhoozaat, page 88]

A necessary defence becomes Waajib

An accepted rule is that any act which is permissible, and a good deed or Waajib need is dependant on it, then that act also becomes a good deed or Waajib. This is the reason why the Ulama-e-Mutakallimeen (Ulama specialising in Aqaa`id) studied Greek philosophy, in order to combat and expound the Knowledge of Aqaa`id in the generally accepted and vogue method (of their time). [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 72, vol. 4]

Proof with example

The rule is that to defend a Waajib is Waajib. This is an obvious rule which requires no proof, however as a courtesy we will mention one Hadith, "It has been reported from Uqbah (radhiallahu anhu) who says that he heard Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) saying, 'Whoever has leant lance-throwing, and then abandoned it, is not from us."

It is clear that lance-throwing is no specific act of Ibaadat, but on the occasion of defence of the Kalimah (jihaad) its use is necessary, hence so much of emphasis has been placed on it. This confirms that a defence of a Waajib becomes Waajib. [Al-Iqtisaad, page 49]

A ruling is based on greater circumstances and not on unique ones

Rulings are based on greater possibilities and unique ones are not considered. This is the reason why in times of severe hunger, carrion is permissible, but in severe lust, fornication does not become Halaal. The reason being that there is no fear of loss of life in severe lust, contrary to sever hunger, where the fear of destruction (loss of life) is greater. [Al-Ifaadhaat, page 156, vol. 10]

Rulings are based on the greater consideration

The majority (greater) is ruled as being all

The rule regarding organisational rulings (which concern the public at large) is that in order to prevent and safeguard against harms, the welfare of the majority is taken into consideration. This is the meaning of the ruling given by the Fuqahaa that those acts which may lead to fitnah amongst the masses are also Makrooh for the elite (Ulama). In support of this rule, is the following Hadith, "It has been reported by Jaabir (radhiallahu anhu) that Umar came to Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) and said, 'We hear narratives from the jews which we find strange (and interesting), what do you advise that we record them…" Because the recording of these things would be detrimental to the Imaan of the Ummat in general, hence Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) prohibited from recording them.

Hadhrat Umar (radhiallahu anhu) was intelligent and considered as amongst the elite amongst the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum), but even he was prohibited from recording the incidents of the Jews. This proves that any matter which would result in general mayhem and fitnah is also not permissible for the elite, unless of course it is not a matter which is necessary in the Deen.

In another narration is has been reported that Hadhrat Abdullah Ibn Mas`ood (radhiallahu anhu) used to give a lecture every Thursday. Once someone asked him if he could do this every day, and he refused saying that people would get tired and bored. It is clear that not all the people in the audience would tire of a daily lecture. The request from this person attests to this, but nonetheless, the welfare and condition of the majority was taken into consideration.

Hence, the actions of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) and his Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) confirm this rule. [Ifaaraab Ashrafiyah, page 6]

The actual state of Shar`i rulings

If for example someone snatches some ground from another person and builds a Musjid thereupon. Now the real owner lays a claim and is successful, so the Qaadhi will rule that the snatcher return the ground and break down his 'musjid'. It will not be permissible to criticise the Qaadhi for his ruling or ordering the breaking down of a Musjid, because in reality this was not a Musjid, since it was built on stolen ground.

Rulings in the Shariah are based on effects and not merely causes

People look at the asbaab (causes). In reality the causes should not be looked at, rather the effects. For example, it will not be permissible to listen to the recitation of the Qur`aan Majeed or poetry when it has a peculiar effect on the heart, like if a youngster recites the Qur`aan Majeed and this has an effect on someone's (corrupt) heart, then it cannot be said that there is no harm because it is the Qur`aan Majeed which is the cause of this. It is the effect which results in this recitation which renders such listening impermissible and the cause. [Al-Ifaadhaat, page 160, vol. 2]

The rendering of an act Halaal or Haraam is not only based on its benefits

1. I also say that there are benefits in alcohol and gambling. In fact, their being beneficial is also stated in nass. If their ruling was based on their benefit, then there would be no harm in their indulgence. [Ibid. page 18]

2. That beneficial action wherein there is no worldly harm, which is considered excusable in the Shariah and it has not Deeni harm, then to partake therein would be considered contrary to one's sense of honour, like donations. [Ifaadaat Ashrafiyya, page 14]

Two stages of permissibility

There are two stages of permissibility. One is merely permitted, which has no bearing or rank in the Deen, like treating an illness or abstaining therefrom.

The second is that which has some recognition in Deen and obedience and it is also recommended and it has some virtue stated in the Shariah, like Nikah. Warnings are also issued for purposely and without valid excuse abandoning them. This is ample proof of it being a part of the Deen. The fact that the Fuqahaa have written much about this and laid down regulations for it, also shows that it has the rank of Mubaah . [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 664, vol. 2]

There is wujoob in the asl ruling

If there is a wujoob (compulsion) in any action then (to do) its opposite would be Haraam. This is an Usooli mas`alah, and it is also logical. For example it is Haraam to oppose the order to lengthen the beard and shorten the moustache. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 221]

The scale of amr is used to indicate wujoob, even though its implementation may not be immediate. However, this will apply if there is certainty that the ordered act is not required immediately, otherwise an amr would generally require immediate compliance. Hence when the Aayat, فاتقوالله حق تقاته was revealed, the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) understood that total and full taqwa was required of them immediately. They immediately started fearing (knowing that they were incapable of full Taqwa as is worthy of Allaah Ta`ala), when the following Aayat was revealed, "Fear Allaah as you are capable of." That is, they were to adopt Taqwa as they were able to, and then gradually increase it. Hence, this former Aayat, according to the Muhaqqiqeen is not abrogated. [Al-Hajjul Mabroor, page 166]

Regarding present-day, is permission the asl or Hurmat

Previously the Fatwa was that in (general) things there is permission, until and unless Hurmat (prohibition) can be proven. Now the times have become such that one should say that originally there is Hurmat in things until and unless permissibility can be shown. This fatwa should be given to save people from getting involved in Haraam, whereafter mayhem will follow. [Hasnul Azeez, page 430, vol. 4]

Is it better to practice on azeemat or rukhsat

When both azeemat and rukhsat (concessions) are practiced in their respective and called for situations, there is equal reward. This is incorrect that some Ulama do not consider rukhsat as an asl Shar`i ruling. They also regard it as having less rewards. On occasions of rukhsat, Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) had adopted and practiced on this rukhsat, and he encouraged and instructed the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) to also adopt this way. From this we understand that on occasions of rukhsat this is the asl ruling. [Anfaas, `Aini, page 364]

There is a Hadith which extols the virtue of practicing on rukhsat and there is another which prohibits it. I had deliberated on this matter for many days, and Alhamdulillaah, my mind was cleared in that all those occasions where the Shariah had allowed rukhsat, there it's practicing is virtuous and commendable, and wherever the rukhsat has been concocted as an escape, there it is detestable, because this entails nafsaaniyat and rebellion. No doubt remained after this understanding came to mind. [Al-Ifaadhaat, page 421, vol. 9]

Two types of opting for concessions

Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) mentioned in a Hadith that Allaah Ta`ala loves that people practice on those rukhsats which He has granted them and that they practice on the stipulated azeemats as well. Those 'opting for concessions' which the Fuqahaa has prohibited from are not those which are generally granted to the Ummat by the Shariah, rather they refer to those which are concocted in accordance and subservience to the nafs and base desires. [Majaalis Hakimul Ummat, page 321]

CHAPTER FOUR

THE DISCUSSION ON MAKING RULINGS MUKALLAF

Every level of intelligence is not sufficient for takleef (refers to persons being bound to the Shariah)

My opinion is that besides a soul, animals have intelligence also, because the actions of some animals are such that one is constrained to accede to this fact. But this does not make them mukallif because any level of intelligence is not sufficient to make Shar`i obligations binding. Just see, an almost mature person (muraahiq), does have a certain level of intelligence but he/she does not become mukallif. So even if we assume that animals have that much intelligence, then too there can be no objection to it (that why they are not mukallif. From this we can see why some Majzubeen who have an outward semblance of some intelligence, carry out such actions and state such utterances which conflict with the Shariah. They cannot be called kaafir, because it is possible that they have only that much intelligence as the muraahiq. Hence, they will not be considered as mukallif. If we exceed the discussion on animals and venture onto vegetation, there too, we can see some (albeit minimal) signs of intelligence.

You may be bewildered that some people nowadays make the claim that plants have a soul, whereas some of the ancient philosophers also held this view. We cannot now refute their claim. It is possible that inanimate objects also have a soul and intellect, although it may be even lesser than that of plants. Therefore it is possible that inanimate objects can also talk. Those Ahaadith which mention the testimony given by stones and trees, corroborates this view.

Three categories of people insofar as their being mukallif

There are three categories of people, one is with total intelligence, another with deficient intelligence and the third with no intelligence. The first category are mukallif kaamil, the second mukallif naaqis and included under this category is the person who makes a bequest to his children that when he dies they must incinerate his body and throw the ashes in the wind, and the third category are not mukallif.

Takleef is based on the intelligence and not on perception

The majzoobeen have no intelligence, like a horse which has no intelligence, but it has excellent perception and senses. Another example is that of a child before maturity. His intelligence is not complete, but his senses are in order. In this regard we cannot claim that a majzoob does not have proper senses.

Salaat, etc. being Fardh is not based on these senses. Intelligence is a condition for the obligation of Salaat. Hence an insane person, similarly a majzoob, is not mukallif, just like a child is not mukallif, because of deficient intellect. [Al-Ifaadhaat Yawmia, page 244, vol. 2]

Regarding the kuffaar being mukallif on the furoo`aats (practical tenets of Deen)

Are the kuffaar also bound (by the Shariah) or not? Before entering the class they are not bound, and only after they enrol will they be also included.

This is the example, assuming in some college there is a certain course, and the students are addressed thus, "O students! Study this." Although this is applicable to the specific students who are enrolled for this course, it does not mean or imply that all other students are excluded from studying this course. The principal is also encouraging all the students who have enrolled in the college to take up this course. So this encouragement is for everyone. But as for those who are not yet students in the college, this should first be said to them that they enrol in the college and after they have enrolled, this encouragement will be applicable to them to take up the course. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 62, vol. 8]

Will the kuffaar be punished for leaving out the furoo`aat

The following Aayat was revealed for the kuffaar, "Indeed those who do not desire meeting with Us, and are pleased with the worldly life…" According to the Fuqahaa, the kuffaar are not bound by the furoo`, that is why it is said that if a kaafir, performs Salaat, in the state of kufr, his Salaat will not be valid.

Similarly, when a kaafir accepts Islaam, then there is no Qadha binding on him for Salaats not read whilst he was kaafir.

The punishment which will be meted out to the kuffaar will be so due to their act of kufr, contrary to the believer, whose punishment will be due to neglecting the furoo`aat. Yes, the punishment of the kuffaar will be intensified due to their non-compliance to the furoo`aat, but their punishment will not be because of this (their neglecting the furoo`aat). An example of this will be if two people are captured and punished on account of their rebellion and treason. One of these two, together with treason also stirs trouble and causes anarchy, whereas the second person is only guilty of treason. Both will be punished for the crime of treason, but the punishment of the second one may be intensified because of his extra crime. The example of the kaafir is like the first rebel who also commits anarchy. His actual punishment will be due to his kufr, but since he never complied to the furoo`aat his punishment will be intensified.

As for the kaafir who used to comply to some of the furoo`aat which are attached to Imaan, like giving charity, kindness, humility, etc. is like the rebel who did not commit any other crime.

The punishment of the believer is like the punishment and crime of the person who does not commit treason, but petty crime. He will receive punishment but not to the extent of a rebel.

This aforementioned Aayat also confirms that the kuffaar are not bound to the furoo`aat, but they will be punished for not having executed them. As a matter of fact, even the believers are warned in this Aayat, in that if the kuffaar who are not bound by the furoo`aat will be punished for not having complied to them, the believers will, all the more be liable for punishment because they are bound and they neglect them. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 188, vol. 7]

Are the kuffaar mukallif of the prohibitions or not?

What if a kaafir touches the Qur`aan Majeed without wudhu? Apparently there will be no harm in this, because they are not bound by the furoo`aat. But this will be contrary to adab (respect and etiquette). [Husnul Azeez, page 275, vol. 4]

It is not permissible to direct others towards those things which you are prohibited from (including the kuffaar). This rule, specifically has led some Fuqahaa to opine that the kuffaar are mukallif to the prohibitions and not others acts. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 205, vol. 4]

CHAPTER 3

THE TYPES AND THE RULINGS REGARDING TAWAKKUL (trust in Allaah Ta`ala) AND ASBAAB (opting for the means)

The two types of tawakkul

Tawakkul is of two types, ilman and amalan.

Ilman – this is to understand that every matter is in the control of True Controller, Allaah Ta'ala, and that we rely and depend on Him for every thing. This type of Tawakkul is Fardh in every matter and is an essential constituent of Islaamic beliefs.

Amalan – The reality of this is to discard and abandon all means (and have total reliance in Allaah Ta`ala).

The two types of asbaab

There are two types of asbaab, asbaab-e-deeniya and asbaab-e-dunyawi. The former is when a Deeni benefit is realised when opting for it. To abandon it is unadvisable and perhaps even sinful or harmful. According to the Shariah, this is not tawakkul. If this is classified literally as tawakkul, then this type of 'tawakkul' is reviled.

As far as the asbaab of the world is concerned, there are two types of benefits which can be realised – Halaal or Haraam. If it is Haraam, then it will be necessary to abandon it, and this type of tawakkul is Fardh. If it is Halaal, then this is further divided into three parts, yaqeeni, zanni and wahmi. The asbaab-e-wahmiya, which the people of greed and avarice opt for, that is also known as toolul amal (long hopes and aspirations). It is necessary to abandon them and this tawakkul is Fardh and Waajib.

Asbaab-e-yaqeeniya

This refers to those things whose benefit is naturally and essentially realised, like a person is comforted or satisfied after a meal, or one's thirst is quenched after drinking water, etc. It is not permissible to abandon it and neither will this be regarded as tawakkul in the Shariah. If it is classified as tawakkul in the dictionary, then it will be impermissible to practice it.

Asbaab-e-zanniya

Those things which have an apparent benefit, like recovering after medical treatment or receiving payment after working or labouring. To abandon these things, which in normal terminology would be regarded as tawakkul has some explanation attached to it. For a weak-natured person this is not permissible and permissible for a strong (in Imaan) person. However, specifically for a person who has strong (Imaan) nature and who is engaged in the service of the Deen, it would be Mustahab, in fact greatly encouraged to adopt this type of tawakkul. [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 267]

The types and rulings regarding tadbeer

Tadbeer has two stages, one is beneficial and the other permissible. As for being beneficial, if it conforms to taqdeer, then it will be beneficial, otherwise not.

With regard to its being permissible, there are two states, the one regards belief, that to accept asbaab (means) like the atheists do, that the asbaab has full effect, this is Haraam and spurious.
The second state is amal, that is one uses the asbaab in order to achieve the aims. The ruling of this will depend on the objective. There are three options here, whether the objective is worldly or Deeni or sinful. If the objective is sinful, then this will naturally be Haraam. If it is Deeni then we will see whether this Deeni matter is Waajib or Mustahab. If it is Waajib, then to opt for this asbaab would be Mustahab and if it is worldly then we will see whether this worldly matter is of a necessary nature or unnecessary. If it is necessary, then we will look at the asbaab. If it is yaqeeni or not. If it is yaqeeni, then it would be Waajib to opt for the asbaab and if it not yaqeeni, then its adoption for the weak ones would be Waajib and permissible for the strong ones, however to abandon it (for the strong ones) is preferable.

If the worldly asbaab is not necessary, and if in opting for them is harmful to the Deen, then it will not be permissible otherwise it will be permissible. However to abandon it would be preferable. [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 265]

CHAPTER FOUR

MISCELLANEOUS LAWS

The ruling and explanation of alaahum falaahum

The Fuqahaa have written that it is Waajib to consider the rule of alaahum falaahum. That is, it is Waajib to execute an important task immediately, and it is Waajib to abandon that thing which interferes.

Therefore, if it is Salaat time and Jamaat is standing up, and at that moment a kaafir tells you to make him a Muslim, then it is Waajib to make him a Muslim and if you miss the Jamaat, then you should not be concerned about it, whereas Salaat with Jamaat is also Waajib.
When the Shariah has placed so much stress and importance on this rule that in lieu of one important task, it is Waajib to sacrifice a Waajib or Nafl duty, then tell us, when an important duty like the reformation of your Deen comes up and some (frivolous or other mundane) journey impedes your attending your muslih (sheikh), because besides this free time you have no other, how then can this journey be permissible for you to undertake? How can this (normally) permissible act not become prohibited for you because you are sacrificing an important Deeni task because of it?

I ask you what Fatwa can be ruled for such a person who is very hungry and has not yet eaten, but he wiles away his time and squanders his money whiles loitering around the bazaars? Even if the whole world of Fuqahaa have to get together and unanimously rule the prohibition of strolling around the market-place, they will not be successful in proving this. But I can tell you with certainty, that if this person persists in this action, then he will certainly die of starvation.

Why is this, when he has not committed any impermissible act? Both actions are permissible according to the Shariah – eating and strolling the bazaar. Nevertheless, if this act is censured, then the reason will be that whilst both acts are permissible, there has to be some order in executing them. The more important one will have to be granted preference over the other. Since this person has not granted preference to the more important task, he will destroy himself. This is a simple matter which does not require a fatwa or any explanation. Even the most simple-minded person will not contradict this, most obvious issue. [At-Tabligh, page 84, vol. 1]

HUQOOQUL IBAAD (rights of people) PRECEDES HUQOOQULLAAH (rights of Allaah Ta`ala)

Explanation of this rule

The Fuqahaa have stated حق العبد مقدّم علي حقّ الله (The right of the servants (of Allah Ta`ala) come before the rights of Allaah. The object and import of this is that the servants of Allaah Ta`ala are in need whereas Allaah Ta`ala is not. However, this does not mean that one should leave out the rights of Allaah Ta`ala and solely concentrate on the rights of people. Instead it means that wherever there is a clash between the two, then the rights of people will be granted preference. This is also a requirement of the Shariah and in itself a right of Allaah Ta'ala. Wherever there is no conflict between the two, each will have to be fulfilled accordingly. For example, what conflict can there be between Salaat and repayment of a debt? Nothing at all! One should perform his Salaat on time and also duly pay his debts. A case of conflict will be as follows, if a person has R1000 on which Zakaat is payable and he also has a debt owing to someone. In this case, Allaah Ta`ala says that he should first pay off his debt, and Zakaat will be waived.

In this scenario, the Fuqahaa say that the rights of man have preference over the right of Allaah Ta`ala. In reality this is also a right of Allaah Ta'ala, because it is in accordance to His Command. Allaah Ta`ala Himself says that we should fulfil the rights of our fellowmen. In this case we can say that one right of Allaah Ta`ala has been granted preference over another right of Allaah Ta'ala, hence there is really no conflict between Haqqullaah and Haqqulabd, but because there is apparently this conflict, hence it will be said as such.

There is also a way where this apparent preference is relinquished, based on a certain reality. This reality has been inspired into my heart by Allaah Ta`ala. In reality haqqullaah is haqqun-nafs, because those acts which are regarded as haqqullaah, are acts of obedience and Ibaadat, and it is clear that no act of man benefits or harms Allaah Azza Wa Jall. In fact whatever harm or benefit there is, will be to the person himself. Hence whatever is attached to haqqullaah insofar as benefit and harm, is not that in reality, like it will be in the case of haqqul abd, where the harm or benefit will be experienced by the person whose right is fulfilled or disregarded. In this way, it cannot be averred here that the fulfilment or non-fulfilment of haqqullaah will cause benefit or harm to Allaah Ta`ala (nauthubillaah!).

Therefore, in my opinion haqqullaah means haqqun-nafs and haqqul abd means haqqul ghair (the rights of others). In view of this discussion, the inferring (of harm and benefit) will be the same. That is, in all cases there will be a matter of harm or benefit. Hence, insofar as haqqullaah is concerned, fulfilment will result in benefit to oneself and non-fulfilment will result in harm to oneself, and fulfilment of haqqul abd will result in benefit to someone else and non-fulfilment will result harm to someone else.

Therefore, in this explanation there will be no conflict between haqqullaah and haqqul abd. Whatever objections there may be in the precept that haqqul abd precedes haqqullaah will fall on the wayside because in reality haqqullaah is haqqun-nafs and haqqul abd is haqqul ghair.

Therefore wherever haqqul abd is granted preference to haqqullaah, it is a case of haqqul ghair being granted preference to haqqun-nafs. There can be no objection to this, in fact it is a matter of giving preference. As Allaah Ta`ala says in the Qur`aan Majeed, "And they give preference (of others) over themselves, even though it may destructive to them."

The explanation of the ruling of العبرة لعموم الالفاظ

Regarding the fiqhi masa`lah of العبرة لعموم الالفاظ لا لخصوص المورد (The warning is generally applicable and not for the specific occasion), my opinion is that a condition is necessary for the umoom (generality) not to apply further than the import and object of the speaker. The proof of this will be in the following Hadith when Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) once saw a person fainting whilst on journey, he said, "Fasting on a journey is not amongst the virtuous (acts)." The words in this Hadith are general and will be applicable to all travellers, this is what is understood by some. However, some cases where consent was granted for fasting on a journey appear to conflict this Hadith. Looking at the context, a Mujtahid will rule that Nabi's (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) intention here is not general. In fact, the condition that this warning will be applicable to that person whose condition renders it such. This is the ruling of the jamhoor (majority). It therefore appears that this is the view of the majority that in this usooli mas`alah, the speaker's condition of it not being applicable further than the general is taken into consideration, even though they have not mentioned it thus.

I once mentioned this in a lecture, and Moulana Anwar Shah Sahib Kashmeeri (rahmatullah alayh) was also present. After the talk, someone asked Shah Sahib a mas`alah and he said, "Did you not hear just now in the bayaan where he (indicating to Moulana Ashraf Ali Sahib) explained that in this ruling the condition is also applicable." I was pleased that Shah Sahib did not refute what I said, in fact, he conceded to my view.

The ruling of لا عبرة لخصوص المورد بل لعموم الالفاظ

The warning is not for the specific occasion, in fact it applies in general. For example, if any Aayat was revealed for a specific incident, then it's ruling/application will not be specific only to that time, but if any similar occasion arises, then this nass will apply here also. For example the Aayat, "Woe to AlMutaffifeen (those who give less in measure or weight), those who when they have to received by measure from men, demand full, and when they have to give by measure or weight to men, give less than due", was revealed regarding a specific group of people, but its message is not specific to them only. Like this there are many Aayaat which are not specific to the occasions they were revealed for.

In effect, an Aayat was revealed for one particular incident but its application is general. Every incident has a particular law applicable to it. So if any law existed before any incident, then that law will apply, but if no law exists, then a law will have to be devised. General Laws need to be devised so that their application can be to a wide set of incidents, so that whenever a need arises a law can be applicable. This now explains the secret behind the ruling of the Fuqahaa that, لا عبرة لخصوص المورد بل لعموم الالفاظ. This is a logical mas`alah also which requires no much explanation. [Huqooquz Zawjain, page 307-8]

The explanation of intending one act of obedience in another act of obedience and the explanation of the Hadith انى لاجهز و انا في الصلوة

Question: If whilst in Salaat, one thinks of something else, which is not necessarily something that is not an act of ibaadat, in fact, it is also an act of ibaadat (i.e. the thing which one thinks about). For example, whilst engaged in Salaat, a person does not intend show, neither any act which is not classified as ibaadat. However, whilst in Salaat, one reflects on some Shar`i mas`alah, or about undertaking some valid Shar`i journey, etc. Is this then contrary to sincerity or not?

Answer: this mas`alah is very intense. I will present it here listing the rules pertaining to it. Two Ahaadith comes to mind here, the first is a Marfoo` Hadith which has the following part to it, "Perfrom two Rakaats, concentrating your heart on it", and the other which is a mauqoof narration from Hadhrat Umar (radhiallahu anhu) which has the following part to it, "Indeed I prepare my army (i.e. devise battle strategies, etc), whilst I am in Salaat." From these two narrations, we realise the following two states; one is that when a person is engaged in one act of ibaadat, then another act does not intentionally come to mind, even though it may one of ibaadat.

The second state is when another act if ibaadat comes to mind involuntarily. There is no intention to think about this second act of ibaadat whilst engaged in the first. For example, one does not envisage that during Salaat one will plan and devise the battle strategy, etc. Therefore the sincerity in both are equal. There is no doubt in this, however, owing to certain attributes, the first instance will be more complete and the second, if it is done without valid purpose and excuse, it will not be complete/perfect. If it is does with valid cause, then it will also be complete. Hadhrat Umar (radhiallahu anhu) had a valid cause and excuse.

The criterion for this is ijtihaad, but every situation is not in opposition to ikhlaas (sincerity). Nevertheless, what has to be looked into is whether it affects and is opposed to khushoo (concentration). My opinion is that in the case of having valid cause, it will not even be contrary to khushoo, if there is a need.

The summary is this, if such a thought enters the mind, whose permission is granted by The Beloved, i.e. it is a Deeni issue, and also if it is of a necessary nature, then it will not be nugatory of khalwat (isolation). [Anfaas Isaa, page 268, vol. 1]

An example of this will be the statement of Hadhrat Umar (radhiallahu anhu) who said, "Indeed I prepare my army (i.e. devise battle strategies, etc), whilst I am in Salaat." The reason is, that this is also a Deeni duty, which was necessary and it incorporates the remembrance of Allaah Ta`ala. Another point is that he would not get enough time to do this on other occasions when he was out of Salaat. In Salaat he was alone, and this type of task requires solitude.

This is the reason why Hadhrat Umar (radhiallahu anhu) used to, with permission from Allaah Ta`ala, execute this task in Salaat, hence it was not nugatory of khalwat and khushoo. [Anfaas Isa, page 87, vol. 1]

Question: If someone performs Salaat with this in mind that perchance someone who does know the proper procedure of Salaat looks at me, he will benefit and correct his Salaat. Is the intention of such an ibaadat, a hindrance to the ikhlaas of Salaat?

Answer: The intention in this Salaat is something other than Salaat. This appears to be contrary to ikhlaas, but my opinion is that there is some explanation to this. According to the Shaari` this is not contrary to ikhlaas, because it can be classified as propagating, but according to a non-Shaari` this act is contrary to precaution in objective ibaadat of Salaat.

There is no harm in performing a Salaat specifically for ta`leem (purposes of teaching). [Ibid. page 669, vol. 1]

To make an act of ibaadat a means of worldly benefit

Question: If someone through experience shows that in Witr Salaat, if Surahs Qadr, Kaafiroon and Ikhlaas are recited regularly, then it will aid in the ailment of piles. Is there any harm in this or not?

Answer: The object of this question is that is one allowed to perform an act of ibaadat for some worldly benefit. This requires some dilation. In making an act of ibaadat achieve some worldly means, there are two types. One is to do so without any medium, like that of an aamil, where they use duas and words to achieve some specific worldly benefit.

And the second method is to use a medium of Deeni blessing, where this act will primarily bring in Deeni benefit, and this in turn will be effective in some worldly thing. Those specific acts of ibaadat which are enumerated in the Ahaadith that also have some worldly benefit for the executor thereof, fall in this second category. For example, it is mentioned in the Hadith that the person who recites Surah Waaqiyah regularly will not experience poverty. Such worldly advantages are either realised through wahi or ilhaam. Therefore, regarding the question at hand, if it is categorised under the first type, then it will be contrary to the objective of the Salaat and if it is classified under the second type, then there will be no harm in it. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 453, vol. 1]

"He who performs two Rakaats of Salaat and no worldly matter enters his mind, all his past sins will be forgiven." [Ibn Abi Shayba]

Note: That which enters the mind and interferes with the (perfection) of Salaat, is that which is done intentionally, as is indicated to in the usage of the words (of the Hadith). However, that which is not intentional, is not censured, if it concerns a worldly matter. However as for that (thought) which concerns a laudable act, (of the Deen), this is indeed not censured, especially if it is a matter of necessity. This is derived from the statement of Hadhrat Umar (radhiallahu anhu) that, "Indeed I prepare my army (i.e. devise battle strategies, etc), whilst I am in Salaat." [Majaalis Hakimul Ummat, page 152]

The ruling of Daf`e Mudharrat wa Jalb-e-Manfa`at (avoid harm and attract benefit)

That benefit which is worthy of consideration is the one which overshadows the harm and similarly that harm is considered which overshadows the benefit. The benefits of the hereafter are more significant than those of this world. The same applies to the harms.

The ruling regarding choosing between ahwanud dararain (the lesser of the harms)

This ruling is logical that when one is faced with two harmful things, where the one is of greater intensity than the other, one will opt for the lesser of the two harms. For example, a father punishes his child for some wrong committed by him. Now this hiding is a type of harm for the child, but the wrong which the child committed is an even worse harm. So to save the child from committing this wrong again the option of punishment was adopted by the father. If the child persists in his evil ways, then he may fall into very serious harm later in life, so to save him from this, the father's hiding, which is the lesser of the two harms is better.

The difference between no benefit and harm

Harm is one thing and non-benefit is another. Understand this by the following example, say you have a R100 note in your pocket, and someone snatches it away from you, this will result in a harm for you. Alternatively if you wished to give this note, but someone prevented you from doing this, then there will be no harm in it for you, it will just be unbeneficial. [Tarteebus saalik, page 19]

The ruling regarding choosing the lighter of the two evils (Akhafful Mufsadatain)

This rule is also logical. It is also a Shar`i ruling. When one is faced with two evils (destructive things), and the one of the two is more grave than the other, so in order to save oneself from the worse of the two, one opts for the lesser one. [Ifaadaat-e-Ashrafiya, page 33]

The Shar`i ruling is that in order to avoid a greater evil/harm, the one with the lesser evil/harm is opted for. It is also a ruling that a Deeni harm will not be realised in order to gain some benefit. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 430, vol.3]

It is logical that when one is faced with two harmful options, where the one is greater than the other, then the lesser of the two will be chosen. An example will be as mentioned above where the father would rather punish his child instead of allowing him to fall into worse evil. [Kamaalaat Ashrafiya, page 115]

As it is said, "Whoever is faced with two evils, he will choose the lighter".

In order to remove the worse of the evils, the lighter one will be opted for. To explain this I will cite an example – it was known regarding some villages that the Muslims there were becoming Aryans (Hindus). Many Ulama visited the place. I also went there and met a man who was on the verge of converting into a Hindu. Upon enquiring it was realised that these people liked some custom of the Hindus. I gave them consent to make ta`ziyah (a Bid`ah custom). In reality I did not give them permission to carry out a bid`ah, I had in fact saved them from kufr. I chose for them the lesser of the two evils. On the one hand you have kufr and on the other bid`ah, which is the lesser one. Similarly, I once gave a lecture stating that bribery is a sin. If due to a weak disposition people may say that it is a necessity, then you may take, but always keep in mind that it is evil and have a concern about heating Halaal. [Hasnul Azeez, page 159, vol. 3]

The combination of Halaal and Haraam is Haraam

This ruling of the Fuqahaa is well-accepted, and it is logical as well.

It is impermissible to thwart one sin with another

It is certainly not permissible to choose a sin in an effort to leave out another, in fact from the very outset that sin was to have been avoided. For example the cure of nazar-e-bad (evil eye) is not that the stomach be filled once, in fact the need was that the gaze be lowered (in the first place), although this is difficult. [Anfaas `Aini, page 176, vol.1]

There was once a learned person who used to practice daswi during the month of Muharram (a Bid`ah practice celebrated on the 10th of the month). He gave his reasoning that this was a way in which people did not attend the Shia celebrations (during this time and they attended his function). A ghair-muqallid molvi gave him a fitting reply that he should keep the same on the Hindu diwali and holi celebrations, with this intention of his, so that people don't attend them, because insofar as the sin involved in both (this persons functions and that of the Hindus or Shiahs) are the same. [Hasnul Azeez, page 229, vol. 2]

It is permissible to make one act of obedience a means for another act of obedience

Will it be permissible to recite the Qur`aan Majeed in (rigid) sequence (i.e. for learning and memorising hifz), in Sunnat Salaats? The reason for this doubt is that in this method the Sunnat act, which is an objective Ibaadat in itself, appears now to become a means for carrying out another act of ibaadat.

The answer is that it is permissible, because hifz of Qur`aan Majeed is also an act of ibaadat and it is permissible to make one act of ibaadat a means for another. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 150]

Can something which is not recorded be used as a proof or not?

A Mufti Sahib had averred that something which is not recorded cannot be used as a proof. I say that in such an important issue, non-recording of it can also be a proof. There are many occasions where the Fuqahaa and Muhadditheen have said in negation of a mas`alah, lam yuthbit (not established). [Husn Azeez, page 51, vol.4]

The explanation of the ruling that the more difficult a thing is, then more rewarding it will be

Some people are of the opinion that the more difficult an act of ibaadat is, so much more will be the reward. However, in my opinion there is some dilation needed here. In acts of ibaadat-e-maqsooda like Salaat, fasting, wudhu, tahaarat, etc. this will be applicable. For example, to make wudhu in cold weather or under difficult circumstances, will be more rewarding. Fasting in summer is more rewarding. However, with regard to those acts of Ibaadat which are not maqsood, to experience difficulty in them will not be overly rewarding. Example, the water for wudhu may be available, now to leave this and walk three miles to fetch other water and make wudhu will not warrant extra reward. After considering the Aayat, "It has not been made difficult upon you, matters of Deen", and the Hadith, "Deen is easy," if a person still considers such acts (in Ibaadat ghair maqsooda) as more rewarding then it will be as though he is opposing the nass (Nauthubillah). [Majaalis Hakeem Ummat, page 312]

To undergo difficulty in maqsooda Ibaadat is worthy of more reward, however to opt for an easier way (if possible) is preferable.

In this regard it is stated in the Hadith that whenever Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) was faced with two options then he would choose the easier of the two. This is also a natural disposition. For example, a person needs to perform wudhu and a hawd (water pond) is closeby, now one is to make wudhu here and another option is to walk a small distance to another place where wudhu can be made and make wudhu there. Now since wudhu is not maqsood in itself, the actual maqsood being Salaat, however in this instance the extra mile will not warrant extra reward. It would be preferable to choose the easier option.

Contrary to Salaat where recitation of a longer Surah will be more difficult than reciting a smaller Surah. In this case reciting the longer Surah will warrant extra reward, because Salaat is a maqsad in itself, however there are limits in this as well. Hence a person performs Nafl Salaat the entire night and sleeps for a short while in which his eyes cannot open for Fajr Salaat, and this results in him missing Jamaat Salaat. This is forbidden.

A sabab (cause) is sometimes the result of a musabbab

Just as the musabbab gives rise to the sabab, sometimes the converse is true. Just as it sometimes occurs in the sensory perceptions.

Is nafa` laazim (necessary benefit) better or nafa` muta`addi (causative benefit)?

Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) used to sometimes execute some things as a means of explaining/teaching. This may appear to be an act of riya (show), but in reality it was not. A nafa` muta`addi is more virtuous than a nafa` laazim, because for islaah (reformation) this is a preferred method that whatever work one wishes someone else to do, it is best to do it oneself (as a demonstration and encouragement). [Hasnul Azeez, page 161, vol. 2]

Nafa` muta`addi is more virtuous than nafa` laazim. This will apply to a person who is complete with a nafa` laazim, and thereafter wishes to get engaged in a nafa` muta`addi. In this way there will be no interference in his nafa` laazim. For example, teaching will be preferable for that person who is complete with his own studies/ learning. The virtue of nafa` muta`addi is owing to the fact that it is done through the medium of a nafa` laazim. This is the reason why if a nafa` muta`addi is not done hoping on a nafa` laazim to be a medium, then the nafa` muta`addi should be abandoned. The actual and true maqsad (objective) is a nafa` laazim and the nafa` muta`addi is not an objective in itself, in fact, it is a means of the objective. [Anfaas Isa, page 318, vol. 1]

Nafa` laazim is in itself an objective and the nafa` muta`addi is an objective by request (secondary)

The asl (original) is that a nafa` laazim is more virtuous than the nafa` muta`addi, because Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) is instructed in the Aayat that when he is completed with the nafa` mat`addi, i.e. propagation, then he must engage in the nafa` laazim, which is casting his gaze and full attention towards Allaah Ta'ala. This context clearly illustrates that nafa` laazim is more virtuous than nafa` muta`addi, since the completion of the muta`addi is sought and the laazim. Thereafter the instruction for engaging in the nafa` laazim is issued, and also that it must be maintained and no distraction must be entertained. For example the Aayat, "Have an inclination towards your Rabb", necessitates and is clear that if the nafa` muta`addi was more virtuous then its completion would not have been sought.

The nafa` muta`addi is the secondary objective, whilst the nafa` laazim is the primary and main objective. This assertion may be contrary to the mainstream view, but it is the reality anyhow.

I ask you, that if nafa` muta`addi was the objective in itself (primary objective), then what would be the plight of the harbi (one at war aginst Muslims) in daarul harb (area of those against Islaam) who accepts Islaam? If he is unable to carry out the nafa` muta`addi (propagation), what can he do? Must he hold on firm to the nafa` laazim (incline towards Allaah Ta`ala) or to nafa` muta`addi (propagation)? If carrying out the nafa` muta`addi was necessary then he would be faced with a dilemma which he would be unable to bear. And if he were to be instructed with the nafa` laazim, then it is clear that the nafa` muta`addi is not the objective in itself, because no Muslim will be deprived of (having to practice) something which is a maqsood biz zaat (objective in itself). Hence, the nafa` muta`addi is not the maqsood biz zaat, in fact it is the secondary objective (maqsood bil `ardh). A maqsood biz zaat is more virtuous than a maqsood bil `ardh. [Asgraful Jawaab, page 301, vol. 2]

A verbal form of reformation (islaah) is not sufficient for an active (practical) fasaad (act of immorality/mischief), in fact practical reformatory steps and propagation are essential

Only verbal islaah is not sufficient, in fact, practical (amali) islaah is necessary. Initially I had reservations regarding Nikah to widows, and why the Ulama were making an exerted effort at it. A second Nikah is not Waajib, or Fardh, it is only Sunnat. The Ulama say that it is Waajib to consider it as Sunnat. Why then were they so intent on being practical on this. For many years this doubt remained. Those were the days of youth, but Alhamdulillah, the understanding has dawned on me. Since this fasaad (misconception, in this case) was a practical one, the islaah for it also had to be amali. [Hasnul Azeez, page 678, vol.1]

The medium and cause of sin is also sinful

Those things which are a medium to sin are also classified as sin. This is the reason why (unnecessary) speaking after Esha Salaat is forbidden in the Hadith Shareef. The reason for this, as recorded by the commentators, is that this will cause an interference in one's (awakening for) Tahajjud and Fajr Salaat.

Those things which are ambiguous and unclear, leave them as ambiguous

One person asked whether the isaal-e-thawaab of Qur`aan Majeed will reach all the deceased in equal proportions (i.e. will all get the full reward) or will it be divided amongst them. The reply was that in ambiguous aqaaid matters, there is no need to give absolute or clear-cut answers. The method and system of the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) was perfect, where they would leave ambiguous matters as they are. The Shariah has not deemed it necessary to dilate or expound on them (so why should we delve into them).

Similarly, Salaat and wudhu have been labelled mukaffirus sayyi`aat (compensators of sins)in the nass, so we need not delve into what extent they compensate for sins, etc. This is ambiguous in the nass, so we should leave them as such. They should not be clarified based purely on conjecture. Such things will be asked by those who wish to (Nauthubillah) question Allaah Ta`ala.

There is no scope for conjecture (zann) in matters of aqaaid. Yes, in fiqhi matters there can be, because fiqhi matters deal with deeds and actions. Students of Deen should remember this well. [Kalimatul Haqq, page 335]

The ruling and explanations of two qiraats (modes of recitation) being deemed as two separate Aayats

Qiraats are on the same level as Aayats. It is necessary to understand the import of each one of them. To practice on (the meaning of) two qiraats of one Aayat has been established from the Fuqahaa. In this regard the Fuqahaa have joined the qiraats of the Aayat حتي يطهرن and deduced a ruling. Similarly have they combined the qiraats in the Aayat وارجلكم الي الكعبين, and deduced the ruling that during wudhu the feet must be washed by rubbing them with the hands, because mere pouring of water over them is insufficient. This is the reason why the Fuqahaa have made rubbing the feet especially a Mustahab. Similarly in the Aayat, مالك يوم الدين, they have combined the meanings to be kingship and ownership. This means that Allaah Ta`ala is the King and Owner of the Day of Qiyaamah. [At-Tableegh, page 107, vol. 17]

The ruling of الشئ اذا ثبت ثبت بلوازمه (A thing, when it is established, then it is established with its corollaries – necessary attachments)

This is an accepted ruling. No intelligent person needs to question or ask about this, it is an abundantly obvious and clear matter. I have cited many examples explaining this, and once again I will present an example. For example, if someone intends making Nikah, and it is asked of him if he accepts a certain girl in lieu of x-amount of dowry?

He says that he accepts. Without doubt this acceptance also means that he has accepted to accommodate her, feed and clothe her. This meaning is included under the ruling of الشئ اذا ثبت ثبت بلوازمه. Now after a few days, when this newly married man moves away from his parent's home and is told to go and earn and support his family, and his wife will ask for butter, flour, etc., etc. He says, "Since when was I to bring this and that. All this was not included and I did not consent to agree to all this!"

I ask you, what if this young man's case was brought before you and you were to be judge over it? Naturally, you will rule that all these responsibilities are necessarily his. Obviously when a man agrees to Nikah with any woman, then it necessitates that he provide the flour, food, clothes, home, etc.,etc. All these corollaries go together with and are part and parcel of Nikah.

The same applies to accepting the Kalimah Laa Ilaha Illallahu, because together with accepting this Kalimah, the duties of Salaat, fasting, etc. incumbently follow. The acceptance of all the Shar`i duties are also accepted together with accepting this Kalimah (even though they may not be mentioned verbally). [Huqooquz zaujain, page 318]

The ruling of hasanaatul abraar sayyi`aatul muqarrabeen (The good actions of the pious are "sins" for those very close to Allaah Ta`ala)

All the slips and mistakes committed by the Ambiyaa (alaihimus salaam) are all acts of obedience, but because they outwardly and apparently looked like "sins", therefore they are called so. The mistakes and slips of the Ambiyaa (alaihimus salaam) are not in reality sins, because all Ambiyaa (alaihimus salaam) are ma`soom (sinless).

In summary, there are two types of sins. The first are those which are recognised after a ruling has been stipulated, like the ruling of fornication being Haraam. Now after this decree has been passed, we know that fornication is sinful. This is a sin, in reality. The Ambiyaa (alaihimus salaam) are free from this type of sin.

Another is that type regarding which no ruling has been passed and only after its censure, is it realised thus. This type of sin is superficial. In fact, it is also not really superficial, rather in majaazi terms it would be of a very low category of sin. This is the meaning of the Aayat, "Allaah has forgiven all that has passed of your sins", that no wasaawis (evil inspirations) need now enter Nabi's (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) mind. He is completely and totally free from all sin.

This doubt remains that if these were not sins, then why was Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) censured and warned harshly regarding the incident where the Aayats of عبس وتولي, were revealed? The answer to this is that the Beloved can censure His muhib for doing anything contrary to His Greatness.

However, one who is a non-beloved does not have this authority or power to (censure the muhib), hence Allaah Ta`ala says in the Aayat, addressing the pure and chaste wives of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), "O wives of the Nabi, whichever of you comes with clear disobedience (i.e. whichever of you troubles and causes hurt to Nabi - sallallahu alayhi wasallam), her punishment will be double." Further on Allaah Ta`ala says to them, "O wives of the Nabi, You are unlike other women."

Similarly, the muqarrabeen (close ones) receive double reward. In this regard Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said that he is inflicted with fever which is equal to the fever of two people, because Allaah Ta`ala intends greater reward for him.

Nevertheless, owing to the great status, such things which are also not apparently sins, are censured. [At-Tableegh, page 191, vol. 17]

Those acts which are a result of some (esoteric) state brought on by (ensues from) Shaari` are not mashroo` -- such states were also experience by the Ambiyaa (alaihimus salaam) and kaamileen (perfect ones)

Those actions which do not ensue from Allaah Ta'ala in the Shariah, but from ghalba-e-haal (esoteric state) are not ordered or decreed. For example, the number of rukus in Salaatul Kusoof, these were the result of a state of refulgence which overcame Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam). Sometimes one state would overcome Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) where he would make a long qiyaam (standing) and sometimes anther state would overcome him, which would result in his going into ruku and extending it. Upon completion of the ruku another state would overcome him (sallallahu alaihi wasallam) and he would go into qiyaam, and then another state would make him go again into ruku, etc., etc. In this Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) made quite a number of rukus and qiyaams which were not ordered by Allaah Ta'ala, rather they were brought upon by ghalba-e-haal. Therefore, in Salaatul Kusoof, so many rukus are not instructed in the Shariah. [At-Tableegh, page 260, vol. 17]

Sometimes the kaamileen are also overcome by such states. Previously also, I was of the opinion that the kaamileen are not affected by such states, but now, Alhamdulillah, my opinion has changed and my research has shown that they also undergo such states. In this regard, Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) made the following dua on the occasion of Badr, "O Allaah! If You destroy this little group, none will worship You after today." If one inspects the rank and stage of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), then it is obvious that such words are not expected from him. The underlying secret is the excellence of the Kaamileen that they are privy of the temperament of Allaah Ta'ala. Allaah Ta`ala is free from temperament, but those who recognise Allaah Ta`ala, recognise the occasions and their actions and speech conform to the occasion. At the time of making that dua, Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) was overcome with a state of love and the refulgence of mahboobiyat (love) overcame him. He understood that Allah Ta`ala desired a display of coquetry from him at that time, hence he reciprocated accordingly. [At-Tableegh, page 253, vol. 17]

Similarly with Hadhrat Ayub (alaihis salaam) who, after falling ill did not make dua for recovery for a long while, until his wife one day told him that his sickness has gone on for a long time and that he should make dua for recovery. He said that so many years of illness must pass as many as he had enjoyed good health. What was the hurry now? His condition at that time was that he felt Allaah Ta`ala wanted to test his patience so he exercised full patience, to such an extent that he did not even make dua for recovery, whereas to make dua is no contradictory to patience. It is however, an outward sign of displeasure and discontent. This is the reason why he did not make dua, but as soon as he realised that Allaah Ta`ala desired that he display his bondsmanship and servitude, he immediately made dua for recovery. In his dua he attributed the sickness to shaitaan. [At Tableegh, page 254]

An important fiqhi rule

It was the noble habit of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) that he would spend the entire night in Ibaadat, to such an extent that his blessed feet would swell up, due to the excessive standing. This he (sallallahu alaihi wasallam) did this even though Allaah Ta`ala had stated that he had forgiven all his sins, past and future. Some Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) were of the opinion that Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) reduce this excessiveness, because since Allaah Ta`ala had forgiven his sins, what need was there for this extreme? They presented their view to Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), who replied, "Should I not then be a grateful slave?" [Ibid, page 187, vol. 2]

The objective of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) was that even though all his sins were forgiven did not mean that he should reduce his ibaadat and subservience to Allaah Ta`ala. In fact, this meant that he should be even more diligent in ibaadat, and be ever grateful to Allaah Ta'ala. The one need and objective of ibaadat, i.e. seeking forgiveness, may be unnecessary for him, but the other, i.e. being a grateful servant of Allaah Ta`ala, still remained.

One general ruling is deduced from this Hadith, and that is – if any act of ibaadat is carried out for some objective, and that objective is attained before the act of ibaadat is accomplished, that ibaadat should not be abandoned, but must still be completed. The Fuqahaa have ruled, based on this Hadith, that if a community intended

Salaatul Istisqaa and it starts raining before the Salaat is performed, then it should still be completed and not be left out altogether. [At-Tableegh, page 229, vol. 17]

My aim here is to explain the asl of the ruling of the Fuqahaa. They have explained, in the chapter regarding Salaatul Istisqaa, that if the intention was made to perform Salaatul Istisqaa, and it starts raining before the Salaat is begun, then too, the Salaat must be performed, as a token of Shukr (thanks to Allaah Ta`ala).

This does not mean that after every Salaatul Istisqaa another be made as a form of shukr. If this is done, then the Fuqahaa will undoubtedly brand this act a *Bid`ah.

Another example

There is also a similarity to this in (deeds of) actions. When Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) came to Makkah Shareef to conquer it, the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) were getting fever in Madinah Munawwarah due to the atmosphere there. They recovered with the barkat of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) and when the time for Umrah came, the kuffaar of Makkah said that the air in Yathrib (Madinah Munawwarah) had weakened them. There was still some signs of illness evident on the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum). Whilst making tawaaaf, Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) told the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) to lift their chests and walk, which is called raml. This was done so as to display to the kuffaar the bravery of the Muslims. Although this was an occasion of ibaadat, nevertheless, the occasion called for this action of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam). There was a reason and wisdom underlying the lifting of the chests and brisk walking of the Muslims on that occasion. It was an instruction from the Shariah as well. This ruling remained even after Makkah was conquered. This ruling will remain until the Day of Qiyaamah. At the time when this instruction was revealed there was a reason and wisdom for it, but the implementation of this remained even after (the original reason was no more).

The Qur`aan Majeed and Ahaadith Shareef confirm this fact that even after a fulfilment of some desire (for which an act of ibaadat was to be made), this act should not be abandoned. When a general ruling has been extracted from the nusoos, then a corollary follows that when a firm intention has been made (to perform Salaatul Istisqaa) and thereafter it rains (before performing the Salaat), then Salaatul Istisqaa should still be made as a form of gratitude unto Allaah Ta`ala.

However, if the gratitude is to be a general one, then it will not be carried out in the form of Istisqaa, but in some other form. To express gratitude in such cases as expressed above is one thing and to always do it in the form of an ibaadat is another. Nevertheless, this much should be understood that after a desire has been granted, I should not be forgotten and gratitude should be expressed. [At-Tableegh, page 186 and 229]

Further dilation and proofs

I will now dilate on the support/proofs (for the above). For example, in the Aayat, "O our Rabb, do not reckon us for what we have forgotten or (done by) mistake", the issues asked for, i.e. forgiveness for mistakes, etc., have already been assured from before, and the Aayat preceding this one, "If you display what is in your bosoms or hide it, Allaah will reckon you for it", has been abrogated. Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) even mentioned in a Hadith that the (sins committed in) forgetfulness and errors of this Ummat have been forgiven, still too, we have been instructed to make dua in this way. Although this was the case previously and applies no more, since the Aayat was abrogated, we are instructed with making dua in this way as a form of gratitude for this bounty. Just as we were in need before being forgiven (for mistakes and forgetting), we are still always in need for forgiveness. [Ibid. page 231, vol. 17]

An important Usool – in what type of issues are nahy (prohibition) issued

The Shariah has placed reasonable consideration on this point that those things which are normally not possible to execute, it has not formally forbidden them. They are such things which a person would naturally keep away from. For example, the Shariah has forbidden indulging in fornication and stealing and given stern warnings against the consumption of alcohol, but it has not formally or explicitly forbidden the consumption of urine and faeces, because it is natural for a sane Muslim, in fact, any straight-thinking human, not to indulge in such behaviour. What need is there for a clear-cut prohibition on such matters for a normal and sane Muslim? [At-Tableegh, page 192, vol. 20]

An important ruling and the meaning of something intruding and encroaching the Deen

It is an established Shar`i fiqhi ruling that if any action which has been granted a general status and is described by a particular quality, is coupled with a permissible clause, will still remain as specified (in the Shariah). For example, the Salaat of Zuhr is Fardh. The condition that it should be performed at 2 o'clock is not Fardh, but if it is performed at 2 o'clock, then it will still be said to be Fardh. If anyone makes a ruling that it is not permissible to perform Zuhr Salaat at 2oclock, then this will be regarded as an intrusion on the Shariah.

Similarly, since general Nikah is part of the Deen, then to perform it for a minor aged person, it will still be regarded as Deen. If anyone decrees that any age is too small (for Nikah) then this is an intrusion on the Deen. Similarly, qurbaani is also an act of Ibaadat. To specify a cow (for qurbaani) will still render it an Ibaadat, and to prohibit it (cow) will be an intrusion in the Deen. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 270, vol. 2]

One ruling

The proving of `Aam (for any general thing) will establish an absolute ruling for all its constituents, as long as there is no definite proof for (that thing to be) khaas (specific), even though the establishment of `Aam is zanni. [ibid, page 2620, vol. 2]

CHAPTER

MISCELLANEUOUS USOOLS

1. Ahaadith of nahy (negation) are qowli (verbal) and action and verbal narrations of Mabah precede over action. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 219, vol.4]

2. Those issues regarding which the nass is silent, to lay a claim to them, with valid reasons will not be an opposition to nass. As a matter of fact, to negate something which is established in nass or to verify (claim as positive) any matter which is nugatory in the nass, is opposition to nass. [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 486]

3. Those issues which have various possibilities, and regarding which no specific reason is established (in the Shariah), there will be no harm to specify a reason for it based on zanni (or contextual) evidences. For example, like the philosophers and the Muwarrikheen have cited reasons for various issues based on zann. [Ibid.]

4. For the unification of narrations a unification of sababs is not necessary, similarly, for unification of sabab, there is no need for unification of sababus sabab. [Ibid.]

5. There is no need for a thing to be an objective (Maqsood) if it is praiseworthy (mahmood). [Ibid.]

6. When one illat is deduced, there is no necessity for the deduction of other effectual illats. [Ibid.]

7. Istikhfaaf (considering an act lightly) and dawaam (perpetuity) makes a Makrooh act Haraam. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 241, vol. 4]

8. It is Haraam for the follower of one Mujtahid to make the taqleed of another Imaam, for the reason of merely following him. [Ibid. 391, vol. 4]

9. The kitaabs of Aqaa`id are clear on the fact that they (the Aqeedahs) are based on clear nusoos. [Imdaadul Fatawa, page 241 and 391, vol.4]

10. Prohibitions are found more in those things wherein the possibility of engagement therein is greater. Liquor has been prohibited because the possibility and inclination to it is greater. However, the prohibition of drinking urine will not be found, because nobody (in their sane mind) would drink it. [Malhoozaat, page 96]

11. The Usool does not generally precede furoo`(subsidiary), in fact, on that occasion here the effects of both are equal. [Ifaadhaat, page 416, vol. 7]

12. The asl illat (actual reason) for qasr Salaat is difficulty. However, to recognise this is difficult. [Ibid. 420, vol. 7]

13. If a reliable person mentions any matter which appears contrary to the Shariah, then a suitable interpretation will be found. [Bawaadir, page 387]

14. For the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) not having administration and organisation in their times, does not constitute a good proof, because they were simple in all their matters. [Ibid. page 774]

15. Some Mustahab acts, reach the stage close to Waajib, owing to certain factors. [Ifaadhaat Yawmiya, page 32, vol. 10]

16. Adab (etiquette) is based on the `urf (customs of the locality). That is, if any action is permissible, in itself, but in a certain society that particular action is deemed as uncultured, then this will also be regarded as uncultured in the Shariah. [Ibid. page 152, vol. 10]

17. Insofar as the Shariah is concerned, badnaami (disrepute/dishonour) has no consideration in the Shariah. However, it is appropriate to abstain from being made badnaam and it is also contrary to the Shariah. [Al-Ifaadaat, page 240, vol. 9]

18. A thing may initially have some expedience attached to it, but later this same expediency becomes a means of harm. [Husn Azeez, page 339, vol. 9]

CHAPTER FIVE

THE RULINGS REGARDING IBAAHAT (CONSENT), NUDAB (PERMISSIBILITY),

MASAALIH (BENEFITS/EXPEDIENCIES) AND MAFAASID (HARMS)

The three types of deeds

The Ahle Ilm know well that deeds are divided into three categories. First are those which are beneficial to the Deen and they are ordered with, be they Fardh, Waajib, Mustahab or Sunnat. Secondly are those which are harmful to one's Deen, and they are prohibited from, either to the degree of being Haraam or Makrooh. Thirdly are those which are neither ordered with nor prohibited from. These are the mubaahaat (permitted acts). [At-Tableegh, page 149, vol. 17]

The ruling of Mubaah and its two types

Many people regard the mubaahaat as not be ordered (ma`moor behe), because they are not apparently ordered or prohibited. However, if one reflects carefully, then it will be noted that this third type also falls under the first two categories.

The reason for this is that insofar as the effects of mubahaat are concerned, they are never free of either one of two qualities – they are either beneficial according to the Deen, like in order to keep the body fit, one jogs, exercises, etc.
Or they are not beneficial according to the Deen. If it is beneficial to the Deen, then their enacting is ordered in the Shariah, although not to the level of Waajib. However, if a Mubaah is beneficial in the Deen, and it is done with a good intention, then it will most certainly reach the level of being Mustahab, and it will warrant reward.

If it is not beneficial in the Deen, then it will be fudhool (futility), and the Shariah prohibits from futility and frivolity. It is stated in the Hadith, "From amongst the excellences of a person's Islaam, is that he abstains from wasteful and futile things." Excellence in Deen is greatly encouraged and ordered, hence to abstain and leave out futility will also be ordered. Although they will not be classified as Haraam, they are not free from abomination and abhorrence. [At-Tableegh, page 150, vol. 17]

There are two types of Mubaah

If something is a Shar`i Mubaah and it is also a Mubaah-e-asl (something which is originally permissible), then it has latitude (in its permissibility). For example a guest is permitted to partake of the meals, then this consent extends to every type of dish which is served. He may eat this, that and everything his heart pleases. The earning of Halaal wealth is also in this category.

If the thing is Mubaah biz Zaroorat (permitted only in times of necessity), and it is actually a Muhrim-ul-asl (originally prohibited), then there is no latitude in its usage. In fact, there are great restrictions in this. The effect of this is that it is not permissible to exceed whatever limit or restrictions are attached to this thing. The permissibility of multiple wives is included in this category.

Therefore the limit of four wives which is stipulated in the Qur`aan Majeed cannot be exceeded at one time. To do so would be contrary to the permitted limit. [Malfoozaat, page 37, vol. 3]

That permitted or commended act in which there is fear of general mischief or immorality, becomes Waajib to abandon

If in those acts which are normally classified as Mubaah or mandoob, there is fear of general fasaad, then it will be Waajib to abandon such acts. Especially such Mubaah acts wherein the Deen may be stigmatised, like accepting the property of a prostitute for a Madrasah, although through some interpretation it may be acceptable as a gift (it should not be taken). [Anfaas Isa, page 317]

Rule

It is a Shar`i ruling that if any permissible act incorporates any mafaasid (harms/evils), then this act becomes impermissible. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page74]

Even in matters which are Mustahab, if there is the possibility that the masses will elevate a Mustahab act, emphasis on it greatly and render it as being Waajib, then that Mustahab act also becomes Makrooh. [Ifaadhaatul Yawmia, page 80, vol. 10]

The proof for the above ruling

Understand this ruling, which is both, aqli (rational) and naqli (narrative), and the Hanafi Fuqahaa have extracted numerous corollaries from this ruling. The ruling is that if there exists any Mubaah or mandoob act, which in the Shariah has not attained the level of necessity and there is a possibility that it creates fasaad amongst the masses (when it is rigidly adhered to or elevated in importance), then this Mubaah or mandoob must necessarily be prohibited from and abandoned. The aqli (logical) argument for this is clear and the naqli argument is in the Aayat, "And do not insult those whom they (the kuffaar) worship besides Allaah, lest they insult Allaah wrongfully without knowledge..."

It is clear that to censure the baatil 'gods' is a necessary permissible act, and in some cases it is mandoob also, but because it is not an objective in itself, in fact this objective (of 'teaching' the non-believers) can be attained in other ways, like through wisdom and counsel, and there is a possibility that this method (of censuring) will lead to them hurling abuse at Allaah Ta`ala, hence it has been forbidden. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 827, vol. 1]

A Mubaah or mandoob act will be prohibited because of its collusion with other non-Shar`i acts

A Mubaah act which may also be Mustahab, if it is coupled with a non-Shar`i act will become prohibited. For example to accept an invitation is Mustahab, Sunnat in fact, but if one answers to an invitation where some un-Islaamic things are taking place then to got there will be prohibited. Also for example, it is mentioned in the Ahaadith and it appears in Hidaaya that it is laudable to perform Nafl Salaat, but if it is performed during the Makrooh times, it will be prohibited and even be sinful. From this we understand that even though an act may be permissible and laudable, if it is coupled with some un-Islaamic or ghair-mashrooh factor, then this permissible act will become impermissible. [Islaahur Rusoom, page 132]

If there is a wrong belief regarding a mandoob act, then it is Waajib to abandon it

The Fuqahaa have written that if some concocted belief becomes attached to a Mustahab act, then it will be necessary to abandon that act. [Hasnul Azeez, page467, vol. 1]

The Fuqahaa have written that it is Waajib to abandon that Mustahab act in which some false belief has cropped into. It will not be permissible to censure anyone for abandoning (such) a Mustahab. If carrying out a Mustahab act creates some fasaad, then that Mustahab act should be abandoned. [Ibid. page 680]

When there exists a conflict between benefits and harms

When there exists a conflict between masaalih and mafaasid, then the effects of the mafaasid are granted preference, as long as the masaalih have not yet reached a point of Shar`i necessity. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 69, vol. 4]

The Shar`i ruling is that when the mafaasid in any action is overwhelming, and that action is not sought (in the Shariah, i.e. not amongst the compulsory acts), then the actual action will be prohibited. If the action is one that is sought (in the Shariah), then the action will not be abandoned, rather the mafaasid will be terminated and prevented. [Ibid, page 84, vol. 4, Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 334, Bayaanul Qur`aan page 119, vol. 3]

If there is some benefit in an act which is contrary to the Shariah, and there may also be good reasons for executing that act, but its execution is not deemed necessary in the Shariah, or there are other means in fulfilling the same benefits, and the act may be carried out solely for the good intentions, its execution will still be impermissible. [Islaahur Rasm, page 134]

The proof of the general ruling and the two types of mufsid

It is a fiqhi ruling that a permissible, in fact Mustahab, act, which is not sought by or importance attached to it by the Shariah, becomes overwhelmed by mafaasid, should be abandoned. Regardless of whether the mafaasid is due to the action of the executers or the act of the onlookers.

This ruling is both, aqli and naqli. The Hanafi Fuqahaa have extracted numerous corollaries from this ruling. The ruling is that if there exists any Mubaah or mandoob act, which in the Shariah has not attained the level of necessity and there is a possibility that it creates fasaad amongst the masses (when it is rigidly adhered to or elevated in importance), then this Mubaah or mandoob must necessarily be prohibited from and abandoned. The aqli (logical) argument for this is clear and the naqli argument is in the Aayat,

"And do not insult those whom they (the kuffaar) worship besides Allaah, lest they insult Allaah wrongfully without knowledge..."

It is clear that to censure the baatil 'gods' is a necessary permissible act, and in some cases it is mandoob also, but because it is not an objective in itself, in fact this objective (of 'teaching' the non-believers) can be attained in other ways, like through wisdom and counsel, and there is a possibility that this method (of censuring) will lead to them hurling abuse at Allaah Ta`ala, hence it has been forbidden. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 826, vol. 1]

Explanation of an example with proofs

The Hadith has permitted the performance of Sajdah-e-shukr, however, the Hanafi Fuqahaa have, according to the statement of Allaamah Shaami (rahmatullah alayh), ruled it to be Makrooh, lest the masses deem it an objective in itself (i.e. make it a special act of Ibaadat). It is stated in Aalamgiri that since people have begun making it (with perpetuity) after Salaat, hence it is Makrooh, because the ignorant people would begin deeming it to be Sunnat or even Waajib. When any permissible act reaches this stage (that people start elevating its position), then it becomes Makrooh.

However, as for that act which is necessary, it should not be abandoned. Whatever fasaad has crept into such acts must be eradicated and reformed. For example, if in a certain janaaza there is a nauha (professional mourner) who is also present, now in order to evade this Makrooh act, one should not absent oneself from that janaazah. In fact, that woman can be and should be prevented from plying her trade there. Due to this temporary abhorrence, a necessary act should not be abandoned.

Contrary to being invited to a place where Makrooh acts are also perpetrated. There the invitation should not be accepted, because this (i.e. accepting an invitation) is not amongst the necessary (ordered) acts of the Shariah.

Allamah Shaami (rahmatullah alayh) has also cited the differences between these mas`alahs. [Islaahur Rusoom, page 110]

That Mubaah or Mustahab act which becomes a means to sin should also be abandoned

The Fuqahaa and Sufiya have placed great consideration to this ruling, that any Mubaah or Mustahab act which leads to some sin, is prohibited. For example, some intoxicants, like opium, which does not intoxicate in small quantities, will nevertheless, be prohibited, because the little quantity entices and eventually does lead one to take greater doses, which is intoxicating. Similar is the case with permissible (excessive) speech, sleep and intermingling. Even though these acts (in excess) are permissible, but they lead to sin, which is the reason why the Sufiyaa have prohibited and advised against it. [At-Tableegh, page 23]

The reason for Mubaah becoming Haraam

Some people object to the Fuqahaa, saying that they have made some Mubaah things Haraam. However, they are ignorant of the underlying secret to this ruling of the Fuqahaa. In reality, the Fuqahaa have not made a Mubaah Haraam, they have called a preamble to Haraam, Haraam. This ruling is logical as well, that anything which leads to Waajib is Waajib and anything which leads to a Haraam is Haraam. Hence those acts which were Mubaah that the Fuqahaa have labelled Haraam are in fact preambles to Haraam, and they no longer hold the level of Mubaah. Owing to their being introductions to Haraam, they have entered the category of Haraam and no longer belong to the Mubaah category. [At-Tableegh, page 23]

Rulings change according to the times and prevailing conditions

Different conditions give rise to differing rulings as well. There are many things which in one instance may be hasan (good and laudable), whereas in some other condition this same act will be qabeeh (evil). Can there be any question on the act of Salaat being hasan? However, if one has an urgent need to relieve oneself, then performing Salaat in such a state will be Makrooh.
Similarly it is possible that an act may in itself be permissible, but in another context it may be evil (qabeeh), and this state may lead it into sin. [At-tableegh, page 23]

This is also possible that an act may have been permissible during a certain era, because during that era, there were no factors of karaahat present, and then this very act is rendered impermissible in some other era, due to some Makrooh factors which may become present and are the cause (illat) for this abhorrence. Or something may be permissible in one place and in some other country impermissible.

Example

Look, Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) used to allow the womenfolk to come to the Musjid and perform their Salaat, because during that era there was no fear of fitnah, and then the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) noticed the change in environment and prohibited women from coming to Musjid. There are numerous examples present in the Ahaadith and Kitaabs of Fiqh. [Islaahur Rusoom, page 116]

An important warning

The labelling of a Mubaah act as Makrooh or Haraam due to some factor of fasaad or it being a preamble to Haraam, is not the forte of just anyone

The 'ijtihaad' of just anyone is not of any consideration when it comes to calling a Mubaah act Haraam due to any factor or valid reason. Only a wise Muhaqqiq will understand things such as which evil factors render a Mubaah act Haraam or impermissible, and which not. Moulana Qaasim Nanotwi (rahmatullah alayh) used to say that this decision can be made by Shaari` (Allaah Ta`ala), or that person who adequately understands the Speech of Shaari`. There are some example of this in the Shariah – one is the incident of the Hateem (where the Kaabah was rebuilt) and the second is the Nikah of Hadhrat Zainub (radhiallahu anha), who was the divorcee of Nabi's (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) adopted son, to Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam). In the first incident consideration was taken of the fasaad which was inherent (if the Hateem were to included as part of the Kaabah) and in the second incident the fasaad was not considered (where the people would consider as incorrect the Nikah of the divorcee of an adopted son to his guardian). From these we understand that every fasaad is not taken into consideration, and that every maslihat (benefit/goodness) is not liable for acceptance. Therefore it is not the right of everyone to label as Haraam a thing on the possibility of it leading to a mufsid. [At-Tableegh, page 11-15]

If a thing is permissible for an individual, but by others looking at him and taking a wrong cue, where this becomes a testimonial for them (to carry this out which will lead them into fasaad beliefs etc.), then this act will also be impermissible for this individual

If an act which is not deemed to be of a necessary category in the Shariah (like a Sunnat-e-Muakkadah, Waajib or Fardh) is carried out by an individual and that leads to the corruption (in belief or actions) of those who observe him, then this act will no longer be permissible for him. The act will become impermissible for this person because when the people make taqleed of him, they will be led into fasaad.

The crux of this Shar`i ruling is for the benefit of the society as a whole. The requisite for brotherhood is that wherever possible, another should be benefited, and if this is not possible then at least others should be saved from harm. Will a father whose child is allergic to sweetmeats sit and eat this in front of his child, because he (the father) likes it? Will the thought not occur to him that due to his greed his child will also partake of the sweetmeats and be harmed thereby?

Is not the welfare of every Muslim just as important? [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 279, vol. 5]

This protection (of society) is like the example of one's own child who is ill and the doctor diagnoses that sweetmeats will harm his health further. Now in order to safeguard your child, you will take this precaution that even you will not partake of sweetmeats. Just see to what extreme you will go, that although this does not harm your health, but your love for your child constrains you to abstain from sweetmeats, even though you may desire it. You will do this, lest your child also surrenders to his desire and partakes of sweetmeats (in your absence), thereby worsening his condition. In order to protect your child you have made a desirable, in fact beneficial, thing impermissible upon yourself. In this vein, have the Fuqahaa made Mustahab acts Makrooh.

Now there is an objection raised against the Hanafi Fuqahaa that they have said such acts to be Makrooh which have been praised in the Ahaadith. The objectors do not understand the reason for them being rendered Makrooh. In the example I had cited above, none will object that even though only the child was prevented from eating the sweetmeat, the entire household have also been forbidden from it. [Al-Ifaadhaat Yawmia, page 80, vol. 10]

Ruling

Since it is Fardh to save the Muslims in general from any harm, therefore if any unnecessary act (not ordered by the Shariah) of the elite (Ulama, Mashaaikh, etc.) creates harm to the beliefs of the public, then such an act will be Makrooh for the elite to carry out. They should ensure that they abandon such acts.

The following incident was reported in the Hadith Shareef that Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) intended incorporating the Hateem into the Kaabah. But because it would have caused misgivings in the hearts of the new-Muslims and also that this was not an ordered act of the Shariah, Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) abandoned his plans. He had stated his reasons also. Although it would have been preferable and better to incorporate the Hateem into the Kaabah Shareef, but in view of the harm it would have caused to the masses, Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) did not implement his plans. It is stated in Ibn Majah from Hadhrat Abdullah (radhiallahu anhu) that it was a Sunnat to feed the people of a funeral in the first day, but when people started regarding it as a custom, this practice was abandoned and forbidden. Just look, the elite have also abandoned this practice with the intention of saving the (beliefs) of the general masses. [Islaahur Rusoom, page 115]

It was for this reason that the Fuqahaa have, on numerous occasions, closed the consent to Mubaah practices in order to save the masses from Deeni harm. This is the reason why the present-day Muhaqqiqeen also prohibit the practices of moulood, faatiha, etc. [Imdaadul fataawa, page 72, vol. 4]

Now if any person claims that he will hold a gathering which is free from all the evils which accompany these gatherings (of Moulood and faatiha, etc.), then too permission will not be granted.

For example, if there is a plague of cholera and the governor of the area realised that the plague is worsened by the guavas and cucumbers. Hence, he gives an instruction that these two items not be sold or eaten. If the police see anyone with any of these then they will immediately confiscate it. Now what if a person says that he is healthy and fine, hence he must be given permission to eat it or that because he is healthy he must be able to sell it. Will such consent be granted?

Most certainly not! In fact the ruling will remain general. Similarly here also the ruling will remain general, so we should not be chastised for issuing his decree. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 14 and 124]

The issue of whether to carry out or abandon a permissible and laudable act, if it attracts the censure or brings about disrepute in the eyes of people

A learned person once asked that if an action which in itself according to the Shariah is not harmful or bad, in fact it is a laudable and good act, but the public deem this act unsavoury or bad, and there is the possibility that if this act is carried out, it will result in being disgraced in the eyes of the pubic. What can be done in such circumstances? It has been mentioned that the censure and reprimand of the public need not be considered, and this act should be carried out. Or should this act not be carried out due to the censure of the people?

This question was aptly replied by Hadhrat Moulana Qaasim Nanotwi (rahmatullah alayh), in a lecture. He said that such queries can be answered by a wise person. There cannot be a general blanket consent for such actions neither can there be prohibition. When one studies the Qur`aan Majeed and Sunnat, then it will be realised that there is some detail to such decisions.

I will present two such incidents from the blessed life of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), where he had abstained from acts which would have brought the displeasure of the masses. In the one incident, Allaah Ta`ala accepted the decision of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) and in the other Allaah Ta`ala ruled to the contrary. The first incident was regarding the Hateem in the Kaabah Shareef. Due to shortage of funds, the Quraish had not incorporated the Hateem into the Kaabah when rebuilding it. (After conquering Makkah) Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) had intended to include the Hateem into the Kaabah, but since there were many inhabitants of Makkah Mukarramah who had recently become Muslim, that would have disliked this decision thinking that Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) had scant respect for the Kaabah by reconstructing it, he shelved his idea. Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) also thought that this would have weakened the Imaan of the new Muslims. On this occasion, Allaah Ta`ala accepted this decision of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) and did not rebuke him (sallallahu alaihi wasallam).

The second incident where the censure and displeasure of the people was not taken into consideration was the incident regarding the Nikah to Hadhrat Zainub (radhiallahu anha). This is mentioned in the Qur`aan Majeed. Hadhrat Zaid bin Haarithah (radhiallahu anhu) had divorced her, and the thought crossed the mind of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) that the one way in which to console and please the family of Hadhrat Zainub (radhiallahu anha) was to marry her, but Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) stopped himself and did not pursue the matter, because Hadhrat Zaid (radhiallahu anhu) was his stepson, and stepchildren were considered to be one's own children. Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) thought to himself that if he marries Hadhrat Zainub (radhiallahu anha) then the non-believers would rebuke and malign him, accusing him of marrying his 'daughter-in-law'. This maligning would prevent many people from entering the fold of Islaam. Now, just have a look – this incident would also have brought disrepute to Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) and Islaam, just as the incident of the Hateem would have. But, in this case, Allaah Ta`ala did not consider this threat and instructed Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) to marry Hadhrat Zainub (radhiallahu anha) and not concern himself with the comments and opinions of the people. From these two incidents we realise that not every mufsid is to be considered and not every benefit is to strived for. Therefore in order to sacrifice a benefit or to avoid a mufsid, it is not the right of just anyone to deem a Mubaah act as Haraam or Makrooh. This is what Moulana Qaasim Sahib (rahmatullah alayh) had meant when he said that it takes a Hakeem (wise person) to discern and analyse such things, where he may rule that a valid act be abandoned or not. [Ifaadhaat Yawmia, page 48, vol. 9, part 1]

There was a difference between these two incidents, which resulted in the censure of the people being of consideration in the one and not in the other. All praise be to Allaah Ta`ala that the reason for this difference has come to mind – studying the Kitaab and Sunnat, this ruling is derived that the act, (even if it leads to sin or entails other harms), which in the eyes of the people is worthy of disgrace and censure, but it is a Waajib act or it is something which is essential to the Deen, then it should not be abandoned for fear of the views of the people, and if that act is not Waajib or an essential in the Deen, then there is no harm if it is abandoned.

Regarding the incident of Hadhrat Zainub (radhiallahu anha), the censure and rebuke of the masses was not taken into consideration and the deed was executed, because since Hadhrat Zaid Bin Haarithah (radhiallahu anhu) was the adopted son of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), and in those days it was considered Haraam and taboo for a man to marry his stepson's divorced wife, therefore in order to clarify and correct this belief of the people, Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) was instructed to make Nikah to Hadhrat Zainub (radhiallahu anha).

It was necessary to make tableegh (teach) to the masses, and mere verbal tableegh in this case was insufficient, practical tableegh was needed here, and to make tableegh is a Waajib duty in Islaam. Therefore to make this Nikah was deemed a necessary part of Deen, hence Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) was not to consider the views of the masses. Contrary to the Hateem issue. This was not an essential part of the Deen to incorporate the Hateem into the Kaabah. It was only a desirable act, which had no essential objective attached to it. By incorporating it, no Shar`i benefit would have been realised or lost, hence the views of the people were taken into consideration here.

The crux of the matter is that disrepute is not taken into consideration in matters which are essential to the Deen, and in matters where no essential of Deen is at stake, one should abstain from disrepute.

When a person understands this explanation of mine, then all doubts should dissipate. [Ifaadaat, page 48, vol. 9]

Look at another example – when Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) invited the people to tauheed, how much of maligning and rebuke did he not experience. But did Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) abandon this call to tauheed due to this criticism? [Ibid.]

A third example is that of Me`raaj. Hadhrat Umme Haani (radhiallahu anha) caught hold of the blessed chadar of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) and told him not to relate this incident to anyone, lest it becomes a subject of rebuke and criticism amongst the kuffaar. But, Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) did not heed the advice of Hadhrat Umme Haani, and he related this incident of Me`raaj because it was an essential part of the Deen and beliefs. In such cases, the rebuke of people is of no consequence.

Some points and important fiqhi usools of Hadhrat regarding a lecture series given in Lucknow in praise of the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum)

The Ulama in Lucknow had organised a lecture series to challenge the criticism levelled against the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) by the rawaafidh (Shiahs), which only resulted in the criticism of the shiahs becoming even more intense. Some people had written to Hadhrat (Moulana Ashraf Ali Thaanwi Sahib), whose reply is worthy of reflection. A summary of this reply is as follows:

"It has been reported in Bukhaari, from Ibn Abbaas regarding the statement of Allaah Ta`ala, 'And neither raise your voice (excessively) nor soften it (thereby making it inaudible),' he said, 'This Aayat was revealed whilst Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) was in Makkah. When Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) used to raise his voice in recitation of the Qur`aan while performing Salaat with his Sahaabah, and the kuffaar would hear him, they would swear at the Qur`aan, He who had revealed it and the one who conveyed it. Allaah Ta`ala said to His Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), 'And do not raise your voice, that is, your recitation (of the Qur`aan Majeed), so that when the mushrikeen hear you they swear the Qur`aan and do not (also) be too soft (in your recitation when reading) to your companions. Opt for a path between this.'"

From this Hadith we note that the loud recitation of the Qur`aan Majeed by the Imaam in Jamaat Salaat is Waajib. When this recitation becomes a means of mocking and jeering by the kuffaar, then the tone of the recitation should not be so loud that it reaches their ears.

From this Aayat is also proven that when any act of Ibaadat becomes a means of sin, then to abandon that act of obedience becomes Waajib, because that thing which becomes a means of evil is also evil. It is a different matter in that place where an evil practice is already in vogue, and one has no ability to stop it, and then to carry out an act of Ibaadat (in that midst).

Sometimes people confuse the two issues and regard them both to be the same (in ruling). This is the reason why Ibn Sireen (rahmatullah alayh) would not attend that Janaazah where men and women were mixed. Hadhrat Hasan (radhiallahu anhu) would oppose such an attitude by exclaiming that we deprive ourselves of acts of obedience because of the presence of sin and evil, and that this is paving the way for the destruction of our Deen.

It is reported from Shihaab Muqdasi that the ruling of our Fuqahaa is that a necessary act of obedience should not be abandoned due to the presence of any bid`ah, like the invitation to a walimah is not accepted due to the some frivolity and entertainment which may be present there, or to abstain from attending a janaazah because of the presence of a nauhah (professional mourners). The correct way is to present oneself at these occasions and prevent the un-Islaamic activities which are contaminating the Ibaadat. This is if one has the power to stop it, otherwise one should adopt patience. This will be the case when one is not a follower of the participants in this occasion. If he is their follower, then he should not even attend. [Shaami, page 134, vol. 1]

"One should not abandon participating in a janaaza because a nawhah is in attendance. A Sunnat practice is never abandoned because of the alliance of a bid`ah (with the Sunnat). One should not confuse it with the issue of attendance at a walimah, even though some bid`ah is associated therewith. If a janaazah is not attended because of some attendant bid`ah, then this institution will die down. Contrary to a walimah, where if one person is not present to eat, then there are always many others who are present." [Majaalis Hakimul Ummat, page 283,4]

CHAPTER SIX

The definition of Sunnat

Sunnat is not only that which has been established from Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), in fact Sunnat is the predominant practice of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), be it in the form of a (clear) instruction or something which is perceived (from his reactions). For example, Taraaweeh Salaat is classified as Sunnat-e-Muakkadah, and ta`akkud (emphasis) implies perpetuity. It is clear that there was no perpetuity in this act (by Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), rather it was a special temporary act. [Al-Ifaadhaat, page 355, vol. 8]

A verbal declaration on any matter from Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) is not sufficient to render it a Sunnat, in fact, that which was his predominant practice is a Sunnat, and not his occasional practices. [Ibid. page 300, vol. 2]

Types of Sunnat

Sunnat (according to its general definition) is that which Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) carried out as a form of Ibaadat, besides this it would be classified as a sunnan-e-zawaa`id (extra Sunnats). For example the hair-style of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) was his personal habit and not any act of Ibaadat, hence there is no doubt that keeping this style of hair is preferable (for the Ummat), but to keep one's hair in another way would not be classified as contrary to the Sunnat. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 224]

Sunnat is of two types – Sunnat-e-Ibaadat and Sunnat-e-`Aadat. The general usage of the word 'Sunnat' would include only the first type. Promises of reward and encouragement to practice implies to and refers to this type. Practice on the second type would be a source of blessings and is a demonstration of one's love for Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam). This second type does not form any essential part of the Deen and if its practice interferes with one's Deen and beliefs, then one should be stopped therefrom. [Ibid. page 229, vol. 4]

The ruling regarding Sunan-e-Zawaa`id and mustahibbaat

The ruling regarding the 'extra' Sunnats (sunan-e-`aadiya) and the Mustahab acts is that their performance warrants reward and non-performance does not attract sin. When one closely studies the nusoos then it will be noted that this is the ruling of these two deeds before they are performed, but after their commencement, the ruling changes. One ruling will apply to a specific application and another is general, which is not specific to its occasion of application. It is Makrooh to leave out and abandon that Mustahab act which has been made a perpetual habit, which one practices over a period of time. This is borne out by a Hadith in Bukhaari Shareef which is reported by Hadhrat Abdullah Ibn Umar (radhiallahu anhuma) who reports from Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) that he said, "O Abdallah, don't be like so and so, who used to stand up at nights (in Ibaadat) and then he abandoned it." Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) had displayed distaste and karaahat at this attitude of this person who used to regularly perform Tahajjud Salaat and then abandoned it. It is clear that after inculcating as a habit a Mustahab act it should not be abandoned. This is Makrooh. [badaa`i, page 150]

The definition of reviving a Sunnat

Shah Abdul Qadir Sahib (rahmatullah alayh) once said to an Aalim (Molvi Ismail Sahib) to stop making rafa` yadain (lifting hands in various postures of Takbeer in Salaat) because it is a cause for unnecessary fitnah. Molvi Ismail said that if the fitnah of the masses is to be taken into account what then would happen to (the import of) the Hadith, "He who holds fast to my Sunnat at a time of fasaad in the Ummah will receive the reward of 100 martyrs." Upon hearing this reply, Shah Abdul Qadir (rahmatullah alayh) replied, "We thought that Ismail had become an Aalim, but he does not understand the meaning of even one Hadith. The application of this Hadith is when there is some act which is (being generally practiced) contrary to the Sunnat practice, whereas the topic we are discussing (i.e. not making rafa` yadain) is not contrary to the Sunnat, in fact it is another Sunnat. Just as rafa` yadain is a Sunnat, so too is irsaal (not making rafa` yadain) is a Sunnat." [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 469, vol. 2]

An appropriate and excellent explanation of Sunnat and bid`ah

It should be realised that whatever acts were innovated after the passing of the Khairul Quroon (best of eras) are categorised into two types: one is that whose initiative is new and some ma`moor behe (essential ordered act of the Shariah) is dependant upon it, where without this (innovation) this faculty of Deen will not function effectively. For example, the compilation and authoring of Deeni subject matter in book-form, the establishment of Madrasahs and khanqahs, etc. These things were not resent during the era of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), and their initiative is new, and some essential part of the Deen depends on (the initiation of) these acts.

Everyone is well aware that it is an essential and necessary requirement upon every (Muslim) individual to protect and safeguard the Deen. One should also remember that during the best of eras, such means (as these innovations mentioned above) did not exist, because there was no need for it. That era was permeating with blessings, and the memories of the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) was so excellent that when they heard or observed Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) saying or doing anything, it remained embedded and etched in their minds. Their understanding and intellect was also such that there was no need for formal classes wherein prescribed lessons in Deen needed to be taught.

Following those eras, others followed wherein negligence and carelessness (in matters of Deen) became the order of the day, memories were weaker, people of deviated and personal views increased, etc., hence the Ulama discerned the gradual destruction of the edifices of the Deen. The urgent need arose to formulate methods to administrate (and safeguard) the structures of the Deen, together with all its facets. In this regard the Kitaabs of the Deen, Hadith, Usool-e-Hadith, Usool-e-fiqh, Aqaai`d, etc. needed to be compiled. Madrasah were established in order to teach these sciences of the Deen. In similar vein, the mashaa`ikh saw the need to establish khanqahs to revive and nurture the desire for nisbat and self-reformation. Besides these, there was no other means envisaged which would safeguard our Deen.

Hence these are such things whose sabab (reasons and causes) are new, and these sababs were not prevalent during the khariul quroon. These are also such matters upon which the existence and preservation of some essential Deeni matter rests. Hence these things may have the apparent hue and definition of bid`ah, but in reality they are not bid`ahs. In fact, according to the ruling of Muqaddamatul Waajib Waajibun, they are Waajib acts.

The second are category are those things whose reason (sabab) is old. For example, the sabab of meelad, teeja, daswah, etc. are all old. The reason for the establishment of meelad is expression of happiness at the birth of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam). This very sabab and reason was prevalent and also existent during the era of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) and the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum), but it was never celebrated by any of them. Can we claim that, Nauthubillah, the minds of the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) did not discern this? If the sabab was not present during their eras, then at least we could have said that they had no cause to do it. But since the reason for holding meelad was also prevalent during that time, and neither did Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) nor his Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) ever hold or encourage such activities, can we safely aver that this is a bid`ah – in word, definition and practically. Since these innovations fall under the scope of the Hadith, "Whosoever innovates anything into our Deen, is not from amongst us." That is, it is impermissible to participate and hold such gatherings.

This is the general ruling to recognise and distinguish between Sunnat and bid`ah. All corollary rulings can be deduced herefrom. [Wa`azus suroor, page 27]

The differences between Sunnat and bid`ah and the method in which to distinguish between the two

1. There is one other extraordinary difference between these two, and that is that the proposers and advancers of the former are (essentially) the elite (Ulama) and the awwaam (masses) are not included (as the initiators), whereas the advancers and initiators of the latter are the masses (who are like sheep). And it is also they who always participate and spend therein. The celebrations and initiation of meelad was originated by a king. He was from the awwaam and this practice remains perpetuated by the awwaam. [As-suroor, page 27]

2. I will show one way to recognise a bid`ah and that it is if the act is not established from the Qur`aan Majeed, Sunnat, Ijma or Qiyaas, and the participants deem it an act of the Shariah, then know that this is a bid`ah. After noting this definition, observe that urs fatiha, regarding any particular day as blessed and auspicious to make isaal-e-tahwaab, etc., etc. are not established from any source of the Deen. Are these acts not also regarded as part of the Deen? [Wa`az Taqweem, page 29]

3. Another yardstick in recognising that a bid`ah is evil is to observed whether more of its participants are Ulama or the masses. The Bid`ati leader will not spend of his own wealth. Yes he will be present at the meals. Such functions are more frequented by the ignoramuses. There is no prestige and honour of the bid`ah in the hearts of the Bid`ati Ulama.

Those things which we hold in esteem and deem desirable, we participate therein, even if it means spending from our wealth, like qurbaani.

And then also we should observe the masses (who attend these functions) --- how many of them are Deeni-conscious and how many are not? Very few may be pious, but they do little, and the majority are faasiq and faajir (open sinners and transgressors). [Hasnul Azeez, page 330, vol. 2]

Innovations for Deen or innovations in Deen?

The reality of bid`ah is that it is such an act which is done thinking it to be part of the Deen. If it is done thinking it to be a treatment (for some spiritual ailment), then how can it be called a bid`ah? Hence, the one is an innovation for the (benefit of) Deen and the other is an innovation in (to the detriment of) the Deen. The innovation for the Deen would be classified a Sunnat and the innovation in the Deen a bid`ah. [Al-Faadhaat, page 308, vol. 2]

A person levelled an objection saying that the (concept of) times and timetable which we have scheduled and prepared were not practiced during the khairul quroon, hence this will be classified as a bid`ah.

If bid`ah is to be classified as these people understand it that whatever did not exist during the khairul quroon is a bid`ah, then during the khairul quroon he was also not yet in existence, hence he should be classified a bid`ah. These poor souls do not understand the definition of bid`ah.

These time schedules and tables are not part of any belief or ibaadat, hence their being or not being in the khairul quroon does not include it into the category of bid`ah. [Ibid. page 125, vol.2]

The necessity for any act to have been present during the khairul quroon will be when the act is one of Ibaadat. If the act is merely one of administration or regulation, then it will not be a bid`ah (even if it was not existent during the khairul quroon). One such Hadith has been added in Hayatul Muslimeen which was taken from Shamaa`il Tirmidhi, wherein regulation in the daily life of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) has been reported. This Hadith appears in the eighth part. [Ibid. page 134, vol. 2]

To exceed the limits in a non-Shar`i or mandoob act, or to make takhsees or ta`yeen would also be included as a bid`ah

It has been narrated by Hadhrat Hasan (radhiallahu anhu) that Hadhrat Uthmaan bin Abi `Aas (radhiallahu anhu) was called to the khatna (circumcision) of someone, and he refused the invitation. When asked about it he replied that during the era of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) they would not attend a khatna neither were they called to it. This narration appears in Musnad Ahmad.

From this we realise that the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) disliked the invitations to such occasions which are not established from the Sunnat. They even refused to attend such gatherings.

The secret to this is that an invitation to any occasion places some sort of importance or significance to that which one is invited to, because arrangements are being prepared for it, and to make special arrangements for anything which the Shariah has not, would be classified as an innovation in the Deen. This is the reason why when Hadhrat Ibn Umar (radhiallahu anhu) saw that the people were gathering in the Musjid to perform their Chaasht (Duhaa) Salaat, he criticised them and labelled this a bid`ah. Based on this, the Fuqahaa have said that it is Makrooh to make Nafl Salaat in congregation. To regard and believe an unimportant matter to be important and place great emphasis upon it, or to become dogmatic and rigidly practice on such matters, such that one regards and accommodates it to the level of Faraa`idh and Waajibaat or even more, and then to censure and criticise those who do not participate therein, are all contemptible acts. Theses are the essences of bid`ah.
Allaah Ta`ala has stated that those people who exceed the limits placed by Him are the oppressors.

Hadhrat Abdullah Ibn Mas`ood (radhiallahu anhu) stated that it is necessary upon every person that he not allocate a part of his Salaat to shaitaan, by always turning to his right side after Fardh Salaat (i.e. deeming this to be necessary). He says that he saw Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) sometimes turn to his left side. [Bukhaari / Muslim]

Teebi, the commentator of Mishkaat Shareef has stated that it is proven from this Hadith that the person who persists and is dogmatic on a Mustahab act, such that he deems it necessary and binding and never practices to its contrary, then such a person has apportioned a share of his ibaadat to shaitaan (i.e. he has lost the blessings of his ibaadat). What then can be said of that person who persists and rigidly practices on bid`ah, un-Islaamic and detestable acts?

The author of Majma` has stated that it is proven from this Hadith that a mandoob act also becomes Makrooh when there is a fear that it is elevated in rank. This is the reason why the Hanafi Fuqahaa have stated that it is Makrooh to stipulate fixed Surahs for Salaats, regardless of whether this is done believing it to be part of the Shariah or rigidly in practice. [Tareeqah Meelad Shareef, page 7 and 11]

How a Mustahab becomes a bid`ah

I do not say that Mustahab is bid`ah. To regard it as necessary and binding is bid`ah. If anyone regards a Mustahab act as Waajib, then is this not bid`ah? Necessary, obligatory and Waajib all have the same meaning. [Husnul Azeez, page 676, vol. 1]

To deem an un-obligatory act as obligatory is a deviated bid`ah. To censure and rebuke those who oppose or do not practice it, merely confirms its bid`ah status. [Imdaadul fataawa, page 340, vol. 5 / page 306, vol. 5]

To regard the distribution of sweetmeats as necessary is a bid`ah. The Fuqahaa have written that if there is fasaad in a Mustahab act, then it becomes necessary to abandon that Mustahab act. [Husnul Azeez, page 676, vol.1]

Is it not a bid`ah to regard a non-Waajib as a Waajib? Does this not fall under the scope of the definition of bid`ah? [Al-Ifaadhaat Yawmia, page 116, vol. 8, part 1]

The four types of bid`ah and Sunnat, and the explanation of bid`ah-e-hasana, bid`ah-e-sayyi`a, haqeeqiya and sooriya

"It is stated in Raddul Muhtaar, 'The Sunnats of wudhu: That thing upon which Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) and the Khulafa-e-Raashideen, after him, were constant upon are Sunnat, otherwise it is Mandoob. It is reported in Durrul Mukhtaar under the discussion of intention (Niyyat) that verbal statement is Mustahab, that is the preferred opinion, and it is said that this is Sunnat, i.e. the Salf preferred this or it is a Sunnat of our Ulama, since it is reported from neither Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) nor the Tabieen…

"It is reported from Durrul Mukhtaar: The Ahkaam of Imaamat and the Mubtadi`u (person who indulges in bid`ah), that is (the one who) believes contrary to the accepted (rulings) of The Rasool, not in opposition or resistance, rather with a type of doubt…and Mandoob, like innovations similar to Madrasah…'"

From the above excerpts the following matters are clarified:

Firstly, there are numerous implications of Sunnat:

1. That which is reported from Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam)

2. That which is reported from Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), the Khulafa-e-Raashideen, as is mentioned in the ibaarat (text): "That thing upon which Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) and the Khulafa-e-Raashideen, after him, were constant upon are Sunnat"

3. That which is reported from Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) or the Taabieen, as is deduced from the ibaarat: "since it is reported from neither Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) nor the Tabieen"

4. That which is reported from the Ulama, as is deduced from the ibaarat: "or it is a Sunnat of our Ulama."

A few meanings of bid`ah have also been deduced from this texts:

1. That which is not reported from Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam)

2. That which is not reported from Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) or his Khulafaa-e-Raashideen

3. That which is not reported from Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), his Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) or the Tabieen
4. That which is not reported from the Ulama. [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 778]

In reality there is only type of Sunnat and bid`ah

This multitude is merely on the apparent, otherwise in reality there is only one definition of Sunnat, and that is: It is the practicable path in Deen as stated after the former ibaarat. All these meaning incorporate the definition of Sunnat. The meaning of bid`ah is: Belief in that which is contrary to the accepted (well-known practices of) Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), not in opposition or resistance, rather with a type of doubt. (The practice which opposes the nass, if it is done with doubt and uncertainty (misinformation/ignorance), then it is bid`ah, otherwise it is clear-cut fisq and transgression, without any doubt). Or in other words, That which has been innovated contrary to the Haqq which has been established from Rasulullah (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), in respect of knowledge, practice or conditions…As it is stated in Durrul Mukhtaar, and this is the true meaning for bid`ah, as borne out by the statement of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), 'He who innovates anything in our Deen, is not from amongst us.'"

Hence Sunnat-e-Haqeeqi and Bid`ah-e-Haqeeqi cannot be combined or united. However, Bid`ah-e-Sooriya can be coupled with Sunnat-e-Haqeeqi. In this regard, the verbal intention for Salaat is also called a Sunnat. There are some things which may be contrary to the Sunnat, hence they are called bid`ah but regarded as hasan (good/desirable). There are some examples of a clear combination between some types of bid`ah and Sunnat-e-Haqeeqi, and this is borne out by the statement of Hadhrat Umar (radhiallahu anhu) when he once said, "What a good bid`ah!"

At this juncture we realise also that the bid`ah-e-hasana which some personalities have negated is restricted to just a difference and altercation in words and definitions, because those who have negated it have defined bid`ah in its haqeeqi sense, whereas the claimants (to the validity of bid`ah-e-hasana) have defined it in its general sense.

The limits of sunan-e-`Aadiyah and sunan-e-`Ibaadiya

One person once asked if the rearing of sheep/goats is Sunnat or not? The reply was that yes it is a Sunnat, but it is a Sunnat-e-`Aadiya and not a Sunnat-e-Ibaadiya, and the object of is Sunnat is Ibaadat. Nevertheless, the practicing of Sunnat-e-`Aadiya, if it is executed with love and affection (for Nabi - sallallahu alayhi wasallam), then it is also worthy of rewards. There must not be extremity and excessiveness in sunan-e-`aadiya, where it is brought to the level of an ibaadat. Some people exhaust all the energies in researching these issues – how big was the `asaa (stick) of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), how long his turban was, etc., etc. If a true lover of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) makes these enquiries and his desire is the result of pure love, then this is one thing, but most people who are involved in these types of issues are such that they neglect the necessary requisites of the Deen and regard this as their main objective and aim. If this type of excessiveness continue then it will result in the destruction of the Deen. Everything should be kept in its proper perspective.

The ruling regarding Sunnat-e-Ibaadat is that if there is a fear of it causing fasaad in the beliefs of the masses, then it becomes Waajib to abandon a Mustahab act. In this regard, it was the blessed habit of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) to regularly recite Surahs Alif Laam Meem Sajdah and Dahar for the Fajr on Jumuahs, but Imaam Abu Hanifah (rahmatullah alayh) has decreed it Makrooh to recite these two Surahs (every) Friday Jumuah. For this reason many ignoramuses have levelled the criticism of Imaam Abu Hanifah (rahmatullah alayh) acting contrary to the Sunnat. [Al-Ifaadaat, page 98, vol. 19]

I ask: whatever food Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) partook of as a habit, will it be classified as `aadatan (a habit) or ibaatatan (an act of ibaabat)? It is clear that it was eaten as ibaatatan. Hence, to imitate the habits of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) is not Waajib in the Shariah, neither is leaving them out sinful.

One has the choice of appeasing the taste in matters of habit. Some of the noble habits of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) are such that we will never be able to imitate or bear, therefore the Shariah has not made it incumbent to follow the noble habit of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam). Yes, if someone has the desire and good fortune of being able to inculcate the noble habits of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), then undoubtedly there is great virtue in that. However, one does not have the right to rebuke others for not doing so. [At-Tableegh, page 255, vol. 20]

The two types of Uswai-e-Hasana (models/patterns of Nabi - sallallahu alayhi wasallam) – verbal and practical

It is stated in the Qur`aan Majeed, "Indeed there is for you in the (lifestyle of the) Rasool of Allaah, a beautiful model." Allaah Ta`ala is indicating to us that He has placed an excellent example for us to follow in the life of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam). What is the object of giving a model? So that its likeliness may be prepared.

It is a further grace of Allaah Ta`ala that there is no difficulty and inhibition in this model. Two types of model are given – a practical and verbal one. It is a pure mercy of Allaah Ta`ala upon this Ummat that He has granted so much of latitude and not the slightest bit of constriction.

Objection: The examples set for us by Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) is to be followed to the letter. For example, Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) mostly partook of barley bread, and he led a life of pure simplicity, where he never procured a home or kept (extra) money, whereas we neither eat like him nor suffer like him. We even don the best of clothing. We have lavish and spacious homes, we save money, etc. Yet the Ulama say that all this is permissible. What is the explanation to our following this example and model of our beloved Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam)?

Reply: The answer to this is that there are two types of models – qowli and fe`lee. Fe`lee is of a particular form and qowli falls within the ambit of the Shariah. It is impermissible to go beyond it. However, there is much latitude within it. We were shown the limits of the deeds of obedience, which should not be exceeded. We have also been granted latitude to manoeuvre as much as is permissibly possible. This is Waajib and obligatory. The ush-shaaq (lovers of Nabi - sallallahu alayhi wasallam), have taken the practical model and noted what Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) ate, drank, how he led his life, etc., etc. But for people like us there is scope and latitude, that we can fulfil our needs within the ambit of the Shariah. However, we also need to take note of the limits of the Shariah and not exceed them. In every act, we should take note of the limits of the Shariah. As long as one remains within the limits of the Shariah, the it will be deemed as also having followed the model. [Huqooquz Zawjain, page 460]

The laws regarding leaving out the sunan-e-`aadiyah and sunan-e-ibaadiya and when they become impermissible

The sunan-e-`aadiya, like simple clothing, barley bread, and all other such habits of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), if for any reason due to them the objective is lost (i.e. it interferes with one's ibaadat), then they should be abandoned, because the sunan-e-`aadiya are not objectives in themselves.

In fact, there are even occasions where the sunan-e-ibaadat, are to be left out if they are the cause of some harm. For example, the Sunnat of Tahajjud is 8 rakaats, now if a person who gets up with difficulty and performs this eight Rakaats, but sleep overwhelms him such that he falls off to sleep and misses his Fajr Salaat with Jamaat, then to such a person it will be told that he only perform two Rakaats of Tahajjud and sleep away, so that he may awaken for Fajr in time. Since six to eight Rakaats are amongst the sunan-e-ibaadat for Tahajjud Salaat, but if a person exceeds this, then the objective (other more important ibaadat) is lost and it (this excessiveness) should be abandoned.

This is the reason why if it is known regarding the conditions of a certain person, that if he undertakes the journey of Hajj, he will not be able to maintain and be diligent in performing Salaat, then he will be prevented from going for Hajj. If there is an overwhelming fear that even one Fardh Salaat of a person will become Qadha whilst on the journey for a Nafl Hajj, then it will not be permissible for him to undertake that journey. When the Hajj will be a cause for some Deeni harm, where another Fardh duty is neglected, then it is clear that instead of this Hajj bringing one closer to Allaah Ta`ala, it takes him further away.

Another example is that if for example a person has to eat barley bread, which may cause his stomach to pain. Then the love which a person has for the Sunnat of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) will no longer remain that, rather it may become a dread, and there is a real fear that (a person will think that) by practicing upon an excellent Sunnat causes stomach-ache. Today, it is due to the mutashaddideen (those who adhere doggedly to something), that people have acquired a dislike for and are being distanced from the Sunnat and the Shariah.

In summary, the sunan-e-`aadiya and ibaadiya are impermissible for that person to whom there may be harm caused to his (more important and primary) Deeni duties. [At-Tableegh, page 74-8]

The two ways of following the Sunnat

The actions of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) are categorised into two classes – one is his acts of ibaadat and the other is regarding his noble habit (aadat). The former requires following and not necessarily the latter. If anyone does imitate the latter, then it will be a display of affection and love.

There is a soori (in form) and haqeeqi (real) way of obedience. To bring the actual instruction into practice, without considering the illat is ittibaa` (obedience/following) in soorat and to practice upon it taking the sabab and illat into consideration is ittibaa` in haqeeqat.

These two ways of ittibaa` were also found in the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum). During the course of the expedition of the Bani Quraidha, when Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) was seeing a group of the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) off, he said to them,

"Perform your Asr Salaat when you reach there." It so happened that after much effort the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) could not make it to reach their destination before Asr Salaat. The time for Asr entered whilst they were still on their journey. This led to the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) breaking up into two groups – the one group performed their Salaat on time and said that the object of Nabi's (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) advice was that they should perform their Asr Salaat at the destination if they reached there on time, and not to perform it (only) there regardless of when they reached. The other group said that they will follow Nabi's (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) instruction to the letter and only perform their Salaat upon reaching the destination. They therefore performed their Salaat upon reaching their destination and not on the way.

When Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) was informed of this occurrence, he accepted both views. In this incident, the first group made haqeeqi ittibaa` and the second soorat ittibaa`.

The definitions of bid`ah-e-hasana and bid`ah-e-sayyi`a

The comprehensive ruling regarding this is that any matter which is neither in part or whole from the Deen, and it is forced onto the Deen based on some flimsy doubt, then it is a bid`ah.

The proof of this is in the authentic Hadith, "He who innovates something into our Deen, which is not part of it, is rejected." The words من (from) and في (in) are clear indicatives, and a haqeeqi bid`ah always remain a bid`ah-e-sayyi`a. A bid`ah-e-hasana is a bid`ah in outer form (definition) only. It reality, owing to some (Shar`i) factor it can be classified a Sunnat. [Imdaadul fataawa, page 285, vol. 5]

Part 2

The definition of Iltizaam ma laa Yalzimu (making incumbent upon oneself that which is not compulsory)

Dawaam* (perpetuity) is not prohibited. Iltizaam-e-I`tiqaadi and amali is prohibited. *Iltizaam-e-I`tiqaadi*is to believe something to be binding and Iltizaam-e-amali is to censure ad rebuke others who do not participate therein. [Ibid. page 308, vol. 5]

The definition of Iltizaam ma la Yalzimu is clear from its definition. There are, however, two types. If it is believed to be a part of the Deen, then its gravity is worse. If it is not regarded as part of the Deen, but it is just as rigidly practiced as the other obligatory acts of Deen, then too it is bad, but not as bad as the former type. For example the censure of riyaa (show) which has been reported in the nusoos.

Here also there are two types; the first is in Deeni actions, this is the worse of the two and the other is regarding worldly actions, which is also censured. The following warnings are sounded, "The one who dons the garments of show, Allaah will let him don the garments of disgrace in the hereafter." Those permissible acts upon which a person is constant is not included here. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 326, vol. 5]

A simple definition of Iltizaam-e-I`tiqaadi would be to take as obligatory that which is not. [Ibid. page 327, vol. 5]

Luzoom-e-amali (making necessary a deed) comes about with continuous repetition and excessive practice (of the deed). [Anfaas Isa, page 634]

The proof for the prohibition of Iltizaam-e-I`tiqaadi

The proof for this appears in the Qur`aan Majeed, Sunnat and Kitaabs of Fiqh: As for The Kitaab, the statement of Allaah Ta`ala, "Do not make Haraam the pure things which Allaah had made Halaal for you, and do not exceed the bounds", together with its sabab-e-nuzool (reason of revelation). As for the Sunnat, is the Hadith of Ibn Mas`ood (radhiallahu anhu) where people only turn to their right side (after Salaat), and as for Fiqh, as they have mentioned the abomination of stipulating and fixing a specific Surah. And Allaah Ta`ala knows best. [page 470]

The difference between iltizaam (making necessary) and dawaam (perpetuity)

Dawaam is one thing and Iltizaam another. With dawaam, one's beliefs and making the matter obligatory does not feature throughout one's life. With Iltizaam, one's beliefs are attached to the act and one doggedly persists on practicing it. A sign of this is when the non-participants (in this particular act) are censured and rebuked.

Part 3

The discussion on customs and the definition of rasm (customs)

A rasm is not only that which is attached to wedding ceremonies and other functions and celebrations. In fact, to render any unnecessary thing necessary is called a rasm. Whether it may be regarding a function/ceremony or an everyday occurrence. [Kamaalaat Ashrafiyya, page 325]

The ruling regarding rasm and iltizaam in worldly matters

The meaning of iltizaam is not merely making something necessary upon oneself, in fact, it is to deem as a fault and censurable to leave it (the particular act) out. It is clear that this falls under exceeding the limits of the Shariah. This prohibition is confirmed in the nusoos by the words لا تعتدوا (do not exceed the bounds). Iltizaam is the established sabab of this exceeding, hence this is also prohibited. Another objective of this excessiveness is show and pride, whose prohibition is mansoos, just as the clothing worn for show has been prohibited. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 330, vol. 5]

The yardstick between a rasm and a non-rasm

When there is no intention of a rasm nor is it executed in the manner of those who practice rasm, then it is not a rasm, neither haqeeqatan nor sooratan. This is the yardstick to distinguish the difference. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 571, vol. 4]

The prohibition of excessiveness in Deen

There is no consent from the Shariah to exercise excessiveness in the Deen. It is mentioned in the Qur`aan Majeed, "O people of the Book, Do not be extreme in your Deen" and "Do not make Haraam that which Allaah had made Halaal". It is stated in one Hadith that three persons presented themselves at the home of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) and enquired from some of his pure wives regarding his blessed lifestyle. When they were informed, they exclaimed, "How can we ever compare ourselves to Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), when all his sins, past and future and all his mistakes are forgiven. When will we ever attain this blessing?

It is therefore necessary that we strive earnestly and make great mujaahadah." One of them said that he will not make Nikah, the other said that he will make so much of ibaadat that he will not sleep and the last said he will keep continuous fast and not make iftaar. When Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) returned home, he was informed regarding these three persons and he disliked their attitude. He exclaimed, "Remember! I also sleep and I keep awake, I make Nikah, eat and fast. Understand well that this is my way and the person who does not follow my way, does not have any connection to me."

Just look what a stern warning Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) sounded for those who intended excessiveness in Deen, that he expelled them from having any connection to him.

Similarly, there is another incident where Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) entered the Musjid and saw a rope hanging between two pillars. Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) enquired about it and the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) replied that it was the rope of Hadhrat Zainub (radhiallahu anha), who used it to lean on when she became excessively tired from performing Nafl Salaat. Upon hearing this, Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) immediately had the rope removed and said that the soul should not be subjected to such severity. He said that if sleep overcomes you, then sleep, and when you are refreshed, then continue with whatever work you are doing.

This is the Shariah. The Fuqahaa have understood the Aayats and the Ahaadith well.

The two levels of permissibility

Permissibility has two levels. The one refers to those acts which are permitted, and they have no importance in the Deen and acts of obedience, like treatment for illnesses or leaving it out. The second level refers to those which have some relationship to Deen and acts of obedience.

Its recognition is that it has been given importance and encouragement in Deen, like Nikah, whose emphasis has been reported (in the Hadith) and abandoning it without valid cause has been warned against. This is clear proof that it is part of ibaadat and obedience. [Imdaadul fataawa, page 270, vol. 2]

CHAPTER SEVEN

DISCUSSION ON USOOLS

Part 1

The discussion on urf (common law) and riwaaj (customs)

The basis of adab (etiquette) is urf

Etiquette is based on common law (general practice of the society). That is the reason why it changes with the changing of times. (An occasional) Humour in the relationship between Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) and the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) has been established, however nowadays it is regarded as unethical and against proper etiquette to be humorous with a buzrug (pious person). [Anfaas Isa, page 48]

It is impermissible, based on urf to call a father 'barkhudaar' (lad / one who enjoys a prosperous life)

It is permissible for a father to benefit and enjoy from his son's wealth. However it is not permissible for the son to start referring to his father as barkhudaar. Although the meaning and import may be the same and not necessarily derogatory, but since this term is generally used to describe a son, it will be impermissible according to the urf to use it to refer to the father. It will be deemed unrespectable. [Ifaadaat, page 150, vol. 10]

Instead of Shukr (expressing thanks), or saying Jazaakallah, to say Tasleem

If someone is given something, then the recipient, if he is younger, says "Tasleem" as a form of gratitude, because sometimes the elders deem it disrespectful if they are told "Jazaakallah", and also to say "Tasleem" instead of "Assalaamualaikum" is contrary to the Sunnat, so what should one do?

The usage of the term 'Tasleem' does not imply salaam, in fact, it is a form of terminology which is used instead of shukriya (expressing thanks), and there appears to be no harm in it. To say 'Assalaamualaikum' on such occasions would be out of context, anyway. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 152, vol. 19]

Based on urf, habits and bid`ahs also hold the rank of being Sha`air Islaam (signs of Islaam)

A person raised an objection against Moulana Khalil Ahmad Sahib because he issued a fatwa stating that slaughtering a cow is amongst the Shi`aar of Islaam, whereas this is merely amongst the `Aadaat (common habits). Moulana Sahib replied that why in the Hadith in Saheehain, "He who performs Salaat like us, and faces our qiblah and eats our sacrifices…" does the part 'eats our sacrifices' appear? This proves that some Aadaat also become shi`aar of Islaam owing to certain factors. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 100]

Why do the rulings change because of changing urf and riwaaj

The Fuqahaa-e-Kiraam have in certain instances issued different rulings based on the urf of the time. The reason for this is that the rulings are connected to haqeeqat, and the haqeeqat of a ruling does not change with the changing of the urf, the urf merely changes the form of the haqeeqat. This form is not the basis of the ruling. For example, regarding the Aayat, "And do not say to them (parents) 'Oof'", the Fuqahaa have written that the haqeeqat of the prohibition in this Aayat is (not to cause) hurt and pain (to one's parents). Hence in that society where the word 'Oof' denotes disrespect and causes hurt and pain, its usage will be Haraam, whereas in that society where this word does not cause any effect, its usage will not be Haraam. Therefore the ruling of causing harm and pain still remains intact, and in that context where there is no hurt caused, the ruling will not apply. Hence, in that society where a word may be derogatory, its usage would be Haraam and in the society where the same word does not have this effect, its usage will not be Haraam. [At-Tableegh no.9, page 66]

Tashab-buh bil kuffaar (imitating the non-believers) is also based on urf

Those customs and habits which have a special and specific connection to the kuffaar, where it is a sign of their belief/religion, and if such acts are regarded in society as being part of their religion, then to imitate this would be (tantamount to) kufr. Based on this asl the Fuqahaa have ruled that shidd-e-zinaar (tying a type of thread on the body, which the Hindus do), is also kufr, otherwise it is imitation of the kuffaar, which leans towards the religious customs of the kuffaar. This is the sabab for its being Haraam and sinful. Allaah Ta`ala says, "And do not lean towards those who oppress." [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 878, vol. 2]

The usage of singular tense to describe Allaah Ta`ala, and the respect for the Qur`aan Majeed is also based on urf

It is not contrary to use the singular tense to describe Allaah Ta'ala, because firstly this urf has become general and etiquette and respect are based on urf.

Otherwise everyone should remain silent at the witticism of Moulana Ismail Sahib, as he had silenced an Aalim. He asked this Aalim if it was permissible for someone to be sitting on the bed reciting the Qur`aan Majeed whilst it was on its stand and a second person sits on a couch with his feet dangling?

This Aalim replied that it was impermissible because this was disrespectful to the Qur`aan Majeed. To this Moulana Ismail Sahib further asked what if someone stood up in front of the Qur`aan Majeed? The Aalim replied that this was permissible. Moulana Ismail asked him what the difference between the two scenarios was. If the disrespect in sitting on the bed was due to the feet, then when standing the feet are on the ground, and if the disrespect was due to the Qur`aan Majeed being lower than the buttocks, this situation is even more accentuated when standing. The Molvi Sahib was stunned and remained silent. If he was a Faqeeh he would have replied that etiquette and respect is based on urf and according to the *urf, the first instance was deemed disrespectful whereas the second not. Nevertheless, etiquette is based on urf. The Fuqahaa had understood this well. [At-Tableegh, no. 9, page 66]

Is it disrespectful to place the Qur`aan Majeed on the mimbar or not?

A person once placed the Qur`aan Majeed on the centre step of the mimbar in the khanqah, to which Hadhrat Moulana Ashraf Ali Sahib remarked that it was disrespectful, because the Khateeb (person who gives the khutbah) places his foot on that step. This disrespect would hold even if the Qur`aan Majeed was covered in its juzdaan (covering) and placed on the step. If there was some cloth on the step and the Qur`aan Majeed was placed thereon, then it would not be disrespectful.

However, if the Qur`aan Majeed was not covered in its juzdaan and it was placed on top of it on the step and there is no cloth on the step, then too it will not be disrespectful, because it will be said that the Qur`aan Majeed is on its juzdaan. If the Qur`aan Majeed were to be covered in its juzdaan and then placed on the step, then it will not be said that the Qur`aan Majeed is on its juzdaan, rather it will be said that the Qur`aan Majeed is on the step, and this is contrary to proper etiquette, hence impermissible. An example to demonstrate this would be if a person places his lungi (loincloth) on the ground and sits on it, it will be said that he is sitting on the lungi, contrary to if he was to be wearing the lungi and then sat on the ground, it will then be said that he is sitting on the ground, whereas (technically speaking) the lungi will still be between his body and the ground.

Rule: The basis of adab (respect/etiquette) is urf. That is, if any action may be permissible, but in (a certain) society/context it is deemed disrespectful or uncouth, then it will be ruled as such in the Shariah. [Ifaadaat, page 152, vol. 10]

The proof for urfi adab

When Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) migrated to Madinah Munawwarah, he stayed at the home of Hadhrat Abu Ayub Ansaari (radhiallahu anhu), who stayed on the top floor and Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) stayed on the bottom. One night he reflected and felt ashamed that he live on the top floor and Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) on the bottom. He deemed this uncouth and disrespectful. He immediately took his family and the next morning he approached Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) and requested that they change floors, because he felt it unethical. Accordingly, Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) moved to the top and he stayed at the bottom.

This incident proves that it is permissible to keep an honourable and sacred thing at the bottom, because Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) did not object to staying on the bottom floor, but this was not appropriate and ethical according to the Hadhrat Abu Ayub (radhiallahu anhu). [Hasnul Azeez, page 109, vol. 4]

Urfi Adab is sometimes supersedes an instruction

Sometimes an amr comes for wujoob, and adab prevents it. Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) had instructed Hadhrat Ali (radhiallahu anhu) to erase his title (of Rasulullah) from a document. This was a clear-cut obligatory instruction, but Hadhrat Ali (radhiallahu anhu) humbly refused (out of respect) saying that this was beyond him. [Hasnul Azeez, page 109, vol. 4]

This incident also proves urfi adab.

Part 2

The discussion on tashab-buh (imitating other nations)

The mas`alah of tashab-buh is established from the Qur`aanic nass

It was once overheard from some students of Deoband Madrasah who mentioned that the Hadith, "The person who imitates a nation is amongst them" is weak. I said that I have not researched the sanad of this narration but I can prove its subject matter from the Qur`aan Majeed. This mas'ala is proven from the Qura`aanic nusoos. Allah Ta`ala said "And do not lean towards those who oppress, thus The Fire will afflict you."

From this it is proven that to incline towards the people of baatil is Haraam, and together with this there is another ruling that tashab-buh* is not possible without inclining the heart. Wherever tashab-buh is found inclination is always attached to it. That is there is inclination towards that which is being imitated. First comes the inclination, thereafter follows the imitation. The thing (which is being imitated) is honoured and a liking for it is acquired whereafter the inclination follows. Therefore, since inclination is Haraam so to is imitation. Some people classify this Hadith as weak, but the Aayat cannot be weak. [Ifaadaat, page 326 vol.8]

The proof of the prohibition of tashab-buh in the Hadith

Just see, Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) had prohibited calling Esha, Atma, whereas this was a valid word in use. However since this word was common amongst the people of ignorance, hence Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) disliked its usage. Many people become upset regarding the ruling of tashab-buh deeming it to be insignificant and of little consequence, whereas this is a valid Shar`i mas`alah.

The aqli and urfi proof for the prohibition of tashab-buh

This prohibition of tashub-buh is not merely a naqli one (i.e. proven from the Shariah), it is aqli (logical) as well. If a gentleman has to wear his wife's feminine shoes and come and sit at a meeting, will not he or others, at least, take offence and find it distasteful? If this distaste is not the result of his imitation of women, then what else can it be? When you find imitating a Muslim lady, who may even be elder than you, as being distasteful how then can you accept imitating the kuffaar and fujjaar? [Al-Ifaadhaat, page 326, vol. 8]

In a certain village a person donned a Turkish hat and sat before the court. The magistrate became annoyed and angry at him for wearing the hat of the country's enemies. He was summarily arrested. I keep saying that the mas`alah of "He who imitates a nation…" is an aqli one.[Page 244, vol. 2]

If in present times of war a person has to imitate the dressing or style of the enemies, how will his government take it? If tashab-buh was not of any consequence why would anyone take offence?

Why then is there an objection raised against the Shariah, when it prohibits the imitation of the rejecters and opposers of faith? Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) did not consent to the usage of those words and terms which the kuffaar use. [Page 473, vol.4]

The definition of tashab-buh and its recognition

The yardstick is this that wherever anything is in use and it is established that it is attributed to the kuffaar, and its usage has a distinct relation to the kuffaar, then this is tashab-buh otherwise not. [Hasnul Azeez, page 213, vol.3]

To recognise tashab-buh is that its usage amongst the common-folk makes them recognise it as being part of a certain nation. As long as this recognition exists, it (tashab-buh) will be prohibited.

If this recognition is non-existence, then the prohibition also falls away. [Hayaatul Muslimeen, page 224]

Both, complete and incomplete, tashab-buhs are censured and prohibited

Using a small stool as a table and eaten thereon

Tashab-buh is sometimes incomplete and sometimes complete. Both are censured, although there is a difference in their levels. One person asked that it is a custom amongst the Arabs to place their food on a stool and eat therefrom, so would eating like this also be tashab-buh?

The reply was that for those people this is a habit, whereas here (in India) where the stool is a replacement for the table and is similar to it, hence the mushaabeh is not total but in part, but this is also bad. When one reflects and ponders over the reason why this is done and what the objective is, then the answer is clear that the stool bears some resemblance to the table, so this is only a part imitation. Total imitation is avoided for fear of objections from the people.

This is just like how a man would not like to wear women's clothing, but if you tell someone to dress like a man, with turban, topi, etc., etc. and only to wear a gold or silver lace on his pants hem like the women do, and then to pacify everyone saying that this is not imitating women because most of the dressing is a man's, only a small part is that of a woman. Will this explanation hold any water?

The stools are similar to the table and are being used in place of tables, even though the only difference between the two is the shorter feet.

The asl behind the initiation of the usage of stools is the respect for the food, and now the reason is the respect for the eater, that he does not have to bend down when eating, since this is regarded as below a person's dignity. This is pride. [Hasnul Azeez, page 208, vol. 4]

The types and rulings regarding tashab-buh

1. Tashab-buh* of the beliefs and acts of worship of the kuffaar is kufr, and of their customs is Haraam. For example to hand a cross on the neck like the Christians or to tie a thread on the body like the Hindus do, is without doubt Haraam. [Seeratul Mustafa, page 55, vol. 2]

Tashab-buh* of kuffaar in matters of their religion is Haraam. To adopt and imitate the habits which are special to another religion is kufr, like hanging a cross on the neck or keeping a ponytail on the hair, etc.

2. Tashab-buh* in muaasharaat (social dealings), signs of a particular creed, etc. is Makrooh-e-Tahrimi. For example, to don the clothing which is specific to a particular religion or creed, and which makes the wearer to be recognised as part of that group, like the hat of Christians, or the Hindu loincloth. This is totally impermissible and prohibited, since it falls under tashab-buh. [Hayaatul Muslimeen, page 12]

Note: To adopt the speaking habit and mannerism of the kuffaar so that one may also be counted and regarded as them (Englishmen), is also strictly forbidden and prohibited. [Hayaatul Muslimeen]

3. As for those things which are not specifically attached to any particular nation, religion or creed, although it is their invention; and they are such things which are general in use, like some new weapon or some type of exercise, for which we have no alternative, it would be permissible to adopt them. However, one should not pinpoint such items on one's own, take the advice of the Ulama. [Ibid.]

It is permissible to adopt and use the inventions and weaponry of the kuffaar, like firearms, aeroplanes, (cell-phones), etc., etc., because in reality this is not tashab-buh. However, the condition of use is that there must not be an intention that one wishes to imitate the kuffaar in this usage. This applies to such things for which the Muslims do not have a suitable alternative. As for those which the Muslims do have an alternative, it would be classified as tashab-buh to adopt the items of the kuffaar. [Ibid.]

4. To imitate the way and/or mannerism of even a Muslim who may be a faasiq or bid`ati is sinful. To fully imitate these things warrants greater sin, and to adopt it partially will still be sinful, albeit less. [Anfaas Isa, page 39]

The summary of the ruling of tashab-buh

To make tashab-buh bil kuffaar in their matters of religion is Haraam, and of the signs and peculiarities of a nation would be Makrooh-e-Tahreemi. Adoption of their other inventions and administrative matters is permissible, because in reality it is not termed tashab-buh. As for those things which have been initiated by the kuffaar and the Muslims have no suitable substitute for it, and it is also not a speciality of their religion, then its usage would be permissible, for example, firearms, aeroplanes, etc. It would not be permissible to imitate the kuffaar in those things for which the Muslims have an alternative/substitute, as is proven from the Hadith where Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) forbade the use of a Persian bow.

The levels of tashab-buh

The nusoos is clear on the impermissibility and has sounded out grave warnings of tashab-buh of the people of baatil, especially the non-Muslims, and then the People of the Book. The words, "He who imitates a nation is from them" clearly echoes this warning that imitation of the kuffaar renders one part of them.

Firstly to make tashab-buh of them is censurable and then more specifically when this imitation is connected to their (kuffaar's) religion and beliefs, then the gravity of the sin is worse. The Aayat, "O you who believe! Enter into Islaam fully…" which was revealed when Hadhrat Abdullah bin Salaam (radhiallahu anhu) abandoned the eating of camel meat, proves this.

Even worse than this is the imitation of the kuffaar after observing them doing something. This is worse than imitation which is coincidental and unintentional. [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 317]

Tashab-buh ceases when the issue becomes vogue and a general habit (amongst the masses) – Thoughts on eating at a table and chair

Regarding the dislike and abhorrence for eating at table and chairs, there is hesitation at certain times, because this practice has become so very common and widespread, and this general pervasiveness removes an act from being tashab-buh. However, this practice has not become too extensive and widespread, hence there still is some doubt and apprehension in the heart. As long as this apprehension persists, the act will still be regarded as tashab-buh. [Al-Kalaamul Hasan, page 83]

Question: There is a custom amongst the Arabs that they place little (table-like) stools before them when eating. Will this implementation here also be regarded as tashab-buh?

Reply: Yes, the custom over there is a habit amongst them. [Hasnul Azeez, page 208, vol. 4]

Is wearing a jacket in London regarded as tashab-buh?

A person asked whether the wearing of a jacket by a Muslim living in London would be regarded as tashab-buh or not? The reply was that this is not tashab-buh because over there this item is not regarded as the specific dress code of the non-Muslims. Everyone dresses the same, hence there is no distinction. If this jacket becomes common here too, such that no importance or significance is attached to it, then the prohibition in wearing it (here) will be removed. [Hasanul Azeez, page 213, vol. 3]

Recognising the elimination of tashab-buh

The recognition lies in the fact that when the common-folk do not anymore regard a thing as being specific to any creed/nation/religion, and this doubt is removed from the heart that the thing in question is specific to any group, like the wearing of angar khaya achkan (a narrow-sleeved like coat with double fold on one breast and single fold on the other). But as long as the speciality of that thing/practice remains specific to any group, it will be prohibited. For example in our country (India) the wearing of a jacket, wearing a dotie (fastened loincloth worn by Sikhs), etc. would be regarded as tashab-buh, but even if this speciality remains no more in our society that no one regards the jacket as a speciality of any particular nation, then this prohibition will be removed. [Hayaatul Muslimeen]

The difference in considering time and place in the ruling of tashab-buh

A question was asked whether it will be permissible for women to have cuffs on their sleeves. The reply was that as long as it does not bear resemblance to the style of men it will be permissible otherwise not. [Malfoozaat, page 75, vol. 3]

The ruling regarding the wearing of the Sherwani (type of suit) and whether it is regarded as tashab-buh or not

A person asked whether it will be permissible to wear sherwani or not. The reply was that it must be seen whether this is a common garb or not. It is known that this was originally the dress of the people of Hyderabad, and the first to wear this were the people from Aligarh. Now it is regarded as the dress of the people of Aligarh. Therefore it will be tashab-buh. [Hasnul Azeez, page 213, vol. 3]

Note: Since nowadays this (sherwani) has become vogue, hence the ruling of tashab-buh will be lifted and it is now permissible without a doubt. [Compiler's comments]

To place bottles of water on the dastarkhaan (eating cloth)

A person places liquor-like bottles filled with water in his shop or dastarkhaan, then he is a sinner and transgressor, because he has imitated the alcoholics. [Anfaas Isa, page 359]

Note: In some areas it has become common practice to place water in bottles and refrigerate. At mealtimes these same bottles are placed on the dastarkhaan. This is very common nowadays and no significance is attached to these bottles (due to their being extremely common), hence this ruling of tashab-buh has been removed. And Allaah Ta`ala knows best.

Having Iftaar (breaking fast) at tables and chairs

A person asked whether Iftaar at table and chairs is permissible or not? He was asked, in turn, is Iftaar permissible with Haraam wealth? The answer and indication here was that in both instances the Iftaar is valid, but the vileness in both circumstances is evident. Eating at tables and chairs is prohibited due to tashab-buh.

A mas`alah concerning tashab-buh

The phrase, 'Will I be able to do that?' is prohibited due to its being tashab-buh

The following phrases, "Will I be able to do so and so?", Will I be able to go there?", etc. do not refer to one's ability to carry out the said act, rather it implies and questions the occurrence of that action. "When the Hawariyyeen said…is your Rabb able to.." is an Aayat wherein Allaah Ta`ala mentions the conversation between Hadhrat Isa (alaihis salaam) and his hawariyyeen. They requested a dastarkhaan from the heavens, so instead of asking for it they asked Hadhrat Isa (alaihis salaam) if Allaah Ta`ala was able to send it. From this incident we understand this to be an old mimic and jest of the Christians and it is an age-old phrase of theirs. This is a tashab- buh of the irreligious people. This is the reason why I do not advise and sanction the usage of idioms, without necessity, by the Ulama. [Ifaadaat, page 222, vol. 10]

Part 3

The discussion on umoom-e-balwa (when something becomes rife and common in society)

The law regarding umoom-e-balwa being of consideration

1. Nowadays there are two things from amongst the dislikeable things which have become vogue. The one is pictures and the other the consumption of spirits and alcohols. This humble writer asks: Can the ruling of umoom-e-balwa be considered for these things because they have become so common? The issue of umoom-e-balwa cannot be considered in matters pertaining to Halaal and Haraam. It will however be considered in matters pertaining to impurities and cleanliness. And that too, when there is a difference between the Mujtahiddeen-e-Salf regarding a thing's being pure or impure. [Majaalis Hakimul Ummat]

2. The mere interpretation of Umoom-e-Balwa cannot be made, otherwise, since there is great commonness in gheebat (then it should be rendered permissible based on this), but umoom-e-balwa cannot be applied there. Only where there is a difference of opinion in a mas`alah, will umoom-e-balwa be applied in order to leave out one's practice. [Kamaalaat Ashrafiya, page 141]

Umoom-e-balwa is applicable in those Masaa`il wherein there is a difference of opinion

I always understood that umoom-e-balwa is only applicable in Mujtahid fehe Masaa`il. There is a need for it in 'qiraat'. The Muta`akh-khireen have confirmed this contention of mine in the mas`alah pertaining to 'qiraat'. [Hasnul Azeez, page 247, vol. 1]

The proof regarding considering the masses and its limits

Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) also considered the masses, when he abandoned the idea of incorporating the Hateem into the Kaabah Shareef. However if there is a need to practice on the asl or the expediency is great, then the masses will not be considered, as was done in the Nikah to Hadhrat Zainub (radhiallahu anha). My view is that if by considering the masses some harm may come to the Deen, then the masses will not be considered, and where by not considering the masses some disquietude or anxiety will be experienced, then the masses will be considered. With regard to the incident of the Hateem, there was no harm to be afflicted on the Deen (if it was not done), whereas if the Nikah to Hadhrat Zainub (radhiallahu anha) was not undertaken, then there would have been a serious shortfall in tableegh, since on this occasion there was a need for practical tableegh. [Kalimatul haqq, page 118]

The maslak (way) of the Muhaqqiqeen

The way of the Muhaqqiqeen was that they would practice on the extreme and control and constrain themselves (in their personal capacity), but when it came to issuing a fatwa or opinion, they would give one of latitude and ease (without compromising on the Haqq, obviously), so that the masses do not find difficulty in practicing the Deen. As it is mentioned in a Hadith, "Abstain from that which you dislike, but do not make it Haraam (i.e. keep it away from) others." [Majaalis Hamikul Ummat, page 160]

The precautionary path is to personally practice on the more difficult and when it comes to others, give them the easier option. [Kalimatul Haqq, page 87]

Umoom-e-balwa and daroorat-e-aama (general need) are not sufficient proofs

The mere concept of general need is not sufficient proof (for a ruling) as long as (the proof for) that issue does not appear in the Shariah. The interpretation of umoom-e-balwa is not sufficient a proof, otherwise, gheebat will also be included under it. [Imdaadul fataawa, page 105, vol. 3]

Latitude in issuing Masaa`il based on umoom-e-balwa and daroorat-e-aama and their limits

1. I had an intention to compile a treatise on the laws of transacting on such issues which the masses were involved in on a daily basis. If there was leeway granted in any Math-hab, then I would consent to its application, so that the deeds and actions of the Muslims, at least be correct in every respect. As a matter of precaution, I consulted with Hadhrat Moulana Gangohi (rahmatullah alayh) and asked him if it would be permissible in such matters to rule according to another Math-hab?

Hadhrat Gangohi (rahmatullah alayh) also granted permission although he was a staunch Hanafi. This latitude was granted in matters of muaamalaat (social dealings) and not in matters of Aqaa`id and ibaadat. There is no (foreseen) harm in this. Therefore regarding Jumuah in the village, wherein most people are affected, there is not much latitude. However, if the precaution was with Imaam Shaafi's (rahmatullah alayh) view, then the fatwa would have been given in his favour, but the precaution is in the fatwa of Imaam Abu Hanifah (rahmatullah alayh).

If there is a difference of opinion regarding any place being a village or city, then if it were a city, and anyone performs Zuhr Salaat there, the Fardh duty will have been fulfilled, albeit with karaahat, but if it were a village, and Jumuah Salaat is performed there, then this Jumuah Salaat will not be valid and the responsibility of Zuhr will also not be lifted (if this 'jumuah' is performed). Therefore in such places the precautionary step will be to leave out Jumuah Salaat. Another point is that there is no need for coercion here because people are easily able to leave out Jumuah Salaat, and if Jumuah is not performed, then there will be no difficulty on the people, in fact, it will be much easier. There is no extra Athaan and no khutbah. [Kalimatul Haqq, page 71]

2. Not in matters of Aqaa`id and Ibaadat, but in muamalaat wherein most people are involved, there is scope to issue rulings according to another Math-hab. I sometimes issue fatwas accordingly in order to remove any difficulty. [Ashraful Ma`moolaat, page 33]

3. Therefore in mukhtalaf feehi Masaa`il (where there is a difference of opinion), it is better to opt for the easier option. In this way, firstly this will inculcate a love for practicing the Deen and secondly it will create ease. [Anfaas Isa, page 334, vol. 2]

Another example in considering the masses

4. A question once came that a certain Imaam Sahib was reciting Surah Faatiha in such a way that he does not stop at اياك نستعين and joins it to اهدنا. The situation rose to such a level that it became a serious issue. I wrote back that it is permissible to recite in this fashion, but that must be done in a context where the audience understand this, otherwise such an Imaam must be removed because he is a cause for fitnah and does not consider the situation. [Kalimatul Haqq, page 168]

A few miscellaneous points regarding umoom-e-balwa and necessity

1. Question: If an animal's newborn dies, a fake baby animal is placed near the mother so that she can give milk, because without it seeing this she will not give milk. Is this permissible or not?

Answer: It is permissible. [Imdaadul Fataawa, vol. 4]

2. Question: An Alim has ruled that a certain clothes colouring which comes from Europe is permissible to use based on the principle of umoom-e-balwa, notwithstanding its having alcohol mixed in it. Is it correct to practice on this ruling or not?

Answer: Since the need is urgent, it will be permissible to practice on this fatwa. But this will only apply for that person to whom the need is pressing, and these will be the women. Men can easily avoid this. However, there is one condition attached to this concession and that is that the alcohol used in this colouring must not be from grapes, dates or raisins. [Page 94, vol. 4]

The reason being that the impermissibility of alcohol derived from these things are mansoos, hence umoom-e-balwa will not apply in such cases. And Allaah Ta`ala knows best.

I also give the fatwa of validity of Salaat (when these colourings are used), based on umoom-e-balwa, but I understand it to be contrary to the precaution.

3. Due to severe necessity and helplessness the view of those people who consent to riba in Daarul Harb should be opted for. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 151, vol. 19]

4. Question: In order to make up some type of scripts, tortoises, earthworms, etc. are killed. Is it permissible to kill such creatures in order to cure an illness?

Answer: Since there is consideration in the Shariah for such things, hence it will be permissible. Yes, it will not be permissible to cause more pain and suffering as is necessary.

5. Question: What is the ruling for burning harmful animals?

Answer: If there is not other way, then this will be permissible due to necessity. If they can be killed in another way, then it will be impermissible to burn them. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 264, vol. 4]

The 'ta`aamul' (general practice) which the Fuqahaa have placed consideration in …its discussion

It is stated in Noorul Anwaar: And the ta`ammul of the people is contiguous to Ijma and is part of it. (It is part of the) Ijma of those after them, that is, the Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum), from every era.

It is apparent that ta`ammul, like Ijma, is not specific to any particular era. Nevertheless, whatever the principles of Ijma are, these must also apply to ta`ammul. That is, the Ulama of the era must not refute it. Similarly, the Fuqahaa have consented to many juz`is (secondary laws) based on ta`ammul. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 265, vol. 4]

As it is stated in Hidaaya in the chapter on Bai`ul Faasid: The person who buys shoes on the condition that the seller matches them up, they say, it is permissible because of ta`ammul in this practice.. This then becomes like dying clothing; because of ta`ammul. We have permitted 'istisnaa`' (making up clothes and shoes to match). And regarding it in (bai`us) salam: if one makes up…because of Ijma, which is established by ta`ammul.

Therefore, based on this, the printing of kitaabs is included in istisnaa`. And Allaah Ta`ala knows best. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 32, vol. 3]

Part 4

The discussion on heela (make a plan (scheme) or possibly prevaricate)

The two types of heelas and their respective rulings

Heela is of two types – the one is where the objective of the Shariah is 'defeated'. For example, to make a heela in the distribution of Zakaat, whose actual objective is to aid and assist the poor and needy and to remove the degradation of the soul. To make a heela where the Zakaat is avoided, thereby defeating the Shar`i objective of Zakaat, is impermissible.

The second type of heela is where an objective of the Shariah is assisted and attained (more effectively), is permissible.

The dual meaning of a heela being permissible (the difference between sihat (correctness) and hillat (permissible)

There are two meanings of permissibility. One is sihat, that is to conform to some rule, even though there may a sin involved. For example to force a man to divorce his wife, and then to marry the woman after her iddat is complete. The sihat of the Nikah and the sin are both obvious.
The second type is hillat, that is, where no sin is involved. Hence, if the permissibility of these heelas are in the first meaning, then there is no doubt in it, but this is non-beneficial. And if it is in the second meaning, then this condition is attached to it, that the constituents of this heela must occur by coincidence (not planned). There should be no 'pre-planning', and there should be no force and violence, because coercion in unnecessary acts (acts not ordered in the Shariah), are Haraam. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 154, vol. 4]

The one type of heela, proof in words and not meaning, and its conditions

Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) readied himself to perform the Janaaza Salaat of the chief munaafiq, Abdullah bin Ubai. Hadhrat Umar (radhiallahu anhu) recited the Aayat, "(Whether) You seek forgiveness for them or you don't seek forgiveness for them, seventy times..." Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) replied that he had been given the choice (by Allaah Ta`ala), and that he had opted for seeking forgiveness, and that he will seek forgiveness more than seventy times.

A doubt arises here that even a basic student of Arabic realises that the word أو which appears in the Aayat is not denoting choice, it is a sort of comparison, like, *"It is the same for them, whether you warn them or…"*This is not a choice, it shows comparison and also the word 'seventy' which appears in the Aayat, is a common Arabic phrase which denotes multitude and not necessarily the amount of seventy. Why then did Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) react in this way?

Hadhrat Moulana Yaqub Sahib (rahmatullah alayh) has given the answer that owing to Nabi's (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) excessive affection and mercy (for his Ummat), he held fast to the literal meaning of the words. He did not revert to the import and meaning of the words.
However there are two conditions for taking proof like this. One is when there is a need and another is that the actual import and meaning is not refuted. [Al-Fasl lil Wusool, page 202-3]

The time and place for a Shar`i heela

Heela can be applied in Ma`amalaat and not in ibaadat

In numerous impermissible issues, the Fuqahaa have ruled their permissibility, by changing their forms and gave a suitable heela. Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) had himself granted concession in matters of muamalaat, where plans and heelas were created, and permission was ruled. However, some people confuse the issue and think that heela is permitted in both muamalaat and diyaanaat, whereas Shar`i heela is only permitted in muamalaat. [Majaalis, page 95]

The laws regarding heela being correct or not

Heela is sometimes formulated to defeat the purpose and objective of the Shariah, and this is Haraam. If it is used to assist in achieving and acquiring the objective, then it will be permissible. If the heela is such that there is a fear that it may lead the masses into fitnah, then also it will be Haraam. For example, in order to save people from riba one formulates such a heela which can result in people understanding it to be Halaal, will be impermissible and Haraam. [Ibid]

The heela of making Zakaat not obligatory and its ruling

Heela* is not made in necessary Deeni matters. For example, in order to save himself from giving Zakaat, a man gives his entire wealth to his wife or son just before the year end (when his Zakaat is due), and the intention is not to gift it to them rather as a scheme in order to avoid giving Zakaat. This heela is Haraam. The sin here is graver than not giving Zakaat without the heela because he is trying to avoid an obligation of Allaah Ta`ala. [Majaalis Hakimul Ummat]

The proof of the Hurmat of such heelas

The episode of the Bani Israeel, when they schemed a plan to avoid the Divine Decree for them not to fish on Yawmus Sabt has been given. They hatched a plan and began fishing on that day, which resulted in the Anger and punishment of Allaah Ta`ala. [Ibid. page 95]

An example of a baatil heela

In answer to a fatwa regarding a person's sending the money for qurbaani in order to assist the suffering people in Turkey, it was written that the money was not to be given on the days of adhiya (slaughter). It was to be given to the needy after the days of qurbaani have passed, when qurbaani is no longer valid. Upon hearing this Moulana Sahib said that this is pure drivel and a lesson in sin. The example of this is like that of shib-e-amad (homicide—where someone is murdered without a normal weapon of murder), where the Fuqahaa have ruled that together with diyat (blood-money), kafaara must also be given, so now if someone wishes to feed the poor, then this advice is given to him that he go and kill someone with a stick, thereafter (as a kaffaara) he must feed 60 poor people. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 99, vol. 19]

Part 5

The laws regarding making ta`weel (interpretation)

The laws of interpreting the nusoos

It is accepted in Usool aqli and naqli qat`i, that if there is a conflict between muhkam and zaahir, the zaahir will be given a suitable interpretation and directed towards the muhkam. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 116, vol. 6]

The definition of ta`weel

Ta`weel is only that which pertains to the zaahir and is to the limit of necessity. It must also be in conformity to the laws of the Shariah, otherwise it will be tahreef (alteration/distortion). [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 399,vol.5]

The proof for making ta`weel

A ghair-muqallid once asked what the need was to interpret the statements of Moulana Rumi and Sheerazi. Why can't a ruling be given based on their statements taken at face value? I replied that the need is derived from a Hadith. He asked which Hadith. I replied that it is stated in a Hadith that two janaazas passed by Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam). The Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) praised the one (deceased) and rebuked the other. Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) commented, قد وجبت (Indeed it has been decreed). Further the tafseer of the word وجبت was made as Jannat or Jahannum. He mentioned the reason being, "You are the witnesses of Allaah on earth." This much is established from the Hadith.

(Addressing this ghair-muqallid, Moulana says) Now you go to the Jaami Musjid, stand by the door and enquire about these two personalities (Moulana Rumi and Sheerazi). You will find that every single person will attest to their greatness. Based then on this Hadith this proves that they were Auliyaa. This is the reason why their statements require interpretation. [Kalimatul haqq, age 31]

The laws regarding making ta`weel of someone's speech or actions

One should observe what that person's general habits are. If his character and habits are overwhelmingly in conformity to the Sunnat, and then due to some haal (a state of ecstasy) he makes some seemingly untoward remark, a suitable interpretation (ta`weel) is made for it. But if his general character is contrary to the Sunnat, then no ta`weel needs to be made. This is the yardstick. [Al-Ifaadhaat, page 297, vol.2]

If a reliable person makes a statement which appears unseemly, then his statement will be interpreted to conform to some nusoos, and not vice versa. If it cannot be reconciled and tied up, then his statement will be rejected. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 391, vol. 4]

If a sahib-e-haal (person in state of ecstasy) makes any claim/statement which conflicts with the Shariah, then the ultimate husn-e-zann (good opinion) one can have is that this statement or action can be made to comply and conform to the Shariah (by that person), and it should not be that the Shariah is made subservient to this view or statement of the Saahib-e-haal. [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 191]

The reality of ta`weel and the difference between the ta`weel of the people of Haqq and the people of hawa (self-opinionated)

Ta`weel* is when there are two conflicting views and they are evaluated, whereby a suitable interpretation is found for one of them which results in the difference being removed. There is a world of difference between our *ta`weel and that of the Ulama. Our ta`weels are made to conform to our nafs (whims and fancies), whereas their ta`weels conform to the Qur`aan Majeed and Sunnat. The results between these two (types of ta`weel) are different. Our sin increases and gains momentum by our ta`weel, whereas they are blessed with compliance to an Aayat by theirs. They achieve obedience in all cases, whereas we find loopholes for every type of disobedience. Understand well the difference between the two types of ta`weel. [Huqooquz zawjain, page 474]

The reality of istidlaal (proving something) and i`tibaar (reflection/consideration) and the difference between the two

Istidlaal* is made by understanding the literal import, implementing those methods and ways outlined and explained by the Ahle Ilm. I`tibaar is achieved by tashabbuh (comparison) and ishaara (indication). The asl of both these methods are established from the Qur`aan Majeed. However the word daleel and istidlaal do not appear directly in the Qur`aan Majeed, in fact, it is done through indication and synonymously. In this regard, Allaah Ta`ala states in the Qur`aan Majeed, "Say (to the non-believers), bring forth your proof (burhaan)", and in another Aayat, "Say (to the non-believers), Is there by you any knowledge?" In these Aayaat, the words, burhaan and ilm indicate daleel, hence it is called istidlaal. Therefore, with regard to the Aayat, "Establish Salaat", it will be correct to aver that Salaat has been made Fardh, whereas the word Fardh has not been used in this Aayat, but its indication and import is present.

As for the second method, the Qur`aan Majeed uses the word, i`tibaar. Allaah Ta`ala says in the Qur`aan Majeed, فاعتبروا ياولي الابصار (Take lesson, o people of insight). The incident of the banishment of the Banu Quraidha was mentioned before this, and thereafter Allaah Ta`ala tells the people of insight to take lesson, lest their actions also result in a similar fate for them. This is the meaning of ibrat (taking lesson), where another condition is placed before you, that you should take heed if you act in a similar fashion, your end result will be the same. [Huqooquz zaujain, page 51]

The yardstick of ta`weel

A person once asked that if concession is granted to apply ta`weel, then nobody will be liable for retribution, because there is great attitude in ta`weel.

The reply was that there is a yardstick by which ta`weel can be applied. One is that person whose outer appearance and character is one of virtue. He follows the Deen and his beliefs are intact. If such a person makes an error, then it is Waajib to make a ta`weel. Whereas for the person who is an open sinner and transgressor, his errors will not be made ta`weel of. As for those whose actions are deserving of being made ta`weel*, if no suitable ta`weel can be made, then silence must be maintained and no comment must be made on them. Even though it is not necessary to be a follower of him. For example, Sheikh Muhyuddin Ibn Arabi, Baayazid (rahmatullah alayhim), etc. [Al-Ifaadhaat, page 306, vol. 7]

The discussion on showing preference (eethaar)

1. To grant preference to the benefit of others over that of oneself is known as eethaar. Whether it is relating to worldly matters or such matters where proximity is not the objective. For example, if there are two naked men and one of them is somehow blessed with the good fortune of getting some clothing, then it will not be permissible for the one who has the clothes to perform Salaat naked and give the clothes to the other.

Or if a person is standing in the first saff in the Musjid for Salaat and another in the second saff, now it will not be permissible for the person in the first saff to move back and give the second person his place in the first saff. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 144, vol. 5]

The proof of the proponents of permissibility and a reply to them

Some people do practice eethaar (give others preference) in matters of qurbat (where proximity to Allaah Ta`ala is the objective). As a proof for their contention they cite the Hadith where Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) once drank some water or milk and on his right-hand side sat Hadhrat Ibn Abbaas (radhiallahu anhu) and on his left-hand side was Hadhrat Abu Bakr (radhiallahu anhu). Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) would have preferred to offer Hadhrat Abu Bakr (radhiallahu anhu) first, but he observed the etiquette of الايمن فالايمن (i.e. first the right side). Hadhrat Ibn Abbaas (radhiallahu anhu) commented that if it was dependant on his permission, then he would not have consented to Hadhrat Abu Bakr (radhiallahu anhu) drinking before him.

The crux of these people's proof is that if eethaar was not permitted in all matters, then why did Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) request Hadhrat Ibn Abbaas (radhiallahu anhu) to give preference to Hadhrat Abu Bakr (radhiallahu anhu)?

This proof of theirs will not be a valid contention because the left-over of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), albeit full of blessings and from some angles even more virtuous than some acts of ibaadat, however it is not a qurbat-e-maqsooda (specific act of proximity to Allaah Ta`ala). An act of qurbat-e-maqsooda is that act whereupon Allaah Ta`ala had promised reward for its execution. It is not mentioned anywhere in the Qur`aan Majeed or Hadith that one will attain Jannat if one drinks the left-over water or milk of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam). Hence it is impermissible to prefer someone else's welfare over one's own (in such matters). [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 144, vol. 5]

The view of the Muhaqqiqeen regarding eethaar in qurbaat

It is stated in a fatwa that it is impermissible to give eethaar in matters of qurbaat, but the Muhaqqiqeen have replied to this by saying that this is also one form of qurbat, because it is granting consideration and respect to the servants of Allaah Ta`ala. They also say that this quality is found to a large extent in the inhabitants of Makkah Mukarramah. During the Hajj season they sacrifice their making tawaaf in consideration of the visitors who flock there, whereas this is not Waajib upon them. It is permissible. This grants great ease for the visitors. [Mazeedul Majeed, page 53]

The Muhaqqiq and the preferred view

When one observes the Sufiya then it is noted that they make a concerted effort to stand on the left side and leave the right side for others. Similarly they don't flock to the first saff. In fact, they would rather stand in the second and third saff and give the first to others.

The Sufiya also make eethaar of the first saff in Fardh Salaat. If any pious personality is present they will usher him to the first saff. An objection is raised against them saying that they abandon the reward of the first saff which denotes an attitude of independence from reward.

The Sufiya reply by saying that the one reward is that of standing in the first saff and the other is giving preference and granting respect to the friends of Allaah Ta'ala, which is of greater merit. So although one reward is sacrificed another even greater one is achieved in lieu, so how is this independence from reward? There is also reward in this.

And then there is the Hadith of "He who indicates to a good deed is just like the doer (in reward)", which means that by giving someone else the opportunity of standing in the first saff one is also going to be rewarded just as that person will be for standing in the first saff. There will be no depravation of reward. Together with this the other reward is also added. This results in double reward. [At-Tableegh, page 49 and page 54]

Part 7

The mas`alah of making tadaakhul (interpose/interlock) in acts of Ibaadat

It is mentioned in Durrul Mukhtaar that the six fasts of Shawwaal may be combined with any Qadha fasts of Ramadhaan by way of tadaakhul. That is, if anyone has Qadha fasts of Ramadhaan, then he/she may keep these in Shawwaal and derive benefit of both, the Qadha and six of Shawwaal. For example, after making wudhu if a person performs Fardh or Sunnat Salaat, then he will also receive the reward of Tahiyatul Wudhu. However, this mas`alah on the fasts is totally incorrect and to make Qiyaas of it on the Tahiyatul Wudhu is Qiyaas ma`al Faariq. Tadaakhul can only be achieved on that occasion when the objective of the one is also achieved by performing the other. For example, the Shar`i need for Tahiyatul Wudhu and Tahiyatul Musjid is that after performing wudhu and entering the Musjid, one must not be free of performing Salaat. This requisite is suitably fulfilled by Fardh or Sunnat Salaat. Therefore there is no need to perform the Tahiyatul Musjid separately. Tadaakhul is achieved her, although to perform them separately would be preferable.

Contrary to keeping the six fasts of Shawwaal. The reward for keeping these fasts is that one receives reward as though one had fasted for the entire year. Allaah Ta`ala has apportioned ten rewards in lied of the one act. This objective has been outlined in the Hadith Shareef, where Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said, "He who fasts in Ramadhaan and then follows it with six in Shawwaal, it is like he had fasted the entire year." Further it is explained that "The fast of the month is equal to ten months and the six days equal to two months, hence it is the whole year." [Daarmi]

In another Hadith this basis is explained thus, "He who comes with one virtue, for him is tenfold." Hence the full month of Ramadhaan equals ten months in reward and the six days equals two months, which totals one full year. Therefore, in order to acquire the reward of the full year, the six fasts of Shawwaal and the (Qadha) fasts of Ramadhaan have to be kept separately. In this way, the total reward for the year will be attained, otherwise there will be a shortage. For the full reward there has to be 36 days of fasting. If the two are kept together, then this number will not be attained. Yes, if besides Qadha of Ramadhaan, there are some other Waajib fasts and this is kept with the six fasts of Shawwaal and tadaakhul is made, then this may be in order.

Part 8

The discussion on intention

The Hadith of انما الاعمال بالنيات

The words, "Actions are based on their intentions" which appears in the Hadith, is regarding acts of obedience and permissibility. This is not applicable to sins. The objective is that in acts of obedience, if the intention is good, then it will be accepted. Similar is the case with permissible acts. If the intention is for some Deeni goodness, then it will be regarded as Deen. However for a sin, if the intention is good, it still remains a sin.

The Usooli difference regarding انما الاعمال بالنيات

The first part of this Hadith shows that any Shar`i deed which is executed without a valid intention will not be effectual. The word الاعمال (actions) used in the Hadith refers only to Shar`i acts, because Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) would not have referred to any other types of acts, since they have no bearing on the Deen, and there is no need to talk about them. Further in the Hadith, the mentioning of hijrat is merely in context.

The rewards of the deeds are mentioned because the execution of deeds is possible without intention also. The object of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) was not that the existence of deeds are dependant on the intentions and that without intention deeds will not even come into existence. Firstly this is not rational and secondly the (coming into) existence of deeds/actions is also amongst those acts which are excluded from the discussion of Shaari` (alaihis salaam) – Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam).

The objective of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) was to explain the laws and not to discuss the conditions of existence.
Thereafter Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) clearly mentions regarding hijrat that if the intention is not (the pleasure of) Allaah Ta`ala, then in the Shariah that migration is not worthy of any virtue or recognition. And such an act does not even reach Allaah Ta`ala. The same applies to all acts of obedience, that the intention is conditional is all of them. If there is no intention, then the act is devoid of reward. The nusoos is clear-cut that no action is acceptable without an intention. [At-Tableegh, page 134, vol. 16]

Will there be reward without intention?

If anyone gives his father or son anything without the intention of receiving any benefit, he will still be rewarded. As it is mentioned in the Hadith that if a husband places a morsel of food into his wife's mouth he will be rewarded for it, whereas no one really does this with the intention of reward. [Ibid.]

The research into receiving reward with and without intention

Rule: The Ahle Ilm are faced with the qualm that based on the Hadith of انما الاعمال بالنيات how can reward be hoped for actions executed without intention.

The reply to this is that without intention there can be no reward for deeds, however there is reward for unintended good acts. In this regard, there is a Hadith of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) where he said that if a person does farming, plants a seed, etc. and if any man or animal benefits from the fruits of his efforts, then he will be rewarded. Just look at this! What was the farmer's actual intention? In fact, this benefit derived by the animals is contrary to his actual intention and efforts. When he prevents those eating from his farm, where is his intention for feeding? If he sees any animal scavenging, he will chase it away. He is actively opposed to others benefiting therefrom. His actions actually bear testimony to the fact that this is not his intention (to benefit others), and yet he is rewarded. The crux is that voluntary good deeds are dependant on their intention, not those good acts which become the reason for receiving reward. [Ifaadhaat Yawmia, page 30]

The law regarding making an intention

In voluntary acts, an intention is only to be made in the beginning, thereafter once the act is in progress there is no need to make an intention for every constituent thereof. However the condition is that there should not be an intention to the contrary. For example if a person intends going to the bazaar, then he only needs to make an intention in the first step. If he is going to peruse some kitaabs or to speak to someone, there is no need to make the intention with every step he takes.

A Mubaah act becomes an ibaadat with a good intention, but a sin does not become permissible

A good intention will render a permissible act an act of ibaadat, but no good intention will render a sin permissible, regardless of how many countless expediencies or good reasons there may be. This rule is very clear and self-evident. For example, if a person snatches the goods and property of others with this intention that he will assist the poor and needy, then this oppression of his will never ever become permissible or justified. It is immaterial how many countless benefits there may be in his actions. [Islaahur Rusoom, page 134 / Bawaadir, page 817, vol. 2]

The three types of intentions when spending in the path of Allaah Ta`ala

There are three types of intentions when spending in the path of Allaah Ta`ala. One is for show, which is devoid of reward. The second is with a deficient level of sincerity, which warrants ten rewards. The Aayat, "He who comes with one good deed, will get tenfold its like (in reward)" applies to this low level of sincerity. The third is the middle and higher levels of sincerity. This type is promised rewards tenfold and more, upto seven hundred times and even higher depending on the level of sincerity. [Bayaanul Qur`aan, page 150, vol. 1]

CHAPTER EIGHT

DEFINITIONS

The reality of Islaam and its definition

I am going to explain Islaam from a different angle, an angle or a manner from which few people view it. The word 'Islaam' has become so attached to the tongues, that none really pays attention or considers its import and meaning.

The literal meaning of Islaam is to submit oneself. It is also called Tasleem and the Sufiya have given it the interpretation of Tafweez (hand over – all affairs to Allaah Ta`ala). This then is the reality of Islaam. However, nowadays the mind does not go towards this (meaning) when the word is mentioned. On many occasions in the Qur`aan Majeed the word is used in brief and on some occasions with detail. With detail means with tafweez.

In this regard, Allaah Ta`ala says, بلي من اسلم وجهه الي الله, in another Aayat, و من احسن دينا ممن اسلم وجهه ... and in another Aayat, و من يسلم وجهه الي الله .... Here Islaam is mentioned together with the self (face) and following the creed of Hadhrat Ebrahim (alaihis salaam), and in another juncture it is stated, و من يرغب عن ملة..., which proves that the creed of Hadhrat Ebrahim (alaihis salaam) was also Islaam. وجه لرب العالمين implies that matters must be entrusted to Allaah Ta'ala, which is explained by Hadhrat Ebrahim (alaihis salaam) on one occasion, ...انى وجهت وجهي للذي.

We realise that the tafseer of the word Islaam in the Qur`aan Majeed is Islaam Wajh, whose complete meaning is not Salaat and fasting, in fact the meaning of Islaam Wajh is tafweez. That is, to entrust your entire self to Allaah Ta`ala and to incline your every action to Him, that whatever He wishes He can do and you submit to His every Desire. Salaat, fasting, etc. are all part of tafweez, but they are not the essence.

If the meaning of Islaam in the Qur`aan Majeed was used in general, and it was not used with Wajhullaah or Wajhun Ilallaah, then this would have been a possibility that Islaam would be in the meaning of obedience/submission. But the meaning of obedience would not be with these conditions, in fact it would have been affirmed with the meaning of tafweez. [Badaai, page 178]

The definition of shirk and Ibaadat

Ibaadat means to present oneself before someone with utmost humility and submission. As for the definition of that shirk which has been warned against, "Indeed Allaah does not forgive..." it means to believe someone/thing (other than Allaah Ta`ala) to be worthy of worship. [Muqalaat Hikmat, page 14]

The definitions of shirk-e-akbar, mushrik and istiqlaal

The meaning of that istiqlaal which is defined as shirk is to believe that someone has control over his own power. The ability to use this power is given by Allaah Ta`ala, but after this ability has been bestowed by Allah Ta`ala, to believe that this person has total control over his own powers and abilities. That there is no need for Allaah Ta`ala's intervention. Even though Allaah Ta`ala has the ability to snatch away this power, until He does not, then this person's choice and power of use is his own. To believe that his actions are not dependant on Allaah Ta'ala's Will. Those who hold such beliefs regarding the buzrugs are undoubtedly kaafir and mushrik. The Shariah terms such a kaafir as kaafir and mushrik. This is shirk-e-Akbar. [Al-Qowlul Jaleel, page 11]

The definition of shirk-e-asghar

If one holds this belief regarding these buzrugs that they are dependent on the Divine Decree and that they are in need of the Divine Consent, but when they desire something, then the Divine Decree complies to theirs. Then although this seems not to be kufr and shirk, but it is false beliefs, sin and shirk-e-asghar. The first stage is shirk-e-akbar. [Al-Qowlul Jaleel, page 11]

The types of shirk

Shirk in knowledge

To hold this view regarding some sheikh or peer that he knows our every condition all the time, to ask about the unseen from some astrologer or clairvoyant, to take an omen from the statement of some pious person and believe in it, to call out to someone who is far off and believe that he can hear you, to keep fast in someone's name, etc. [Ta`leemud Deen, page 13]

Shirk in tasarruf

To believe that someone has full control to harm or benefit, to ask someone for one's needs, children or sustenance. [Ibid.]

Shirk in ibaadat

To prostrate to someone, to release an animal in someone's name, to take an oath on someone's name, to make tawaaf around someone's home or grave, to prefer and opt for the custom or view of someone else which is contrary to Allaah Ta`ala's Law, to slaughter an animal in someone else's name, to respect another place like the Kaabah is respected. [Ibid. page 14]

Shirk in habits

To pierce a hole in a child's ear or nose in someone's name and to don an earring, to place a thread on the forearm in the name of someone or to wear a garland, to keep a ponytail (men), to keep names such as Ali Bakhsh or Husain Bakhsh, to regard something as untouchable, etc. [Ibid, page 14]

The definitions of kufr, Imaan, irtidaad, nifaaq, shirk, kitaabi and dahri

The definition of that shirk which deprives one of salvation and warrants an eternal abode in Jahannum is as noted in the footnote of Sharah Maqaasid: "Indeed a kaafir, if he displays Imaan, then he is a munaafiq, if he reverts to kufr after Imaan, then he is a murtad and if he claims partnership in deity then he is a mushrik. If he follows and accepts a religion from the other religions and follows an abrogated Scripture, then he is a kitaabi. If he delves into the beginning of time and attributes everything to it, he is a dahri (atheist). If he harbours beliefs which are unanimously kufr, but he still believes in the Nubuwwat of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), he is a zindeeq.

Kufr is the antithesis of Imaan, that is, to negate that which the Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) came with, because indeed Imaan is tasdeeq (to accept the requisites of Imaan). [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 81, vol. 6]

The definition of Fitnah

One must clearly remember that fear of fitnah denotes a life-threatening situation, that is, where one fears for one's life. As for the rest, verbal abuse, etc. is not termed as fitnah. This should be remembered. Nowadays it is difficult to imagine someone being assaulted and battered. [Ifaadaat Yawmia, page 181, vol. 8]

The definition of qurbat-e-maqsood

Qurbat-e-maqsood refers to those deeds/actions regarding which Allaah Ta`ala had assured reward and recompense. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 144, vol. 5]

The definition of mahaal-e-Shar`i

Mahaal-e-Shar`i is an occurrence which necessitates a Shar`i falsity/inaccuracy. For example, for someone to be given prophethood after the Shariah has confirmed the Khatam-e-Nubuwwat (Seal of Prophethood). Also to regard as a mahaal-e-

Shar`i* that all the sins of all the believers will be forgiven is based on this fact that the tafseer of maghfirat (forgiveness) entails the condition of it being without retribution, which has no proof. [*Badaa`i, page 51]

The definition of makhaalif-e-nass

To lay claim to anything with proof or in context will not be mukhaalif-e-nass, if there is no nass revealed on that issue. However, to negate any matter which is established in the nass or to rule contrary to it, will be mukhaalif-e-nass. [Ibid. page 380]

The definition of israaf

It was asked what the limit of israaf would be? The reply was that whatever conflicts with the Shar`i consent is israaf, even if it may be an apparently good deed. For example, a man who has a family to support, and yet he gives his entire wealth away in charity, would be regarded as having committed israaf. To be lavish in food and drink, provided there is no wastage and no Shar`i law is exceeded, would not be regarded as israaf. [Hasnul Azeez, page 66, vol. 1]

The definition of tajassus

Tajassus would be to investigate and pry into someone's affairs when he wishes it to be concealed and secret. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 136, vol.19]

The definition of rishwat

The concise and succinct definition of rishwat (bribery) which encompasses all its types is to take something in exchange for an intangible item. [Majaalis Hakimul Ummat, page 103]

The definition and types of Shar`i Dharoorat

The yardstick for a thing being of necessity (dharoorat) is that if it is absent then some harm will result.

Dharoorat comes about at two junctures, one is to acquire some benefit, whether it be Deeni or worldly, for oneself or for others, and the other is to remove some harm.

In order to acquire some benefit, it is not permissible to execute inappropriate and Haraam acts. For example, in order to acquire strength and potency one consumes Haraam medication, or to use instruments of frivolity and entertainment in order to call people to a lecture gathering.

In order to repel and ward off some harm it will be permissible, when that harm is confirmed as a valid one in the Shariah. This, in fact is a Shar`i dharoorat. For example, in order to treat a severe illness or disease with Haraam medication, when experience has shown that there is no other Halaal alternative, because without this necessity being fulfilled, treatment is not effectual. [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 798]

The generality in the definition of dharoorat

The Fardh requirement for covering the satr (private parts) will fall away in case of dharoorat. The dharoorat of Sunnat will supersede the dharoorat of a Mubaah, so to seek medication is only permissible, and since in this case (whilst seeking medication by the doctor) looking at touching is permissible, then for khatna

(circumcision) the permissibility will be more permissible. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 239]

The yardstick of dharoorat and its stages

The yardstick of anything being of dharoorat is that there will definitely be difficulty if that thing is not present. As for that thing where no difficulty will be experienced by its absence, will not be regarded as a dharoorat. Therefore if the intention is to satisfy and please yourself, then it will be permissible, but if the intention is to make yourself prominent in the eyes of others, then it will be Haraam.

Dharoorat also has stages. One is where the task will not be accomplished without this thing's existence. This is Waajib. The other stage is where the work will continue, but with this thing's presence, there will be ease and if it is omitted, the task will be accomplished albeit with difficulty. This is also permissible. The third stage is where without it the task will not be hampered neither will there be any difficulty. However, its presence will satisfy one's heart and conscience. This is also permissible, on the condition that there is no harm experienced.

The fourth will be where one intends elevating one's rank and status amongst others. This is Haraam.

The stages of dharoorat which I have outlined is not only regarding clothing and jewellery, in fact, all the stages can be applicable to every other thing. [At-Tableegh, Page 166, vol. 4]

For example, if one dons beautiful and exclusive garments to appease the self or to save oneself from (an appearance of) depravity, or to honour someone else, then it will be permissible. If, for example, we were to be informed that Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) will be at a certain place, then before we present ourselves in his presence, we will most certainly dress suitably and neatly, in honour of him. People normally present themselves in respectable attire when they are before an honourable person.

Yes, it will be Haraam to dress smartly with this intention that others may honour you or to exalt yourself before others.

In summary, clothing and other items of beauty are categorised into four groups; one is the level of necessity (dharoorat), the second is for comfort and the third for adornment. These three are permissible, in fact the first type is Waajib. The fourth type is for showing-off and boasting, and this is Haraam.

These stages are not specific to clothing, rather they apply to every other thing. These levels are necessity, comfort, adornment and exhibition. [At-Tableegh, page 26]

The definition of dharoorat

The reality of dharoorat is that without that thing, some harm will result. This harm refers to inconvenience, constraint and hardship. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 641, vol. 1]

The definition of naskh

Qaadhi Thanaullah has explained and explicitly stated that naskh in the definition of the Salf is general in Bayaan-e-Tafseer and Bayaan-e-Tabdeel. Hence the statement of some Sahaabah (radhiallahu anhum) that an Aayat is naasikh of a previous Aayat, means that the tafseer of the previous has already been interpreted. It has been shown that meaning of the Aayat, حق تقاته (As He deserves to be feared), indicates to that level of Taqwa which one is able to acquire. A person's taqwa will be to the level of his ability, which will be included under the Aayat حق تقاته. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 38, vol. 12]

The Salf would also refer to the explanation of an objective as naskh. [Bayaanul Qur`aan, page 174, vol. 1]

The definition and categorisation of Shar`i power (qudrat) and ability (Istitaa`at)

Understand well that there are two types of qudrat; one is when we intend doing an act, then we have the qudrat to execute it, but after its completion whatever harms may result therefrom, we have no qudrat to deter it, and the second type is where we have the qudrat to execute the act and even to repel any harm which may result thereafter. The first type is istitaa`at in the literal sense and the second is istitaa`at according to the Shariah. Understand this well.

The first istitaa`at is insufficient as a defence, in fact the second type of istitaa`at is a condition. This is clarified in the following Hadith; "He from you who observes an evil, he should prevent it with his hand, if he does not have the ability to do this, then with his tongue and if he has no ability to do this (either), then (at least) with his heart (he should regard it as an evil)." It is clear that istitaa`at with the tongue is always possible, so under what circumstances will this ability be negated? That is, if the execution of any action becomes necessary merely by having the ability to do it, and to repel any harm that may result therefrom is not a condition (for its execution), then to defend or deter it with the use of the tongue is ever possible, hence it should be Fardh, because we have the power to use our tongues. When will that occasion arise which Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) described that a person will not be able to use his tongue, therefore he has to at least consider it evil in his heart? This makes it clear that the meaning of istitaa`at is that together with having the ability and power over an action, there should not be such a harm which results whereby there is an overwhelming certainty that it cannot be repulsed. Another condition is also this after repelling the resultant harm/evil one should not become embroiled in an even greater evil. [Ifaadaat Ashrafiya, page 10]

It has been reported from Hadhrat Ibn Umar (radhiallahu anhu) that he once heard Hajjaaj making a statement from the mimbar, which he found unpalatable. He said that he wanted to refute the statement of Hajjaaj, but then he remembered the words of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) where he (sallallahu alaihi wasallam) advised Ibn Umar (radhiallahu anhu) not to disgrace himself by doing or saying something which will result in a harm which cannot be contained.

In another narration reported by Abu Umaamah (radhiallahu anhu), Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) said that if a person observes something which he cannot and is unable to defend or speak against, then he should observe patience. [Ibid. Page 52]

The definition of maskoot anhu and manhi anhu

Those things which were not required during the khairul quroon, and whose need only surfaced after this noble era, and the nusoos is not contradicted by it, then it is (referred to as) Maskoot anhu. But as for those things for which there always was a need, and yet the nusoos only instructs jihaad or patience, then this will not be maskoot anhu, because even though there was a need for it, the Mutaqaddimeen have left it out and not opted for it, hence there is Ijma that it should be left out, therefore it is prohibited. [Al-Ifadaat, page 116]

The definition and types of tar'k (preventing oneself from something)

Tar'k* of sin is also an act of obedience. By tar'k is meant that from the onset, one actively intends stopping oneself (from participating in whatever act), on condition that there is no intention of obstinacy or opposition. [Bawaadirun Nawaadir, page 581, vol. 2]

There are two types of tar'k – tar'k-e-wujoodi and tar'k-e-`admi. That tar'k (abstention) which has been made binding on man is called tar'k-e-wujoodi, which is done by choice and willpower. For example, if a man observes a woman and his nafs tells him to admire and gawk at her, but he controls and restrains himself. This type of tar'k is worthy of reward. Tar'k-e-`adam is that tar'k wherein one's choice and willpower plays no role. For example, at this moment we are not involved or engaged in thousands of sins, but we are not rewarded for it (i.e. for not engaging in all these sins, because we are not actively refraining from them). [Kamaalaat Ashrafiya, page 32]

The definition of Taqleed-e-Shaksi

Taqleed means to follow, and the reality of taqleed-e-shakhsi means that for every mas`alah a person only refers to one Aalim (of his preference) for a solution, and he practices on his rulings. [Ifaadaat, page 325, vol. 6]

The definition of Tashab-buh

To recognise whether an act is classified as tashab-buh is that when the masses observe this act, their minds do not immediately connect it to some group or the other. An act will be prohibited as long as it complies to this definition. For example, in India, the act of wearing an (English) jacket, tying a loincloth, etc. will be classified as tashab-buh.

The definition of tahreef

Tahreef means to change its (the Qur`aan Majeed) words or interpretations or both. [Bayaanul Qur`aan, page 42, vol.1]

The definition of Hadith-e-Mutawaatir

The following rule is stated in Usool-e-Hadith that if the chain of narrators of a Hadith are so many that it is not logically possible for all of them to be united in falsity, then the Hadith is classified as Mutawaatir. There is no specific amount which is required for tawaatur. In fact, its recognition is that which has been mentioned. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 351, vol. 5]

The definition of giving consent with a happy heart

The reality of giving consent with a happy heart is when the opposite party has the power to veto your consent. Experience has shown that after consent is sought from the peer, the mureed does not have the power to rebuff this consent, hence this consent is not of consideration. [Anfaas Isa, page 315]

The definition of shuba

What is shuba? Shuba* is when a doubt is created between the actual item of comparison with some other thing. It also has different levels. Sometimes the doubt/resemblance is great and sometimes weak. Imaam Sahib has placed consideration to the lower level of doubt in the non-execution of hudood. [Malhootaat, page 72]

The definition of gheebat (backbiting)

When the speaker has this certainty that if his exact statement were to reach the one he spoke about and the latter would not take offence, then this is not gheebat. The mentioning of someone who has an islaahi connection or if mentioned out of grief, then it is not gheebat. [Bayaanul Qur`aan, page 47, vol. 11]

Gheebat is to speak ill about someone in his absence, such that if it were to be related to him he would be distressed and upset. This is if the statement is the truth about him. If the statement is false, then it would be buhtaan (slander). The condition of speaking behind a person's back does not mean that it is permissible to say it (i.e. hurtful statements) in his presence, because then it would be considered lamz (finding fault/carping) which is also prohibited. [Ibid.]

The definition of zillat (disgrace)

When a person does not ask for his needs (beg) then there is no zillat. [Malhoozaat, page 10]

The definition of ishraaf-e-nafs

Ishraaf means to wait expectantly, specifically that waiting which has the effect that if the person does not get what he waited for, then he harbours ill-feelings, he becomes angry. Even the basic ishraaf (normal waiting, not expectantly) is censurable for the people of tawakkul, and for the normal people it is not. [Bawaadir, page 75]

The definition of dunya

Dunya actually refers to that condition which passed over mankind prior to Nubuwwat, regardless of whether it is praiseworthy or not. If it is a barrier to attaining the hereafter, then it is censurable. The word dunya is mostly used in this context. If it is not an barrier to the hereafter, then it is praiseworthy. [Malhozaat]

The definition of molwi

A molwi is not one who is well-versed in the Arabic language, he is well-versed in the laws of the Shariah, otherwise Abu Jahal would have been a great molwi.

The definition of waardaat

If someone's gaze/mind goes onto such things without his active participation and without spontaneity such things come to his mind, which he does not regard as necessary to execute, in fact, he merely carries it out in order to clear his conscience, then such an act is not regarded as ghuloo (excessiveness) in Deen, in fact, baseerat (insight) and knowledge is another blessing (altogether). Such conditions according to the definition of tasawwuf would be termed waardaat. This person should carry out such waardaat. [Al-Qowlul Jaleel, page 22]

In contrast to ahwaal (conditions) there are muqamaat (stages), and this is desired. Muqaamaat in the definition of the sufiya are such a`maal-e-takleefiya (deeds which are binding) that are connected to the heart. It is as though those veiled issues which are contained in the Qur`aan Majeed and Hadith, which are called Ilm-e-Mu`aamalah, are defined by the Sufiya as maqaam, and these are necessary in order to gain proximity to Allaah Ta`ala. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 120, vol. 5]

The definition of a Wali

I say that based on the external façade, one may call someone a sheikh, zaahid, aarif, aashiq or saalik, but it is impermissible to call him a waliullaah, because wilaayat, that is, a special proximity and acceptance, is something which is concealed (only known to Allaah Ta`ala). This claim would be a testification of the unknown. If you wish to call anyone a wali, then it should be done in this way that you say, 'It appears that so and so is a wali'. As for the rest and true condition, this is only known to The Knower of the unseen. [Bawaadir, page 588]

The definition of nafs and mujaahadah

The reality of mujaahadh is opposition to the nafs. The natural propensity of the nafs is towards freedom. The haqeeqat of the nafs, according to the sufiya is that it is like a gem which invites towards evil. As far as its qualities are concerned it is categorised into three types; ammaara, lowwaama and mutma`inna. [Alkalimatul Haqq, page 107]

The definition of karaamat

Karaamat is that act which is manifested at the hands of a true follower of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), which defies nature. If the act is not contrary to the normal (i.e. not miraculous), then it is not a karaamat. If this person (who carries out a supernatural act) is not a follower of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), then too it is not termed a karaamat, like the tricks and magic of the magicians, etc. [Bawaadir, page 78]

The definition of tasawwuf

Tasawwuf is the term given to cleansing the internal self (soul) from filth and to embellish and adorn it with virtue, which gives rise to directing oneself towards Allaah Ta`ala. [Tajdeed Tasawwuf, page 17]

The general and common definition of tasawwuf is that it is such knowledge whose execution cleanses the soul, which renders a person acceptable in the Court of Allaah Ta`ala. [Ibid. page 13]

The definition of khushoo and khudoo`

The general dictionary meaning of khushoo is (sukoon) peace and according to the Shariah it refers to the concord and relaxing of the limbs, whose reality and effect is self-apparent. The reality of sukoon of the heart is when all worries are removed. [Page 278]

The definition of nisbat

The dictionary meaning of nisbat is to attach and have a connection. The Shar`i meaning would be when the servant of Allaah Ta`ala forges a special connection with Allaah Ta'ala, by way of obedience and thikr, and Allaah Ta`ala has a special connection with His servant, that is, by acceptance and ridha (being pleased with him). [Tajdeed Tasawwuf, page 67]

The definition of tafweez and `ishq

`Ishq is amongst the necessity requisites of Imaan. The reality of `ishq is to make tafweez, where one hands himself and all his affairs to Allaah Ta'ala, that He can do as He pleases and wishes with us and we will be pleased with it whatever He decrees. This is the reality of tafweez. [Tajdeed, page 136]

The definition of tawajjuh and tasarruf

This is when some praiseworthy and excellent quality and trait is conferred and extended over to someone else, which gives rise to some special effect being created. This is defined as tawajjuh and tasarruf according to the Sufiya. [Tajdeed, page 324]

The definition of wajd

Wajd is the condition of ecstasy and enrapture which overcomes some special people. For example, when a person has an overwhelming love and affection (for Allaah Ta`ala) or an overwhelming fear for Him. This condition does not necessarily result in screaming, shrieking and jumping, etc. the Qur`aan Majeed also refers to this condition of wajd in the following Aayat, "The skins of those who fear their Rabb shiver from it…" [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 127, vol. 5]

The definition of istidraaj, kashf and karaamat

Karaamat is the term given to that supernatural act which is manifested at the hands of a pious follower of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam). If the act is not of a supernatural nature and just a normal one, then this is not karaamat. If any supernatural act is displayed by someone who is not a follower of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam), like an astrologer, magician, etc. or if he claims to be a follower but is not a practical adherent to the Sunnat, like a faasiq, faajir or ahle bid`ah, then this is also not karaamat, but it is called istidraaj. A karaamat is only that (miraculous act) which is manifested at the hands of a person with perfect taqwa. [Tajdeed, page 91]

The definition of zuhd

Zuhd is not necessarily the total abandonment of desires, even the reduction of desires (obviously of Halaal things) is also sufficient to be termed zuhd. That is, a person must not be totally absorbed and preoccupied in satisfying the base desires, where the entire day passes in thinking about cooking this and that, preparing this and that, such that one's entire day and night evolves around good food and clothes. This is nugatory of zuhd. If without any special effort and time-wasting some tasty dish comes one's way without any special preparation , then regard this as a special favour from Allaah Ta`ala, and offer shukr unto Him. [Tajdeed, page 75]

The definition of hirs

The meaning of hirs is that when it (object of desire) is not acquired then it is sought out, and the heart inclines towards it. If one has this quality then know that it is an illness. [Hasnul Azeez, page 405, vol. 4]

The definition of a sufi

The meaning on sufi in my opinion is an Aalim who practices. People who are unaware have placed many conditions to it, which is no part of this definition. [Majaalis Hakimul Ummat, page 278]

The definition of nafs and its categorisation

Nafs is a power which is inherent in man. This is what inclines the desire of man to things, be they good or evil. If the nafs inclines man mostly towards evil and he is not regretful about it, then it is classified as ammaarah*. Although sometimes it does incline towards good also. A major inclination towards evil does not negate the good completely, because something which is in preponderance does not necessarily mean that it takes over completely.

If he begins to feel regretful (about this inclination towards evil) then it is called lawwama*.

If the nafs has an overwhelming inclination towards good, then it is called mutma`inna*. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 170, vol. 4]

The definition of jazb and its categorisation

To attain and acquire the ahwaal-e-baatina without any effort or mujaahadah, is called jazb. This is also called Muraadiyat. [Page 151, vol. 5]

The definition of haqeeqat and ma`rifat

By reforming and correcting one's internal self, a spark and sense of purity is created in the heart, which results in the realities of existence, realities of divinity and Divine Qualities being opened up and unlocked for one. These manifestations and revelations are termed haqeeqat and this disclosure and exposition is called *ma`rifat. This person to whom this exposition is made is called Muhaqqiq and `aarif. [Page 165, vol. 5]

The definition of kibr

Kibr is to regard oneself better than another owing to some Deeni or worldly accomplishment, and together with that to think low and belittle him. Therefore there are two parts to it, one is to think oneself better and the second is to demean the next person. This is the reality of takabbur which is Haraam and sinful. [Tajdeed Tasawwuf, page 322]

The definition of takabbur

Because of some excellence, to regard yourself better than the next man in such a way that at that time your entire attention is only towards your excellence and his mediocrity. And this though does not even cross your mind that on the whole, this person's qualities and excellences makes him better than me. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 19, vol. 5]

The definition of tawaadhu

The meaning of tawaadhu is that notwithstanding one's own excellent qualities and also that recognising one's accomplishments, to regard someone else better and higher than one and to deem oneself little and of small significance. Also to regard the other person at that time to have better all-round qualities than oneself. This is the reality of tawaadhu. To regard oneself in reality and genuinely as a nobody. [Page 192, vol. 5]

To be humble and not elevate oneself and to truly and genuinely belittle oneself.

Tawaadhu* is not to negate and deny for oneself the bounties and excellences which Allaah Ta`ala has bestowed upon one. In fact, the meaning of it is to recognise these qualities but not to deem it as your own achievement, but rather as mercy and bounty from Allah Ta`ala. [Anfaas Isa, page 273]

The definition of ujub

Ujub* is only one condition short (of kibr). That is, to regard oneself as being someone great and truly accomplished, without degrading the next man. [Tajdeed Tasawwuf]

The definition of hubbe jaah

Hubbe jaah means that just as you regard yourself as being great, you make an effort so that others also regard you the same, and that they respect, follow and serve you. Its purport is also takabbur and ujub. [Page 237]

The definition of riyakaari

Riyakaari means to use a Deeni or worldly deed to win the favour of people whereby they think highly of you. This is also spawned from kibr and ujub. [Tajdeed Tasawwuf]

The definition of ta`assub

The reality of ta`assub needs to be understood. Ta`assub means to defend and protect the unjust. [Huqooqul Ilm, page 35]

The definition of hayaa and sharam

The reality of hayaa is to restrain the nafs from that which is disliked. [Huqooqul Ilm, page 40]

The definition of bughd fillaah

If any person shows enmity towards the Haqq, hatred for the people of Haqq and displays takabbur then to have an aversion and repugnance for such a person is Waajib and also an act of ibaadat. This is bughd fillaah. [Page 70]

The definition of barkat

The reality of barkat is well-known and the dictionary meaning is 'increase'. In essence it implies the acquisition of extra benefit. [Hasnul Azeez, page 134]

The definition of jahaalat-e-yaseera

In my opinion the definition of jahaalat-e-yaseera is that there is no mufdhi ilal munaaza`a (factors which lead to dispute). [Ibid. Page 159, vol. 4]

The definition of ta`aam waahid

The meaning of 'two-foods' refers to that food wherein there is no interrelation. Whereas if there is an interrelation then it will be regarded as one food. For example, Allaah Ta`ala had blessed the Bani Israeel with mann and salwa which was two (separate types of) foods, but when they requested for something else, they said, "We will never be patient upon one food…" They referred to the two foods as 'one food'. [Ibid. page 259, vol. 4]

The definition of ikhlaas

The dictionary meaning of ikhlaas is to make pure and unadulterated. Its meaning in the Shariah is that which existed before the auspicious arrival of the Shariah. Khaalis ghee is that ghee (clarified butter) which has nothing mixed into it.

The meaning of an lkhlaas Ibaadat is to render the ibaadat free of any 'anti-ibaadat' act. That is to merge such a thing with the act of ibaadat, which is not desired by the Shariah. [At-Tableegh, page 132, vol. 2]

The definition of tasawwuf

Tasawwuf is the name given to the cleaning and reformation of the inner and outer self. [Page 81]

The definition of fanaa

The objective of fanaa is to disconnect all futile ties and relations. That is, to extinguish any relationship you have for worldly things, and forge a relationship with only Allaah Ta`ala. It must not be that these things are rendered totally devoid of your attachment, that you completely sever ties with them and that no relationship remains, no. In fact, the love for these (worldly) things is merely overshadowed and overwhelmed (by your attachment and engrossment with Allaah Ta`ala). A person's outer and greater connection is with Allaah Ta`ala. In this regard, Allaah Ta`ala says, "Say (to them, O Muhammad - sallallahu alaihi wasallam), if your fathers and children…" [Page 39, vol. 2]

The definition of molwi and Aalim

A molwi is a person who is a Moula wala, that is, he has the knowledge of Deen, he is pious (muttaqi), fears Allaah Ta'ala and he also embodies excellent qualities and character. A person does not become a molwi by mastering the Arabic language.

An Aalim is one who follows the Sunnat and is pious. The molwi has a connection to The Mowla (Master-Allaah Ta`ala). He is a Mowla wala. So as long as he remains a Mowla wala he remains a molwi, who is worthy of being followed, and as soon as he changes from this hue, he no longer remains a molwi. [At-Tableegh, page 134, vol.1]

The definition of majzoob

A majzoob according to the definition of the khawaas (elite / Ulama) is the person who has an attraction and allurement towards Allaah Ta'ala, which is mentioned in this Aayat, "Allaah pulls towards Him whom He pleases and guides towards Him he who inclines (seeks forgiveness)." The words 'inclines' refers to that person. Both these bounties, being pulled and inclined, are the good fortune of the accepted ones. As for those who are deviates, neither do they incline towards Allah Ta`ala nor are they pulled towards Him. They are rejected by Allaah Ta`ala. Shaitaan, who was accursed and rejected, did not relent nor was he pulled towards Allaah Ta'ala, hence he had gone astray. The chosen ones, even if they err, they are cleansed and set aright. Hence according to this definition, all the Ambiyaa (alaihimus salaam) were majzoob. However, according to the definition of the common people, majzoob refers to a madman. No Nabi was ever such, in fact, every single one of them was of the highest level of intelligence. [Page 219, vol. 17]

CHAPTER NINE

DIFFERENCES

The difference between illat (cause/reason) and hikmat (underlying wisdom)

The Illat precedes the hikmat. The illat is intertwined and inherent in the ruling, but not with the hikmat, that is, if the hikmat* changes the ruling still remains the same. The Raasikheen fil Ilm understand this difference well.

For example, the illat for severe pangs of maut which was experienced by Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) was his strong disposition and his strong bond with his Ummat and the hikmat was the perfection of his rank of sabr and the elevation of his stages and rank. [Malfoozaat Kamaalaat, page 162 / Imdaadul Fataawa, page 224, vol. 4]

The difference between jalb-e-manfa`at and daf-e-mudharrat

Harm is one thing and acquiring no benefit is another. Understand this by means of an example, assume you have a R100 note in your pocket and someone snatches it away from you, now this will be a cause of harm to you, and on the other hand, I wish to give you R100, but someone prevents me from doing so, therefore this will be of no harm to you, but you will be deprived of its (the R100's) benefit. [Tarbiyatus Saalik, page 19]

The difference between taqleed and ba`it

A Shiah once asked a question which was new to me. My mind was blank for a moment, but Alhamdulillah, Allaah Ta`ala blessed me with an answer. The question was regarding the difference between taqleed and ba`it. I replied that taqleed means to follow and ba`it refers to a pact or contract to follow. [Ifaadhaat, page 325, vol. 6, no. 3]

The difference between tasarruf and karaamat

Both, intention and knowledge are necessary for tasarruf, whereas for karaamat there is no active intention, neither is knowledge a necessary factor. People have now bundled the tasarrufaat of the auliyaa together with karaamaat, whereas they are both different. [Page 198, vol. 10]

The difference between kashf and firaasat

A graduate from a famous Madrasah once asked the difference between kashf and firaasat. The reply was that whatever knowledge was derived through kashf cannot be used a proof, but can be taken in a literal sense, whereby contentment may be derived. Contrary to firaasat, because this can in a sense be used as proof (for a Shar`i ruling), although ilm-e-dhuroori (necessary/essential knowledge) is part of it. In essence, that knowledge which is derived from firaasat is a combination of ilm-e-dhuroori and ilm-e-istidlaali, where the major part is the former and the latter is overwhelmed by it. Firaasat is initiated by ilm-e-dhuroori, thereafter in order to understand the ruling, and whether whatever we understand by it is correct or incorrect, can only be deduced by ta`ammul (reflection and investigation). Although that ta`ammul will not be of the level of istidlaal (proof), however it is very similar to it.

No ta`ammul is required for kashf, its validity or unsuitability is self-evident. [Ifaadhaat, page 207-8, vol. 10/ Husnul Azeez, page 195, vol. 2]

The difference between aql and kashf

The effectiveness and limit of the aql reaches to that of kashf. However, the difference is that the similarity and likeness of kashf is to that of a telephone where clear words are heard and the likeness of the aql is to that of a telegraph, where a small bit of ta`ammul is also necessary. [Ifaadhaat, page 207, vol. 10]

The difference between khwaab (dreams) and ilhaam

Thoughts are more apparent and have more prominence in a dream, whereas not so in ilhaam. However for its validity this is not sufficient, in fact, the sign of its validity is that it does not conflict with the Shariah. Also, another sign for its validity is that the person who experiences the ilhaam must be a person of noor. Ilhaam a type of transfiguration or manifestation of celestial illumination (noor), which he understands and recognises. Ilhaam also exudes a cheerful and blissful sensation for him. [Page 26, vol. 10]

The difference between shu`bada and mu`jizah

The difference between shu`bada and mu`jizah is that a shu`bada is attributed to some hidden natural cause, which is not discernable by everyone. However, the experts in this science will recognise it. A mu`jizah is not attributed or connected to any natural cause. It is a totally unnatural and supernatural act which is categorised under and derived purely from the Power of Allaah Ta`ala. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 112, vol. 5]

The difference between ta`zeem and ibaadat

Intention and belief are both included in ibaadat and ta`zeem. It is possible that one action can be both an ibaadat and ta`zeem, depending on belief and intention.

The difference between ta`zeem and ibaadat is when ta`zeem is made with a specific divine belief, or to gain proximity to Him and an act is executed which is especially for Him, then this is an ibaadat. If this condition is not present then it is mere ta`zeem.

If no special intention of (pleasing) Allaah Ta`ala is made, and ta`zeem is made, like for one's parents or Ustaad, then it will be permissible as long as no untoward excesses are made. [Page 141, vol. 19]

The difference between a muwah-hid and mushrik

A mushrik regards the means and agents as the objective which can cause benefit or harm, whereas the muwah-hid does not.

Although the mushrikeen claim that they only place the idols as a means of devotion and peace of mind, but their behaviour and activities falsify their claims. They take oaths and nazars, etc. on the names of their idols. They deem their idols are being effectual and causing the effects. All these actions of theirs are contrary to their claims. [Badaa`i, page 155]

The difference between ta`assub and tasallub

Ta`assub* means to support and assist in the unjust and falsities, whereas to assist the truth is a laudable quality. It is called tasallub fid Deen*, that is, firmness and cogency in Deen. For example to lessen mixing in society because of the irreligiousness (which predominates society), etc. is called tasallub in Deen and not ta`assub. To incline and go towards unjust is a impermissible. [Da`wat Abdiyat, page 126, vol. 19]

The difference between ilm-e-ghaib and kashf

There are two meanings to ghaib – haqeeqi and idaafi. Haqeeqi* is when there is no means present in the acquisition of a knowledge. This is special to Allaah Ta`ala only. This acquisition is impossible for the servant, both according to the Shariah and logically. Idaafi* is where a part of knowledge is revealed through some means and a part is hidden. This is possible for the servant through the revelation by Allaah Ta`ala. Therefore there is a difference between the former meaning of ghaib and kashf, but insofar as the second meaning of ghaib there is no difference between the two.

Kashf is acquired through some concentration and even without concentration. Sometimes even with concentration it does not come. This therefore means that it is an involuntary matter. This is the same definition which will apply to kashf of the graves. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 144, vol. 5]

The difference between takween, Shariah and ilm-e-Moosawi, ilm-e-Khidri

Both are different. Ilm-e-Khidri* is related to takween, which has no relation to the Shariah and tareeqat. This knowledge is lesser in rank to that of wilaayat*. *Ilm-e-Moosawi is related to the Shariah, which encompasses the entire Shariah and tariqat. This knowledge is of a higher level than that of wilaayat. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 147, vol. 5]

The difference between Shariah and tariqat

Shariah is the term describing all the *ahkaam-e-takleefiya (laws and rules which are binding on sane Muslim adults). External and internal deeds are all included herein. According to the terminology of the mutaqaddimeen it is synonymous to the term 'fiqh'. The definition of fiqh as outlined by Imaam Abu Hanifah is; The recognition of the soul, to that which is inherent to it and binding upon it.

Thereafter, the muta`akh-khireen have redefined it such that whatever pertains to external matters (deeds and actions, etc.) is known as fiqh and whatever pertains to the spiritual sphere (soul) is called tasawwuf*. The way and methods of the spiritual deeds is called tariqat. [Page 165, vol. 5]

The difference between takabbur and hayaa

Khajlat (sense of shame, modesty, humility) is a natural disposition, which overtakes a person when an unnatural and untoward occurrence takes place. This is sometimes mistaken to be kibr (pride), whereas in reality it is not. The yardstick in recognising this

(whether the person is displaying humility or pride) is that when any undignified act takes place in his presence and he displays shame, similar is his attitude when great honour and dignity is displayed before him (i.e. then too he displays restraint and humility). [Tajdeed Tasawwuf, page 133]

The difference between jamaal, zeenat and takabbur

The difference between jamaal and zeenat is that these two are adopted in order to satisfy one's heart and as a means of displaying Allaah Ta`ala's favours upon one. One should not feel in the heart that one is deserving of it nor should the next person be belittled. When one feels deserving of this (bounties and blessings) and looks down upon others, and also when one regards oneself as being better and superior to another, then this is kibr, which is Haraam. [Badaa`i, page 74]

The difference between waqaar (dignity/honour) and takabbur

Nowadays when people shout, "waqaar, waqaar", then this waqaar (of theirs) is nothing other than a bundle of kibr. They have altered the term kibr to waqaar. That which results in a little social degradation (but has no Deeni effect or is detrimental to the Deen in any way) is in actual fact humility. Those people who nowadays have bundled waqaar under their armpits, find it contrary to (their) waqaar to run with their wives (in other words to play with their wives)…If anyone makes this claim, then there is no goodness in his Imaan. The actions of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) were never contrary to waqaar. [Page 133]

The difference between ta`weel and tah`reef

That (interpretation) which is only to the limit of necessity and in keeping with the apparent meaning and which is in conformity with the Shar`i laws and rules, is regarded as ta`weel otherwise it will be tahreef (change/concoct). [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 399, vol. 5]

The difference between zeenat and tafaakhur

The objective of zeenat is to sometimes adopt a presentable appearance and other times a humble one, so that one is demeaned by others. Both these presentations (to their limit of acceptance), are permissible. If the intention is to elevate one's status in the eyes of others or to 'stand out', then this is tafaakhur which is impermissible. [Hasnul Azeez, page 36, vol. 4]

The difference between takabbur and sharam

Some matters are unpalatable or offensive to one's disposition. This offensiveness has two reasons, it is either takabbur or contrary to one's habit. The yardstick in identifying what is takabbur and what is contrary to habit is that when a person is highly praised and honoured, which is contrary to the normal habit, then too he becomes shy, then that offensiveness is because it is contrary to the norm. But if it is not like this, for example, there is a person who feels ashamed to walk in the bazaar with a bundle on his head, but he does not feel ashamed to ride on an elephant, even though it is not a normal thing for him and contrary to his habit, then this is kibr. But if he feels ashamed in both instances, then this will be khajlat, and not takabbur. [Page 306, vol. 4]

The difference between mashwera and ijaazat

Mashwera is one thing and ijaazat is another. You have understood ijaazat to be mashwera and I give ijaazat generally. [Page 367, vol. 4]

The meaning of mashwera is to advise on that which is not only harmless, but it must be beneficial also. An example of this will be if a person asks a doctor permission to eat a certain food item and if the doctor sees no harm in this for the patient, then he will tell to that he may eat it. This is ijaazat*.

Mashwera will be where the patient tells the doctor that he places himself at his disposal. The doctor must prescribe and administer what he deems correct. Naturally, the doctor will not prescribe something which is harmful or not beneficial. In fact he will advise you on what is beneficial for you. You will then follow his opinion and advice, even though it may go against your disposition. [Hasnul Azeez, page 367, vol. 4]

The difference between sangdili (hard-heartedness/callousness) and yaksoo`i

Sometime after some very close associates of mine passed away, I felt no grief. I once thought to myself that this is a display of callousness, but after some reflection I realised that if this was callousness, then why does my heart melt when I see an ill person. [Page 49, vol. 4]

The difference between speech and a promise

I repeat with emphasis that speech should not be understood as a promise. (There is a major difference between the two). [Page 188, vol. 4]

The difference between rasm and aadaat

Question: There is a custom amongst the Arabs that they sit at small stools and eat. Will it be tashab-buh if the same way was adopted here (in India)?

The reply was that the custom (rasm) there was a habit (aadat). That which is being adopted here is changing the table for the stool, and this stool is similar to a table. [Page 207, vol. 4]

The difference between Islaam and Imaan

The following difference is gauged from the nusoos that Islaam refers to external acts (of obedience) and Imaan refers to beliefs. Although in application and in a general sense (nowadays) the two of them are the same, because if anyone chooses and accepts Islaam as a way of life, then we call him a mu`min, because we do not have the knowledge of nifaaq (i.e. on outward appearance we cannot tell whether a person is a hypocrite or not). Divine revelation has terminated. During the era of Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) both these terms had different connotations and applications, but nowadays, since we are unable to distinguish between the two and are unable to identify hypocrisy, we have to regard them as the same, although there is certainly a difference between them. [At-Tableegh, page 166, vol. 20]

The difference between tamleek and ibaahat

The Fuqahaa have clearly stated that food remains in the possession of the owner. Hence, if the owner wishes to spit out a morsel of food, then he has the right to do so. However in the case of ownership, the person who takes (consumes) the food becomes the owner. Just like how amongst close people (family/neighbours) where food is sent to others. This is a transference of ownership. However as for the food which is served to guests, this does not denote ownership, this is mere ibaahat. Here the indication is that the guest may eat as much as he wishes and the rest must be returned to the host (owner). [Page 229, vol. 20]

The difference between Deen and dunya and the yardstick

The yardstick in order to differentiate between the two is as follows: If any deed/action is emphasised, encouraged or ordered in the Shariah, and also reward has been promised for its execution, then this is classified as Deen. Also, if warnings have been sounded upon its abandonment and this warrants Allaah Ta`ala's displeasure, then it will be classified as Fardh or Waajib, otherwise if no such retribution exists, then it will be Mustahab. If none of these mentioned above, apply to an act, then it is classified as dunya (worldly). As for those laws which have been decreed regarding them (such acts), this will, under all conditions remain as Deen. [Imdaadul Fataawa, page 256, vol. 2]

The difference between waswasah and tama` / ashraaf

The difference between waswasah and ashraaf is that if this thought crops up that if you receie anything or don't receive, then there is no harm, then this waswasah. But if pain, grief and regret is experienced and the heart aches or finds it unpalatable that the people have not given anything, then this is tama` and ashraaf. [Huqooqul Ilm, page 58]

The difference between tajrubah and aql

Tajrubah* is something different from aql. If being experienced is also regarded as having knowledge, then an LLB graduate should also know how to sew clothing, whereas the reality is to the contrary. Even the most asinine person who can sew will be more accomplished than an LLB graduate in tailoring, so will he be regarded as being more intelligent? None will claim this. The reality is that one is experienced (in sewing) and the other inexperienced. It is therefore established that intelligence is one thing and experience another. [At-Tableegh, page 167, vol. 1]

The difference between husn and Jamaal

Husn is one thing, which was found in the features of Hadhrat Yusuf (alaihis salaam), but Jamaal, in which Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) supersedes all, is quite another. Jamaal is more superior than husn. Observing husn will render one astounded, whilst Jamaal has an attraction and allurement. This will solve the following mas`alah that Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) is regarded as ajmal and Hadhrat Yusuf (alaihis salaam) as ahsan. This will neither contradict nor oppose any nass nor is there any criticism therein. That is, if it is said that Hadhrat Yusuf (alaihis salaam) surpassed all in husn and Nabi (sallallahu alayhi wasallam) in Jamaal, then what harm is there in this? [Anfaas Isa, page 632, vol. 2]

The definitions and differences between hudood and quyood

In my opinion there is a difference between hudood and quyood, insofar as their common definitions are concerned. Hadd* is the ultimate and endpoint of a thing, whereas qayd is the exception/condition which is found in that hadd. For example, there is a hadd* in Salaat, where the maximum Rakaats (Fardh) in Asr is four. We are prohibited from performing more than this. The quyood are, for example those things like having wudhu, facing towards Qiblah, etc. [At-Tableegh, page 194, vol. 15]

O Allah! we are not capable of refraining from sin nor capable of doing worship except by Your help. O Allah! I seek refuge out of Your pleasure and not in displeasure, and seek Your refuge from You. I can not praise You properly, You are worthy of that praise that You have Yourself given to known.

O Allah! we seek Your refuge from being waiverinne else to waiver, or misguide anyone, or oppress any body, or we are ourselves ever oppressed by any one, or we indulge in ignorance or being treated with ignorance. I seek refuge from misleading anyone or being misledd by anyone. I seek refuge of Your Effulgence that has illuminated Heavens and removed the darknesses and has arranged aright the tasks of the world and the Hereafter, has averted Your displeasure and wrathfulness from being descended upon me. It is Your pleasure to reconcile You to me, I can not refrain from sin nor can do worship except by Your help. O Allah! I do seek Your care as the care is taken of a child. O Allah! O Allah! watch me by Your eye which do not slumber, and cover me by Your power near which none can dare to approach, and be kind to me on account of that might which is superior to me, so that I am not ever doomed, and You are my hope. There are many such boons that You have conferred upon me and I have ben wanting in gratefulness to You on that account. And those many such distresses that You have put me to but I have been wanting in contentment on those occasions. Thus, O the Being that did not deprive me of your boons inspite of the want of gratefulness on my part, and O the Being that did not desert although I remained wanting in contentment on the distresses sent by You and O the Being who did not admonish me on seeing sinning.

The verses are given below:

قُلِ ادْعُوا اللّٰهَ اَوِ ادْعُوا الرَّحْمٰنَ ؕ اَيًّا مَّا تَدْعُوْا فَلَهُ الْاَسْمَآءُ الْحُسْنٰى ۚ وَلَا تَجْهَرْ بِصَلَاتِكَ وَلَا تُخَافِتْ بِهَا وَابْتَغِ بَيْنَ ذٰلِكَ سَبِيْلًا ۝ وَقُلِ الْحَمْدُ لِلّٰهِ الَّذِيْ لَمْ يَتَّخِذْ وَلَدًا وَّلَمْ يَكُنْ لَّهٗ شَرِيْكٌ فِي الْمُلْكِ وَلَمْ يَكُنْ لَّهٗ وَلِيٌّ مِّنَ الذُّلِّ وَكَبِّرْهُ تَكْبِيْرًا ۝

Say: "Call upon Allah, or call upon Rahman: by whatever name you call upon Him, (it is well): for to Him belong the Most Beautiful Names. Neither speak your Prayer aloud, nor speak it in a low tone, but seek a middle course between." (17: 110)

Say: "Praise be to Allah, Who begets no son, and has no partner in (His) dominion: nor (needs) He any to protect Him from humiliation: yes, magnify Him for His greatness and glory!" (17: 111)

اَلْمَتِيْنُ (The Firm One)

If anyone recites the on going attribute of Allah a number of times, then blows on a man or woman known to commit an evil deed, he or she will—Insha Allah—cease committing the same in future.

اِنَّ فِيْ خَلْقِ السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْاَرْضِ وَاخْتِلَافِ الَّيْلِ وَالنَّهَارِ لَاٰيٰتٍ لِّاُولِي الْاَلْبَابِ ۝ الَّذِيْنَ يَذْكُرُوْنَ اللّٰهَ قِيٰمًا وَّقُعُوْدًا وَّعَلٰى جُنُوْبِهِمْ وَيَتَفَكَّرُوْنَ فِيْ خَلْقِ السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْاَرْضِ ۚ رَبَّنَا مَا خَلَقْتَ هٰذَا بَاطِلًا ۚ سُبْحٰنَكَ فَقِنَا عَذَابَ النَّارِ ۝ رَبَّنَآ اِنَّكَ مَنْ تُدْخِلِ النَّارَ فَقَدْ اَخْزَيْتَهٗ ۚ وَمَا لِلظّٰلِمِيْنَ مِنْ اَنْصَارٍ ۝ رَبَّنَآ اِنَّنَا سَمِعْنَا مُنَادِيًا يُّنَادِيْ لِلْاِيْمَانِ اَنْ اٰمِنُوْا بِرَبِّكُمْ فَاٰمَنَّا ۗ رَبَّنَا فَاغْفِرْ لَنَا ذُنُوْبَنَا وَكَفِّرْ عَنَّا سَيِّاٰتِنَا وَتَوَفَّنَا مَعَ الْاَبْرَارِ ۝ رَبَّنَا وَاٰتِنَا مَا وَعَدْتَّنَا عَلٰى رُسُلِكَ وَلَا تُخْزِنَا يَوْمَ الْقِيٰمَةِ ۗ اِنَّكَ لَا تُخْلِفُ الْمِيْعَادَ ۝

Behold! In the creation of the heavens and the earth, and the alternation of Night and Day; there are indeed Signs for men of understanding, (3: 190)

Men who remember Allah standing, sitting, and lying down on their sides, and contemplate the (wonders of) creation in the heavens and the earth, (with the saying): "Our Lord not for nothing have You created (all) this! Glory to You! Give us salvation from the Chastisement of the Fire. (3: 191)

"Our Lord! any whom You does admit to the Fire, truly You cover with shame, and never will wrong-doers find any helpers! (3: 192)

"Our Lord! we have heard the call of one calling (us) to Faith, 'Believe you in the Lord,' and we have believed. Our Lord! forgive us our sins, blot out from us our iniquities, and take to Yourself our souls in the company of the righteous. (3: 193)

"Our Lord! Grant us what You did promise unto us through Your Messengers, and save us from shame on the Day of Judgment: for You never break Your promise." (3: 194)

The recital of these verses by the messenger of Allah (PBUH) continuously, is a sufficient proof to prone that these verses assure the acceptance of any suplication made after their recital as well as the suplications concealed in these verses. (For translation, refer to Qur'an) (Surah No. 3: 190-194)

B— وَإِذَا جَآءَتْهُمْ آيَةٌ قَالُوا لَنْ نُؤْمِنَ حَتّٰى نُؤْتٰى مِثْلَ مَا أُوْتِيَ رُسُلُ اللّٰهِ ۘ اَللّٰهُ أَعْلَمُ حَيْثُ يَجْعَلُ رِسَالَتَهٗ ۘ

Those whom Allah wills to guide,—He opens their breast to Islam; those whom He wills to leave straying; He make their breast close and constricted, as if they had to climb up to the skies: thus do Allah lay abomination on those who refuse to believe. (6: 125)

Names of Allah, appearing in this verse, his Dua be assuredly accepted by Allah.

C— فَقُلْتُ اسْتَغْفِرُوْا رَبَّكُمْ ۚ إِنَّهٗ كَانَ غَفَّارًا ۝ يُرْسِلِ السَّمَآءَ عَلَيْكُمْ مِّدْرَارًا ۝ وَّيُمْدِدْكُمْ بِأَمْوَالٍ وَّبَنِيْنَ وَيَجْعَلْ لَّكُمْ جَنّٰتٍ وَّيَجْعَلْ لَّكُمْ أَنْهٰرًا ۝

"Saying, 'Ask forgiveness from your Lord, for He is Oft-Forgiving"; (71: 10)

"'He will send rain to you in abundance; (71: 11)

"'Give you increase in wealth and sons; and bestow on you gardens and bestow on you rivers (of flowing water). (71: 12)

It is understood from the above mentioned verses that anyone who makes Dua after seeking pardon (استغفار) from Allah, Allah will certainly accept his Duas. Insha Allah

E—اَلْمُجِيْبُ (The one who responds)

For the assured acceptance of Duas one should call upon Allah by his above mentioned attribute numerous times while making Duas.

FOR FULFILMENT OF ANY NEED:

If a sick person recites it, he will be cured and if a hungary person recites it, he will—Insha Allah—find resources to remove his hunger.

B— فَإِنْ تَوَلَّوْا فَقُلْ حَسْبِيَ اللّٰهُ ۖ لَآ إِلٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَ ۘ عَلَيْهِ تَوَكَّلْتُ وَهُوَ رَبُّ الْعَرْشِ الْعَظِيْمِ ۝

وَالْاَرْضَ فِيْ سِتَّةِ اَيَّامٍ ثُمَّ اسْتَوٰى عَلَى الْعَرْشِ يُدَبِّرُ الْاَمْرَ ۭ مَا مِنْ شَفِيْعٍ
اِلَّا مِنْۢ بَعْدِ اِذْنِهٖ ۭ ذٰلِكُمُ اللّٰهُ رَبُّكُمْ فَاعْبُدُوْهُ ۭ اَفَلَا تَذَكَّرُوْنَ ۝

(10: 2)

Verily your Lord is Allah, who created the heavens and the earth in six Days, then He established Himself on the Throne, regulating and governing all things. A—In the case of a woman:

يٰبَنِيٓ إِسۡرَٰٓءِيلَ ٱذۡكُرُواْ نِعۡمَتِيَ ٱلَّتِيٓ أَنۡعَمۡتُ عَلَيۡكُمۡ وَأَوۡفُواْ بِعَهۡدِيٓ أُوفِ
بِعَهۡدِكُمۡ وَإِيَّٰيَ فَٱرۡهَبُونِ ۝ وَءَامِنُواْ بِمَآ أَنزَلۡتُ مُصَدِّقٗا لِّمَا مَعَكُمۡ وَلَا تَكُونُوٓاْ أَوَّلَ
كَافِرِۭ بِهِۦۖ وَلَا تَشۡتَرُواْ بِـَٔايَٰتِي ثَمَنٗا قَلِيلٗا وَإِيَّٰيَ فَٱتَّقُونِ ۝

وَلَا تَلۡبِسُواْ ٱلۡحَقَّ بِٱلۡبَٰطِلِ وَتَكۡتُمُواْ
ٱلۡحَقَّ وَأَنتُمۡ تَعۡلَمُونَ ۝

O Children of Israel! call to mind the (special) favour which I bestowed upon you, and fulfil your Covenant with Me and I shall fulfil My Covenant with you, and fear none but Me. (2: 40)

And believe in what I reveal, confirming the revelation which is with you, and be not the first to reject Faith therein, nor sell My Signs for a small price; and fear Me, and Me alone. (2: 41)

She will divulge everything she had done.

Note: This is only permissible if an investigation is justified according to Shariah, Otherwise such an investigation will prove detrimental.

B—In case of a man and woman:

وَإِذۡ قَتَلۡتُمۡ نَفۡسٗا فَٱدَّٰرَٰٔتُمۡ فِيهَاۖ وَٱللَّهُ مُخۡرِجٞ مَّا كُنتُمۡ
تَكۡتُمُونَ ۝ فَقُلۡنَا ٱضۡرِبُوهُ بِبَعۡضِهَاۚ كَذَٰلِكَ يُحۡيِ ٱللَّهُ
ٱلۡمَوۡتَىٰ وَيُرِيكُمۡ ءَايَٰتِهِۦ لَعَلَّكُمۡ تَعۡقِلُونَ ۝

Remember, you slew a man and fell into a dispute among yourselves as to the crime, but Allah was to bring forth what you did hide. So We said "Strike the (body) with a piece of the (heifer)." Thus Allah brings the dead to life and shows you His signs:

perchance you may understand. (2: 72-73).

Note: The same should be done as mentioned above.

FOR INSUBORDINATION AND DISOBEDIENCE:

إِنِّي تَوَكَّلْتُ عَلَى اللَّهِ رَبِّي وَرَبِّكُمْ ۚ مَا مِن دَابَّةٍ إِلَّا
هُوَ آخِذٌ بِنَاصِيَتِهَا ۚ إِنَّ رَبِّي عَلَىٰ صِرَاطٍ مُّسْتَقِيمٍ ۝

FOR PROTECTION AGAINST EVIL MEN AND JINN:

A—

اللَّهُ لَا إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَ ۚ الْحَيُّ الْقَيُّومُ ۚ لَا تَأْخُذُهُ سِنَةٌ وَلَا نَوْمٌ ۚ لَّهُ مَا
فِي السَّمَاوَاتِ وَمَا فِي الْأَرْضِ ۚ مَن ذَا الَّذِي يَشْفَعُ عِندَهُ إِلَّا بِإِذْنِهِ ۚ
يَعْلَمُ مَا بَيْنَ أَيْدِيهِمْ وَمَا خَلْفَهُمْ ۖ وَلَا يُحِيطُونَ بِشَيْءٍ مِّنْ عِلْمِهِ إِلَّا
بِمَا شَاءَ ۚ وَسِعَ كُرْسِيُّهُ السَّمَاوَاتِ وَالْأَرْضَ ۖ وَلَا يَئُودُهُ حِفْظُهُمَا ۚ وَ
هُوَ الْعَلِيُّ الْعَظِيمُ ۝

Allah! There is no god but He—the living, the Self-subsisting, Eternal, no slumber can seize Him nor sleep. His are all things in the Heavens and on earth. Who is there can intercede in His presence except as He permits. He knows what (appears to His creatures as) before or after or behind them. Nor shall they compass aught of His knowledge except as He wills. His throne does extend over the heavens and the earth, and He feels no fatigue in guarding and preserving them, For He is the most High, The Supreme (in Glory). (2: 255)

Significance: If anyone recites Aayatul Kursi once after every prayer, Allah will protect him against the mischief of evil men and Jinn. In fact, according to a Hadith, Satan acknowledged his inability to harm a person who recites Aayatul Kursi continuously.

B—If the last two Surah of the Holy Quraan, viz Suratul-Falaq and Suratul-Naas are recited for protection against sickness, sorcery (Jaadoo), Nazar etc. one should find it very beneficial. A Taweez of these two Surahs in just as beneficial. Reciting them and blowing on someone is also very effective. If anyone recites them before going to his bed, he will afford security and protection against all calamities.

C—Suratul Ikhlaas—the third last Surah of The Holy Qur'an is also very beneficial against all evil men, Jinn, harmful animals, insects and creatures if written on the pellicle (which is called) Jhilli in Urdu language) of a rabbit and worn as Taaweez.

D—A certain saint reports that once upon a time he saw a wolf who was playing with a goat in the wild. He was bewildered by what he saw. Out of curiosity he wanted to find out the fact and when he drew closer the wolf disappeared. On close scrutiny he saw that there was a Taaweez hanging from the goat's neck. He opened the Taaweez and found the following verses written in it.

وَلَا يَئُودُهُ حِفْظُهُمَا ۚ وَهُوَ الْعَلِيُّ الْعَظِيمُ ۝
فَاللَّهُ خَيْرٌ حَافِظًا ۖ وَهُوَ أَرْحَمُ الرَّاحِمِينَ ۝
وَحِفْظًا مِّن كُلِّ شَيْطَانٍ مَّارِدٍ ۝
وَحَفِظْنَاهَا مِن كُلِّ شَيْطَانٍ رَّجِيمٍ ۝
وَحِفْظًا ۚ ذَٰلِكَ تَقْدِيرُ الْعَزِيزِ الْعَلِيمِ ۝
إِن كُلُّ نَفْسٍ لَّمَّا عَلَيْهَا حَافِظٌ ۝

إِنَّ بَطْشَ رَبِّكَ لَشَدِيدٌ ۝ إِنَّهُ هُوَ يُبْدِئُ وَيُعِيدُ ۝ وَهُوَ الْغَفُورُ الْوَدُودُ ۝
ذُو الْعَرْشِ الْمَجِيدُ ۝ فَعَّالٌ لِّمَا يُرِيدُ ۝ هَلْ أَتَاكَ حَدِيثُ الْجُنُودِ ۝
فِرْعَوْنَ وَثَمُودَ ۝ بَلِ الَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا فِي تَكْذِيبٍ ۝ وَاللَّهُ مِن وَرَائِهِم
مُّحِيطٌ ۝ بَلْ هُوَ قُرْآنٌ مَّجِيدٌ ۝ فِي لَوْحٍ مَّحْفُوظٍ ۝

And He feels no fatigue in guarding and preserving them: for He is the Most High, the Supreme (in glory). (2: 255)

But Allah is the best to take care (of him), and He is the Most Merciful of those who show mercy!" (12: 64)

(For beauty) and for guard against all obstinate rebellious Satans. (37: 7)

And (moreover) We have guarded them from every accursed Satan. (15: 17)

With guard. Such is the Decree of (Him) the Exalted in Might, Full of knowledge. (41: 12)

There is no soul but has a protector over it. (86: 4)

Truly strong is the Grip of your Lord. It is He Who creates from the very beginning, and He can restore (life). And He is the Oft-Forgiving, full of loving-kindness, Lord of the Throne, full of all glory, Doer (without let) of all that He intends. Has the story reached you, of the Forces.—Of Pharaoh and the Thamûd? And yet the Unbelievers (persist) in rejecting (the Truth)! But Allah does encompass them from behind! No, this is a Glorious Qur'ãn, (Inscribed) in a Tablet Preserved! (85: 12-22)

No injury or misfortune will come to a person who keeps a written copy of the above mentioned verses on him. (For translation refer to the Holy Qur'an).

CURE FROM SORCERY (JAADOO):

فَلَمَّا أَلْقَوْا قَالَ مُوسَىٰ مَا جِئْتُم بِهِ السِّحْرُ إِنَّ اللَّهَ
سَيُبْطِلُهُ إِنَّ اللَّهَ لَا يُصْلِحُ عَمَلَ الْمُفْسِدِينَ ۝ وَيُحِقُّ اللَّهُ
الْحَقَّ بِكَلِمَاتِهِ وَلَوْ كَرِهَ الْمُجْرِمُونَ ۝

When they had had their throw, Moses said: "What you have brought is sorcery: Allah will surely make it of no effect: for Allah Prospers not the work of those who make mischief. (10: 81)

"And Allah by His Words does prove and establish the Truth, however much the Sinners may hate it!" (10: 82)

Significance: The above verse is most effective and beneficial in curing sorcery. If written and the affected person made to wear it around his neck as a Taaweez, he will soon be cured of the sorcery. Alternatively if it is written on a plate with saffron water and made the affected person to drink it, he will—Insha Allah—soon be cured.

CURE AND PREVENTION FROM JAADOO, NAZAR AND POISONING:

يَا بَنِي آدَمَ خُذُوا زِينَتَكُمْ عِندَ كُلِّ مَسْجِدٍ وَكُلُوا وَاشْرَبُوا وَلَا تُسْرِفُوا ۚ
إِنَّهُ لَا يُحِبُّ الْمُسْرِفِينَ ۝ قُلْ مَنْ حَرَّمَ زِينَةَ اللَّهِ الَّتِي أَخْرَجَ لِعِبَادِهِ وَ
الطَّيِّبَاتِ مِنَ الرِّزْقِ ۚ قُلْ هِيَ لِلَّذِينَ آمَنُوا فِي الْحَيَاةِ الدُّنْيَا خَالِصَةً
يَوْمَ الْقِيَامَةِ ۚ كَذَٰلِكَ نُفَصِّلُ الْآيَاتِ لِقَوْمٍ يَعْلَمُونَ ۝ قُلْ إِنَّمَا حَرَّمَ رَبِّيَ
الْفَوَاحِشَ مَا ظَهَرَ مِنْهَا وَمَا بَطَنَ وَالْإِثْمَ وَالْبَغْيَ بِغَيْرِ الْحَقِّ وَأَن
تُشْرِكُوا بِاللَّهِ مَا لَمْ يُنَزِّلْ بِهِ سُلْطَانًا وَأَن تَقُولُوا عَلَى اللَّهِ مَا لَا تَعْلَمُونَ ۝

O Children of Adam! wear your beautiful apparel at every time and place of prayer: eat and drink but waste not by excess, for Allah loves not the wasters. (7: 31)

Say: Who has forbidden the beautiful (gifts) of Allah, which He has produced for His servants, and the things, clean and pure, (which He has provided) for sustenance? say: They are, in the life of this world, for those who believe, (and) purely for them on the Day of Judgment. Thus do We explain the Signs in detail for those who know. (7: 32)

Say: The things that my Lord has indeed forbidden are: indecent deeds, whether open or secret; sins and trespasses against truth or reason; assigning of partners to Allah, for which He has given no authority; and saying things about Allah of which you have no knowledge. (7: 33)

Write the above verses on a plate using either saffron or juice aquired from green grapes. After washing the plate with some melted hail stones let the patient take a bath with such water. He will—Insha Allah—soon be cured. The water could be added to some food and the patient made to eat if for prevention and protection against Jaadoo, nazar and poisoning.

SUBJUGATION OF MEN AND JINN:

وَإِذْ قَالَ رَبُّكَ لِلْمَلٰٓئِكَةِ إِنِّي جَاعِلٌ فِي الْأَرْضِ خَلِيفَةً ۖ قَالُوٓا أَتَجْعَلُ فِيهَا مَن
يُفْسِدُ فِيهَا وَيَسْفِكُ الدِّمَآءَ ۖ وَنَحْنُ نُسَبِّحُ بِحَمْدِكَ وَنُقَدِّسُ لَكَ ۖ قَالَ إِنِّيٓ أَعْلَمُ مَا
لَا تَعْلَمُونَ ۝ وَعَلَّمَ آدَمَ الْأَسْمَآءَ كُلَّهَا ثُمَّ عَرَضَهُمْ عَلَى الْمَلٰٓئِكَةِ فَقَالَ أَنۢبِـُٔونِي
بِأَسْمَآءِ هٰٓؤُلَآءِ إِن كُنتُمْ صَٰدِقِينَ ۝ قَالُوا سُبْحَٰنَكَ لَا عِلْمَ لَنَآ إِلَّا مَا عَلَّمْتَنَا ۖ إِنَّكَ
أَنتَ الْعَلِيمُ الْحَكِيمُ ۝

Behold, your Lord said to the angels: "I will create a vicegerent on earth." They said: "Will you place therein one who will make mischief therein and shed blood-whilst we do celebrate your praises and glorify your holy (name)?" He said: "I know what you know not". (2: 30)

And He taught Adam the names of all things; then He placed them before the angels, and said: "Tell Me the names of these if you are right." (2: 31)

They said: "Glory to you: of knowledge we have none, save what you have taught us: in truth it is you who are perfect in knowledge and wisdom." (2: 32)

Significance: The above mentioned verses are very effective and beneficial for subduing men and jinn.

Requirements: A broad-nibbed pen; a glass plate; a little saffron water or rose water; about 7 cups of water acquired from hail or frost; and or agar sticks for junigation; a house with no occupants.

What to do: When the first of any Islamic month falls on a Thursday, one should fast on that day and Iftari time break the fast with bread or Roti (made of barley), sugar and any greens. After Isha prayer, he should go to bed as one normally does. When half of the night has lapsed, he should wake up, perform Wudhu, perform 2 Rakaat Salaah and remain seated on the Musallah facing the Qiblah. Recite the above verses 33 times, then write them once on the glass plate using either rose water or saffron diluted in a little water. Wash the plate with one cup of water acquired from hail stones or frost. This water should then be consumed. Then he should go to his bed again. This act should be repeated for 7 consecutive days. On the final day, the above verses should be recited 70 times and the act must be performed which has no occupants at all. Also the house should be fermigated without sticks. After this, he should go to his bed without changing the clothes. His object will—Insha Allah—be realised.

Note: This act (عمل) should not be done for the sake of curiosity or fun. Otherwise, it may prove very deterimental. Only people with sound health—physically and mentally—should perform this act if they are genuine in their pursuit.

TO REMOVE DOUBT AND SUPERSTITIONS:

وَإِمَّا يَنزَغَنَّكَ مِنَ الشَّيْطَٰنِ نَزْغٌ فَاسْتَعِذْ بِاللَّهِ ۖ إِنَّهُۥ سَمِيعٌ عَلِيمٌ ۝ إِنَّ
الَّذِينَ اتَّقَوْا إِذَا مَسَّهُمْ طَٰٓئِفٌ مِّنَ الشَّيْطَٰنِ تَذَكَّرُوا
فَإِذَا هُم مُّبْصِرُونَ ۝

If a suggestion from Satan assail your (mind), seek refuge with Allah, for He hears and knows (all things). Those who fear Allah, when a thought of evil from Satan assaults them, bring Allah to remembrance, when lo! they see (aright)! (7: 200-201)

A person who is a victim of the promptings of Satan, should—write the above verses once on each of 7 small pieces of paper on any friday at sunrise. It should be written with ink made of saffron and rose water. Each day, one paper should be swallowed followed by a sip of water. He will—Insha Allah—soon find relief. The same act (عمل) is very effective in removing evil thoughts, superstitions, suspicions and trumbling of the heart.

FOR REMOVING FEAR:

فَاللّٰهُ خَيْرٌ حٰفِظًا ۖ وَّهُوَ اَرْحَمُ الرّٰحِمِيْنَ ۝

But Allah is the best to take care (of him), and He is the Most Merciful of those who show mercy!" (12: 64)

Significance: Anyone who is terrified of his enemy or fears the approach of a calamity, should recite the above verse excessively. His fears will disappear and any possible calamity will be averted—Insha Allah.

TO REMOVE FEAR, FRIGHT AND ALL FORMS OF PEACE-SHATTERING THOUGHTS:

وَاِذَا قَرَاْتَ الْقُرْاٰنَ جَعَلْنَا بَيْنَكَ وَبَيْنَ الَّذِيْنَ لَا يُؤْمِنُوْنَ بِالْاٰخِرَةِ حِجَابًا
مَّسْتُوْرًا ۙ۝ وَّ جَعَلْنَا عَلٰى قُلُوْبِهِمْ اَكِنَّةً اَنْ يَّفْقَهُوْهُ وَفِيْٓ اٰذَانِهِمْ وَقْرًا ۭ
وَاِذَا ذَكَرْتَ رَبَّكَ فِي الْقُرْاٰنِ وَحْدَهٗ وَلَّوْا عَلٰٓى اَدْبَارِهِمْ نُفُوْرًا ۝

When you do recite the Qur'an, We put between you and those who believe not in the Hereafter, a veil invisible: and We put coverings over their hearts (and minds) Lest they should understand the Qur'an, and deafness into their ears; when you do commemorate your Lord—and Him alone—in the Qur'an, they turn on their backs, fleeing (from the truth). (17: 45-46)

Significance: The above verse should be recited and blown on any person who is frightened, shocked or terrified. These verses are very effective in removing horrifying thoughts as well.

FOR SECURITY AGAINST ALL HARMS:

A— اَللّٰهُ رَبُّنَا وَرَبُّكُمْ ۭ لَنَآ اَعْمَالُنَا وَلَكُمْ اَعْمَالُكُمْ ۭ
لَا حُجَّةَ بَيْنَنَا وَبَيْنَكُمْ ۭ اَللّٰهُ يَجْمَعُ بَيْنَنَا ۚ

Allah is our Lord and your Lord! For us (is the responsibility for) our deeds, and for you for your deeds. There is no contention between us and you. Allah will bring us together. (42: 15)

Significance: When one fears any injury from any person or animal, the above mentioned verse should be recited and blown in the direction of such a person or animal. The person doing this will be protected against any harm or injury—-Insha Allah.

B—Hazrat Ka'ab bin Ahbaar is reported to have said that a person who recites the following 7 verses everyday will have no reason to fear any type of harm, whatsoever.

قُلْ لَّنْ يُّصِيْبَنَآ اِلَّا مَا كَتَبَ اللّٰهُ لَنَا ۚ هُوَ مَوْلٰىنَا ۚ وَعَلَى اللّٰهِ

وَاِنْ يَّمْسَسْكَ اللّٰهُ بِضُرٍّ فَلَا كَاشِفَ لَهٗٓ اِلَّا هُوَ ۚ وَاِنْ يُّرِدْكَ بِخَيْرٍ فَلَا رَاۗدَّ
لِفَضْلِهٖ ۭ يُصِيْبُ بِهٖ مَنْ يَّشَاۗءُ مِنْ عِبَادِهٖ ۭ وَهُوَ الْغَفُوْرُ الرَّحِيْمُ ۝
وَمَا مِنْ دَاۗبَّةٍ فِي الْاَرْضِ اِلَّا عَلَى اللّٰهِ رِزْقُهَا وَيَعْلَمُ مُسْتَقَرَّهَا وَمُسْتَوْدَعَهَا ۭ
كُلٌّ فِيْ كِتٰبٍ مُّبِيْنٍ ۝

إِنِّي تَوَكَّلْتُ عَلَى اللَّهِ رَبِّي وَرَبِّكُمْ ۚ مَا مِن دَابَّةٍ إِلَّا هُوَ آخِذٌ بِنَاصِيَتِهَا ۚ
إِنَّ رَبِّي عَلَىٰ صِرَاطٍ مُّسْتَقِيمٍ ﴿٥٦﴾
وَكَأَيِّن مِّن دَابَّةٍ لَّا تَحْمِلُ رِزْقَهَا ۖ اللَّهُ يَرْزُقُهَا وَإِيَّاكُمْ ۖ وَهُوَ السَّمِيعُ الْعَلِيمُ ﴿٦٠﴾

مَّا يَفْتَحِ اللَّهُ لِلنَّاسِ مِن رَّحْمَةٍ فَلَا مُمْسِكَ لَهَا ۖ وَمَا يُمْسِكْ ۙ فَلَا مُرْسِلَ
لَهُ مِن بَعْدِهِ ۚ وَهُوَ الْعَزِيزُ الْحَكِيمُ ﴿٢﴾
وَلَئِن سَأَلْتَهُم مَّنْ خَلَقَ السَّمَاوَاتِ وَالْأَرْضَ لَيَقُولُنَّ اللَّهُ ۚ قُلْ أَفَرَأَيْتُم مَّا تَدْعُونَ
مِن دُونِ اللَّهِ إِنْ أَرَادَنِيَ اللَّهُ بِضُرٍّ هَلْ هُنَّ كَاشِفَاتُ ضُرِّهِ أَوْ أَرَادَنِي بِرَحْمَةٍ
هَلْ هُنَّ مُمْسِكَاتُ رَحْمَتِهِ ۚ قُلْ حَسْبِيَ اللَّهُ ۖ عَلَيْهِ يَتَوَكَّلُ الْمُتَوَكِّلُونَ

Say: "Nothing will happen to us except what Allah has decreed for us: He is our Protector": and on Allah let the Believers put their trust. (9: 51)

If Allah do touch you with hurt, there is none can remove it but He: if He do design some benefit for you, there is none can keep back His favour: He causes it to reach whomsoever of His servants He pleases. And He is the Oft-Forgiving, Most Merciful. (10: 107)

There is no moving creature on earth but its sustenance depends on Allah: He knows its resting place and its temporary deposit: all is in a clear Record. (11: 6)

"I put my trust in Allah, my Lord and your Lord! There is not a moving creature, but He has grasp of its forelock. Verily, it is my Lord that is on a straight Path." (11: 56)

How many are the creatures that carry not their own sustenance? It is Allah Who feeds (both) them and you: for He hears and knows (all things). (29: 60)

What Allah out of His Mercy does bestow on mankind none can withhold: what He does withhold, none can grant, apart from Him: and He is the Exalted in Power, Full of Wisdom. (35: 2)

If indeed you ask them who it is that created the heavens and the earth, they would be sure to say, "Allah". Say: "See you then? The things that you invoke besides Allah,—can they, if Allah wills some affliction for me, remove His affliction or if He wills some Mercy for me, can they keep back His Mercy" Say: "Sufficient is Allah for me! In Him trust those who put their trust." (39: 38)

C—It is reported from Ibnul-Kalbi that a man, whose life had been threatened, consulted an Alim, who advised him to recite Surah Yaseen prior to leaving his room. He did as he was directed. As a result his enemy failed to even notice him.

FOR CURING SOMEONE WHO IS UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF AN EVIL SPIRIT:

A. أَفَحَسِبْتُمْ أَنَّمَا خَلَقْنَاكُمْ عَبَثًا وَأَنَّكُمْ إِلَيْنَا لَا تُرْجَعُونَ ﴿١١٥﴾ فَتَعَالَى اللَّهُ الْمَلِكُ
الْحَقُّ ۖ لَا إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَ رَبُّ الْعَرْشِ الْكَرِيمِ ﴿١١٦﴾ وَمَن يَدْعُ مَعَ اللَّهِ
إِلَٰهًا آخَرَ لَا بُرْهَانَ لَهُ بِهِ ۙ فَإِنَّمَا حِسَابُهُ عِندَ رَبِّهِ ۚ
إِنَّهُ لَا يُفْلِحُ الْكَافِرُونَ ﴿١١٧﴾ وَقُل رَّبِّ اغْفِرْ وَارْحَمْ وَأَنتَ خَيْرُ الرَّاحِمِينَ ﴿١١٨﴾

"Did you then think that We had created you in jest, and that you Would not be brought back to Us (for account)?" (23: 115)

Therefore exalted be Allah, the King, the Reality: there is no god but He, the Lord of the Throne of Honour! (23: 116)

If anyone invokes, besides Allah, any other god; he has no authority thereof; and his reckoning will be only with his Lord! and verily the Unbelievers shall not prosper. (23: 117)

So say; "O my lord! grant you forgiveness and mercy! for you are the Best of those who show mercy!" (23: 118)

Significance: To cure someone who is under the influence of an evil spirit (Aaseb), one should recite the above verses thrice and blow in a glass of water and sprinkle such water on the patients face. Alternatively, they should be recited thrice next to his ears. Insha Allah, relief will be noticed instantaneously.

B—The entire Surah Jinn should be written and the afflicted person be made to wear it as Taaweez on his arm. Or the same Surah could be recited once and blown on him. Immediate relief will be found—Insha Allah.

Allah! There is no god but He, the Living, the Self-subsisting, Supporter of all, no slumber can seize Him nor sleep. His are all things in there the heavens and on earth. Who is there you can intercede in His presence except as He permits? He knows what (appears to His creatures as) Before or After or Behind them. Nor shall they compass aught of His knowledge except as He will. His Throne does extend over the heavens and the earth, and He feels no fatigue in guarding and preserving them: for He is the Most High, the Supreme (in glory). (2: 255)

Let there be no compulsion in religion: Truth stands out clear from Error: whoever rejects Tagut and believes in Allah has grasped the most trustworthy hand-hold, that never breaks. And Allah hears and knows all things. (2: 256)

Allah is the Protector of those who have faith: from the depths of darkness He leads them forth into light. Of those who reject faith the patrons are the Evil ones from light they will lead them forth into the depths of darkness. They will be Companions of the Fire, to dwell therein (for ever). (2: 257)

To Allah belongs all that is in the heavens and on earth. Whether you show what is in your minds or conceal it, Allah calls you to account for it. He forgives whom He pleases, and punishes whom He pleases. For Allah has power over all things. (2: 284)

The Messenger believes in what has been revealed to him from his Lord, as do the men of faith, each one (of them) believes in Allah, His angels, His books, and His Messengers. "We make no distinction (they say) between one and another of his Messengers." And they say: "We hear, and we obey: (we seek) Your forgiveness, our Lord, and to you is the end of all journeys." (2: 285)

On no soul does Allah place a burden greater than it can bear.

It gets every good that it earns, and it suffers every ill that it earns. (Pray:) "Our Lord! condemn us not if we forget or fall into error; our Lord! lay not on us a burden like that which you did lay on those before us; our Lord! lay not on us a burden greater than we have strength to bear. Blot out our sins, and grant us forgiveness, Have mercy on us. You are protector; grant us victory over the unbelievers." (2: 286)

Your Guardian Lord is Allah, Who created the heavens and the earth in six Days, then He settled Himself on the Throne: He draws the night as a veil, over the day, each seeking the other in rapid succession: and the sun, the moon, and the stars, (all) are subserviant by His Command. Verily, His are the creation and the Command blessed be Allah, the Cherisher and Sustainer of the Worlds! (7: 54)

Call on your Lord with humility and in private: for Allah loves not those who trespass beyond bounds. (7: 55)

Do not mischief on the earth, after it has been set in order, but call on Him with fear and longing (in your hearts): for the Mercy of Allah is (always) near to those who do good. (7: 56)

It is He Who sends the Winds like heralds of glad tidings, going before His Mercy: when they have carried the heavy-laden clouds. We drive them to a land that is dead, make rain to descend thereon, and produce every kind of harvest therewith: thus shall We raise up the dead: perchance you may remember. (7: 57)

Say: "Call upon Allah, or call upon Rahman: by whatever name you call upon Him, (it is well): for to Him belong the Most Beautiful Names. Neither speak your Prayer aloud, nor speak it in a low tone, but seek a middle course between." (17: 110)

Say: "Praise be to Allah, Who begets no son, and has no partner in (His) dominion: nor (needs) He any to protect Him from humiliation: yes, magnify Him for His greatness and glory!" (17: 111)

By those who range themselves in ranks, (37: 1)

Those who so are strong in repelling (evil), (37: 2)

Those who thus proclaim the Message (of Allah)! (37: 3)

Verily, verily, your God is One! (37: 4)

Lord of the heavens and of the earth, and all between them, and Lord of every point at the rising of the sun! (37: 5)

We have indeed decked the lower heaven with beauty (in) the stars; (37: 6)

(For beauty) and for guard against all obstinate rebellious Satans. (37: 7)

(So) they should not listen their ears in the direction of the Exalted Assembly and they are cast away from every side, (37: 8)

Repulsed. And for them is a perpetual chastisement, (37: 9)

Except such as snatch away something by stealth, and they are pursued by a flaming Fire, of piercing brightness. (37: 10)

Just ask their opinion: are they the more difficult to create, or the (other) beings We have created? Them have We created out of a sticky clay! (37: 11)

O you assembly of Jinns and men! If it be you can pass beyond the zones of the heavens and the earth, pass you! Not without authority shall you be able to pass! (55: 33)

Then which of the favours of your Lord will you deny? (55: 34)

On you will be sent (O you evil ones twain!) a flame of fire (to burn) and a (flash of) molten brass no defence will you have: (55: 35)

Then which of the favours of your Lord will you deny? (55: 36)

Had We sent down this Qur'ãn on a mountain, verily, you would have seen it humble itself and cleave asunder for fear of Allah. Such are the similitudes which We propound to men, that they may reflect. (59: 21)

Allah is He, than Whom there is no other god;—Who knows

(all things) both secret and open; He, Most Gracious, Most Merciful. (59: 22)

Allah is He, than Whom there is no other god;-the Sovereign, the Holy One, the Source of Peace (and Perfection), the Guardian of Faith, the Preserver of Safety, the Exalted in Might, the Irresistible, the justly Proud glory to Allah! (High is He) above the partners they attribute to Him. (59: 23)

He is Allah, the Creator the Originator, the Fashioner. To Him belong the Most Beautiful Names: whatever is in the heavens and on earth, does declare His Praises and Glory: and He is the Exalted in Might, the Wise. (59: 24)

Say: It has been revealed to me that a company of Jinns listened (to the Qur'ãn). They said, "We have really heard a wonderful Recital! (72: 1)

"It gives guidance to the Right, and we have believed therein: we shall not join (in worship) any (gods) with our Lord, (72: 2)

"And exalted is the Majesty of our Lord: He has taken neither a wife nor a son. (72: 3)

IMAAM IBNE SEEREEN R.A. AND THE ROBBERS:

Ibne Seereen RA reports the following account: Once upon a time we were on a journey. We approached a river and decided to camp there. Some local people made efforts to dissuade us from camping at that place, as the highway robbery was a common thing of the day. All my companions decided to move on from that place to another and stressed at me to do the same. But I did not agree with them as I was not afraid on account of reciting the Aayaatul Hirs every day. When the night fell, I became aware of some armedmen becoming near and near to me, but they fail to reach me. In the morning, I saw a man on a horesback. He told me that they tried their best to approach me more than hundred times but in vain, because an obstacle in the form of an iron curtain stood in their way. I told them: "It was due to the blessing of the 33 verses." Hearing this, they repented and pledged not to repeat that crime again in future.

C—For someone who is under the influence of Aaseb or Jinn, recite Surah Fateha, Aayatul Kursi and the first 5 verses of Surah Jinn, then below on clean water and sprinkle it on the afflicted person's face. If the house is also suspected of any influence of Aaseb and Jinn, the same water could be sprinkled on the every nook and corner of the house.

TO DRIVE OUT A JINN FROM A HOUSE:

It has been reported from Ibne Qutaiba RA that a certain trader went to do some buying and selling of dates. When he reached Basarah, he begain to look for a decent accomodation but could not. After much seeking, he came across a vacant house where there were spider's webs all around. He inquired the people that why the house was empty. He was informed that the house was haunted by a Jinn. When he went to the owner of the house, he warned him saying, "Why do you want to jeopardize your life. A powerful Jinn has been living there for a longtime and whosoever stayed in that house did not return alive." The trader insisted saying "Allah is my helper. Let me have the house, please." However, the owner had not choice but to accede to his plea. Hence, the story is being related by the trader, he says:

"I stayed in the house. Late in the night, I found my eyes suddenly open and saw a dark human form approaching me. Its eyes bloodshot as if bright flames were leaping from them. At once, I began to recite Aayatul-Kursi. The Jinn also began to recite the same verses which I recited (in an attempt to counter attack) until I recited O وَلَا يَئُودُهُ حِفْظُهُمَا ۚ وَهُوَ الْعَلِيُّ الْعَظِيمُ He could not utter this last sentence and I continued uttering the same repeatedly untill I saw the form disappearing. It seemed that if no trace of it ever existed. I spent the rest of the night in total comfort and ease. In the morning, I minutely secrutinised the place where the Jinn was seen but I did not find anything except a small heap of ashes of its remains. Then from nowhere a voice was heard as saying, "you have burnt a powerful Jinn to ashes." I asked, "what made him to burn?" The voice replied: "The verse

وَلَا يَئُوْدُهٗ حِفْظُهُمَا ۚ وَهُوَ الْعَلِيُّ الْعَظِيْمُ ۝

And He feels no fatigue in guarding and preserving them; for He is the Most High, the Supreme (in Glory) (2: 255)

IMAAM AUZA'I R.A. AND THE EVIL JINN:

Imaan Auza'i R.A. is reported to have said that once an evil Jinn confronted him suddenly, frightening him tremendously. He immediately recited:

اَعُوْذُ بِاللّٰهِ مِنَ الشَّيْطَانِ الرَّجِيْمِ

"I seek Allah's refuge from the devil accursed." Hearing this, the Jinn escaped, crying, "You have sought refuge from the great one! You have sought refuge from the great one!

FOR KEEPING ENEMIES OUT BAY OR DESTROY THEM:

وَاَلْقَيْنَا بَيْنَهُمُ الْعَدَاوَةَ وَالْبَغْضَآءَ اِلٰى يَوْمِ الْقِيٰمَةِ ۭ

And blasphemy, Amongst them We have placed enmity and hatred till the Day of Judgment. (5: 64)

Significance: Anyone who desires to separate two persons by creating enmity between them, then he should write the above verse on Bhoj Pattar and sketch the following naqshah under the Aayah. (Bhoj Pattar is the leaf and bark of the birch tree, used for writing on.)

Under the Naqshah, write the following: Let separation come about between so-and-so. (In place of so-and-so, write the names of the two persons.)

Thereafter, make a Taaweez of this and burn it between two old graves. This is certain to creat enmity between the two, thus separating them.

Warning: A person may resort to the above only if he is justified according to Islamic and social laws. For example, in the case of two persons working hand in hand, creating and spreading mischief like drug-peddling etc. In all these cases justification is found. On the contrary if a person resorts to the said act (عمل) without justification, he will become liable for severe punishment according to Shariat.

TO OVERCOME ONE'S OPPONENTS IN A DEBATE:

يٰٓاَيُّهَا النَّاسُ قَدْ جَآءَكُمْ بُرْهَانٌ مِّنْ رَّبِّكُمْ وَاَنْزَلْنَآ اِلَيْكُمْ نُوْرًا مُّبِيْنًا ۝ فَاَمَّا الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْا بِاللّٰهِ وَاعْتَصَمُوْا بِهٖ فَسَيُدْخِلُهُمْ فِيْ رَحْمَةٍ مِّنْهُ وَفَضْلٍ ۙ وَّيَهْدِيْهِمْ اِلَيْهِ صِرَاطًا مُّسْتَقِيْمًا ۝

O mankind: Verily there has come to you a convincing proof from your Lord: For we have sent unto you a light (that is) manifest. Then those who believe in Allah and hold fast to Him—Soon will He admit them to mercy and Grace from Himself and Guide them to Himself by a straight way. (4: 174-175)

To overcome an enemy in an argument, one should fast on any Sunday and then write the above verse on a piece of leather and tie it on the arm as a Taaweez.

FOR SAFETY FOR ONE'S LIFE:

اِنَّا نَحْنُ نَزَّلْنَا الذِّكْرَ وَاِنَّا لَهٗ لَحٰفِظُوْنَ ۝

We have, without doubt, sent down the Message; and We will assuredly guard it (from corruption). (15: 9)

To ensure safety for a person's life, property and well-being, one should write the above verse on a tiny piece of silver-plated sheet and recite it 40 times on the eve of Jumu'ah (i.e. the night falling between Thursday and Friday) and blow on the said sheet. Then one should fold the sheet so that it fits beneath the gem of a silver ring and wear it. It will ensure safety—through the Qudrat and power of Allah—The Almighty.

TO OVERCOME AFOE IN ANY CONTEST OR BATTLE:

A—

الَّذِيْنَ يُنْفِقُوْنَ فِي السَّرَّآءِ وَ الضَّرَّآءِ وَالْكٰظِمِيْنَ الْغَيْظَ
وَالْعَافِيْنَ عَنِ النَّاسِ ؕ وَاللّٰهُ يُحِبُّ الْمُحْسِنِيْنَ ۚ وَ الَّذِيْنَ اِذَا فَعَلُوْا
فَاحِشَةً اَوْ ظَلَمُوْٓا اَنْفُسَهُمْ ذَكَرُوا اللّٰهَ فَاسْتَغْفَرُوْا لِذُنُوْبِهِمْ ۫
وَمَنْ يَّغْفِرُ الذُّنُوْبَ اِلَّا اللّٰهُ ۫ وَلَمْ يُصِرُّوْا عَلٰى مَا فَعَلُوْا وَهُمْ
يَعْلَمُوْنَ ۝ اُولٰٓئِكَ جَزَآؤُهُمْ مَّغْفِرَةٌ مِّنْ رَّبِّهِمْ وَجَنّٰتٌ تَجْرِيْ مِنْ
تَحْتِهَا الْاَنْهٰرُ خٰلِدِيْنَ فِيْهَا ؕ وَنِعْمَ اَجْرُ الْعٰمِلِيْنَ ۚ

Those who spend (freely), whether in prosperity, or in adversity; who restrain anger, and pardon (all) men; for Allah loves those who do good: (3: 134)

And those who, having done an act of indecency or wronged their own souls. Remember Allah and ask for forgiveness for their sins; and who can forgive sins except Allah? and are never obstinate in persisting knowingly in (the wrong) they have done. (3: 135)

For such the reward is forgiveness from their Lord, and Gardens with rivers flowing underneath, an eternal dwelling: how excellent a recompense for those who work (and strive)! (3: 136)

Significance: The above mentioned verses are very effective and beneficial in attaining peace of mind and heart; for swiftness in retaliating against one's foe; for safety against the mischief of an agressor—be he despotic ruler or an arrogant and ignorant enemy. These verses should be written on a piece of paper on the ave of Jumu'ah and worn as a Taaweez. No harm will be caused to the wearer even if he finds himself in the midst of his enemies—Insha Allah.

B—

اِنَّا جَعَلْنَا فِيْٓ اَعْنَاقِهِمْ اَغْلٰلًا فَهِيَ اِلَى الْاَذْقَانِ فَهُمْ مُّقْمَحُوْنَ ۝ وَجَعَلْنَا مِنْۢ
بَيْنِ اَيْدِيْهِمْ سَدًّا وَّمِنْ خَلْفِهِمْ سَدًّا فَاَغْشَيْنٰهُمْ فَهُمْ لَا يُبْصِرُوْنَ ۝

We have put yokes round their necks right up to their chins, So that their heads are forced up (and they can not see). And we have put a bar infront of them and a bar behind them and further, we have covered them up; So that they can not see. (36: 8-9)

If the above two verses are written on the shield before launching an attack on the enemies of Islam, victory is—Insha Allah—certain to be gained.

C—The recitation of Suratul-Feel will ensure victory for its recitors when fighting the enemies.

D—If Aayatul Kursi is recited 313 times before a battle, victory is a certainty by the Grace of Almighty.

E— سَيُهْزَمُ الْجَمْعُ وَيُوَلُّوْنَ الدُّبُرَ ۝

Soon will their multitude be put to flight, and they will show their backs. (54: 45)

Reciting the above verse and blowing on soil, then throwing such soil in the direction of the enemies will ensure defeat of the enemies.

F—يَا مُنتَقِم (The Avenger)

A person who is unable to take revenge against a foe or enemy, should read the above name of Allah excessively. Allah Ta'aala will take revenge on his behalf.

G—

وَمَا رَمَيْتَ إِذْ رَمَيْتَ وَلَٰكِنَّ اللَّهَ رَمَىٰ ۚ وَلِيُبْلِيَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ مِنْهُ بَلَاءً

مِثْقَالَ ذَرَّةٍ شَرًّا يَرَهُ ۝

When you threw (a handful of dust), it was not your act, but Allah's: in order that He might confer on the Believers a gracious benefit from Himself: for Allah is He Who hears and knows (all things). (8: 17)

When the Earth is shaken to her (utmost) convulsion. And the Earth throws up her burdens (from within). And man cries (distressed); 'What is the matter with her?,—On that Day will she declare her tidings. For that your Lord will have given her inspiration. On that Day will men proceed in groups sorted out, to be shown the Deeds that they (had done). Then shall anyone who has done an atom's weight of good, see it! And anyone who has done an atom's weight of evil, shall see it. (99: 1-8)

Ibnul-Kalbi reports that a very reliable person once told him about muslims of a certain town besieged by the Kuffar. A pious person among the muslims recited the above verses and blew on a handful of soil and had the soil scattered in the camping grounds of the enemy. As a result the enemies began fighting among themselves and dispersed.

FOR BARAKAH IN ONE'S CROPS:

وَبَشِّرِ الَّذِينَ آمَنُوا وَعَمِلُوا الصَّالِحَاتِ أَنَّ لَهُمْ جَنَّاتٍ تَجْرِي مِن
تَحْتِهَا الْأَنْهَارُ ۖ كُلَّمَا رُزِقُوا مِنْهَا مِن ثَمَرَةٍ رِّزْقًا ۙ قَالُوا
هَٰذَا الَّذِي رُزِقْنَا مِن قَبْلُ ۖ وَأُتُوا بِهِ مُتَشَابِهًا ۖ وَلَهُمْ فِيهَا
أَزْوَاجٌ مُّطَهَّرَةٌ ۖ وَهُمْ فِيهَا خَالِدُونَ ۝

But give glad tidings to those who believe and work righteousness, that their portion is Gardens, beneath which rivers flow. Every time they are fed with fruits there from, they say: "Why, this is what we were fed with before," for they are given things in similitude; and they have therein spouses purified; and they abide therein (for ever). (2: 25)

Significance: If a tree does not produce fruit or produces very little fruit, to make such a tree produce more fruit, one should fast on thursday and break the fast with gourd (doodhi). After Maghrib Salaah, he should write the above verses on paper and without speaking to anyone proceed to orchard and hang the paper on any tree in the middle of the orchard. If the tree on which the Taaweez is hang has any fruit, it should be eaten. If not, then from any other tree and then 3 sips of water should be taken. Barakah will be noticed very soon—Insha Allah.

A—

إِنَّ اللَّهَ يُمْسِكُ السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْأَرْضَ أَنْ تَزُولَا ۚ وَلَئِنْ زَالَتَا إِنْ أَمْسَكَهُمَا
مِنْ أَحَدٍ مِّنْ بَعْدِهِ ۚ إِنَّهُ كَانَ حَلِيمًا غَفُورًا ﴿٤١﴾
وَلَهُ مَا سَكَنَ فِي الَّيْلِ وَالنَّهَارِ ۚ وَهُوَ السَّمِيعُ الْعَلِيمُ ﴿١٣﴾
وَلَبِثُوا فِي كَهْفِهِمْ ثَلٰثَ مِائَةٍ سِنِينَ وَازْدَادُوا تِسْعًا ﴿٢٥﴾

وَلَا حَوْلَ وَلَا قُوَّةَ إِلَّا بِاللَّهِ الْعَلِيِّ الْعَظِيمِ

It is Allah Who sustains the heavens and the earth, lest they cease (to function): and if they should fail. There is none—not one—can sustain them thereafter: verily He is Most Forbearing, Oft-Forgiving. (35: 41)

To him belongs all that dwells (or lurks) in the Night and the Day, for He is the one Who hears and knows all things. (6: 13)

So they stayed in their Cave three hundred years, and nine (more). (18: 25)

B— لَا تُدْرِكُهُ الْأَبْصَارُ وَهُوَ يُدْرِكُ الْأَبْصَارَ وَهُوَ اللَّطِيفُ الْخَبِيرُ ﴿١٠٣﴾

No vision can grasp him. But His grasp is over all vision. He is above all comprehension, yet is acquainted with all things. (6: 103)

Significance: Excessive recitation of the above verse at the time of a storm will cause the storm to subside.

FOR BARAKAH IN PRODUCE AND LIVESTOCK ETC.:

اَللّٰهُ الَّذِي خَلَقَ السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْأَرْضَ وَأَنْزَلَ مِنَ السَّمَاءِ مَاءً فَأَخْرَجَ
بِهِ مِنَ الثَّمَرٰتِ رِزْقًا لَّكُمْ ۖ وَسَخَّرَ لَكُمُ الْفُلْكَ لِتَجْرِيَ فِي الْبَحْرِ
بِأَمْرِهِ ۖ وَسَخَّرَ لَكُمُ الْأَنْهٰرَ ﴿٣٢﴾ وَسَخَّرَ لَكُمُ الشَّمْسَ وَالْقَمَرَ دَآئِبَيْنِ ۖ
وَسَخَّرَ لَكُمُ الَّيْلَ وَالنَّهَارَ ﴿٣٣﴾ وَاٰتٰكُمْ مِّنْ كُلِّ مَا سَأَلْتُمُوهُ ۚ وَإِنْ تَعُدُّوا
نِعْمَتَ اللّٰهِ لَا تُحْصُوهَا ۗ إِنَّ الْإِنْسَانَ لَظَلُومٌ كَفَّارٌ ﴿٣٤﴾

It is Allah Who has created the heavens and the earth and sents down rain from the skies, and with it brings our fruits wherewith to feed you; it is He Who has made the ships subject to you, that they may sail through the sea by His Command; and the rivers (also) has He made subject to you. (14: 32)

And He has made subject to you the sun and the moon, both diligently pursuing their courses; and the Night and the Day has He (also) made subject to you. (14: 33)

A.L.M.R. These are the verses of the Book: that which have been revealed unto you from your Lord is the Truth; but most men believe not. (13: 1)

Allah is He Who raised the heavens without any pillars that you can see; then He established Himself on the Throne. He has subjected the sun and the moon! Each one runs (its course) for a term appointed. He does regulate all affairs, explaining the Signs in detail, that you may believe with certainty in the meeting with your Lord. (13: 2)

And it is He Who spread out the earth, and set thereon Mountains standing firm, and (flowing) rivers: and fruit of every kind He made in pairs, two and two: He draws the Night as a veil over the Day. Behold, verily in these things there are Signs for those who consider! (13: 3)

وَقَالَ الَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا لِرُسُلِهِمْ لَنُخْرِجَنَّكُمْ مِّنْ أَرْضِنَا أَوْ لَتَعُودُنَّ فِي مِلَّتِنَا ۖ
فَأَوْحَىٰ إِلَيْهِمْ رَبُّهُمْ لَنُهْلِكَنَّ الظَّالِمِينَ ﴿١٣﴾ وَلَنُسْكِنَنَّكُمُ الْأَرْضَ مِن بَعْدِهِمْ ۚ
ذَٰلِكَ لِمَنْ خَافَ مَقَامِي وَخَافَ وَعِيدِ ﴿١٤﴾ وَاسْتَفْتَحُوا وَخَابَ كُلُّ جَبَّارٍ
عَنِيدٍ ﴿١٥﴾ مِّن وَرَائِهِ جَهَنَّمُ وَيُسْقَىٰ مِن مَّاءٍ صَدِيدٍ ﴿١٦﴾ يَتَجَرَّعُهُ وَلَا
يَكَادُ يُسِيغُهُ وَيَأْتِيهِ الْمَوْتُ مِن كُلِّ مَكَانٍ وَمَا هُوَ بِمَيِّتٍ ۖ وَمِن
وَرَائِهِ عَذَابٌ غَلِيظٌ ﴿١٧﴾

And the Unbelievers said to their messengers: "Be sure we shall drive you out of our land, or you shall return to our religion." But their Lord inspired (this Message) to them: "Verily We shall cause the wrong-doers to perish!" (14: 13)

"And verily, We shall cause you to abide in the land, and succeed them. This for such as fear the time when they shall stand before My tribunal,—such as fear My Punishment." (14: 14)

But they sought victory and decision (there and then), and frustration was the lot of every powerful obstinate transgressor. (14: 15)

In front of such a one is Hell, and he is given, for drink, boiling fetid water. (14: 16)

In gulps will he sip it, but never will he be near swallowing it down his throat; death will come to him from every quarter, yet will he not die; and in front of him will be a chastisement unrelenting. (14: 17)

مِنْهُ الْمَاءُ ۚ وَإِنَّ مِنْهَا لَمَا يَهْبِطُ مِنْ خَشْيَةِ اللَّهِ ۗ وَمَا اللَّهُ
بِغَافِلٍ عَمَّا تَعْمَلُونَ ﴿٧٤﴾

Then the water should be given to the animal to drink. It will start producing more milk by the Grace of Allah. As far as the water is concerned, the same verses should be written on a piece of slate, then it should be thrown into the well. The water will increase—Insha Allah.

Allah has purchased of the Believers their persons and their goods; for theirs (in return) is the Garden (of Paradise): they fight in His Cause, and slay and are slain: a promise binding on Him in Truth, through the Torah, the Gospel, and the Qur'an: and who is more faithful to his Covenant than Allah? مِّائَةٌ صَابِرَةٌ يَّغْلِبُوْا مِائَتَيْنِ ۚ وَاِنْ يَّكُنْ مِّنْكُمْ اَلْفٌ يَّغْلِبُوْٓا
اَلْفَيْنِ بِاِذْنِ اللّٰهِ ۗ وَاللّٰهُ مَعَ الصّٰبِرِيْنَ ۝

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ

أَوَلَمْ يَرَ الْإِنْسَانُ أَنَّا خَلَقْنَاهُ مِنْ نُّطْفَةٍ فَإِذَا هُوَ خَصِيْمٌ مُّبِيْنٌ ۝

اَللّٰهُ لَآ إِلٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَ ۚ اَلْحَيُّ الْقَيُّوْمُ ۚ لَا تَأْخُذُهُ سِنَةٌ وَّلَا نَوْمٌ ۚ لَهُ مَا فِي السَّمٰوٰتِ وَمَا فِي الْأَرْضِ ۚ مَنْ ذَا الَّذِيْ يَشْفَعُ عِنْدَهُ إِلَّا بِإِذْنِهِ ۚ يَعْلَمُ مَا بَيْنَ أَيْدِيْهِمْ وَمَا خَلْفَهُمْ ۚ وَلَا يُحِيْطُوْنَ بِشَيْءٍ مِّنْ عِلْمِهِ إِلَّا بِمَا شَآءَ ۚ وَسِعَ كُرْسِيُّهُ السَّمٰوٰتِ وَ الْأَرْضَ ۚ وَلَا يَئُوْدُهُ حِفْظُهُمَا ۚ وَ هُوَ الْعَلِيُّ الْعَظِيْمُ ۝

وَلَهُ مَا سَكَنَ فِي الَّيْلِ وَالنَّهَارِ ۚ وَهُوَ السَّمِيْعُ الْعَلِيْمُ ۝

ثُمَّ سَوّٰىهُ وَنَفَخَ فِيْهِ مِنْ رُّوْحِهِ وَجَعَلَ لَكُمُ السَّمْعَ وَالْأَبْصَارَ وَالْأَفْئِدَةَ ۚ

وَنُنَزِّلُ مِنَ الْقُرْاٰنِ مَا هُوَ شِفَآءٌ وَّرَحْمَةٌ لِّلْمُؤْمِنِيْنَ

Does not man see that it is We Who created him from sperm? Yet behold! he (stands forth) as an open adversary! (36: 77)

Allah! There is no god but He,—the Living, the Self-subsisting, Supporter of all, no slumber can seize Him nor sleep. His are all things in there the heavens and on earth. Who is there you can intercede in His presence except as He permits? He knows what (appears to His creatures as) Before or After or Behind them. Nor shall they compass aught of His knowledge except as He will. His Throne does extend over the heavens and the earth, and He feels no fatigue in guarding and preserving them: for He is the Most High, the Supreme (in glory). (2: 255)

To him belongs all that dwells (or lurks) in the Night and the Day, for He is the one Who hears and knows all things. (6: 13)

But He fashioned him in due proportion, and breathed into him of His spirit. And He gave you (the faculties of) hearing and sight and understanding. (32: 9)

And if the pain is on the left side, rub the left cheek while reciting the above verses.

FOR EARACHE:

قُلْ مَنْ يَّرْزُقُكُمْ مِّنَ السَّمَآءِ وَ الْأَرْضِ أَمَّنْ يَّمْلِكُ السَّمْعَ وَ الْأَبْصَارَ وَ مَنْ يُّخْرِجُ الْحَيَّ مِنَ الْمَيِّتِ وَيُخْرِجُ الْمَيِّتَ مِنَ الْحَيِّ وَمَنْ يُّدَبِّرُ الْأَمْرَ ۚ فَسَيَقُوْلُوْنَ اللّٰهُ ۚ فَقُلْ أَفَلَا تَتَّقُوْنَ ۝

Say: "Who is it that sustains you (in life) from the sky and from the earth? Or who is it that has power over hearing and sight? And who is it that brings out the living from the dead and the dead from the living? And who is it that rules and regulates all affairs?" They will soon say, "Allah". Say, "Will you not then show piety (to Him)?" (10: 31)

One requires a newly copper-plated copper dish and a teaspoon of juice extracted from leek, for this act. He should write the above verse with leek extract on the inside of the copper dish. Then he should rub off the writing with a teaspoon of pure honey and collect the honey in a teaspoon. After that he should heat it mildly and administer 3 drops in the affected ear. The ache will disappear in due course—Insha Allah.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES:

A—

اَللّٰهُ نُوْرُ السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْاَرْضِ ؕ مَثَلُ نُوْرِهٖ كَمِشْكٰوةٍ فِيْهَا مِصْبَاحٌ ؕ اَلْمِصْبَاحُ فِيْ

فِيْ بُيُوْتٍ اَذِنَ اللّٰهُ اَنْ تُرْفَعَ وَيُذْكَرَ فِيْهَا اسْمُهٗ ۙ يُسَبِّحُ لَهٗ فِيْهَا بِالْغُدُوِّ

اَحْسَنَ مَا عَمِلُوْا وَيَزِيْدَهُمْ مِّنْ فَضْلِهٖ ؕ وَاللّٰهُ يَرْزُقُ مَنْ يَّشَآءُ بِغَيْرِ حِسَابٍ ۝

Allah is the Light of the heavens and the earth. The parable of His Light is as if there were a Niche and within it a Lamp: the Lamp enclosed in Glass: the glass as it were a brilliant star: lit from a blessed Tree, an Olive, neither of the East nor of the West, whose Oil is well-nigh luminous, though fire scarce touched it: Light upon Light! Allah does guide whom He will to His Light: Allah does set forth Parables for men: and Allah does know all things. (24: 35)

(Lit is such a Light) in houses, which Allah has permitted to be raised to honour; for the celebration, in them; of His name: in them is He glorified in the mornings and in the evenings, (again and again); (24: 36)

By men whom neither trade nor sale can divert from the Remembrance of Allah, nor from regular Prayer, nor from paying zakat their (only) fear is for the Day when hearts and eyes will be turned about, (24: 37)

That Allah may reward them according to the best of their deeds, and add even more for them out of His Grace: for Allah does provide for those whom He will, without measure. (24: 38)

This water should then be used for bathing the eyes. The same water is also said to be an excellent remedy for the white, sticky substances discharged by the eyes, and the web-like curtain sometime appearing on the eye-ball.

C—Suratul Mulk (Surah No. 67) should be recited thrice each day for 3 consecutive days. After reciting it 3 times, blow on the patient's eyes. The suffering will be alleviated—Insha Allah.

D—Write the following two verses on a bit of paper and tie it as a Taaweez around the head:

اِذْهَبُوْا بِقَمِيْصِيْ هٰذَا فَاَلْقُوْهُ عَلٰى وَجْهِ اَبِيْ يَاْتِ بَصِيْرًا ۚ
وَاْتُوْنِيْ بِاَهْلِكُمْ اَجْمَعِيْنَ ۝

فَكَشَفْنَا عَنْكَ غِطَآءَكَ فَبَصَرُكَ الْيَوْمَ حَدِيْدٌ ۝

"Go with this my shirt, and cast it over the face of my father: he will come to see (clearly). Then come you (here) to me together with all your family." (12: 93)

Now have We removed your veil, and sharp is your sight this Day!" (50: 22)

FOR STRENGTHENING THE EYESIGHT:

A— فَكَشَفْنَا عَنْكَ غِطَآءَكَ فَبَصَرُكَ الْيَوْمَ حَدِيْدٌ ۝

We have indeed revealed this (Message) in the Night of Power. And what will explain to you what the Night of Power is? The Night of Power is better than a thousand Months. Therein come down the Angels and the Spirit by Allah's permission, on every errand. Peace!...This until the rise of Morn! (97: 1-5)

PLEURISY:

A—

وَإِن يَمْسَسْكَ اللّٰهُ بِضُرٍّ فَلَا كَاشِفَ لَهُۥٓ إِلَّا هُوَ ۖ
وَإِن يَمْسَسْكَ بِخَيْرٍ فَهُوَ عَلٰى كُلِّ شَىْءٍ قَدِيرٌ ۝١٧
وَهُوَ الْقَاهِرُ فَوْقَ عِبَادِهِۦ ۚ وَهُوَ الْحَكِيمُ الْخَبِيرُ ۝١٨

"If Allah touches you with affliction, none can remove it but He; if He touches you with happiness, He has power over all things. (6: 17)

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ ۝ الٓمٓصٓ طٰسٓمٓ كٓهٰيٰعٓصٓ
يٰسٓ وَالْقُرْاٰنِ الْحَكِيْمِ حٰمٓ عٓسٓقٓ نٓ وَالْقَلَمِ وَمَا يَسْطُرُوْنَ ۝

B—Reciting Surah Al-Shams (Surah No. 91) in the patient's ear is believed to be very beneficial for epilepsy.

COLIC:

قَدْ نَرٰى تَقَلُّبَ وَجْهِكَ فِي السَّمَآءِ ۚ فَلَنُوَلِّيَنَّكَ
قِبْلَةً تَرْضٰىهَا ۪ فَوَلِّ وَجْهَكَ شَطْرَ الْمَسْجِدِ الْحَرَامِ ۭ
وَحَيْثُ مَا كُنْتُمْ فَوَلُّوْا وُجُوْهَكُمْ شَطْرَهٗ ۭ وَاِنَّ
الَّذِيْنَ اُوْتُوا الْكِتٰبَ لَيَعْلَمُوْنَ اَنَّهُ الْحَقُّ مِنْ
رَّبِّهِمْ ۭ وَمَا اللّٰهُ بِغَافِلٍ عَمَّا يَعْمَلُوْنَ ۝

We see the turning of your face (for guidance) to the heavens: now shall We turn you to a Qibla that shall please you. Turn then your face in the direction of the Sacred Mosque: wherever you are, turn your faces in that direction. The people of the Book know well that is the truth from their Lord, nor is Allah unmindful of what they do. (2: 144)

The patient should be made to wash his face with this water and then look into the utensil for 3 consecutive days. It is said to be an excellent remedy for colic patients.

FOR FACIAL PARALYSIS:

A—The remedy is the same as for colic (mentioned above).

B—Write Surah Zilzaal (Surah No. 99) on a piece of paper with non-poisonous ink and soak it in a new utensil filled with water. This water is an excellent remedy for a facial paralyss if consumed.

PARALYSIS OF THE BODY:

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ ۝
هُوَ اللّٰهُ الَّذِيْ لَآ اِلٰهَ اِلَّا هُوَ ۚ عٰلِمُ الْغَيْبِ وَالشَّهَادَةِ ۚ هُوَ الرَّحْمٰنُ
الرَّحِيْمُ ۝ هُوَ اللّٰهُ الَّذِيْ لَآ اِلٰهَ اِلَّا هُوَ ۚ اَلْمَلِكُ الْقُدُّوْسُ السَّلٰمُ الْمُؤْمِنُ
الْمُهَيْمِنُ الْعَزِيْزُ الْجَبَّارُ الْمُتَكَبِّرُ ۭ سُبْحٰنَ اللّٰهِ عَمَّا يُشْرِكُوْنَ ۝ هُوَ اللّٰهُ الْخَالِقُ
الْبَارِئُ الْمُصَوِّرُ لَهُ الْاَسْمَآءُ الْحُسْنٰى ۭ يُسَبِّحُ لَهٗ مَا فِي السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْاَرْضِ ۚ
وَهُوَ الْعَزِيْزُ الْحَكِيْمُ ۝

وَنُنَزِّلُ مِنَ الْقُرْاٰنِ مَا هُوَ شِفَآءٌ وَّرَحْمَةٌ لِّلْمُؤْمِنِيْنَ ۙ وَلَا يَزِيْدُ
الظّٰلِمِيْنَ اِلَّا خَسَارًا ۝

Allah is He, than Whom there is no other god;—Who knows (all things) both secret and open; He, Most Gracious, Most Merciful. (59: 22)

Allah is He, than Whom there is no other god;-the Sovereign, the Holy One, the Source of Peace (and Perfection), the Guardian of Faith, the Preserver of Safety, the Exalted in Might, the Irresistible, the justly Proud glory to Allah! (High is He) above the partners they attribute to Him. (59: 23)

He is Allah, the Creator the Originator, the Fashioner. To Him belong the Most Beautiful Names: whatever is in the heavens and on earth, does declare His Praises and Glory: and He is the Exalted in Might, the Wise. (59: 24)

We send down (stage by stage) of the Qur'an that which is a healing and a mercy to those who believe: to the unjust it causes nothing but loss after loss. (17: 82)

Respectively. Then he dissovled the writing by using Zam Zam water and drank it. As a result, he was compltely cured of his paralysis.

LEPROSY:

A—Ibne Qutaibah R.A. reports that a certain leper whose flesh was about to disintegrate, cunsulted a sage for a cure. The latter recited the following verse and blow on him. This consed new skin to appear on his body and he was completely cured. The verse recited by the sage is:

وَاَيُّوْبَ اِذْ نَادٰى رَبَّهٗۤ اَنِّیْ
مَسَّنِیَ الضُّرُّ وَاَنْتَ اَرْحَمُ الرّٰحِمِیْنَ ۚ۝۸۳
الْمَجِیْدُ

And (remember) Job, when he cried to his Lord "Truly distress has seized me, but you are the Most Merciful of those that are Merciful." (21: 83)

If a leper fasts on the 13th and 15th of any lunar month and recites the above attribute of Allah (Meaning the Most Venerable) excessively each day at the time of breaking his fast, he will—Insha Allah—he cured of the desease.

C—It is reported from Kalbi that a certain person who was afflicted with the desease related to him that the desease had taken its toll on him to such an extent that he found it embarrassing to sit near anyone owing to the offencive smell his body gave off. However, one day he met a pious person and complained to him about his illness. The sage recited some verses from the Holy Qur'an and asked him to open his mouth. when he did, he spat in his mouth. In a few days, he was cured. The verses recited by the sage are:

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِیْمِ ۝
اَنِّیْ قَدْ جِئْتُكُمْ بِاٰیَةٍ مِّنْ رَّبِّكُمْ ۙ اَنِّیْۤ اَخْلُقُ لَكُمْ مِّنَ الطِّیْنِ كَهَیْـَٔةِ
الطَّیْرِ فَاَنْفُخُ فِیْهِ فَیَكُوْنُ طَیْرًۢا بِاِذْنِ اللّٰهِ ۚ وَ اُبْرِئُ الْاَكْمَهَ وَالْاَبْرَصَ
وَاُحْیِ الْمَوْتٰى بِاِذْنِ اللّٰهِ ۚ وَ اُنَبِّئُكُمْ بِمَا تَاْكُلُوْنَ وَمَا تَدَّخِرُوْنَ ۙ فِیْ
بُیُوْتِكُمْ ؕ اِنَّ فِیْ ذٰلِكَ لَاٰیَةً لَّكُمْ اِنْ كُنْتُمْ مُّؤْمِنِیْنَ ۝

"I have come to you, with a Sign from your Lord, in that I make for you out of clay, as it were, the figure of a bird, and breathe into it, and it becomes a bird by Allah's leave: and I heal those born blind, and the lepers, and I quicken the dead into life, by Allah's leave; and I declare to you what you eat, and what you store in your houses. Surely therein is a Sign for you if you did believe; (3: 49)

ITCHING OF THE BODY:

It is reported that a certain person's body itched a great deal owing to same thype of rash, he suffered from. For a long time, he tried all remedies, but to no avail. Finally, one day he decided to join a caravan heading for Makkah. By the time, the caravan reached the tomb of Hazrat Ali R.A. this person became so tired that he decided to remain at the tomb. The caravan left with out him. That night he saw Sayyidana Ali R.A. in his dream. He recited the following verses:

فَكَسَوْنَا الْعِظٰمَ لَحْمًا ۗ ثُمَّ اَنْشَاْنٰهُ خَلْقًا اٰخَرَ ؕ
فَتَبٰرَكَ اللّٰهُ اَحْسَنُ الْخٰلِقِیْنَ ۝

And clothed the bones with flesh; then We developed out of it another creature. So blessed be Allah, the Best to create! (23: 14)

When he awoke in the morning, there was not a slightest trace of the sickness.

RING-WORMS, HERPES:

وَمَثَلُ كَلِمَةٍ خَبِيثَةٍ كَشَجَرَةٍ خَبِيثَةٍ ۖ اجْتُثَّتْ مِنْ
فَوْقِ الْأَرْضِ مَا لَهَا مِنْ قَرَارٍ ۝

And the parable of an evil Word is that of an evil tree: it is torn up by the root from the surface of the earth: it has no stability. (14: 26)

Recite the above verse thrice and make three knots on a piece of cotton thread. Then tie the thread around the right arm of the patient. He will be cured in due course—Insha Allah.

Approximately half a metre of green cotton thread is required for this remedy. Recite Surah Al-Rahmaan and at every فَبِأَيِّ آلَاءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ ۝ make a knot and blow on it. After completion, tie the thread around the neck of the patient. He will—Insha Allah—be cured in due course. The meaning of the above verse is: "Then which of the favours of your Lord wll you deny?" (Surah No. 55)

EPILEPSY IN CHILDREN:

A— بِسْمِ اللَّهِ الرَّحْمَٰنِ الرَّحِيمِ ۝
الٓمٓ ۝ اللَّهُ لَا إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَ الْحَيُّ الْقَيُّومُ ۝ نَزَّلَ عَلَيْكَ الْكِتَابَ
بِالْحَقِّ مُصَدِّقًا لِمَا بَيْنَ يَدَيْهِ وَأَنْزَلَ التَّوْرَاةَ وَالْإِنْجِيلَ ۝
مِنْ قَبْلُ هُدًى لِلنَّاسِ وَأَنْزَلَ الْفُرْقَانَ ۗ

In the name of Allah, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

A.L.M. Allah! There is no god but He, the Living, the Self-Subsisting, the Supporter of all. It is He Who sent down to you (step by step), in truth, the Book, confirming what went before it; and He sent down the Torah (of Moses) and the Gospel (of Jesus). Before this, as a guide to mankind, and He sent down the Criterion (of judgment between right and wrong). (3: 1-4)

Write the above verses on a piece of paper with ink made of saffron mixed with little pure musk and rose water. Then place this paper in the hollow of a small strip of reed (say 4-5 cm long). Seal the mouth of the reed with wax and let it hang from the child's neck with a piece of string. This is said to be very effective in the treatment of epilepsy, nezr and all other sicknesses which normally afflict children. Note that the reed must be cut from its stalk before sunrise.

B—Suratul Falaq and Suratun Naas:

Reciting the two above mentioned Surahs and blowing on children is very effective in safeguarding them against all sicknesses—including epilepsy.

WEAKNESS OF THE LIMBS:

إِنَّمَا يَسْتَجِيبُ الَّذِينَ يَسْمَعُونَ ۘ وَالْمَوْتَىٰ يَبْعَثُهُمُ
اللَّهُ ثُمَّ إِلَيْهِ يُرْجَعُونَ ۝

Those who listen (in truth), be sure, will accept: as to the dead, Allah will raise them up; then will they be returned unto Him. (6: 36)

To eliminate weakness in any limb or organ such as the eyes, heart, etc. a person should fast for 3 consecutive days. Iftari should be made with sugar and milk. The person should wake up in the middle of the night and making ablution, he should write on his right palm the above verse and lick it. This act should be repeated for three consecutive nights i.e. the nights following each fast. It is necessary to use a copper nib and ink made of Saffron diluted in rose water. Also the patient need not write it himself. Anyone may do it for him.

BONE FRACTURE:

فَإِنْ تَوَلَّوْا فَقُلْ حَسْبِيَ اللَّهُ لَا إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَ عَلَيْهِ تَوَكَّلْتُ وَهُوَ رَبُّ الْعَرْشِ الْعَظِيمِ

But if they turn away, say: "Allah suffices me: There is no god but He: On Him is my trust—He the Lord of the throne (of Glory) Supreme!" (9: 129)

Laith bin Sa'ad R.A. reports that a certain person sustained an injury as a resutl of which his thighbone broke. A man appeared in his dream. He placed his hand on the affected thigh and recited the above verse. His thigh healed in a short period of time.

The above verse is also said to be very effective in affording its reader safety against falling from a high place, drowning and being struch in iron rod. Hazrat Abu-Darda R.A. is reported as saying that a person who recites it 100 times daily, all his worldly needs and needs pertaining to the hereafter will be fulfilled. فَفَتَحْنَا أَبْوَابَ السَّمَاءِ بِمَاءٍ مُنْهَمِرٍ ۝ وَفَجَّرْنَا الْأَرْضَ عُيُونًا فَالْتَقَى الْمَاءُ عَلَىٰ أَمْرٍ قَدْ قُدِرَ ۝

So We opened the gates of heaven, with water pouring forth. And We caused the earth to gush forth with springs. So the waters met (and rose) to the extent decreed. (54: 11-12)

NOCTURNAL EMISSION (IHTILAAM)

MAULANA MUHAMMADD ASHRAWF 'ALEE THANWI

A GIFT TO THE HUSBAND AND WIFE

Translated by Maulana Muhammadd Kaddwa

CHAPTER I

A FEW AHADEETH ON THE RIGHTS OF BOTH SPOUSES

Hakeem bin Muawiyah (R) narrates from his father that he asked Rawsoolullawh (S) about the rights of wives against their husbands. He replied:

1. When you eat, feed her as well,

2. When you clothe yourself, clothe her as well,

3. Don't hit her on the face. (In other words, don't hit her in spite of it being her fault. Beating with no valid reason is obviously not permitted on any part of her body.)

4. Don't curse her and

5. Don't sever relationship with her except within the house. In other words, don't leave the house if you happen to be displeased with her, nor abandon her out of the home.

[Aboo Dawood]

Hadhrawt 'Abdullawh bin Zamah (R) narrates that Rawsoolullawh (S) said:

None of you should beat his wife as though he is beating his slave, then at the end of the day he has intercourse with her!

(Bukhawri, Muslim, Tirmeedhi)

Hadhrawt Abu Hurayrah (R) narrates that Rawsoolullawh (S) said:

I advise you to maintain a favourable relationship with your women. Accept this advice from me because women were created from a crooked rib. If you endeavour to straighten her, you'll break her and breaking her is divorcing her and if you leave her as she is, she'll always remain crooked. Therefore, accept this good advice in favour of them.

(Bukhawri, Muslim, Tirmeedhi)

Note

Straightening her means endeavouring to ensure that there remains nothing in her that you dislike. You will be unsuccessful in this endeavour. If you continue bearing down upon her all the lime, it will eventually lead to divorce. Hence, you should overlook her trivial faults. Also, at times excessive harshness and negligence can bring about non-Deeni Shaytawni thoughts within her heart.

Hadhrawt Ummi Salmah (R) narrates that she and Hadhrawt Maymoonah (R) were seated by Rawsoolullawh (S) when Hadhrawt Abdullah 'Ibn Ummi Maktoom (a blind Sahabi (R)) appeared. Rawsoolullawh (S) said: "Observe Hijabb from him."

We remarked: "He is blind, he is unable to see us."

Rawsoolullawh (S) replied: "Are you two blind as well? Won't you be able to see him?"

(Tirmeedhi, Abu Dawood)

Note: It is also a right in favour of women that they should be made to observe such strict Purdah from Ghaw-ir Mahrzms (men whom they can marry) that both parties arc unable to see one another. In the observance of Purdah lies the protection of the wife's Deen since she will be protected from the evils of exposure and immodesty. In it lies her worldly benefit as well. Experience bears testimony to the fact that the more exclusive something is, the greater one's relationship with-it will be. The exclusivity the husband enjoys when his wife observes Purdah is quite obvious. Hence, he will ultimately enjoy a better relationship with her and also fulfil her rights fully. So in the observance of Hijabb (Purdah) lies great worldly benefit for the wife as well.

Hadhrawt Abu Hurayrah (R) narrates that Rawsoolullawh (S) said:

If I had to command anyone to prostrate before another human being, I would have commanded the wife to prostrate before her husband.

(Tirmeedhi)

Hadhrawt 'Ibn Abu Awfa (R) narrates that Rawsoolullawh (S) said:

I swear by that being in whose power lies Muhammad's life! A woman will not be fulfilling her lord's rights until and unless she does not fulfil her husband's rights.

('Ibn Majah)

Note: In other words, the mere performance of divine rituals such as Sawlah, Sawm etc. should not mislead a woman into believing that she has fulfilled the rights of Allawh Ta'ala. Those rights will be considered unfulfilled until and unless she does not fulfil the rights of her husband because fulfilment of the husband's rights is also commanded by Allawh Ta'ala.

Hadhrawt Abu Hurayrah (R) narrates that Rawsoolullawh (S) was asked: "What type of woman is the best wife?"

He replied: "Such a woman that when her husband looks at her, he is pleased with her; when he commands her, she obeys and she does not do anything in regards to herself or her wealth which will displease her husband." (Nasai)

Note: There are tremendous benefits in staying cheerful, obedient and in agreement with her husband. There are tremendous Deeni as well as worldly benefits in this as well. These benefits will be acquired if there is love between the husband and wife and this love is engendered only if both spouses fulfil each other's rights. They are commanded to fulfil each other's rights or else they will be sinful. (Hayatul Muslimeen Page 189-191)

CHAPTER II

THE IMPORTANCE OF STAYING SEPARATELY AFTER MARRIAGE

If possible, it is definitely not appropriate for one to live with one's parents together with his wife. There are many detriments in (his which one will only realise later on in life. (Husnul 'Azeez, volume 2 page 370)

The best plan of action to protect oneself from domestic feuds etc. is to abstain from living together with all the family members. The residing of a few women under one roof is one of I he main causes of disorder and other problems. (Malfoozaate Ashrawfiyyah page 27)

There were always problems and domestic feuds at a certain friend's house in which all the members of the family were living together. I advised him to separate because living together breeds a lot of problems. However, 1 requested him not to mention who advised him thus. There was a tumultuous uproar Ml home when they heard of this. However, when his mother learnt that this is his opinion, she remained silent. They all eventually separated and he also separated each person's monthly allowance and expenses as well. Now they are living in ease and happiness. There are no problems of family feuds and quarrels etc.

(Malfoozaal Page 141)

In these times, it is most appropriate for the young children to live on their own the moment they get married. This system ensures the ease and comfort of both parties. I witnessed a household In Meeruth that was always engaged in domestic quarrels and feuds. One of the men of that household had a (spiritual) relationship with me. He once wrote to me complaining about the domestic problems he was experiencing. I advised him lo hike up another house on rent and live on his own. He did accordingly and since then he is living in peace and tranquillity. My opinion is that the moment the son marries, he should live separately from his parents. This is most appropriate and beneficial.

A Taweez to make the daughter-in-law submissive

A person came to Hadhrawt Thanwi (RA) requesting a Taweez to render his daughter-in-law obedient and submissive. Hadhrawt advised him: "The only Taweez that will work for her is to make her and your son live on their own. This will make her totally obedient."

The women of this era (the era of Hadhrawt Thanwi during the 1930s) love their freedom and independence. Their greatest concern alter the Nikah is to separate from their parents-in-law. A few rand of their husbands is more desirable and appealing to them than thousands belonging to their in-laws. A woman prefers living a life of hunger and poverty in her husband's house than staying in the luxury and wealth of her father-in-law's houses. Such anxieties eventually breed domestic feuds. (Da'waate-Abdiyyat volume 14 page 82)

A Hindu complained to Hadhrawt Thanwi (RA) that his daughter-in-law was harassing him and his own son was also making life a misery for him. Hadhrawt replied: "The only remedy for this is that you should separate them. You live on your own and they live on their own." (Husnul-Azeez volume 2, page 359)

Not to stay on one's own for fear of dishonour

Some people refuse to separate from their parents out of fear of ceremonial disgrace. They prefer living with them and enduring all the hardships. So they are unable to achieve both honour as well as tranquillity but tranquillity is more important than honour. Therefore, one should live separately after one is married. Whatever the outcome, from his earnings he may serve his parents separately. (Da'waate-Abdiyyat volume 14 page 83)

If the parents refuse to allow the son to live separately?

(A question to Hadhrawt Thanwi and his reply)

Question: Hadhrawt once mentioned in one of his lectures that if the wife prefers to live separately from her in laws, it is Wajibb (obligatory) to fulfil this desire. However, the Holy Qur'an commands us to obey the parents in all matters except Shirk (polytheism). Hence, it is Fardh to obey them. If the parents command the son to live with them after his marriage and the wife demands separate accommodation, either in the same house or in another house, what should he do? What is the Shari ruling in this matter? Should he fulfil the Fardh or the Wajibb? Please explain in detail.

Answer: Assalamu 'Alaikum wa Rawhmatullawhi wa Barawkatuhu. Obedience to parents won't apply when it comes to omitting other Shari obligations. Fulfilment of this right (i.e. separate accommodation) is Wajibb (obligatory). Hence, if the parents command the husband to abandon this right of his wife, he is not obliged to adhere to their whims. This is confirmed by a Hadeeth which warns:

The creation will not be obeyed when the Creator is ultimately being disobeyed.

It is Wajibb (obligatory) on the husband to provide separate accommodation for his wife if she requests so. Omission of a Wajibb (compulsion) is a sin. Hence, if the parents command him to perpetrate such a sin (in the form of omitting a Wajibb), their command will not be adhered to. (Imdaadul Fataawa)

A Fatwa on providing separate accommodation

A person wrote to Hadhrawt Thanwi:

Due to domestic problems, I've provided separate accommodation for my wife for the last 2 years. However, due to an increase in expenses, I'm unable to financially serve my parents as much as I used to. This seems to be upsetting them a great deal. Due to limited financial resources, it's always been my parents desire for all of us to live together. Please advise me on this matter.

Hadhrawt replied:

Assalamu 'Alaikum Wa Rawhmatullawhi Wa Barawkatuhu. A wife has the right to live separately from her parents-in-law. If she requests for this right, it is Wajibb upon the husband to fulfil it. Forsaking a Wajibb is a sin and it is not obligatory to obey anyone in sinful matters. Hence, change nothing. Leave everything as it stands.

(Imdaadul Fataawa)

Providing separate accommodation for the wife: a Shari ruling

Provision of maintenance to the wife is Wajibb. Providing separate accommodation for her also forms part of this maintenance. Many people are under the false notion that it is not compulsory to provide separate accommodation for the wife. They compel her to stay with their own families. If she is happy to stay with them, then fine. However, if she prefers staying alone, the husband is compelled to provide separate accommodation for her. Happiness in this context refers to the happiness and pleasure from deep within her heart. If the husband is convinced somehow or the other that she wishes to live separately but she does not express this wish verbally, then too it is not permissible for him to keep her together with the in-laws. (Islaahe-Inqilaab volume 2 page 187)

A woman is not compelled to serve her mother-in-law. Some people consider it their great fortune to keep their wives subjected to their mothers. To achieve this end, she is subjected to various forms of cruelty and hardship. Remember well! A woman is not compelled to serve her mother-in-law. If you are noble, serve her yourself or employ a servant to serve her. (Islaahe-Inqilaab volume 2 page 188)

In my opinion, the women are (judicially) not compelled to prepare meals. I substantiate this from the verse:

And from amongst His (Allawh's) signs is that He had created for you wives from amongst you, so that you may gain tranquillity from them.

In other words, women were created for your tranquillity and so that your heart can be at ease. Women are there to delight and cheer us, not to cook for us. (Huqooquz-Zawjayn page 1 55)

The meaning of separate accommodation and its simple procedure

If you are unable to provide a separate house altogether at least provide her with a separate room in a big house. This room should be sufficient to meet her basic needs and she must be able to keep her personal effects in this room under lock and key. The room must allow her such privacy that she is freely able lo converse and spend time with her husband. This is sufficient to fulfil the requirements of her Wajibb right. Her stove (kitchen or cooking area) should definitely be separate. In most cases, the fire (of dispute and feuds) commence from this very stove. (Islaahe-Inqilaab page 187-8)

Preventing the son and his wife living separately is unjust and cruel

Another act of cruelty upon the wife in which many so called pious people are also involved is that they don't provide separate accommodation for their wives in spite of them demanding this right. People maintain that if she leaves, the house will lose its credibility. Old ladies normally cherish such notions. Remember, nobody is to be obeyed if Allawh Ta'ala is being disobeyed in the process. If the wife wishes to live separately, she has all the right to do so. It is also necessary. In fact, in these times it is most appropriate to live separately. Living together engenders many problems. These old women tend to harass their daughters-in-law a great deal. It sounds rather ironical that if the son is more inclined towards his wife, they suffer pangs of jealousy and if he is disinclined towards her, the same women will go out in search of Taweez etc. One will be saved from all these complications if he lives separately. On the other hand, if you assert that "nowadays the daughters-in-law are very immoral and wicked, they are always quarrelling with their mothers-in-law and harassing them, to remedy such a situation, I would also advise that they should all live separately. In short, in living separately guarantees tranquillity lo both parties (the mother-in-law as well as the daughter-in-law). (Irshaadaat Hakeemul-Ummat page 479)

The excesses of some daughters-in-law

Some women tend to separate their husbands from their parents the moment they step foot into their homes after the Nikah. Although it is most appropriate for the son to live separately after his marriage, there is also a way of doing it. It has to be carried out in a suitable manner. What right does she have to separate in an ill-mannered and uncouth way? (Huqooqul-Bait page 48)

It's better to live separately even if she is happy to live together.

Nowadays, the temperaments and incidents demand that even if the wife wishes to live together with her in-laws and all the relatives will also be disheartened if she lives separately, then too it is more prudent to live separately. This will put a stop to endless problems and difficulties. Although the relatives will be furious with this setup for a few days, when they themselves will observe its benefits, they will all be pleased. The stove (kitchen or cooking area) should most definitely be separate because the fire (of domestic feuds) most often starts from this very stove. (Islaahe Inqilaab volume 2 page 188)

Compelling the 2ND wife to live with the children of the 1ST

The Fuqawha (jurists) have went up to the extent of saying that if a man has children from the first wife, he is not permitted to compel the second wife to "live with them. The incidents that we hear of nowadays regarding the second wife living with the children of the first also prove that this is a root of many problems. Living with other relatives will not engender as many problems as such a situation will engender. (Islaahe Inqilaab volume 2 page 188)

An incident of Hadhrawt Thanwi (RA) – a splendid paragon

Hadhrawt Thanwi narrates:
The moment I got married, my father made me live on my own. Living separately has also been a custom in our family. My father provided a house as well as expenses for the house. I felt very ashamed (to take from him). 1 was concerned about getting a job. With due gratitude unto Allawh Ta'ala, that also got sorted out (in Kanpur). A sum of 25 Rupees was fixed as a monthly income. I was under the impression that it is a very large sum and a wage of 10 Rupees should suffice. I remained alone for a few days. Then I called the family over (to Kanpur) as well. Experience proved to me that the sum of 25 Rupees was not after all surplus. The entire sum used to be spent. From home, she was always requesting me to build a separate house. I continued averting and putting it off by advising her that we are to live in this world for a short while only. Why build a house? When I went for Hajj, she also followed later on. She complained to Haji Sahib (RA) (a reference to Haji Imdadullawh Sahib, the Shaikh of Hadhrawt Thanwi) that she asked me to build a house and I am refusing to do so. Haji Sahib said to me: "Your wife's asking you to build a separate house for her. There's any problem with that? This's quite appropriate as one is more comfortable in one's own house." I thought to my self that the wife devised a very convincing plan to build a house. I finally told Haji Sahib: "Very well. The house will be built."
On our return (to India) the house was built and I also wrote to Haji Sahib about it. He replied: "May your house be Mubarawk (blessed)."
Hadhrawt Thanwi (R'A) says: "After building a separate house, I realised that without it there was no peace and comfort. However, if someone is in dire straits and he is unable to build a house, it is another matter altogether." (Malfoozaat page 137-140)

CHAPTER III
THE IMPORTANCE OF CLEAR-CUT DEALINGS BETWEEN THE SPOUSES

The custom of the Arabs

It was the custom of the Arabs that all the furniture of the house was clearly divided between the husband and wife. The husband's property is separate from the wife's. The same custom prevails in European countries as well. The property of the Sir is clearly separated from the Madam. In other words, the property of each spouse is clearly defined. This custom of clear-cut dealings between the spouses was prevalent amongst us. If only this custom could be reintroduced here in India (and the rest of the Muslim world). (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 40)

The property of both spouses should be separate

Our society has become so tainted that we have become grossly negligent of everyone's rights. Our ignorance has reached such pathetic levels that we are not even aware that clear-cut dealings and individualized rights now prevalent in Europe were once existing in our own society. Honest dealing demands that the property and possessions of the spouses should be clearly distinguished from each other. In our houses, we don't even know who a particular thing belongs to. Each one is in possession of the other's property. A woman is unable to distinguish which of her jewels came from her father's house and which of them came from her husband's. She doesn't know whether the jewels were loaned to her or given over to her. If a man wishes to sort out what belongs to him in the house, he is chastised and ridiculed. He is disgraced and put to shame in the entire family. The family comment that he is so miserly that he won't allow anyone to touch his property. In other words, (in their terms), a generous person is he who is totally disorganised and negligent and he doesn't know what belongs to him and what belongs to others. (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 41)

The repercussions of unclear dealings

They will taste the bitter fruit of this generosity when one of the spouses die and the estate has to be distributed. One will claim that the deceased had given him a certain item whilst another will assert that the item never belonged to the deceased in the first place. The widow might claim that a certain item belongs to her father's house and so forth. Now there seems no way to sort this matter out. This eventually leads to constant quarrels and tiffs and serves as a form of entertainment to others. As for those families which are more cultured, there obviously would be no physical encounters as this is contrary to nobility and honour. However, this will lead the family to cherish rancour and malice in their hearts. This eventually renders the house a jail. This is the worldly loss of such a system of society.

Religious loss and deprivation of the hereafter

As for the Deeni loss in such a system, a person makes unauthorised use of another person's property and he henceforth becomes sinful. If the item is destroyed, he is held liable for it. The affair of the hereafter is very delicate indeed. Even if a meagre sum of 3 cents is outstanding in favour of another, 700 accepted Sawlah will be snatched away from him and credited in favour of the other party. How frightening it is that a person performs Sawlah for his entire life and they are all snatched away in the hereafter! These are the repercussions of not dealing cleanly and straightforwardly. In this world, the people (heirs) suffer malicious rancour in their hearts which makes the life of the entire household unpleasant whilst the hereafter is also destroyed as all his acts of devotion will be snatched away.
(At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 42)

The torments of unclear dealings

A person once requested me to distribute according to Islamic law the estate of his late wife. I asked him to bring a list of all the possessions of his late wife. Such a request had him so baffled and agonized as he had no account whatsoever of what belonged to him and what belonged to her. I told him: "Added to this agony, whatever you have doubt in will all be considered her properly as a form of penalisation. Gather all her heirs. All of them should separate their property. Whatever they have doubt in will all be considered the property of the deceased and accordingly the laws of Meeruth (inheritance) will apply." He acted accordingly and the estate was finally wound up after a great hassle. It was solely because of his piety that he endured all these difficulties and ensured that her estate is wound up. In short, everyone seems quite pleased to keep all their properties and possessions mixed up. They tend to become disgruntled or offended if an item is attributed to the ownership of a specific individual. However, enormous problems arise when one of the spouses die. The main reason is that our society (and our social dealings) is in a pathetic state. People refrain from sorting out all matters clearly. (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 44)

Discord between the couple due to the lack of clear dealings

The same invariable problem arises in the domestic expenses. Whatever the husband earns, he hands over to the wife to utilise for the expenses of the home. The wife falls under the wrong notion that the money belongs to her because the husband made the sum over to her. She squanders the money as she pleases and also gives charity from the same. She spends very freely on her own family because she is quite complacent in the knowledge that the money belongs to her now. At times when the husband witnesses his wife squandering his hard-earned money, he enquiries about her lavishness only to be greeted with the words: "You gave the money to me. I've the authority to spend as I please."
The husband submits: "1 didn't give you the money. I only kept it by you as a trust."
They continue arguing over this matter. This was the result of unclear dealings. Be clear in your dealings. When you give anything to your wife, specify what you are giving it to her for. (As a trust, a gift, for domestic expenditure or for her pocket-money etc.) { At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 45}

The confusion of Zakah due to the lack of clear dealings

Even in matters pertaining to the payment of Zakah (on jewellery), the people are grossly deficient The husband feels that the jewellery is of no use to him, hence he is not obligated to pay the Zakah whilst the wife is also complacent in the knowledge that the jewellery does not belong to her. As a result, nobody ends up paying the Zakah. Now when the husband dies. The wife suddenly claims that the jewellery belongs to her, her husband gave them to her. It is quite surprising that within his lifetime the wife claims that the husband merely lent her the jewels to be worn – so that the burden of the Zakah rests on his shoulders – and now after his death she claims ownership of the jewels! In other words, in cases of expenditure, the husband was the owner and in cases of income, the wife is now suddenly the owner! AH these problems cropped up simply because their possessions were not separated. If the husband explicitly informed her the moment he got the jewellery made (or purchased), who the jewels belong to, there wouldn't have been any problem. Also, the ruse of the jewellery not belonging to either party would not have appeared in any one of the spouse's thoughts at the time of paying Zakah. All affairs should be clear and well-defined. If the jewellery was given into the ownership of the wife, the obligation of Zakah rests on her shoulders. On the other hand, if the jewellery was merely loaned to the wife, he is obligated to pay the Zakah. It is another matter altogether that in spite of the jewellery belonging to the wife, the husband pays the Zakah on her behalf with her consent. (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 49)

Another vice in regards to jewellery

Another evil (within our society) is that jewellery worth thousands is given to the wife at the time of marriage without specifying if the jewels make up part of the Mahr (dowry) or not. As a result, the husband has given everything to his wife but not a cent of Mahr is considered paid. He spent hundreds of thousands but he still remains in debt in lieu of his Mahr that constitutes Haqqul-'Abd (human rights). And as you already heard, if one wilfully usurps even a meagre sum of 3 cents of another human being, 700 accepted Sawlah will be snatched away from him and given to the rightful. How absurd it sounds that his expenses surpass the actual debt of the Mahr but the debt of the Mahr remains intact. Oh yes! when the Mahr is requested from the husband in this world, probably by the heirs at the death of the wife, or the wife claims the Mahr at the time of divorce, the husband now says that all the jewellery presented at the time of marriage was given with the intention of Mahr. What he docs not realise is that only Allawh Ta'ala Alone is aware of the people's intentions. The people are not aware of each other's intentions. When did he verbally specify that the jewels were given as Mahr? If you hand over a hundred thousand as a gift to your creditor of one penny, then too your debt will not be waived off. The debt will only be considered paid when you specify that the money is in payment of the debt. If the husband wishes to give jewellery as mahr, he should clearly specify that it is in payment of Mahr. Keep a record of it or remember it. Why leave all matter unresolved? This concerns the rights of other human beings. Even if a cent is outstanding, the debt is considered unpaid, in short, all dealings should be executed formally and distinctly. (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 50)

The Islamic method

1. In regards to furniture, jewellery etc. that is either purchased or made, the husband should verbally specify right at the beginning who the item belongs to – does it belong to him or is he giving it to his wife.
2. Be explicit even when giving her money. Specify where it should be spent. In my personal opinion, whilst giving money to the wife for the household expenses, specify that this sum is a trust that should only be utilised for expenses of the household. However, give her a sum, normally referred to as pocket-money that she may utilise as' she pleases. If you don't give her anything for personal use, she may (utilise the household money for her personal needs) and be guilty of breach of trust. Such an uncompromising policy is cruel and unjust.
3. When purchasing or getting jewellery made, be specific. If you are giving her the jewellery, tell her that it belongs to her. If you don't intend to make her the owner of it, tell her explicitly that you are only loaning it to her to wear and not giving it to her. This is the correct method of social dealings that guarantees the religious safety of both spouses. However, our custom has become so despicable that if the possessions of the household are separated, we find it rather strange. Everyone will find it offensive and it will become the talk of the entire family. (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 46-48)

A magnificent parable and a general rule for rectifying the above malady

With due gratitude to Allawh! Nothing in our house is left unclear. For instance, the beds in our house. One of them was given to me by a friend. I attribute that one to myself whilst the remaining beds belong to the other members of the household. Similarly, everything in the house is divided (in terms of ownership). All members of the household utilise the items (furniture etc.) but we do know who a particular item belongs to. Life and death is inevitable. If any member of the household dies whilst all his affairs were well-sorted, there would be no problem with regards to who a certain item belongs to. This system should be adopted by each and every household; people find this system very odd and they tend to become bewildered by it simply because it is not very common amongst the masses. If one or two people adopt it, it would seem very unusual and newfangled. However, if this system becomes commonly adopted, nobody will feel offended nor bewildered. Witnessing its benefits, everyone will submit to it and approve of it.

A practical example

A woman once presented a bowl to us as a gift. I enquired from her who she is gifting it to. "Are you giving it to me or the people of the household (wife)?" I asked. This left her in deep thought because she brought the item for usage at home in accordance to our prevailing custom. Who it belongs lo won't bother her in the least bit. She had no answer to my question since she had no firm intention from the very beginning. Brooding over the matter for some time, she finally submitted, "I have gifted it to both of you."
I said: "Fine, now I know that the bowl belongs to both of us jointly." (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 46)

The prohibition of the couple utilising each other's possessions without the satisfaction of the other

Both the husband and the wife enjoy individual ownership of their respective possessions. It is cruel of the husband to utilise his wife's goods without her satisfaction. At the same time, it is untrustworthy of the wife to utilise her husband's property without his satisfaction. By satisfaction we mean that there are very persuasive signs that convince one that the owner is totally satisfied and cordially happy. (Islaahe-Inqilaab page 1 86)
The reality of permission with the happiness of the heart is that the second person also has the ability to refuse. (In other words, at times the person from whom permission to utilise a certain item etc. is being sought, is unable to refuse. Hence, his permission is not really considered as satisfaction and happiness of the heart. Tr.) [Anfaase-Eesaa page 315]

The impermissibility of combining the husband's wealth and spending without his permission

Some women are in the habit of surreptitiously combining their husband's wealth with their own. On some pretext or the other, they give it to their own parents (or any other person) without the knowledge of their husbands. This is a heinous sin. The wife's family have no Short right over the husband's wealth. If she wishes to give something to them, she should first seek her husband's permission. If the husband makes his wife the owner of something, she may utilise it (or spend) it without the permission of her husband. However, if he does not make her the owner but merely gives it to her for household use, or as a trust, she is not permitted to utilise it without her permission. In fact, she is not allowed to give anything to a beggar also from that trust. One of the conditions for charity or doing good unto others is that the charity should also be in conformity to the Shari'ah not against it. For example, if the husband entrusts his wife with an amount and she feels pity on a (beggar etc.), she is not permitted to give alms from that amount. She will be sinful if she gives from that amount even though she considers it to be a very altruistic and pious deed. However, since the amount does not belong to her and she did not seek his permission or he agreed reluctantly and there are very convincing signs of his reluctance. she acted in contrast to Shari law. Hence, she won't be rewarded. It seems very courageous of her to feel sympathetic towards others without any consideration of her own sinful attitude. This will never be accepted by Allawh Ta'ala. From this we learn that Shari'ah has taken justice and moderation into account in every one of its laws. (Muwasaatul-Musaabeen supplement to Aadaabe-Insaaniyyat page 394)

Furtively combining the husband's wealth

Some women furtively stash away their husband's money over the years on the pretext that it would be of some assistance if he has to die first. For instance, if he gives her 40 Rupees a month for household expenses, she spends 20 and hoards the remaining 20. If the husband dies before her, she considers herself the exclusive owner of the entire amount and she does not even inform anyone about it. Remember, it is incorrect to do this. The other heirs are also entitled to that sum. If she wishes to collect a sum of money, she should first seek her husband's permission and ensure that he whilst in good health, makes her the owner of the entire sum before his Marawdul-Maat (the last disease which apparently brought about his death). This will ensure that the sum belongs exclusively to the wife or else the other heirs are also entitled to that sum and it would be Harawm for her to be the sole owner. (Asbaabe-Ghaflah supplement to Deeno-dunyaa page 491)

The limitations of spending from the husband's wealth

Some women, whilst spending the husband's wealth, feel he will give permission later on. At times the husband remains silent whilst at times he gets furious that eventually leads to heated arguments and domestic feuds. Therefore, until and unless the husband does not give explicit permission or she is not convinced of his permission, she should not make any donations (or spend it in any other way). However, if it is something trivial and the wife is sure that her husband wouldn't mind, it is fine (permissible). This would apply obviously to the beggars and destitute etc. (For instance, if she gives a piece of bread etc. to a beggar, it is permissible; these injunctions will apply if she gives from the husband's wealth. When these are the limitations and precautions in regards to trivial things, how can she be permitted to fill her parent's or brother's and sister's houses? Obviously they are not given trivial things. Who gives them a slice of bread? They are mainly given cash or sets of clothing etc. They are given such things that will most probably displease him if he is informed. Hence those women who surreptitiously give their family members out of the husband's wealth without this knowledge basically means that whatever the poor man earns goes to someone else! (Asbaabul-Ghaflah page 494)

Women should avoid spending their own wealth also without their husband's permission

The aforementioned rules apply in the case where the wealth belongs to their husband. If she is the owner of the wealth, the husband's consent is not necessary but she should seek his counsel. Imam Nasai narrates that Rawsoolullawh (S) said:

"It isn't permissible for a woman after her marriage to make over any gifts from her wealth except with the permission of her husband.

According to some 'Ulama, due to a trivial relevance, the words from her wealth is a reference to her husband's wealth. However, if the Hadeeth is applied in the apparent meaning i.e. from her own wealth, then it would mean that since women are (relatively) deficient in intellect and if she is given unrestrained permission, she might squander her money. Hence, Rawsoolullawh (S) is addressing this intellectually deficient group (the women) that if they wish to spend their wealth, they should seek their husband's counsel first. This interpretation (compared to the first) is more impressive. There is great wisdom in practising on this Hadeeth as this engenders unity between the couple. This system also increases the husband's love for his wife because he feels that his wife is so attached to him that she doesn't spend even her own money without his counsel. If a woman spends her money on her own accord, the husband finds it strange and perplexing. Therefore, according to me, the Hadeeth will apply in its apparent meaning. There is no need to attribute it to the husband's wealth. This importation is also narrated from 'Allamah Sindhi (RA). He says:

According to most Ulama, the Hadeeth is attributed to favourable conjugal relations and to (the wife's endeavour in) pleasing the husband.

So if the wife is compelled to seek her husband's counsel in spending her own wealth why won't she be compelled to seek his permission in regards to his wealth? (Asbaabul-Ghaflah page 493)

CHAPTER IV
CONJUGAL RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE COUPLE

Intimacy between the spouses is natural

Allawh Ta'ala says:

They (the wives) are clothing unto you and you are clothing unto them.

The objective of this simile is to expose intense attachment. In other-words, this simile portrays the intense attachment and intimacy both spouses enjoy. It is through the Mercy of Allawh Ta'ala that He engenders such close and intense bonds of attachment between the couple that there is (generally) no other more deeply-rooted bond than this. Without a deep-seated bond between the spouses, fulfilment of each other's rights would have been rather difficult. To achieve this end easily, Allawh Ta'ala brought about such a close-knit bond between the two that it !s as though both spouses have united. In other words, 2 bodies with a common soul. In short, Allawh Ta'ala compares the married couple to clothes to portray to mankind that the rights He has promulgated upon both spouses have been simplified in such a manner that He has engendered deep-rooted bonds between them that has ultimately simplified the fulfilment of these rights. From this wc determine the importance of fulfilling each other's rights. Allawh Ta'ala considers these rights so important that in order to simplify the fulfilment of these rights, He furnished a system which fell beyond the choice and authority of mankind. Something that Allawh Ta'ala considers important, obviously requires our utmost vigilance. (Raful-Iltibaas supplement to Huqooquz-Zawjayn page 135/136)

The husband and wife – a source of adornment for one another

Another point of resemblance in the simile:

Women are clothes for you and you are clothing unto them

That comes to mind is that one of the characteristics of clothing is that it conceals. Similarly, women are a source of concealment for men and vice versa. In other words, they are a screen for each others faults and shortcomings. Just as clothing is a source of adornment, similarly, the wife is a source of adornment for the husband and vice versa. Clothing being a form of adornment is established from the Qur'an itself:

O children of Adam! Take up your adornment.

Here in this verse, adornment unanimously refers to clothing. Before this verse, mention of clothing was being made in the verse:

O children of Adam! We have sent down clothing for you which covers your shame and (We have sent down) feathers.

Although clothing was not explicitly referred to as adornment in this verse, the outcome of adornment is mentioned. That is the words which covers your shame. In other words, We have created such clothing for you which conceals your inelegance. This is the objective of adornment that it conceals inelegance and defect. The verse also mentions the word feathers. It refers to feathers of a bird which are also a source of adornment to a bird. In short, just as clothing is a source of adornment, the wife is a source of adornment to the husband and vice versa. The husband's adornment lies in his wife in a sense that a man with a wife and children holds a degree of esteem. in society. The wife's adornment lies in her husband in a sense that people won't normally cherish evil thoughts about her. Before her Nikah (marriage) her honour and respect is always in danger and under threat. (Raful-Iltibaas page 165)

A man and woman are in need of one another

Another point of similarity that comes to mind is that just as a person is unable to forbear a lack of clothing over his body, similarly a man and woman are unable to forbear the lack of each other's company brought about by Nikah. Not only do they need each to fulfil their carnal desires, but she is in need of her husband for his assistance etc. and he is in need of her service and comfort etc. During illness, nobody can serve the husband like a wife would. After the death of his first wife, an eighty-year old man decided to marry a second time. He had many daughters and daughters-in-law who prevented him from remarrying on the grounds that they were there to serve him. The old man was adamant: “No one will be able to serve me like a wife would. I’ll point this fact out to you at the right opportunity.” He finally remarried. A few years later he was afflicted with a disease. causing excessive diarrhoea. Totally perplexed with the odour, all his daughters and daughters-in-law separated and abandoned him. His wife on the other hand, used to support him on her legs and make him defecate with ease. Thereafter, she used to cleanse his private parts and wash his clothing etc. Even if he had motions of up to 25 times daily, she would clean him and put him to rest. That is when the old man remarked: "For this day I got married a second time. See! Besides her, nobody is able to serve me today." Hence, like clothing, a man is not independent of a woman nor is a woman independent of a man. A man is like her assistant and she is like his servant. (Raful-Iltibaas page 161)

The husband and wife – subservient to one another

Another point that comes to mind (in regards to the simile:

…Men and women are like clothing unto one another…

That is clothing is subjected to the body. From this we deduce that women are subjected and subservient to men. Also, the fact that women being clothing for men is mentioned first in the verse, also portrays that women precede men in subservience. One may object at this deduction that the remainder of the verse says

Men are clothing unto women.

Does this therefore mean that men are also subservient to women? In response we answer that he is also subservient to some degree. However his subservience follows up at a later stage. In other words, women are naturally and lawfully subservient to men whilst men become subservient to them out of love for them. (Raful-Iltibaas page 170)

The status of the marital relationship

Women are no doubt subservient but they are not subservient like maids, servants and slave-women. A woman enjoys a relationship of friendship with her husband as well. One of the distinctive features of this relationship is that at times she tends to become pompous. Due to the marital relationship, the husband's awe does not fall over his wife as it would fall over his servants. It would be rather hard-hearted and cruel of the husband if he wishes his awe to sway over his wife as it does over his servants. Such conduct reflects his deficiency in understanding the status of this relationship. Friends! This is such a relationship that at times even the pure wives of Rawsoolullawh (S) used to act in a pompous manner and behave like equal friends with him whereas who can be equal in status to Rawsoolullawh (S)? He was unique in every marvel and excellence. Apart from this, he was a ruler. He inspired a tremendous amount of monarchist awe (over the other rulers of the world). In spite of this, he never held such awe over his wives. In fact, he behaved with his wives in a manner in which he considered the aspects of both, authority as well as friendship. The relationship of authority he held over them influenced them never to disobey him. They obeyed and honoured him to such an extent that their hearts contained no such esteem for another human being. On the other hand, their relationship of friendship they enjoyed with him led Hadhrawt Aisha (R) at times to be pompous with him. However, Rawsoolullawh (S) never found this offensive. (Huqooqul-Bait page 23)

Equality between the sexes? No. Justice? Yes

Ladies! How can you be equal to men? You have been kept at the rear in virtually everything. Your Imamate (leading the Sawlah) is improper. You lag behind men in inheritance, rectification, leadership, sovereignty etc. Why then do you aspire for precedence? Imam Abu Haneefah (RA) is of the opinion that if a female stands next to a male in Sawlah (with certain conditions attached), his Sawlah is nullified. When there is no equality in ‘Ibadah in which much courage and intelligence is not required, how can you be equal in other non-’Ibadah affairs that require certain characteristics found predominantly in males only? There is a natural difference between men and women. They are unable to be on par with men. They are less intelligent, their power of endurance is relatively lower, body-parts are more fragile, etc. Hence, they tend to get exhausted more quickly. When Allawh Ta'ala has made you relatively more deficient, what equality do you now lay claim to? In short, it is established by Shari’ah that women are slightly more deficient than men. For instance, the Qur’anic verse declares:

And for men, their is a status over women.

In other words, the status of men is higher than that of women. Further, the verse continues:

And Allawh is exalted in power and wise.

In other words, there should be no surprise in this matter as Allawh Ta'ala, who is exalted in power has bestowed it accordingly. There is none to prevent him in instituting this. This command is not merely an ordinance but since Allawh Ta'ala is Hakeem (All-wise), His orders arc not devoid of Hikmah (wisdom) as well. Hence, there is no scope for contesting this issue. Men are more superior to women in respect to their natural capabilities. For example, in intelligence, braver}', power, intellectual capabilities, strategic planning etc. Allawh Ta'ala has made men more superior than women. Regardless of how rich or beautiful she may be, she will be inferior to men in these attributes. This is why the holy Qur’an declares:

And men are favoured with a status above the women.

(At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 97 and 147)

Man the leader and woman the subject, a natural and justified constraint

Women are generally less intelligent than men. The person who is intellectually deficient will probably err in almost everything. Hence, it would be much safer for such a person to follow someone more intelligent than him. This is also one of the reasons Allawh Ta'ala made men leaders over women. As the Qur’an declares:

"Men are custodians (or caretakers) over women.

This ensures that all their affairs are under their vigilance and they can be protected from going astray. This is not cruelty, but this stems from justice, wisdom, and affection. Examine the case of a child. He is deficient in intellect. What will his condition be if he is left free without being subjected to anyone? Similar is the case with women. It is through the mercy of Allawh Ta'ala (and a constraint of nature as well) that He subjected them to men or else none of their affairs would have been in order. They would have been floundering in every aspect of the* Deen and the Dunya. Allawh Ta'ala has made the husband a leader and the wife his subject. This should not be misconstrued as cruelty and injustice. This is undoubtedly a source of mercy and wisdom in her favour. There is great comfort for her in being subjected to her husband. On the contrary, an efficient system and life style will not be maintained with the introduction of equality between the sexes. There would always be problems and contention between the spouses.

It’s safest for a woman to be subjected and obedient to a man

Unrestrained independence and freedom is rather calamitous. Allawh Ta'ala says:

Be well aware, O Muslims! The Rawsool of Allawh is amongst you. If he had to obey you on many matters, you would certainly suffer.

In other words, you should subject yourself to his [Rawsoolullawh (S)'s[commands and not the other way around. You would land yourself into trouble if he had to obey you. From this verse we deduce that it is safer and more prudent for a minor to be subjected to a senior and for one intellectually deficient to be subjected to one who is intellectually perfect. It is something to think about that the verse does not mention that Rawsoolullawh (S) would be in difficulty if he had to follow you. In fact it says that you would suffer if he obeys you. From this we deduce that it is to the minor's own benefit if he subjects himself to the senior. Similarly, (O women!) remain subjected to men for your own benefit and safety. Consider it a great boon that Allawh Ta'ala did not make you unrestrained and free or else you would certainly suffer. This is so due to two reasons; firstly, their intellectual capabilities are relatively deficient and secondly they have a tendency to be obstinate. If she is bent on doing something, she will make sure she will execute it. So, they suffer due to two reasons; one is due to her lack of perfect intellect – if she wishes to do something, it is done without much contemplation and deliberation. This is further aggravated by her penchant to be adamant and obstinate. Once she is onto something, she makes sure she achieves her ends regardless of the repercussions. You probably heard of some of them hurling themselves into the well or setting themselves alight over trivial matters. This is due to her deficient intellect and her obstinacy. Hence, their safety only lies in them being subjected and restrained. There should always be a custodian attending to them. (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 100)

Unity between the spouses and the establishment of a systematic household

Remember well! The system of both die Deen and the world will run efficiently only if one is the Tebie (Subject) and the other is the Ma/boo (leader). Nowadays, people deliver lengthy discourses and pass various proposals on unity but they fail to gel to the root of it; the root of unity lies in rendering one person the leader to whom the rest of the flock is subjected. If there is no such thing as a leader and subjects in any group and all of them claim to be equal, there would never be unity amongst them. Once they understand this, women should extract the notion of equality from their hearts as this is the root of all problems. Now there remains only 2 options; either the women become leaders and the men their subjects or the men become leaders and the women their subjects. Women should make the decision using their own discretion. Are they fit to become leaders or should the men lead them? A woman with sound temperament will never deny the fact that men are more superior than women in intellect and strength and they will be able to safeguard women. Women will not be able to safeguard men. In short, men should be the leaders and the women their subjects. This is the decision of the Shari'ah as Allawh Ta'ala declares:

Men are custodians over women.

(At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 1 15)

Mutual love and compassion between the spouses

Allawh Ta'ala says in the Holy Qur'an:

And He (Allawh Ta'ala) has engendered love and mercy amongst you (between you and your spouses).

Allawh Ta'ala has brought about 2 characteristics between the husband and wife: love and sympathy; the period of love is their youth because both spouses are in their ardour of youth and the period of sympathy is their old-age. This is quite evident from the fact that the service she renders during old-age and decrepitude, nobody else will be able to render such service. (Nusrawtun-Nisa page 551)

Portrayal of love – adornment for the husband and modesty for the wife

Some men tend to become a bit suspicious because they openly express their love towards their wives whilst the wives fail to openly return their love. The main reason for this is that the portrayal of love is a form of adornment for the husband whilst (some) women consider it improper. Shame and modesty precludes them from openly expressing their love. She cherishes all her feelings within her heart. ....(Nusrawtun-Nisa page 455)

The conjugal relationship – of lover and beloved, not only of leader and subject

The relationship between the spouses is not confined to a relationship of a leader and subject. In fact there are two aspects of this relationship: one of leadership and the other of love and attachment. Attending to both rights arc indispensable. If the need arises, you may restrain or threaten her. The leader should act like a leader whilst the subject should live like one. However, stay within the boundaries. Don't fall into injustice and cruelty. Just as there are certain rights over the subject in favour of die leader, there arc certain rights over the leader in favour of the subject as well. Behave with her taking into account all her rights. Every single thing has its boundaries under various circumstances. Don't consider the women to be weak and helpless thereby inflicting injustices upon them. A king who exercises his authority over his subjects is quite acceptable. However, cruelty and injustice can never be tolerated. Here, a conjugal relationship is not confined to a relationship of leader and subject but their relationship is double-faceted; a relationship of leadership and a relationship of love. (Nusrawtun-Nisa, Huqooquz-Zawjayn pages 551, 554)

CHAPTER V

THE RIGHTS OF TH£ HUSBAND

A few Ahadeeth on obedience to and the rights of the husband

Allawh Ta'ala has awarded the husband tremendous rights and privileges. Satisfying and pleasing the husband is a great form of 'Ibadah. Displeasing and angering him is a major sin. Rawsoolullawh (S) said:

1. A woman who performs her five daily Sawlah, observes fasting in the month of Rawmadawn, preserves her honour (remains chaste) and obeys her husband, may enter Jannah from whichever door she wishes. (Mishkaat page 281)

2. A woman who dies whilst her husband is pleased with her will enter Jannah. (Tirmeedhi)

3. If I had to command anyone to prostrate before anyone other than Allawh, I would have commanded the wife to prostrate before her husband. If the husband orders his wife to carry a stone from one mountain to the other and from there to the third mountain, she should do accordingly. (Mishkaat page 281)

4. If a man summons his wife to attend to his personal needs, she should ensure she attends to him even if she is at the stove. In other words, regardless of the importance of her work, she should go and attend to him.

5. If a woman refuses after her husband has called her to sleep with him and he goes to sleep in a state of anger, the angels curse her until the morning.

6. When a woman torments her husband in this world, one of the Houris who will become his wives in the hereafter says: "May Allawh destroy you! Don't torment him. He is not but for a few days as your guest. In a few days he will leave you to return to come to us."

7. There are 3 people whose Sawlah is not accepted nor are any of their good deeds approved of; one is a slave who has absconded from his master, the second person is a woman whose husband is displeased with her and the third person is a perpetual drunkard.

8. Rawsoolullawh (S) was once asked: "O Rawsool of Allawh! Who is a good wife?"

He replied: "A woman who pleases her husband when he looks towards her, she obeys him when he commands her and she does not do anything, either in regards to his life or property, which is displeasing to him."

[Extracted from Bahishti Zewar and Hayatul-Muslimeen]

The honour and status of the husband

O women! you are so inferior to your husbands that Rawsoolullawh (S) said that if he had t<5 command anyone to prostrate to anyone other than Allawh, he would have ordered the women to prostrate before their husbands. Do you have any idea of the status of your husband? Alas nowadays women confront their husbands with abusive words and contentious arguments. If you argue that his anger also makes us angry then remember that one only gets angry with those lower or equal in status to him. If one considers another to be superior or more higher in rank than him, he will never get angry with him. A servant does not express anger to his master. Similarly, a member of the public cannot get angry with the ruler and the son does not express his anger to his father. This is so because one party considers the other more superior than itself. Ladies! The fact that you are getting angry due to your husband's anger shows that you consider yourself more superior or equal in rank to him. This notion is totally erroneous. If you consider yourself inferior and subjected to your husband, you would never ever become angry with him. Remove these evil ideas from your hearts and consider yourself inferior to men as Allawh Ta'ala has made you. And don't ever argue and fight with him when he gets angry. (Huqooqul-Bait page 51)

The status of the wife in relation to the husband

O women! Your status is even lower than that of a bondswoman.

This does not mean that women are totally worthless. Such parables are merely cited to portray the rank of the husband over the wife. The Hadeeth says that if anyone was granted permission to prostrate before anyone other than Allawh Ta'ala, the wife would have been compelled to prostrate before the husband. The Hadeeth does not say that the slave girl would have been compelled to prostrate before her master. From this we deduce that your status (compared to your husband) is even lower than that of a slave girl. And the rank of the husband is more superior than that of a master. However, your condition on the other hand is such that it is considered disgraceful to be restrained by the husband. You don't even consider these laws as part of the Deen. Overcome by enthusiastic zeal, you will go on reading Wazeefahs, Tasbeehat etc. but allow me to warn you that the rank of these Wazeefahs are inferior to these laws. The maximum virtue lies in those deeds that go against the Nafs (desires). And obedience to the husband falls against the Nafs, hence it has a more superior status. (Islaahun-Nisa, Huqooquz-Zawjayn page 190)

The husband is like a spiritual mentor

The spiritual mentor (Sheikh) attends to the spiritual enhancement of the Mureed (disciple). However, a normal spiritual mentor who accepts Bait is insufficient to attend to the spiritual needs of the women. The Spiritual mentor is not available to them at all times. They require a Spiritual mentor of the house, the husband. This type of Spiritual mentor i.e. the husband is more beneficial to her than the other categories of Spiritual mentors. And his status is also more superior than the others. What a nice Spiritual mentor this household Spiritual mentor is. Apart from attending to your Deeni requirements, he also provides food etc. for you. He takes the responsibility of both the Deen as well as the Dunya. These characteristics would not be found in a normal Spiritual mentor. There is no worldly benefit to be derived from him. In fact, offerings (of gifts etc.) have to be made over to (some) of them. Also, she will be unable to derive as much Deeni benefit from him as she would derive from her husband. A normal Spiritual mentor will only be able to guide you when you enquire about something or whenever you happen to go to him. This might come about probably once in many years. Women in particular will hardly end up meeting their Spiritual mentor. The husband on the other hand is always with them. He will be able to monitor even deed. This is why I maintain that the Spiritual mentor of the Bait (house) is more superior than the Spiritual mentor of Bait. For some women, the spiritual mentor of the Bait (house i.e. the husband) is more beneficial than the spiritual mentor of the cane. The spiritual mentor of the Bait (house) will suffice for those women who are well-cultured, well-mannered and understanding. As for those who are uncultured, ill-mannered and lack understanding, they require the spiritual mentor of the cane… [At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 110]

Regardless of her superior rank, obedience to her husband is invariably imperative

Some people are of the opinion that men have unrestricted superiority over women and women are worthless non-entities. This is a fallacious notion. In fad, in some aspects they are equal to men whilst in some aspects they can surpass men. She can attain a higher. status than men if she observes more 'Ibadah like Sawlah, Sawm etc. The Shari'ah commands obedience to Allawh and His Rawsool (S). The husband will not be obeyed in opposition to Allawh and His Rawsool (S). In this respect, all women are equal. Even if she does not have a spiritual mentor, she should first and foremost obey Allawh and His Rawsool (S). The rights of Allawh and His Rawsool (S) are far more superior than the rights of the husband. Apart from Allawh and His Rawsool (S), the husband has the most rights over his wife. However, since the ordinary laymen are unable to determine the laws of Allawh and His Rawsool (S) themselves but through the medium of the spiritual mentors (Ulama and the Mashaikh), we can conclude albeit metaphorically that the spiritual mentors' rights are more superior than the husband. If the husband's directives are not in conflict with the Shari'ah, nobody else will be obeyed as his rights are the most superior. (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 110)

A woman's superiority over her husband in piety and religiousness does not absolve her of obeying him. She is invariably compelled to obey and honour her husband. Between the spouses, there are two aspects of superiority; the matrimonial aspect and the aspect of religiousness. In regards to matrimonial superiority, she will never be more superior than him. He will invariably be more superior than her in this respect. Even though she enjoys certain rights against him, he will always be more superior. As for superiority in regards to piety and religiousness, she can be more superior than him in this respect. There is a possibility that her status and merits are more superior in the eyes of Allawh Ta'ala because this superiority is founded upon good deeds etc. Nonetheless, this does not render her a mistress over her husband. She will invariably remain subjected to her husband. (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 169)

The husband has the most superior right after Allawh and His Rawsool (S)

Ladies! Remember well that apart from Shari laws, the rights of the husband supersede that of the spiritual mentor. If your husband commands you to do something that is not against the Shari'ah, nobody else will be given preference. Hence, the husband enjoys the most superior rights after Allawh and His Rawsool (S). If the husband commands you to do something whilst the spiritual mentor forbids you from doing it on the grounds that it is contrary to the Shari'ah, the husband will not be obeyed. In this case, the spiritual mentor will be obeyed. In fact it will be considered as though she obeyed the law of the Shari'ah.

The limits of obedience to the husband

If a woman was compelled to obey her husband in everything, many of them would have been deprived of worshipping Allawh Ta'ala that is the cardinal objective of the creation of mankind. As Allawh Ta'ala says:

And We did not create the Jinnat and mankind except that they may worship Me.

We deduce from this verse that the actual objective of the creation is the worship of Allawh Ta'ala. Hence, this objective should always be in the foreground.

An authentic Hadeeth mentions:

There should be no obedience to the creation in the disobedience of the creator.

In other words, it is not permissible to obey any command of the creation if it falls in contrast with the command of the Creator. If the husband commands his wife to perpetrate a sinful deed for instance, he orders her to withhold her Zakah payment, refrain from Sawlah, or abstain from pursuing (compulsory) Deeni education or something akin to it, it is Harawm to obey him. It is Fardh to disobey him if he commands her to abstain from a Fardh, Wajibb or Sunnat-i-Muakkadah. However, if he commands her to abstain from a Mustahabb (optional or preferable) deed, she is compelled to obey him. (Izaalatur-Rayn and Huqooqul-Walidayn page 34)

Nowadays, some women are very fashion-conscious. They emulate the styles and dressing of other (non-Muslim) nations. At times, the women themselves have no inclination to do this but their men folk compel them to. Remember! There is no scope to obey the creation when the Creator is being disobeyed. The women should ensure that they refrain from dressing in this manner even if their husbands compel them to as this is tantamount to emulation of men (or of other nations). (Huqooquz-Zawjayn page 344)

To sum it up, she should obey him in permissible and Makrooh Tanzihi acts and refrain from adhering to his demands of omitting a Fardh, Wajibb, or Sunnat-i-Muakkadah. (Izaalatur-Rayn)

The husband's rights – a basic principle

The wife is not permitted to carry out a permissible deed if it hampers her services to him. In this world, nobody else enjoys such rights as the husband over his wife as is evident from various Ahadeeth. However, she is not compelled to obey each and every one of his orders. She is compelled to execute his orders if abstention from such an order causes inconvenience to him or hampers her services to him provided they are not in conflict with the Shari'ah. She should ensure that she is not deficient in serving him or in fulfilling his rights.

Important rights of the husband over the wife

(1) It is Fardh upon the wife to serve her husband and fulfil his desires. (Izaalatur-Rayn)

(2) She should not observe Nafl fasting nor Nafl Sawlah when he is around without his permission. (Bahishti Zewar)

(3) Without his consent, she should not leave the house to visit anyone, relatives and strangers alike. (Bahishti Zewar part 4 page 38)

(4) She should not live in an untidy and dishevelled manner. She should adorn and beautify herself. In fact the husband has the right to beat her if she, in spite of him ordering her, refrains from adorning herself.

Leading the men to piety is the responsibility of women

One of the Deeni deficiencies found amongst some women is that they are not very particular about steering men away from the fire of hell. In other words, they couldn't be concerned in the least bit whether the husbands provide Halal or Harawm for them. His source of earnings, be it in the form of bribery or any other Harawm avenue is of no concern to them. Explain to your husbands that they should not pursue Harawm sources and you would suffice with the little Halal that they provide. Similarly, if the husband discards his Sawlah, she won't advise him in the least bit whereas if her own interests are at hand she will leave no stone unturned in achieving her ends. If a woman wishes to make her husband religious-conscious, it is not a very difficult task. However, to achieve this you should endeavour to become religious-conscious yourself. Be regular and particular about your Sawlah, Sawm, etc. thereafter, advise your husband as well. Insha Allawh your advice will then be very impressive. If the women muster the courage and strength, the men will have no option but to become Allawh-conscious. There are many instances whereby the women pressurized the men into giving up their evil practices. For example, some told them that if you don't abstain from accepting bribery, we will not eat your income. Their relationship of love compounded with her sincerity had such an effect that they relinquished their evil habit of accepting bribes. (Islaahe-Inqilaab page 184)

Rights of the husband over the wife

1. To obey the husband provided his orders are not in conflict with the Shari'ah.
2. To refrain from requesting more than he can afford.
3. To ensure that nobody enters the home without his permission.
4. To refrain from stepping out of the house without his consent.
5. To refrain from giving anything from his wealth without his consent.
6. To abstain from observing optional Sawlah and Sawm without his permission.
7. Not to refuse when he desires intercourse without any Shari impediment (like menses etc.)
8. Not to despise the husband because of his poverty or his ugliness.
9. To forbid politely if she happens to witness him perpetrating an anti-Shari deed.
10. To avoid addressing him by his first name.
11. To abstain from quarrelling and arguing with him.
12. To avoid complaining about the husband before others.
13. To avoid quarrelling and arguing with his relatives.

There are many rights in favour of and against both spouses. I have written down whatever has come to mind. (Imdaadul-Fatwa volume 2 page 186 question 278)

Summary of each other's rights:

The rights of the wife over the husband

(1) To be generous in her maintenance according to his capabilities.
(2) To continue teaching her Deeni Masa'il and emphasising the need for piety.
(3) To permit her to meet her close Mahrams (her immediate relations) now and again.
(4) To exercise patience and silence over her mistakes. If the need ever arises for admonishment, take into account moderation. Avoid being very stern.

The rights of the husband over the wife

(1) To obey, respect, serve and endeavour to please him. However, she should excuse herself in regards to impermissible acts.
(2) To refrain from demanding more than he can afford.
(3) To refrain from spending his wealth without his permission.
(4) To avoid being harsh towards his relatives in a manner displeasing to the husband. In particular, she should behave in a respectful and courteous manner to his parents. (Huqooqul-Islam page 14)

A few Masa'il regarding obedience to the husband

If the husband is at home, she should avoid observing Nafl (optional) Sawlah and Sawm without his permission as this might hamper her services towards him. Yes, she may observe Nafl 'Ibadah with his permission. The Hadeeth outlining this Masalah only makes mention of the clause whilst the husband is at home. Hence, if the husband is out (on a journey etc.) she may do so without his permission. We deduce from the same Hadeeth as well that she is not permitted to carry out something that would affect her services towards him without his consent. (Izaalatur-Rayn and Huqooquz-Zawjayn page 84)

Undertaking Bait without the consent of the husband

It is permissible for a women to take Bait (a pledge of spiritual allegiance) at the hands of a Shaikh without the permission of her husband. However, if there is a fear of any problems, it is permissible for her to relinquish undertaking Bait. For instance, if the husband restrains her from undertaking Bait, she should not take Bait. However, if she herself wishes to take Bait and she is courageous enough, she should, placing her trust in Allawh Ta'ala, take Bait. If this creates problems for herself, she should exercise patience and not express ingratitude. The servants of Allawh Ta'ala are afflicted with various difficulties. Such personalities are awarded high ranks in the hereafter. (Ibid)

Perpetrating a Makrooh Tanzihi at the behest of the husband

The aforementioned rule also applies to Makrooh Tanzihi deeds (acts which are religiously disapproved but to a lesser degree). If the husband commands her to execute such acts, she should abstain if she has the courage to do so or else she may carry them out. However, if he commands her to execute sinful deeds for instance, he prevents her from paying Zakah, or from observing Hijabb etc. it is Harawm (totally forbidden) to adhere to his commands. It is Fardh (compulsory) upon her to oppose him. If he restrains her from carrying out a Mustahabb (preferable) act, it is Wajibb (mandatory) upon her to adhere to him. (Izaalatur-Rayn)

Is she compelled to serve a relative or mother-in-law at the behest of her husband?

If the husband requests his wife to do some permissible work for anyone, relative or stranger, she is not compelled to concede to his demands. For example, he commands her to bake bread, sew clothes etc. for other people. However, if he commands her to do it out of some dire necessity, she is compelled to execute it accordingly because its non-execution might cause hardship to the husband. (Izaalatur-Rayn page 49)

Some men consider it their good fortune to keep their wives subjected to their mothers. This causes undue hardship and cruelty to these ladies. Remember! It is not compulsory upon the wife to serve her mother-in-law. If you consider yourself fortunate enough, why don't you serve her yourself or employ a domestic servant instead. (Islaahe-Inqilaab volume 2 page 188)

Is she permitted to do a stranger's work?

Out of dire need if a woman sews clothing for strange men, it will be permissible provided the person she is sewing for is pious and there is no fear of Fitnah (spiritual contamination). However, if the stranger is irreligious and there is a fear of Fitnah, she is not permitted to sew for him. Some immorally behaved persons tend to attain pleasure by merely looking at the sewing of a seamstress. (Izaalatur-Rayn page 49)

Obedience to the husband in spending in lawful channels

If the husband, without any Shari cause, restrains her from spending her own wealth in lawful avenues, she is not compelled to obey him. However, this shouldn't create problems and disunity. Both spouses should ensure that they live with harmony and unity as far as possible. Some husbands, due lo (heir irreligiousness tend to oppose their wives at such instances. She may obey him in regards to permissible and Makrooh Tanzihi acts just to avoid unnecessary problems. She is not permitted to omit Fardh, Wajibb and Sunnat-i-Muakkadah at his behest. (Izaalatur-Rayn page 48)

An important Masalah

The property of each spouse is recognised individually in Shari terms; the wife will be the sole owner of the property over which she exercises her rights of buying, selling, or disposal of her property. Similarly, the husband is regarded the sole owner of the property over which he has unrestricted disposal. If the combining of both properties in a disorderly manner adds up to the minimum Nisabb, Zakah and other such monetary dues will not be waived. Hence, if the husband tells his wife that their property is commonly owned and both of them are co-owners therefore she should not discharge Zakah, she should not obey him as this is contrary to the Shari'ah. Obedience to the creation is not permitted when the Creator is being disobeyed in the process. Some people are very apathetic towards this. (Izaalatur-Rayn page 47)

Adorning herself is a right of the husband

The Shari'ah stipulates that a woman should adorn and beautify herself for her husband. In fact, she is rewarded if she adorns herself for her husband. It is rather disturbing to note that nowadays (some) women live like toilet-cleaners (dirty, untidy and dishevelled) before their husbands and when they venture forth amongst their relatives (and other people) they adorn themselves from head to toe. If on the other hand, a woman decides to dress up for her husband; the poor lady is scoffed at. Other women taunt her and accuse her of immodesty saying: "Oh! look at her. She has no shame, she is adopting shameless blandishments for her husband." How deplorable! Where she is required to adorn herself, she is scoffed at and taunted and Where she has been restrained from exposing her refinery and blandishments, great care is taken. When the husband Commands her to adorn herself, what right does she have to live III ii dishevelled and untidy slate? (Khawyrul-lrshad Al-Tabbleegh, volume 14, page 59)

A grave error of some women

It is rather surprising, that some women live like toilet-cleaners and maids at home and the moment they have lo step into some conveyance, they dress up and transform themselves into madams. Everything has some objective and aim behind it. What will be their response if they are asked why they are adorning themselves out of their homes? It seems as though their objective is lo adorn themselves for others. It is rather ironical thai she does not wear the clothing for whom it was made (the husband) and also it seems very strange that in spite of the husband paying for the clothing, she does not wear it for him am I wears it for others. I feel ashamed mentioning such issues but such issues are discussed for the sake of reform. I low amazing! She does not converse in a civil manner with her husband nor does she adorn herself for him. However, when she goes to the homes of others, she speaks in a civil and sweet manner and even adorns herself. The husband pays the price whilst others get the benefit. What sort of justice is this? (At-Tabbleegh Dawaul-Uyoob volume 44 page 91)

An important Fatwa

Refraining from maintaining the wife or harassing her in consideration of the parents If the parents command one to abstain from a compulsory Shari due, let alone Wajibb, it is not even permissible to adhere to their demands. For instance, a person has such limited financial resources that if he has to serve his parents financially, his wife and children will land in difficulty. Such a person is not permitted to torment his wife and children whilst spending upon his parents. (Imdaadul-Fatawa)

Conducting herself before her husband

The Story of a Pious Lady

Every night after 'Isha Sawlah, a pious lady used to adorn herself with beautiful clothing, jewellery, Surmah, and do her hair up. She would then proceed to her husband and ask him if he required her. If he replied in the affirmative she would sleep with him for a little while and if he replied in the negative she would seek his permission to occupy herself in the Zikr of Allawh Ta'ala. Following his permission, she would remove her clothing and jewellery and put on simple clothing and occupy herself for the entire night in the 'Ibadah of Allawh Ta'ala. Look at the condition of this pious lady. At times she would adorn herself whilst at certain times she would put on coarse clothing. If somebody witnessed her whilst she was well-groomed, he would have surely been sceptical of her piety. But he does not realise the aim of adorning herself. She should not adorn herself to satisfy her own whims and fancies but rather because it is a Shari ruling that a woman should adorn herself for her husband. In this instance, she was rewarded for adorning herself. This saintly lady was observing a Shari rule because when the husband commands his wife to adorn herself, she has no right to live in an untidy and dishevelled state. However, when her husband did not require her and she did nwny with all her adornments, then too she did not do so to satisfy her whims and fancies. Such saintly people are subjected to the Shari'ah whether they adorn themselves or whether they opt for simplicity, they do nothing to please their souls. (Al-Tabbleegh volume 14 page 59)

CHAPTER VI

CONDUCTING WITH THE HUSBAND AND AN INDISPENSABLE CODE OF CONDUCT

There is no need to explain anything much to understanding women. They have the ability to differentiate between good and evil. However, we will still explain a few indispensable words of advice. Once you understand these, you will be competent enough to understand other things as well. (Bahishti Zewar volume 4 page 39)

The vitality of unity and obedience

Remember that the bond linking husband and wife is a bond both will be subjected to for the rest of their life. If both their hearts are united and well-bonded, there is no greater blessing than this. And if, Allawh forbid, their hearts are not compatible and disunited, there is no greater calamity than this. Hence as far as possible, live with his heart in your hands (always award preference to his pleasure) and carry out your responsibilities with the mere gestures of his eyes (meaning his slightest wish should be your command). If he commands you to fold your hands and remain standing for the entire night, then the prosperity of this world as well as the hereafter lies in you enduring this trivial harassment of this world thereby attaining the success and prosperity of the hereafter. Ever do nothing that is in conflict with his nature and moods. If he regards the day as night, you should also do the same. (Bahishti Zewar)

The need for honouring the husband and taking his nature into consideration

Win-never you converse with your husband, take his moods into consideration. If you find him in a jovial mood, joke and laugh with him. If not, avoid being jovial with him. Converse with him according to his moods; remember well that the relationship between husband and wife are not based on love alone but coupled with love, her honour and respect for him is also imperative. It is a great error to consider him your equal. Ever accept no service from your husband. Driven by low, if he ever massages your hands or head, don't allow him to do si). Fonder for a moment that if your lather has to do this, will you ever accept it? How can you allow your husband then in serve you when his status is far greater than that of your father? In all your actions, conversations and in every facet of your relationship with him, always be mindful of your manners and behaviour with him. (Bahishti Zewar page 40)

Refrain from asking more than he can afford

Do not ask your husband for an allowance that is beyond his financial position. Whatever's available to you – even if it be dry bread and chutney – consider it your own home and continue with your life. If you happen to fancy some clothing or jewellery mid your husband docs not have the financial resources, do not request him to purchase it nor despair over its unavailability. Don't even mention it to him. Think for yourself that if you mention il to him, he will think to himself that this woman has no concern for me as she is making inappropriate requests. In fact, even if the husband is wealthy, as far as possible avoid asking for anything yourself. However, if he himself asks what he may bring for you, there is no problem in making a request then. Don't make a request on your own accord because he who asks of others ultimately lowers his status in their eyes and becomes disgraced. (Bahishti Zewar page 39)

Code of conduct when he returns from a journey

When your husband returns from abroad or from a distant journey, enquire about his health, conditions, whether he encountered any difficulties or not. Massage his hands and feel, perhaps he is tired or hungry. Make arrangements for the preparation of meals etc. for him. If it is a hot summer's day, fan him and cool him down. In short, do whatever you can for his ease and comfort. Don't ever start talking about money and about what he brought and how much he brought for you and where his wallet is etc. When he is finally prepared to give something to you then only you may accept it. Do not take him to task by telling him that he earns so much and he has given you so little, nor rebuke him and tell him that he spends too much of money on himself. If you happen to ask him such questions when he is in a good mood and you coincidentally pose such questions to him in an amicable manner, there is no harm in this. (Bahishti Zewar page 40)

The worth of what he brings home and the despicability of ingratitude

Always express pleasure over the things your husband brings for you whether you fancy the items or not. Don't ever say that a certain item is not nice and express dislike for it. Such an attitude will break his heart and in the future he will not be disposed to bring anything for you. If you praise the item and accept it happily, he will become very cheerful and more generous in the future. Don't be overtaken by anger and express ingratitude towards your husband. Don't say that you experienced no pleasure and joy in this household and your whole life was spent in difficulties and problems and nor say that your father has destroyed your future by throwing you into this blazing fire and immersed you into lifelong problems. Such comments tend to nurture hatred and dislike in the heart.

Il is mentioned in a Hadeeth that Rawsoolullawh (S) is reported to have said: "I've witnessed relatively far loo numerous women in hell."

Someone enquired of him: "O Rawsoolullawh! Why'd there be more women in hell?"

He replied: "They curse others a lot and they're ungrateful towards their husbands."

Ponder over the seriousness of expressing Ingratitude towards the husband. (Bahishti Zewar page 39)

Protecting the husband's property and the importance of tidiness

Keep your husband's property in a neat and orderly manner, leisure that the bedroom is neat and clean and do not allow it to become dirty. The bed should not be untidy and dirty. Remove nil wrinkles and creases from it. If the pillow is dirty, change the pillow-case and if there isn't one, sew one. There is nothing grand about you doing something only after he asks you to do il. True elegance lies in you doing everything right without him asking you to do so. Whatever is entrusted in your care, keep it safely. If it is clothes, fold them (or hang them) neatly; don't dump them nor leave them strewn about. Keep them in a suitable place. Don't put up excuses and find ruses for everything. Never concoct lies as this weakens your esteem and honour and in the future you will never be believed in what you say. (Bahishti Zewar page 41)

Refraining from obstinacy and offensive language

Due to an acute lack of understanding and due to their apathetic behaviour towards the repercussions, some wives utter such things which engender sorrow and displeasure within their men's hearts. At times they lend to irrationally blurt out certain things whilst at times they tend to taunt and reproach their husbands. Consumed by rage, they spit out their bitter words against their husbands merely to offend them with no apparent purpose. Ultimately, when the husband's heart is turned away from her, she goes about crying and weeping in vain. Remember well that once his heart has already been tainted by your hostile tongue and even though you somehow reconcile after a few days, it won't be the same as before. No matter how many excuses and apologies you may proffer later on, the love and clear-heartedness he cherished in your favour will not be found. Later on, when any incident occurs, his mind will wander back to the arguments you had with him and he will think to himself that this is the same person who told me such-and-such thing on that day. Therefore, always think and ponder before dealing with affairs relating to your husband. You will thereby earn yourself the pleasure of Allawh and His Rawsool (S) and the bounties of both this world as well as the hereafter. Do not be adamant and stubborn on any matter. Even if something is committed against you or contrary to your whims, overlook it this time and attend to it at some other appropriate time. If you are encountering any difficulties at your husband's house, don't mention it but rather express happiness lest your husband gets grieved about your constrained circumstances. Such manners will surely bring about his pleasure and happiness. (Bahishti Zewar volume 4 page 39)

Her reaction to his anger and temper

If your husband is angry with you over something and he tends lo cold-shoulder you, don't pull up your face and sit put. Instead, coax and cajole him, seek his pardon and humble yourself before him. Do whatever you can to win him over. Don't cold-shoulder him even if he is at fault and you arc blameless. Consider it a source of pride and honour to humbly seek his pardon. If you are to blame and it is your fault, then to sit aside stuck-up and furious is an even more greater act of stupidity and immaturity. Such actions are bound to break his heart. If the husband is upset over something, don't say such things that are bound to aggravate his anger. If he ever scolds or rebukes you, take control of yourself and do not back-answer him. No matter what he says, remain calm and silent. He himself will regret his follies once his anger subsides and he will become extremely pleased with you. This attitude will, Insha Allawh, ensure that he does not become angry with you in the future, However, if you do not remain silent and display any sign of defiance, the incident may have disastrous consequences. (Bahishti Zewar page 41)

In the event of an illicit relationship

Never slander your husband on grounds of trivial doubts. For instance, don't tell him that he jokes and laughs with a particular woman, or he tends to frequent a particular place and what he is up to over there etc. If he is innocent, think for yourself how upset he will be on hearing these accusations. On the other hand if he is an evil person and your accusations turn out to be true, then your anger, grumbling and forcing him to admit will only aggravate the situation against you. If you yourself wish to turn his heart away from you, you can do so to your own detriment. Do you really think he will relinquish his evil habits with such an attitude? If you wish him to abandon these illicit and evil relationships, employ tact and wisdom. Speak to him in privacy and explain to him (the evil of such a relationship). The day Allawh Ta'ala grants him guidance, he will become your slave. Despite you explaining to him and making him feel ashamed of himself in privacy, he refuses to abandon his evil habits, exercise patience. Don't go about advertising his evil ways thereby disgracing him. Avoid letting your fury overcome you and don't try to subdue him as this will make him more adamant and persistent. If you are driven by your fury and go about telling people about his relationship, then the level of relationship that prevailed between the two of you will drop even further. He might avoid conversing with you altogether. Then you will go about crying in lament and despair. (Bahishti Zewar)

How to subdue the husband

Remember well that Allawh Ta'ala has made the men like lions. In other words, He has endowed them with valour and bravery. They will never become subjugated to you with pressure and force. The simplest method of overpowering them is to flatter, cajole and obey them. It would be rather erroneous and Immature of you to try and pressurise them out of anger. You might not understand the evil consequences of this at tins point in lime but once there is an outbreak of quarrelling and dissent, the evil repercussions of this will no doubt appear at some time or the other. (Bahishti Zewar page 41)

Code of conduct with the in-laws

Live in an amicable and graceful manner with the family, from the very beginning be mindful of your manners and character. Be compassionate towards the young and respectful towards the elderly. Don't hand over your responsibilities to others nor leave your possessions lying around thinking that somebody else will pick them up for you. Whatever activity your mother-in-law or sister-in-law (husband's sister) is engaged in, don't think it is below your dignity to do the same work. Do the work without them asking you to do so. This will engender sentiments of love within their hearts for you. When two people are conversing in hushed tones, separate yourself from them nor try to determine what they are conversing about. In addition to this, don't needlessly think that they are talking about you. You should most definitely also bear in mind that you don't live disheartened-ly in your in-law's house. Although you may not feel at ease because of it being a new home to you or because of them being strangers to you, you should try and make yourself understand (and get used to the place) instead of just sitting down and sulking away. You have only just come to a new place and now you already have a tendency to depart from there! Always be on your guard when engaged in any conversation. Don't talk so much of trash that it looks immoral nor talk so little that in spite of them coaxing and cajoling you, you hardly utter anything as this is also not good and considered a sign of pride. If you tend to dislike something at your in-laws house, don't complain about it nor carry tales when you come to your mother's house. It is rather evil to go and mention everything that takes place at your in-laws' house and it is also extremely detestable for the mothers to dig-up and wheedle every little thing from their daughters. It is mainly through these evil habits that quarrels, squabbles and bickering crop up between both the families. These habits breed nothing save this. If your husband hands over his salary to his parents instead of you, don't feel offended. In fact even if he hands it over to you, wisdom demands that you don't accept it and ask him to hand it over to them so that they don't cherish evil thoughts about you and think that you have taken their son under your control. (Bahishti Zewar page 40)

Cordiality and unity with the mother-in-law and sister-in-law

Together with the relationship of blood-ties in the Holy Qur'an, Allawh Ta'ala has made mention of the relationship of Musaharawt (in-laws) as well. From this we can deduce the importance of the rights of the father-in-law and the mother-in-law. Hence, special considerations of Ihsan and Akhlaqq (good character and decorum) should be taken into account when dealing with them as well. (Huqooqul-Islam page 15)

As long as your parents-in-laws are alive, regard serving and obeying them as your duty and honour. Don't think about living separately from your mother-in-law and sisters-in-law as this is the root of a soured relationship between you and them. Think for yourself that his parents brought him up and nurtured him and they in their old age got him married to get some rest and comfort. On the contrary, the moment the daughter-in-law steps fool into the house, all she is thinking about is separating her husband from his. parents. Once his mother learns that the daughter-in-law is instigating her son to live separately, numerous problems and squabbles ensue. (Bahishti Zewar page 41).

However, these rules are based on good character alone because the wile has the right to live separately from her in-laws. She may request this right and her husband is compelled to fulfil this right. In fact, if she is convinced of impending discord between his wife and family as is generally the case nowadays – good character also demands that he makes separate arrangements for his wife's accommodation. See Chapter I for further details. (Compiler)

CHAPTER VII
DISCORD AMONGST WOMEN

The discord and conflicts between women arc not Shadeed (serious) but rather they are Madeed (lengthy). If there are embittered relations between them, they extend over a long period of time. Another evil habit they have is that whenever they quarrel over something, they have a penchant to dig up old bones. This malady is found relatively to a lesser degree amongst men. Even if matters have been sorted out and old scores have been settled, women tend to repeat the same old problems on another occasion of dispute. The problems of the second occasion may be trivial but simply as a result of digging up old bones, it gets very serious, particularly when her reminder is in harsh and heart-rending words in which women are very proficient. On occasions of censure and rebuke, she will boast of all her past favours in a manner that is really disturbing and heart-rending. (Insidadul-Fasadd page 326)

Difference between the anger and disputes of men and women

A man's disposition contains a tremendous amount of heat. This is why the effects of their anger are exposed in the form of beating, shouting, and screaming. Women on the other hand have been endowed with modesty and coolness within their dispositions. This is why the effects of their anger are not readily exposed. In actual fact, the anger of women surpasses that of men. Due to a relative deficiency in their intellectual capabilities, they tend to become furious on occasions where men tend to remain calm. Hence, the occasions for their fury and anger are also dramatically increased. Apart from this, sweet anger is more long-lasting than the anger expressed by shouting and screaming. The fury expressed in the form of shouting and screaming is like boiling water winch when removed from its source of heat, subsides very quickly. Sweet anger on the other hand remains and continues simmering within the heart. Such a condition is referred to as malice. So sweet anger comprises of a 2-faceted sin and malice comprises of an additional sin. When the fury has not exposed itself, it remains simmering within the heart leaving a trail of anguish and unpleasantness between the parties. So, malice is not only a sin on its own but it is a root of many other sins. Malice forms part of sweet-anger and sweet-anger is found relatively more in women than in men. I fence, the fury of women is a source of numerous other sins. The anger of men on the other hand is not like this. The anger or men is more of a fleeting seizure whereas the anger of women is sweet (unapparent and long-lasting). (Ghawa'ilul-Ghawzabb page 24]

Causing dissension – an evil tendency in some women

Women are relatively more fond of back-biting. They carry tales themselves and listen to others a well. They have a penchant and quest for this evil. When a woman comes to her, she will enquire what another woman had to say about her as if she was just waiting to hear something. When informed what evil the other woman had to say about her, then alas! the path to an unfavourable relationship is cemented. Remember, such backbiting brings about dissension and breeds enmity between the parties. Apart from this, backbiting about others and listening to others backbite, are both major sins themselves. The Holy Qur'an very vehemently condemns this sin. (Huqooquz-Zawjayn page 344)

Contention between men spurred by women

At times, the disputes between women are very serious indeed. They tend to inform their men folk about their internal problems and disputes. They tell their husbands etc. that so and so verbally abused me in this way and so and so had this to say about you. Men are after all hot-blooded and they are very sensitive to such things. This is not confined to words alone. They eventually seek physical vengeance which can perhaps lead to aggressive violence and murder. (Insidadul-Fasadd page 327)

An evil habit of some women and domestic feuds

Women, on the slightest pretext, have a habit never to forget about certain things, even if it is something totally trivial. They will continue finding some cause or another for picking a quarrel and dispute. Their malice never seems to leave them. Not a single home is saved from this evil malady found amongst them. Mother- and daughter quarrel with one another, mother-in-law and daughter-in-law are always at loggerheads with each other and sisters-in-law it seems, were created for this very purpose. When analysed, the basis of these disputes is merely unfounded apprehension and mistrust. The slightest suspicion leads her to draw conclusions and start fighting with others. When the other party sees it coming their way, there is now an even greater scope for dispute. If the whole dispute is checked into carefully, it appears that it flared up merely because she was told that so and so had some complain or the other about you… If only she rejected this saying: "No! That woman won't say anything like this about me." Most domestic feuds flare up mainly due to such trivial squabbles. When a woman hears of another lady speaking ill of her via a 3RD person, she should avoid listening to the 3RD person and approach the other woman directly and ask her if she has any complain about you. Il is also a Sunnah practise to approach a person directly if you have any grievance against him; the other party will be able to address the problem directly and if the grievance is baseless then the problem will be averted. Taking mere hearsay into account and passing judgement according to it is totally prohibited by the Shari'ah and it also constitutes Jahalat (ignorance). The Holy Qur'an declares:

Beware of suspicion because some forms of suspicion is a sin.

Rawsoolullawh (S) is reported to have said:

Beware of suspicion because suspicion is the worst form of lies.

Our entire lives' experience proves that mere hearsay is very rarely true. One person says that if the incidents narrated by people who have no personal interests nor are they habitual liars were to be analyzed, not even a quarter of those incidents would be true. One can then imagine the worth of that narration in which the narrator has some personal interest. Most domestic feuds are caused by the narrations of such evil-minded women. Their reports are totally baseless. One of I he ladies narrating the incident will add on her own words whilst the 3RD person will season it up with her own spices. In this way the incident is blown out of proportion thereby justifying some feud or quarrel: this is likened to a person who is all alone at night in a jungle. He is extremely fearful of a lion. When he focuses his attention on a tree it looks like a lion to him. As he continues examining it, he imagines himself looking at its facial features as well. Now he thinks that it is really a lion whereas it is nothing in reality. It all stems from imagination and delusion. Similarly, hearsay is a delusion of the heart. The narrator adds on a bit of spicy words. Moreover, the addressee herself is also pre-disposed to listen to fault-finding and backbiting. On the slightest pretext she will re-freshen all the past incidents and ascribe all her delusions to virtual reality. Now she feels she has some ground to justify her annoyance and grumbling. (Ghawa'ilul-Ghawzabb page 224)

Even eyewitness reports of some women are unreliable. Many of them are outraged over certain things they witness being carried out by their sisters-in-law (husband's sister or husband's brother's wife). However, when she is told that what you understood is not exactly true and the truth of the matter is this, she gets even more furious. "You think I'm still a child?"

She says. "You think I don't understand? No! She (my sister-in-law) did that to infuriate me!"

Repeated explanations would be to no avail. The perception she 1ST harboured will never change. Thereafter she will continue building layer upon layer of misconceptions and delusions upon her very initial perception of events. Now in a few days mutual discord between the 2 parties will erupt leading to intense backbiting and tale-bearing between them. None of them will leave any stone unturned in criticizing and ridiculing the other. These events were the repercussions of anger. Women tend to be overcome and subdued by their anger. (They are short-tempered by nature). [Ghawa'ilul-Ghawzabb page 225]

The anger of the sister-in-law and her excesses over her brother-in-law and other orphaned children of the household

It happens in many places that when the senior person of the household dies, he leaves behind, together with big children, minor children as well. The minors are left behind in the care of their elder brothers. The brother's wives in turn are charged with the task of upbringing these minors because it is the women who remain at home for most part of the day whilst the men remain outdoors. The sister-in-law ejects her malice on these poor kids. Her maltreatment includes beating them, verbally abusing them, tantalising them, rationing their food, total disregard towards their clothing and treating them worse than servants. She won't suffice with this alone. As a form of securing her future, she will lay false grievances against them before her husband. In short, it is rather difficult to outline the inhumane treatment she confronts them with. I address this to the men folk as well. They should personally monitor the orphaned children as well. Avoid believing in everything the women complain about. It's an accepted fact that the relationship between the wife and husband's brother (or sister) is one of repugnance. So what weight will her grievances hold against them? Due to her estranged relationship, she is bound to lodge baseless complaints against them. In my personal opinion, I advise the men to declare very vehemently lo their wives on such occasions that they will under no circumstances adhere to their complaints even if they are speaking the truth. I am not telling this to all the men. Many of them are men in the true sense of the word and they make total use of their intellectual capabilities on such occasions and they consider such conditions of staying together as the living together of lambs and wolves. Wherever there is a gathering of wolves and lambs, the wolves will subject the lambs to nothing but harassment and torment. The wolves will never show pity to or support the lambs. Don't harass the (younger) brothers on the word of the wife. How aptly did a person comment on the condition of the orphaned children when he said, "The orphaned children are not even counted amongst the living. They died with their parents."

What show of gallantry is there in beating the dead? Irrespective of the amount of love and care you display towards them later on, you will never be able to console their dejected souls. A degree of dismal depression and cheerlessness normally looms over an orphan. Make 2 children, an orphan and a non-orphan sit together and place something before them. Tell them that whoever picks up this item first will be considered the owner. Be rest assured that the orphan won't stretch his hand out towards the item because his heart has become insensitive towards any form of joy and happiness. (Ghawa'ilul-Ghawzabb page 227)

The most suitable strategy for avoiding hostilities

1. The men should avoid believing in everything the women folk say. Also, the women should avoid saying such things that will infuriate the men folk.
2. When listening to any complaint, reflect over the possibility that the complainants (the ladies of the household in this case) probably spiced up one thing with 10 others.

If you witnessed the incident with your very own eyes and you wished to take revenge, you would have taken revenge for just one evil. However, (if you rely on their word) you might end up taking revenge for ten evils. One can then imagine the repercussions of such a move. This can be likened to where a person damages our property to the value of one rand and we in turn damage his property to the value often rand. When this case reaches the court of law, we will be guilty even though the other party initiated the problem. If you heard that somebody was backbiting about you and you in turn backbite about him as well. This is now lit for tat and the score has been settled. If we were to assume that such a reprisal is fair in terms of the quantity – one spoke ill of the other and vice versa – then too there is no peace of mind. Your backbiting may be relatively worse in terms of its magnitude. It might even increase in the future. Many a limes when one develops wickedness within the heart against another party, he is not content with taking revenge for the initial cause of the problem alone. Reprisals and revenge will not eradicate the wickedness from the heart. In fact, he will develop rancour or jealousy within his heart. Rancour (malice) and jealousy is characteristically worse than backbiting. In regards to jealousy the Hadeeth warns:

Jealousy devours good deeds just as fire devours wood.

So the evil that has entered your heart in retaliation of his backbiting is characteristically worse as it even annihilates all \our other good deeds as well. On such occasions, employ your faculty of reasoning and think against die desires of your soul. Contemplate over the fact that if you fell into all these sins only as a form of a reprisal against his backbiting, what evil repercussions can follow. Mull over this fact and develop some fear within the heart. (Ghawa'ilul-Ghawzabb, page 724)

The most appropriate strategy for avoiding domestic disputes

The best strategy for avoiding any domestic problems is to ensure that a few families (or a few women) do not live together in one house. A few women living together under one roof is a cause of many problems. (Malfoozaate-Ashrawfiyyah page 27, Al-Insidadul-Fasadd page 327)

It's safer not to deal with one's own family members

A famous saying goes:

Live like brothers and deal like strangers.

However, dealing with brothers albeit like strangers is a bit difficult nowadays. So I have amended this saying slightly thus:

Deal with strangers and live (amicably) with the brothers.

In other words don't even deal with the brothers. On many occasions it has been witnessed that dealing with family members creates a lot of problems. Relationships are soured, injustices are committed etc. and one may suffer loss as well. (Malfoozaate-Ashrawfiyyah page 234, Husnul-Azeez page 595)

CHAPTER IIX
HOUSEHOLD RESPONSIBILITIES

The responsibilities of the household rest upon the women

According to the Hadeeth:

A woman is the guardian of her husband's home and children and she will be questioned about them.

In other words, she has been awarded some authority over her husband's home and children and she will be called to account for all this (on the day of judgement). [Huqooqul-Bait page 15]

Some women refuse to carry out any domestic chores nor do they monitor the affairs of the household. According to the Hadeeth, a woman is the governess of her household. She will be questioned about the running of the household. Lack of household supervision leads to theft etc. lie very particular about this. Don't leave your responsibilities lo others. (Huqooquz-Zawjayn Page 15)

Many wives are under the impression that the only rights the husbands have over them is to ensure that his food is cooked, bed is made al night, check his clothing when it goes and comes from the laundry and put the clothes away etc. Apart from this, nothing else is considered to be the husband's rights if there are any children, only their toilet demands will be attended to. This also when there is no servant available in the home. Otherwise the servant has to attend to these needs as well. The lady of the household is grossly negligent of the whereabouts and conditions of the children. If a maid is available to do the cooking as well, then the lady is not even aware of what's happening in the kitchen as well. Now the maid has total control ill the household. She is al liberty to do as she wills. In short, some women have no concern whatsoever for their husband's property. (Huqooqul-Bait page 18)

Domestic chores is also a form of 'Ibadah

Overcome with religious zeal and fanatical piety, some women tend to take a Tasbeeh and sit on the Musawlla (prayer mat). The responsibilities of the household are consigned to the maids and other domestic servants. This is not a very good approach. Supervising the household and protecting the husband's properly is Fardh (obligatory) upon the wife. Such an approach is bound to create shortcomings in fulfilling this religious obligation. What is the benefit of her optional (Nafl) Sawlah, Tasbeeh etc. if her compulsory dues are suffering drawbacks? Hence, avoid being so fanatical with your piety that you pay no attention to the house whatsoever. Observe your optional Sawlah, Sawm etc. in a manner by which you are able to fulfil the rights of the household as well. For you as women, this also forms part of Deen because you are being rewarded for taking care of the household. If your intention is that Allawh Ta'ala has charged me with the responsibility of protecting and supervising this home and I'm fulfilling His command, then you will gain the Thawabb (reward) for doing your domestic chores as well. However, don't gel so absorbed with your household work that the Deen is totally neglected. Be moderate in whatever you do. Zikrullawh can be observed even while you are performing your household chores. You are not really obligated to sit on a Musawlla with a Tasbeeh to observe the Zikr of Allawh Ta'ala. A Hadeeth commands:

Keep the tongue wet with the Zikr of Allawh Ta'ala at all times.

Obviously the Tasbeeh and Musawlla is not always with a person. Hence, Zikrullawh is not confined to any restrictions of this nature. It could be carried out at all times and conditions. (Huqooqul-Bait 54)

Eradication of a misunderstanding

Nome women may probably be very excited over the prospect of Dunya also becoming part of Deen as explained in the aforementioned paragraphs that household chores with the correct intention also forms part of Deen. They suffice by observing no other form of 'Ibadah and suffice with preparing food and doing household chores under the misconception that since this is also Deen, there is no need to observe any other form of 'Ibadah like Sawlah, Sawm etc. This is why I had explained that such things (household chores etc.) are not acts of devotion on their own. They will not take the place of Sawlah and Sawm etc … remember that Sawlah, Sawm etc. are acts of devotion on their own right whereas household chores and other such acts are not acts of 'Ibadah on their own. They are only affiliated to the 'Ibadah (in terms of the reward). They cannot take the place of Sawlah, Sawm etc. What a world of difference between Sawlah, Sawm, and household chores; these household chores form part of Deen and constitute an 'Ibadah from a different angle altogether; these chores become an 'Ibadah subject to the correct intention. And the intention should be that I as a wife am serving my husband and trying to comfort him in order to fulfil his rights upon me. Subject io this intention, even worldly matters turn out to be Deen. (Huqooquz-Zawjayn waz Al-Aqilal-ul-Ghawfilat page 320)

Performing household chores personally in spite of the presence of maids

Those who have been blessed with maids and other domestic servants should do some of the housework with their own hands as well. It should not be such that you relax the whole day doing no sort of work. In so doing the habit of working diminishes and one turns out to he dependant upon others all (he time. Working (in the household etc.) ensures that the habit of hard work is retained. Apart from this, hard work is quite conducive to the maintenance of good health and physical strength. A Hadeeth says:

A strong believer is better than a weak believer. Nonetheless, all of them have goodness in them.

It would be rather courageous of you to attend to the household chores as well. Take the services of the maids and servants under your personal supervision. And now and then do the work with your own hands as well. Together with this, spare some of your time to engage in the observance of optional Sawlah, Tasbeeh etc. If time is limited, you may engage in Zikr whilst carrying out your daily chores. (Huqooqul-Bait page 55)

Household chores are beneficial for the women themselves

A person commented to Hadhrawt Thanwi (RA) that the women are exhausting themselves doing so much of housework. They refuse to sit at ease even for a minute. Hence, they themselves don't seek their own comfort. To this Hadhrawt replied: "Hard work of this nature is beneficial to them as well. Hard work maintains sound health. For instance, cooking, pounding, grinding with the millstone etc. is very beneficial to them. Even in my own home, the ladies carry out all the work with their own hands. Where there is a need, they may even pound a bit of wheat on their own. So if the women take upon these difficult, though beneficial, chores out of their own free will ii is another matter altogether. However, mercilessly impressing difficult housework upon them is cruel and uncivil. (Nusrawtun-Nisa page 550)

Since the ladies abandoned household toil, their health has suffered a severe blow. They are always on some medication or the other. The nations that to date still uphold the old custom of the women folk toiling hard, can boast of sound health. May Allawh destroy the pride of those women who refuse to do housework. Apart from the sin they are committing from a religious angle, they are also suffering worldly loss in that they are suffering from poor health. (At-Tabbleegh Dawaul-Uyoob volume 4 page 92)

The responsibilities and shortcomings of women in household chores

Many women say that their washer ladies are very trustworthy. The washer ladies count the clothes themselves when taking them for washing. As a result, the clothes are neither checked when sending them in nor when they are received. The women rely totally on the trust of the washer lady. She is given total authority; she may do as she pleases. Some households do keep track of the clothes they hand in for washing. However, all they do is write the total number of _____ with charcoal on the wall. In one house I've been to, the entire wall was blackened with charcoal. The figure written on the wall is not reliable because it can get erased very easily. The_ can be amended by the washing lady herself. Many a time, there is a dispute between the house folks and the washing lady and both parties are unable to substantiate their claims. Finally, the house people submit to the demands of the washer ladies. The most simplest method to overcome this problem is to record all such transactions in a book or board that stays in your own possession. This is adequate protection against any possible disputes over any shortfall. However, there is no such consideration in the homes today simply because the women don't deem this to be their responsibility. (Huqooqul-Bait page 18)

The indispensability of clear-cut transactions

Allawh Ta'ala commands us to write out all transactions. However, nowadays people consider it a wrong-doing. A person who writes out all his transactions and keeps written track of all his affairs is accused of being a very suspicious and apprehensive person. Quite often one does not recall who took what from him resulting in dire problems. (Husnul-Azeez volume 2 page 364)

Even if it is a seemingly trivial matter, it should be recorded as this proves extremely beneficial. Also, it clears any doubts a person may develop within his heart. (Al-Ifrawdhat volume 9 page 347)

Maintaining clear-cut transactions is a very commendable habit. When repaying or receiving a loan, write the details out immediately. Or for instance, when giving clothes to the laundry, write out what you have given. This will ensure that there is no error etc. Another benefit of recording everything is that even if the records are somehow misplaced, you still have some awe over the laundry man and he will return all the clothing correctly. Writing and keeping record of all one's affairs is a great bounty of Allawh Ta'ala. (Ifrawdhat volume 9 page 350)

A very busy person should avoid relying on his memory. He should write out all important mailers. (Husnul-Azeez volume 1 page 592)

Household chores, cooking etc. – compulsory upon the women or not?

One Maulana used to say that it is obligatory upon the women to prepare food for their husbands. According to me, it is not obligatory upon them. I substantiate this view from the verse:

And among the signs of Allawh Ta'ala is that He has created for you wives from amongst yourselves so that you may dwell in tranquillity with them and He has brought about love and mercy between you.

In short, they were created for a specific purpose; to bring about tranquillity and calmness within the heart. They are there to amuse and cheer you, not to make Roties for you.(Nusrawtun-Nisa page 551)

Preparation of meals – a religious obligation upon the wife

A person once asked Hadhrawt Thanwi (RA) if the wife is compelled to cook for her husband. Hadhrawt replied, "Religiously she is compelled to prepare the food, not judicially. If the husband requests her to prepare food, she is religiously obligated to obey him. This is corroborated by the Ahadeeth. In one Hadeeth, Rawsoolullawh (S) is reported to have said that if the husband commands his wife to take a rock from the black mountain to the white mountain and a rock from the white mountain to the black mountain, she'd do accordingly." This is the extent to which she is compelled to accede to his commands. Preparation of food etc. is obviously of a much lesser degree than this. (Husnul-Azeez volume 3 page 312)

CHAPTER IX
PART I
THE RIGHTS OF THE WIFE

Friends! Since Allawh Ta'ala Himself has instituted the rights of women, who has the authority to change them? If the husband fails to fulfil their rights, he will be guilty of trampling the rights of fellow humans. Men should ponder over the most exquisite manner of how Allawh Ta'ala intercedes on behalf of the women. Allawh Ta'ala says:

And treat them (the women) with kindness, if you take a dislike to them, it may be that you dislike a certain thing and (whereas) Allawh Ta'ala brings about through il a great deal of good.

Obviously, many factors can contribute to disliking them. However, the main factor that brings about a dislike towards them is their offensive character. And this is really disturbing and obnoxious to a man. However, it is as though Allawh Ta'ala promises you, the men, that He will ensure that their offensive character etc. will be a great deal of goodness for you. Allawh Ta'ala is all-wise; He has the capability of doing everything. For instance, Allawh Ta'ala may bring forth from this woman some children who will assist you on the day of judgement. Examine very closely the verses I have recited on this topic and judge for yourself the clarity with which Allawh Ta'ala institutes the women's rights. (At-Tabbleegh Kisaun-Nisa volume 7 page 120 & 126)

Summary of a wife's rights

The following is a list of a wife's rights over her husband:

1. To confront with exceptional character and to treat her with kindness.
2. To endure patiently, albeit with moderation, all her excesses and harassment.
3. To be moderate in one's Ghawyrawt (an Arabic word which refers to a spirit of possessiveness or sense of honour particularly when the wife speaks to or is involved with strange men. This attribute, although scorned upon by the western world, is quite acceptable in Islam). In other words, don't become suspicious of her nor remain totally ignorant.
4. To be moderate in spending upon her; avoid being niggardly nor permit her to be extravagant.
5. To learn and teach her the Masa'il (propositions) of Haidh (and other Masa'il exclusively related to women) and to emphasise the institution of Sawlah and other tenets of Deen and to prevent her from Bid'at (innovations) and religious prohibitions.
6. To maintain equality between the wives.
7. In keeping with her needs
8. To have sexual intercourse with her.
9. To refrain from coitus Interruptus without her permission.
10. To provide her with her house sufficient enough to attend to her needs.
11. To allow her to meet her close relatives such as her parents, father's brothers, father's sisters, her own brothers and sisters etc.
12. To abstain from disclosing her intimate and personal habits such as her sexual preferences etc.
13. To refrain from beating her excessively. (This in no way implies that he must beat her. Although he is permitted to beat her, the best is to abstain from lifting the hand upon this weak creation of Allawh Ta'ala).
14. To desist from divorcing her unnecessarily.

Both spouses have numerous rights upon one another. I have written down whatever has come to mind. I have extracted these from Ihyaul-Uloom etc. (Imdaadul-Fataawa volume 2 page 185 question 278)

Why the wife's maintenance is Wajibb?

The Fuqawha (jurists) are explicit over the fact that maintenance is also awarded in lieu of confinement or restraint. In other words, a person who is confined to the services etc. of another person and due to this confinement he is unable to earn a living for himself, the person confining him is compelled to attend to his upkeep and expenses. This can be likened lo the meals provided to the witnesses. The witnesses arc confined to the task of testifying on behalf of the defendant or plaintiff. Hence, they will be provided with meals during those limes. The rulers of today have retained this Islamic law until this present day. In short, the maintenance awarded to the wife is in lieu of the restraint placed upon her. (Islaahe-Inqilaab page 191)

When does maintenance became obligatory?

The only condition for the obligation of maintenance is the surrender of the wife before her husband. In other words, she wholly submits herself to her husband without any shortcoming on her part. However, on valid grounds if she refuses to do so, for example, the husband has not as yet paid the agreed cash Mahr, she will still be eligible to claim maintenance because the shortcoming is on the side of the husband, not the wife. Nonetheless, if she defiantly leaves the husband's home, she will not be eligible to claim until she returns. Some women flee to their parent's home following a row or contention with their husbands. Whilst there, they claim maintenance. Remember, maintenance is not Wajibb (obligatory) upon the husband whilst she defiantly remains at her parent's home. (Islaahe-Inqilaab page 182)

Minor or senior – the wife's maintenance is obligatory

If the wife is so young (physically immature) that she is unable to endure intercourse but she is big enough to stay with her husband, amuse him, and carry out some odd jobs for him, he is compelled to financially maintain her if she submits herself to him. However, if she has not as yet reached such an age – as prevalent amongst certain nations where the children are married off at a very young age – her maintenance is not compulsory upon her husband whilst she is still a child. A minor girl who is not physically fit for intercourse and she is presently only fit to offer her husband congenial company and a bit of odd jobs, her husband is not compelled to keep her in his own house. He is at liberty; he may keep her whereupon he is compelled to maintain her or else he may not keep her whereupon he is not compelled to pay her maintenance. Amongst some nations, a minor boy is married off to a senior woman. The boy is presently not fit for anything but since the woman has submitted herself and the shortcoming is on the part of the boy, maintenance will be compulsory upon the boy. In this case if the boy owns property or cash, the maintenance will be paid from his own wealth. (Durre-Mukhtar – Islaahe-Inqilaab page 182)

Maintenance is Wajibb regardless of the wife's affluence or poverty

Some people are of the opinion that the wife's maintenance will only be Wajibb if she is poor and if she is wealthy, she is not eligible to receive maintenance. This is totally erroneous on their part. Maintenance is compulsory irrespective of her condition of affluence or poverty. The only condition for the compulsion of maintenance is that there is no shortcoming on her part in respect of submitting herself over to her husband. (Islaahe-Inqilaab page 182)

Separate accommodation also falls within the purview of maintenance

One of the constituents of maintenance is separate accommodation. There is a general misconception amongst many people, even amongst religious people, that it is not compulsory to provide separate accommodation for the wife. She is dumped amongst the husband's relatives or parents. The Shari'ah decrees that if she is willingly prepared to stay with her in-laws it is fine. However, if she wishes to stay alone, the husband is compelled to provide separate accommodation. Willing-ly in the above context refers to total pleasure and satisfaction of the heart. If the husband on some indication or the other perceives that she wishes to remain separately but she does not express herself verbally, then too he is not permitted to keep her with other members of his family. Nowadays, even if the wife is willing to stay with the husband's relatives and the relatives are dissatisfied with the couple living separately, then too circumstances and prevailing conditions require that it is best for them to live separately. This will put a plug on numerous problems and complications. The relatives might feel offended for a few days but they will be satisfied with this arrangement after a few days once they witness its benefits. However, if he is unable to provide a complete house for her, he may within a big house provide just one room sufficient for her needs. In this room she should be able to keep her personal possessions under lock and key and feel free to sit, converse and sit with her husband in total privacy. Such a provision is sufficient to fulfil the Wajibb obligation. The stove (kitchen) in particular should most definitely be separate as the fires of dissension rage from this very stove (kitchen). Some people consider it their great fortune to keep their wives subjected to their mothers. To achieve this end, she is subjected to various forms of cruelty and hardship. Remember well! A woman isn't compelled to serve her mother-in-law. If you are noble, serve her yourself or employ a servant to serve her. (Islaahe-Inqilaab volume 2 page 188)

Maintenance according to the affluence and poverty of the husband and where possible, provision of a maid is also Wajibb

According to your financial capacity, just as you spend upon yourself, permit her to spend upon herself as well. This is the injunction of Shari'ah. Some people in spite of affluent circumstances tend to be niggardly in the expenses of their wives. They provide so little maintenance that it may only suffice if she prepares the food with her own hands. The scant maintenance provides no scope whatsoever to employ a maid. In fact, if the husband can afford it, he is compelled to provide the expenses of a domestic servant as well.

In destitution, the wife is compelled to do all the housework herself

Some women display erratic behaviour in that they demand a domestic servant in spite of the husband's poverty. The husband is not compelled to provide a servant if he cannot afford it. If the wife is able to prepare the food etc. she should prepare her own meals as well as the meals of her husband. (Dune-Mukhtar – Islaahe-Inqilaab page 183)

If the wife is incapable of doing household work

If on the other hand she is unable to perform household work – either due to some illness or because she hails from a very affluent family – neither is the husband compelled to provide a maid nor is the wife compelled to prepare the meals. In fact the husband wi-ll be ordered to provide cooked meals either from the shops (restaurants etc.) or wherever else, (Ibid)

Extra expenses for fruit, paan etc. isn't binding upon the husband

Some women tend to squander their husband's wealth mercilessly. They consider it compulsory upon the husband to provide the money for their useless expenses and luxuries such as paan and betel-nut etc. Some women have a habit of tea or coffee and they not only consume themselves but provide these luxuries, from the husband's wealth, to their friends as well. They consider such provisions to be binding upon the husband whereas the Fuqawha (jurists) have explicitly mentioned that the provision of coffee, tobacco, seasonal fruit etc. is not necessary upon the husband. If she has the habit of coffee, tobacco etc. and quitting the habit will, be detrimental to her, then too she should not demand the money for these habits from her husband. Whatever expenses the husband gladly assumes and takes the responsibility to provide wholeheartedly, it is his favour unto you. Nonetheless, the honour of the husband demands that if he is financially favoured by Allawh Ta'ala, he should not be reluctant to provide certain comforts for his wife. However, it does not befit the wife to harass her husband in return of his favours upon her.

The exigency of polite behaviour

According to the financial status bestowed upon you by Allawh Ta'ala, spend upon her just as you spend upon yourself. Shari'ah decrees that as far as possible, make her comfortable and keep her gratified. Don't impose any difficulty whatsoever upon her. When giving her money (as maintenance, or household expenses etc.) be very lenient and liberal with her. Endeavour to please and console her and exercise tolerance upon her tormenting excesses. Muslims should always endeavour to treat their wives according to the Sunnah of Rawsoolullawh (S). (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 140)

Provision of extra clothing for Eid, weddings etc. isn't compulsory upon the husband

Another deficiency very common amongst women is that they will have heaps of clothing in their trunks (or cupboards) but (his would not deter them from re-questing their husbands to get more clothes made for them. Remember that as long as you have (old) clothing provided by your husband, he is not compelled to get a new set of clothing made for you. Similarly, making new clothing for 'Eid-ul-Fitr, 'Eid-ul-Adha, and weddings etc. is not the responsibility of the husband. However, if he does provide for you, it is a great favour of him upon you. (Islaahe-Inqilaab volume 2 page 185)

Zakah, Sawdaqawtul-Fitr, Qurbani etc. on behalf of the wife is not compulsory upon the husband

The husband is not compelled to pay Zakah on his wife's jewellery or to pay her Sawdaqawtul-Fitr, make Qurbani etc. on her behalf. However, in view of such occasions, it is most appropriate for the husband to give his wife according to his financial capability, a little more than the necessary expenses. This extra amount will enable the wives to pay their Wajibbs (compulsory dues). However, he is not compelled to do this. If he does not provide extra money, she should sell part of her jewellery to meet these compulsory expenses. Without her husband's consent, she is not permitted to spend any part of his wealth in fulfilment of her monetary dues. Women are very apathetic towards this. In fact they don't even doubt its prohibition in the least bit. (Islaahe-Inqilaab page 1 86)

Prohibition regarding the disbursement of charity from the husband's wealth without his consent

According to the Hadeeth, Rawsoolullawh (S) says, it is not permissible for the wife to give anything without the consent of the husband. According to another Hadeeth, in her husband's home, a woman should not give away anything (in charily) without his consent.

Rawsoolullawh (S) was then asked: "She isn't even permitted to give food to anyone?"

He replied: "Food is (he most superior form of wealth." (Jam'ul-Fawa'id)

In another Hadeeth, whilst encouraging the women to give in charity, Rawsoolullawh (S) employed the words; from their own jewellery. He did not say from the jewellery of their husbands. In other words, the encouragement of charity applied to the women's own wealth and not the wealth of the husband. (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 39)

From the above we deduce that even on occasions of religious disbursements, like giving from the husband's wealth to a beggar, donations to a Maddrawsah etc. or to financially serve an Alim, lecture, orphan, widow etc. is not permissible without the husband's consent. In fact such charities are not even accepted in the court of Allawh Ta'ala. According to the Hadeeth, Allawh Ta'ala is pure and He only accepts pure (charities etc.) (Islaahe-Inqilaab volume 2 page 185)

Purchasing from the husband's wealth without his consent is prohibited

Similarly, some women have a penchant for unnecessary and frivolous things. The moment they take a liking to something, they purchase the item and continue to amass a whole heap of unnecessary possessions. However, what is quite surprising is that those items are never put to any use nor are they cared for, ending up in those items being wasted away and ruined. She will be taken to task on the day of Qiyamah for squandering her husband's wealth in this manner. Similarly, she is not permitted to make clothing for the occasions of 'Eid-ul-Fitr, 'Eid-ul-Adha, weddings etc. from his wealth without his consent. (Islaahe-Inqilaab volume 2 page 185)

PART II

SPIRITUAL MAINTENANCE

The husband is compelled to provide spiritual nourishment

The definition of spiritual nourishment:

In this context, spiritual nourishment refers to religious education and spiritual upbringing. In the aforementioned chapters physical and materialistic maintenance (such as the provision of food, clothing, and shelter) was discussed. Within the parameters of maintenance, there exists something like spiritual maintenance as well. And that is, the rights of religious education, spiritual upbringing in favour of the wife, and children. Just as the physical upbringing of the children and other dependents is necessary upon the husband, similarly, their spiritual upbringing – with the aid of religious knowledge and techniques of spiritual reformation – is even more necessary. The Qur'an explicitly commands:

Save yourselves and your family members from the fire (of Jahannam).

The Hadeeth of Rawsoolullawh (S) declares:

"Everyone of you is a shepherd (guardian) and every one of you will be questioned (on the day of Qiyamah) about his flock (subjects and dependents). [Islaahe-Inqilaab page 194]

Widespread apathy in regards to spiritual maintenance

There are various deficiencies found amongst people in this regard. The first and foremost deficiency is that many don't even consider it necessary. They wouldn't point out to them a single religious proposition nor will they prevent them from any evil deed. They are smug in the belief that they have provided their families with basic expenses and now they are relieved of their responsibilities. (Islaahe-Inqilaab volume 2 page 195)

Men are generally only concerned with a few materialistic rights in favour of their wives such as the provision of food, clothing, and jewellery. The only rights men consider to be really binding upon them in favour of their women folk is the provision of food, clothing, shelter, and jewellery. If they do fall sick, medication is provided and at times certain other requests are attended to. In short, they believe that only worldly or materialistic rights are binding upon them. They don't consider religious rights binding upon them in favour of their women. For instance, the husband comes home and asks if the food is ready but he never asks if his wife has performed her Sawlah or not. When he comes home to eat and the food is not ready as yet or the food is not upto his liking, he becomes extremely furious with her. On the other hand if he learns that his wife hasn't performed her Sawlah as yet (or has not paid her Zakah as yet), the husband is not displeased with her in the least bit nor will he become angry with her. In fact, some men couldn't care less even if she refrains from performing her Sawlah (or paying Zakah) for her entire life. (Huqooqul-Bait page 17&19)

The importance of spiritual maintenance and the approach employed

Alas! We pay no due consideration to her religious rights; neither to her Sawlah nor to her Sawm (fasting). We don't even tell them about such things. Remember that on the day of judgement you will be questioned about the extent of your endeavour regarding the piety of your wife and children. However, this in no way implies that you should go overboard and keep a slick with you all the time. First explain to her in very mild tones. Thereafter express a bit of anger and grief over her actions. Insha Allawh, this method will make a lasting impression. Make them read or read to them religious booklets. This will ensure that they maintain better morals whilst improving their Deeni (religious) nature at the same lime. However, if they are not prepared to read books on their own, then as I have mentioned many times in the past that you fix a certain time daily in which you read to her Bahishti Zewar (or any other beneficial book after consulting the 'Ulama). In the beginning, don't even ask her to come and listen to you. Just start reading aloud and she will, Insha Allawh, come and listen to you eagerly- With this method, all complaints finally come to a standstill. Women are prone to be more readily influenced. If Deeni (religious) literature is read to them, then morals and spiritual status can, Insha Allawh, be set right very swiftly indeed. Men tend to complain a lot about their women; that they are very rudely-mannered, ignorant etc. but they should turn their gazes of criticism to themselves for a while and determine the conduct they themselves have meted out towards these women. In short, men have only sought their own comforts from these women without the least bit of attention towards their Deen. No doubt, the women may be at fault, but the men are also to be reproached for their apathy towards the spiritual enhancement of their women folk and their trampling of their (the women's) Deeni rights. (Huqooqul-Bait page 46)

Deficiency of the learned in spiritual maintenance and the method of reforming the women folk

Those who are referred to as religious and do have some concern for the spiritual well-being of their women folk tend to admonish them merely in passing. They might just tell them perform your Sawlah, it is a great sin to omit Sawlah etc. The men are then under the impression that (by them uttering such hollow statements to their wives) they are absolved of their responsibilities. When he is questioned as to why he fails to admonish his wife for refraining from Sawlah, he submits: "I've told her to perform Sawlah but what do I do if she refuses to perform her Sawlah?" However, tell me with utmost sincerity and honesty if you admonished her in exactly the same intensity as you would if the salt is a bit extra in the food? If she was not careful in adding the correct amount of salt after you told her a few times, did you then remain silent just as you did after admonishing her for Sawlah after a few times? Never! If she adds on a little extra salt, you are prepared to crack her skull and you become so furious with her that she eventually becomes extra-vigilant in ensuring that the salt is of the right quantity. Friends! You have never admonished your wives for the omission of Sawlah in a manner that portrays to them that you are extremely furious with them. If you expressed your anger as you do in the aforementioned case, she would most definitely be conscious of her Sawlah. If she does not become regular with her Sawlah after your first round of admonishment, you should admonish her a second time, third time, and continue admonishing her until she becomes regular with Sawlah. You should employ various methods of portraying your anger towards her evil actions. For instance, you may refrain from sleeping next to her, or refrain from partaking of the meals prepared by her etc. When your once-off anger had no effect on her following the excess salt in the food, you didn't remain silent but you admonished her repeatedly. You didn't sit back and say: "Oh well! I've told her repeatedly but to no avail. She's adamant and refuses to adhere so I might as well remain silent." Be honest about it; do you console yourself and sit put in matters regarding food just as you console yourself and sit smugly about matters relating to Sawlah? Never! This is definitely a grave deficiency. If you wish to make your wife regular with Sawlah, it is not a very difficult task because the wife is not the chieftain but the subject.. When his personal interests are at heart, he rules over her with authority but he fails to employ the same authoritarian rule in favour of Deeni matters. This is surely a very grave deficiency. (Huqooqul-Bait page 20)

PART III
ADDITIONAL RIGHTS OF WOMEN

Apart from normal expenses, pocket-money is also an additional right

Give the wife a certain amount every month which she may spend at her leisure as and when she pleases. This amount is normally referred to as pocket-money. The amount may be calculated according to the individual financial status of the husband and wife. For instance, a Rupee, 2 Rupees, 10 or 50 – whatever is convenient. Give her this amount separately, specify very clearly that the other amount is for the house expenses, and this amount is your pocket-money for your personal use. You may spend it as you please. Once this amount is given to her separately, you wouldn't feel ashamed in telling her that the amount given to her for the normal house expenses is a trust. A person (particularly a woman) has numerous personal expenses. Hence, if she is not given pocket-money separately she will be compelled to misuse the trust (normal house-money) given to her. Thereafter, any form of harshness towards her will be tantamount to cruelty and pitilessness. (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 46)

The need for pocket-money

Since Deeni and worldly expenses do continue cropping up and since women don't normally have their own wealth (nor personal income), it is most appropriate for the men to give their wives, apart from the necessary household expenses, an affordable amount for such expenses. The men should not ask them to account for that money so that the ladies may spend that amount freely whenever such personal expenditure occurs. Also, it is not binding upon the husband to pay Zakah on his wife's jewellery, nor is it obligatory upon him to perform Qurbani or to pay Sawdaqawtul-Fitr on her behalf- Therefore, if the ladies receive some sort of allowance, it would be much easier for them to pay such compulsory dues on their own. However, such an allowance is not compulsory on the husband, if he does not give her an allowance, she should sell part of her jewellery and pay all her monetary dues. She is permitted to spend no part of her husband's wealth in payment of her own monetary dues without her husband's consent. Many women are totally incautious in this regard; they consider their husband's wealth as their own. This is totally erroneous and wrong. (Islaahe-Inqilaab volume 2 page 168)

To gratify the wife and exercise patience over her excesses is also her right

A woman's right is not only confined to financial support but she also has the right to be gratified and cheered. A Hadeeth mentions:

Be courteous and pleasant with the women because they are prisoners under you.

If a person is at the total mercy of someone and he is harsh unto him, it is rather callous and unmanly of him to do so. Gratifying her in this context means that you should not say anything that may hurt her feelings and upsets her. Provision of food, clothing etc. and other limited rights are all well known and these rights are very restricted. Gratification (in favour of the wife), on the other hand has a very vast meaning. It cannot be restricted. Basically, il means that you should do nothing that hurts her (either emotionally or physically). How can such a right be restricted. It can never be restricted to a few rules and regulations. Hence, we can safely deduce that the rights of women are unlimited and unrestricted. (Kisaun-Nisa At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 122)

Speaking lies in view of gratification

A wife's rights are not restricted to her physical needs of food, clothing, etc. but make her happy is also necessary. The Fuqawha (jurists) have went to the extent of saying that it is permissible to speak lies just to make the wife happy. From this we can deduce the emphasis laid down upon the gratification of the wife. And from this we can also deduce the importance of a wife's rights that even Allawh Ta'ala has waived away His right in favour of gratifying the women. (Malfoozaate-Ashrawfiyyah page 364)

Obviously, this will only apply to the permissible acts. Another reason to keep them happy is they should not feel that if we were not conforming to Purdah (Hijabb) regulations, it would have been much easier for us to carry out all our work just as the other non-observers of Hijabb do. Therefore, you should serve them and attend to their needs in such a manner that they now believe that, had they not observed Hijabb regulations, you wouldn't have served them in this manner. In other words, the man should conduct himself in such a manner that the women consider Hijabb as a source of comfort and ease and they don't get tempted to abandon the Hijabb altogether. (Al-Qawl-ul-Jaleel page 76)

The method of gratifying them

The women should no doubt remain in Hijabb but they should also be provided with some means of gratification. It should not be such that when the husband goes out for Sawlah, he locks the door from the outside thereby locking her in; he allows none to meet her nor does he provide some means of keeping her gleefully occupied. In fact, in the state of Purdah, men should provide such means for the amusement and happiness of their wives that they have no inclination thereafter to step out of the house. However, these provisions should be within the bounds of Shari'ah. It is something to think about that if men feel lonely or dreadful, they can put their hearts at ease by going out to meet other men and friends. Women in Purdah, how can they ever put their hearts at ease by staying all alone at home? You should stay with her at home or if you do not have the time, then at least leave another woman with her to give her some company. If at any time she complains about something or the other to you, don't feel offended. Who else apart from you can she complain to? Consider her bouts of complaining as a form of expression of her love because our women have such love in their hearts for us that no doubt, their love has reached a stage of Ishqq (passionate love). [At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 126]

Sleeping with the wife al night is also her right

Many of the social rights that Shari'ah has placed upon our shoulders are generally taken very lightly by some men. For instance, it has been witnessed in some households that the husband cares the damn about his wife. For years on end he sleeps outside in the courtyard and he does not sleep indoors with his wife. He either contracts an illicit affair with some other woman or he continues sleeping all alone outside totally apathetic of his wife's right whereas to sleep with her at night is also her Shari (religious) right. At some places it has been witnessed that the wives are virtually boycotted and shunned aside or the husbands don't come home to sleep merely because of some seemingly trivial mistakes committed by them. (Huqooqul-Bait page 21)

Conversing with her and making her happy is also her right

There are many people who are considered as great Buzurgs (saints) or they are Mureeds of some saint and they are persistently occupied in Sawlah, Sawm and other forms of Zikr – as though they are purchasing Jannah with these devotions – but they are totally negligent of the rights of their wives. Remember, it is her right upon you to set aside some time and converse with her and to listen to her grievances and compliments and to gratify her verbally as well. However, everyone, the so called Deeni as well as the worldly people are all totally negligent of these rights. The main reason for this apathy is that they don't consider such rights binding upon them. They only consider the provision of food, clothing, etc. as their responsibility. (Huqooqul-Bait page 21)

Feeding her with your own hand or purchasing something for her just to make her happy is also an act of Thawabb

To feed your wife (with your own hands) is also an act of charily (Allawh Ta'ala rewards such an act as well). To purchase something even unnecessary with an intention of making the wife happy does not constitute wastage because to gratify one's wife is also a (Shari) requirement. However, no unbearable loans etc. should be pursued to meet this requirement. (Rawdha'ul-Haqq page 122)

Administration of household affairs should be conducted by you or by the wife

I'm not issuing a Fatwa (legal Shari verdict) but I will definitely counsel you thus; the administration of household affairs should be either in your wife's hands or in your hands. Don't entrust the affairs to the hands of other family members even though they are your parents or brothers and sisters or else it will be rather heart-breaking for her. Hence, the husband should ensure that he controls the purse-strings of the house or amongst his relatives he should consider his wife the most eligible. A woman's right is not only confined to the provision of food and clothing. To gratify her is also necessary. (Husnul-Azeez volume 1 page 424)

PART IV
THE WIFE'S RIGHT OF PRETENSION OR POMPOSITY
Rawsoolullawh (S)'s wives' pomposity in his presence

On the occasion of Ifk when the hypocrites slandered Hadhrawt Aisha (R), Rawsoolullawh (S) told her: "O Aisha! If you're innocent, Allawh Ta'ala will expose your innocence and if you're guilty of making an error, then repent before Allawh Ta'ala and seek His forgiveness."

This statement made her very dejected and she submitted: "I don't know how to answer you. If I tell you that I'm totally innocent –and Allawh Ta'ala knows that I'm innocent – then your hearts will not accept my innocence. And if I tell you that I'm guilty – and Allawh Ta'ala knows that I'm innocent – then your hearts will immediately accept my confession. Hence, at this point in time, I'll say exactly the same thing that Ya'qoobb (A) said to his sons: "Patience is better and Allawh Ta'ala is the Helper.""

She then lied down on her bed and started weeping. At that very moment, certain effects of Wahy (revelation) started appearing on the countenance of Rawsoolullawh (S). At the termination of Wahy a little while later, the first thing Rawsoolullawh (S) said was: "O Aisha! Glad tidings unto you! Allawh Ta'ala has exposed your innocence."

He thereafter recited the verses that were revealed unto him. None of those present could contain their happiness on hearing these verses. On this occasion, Hadhrawt Aisha (R)'s parents commanded her: "Stand up and express your gratitude before Rawsoolullawh (S)."

Her mother lold her: "Stand up, O Aisha! And make Salaam to Rawsoolullawh (S)."

Whereupon she replied: "By Allawh! I will not stand up and go to him. I won't praise anyone other than Allawh (because you considered me guilty). I won't express my gratitude to anyone apart from Him who exposed my innocence." Her harsh words employed before Rawsoolullawh (S) are rather obvious. However, Rawsoolullawh (S) didn't take offence to this because such words were spurred by amorous (loving) pomposity.

The men should now ponder over the basis for this utterance of Hadhrawt Aisha (R). What was the underlying reason for this statement? The main reason for this utterance is the genial bond of intimacy and harmony that the wife cherishes for the husband. And the Shari'ah does not penalize the women for uttering such statements out of amorous pomposity. If the women did not have this right of being pompous, Rawsoolullawh (S) would have most definitely admonished Hadhrawt Aisha (R) because her statement was very harsh indeed. Also there is no possibility of Rawsoolullawh (S) making concessions for anyone in Deeni and Shari laws. This is evident from the following incident:

A woman by the name of Fatimah was caught for theft. Rawsoolullawh (S) in accordance to Shari law issued an order for her hand to be chopped off. The people wished to intercede on her behalf. They chose Usamah 'Ibn Zaid (R) for this intercession as he and his father were both very close to Rawsoolullawh (S). He innocently went and interceded on her behalf. Rawsoolullawh (S) became extremely furious and retorted: "Intercession (and ultimate relaxation) in regards to the Shari penal code destroyed the earlier nations." He thereafter said: "By Allawh! Even if (my own daughter) Fatimah Bint Muhammadd had to steal, I would have chopped her hand off." (Abu Dawood volume 2 page 253)

From this we can determine that Rawsoolullawh (S) made no concessions in regard to Islamic law nor was he permitted to do so. Hence, if Hadhrawt Aisha (R)'s statement was contrary to Shari'ah, he would never have condoned it and he would have admonished her for doing so. Therefore, we deduce that her statement I'd not stand up and express my gratitude to Rawsoolullawh (S) and I'll only express my gratitude before Allawh Ta'ala was not contrary to the laws of Allawh and His Rawsool (S). So the wife enjoys such an intimate relationship with her husband that even seemingly harsh statements made by Hadhrawt Aisha (R) were overlooked by Allawh and His Rawsool (S). If her statement was incorrect, he would have taken her to task for it or at least some verse or the other would have been revealed. This is evident in the case where the Azwajj-i-Mutawhharawh (the pure wives of Rawsoolullawh (S)) asked him for more money. Even in times of extreme poverty they did not make such a request. In fact there were times when they didn't even have water in their houses but yet they did not complain to Rawsoolullawh (S). However, following certain victorious battles when the Muslims started getting a bit wealthy and poverty was slowly being eradicated, they also desired a bit of comfort and ease. However, this was against the natural temperament of Rawsoolullawh (S). Where would he have preferred comfort and ease for his wives when he did not even prefer the same for his own daughter? In fact his Du'a used to be as follows: "O Allawh! Make the sustenance of the family of Muhammadd sufficient only for that day (by which they can at least live)."

In short, excessive wealth was contrary to his nature. This is why he became very dejected with the request of the Azwajj-i-Mutawhharawh (his pure wives). On that occasion the following verses were revealed: "O Nabee! Say unto your wives that if they prefer the worldly life and its beauty, then come, I'll benefit you in some way and I'll dismiss you in an amicable manner and if you prefer Allawh and His Rawsool and the hereafter then (remember) that Allawh has prepared for the pious amongst you a tremendous reward."

Following the revelation of these verses, Rawsoolullawh (S) went first to Hadhrawt Aisha (R) and because of her young age, before reciting these verses to her, he told her: "O Aisha! I wish to tell you something but you should not be very hasty in replying. In fact you should first seek the counsel of your parents before you reply."

Thereafter he recited these verses before her. Taken aback by a sudden spell of ardour, she said: "Should I seek the counsel of my parents in such a matter?! I have already preferred Allawh, His Rawsool, and the hereafter."

This answer made Rawsoolullawh (S) extremely happy. Thereafter Hadhrawt Aisha (R) said: "O Rawsoolullawh! Don't inform the other wives about my answer."

To which Rawsoolullawh (S) replied: "If they happen to ask me about it, I will not conceal it."

It is something to think about that Allawh Ta'ala prohibited the wives from asking for more expenses but He did not prohibit them from being pompous. We can therefore deduce that pomposity is not as evil as asking for more expenses. However, nowadays things have gone topsy-turvy. A request of increasing their expenses – which to some extent is reprehensible as well – is not viewed as immorally as her pomposity and free nature is viewed whereas this is not even reprehensible.(Huqooqul-Bait pages 23-9)

The amorous pomposity of the Pure Wives of Rawsoolullawh (S)

On one occasion, Hadhrawt 'Umar (R) learnt that some of the Azwajj-i-Mutawhharawh (the pure wives of Rawsoolullawh (S)) were speaking to him very loudly and in a very adamant manner. Hadhrawt Umar (R) came at a time when Hadhrawt Aisha and his daughter Hadhrawt Hafsah ® were seated near Rawsoolullawh (S). Hadhrawt Umar reprimanded them thus: "Don't you fear (the wrath of Allawh and His Rawsool)? You have also started speaking loudly before Rawsoolullawh (S) just as the other women are doing? Remember! You will be destroyed (if you do not desist)."

The Azwajj-i-Mutawhharawh used to speak (at times) in a loud manner because they were aware of the fact it would not anger Rawsoolullawh (S). Under normal circumstances, to raise the voice before Rawsoolullawh (S) was considered a sin (as evident from the verses of Soorawh Hujurawt).

The amorous pomposity of Hadhrawt Aisha (R) before Rawsoolullawh (S)

The conditions were such in the house of our Rawsool (S) that at times some of his wives used to become seemingly displeased with him and he used to somehow steer clear of this. On one occasion he also ostracised them all. Once Hadhrawt Aboo Bakr (R) came to the house of Rawsoolullawh (S) when at the door he heard Hadhrawt Aisha (R) screaming and talking to Rawsoolullawh (S). He was overtaken by a severe bout of fury. As he entered, he told her: "I've just heard you speaking loudly to Rawsoolullawh (S)."

He was about to slap her when Rawsoolullawh (S) intervened and prevented him. When Hadhrawt Aboo Bakr (R) departed, Rawsoolullawh (S) told her: "See, how I saved you or else you would have really got a hiding."
Once Rawsoolullawh (S) told Hadhrawt Aisha (R): "I can determine when you're displeased with me."
"How," she asked, "do you determine that?"
He replied: "When you're pleased with me, in your conversations you say, "La wa Rabbi Muhammad! (Nay, by the Lord of Muhammadd!)" and when you're displeased with me you say "La wa Rabbi Ibbrawheem! (Nay, by the lord of Ibbrawheem!). You don't say by the Lord of Muhammadd at that time."
Hadhrawt Aisha (R) said: "No doubt, your deductions are correct. However, when I'm angry I only omit your name." (In other words, I only leave out the mention of your name. You are still in my heart.)"
Just as Rawsoolullawh (S) had a lot of love for Hadhrawt Aisha (R), she also in turn cherished intense love for him. This is expressed in one of her poems in which she says: "If Zulaikhawh had to see the blessed countenance of Rawsoolullawh (S), she would have cut her heart instead of just her fingers."
Hadhrawt Aisha (R) had intense love for Rawsoolullawh (S) but in spite of this, she at times used to become displeased with him. Rawsoolullawh (S) wouldn't say anything to her because this in reality was not displeasure or anger but it was pomposity. (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 137)

CHAPTER X
THE SOCIAL LIFE OF RAWSOOLULLAWH (S) AND HIS CONDUCT WITH HIS WIVES

Rawsoolullawh (S) displayed such outstanding morals and character with his wives that today's so-called cultured nations will probably be left dumbstruck. However, we are not concerned with their surprise and bewilderment. We will laugh at their stupidity. We will not conceal the conditions and incidents of Rawsoolullawh (S) for fear of them being criticised. Our religion isn't something to hide. We will expose it fully before the masses because everybody in this world is not stupid. There are many intellectuals in this world who will attach value to his teachings and lifestyle.

Gratifying the women and consideration of their emotions

The morals of Rawsoolullawh (S) were such that he used to make Hadhrawt Aisha (R) happy in accordance to the demands of her age since she was the youngest of them all.
On 1 occasion they even raced with one another. She at that lime was still young and lean in body whilst Rawsoolullawh (S) was elderly and a bit heavy in body. On that occasion she won the race. A few years later, when they had another race, Rawsoolullawh (S) beat her because she became slightly heavier. Women normally pick up weight much faster and they grow up much quicker as well. She was unable to beat him this time. After the race he told her: "This (winning) is in reciprocation of that (earlier race-in which you won)."
Subbhan Allawh! What marvellous traits of character did he display. (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 132)
Rawsoolullawh (S) had a race with Hadhrawt Aisha (R). So do we consider this act as futile and pointless? Allawh forbid. The underlying wisdom of the race Rawsoolullawh (S) had with Hadhrawt Aisha (R) was the education of the Ummah. He wished to demonstrate to his people that if an elderly man marries a relatively younger girl, then he should not keep her like a shrewd and wise man like him but he should take into account her emotions and feelings as well. Children have a natural penchant for playing and merry-making. Hence, she should be afforded the opportunity for this. However, if out of respect and consideration for the husband, she feels shy to play about, she should be permitted not only verbally but physically as well. This is why Rawsoolullawh (S) had a race with Hadhrawt Aisha (R).
On one occasion, Rawsoolullawh (S) also showed her an Abyssinian sport of bows and arrows played by Abyssinian children in the courtyard of the Masjidd. Rawsoolullawh (S) also permitted her to play with dolls. It should be noted at this point, however, that the dolls she played with were very unlike the ones we have today. Her dolls were crudely made up with not much resemblance to real-life. Only dolls without eyes and other real-life features are permitted. At times when the other girls of the locality used to come and play with her, they would disperse upon the arrival of Rawsoolullawh (S). He would then gather them once again and portray to them that he was not offended and they may play at ease. The Ummah had a physical demonstration of conjugal life before them in the aforementioned incidents. An elderly man has been physically instructed on the method of conjugal relationships between him and his young wife; these actions of Rawsoolullawh (S) constitute amicable social manners – that is also a Shari requirement – and the fact that the Ummah is being taught amicable social manners does not make this a futile exercise. (At-Tabbleegh volume 17 page 153)

The temperament of the husband at home

Amongst my colleagues, there is a man who is very serious and solemn in nature. Wherever he sits, he sits in a very serious and grave manner. He doesn't laugh nor does he joke with anyone. I once lectured on this matter and told the people that I have an aversion to such gravity and solemnity. People should talk and be humorous with one another. They should not sit with pulled-up faces all the time. Nobody is inclined to such people. You, the masses refer to this as dignity whereas this is actually pride. Who is more dignified than Rawsoolullawh (S)? He used to meet the Sahabah (R) with a cheerful countenance. He used to talk with them and join in their conversation. Our dignity can never surpass the dignity of Rawsoolullawh (S). I have a habit of mentioning at the Maddrawsah before my colleagues certain events and conditions that appear at my house. Some of them objected to this saying that it is undignified to mention one's domestic affairs before others. They most probably said this in view of my own welfare but I consider them wrong. I told them: "Maulana! Dignity and decorum isn't what you claim it to be. Dignity is what is established from the Sunnah of Rawsoolullawh (S). Really, you're deprived of certain Sunnahs due to this so-called dignity and decorum. Come on, tell me the truth. Did you ever practise on this Sunnah of Rawsoolullawh (S) (i.e. to run with the wife)? Alhamdulillah! I have been fortunate enough to be blessed with the opportunity of practising upon this Sunnah. You will confine yourself to the so-called dignity due to which you are deprived of practising upon the Sunnah of amicable conjugal relationships. Review the lifestyle of Rawsoolullawh (S) and you will learn that he used to milk the goats, harvest the vegetables and assist his household with household chores. Alhamdulillah! I have been fortunate enough to practise upon this as well. Remember that the Sunnah demands that you lead a simple life with no frivolity. You should not lead a life of pride. You should not sit with such haughtiness and dignity that wherever you sit, it seems as though you are the leader of that gathering. (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 134)

A PLEASANT AND ENJOYABLE LIFESTYLE

A humorous relationship between the spouses and the incident of Hadhrawt 'Alee and Fatimah (R)

Once Hadhrawt 'Alee (R) jokingly recited a poem in criticism of women before Hadhrawt Fatimah (R): "Verily, the women were created as Shaytawns for us. We seek Allawh's refuge from the evils of the Shaytawns."
In reply to this Hadhrawt Fatimah (R) said: "Verily, women are like the Rawyhan (sweet basil) flower created for you (men). And all of you are inclined to the fragrance of the Rawyhan flower."
(At-Tabbleegh volume 20 page 108)

Paradise within the home

There is great worldly benefit in showing concern towards and comforting the wife. The first and foremost is that one's life becomes enjoyable and pleasant. Each one of the spouses shares the happiness and grief of the other. What an enjoyable life it would be if both spouses are accommodating, suitable and informal with one another. Great pleasure is felt when a man, exhausted at the end of a hard day's work, comes home and delights himself with his family. They comfort him and he, in turn, is also concerned of their well-being and comfort. Those who lead a favourable social life with their families are really blessed with paradise in this very world. This is the mystery behind the gratifying attitude of the Ahlullawh (saints of Allawh Ta'ala). They are concerned of the well-being of their families so that their lives can be one of peace and enjoyment. On the other hand wherever there are quarrels and constant tiffs, there is no pleasure amongst those people. What kind of life is this; when a man, exhausted at the end of a hard day's work, comes home also to be greeted with grief and problems. Nonetheless, the temperaments of the people today have curdled. Insensitivity has become the norm of the day. Many people prefer to live such unhappy lives. However, if a person is even slightly sensitive, he considers such a life as a life of hell in this very world. (At-Tabbleegh volume 14 page 145)

Some women are fond of saying that life is quite normal where one spouse's hand is always in motion whilst the other spouse's tongue is always in motion. There is practically no pleasure in a life where both spouses are cheerful with each other for a few days followed by incessant quarrelling for the next ten days. The true pleasure of life will only be felt when both spouses take total heed of each other's rights. (Huqooquz-Zawjayn page 149)

Consideration of the wife's comfort

Rawsoolullawh (S) had apprised us of Deen as well as the Dunya (worldly affairs). Hadhrawt Aisha (R) says that once Rawsoolullawh (S) got up at night to visit the grave yard. He got up very quietly, put on his shoes and opened the door also very quietly. When asked about the reason for his stealthy movements, Rawsoolullawh (S) said: "I went out very quietly lest you get up and feel bewildered all alone."

Look at the extent of his consideration towards his wife who is after all subjected to him. Nowadays, leave alone the subjects and subordinates even the superiors like the parents and grandparents, are not awarded due consideration. (Al-Ifadhatul-Yawmiyyah volume 2 page 153)

It appears in a Hadeeth narrated by Hadhrawt Aisha (R) that Rawsoolullawh (S) got up one night from bed very softly. He put on his shoes very quietly, opened the door and closed it also very softly. Hadhrawt Aisha (R) suspected him of going to one of his other wives. The underlying reason for this suspicion was the intense love she cherished for Rawsoolullawh (S). Such suspicions can occur during the course of love. She enjoyed a very informal relationship with Rawsoolullawh (S) and to top that, she had intense love for him as well. She says in one of her poems: "If the companions of Zulaikhawh had to witness the countenance of Rawsoolullawh (S), they would have cut their hearts instead of their hands (as they did when they witnessed the handsomeness of Hadhrawt Yoosuf (A))."

Hadhrawt Aisha (R) had such intense love for Rawsoolullawh (S) that none of his actions would have offended her. In spite of that, he took her comfort into account and did everything very softly lest her sleep was disturbed. So where there was no possibility of any displeasure whatsoever, he still considered her comfort, whilst we on the other hand make a lot of noise, particularly with our (high-heeled or hard-soled) English shoes when we get up at night. When we take clods of earth at night for Istinja, we break them with a lot of noise whereas this is rather disturbing to the others. (Huqooqq-wa-Faraw'idh page 337)

Making the wife comfortable is to the husband's own benefit

There are some women in our locality who are leading a life of total comfort and case. Their ages are around the forties but they look as though they have been married just a year or two ago. They don't look older than twenty five. One of the benefits of keeping the wife in comfort and ease is that she will remain healthy and the effects of old age will not appear as quickly. She will also be able to serve you for a longer period of time. However, nowadays, the people don't even consider them even though their own long term benefit is at stake. (Al-Ifadhatul-Yawmiyyah volume 4 page 204)

CHAPTER XI
THE FAVOURS, VIRTUES, AND SACRIFICES OF WOMEN

Appreciation of women

The men are under the notion that they have fulfilled their rights adequately by providing food and clothing to their women folk and the balance of the rights rest on the shoulders of the women; let me inform you that in lieu of you providing food and clothing, the amount your wives care for and serve you is such that no servant or maid will be prepared to serve you for so meagre a provision. Whoever is still sceptical about this should try it out and see. Without a wife, it is virtually impossible to run the household systematically even if you had to employ 1000 servants. We had witnessed some people that they had enormous incomes that were disposed off by their servants. Their household expenditure had no limits. Only after they married they were able to maintain some sort of system within their household. I maintain that even if the wife does nothing physically, the fact that she supervises the running of the household is a mammoth task in itself. Even in normal worldly affairs, huge wages are fixed for those involved in mere supervision, they are accorded great honour, and respect. Take the case of a viceroy for instance; he does not do anything physically because he has under him a great number of staff and there is no need for him to do anything. However, his big salary and honour comes because of his responsibilities and supervision. Similarly the wives play such a mighty important role in the supervision of the household that the mere provision of food and clothing can never be sufficient in lieu of their services. We see many girls of influential and elite households who carry out lots of the household chores with their own hands. The children in particular, are reared with great care and sacrifice. This is such a feat that even a paid servant will not be able to accomplish. (Raful-Iltibaas page 149)

Perception of responsibilities

The women are normally so busy that they don't even sit with ease. One of the reasons for her getting feeble and weak so quickly is that she always has some anxiety and worry sitting on her shoulders. She has so much to care and worry about. Dumping all the household affairs on the poor lady's shoulders, the husband absolves himself of all responsibility and renders himself free from anxiety. The poor lady virtually kills herself with the household work. Ask (he husband lo run the household successfully for just 2 days and then we will consider him a true man. In spite of all these trying circumstances, her true marvel lies in the fact that she does not verbally expose her hardships. This is the main reason they get weak so quickly. (Al-Ifadhatul-Yawmiyyah volume 4 page 203)

A wife is a true benefactress and protector of your Deen

One of the reasons for a woman's rights is the fact that she is helpless and dependent. Another reason is that she is your companion and the bond of companionship ultimately increases the rights one companion enjoys over the other. To top that, she is a protector of your Deen as well. She is a very valuable entity because she is very instrumental in protecting your Deen and in putting a stop to evil thoughts. For this reason she is a true benefactress. Those who are religiously-inclined really appreciate this favour. You should really appreciate your wife because she is your assistant in both your Deen as well as Dunya (worldly affairs). Considerations of her rights is very important because she's endowed with various characteristics all of which have some rights or the other. Allawh Ta'ala has made the bond between the husband and wife such that no other human being is able to comfort the husband as the wife does. At times, a person is shunned aside in disgust by all his relatives, particularly if he is suffering from sicknesses like acute diarrhoea etc. However, a wife won't shun her husband even in such circumstances. At times of illness, she gives the husband the most amount of comfort. This is a worldly benefit from the wife. As for the Deeni benefit from her, a man is free from anxiety in regards to the household affairs. As a result, his heart is at ease and tranquil (to accommodate the 'Ibadah of Allawh Ta'ala). Experience bears testimony to the fact that it is extremely difficult to run a home systematically without a wife. (At-Tabbleegh volume 14 page 147)

An elegant virtue of women

It is something to contemplate over that men after many years of spiritual exercises and effort finally give themselves over to Allawh Ta'ala. A wife on the other hand, surrenders herself totally to her husband on the very first day after the marriage. So if even the husband is not there (to comfort and gratify her), who else can the poor lady turn to? (Al-Qawl-uj-Jaleel page 77)

Experience bears testimony to the fact that during tough and trying times, all other relatives, even parents at times, shun the husband aside. However, a wife will always stand by her husband's side. Similarly the comfort a wife gives to her husband, no other friend nor parents can afford him such comfort. From this it is quite evident that a man has no other companion parallel to the wife. (Huqooqul-Bait page 22)

Devotion and loyalty

Simple and homely women are very obedient and devoted to their husbands. Some women display such devotion to their husbands that even though they themselves may be ill and don't even have the strength to get up if the husband also falls ill, these women forget about their own illnesses and attend to their husbands. They arc never at ease. They're always attending to the needs of their husbands. It is a daily occurrence where women cat right at the end. They firstly feed the men and they normally cat after that. If an unexpected guest appears, she will remain hungry and present her share of the food to the guest. If there is anything left over after the guest has eaten, she will partake of it or else remain hungry. If the husband returns from a journey at the middle of the night, she will forego her sleep and cook some food for him. She will also attend to all his needs. (Huqooqul-Bait page 30)

I can deduce from experience that the women here (in India) entertain such intense love for their husbands that their love has penetrated every fibre of their bodies. However, there is only a wee bit of carelessness on their part and that is they are unable to control their tongues. Nonetheless, she is bestowed with so many other virtues that this one defect can be overlooked. Look at her excellent virtue and not her defects. (At-Tabbleegh volume 7pages 59&61)

PART I

Extreme kindness to women

Show kindness to the wife even though she may be slovenly or ill-mannered. She has left her parents and all other family members solely for you. Her vision is now directed to you alone. She only has her husband to turn to. Human nature also demands that such a loyal person should not be put into any form of difficulty. Whatever bad manners or disrespect she displays should be considered as pomposity and frivolity because she is intellectually less efficient than men. She does not possess sound judgement and discretion. She does not have the correct manner of speech. Hence she converses in a manner that displeases men. However, the reality of such seemingly 'bad manners' is nothing but her pomposity. After all, to who else can she display such pomposity? You are the only one for her. (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 59)

Value her at all times

Men should always appreciate their women particularly for 2 reasons:

1. Since she is your wife, she is like a prisoner subjected to you. It is rather ungallant of you to ill-treat someone totally subjected to you.
2. Because of her Deen.

You are a Muslim and she is also a Muslim. Just as you fulfil the tenets of Deen (such as Sawlah, Sawm etc.), she also fulfils the same. None knows who of you two is more accepted in terms of Deen-consciousness in the eyes of Allawh Ta'ala. A woman is not necessarily lower in states than a man. There is a possibility that in the Eyes of Allawh, she is on par with him or maybe higher in Deeni status. Don't despise the women nor look down upon them. Allawh Ta'ala accepts even the seemingly trivial actions of the helpless and broken-hearted and He accordingly increases their status. So there should be no surprise if the women you despise due to their helplessness, turn out to be more accepted in the eyes of Allawh Ta'ala. Hence, the men should fear Allawh Ta'ala in regards to the affairs of women whilst women, on the other hand, should be obedient to their husbands and not confront them boldly and impudently. (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 17)

The Ulama are not their wives Mureeds (disciples) but their cherishers

Those who are religious normally value and appreciate the favours of their wives. Maulana Muhammad Mazhar (R'A) was such that in spite of his wife being extremely old, he had extreme love for her. Whenever she fell slightly ill, Maulana used to take leave from the Maddrawsah and serve her with his own hands. Nowadays, some people have an aversion to their old wives whereas you are responsible for rendering her so old. Maulana would never dump his responsibilities upon the servants and maids. He ensured that he served his wife himself even if he had to take leave from the Maddrawsah for a few days. This is the reason people say that the Ulama have become Mureeds (disciples) of their wives. Yes, surely! However, them being Mureeds is better than you being a Spiritual mentor (Shaikh). You are a Spiritual mentor for your wives but you are a bandit Spiritual mentor. In actual fact, the Ulama are not the Mureeds of their women. They harbour the fear of Allawh Ta'ala in their hearts. They're very considerate of the rights of other human beings. They have studied the rights of the wives during the course of their research. They have come across the social life of Rawsoolullawh (S). This is why they approach their women with such love and tenderness and they are concerned about their comfort. In fact, the consideration and concern Rawsoolullawh (S) had for his women, even the Ulama don't display such concern. If one of the Ulama had to display such concern, the masses would award him with a more superior title than Mureed-i-Zann (disciple of women). In short, an Alim is more considerate of his women simply because he has the social life of Rawsoolullawh (S) before him. There is also great benefit in giving her due consideration. The Ahlullawh (saints) were not Mureeds of their wives but they were cherishers of their wives. They valued them and understood their worth. (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 60 & volume 14 page 144)

The condition of the Ahlullawh (saints)

The vision of the Ahlullawh isn't centred upon the ladies defects but upon a certain virtue which renders all their defects insignificant. It is a very outstanding virtue and, Alhamdulillah, all our noble ladies are endowed with this virtue that is really worth appreciating. This virtue is her chastity. If the husband goes away from home out of negligence or any other reason or he is imprisoned and he stays away from home for over 50 years without even informing his family of his well-being and the wife has no source of income, he will find his wife at the very house he left her in. He will witness with his very own eyes her wretched and pitiable condition but there is no question of her disloyalty to him. She wouldn't lift her gaze to another man. This is such a virtue that all else can be tolerated before this one virtue. In view of this virtue (of chastity), don't allow your vision to centre upon any of her faults and defects. Out of experience I can swear that the love our women cherish for their husbands has penetrated every fibre of their beings. It was for these very virtues that the Ahlullawh displayed such concern for their wives that the people find rather surprising. They were not Mureeds (disciples) of their women but rather they were cherishers and they understood their worth; they endured all their wives' harassment with good intentions. In short, conversing in an ill manner is no doubt a grave error amongst women but together with this she has a very excellent virtue; she cherishes intense love for her husband which exposes itself on certain occasions. (Al-Tabbleegh pages 59-60)

The social life of Hadhrawt Thanwi (R'A) and his politeness with his house folks

It is surely not something to be mentioned but since there is a need for it I will say it. Find out from my family as to what extent I rule over them and what services I extract from them. Alhamdulillah, neither am I subjected nor do I subject others to anything. Life is lived like kings. It is my habit that when I go home and see that fresh roti (unleavened bread) is not baked, I eat stale bread. Many a times if I see that she is busy doing something I will take the roti, fill the water and take the curry etc. by me and place it on the Dasiarkhan. Thereafter I will sit down and eat. In fact, if I see that she is busy making Roties or something of that sort (in the kitchen) and she needs something like water etc. I organise the water for her from the pump or water tank. At times if I see that she is free, I request her to bring the food. The poor lady brings the food and serves it. It is necessary to consider all these things. Il is not a matter of whether she is free or occupied. After all she is also a human being. Temperaments are not stable at all times. At times, even ordinary servants tend to feel a bit lazy and un-geared for work. In short, there is no hard and fast rule that she has to do everything. Within the boundaries, if you do take any service from her at times – taking into consideration her comfort and ease – then there is no problem with that. After all they should have something to do. However, cruelty and meanness should never be depicted. I carry out many of the household chores with my own hands. What inconvenience is there to me? Do any of my other responsibilities get neglected? In fact, just as I'm comforted if she serves me, similarly, she is also comforted if she has to do nothing for me. I tend to sleep very little at night. When I see the family asleep, I express my gratitude unto Allawh Ta'ala for making them sleep fitfully. Otherwise I would be overcome with double grief; one because of my own insomnia and one due to their sleeplessness. When leaving home I ask them if there is anything necessary for me to attend to. If there is nothing I leave and if they say that there is something for me to attend to, like letter writing etc. I remain behind and attend to whatever requires my attention. Then only do I leave. After meals if I feel like eating a Paan (betel-leaf), I just ask her where the paan container is and I take it myself. I don't normally ask her to bring it for me. The youth nowadays refer to their wives as Rawfeeq-i-Zindagee (lifelong companion). O you gentlemen! Do you ever fulfil the rights of this Rawfaqawt (companionship) or are your claims confined to words only? From your actions it seems as though you have rendered her your Fareeq-i-Zindagee (estranged companion) rather than your Rawfeeq-i-Zindagee (lifelong companion). [Nusrawtun-Nisa page 549]

An Incident of Hadhrawt Thanwi (RA)

It was just the other day that whilst performing the Sunnahs of Fajr Sawlah someone came from the big house (probably a reference to the house of his senior wife) with news that she fell down from the upper floor. I broke my Sawlah the moment I heard about it. All of you (sitting here in this gathering) are intelligent and understanding people. Some ignorant people are probably thinking at this moment that how could he break his Sawlah for his wife? He has so much of love for his wife that he broke off his 'Ibadah with Allawh Ta'ala solely for his wife? Undoubtedly, if it was a bogus spiritual mentor, he wouldn't have broken his Sawlah because he would have been disgraced before his ignorant disciples. Alhamdulillah, I don't care in the least bit about what people would say. If anyone feels that I have disgraced myself doing this, he may search for another Shaikh (spiritual guide) with pleasure. What can I do if Allawh Ta'ala has commanded us to break the Sawlah on such occasions? Should I abandon the divine command of Allawh Ta'ala merely to make myself honourable in the eyes of the ignorant? It is quite obvious that when a lady falls off the upper story, only the husband can alleviate some of the pain she suffers due to her injury. Only the husband is able to enquire about the state and place of injury. Particularly in this case where the only other occupants of the house were a small girl and another old helpless lady. Even if there was someone else to assist her, this fall could have been fatal. Immediate help does offer some hope of life. Hence, it was necessary for me to attend to her at once. I considered it religiously binding upon me to break my Sawlah immediately and attend to her. It appears in a Hadeeth that once while Rawsoolullawh (S) was delivering the Khutbah when either Hadhrawt Hasan or Hadhrawt Husain (R) came into the Masjidd. At that time he was still a small child. He came wobbling into the Masjidd (there was a fear of him falling). Rawsoolullawh (S) broke off his sermon, went, and picked him up. The Khutbah is just like Sawlah. In other words, the rule applicable to Sawlah is the same as the Khutbah. The Khutbah cannot be nullified without any valid reason. So when Rawsoolullawh (S) could break off the Khutbah for his grandson, who am I that I do not break my Sunnah Sawlah for such a grave incident? This was not (only) a consideration to the wife, but it was also a consideration of the right of Allawh upon me. This was the law of Allawh Ta'ala that applied at that instance. What is the status of the wife before the command of Allawh Ta'ala? If Allawh Ta'ala commands us to kill the wife, a true Muslim will do that as well. Where He commands us to attend to certain emergencies, a true Muslim will break Sawlah also for that. In both cases, the main reason for carrying out those injunctions is obviously the right of Allawh Ta'ala. (At-Tabbleegh volume 17 page 145)

Love for the wife – its boundaries

A person once wrote to me saying that he cherishes intense love for his wife. He asked:
Is such intense love despicable or not?
I wrote back:
Even more intense love than that isn't despicable subject to one condition.
I even asked him about this condition and that is; if at any time your consideration towards her is perilous to or contrary to Deen, who will you award preference to? To your wife or to Deen? This is the touchstone (criterion) for your love. If you grant preference to your wife over Deen, then this love is despicable and if you grant preference to Deen then this love is laudable. I wonder why people make their wives scapegoats. The person who posed the question above regarding intense love for his wife felt that his love was directed to an entity other than the entity of Allawh Ta'ala. Hence, he asked the above question. In response to that Hadhrawt Thanwi asks why he singled his wife out only for this question. The person could have directed this question to himself as well. Just as this person loved his wife, probably he loved himself also intensely. So the same question can be directed to him as well. If he has a doubt that his wife is Ghawyrullawh (a being other than Allawh), then he himself is also Ghawyrullawh. If he cherishes the same love for himself as he cherishes for his wife then the same doubt can apply here as well. However, this person did not ask this explicitly. Nonetheless, whatever he did ask is still a blessing. At least he has some concern for Deen. When a person has some concern for Deen, even the Shaikh takes pleasure in teaching him and informing him about other things as well. (Malfoozaat Hakeemul-Ummat volume 1 page 26)

Overindulging the wife is also stupidity

We once visited a great saint. He was so soft-natured and well-mannered that his wife also used to beat him at times. It seems rather crazy for the wife to hit her husband. It was due to his soft nature that he endured her abuse or else he would have retaliated. It was due to her insolence that she used to hit her husband whilst it was his slackness that contributed to her insolence. To be physically abused by the wife is rather crazy and weird. I don't mean that you should hold such awe over her that the moment you step into the house you become like an anathema to her. She loses all her senses out of fright. The moment she says something or asks for anything, you start beating the hell out of her. Nor do I mean that you should not even admonish her at all. You should endeavour to reform her, albeit tenderly and affectionately. To threaten her at times also is not despicable. However, to be immoderate in this also is not recommended. (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 130 & 138)

CHAPTER XII
DISCORD BETWEEN THE SPOUSES

Dissension between the spouses – the root of evil

The discord and differences between husband and wife gives rise to endless problems. (Malfoozaate-Ashrawfiyyah page 46)
Shaitawn is very pleased with the person who sows seeds of discord between the husband and wife. It appears in a Hadeeth that Shaitawn sets his throne on the middle of the ocean every night and he listens to the cases of all his disciples. One of them will claim that he made a man commit adultery whilst others will claim other forms of sin. Shaitawn will address each one of them and say that you didn't do much. Since mere repentance will obliterate the sin. One of the Shaitawns will say that he planted seeds of discord between husband and wife and he persisted in his endeavour until the husband divorced his wife. Shaitawn embraces this disciple, praises him and exclaims, "You've really carried out a marvellous feat."
The reason behind Shaitawn's joy lies in the fact that any discord between two people is confined to them two alone. It does not affect other people. However, any discord and subsequent divorce between the couple has far-reaching affects. Families on both sides turn antagonistic towards each other. The enmity between two people leads to enmity amongst 100 others. Shaitawn does not have the time to sow seeds of hatred amongst 100 people. He just has to bring about discord between the husband and wife and this will have a ripple-effect far and wide. There is an incident of a foreigner who wished to learn Arabic. Right at the very beginning he started reacting Sharawh Jami (one of the higher books of Arabic grammar) for many years on end. The people told him repeatedly that he wouldn't benefit from the bigger books until and unless he studied the smaller books like Meezan etc. To this he would respond: "My mother used to breed chickens. Every evening, it used to be a real hassle for her to gather all the chicks into an enclosure. At that time, my mother used to catch the hen and all the chicks used to squawk and come together with the hen. Similarly, Sharawh Jami's like the hen. Once I get hold of the hen, all the others'll automatically come under my control."
Similarly, the discord between the husband and wife is like the hen. Shaitawn sows the seeds of hostility between them and this ultimately leads to endless quarrels and disputes. These disputes eventually destroy one's Deen. The non-relatives also face a problem; they are not sure whether they should meet the warring parties or remain aloof from them. (Islaahe Zaat-i-Bayn page 278)

Dissension between the spouses – both are at fault

It is a deficiency amongst women that they do not respect their husbands and show extreme disrespect to them. This is totally shameless of them. Some women treat their husbands as though they are equals and they treat their husbands as though they are brothers of the same age. Great emphasis has been laid in the Hadeeth in favour of respect to the husband. It is narrated in the Ahadeeth that Rawsoolullawh (S) said:

If I'd to command anyone to prostrate before any being other than Allawh, I would have commanded the wife to prostrate before the husband. However, prostrating before anyone other than Allawh isn't permitted.

Nonetheless, we deduce from this Hadeeth that the women are compelled to respect their husbands. In some places, women rule over men whilst in some places they show extreme disrespect to them and they are fond of despising their husbands. (Huqooquz-Zawjayn page 110)

Similarly, (men are also to blame) for imposing hardships upon their women folk. They attend to them in a rather despicable manner. Some men trample upon the rights of their wives by protecting their own interests first; they eat the best of delicacies and wear the best of clothing whilst the wife and children are left suffering. This complaint is not directed to a person who does not have anything. In fact in such cases, the women work and feed their husbands (and they will even sell their jewellery for them). Our complaint is addressed to that person whom Allawh Ta'ala has bestowed with abundant wealth and yet he is niggardly with her. This is rather unbecoming of a man and really heartless of him. There is so much of cruelly shown towards women that some men are under the false notion that they enjoy total and unfettered rights over their women folk. In some places, both parties are at fault. One party is guilty of cruelty whilst the other is guilty of disrespect. On the day of judgement, they will all be reckoned with. Whomsoever encroached upon the rights of others will be taken to task. In short, men are required to fulfil the rights of their, wives whilst the women folk are required to show respect to their husbands. They should obey and honour their husbands. (Huqooquz-Zawjayn pages 42, 111, & 382)

Discord between the spouses – the wife is mainly at fault

One of the intrinsic maladies found in women is that they are very disrespectful to their husbands. There is no doubt that some men are also very tyrannical and hard-hearted. However, some women are such that in spite of hosting them with a warm reception, they tend to harass their husbands. There is no denial of the services the women of India render to their husbands. However, their service can be summarised thus; they serve him physically but harass him spiritually. They no doubt serve him physically. They are matchless in this feat. They are also very chaste. They probably don't even have some inclination towards undermining this chastity. However, the condition of their tongue is such that they blurt out whatever comes to mind. This is really perplexing to the husband. The most simple method of rectifying this evil is to keep the tongue in check. At the beginning it will be a bit difficult. Controlling the tongue will first develop into a habit and thereafter she will be delivered from this malady. This is the cure for this disease and not what some women do; they get some salt or sugar etc. read upon (as a form of a Taweez) in order to subordinate the husband and ultimately the ladies can say what they wish to whilst the husbands will go on listening. This is not the cure for this malady. (Al-Aqilat-ul-Ghawfilat page 332)

Immoderate extremities

Some women are of the opinion that taking the husband's name severs the Nikah. It is as though it is impermissible to take the husband's name. Taking his name is disrespectful whilst harassing him. and dishonouring him with the tongue is not disrespectful? According to these women, quarrelling with the husband or other women is as though it is not prohibited. Some women tend to go to such extremes that even if their husband's ;name appears in the Qur'an, they will omit the name whenever they pass his name whilst reciting the Qur'an. It is as though his name is not mentioned in the Holy Qur'an. Some women won't even employ words similar in scale to the names of their husbands. It is really ironical that they consider all these things impermissible whilst verbal dishonour to him is permissible. (Deen-o-Dunya page 334)

An excellent method of avoiding conflict and making the husband affectionate

A woman came to a certain Buzurg (saint) and requested a Taweez to ensure that her husband does not abuse her. The Buzurg feigned recitation on some water and advised her: "Place this water in a bottle and the moment your husband walks in, take a sip of this water, keep it in your mouth, and sit down. Until he remains with you, make sure you keep the water in your mouth. Your husband will automatically be overwhelmed with shame for abusing you."

She did as instructed. Whenever he came to her, she took a sip of water and sat down with the water still in her mouth. After some time, the husband softened up a bit and became affectionate towards her. The woman returned to the Buzurg with some gifts saying: "Hadhrawt! Now my husband is treating me well."

The Buzurg smiled and said: "That's merely a ploy. It's not a Taweez or anything of that sort. I realised that your husband's hard on you because of your abusive language and because of your inability to control your tongue. I employed this ruse just to restrain your tongue. Make sure you keep your tongue in control in the future. Take these gifts away as well as I'll not accept them." No doubt, the (impudent use of) the tongue is a great calamity. (Al-Aqilat Al-Ghawfilat page 343)

What should she do if he is at fault?

Ladies! The fact that you get angry whenever he gels angry signifies that you consider yourself either superior to him or equal in status to him. A person normally becomes angry with someone lower than him or equal to him. If a person considers someone else superior to him, he will never become angry with him as in the case with the servant. He does not get angry with his master. If you consider yourself inferior and subjugated to your husband, you will never become angry with him regardless of the degree of his fury. So remove this baseless notion from your heart and consider yourself subjugated to your husband just as Allawh Ta'ala has created you. (Even if the husband is at fault and his anger is unwarranted) then too control your tongue. Remain totally silent. When his anger subsides then only should you tell him about his error or inappropriate action. This course of action will ensure that such matters are not prolonged and at the same time he will really appreciate you. (Huqooqul-Bait page 51)

If anger takes its furious toll over you then contemplate over the fact that there are many rights of Allawh Ta'ala over us and we are perpetually sinning. When Allawh Ta'ala forgives our sins then we too should overlook his (or her) sins. (Malfoozaat page 6)

Such forbearance and patience brings about tremendous Deeni benefit and one is rewarded greatly as well. (Huqooqul-Bait page 42)

Women are naturally and judicially subjected to men. However, out of love for them, men become subjected to women. Hence, the wife should conduct herself in a manner that develops love in his heart for her. The method to achieve this end is as explained above. The husband will only be subjected to you until his love for you remains within his heart. And the prevailing of this love rests on the practice of Hijabb. Men are normally very concerned about the comfort of their wives and the underlying reason for this concern is the love they cherish for their women folk- And the origin of love is based upon Ikhtisas (exclusivity). Experience bears testimony to the fact that when something becomes commonly prevalent (free for all so to say), one does not cherish a very strong bond towards it. This Ikhtisas (exclusivity in favour of the husband whereby even the gazes of other men don't linger upon her) can only be achieved by the institution of Hijabb. Hence, Hijabb is the chief contributor towards the preservation of this love. From this, the importance of Hijabb is also deduced. (Al-Faidhul Hasan page 170)

The employment of Taweez etc. to subjugate the husband

The Fuqawha (jurists) have prohibited the employment of Taweezes etc. the sole objective of which is the subjugation of the husband. (Huqooquz-Zawjayn page 381)

The use of such Taweezes is Harawm because the effects of the Taweez renders the husband predisposed to something he isn't religiously compelled to do. (At-Tahzeeb page 47)

Question: If a woman, with the sole intent of subjugating her husband, resorts to certain verses of the Holy Qur'an, Du'as or any other agency, is this permissible or not?

Answer: No, it is not permissible. However, in order to avert his cruelty (so that he may fulfil all his wife's rights) it is permissible. (Imdaadul-Fatawa volume 4 page 89)

Commentary: If the wife is disobedient, it is permissible to employ some A'mal (Taweezes etc.) to make her obedient. Similarly, if the husband is very cruel, it is permissible to subjugate him. However, there are certain very sensitive angles to this rule. Many consider this permissibility as a general rule. If a woman employs some A'mal (Taweezes etc.) in order to subjugate her husband, there is some detail to this; if her husband is deficient in fulfilling her rights, she is permitted to employ such Taweezes to attain that shortfall only. If on the other hand, he is fulfilling her rights and just to make him infatuated with her she employs such Taweezes, it is prohibited. (Ta'meemut-Ta'meem page 143)

Few simple and beneficial A'maliyat to create love between the couple

A'mal to please the husband

If the husband's upset and angry, recite the following verse on some sweetmeat and feed the same to him. Insha Allawh, he will become affectionate towards you. Remember that this verse will have no effect in the wrong places. The verse is:

Wa-minan-Naasi-may-yattakhizu-min-doonillahi-andaada-y-yuhibboo-nahum-kahubbalaawhi-wal-lazeena-amanoo-ashaddu-hubballawh. Wa-lao-yarawllazeena-zawlamoo-iz-yarawonal-'azaaba-annal-quwwatalaawhi-jamee'an-wa-annallawha-shadeedul-'iqaawbb.

A'mal to create love within the wife

1. In Soorawh Yoosuf is written out, made into a Taweez form and tied to the arm of the husband, his wife will (Insha Allawh) start loving him.
2. Read in the mind not with the tongue, the word Al-Mughni whilst engaging in sexual intercourse with the wife; this will also engender sentiments of love from her side (Insha Allawh). [A'amal-i-Qur'ani pages 64-5]

A proven A'mal for developing love between the couple

In order to engender love between the spouses, write out the following, or read it and blow onto some food or water. Thereafter, feed the same to the couple. Insha Allawh, love will develop immediately between them.

Yaa-aiyyuhannaasu-inna-khawlaqqnaakum-shu'ubaa-wa-qawbaa'ila-lita'aarifoo-inna-akrawmakum-'indallawhi-atqawkum. Innallawha-'aleemun-khawbeer. Write out the husband's name together with his father's name (like Muhammadd 'Ibn 'Abdullawh for example) at the 1ST empty space and write out the wife's name together with her mother's name in the second empty space (like Fatimah Bint Aisha for example). One person employed the aforementioned verse in a prohibited place and it had no effect whatsoever. In fact, it was rather detrimental to him. Hence, this A'mal should not be used in a prohibited place or else he will land himself in trouble.

CHAPTER XIII
CRUELTY TOWARDS WOMEN

Violation of women's rights

Nowadays conditions have become such that men consider their own rights binding upon women whilst the rights of women over the men are not even considered. As the case is with some fathers; they demand their rights from the children but they are not even aware of the rights the children have over them. The underlying reason for this sorry state of affairs is that normally authority is life whilst subjugation is death. This is why the ruler is living and he considers his rights to be alive as well. The subject on the other hand is like the deceased and he regards his rights as lifeless as well. Most rulers demand their rights from their subjects and ensure that their rights are redeemed as well. However, they don't consider the rights of the public. They don't make sufficient arrangements for the comfort and tranquillity of the subjects. Similar is the case with the ministers below the rulers. They are only concerned about their own welfare. No sympathy is shown towards their subjects as well. Thereafter, the authority the father enjoys over his children, the husband over his wife, the master over his servant, the teacher over his student, the Spiritual mentor (Shaikh) over his disciples and so forth – all of them are suffering from a similar malady. People of authority acquire their rights from those beneath them whilst the rights of the subjects are considered non-existent simply because they are not in a position to demand their rights. Of course the subjects who confront their seniors and demand their rights do realise some of their rights. An idiomatic expression in Urdu is quite famous:

He who wields the cane owns the buffalo.

The husband is just the same. He is under the notion that his rights are in force simply because he has the power to obtain his rights. The poor women are able to do nothing, that is why their rights are considered obsolete. Nevertheless, Shari'ah on the other hand places more emphasis upon the fulfilment of these so-called lifeless rights that are demanded by no party. It appears in one Hadeeth that the right that none apart from Allawh Ta'ala is aware of – not even the person eligible for that right is aware of that right – then Allawh Ta'ala Himself will demand that right. We deduce from this Hadeeth that he who has nobody to help him, Allawh Ta'ala will help him. This is the main reason why the Du'a of the oppressed against the oppressor is not rejected. When the oppressed makes Du'a, Allawh Ta'ala says to him: "I'll definitely assist you even though it may be after some time." (Raful-Iltibaas, Huqooquz-Zawjayn page 147)

Constrictions placed upon the wife's maintenance

Some people place restrictions even upon the indispensable expenses of the wife, like food and clothing. When she asks for something, they beat the hell out of her for being extravagant. "There's no need for such expenses," they claim. They set out a few monetary principles to curb their wives' expenditure. For instance, they will only give them a few cents. Even if guests are to be entertained or medical costs incurred, they will part with nothing more. Gentlemen! Your wives aren't subject to principles but rather they are subject to demands of the occasion. If you are really a man who adheres to principles, then subject yourself rigidly and see if you are really successful. Fix a certain sum for yourself and ensure that you don't exceed that limit whether you are ill, there is a wedding in the family or any other problem. If you are involved in a court case against you, how far will you adhere to your principles? You will spend a great sum of money behind the case. Then why do you set out principles for your poor wife? (At-Tabbleegh page 140)

Deficiency in other rights

The wife enjoys many rights against the husband. Many are guilty of encroaching upon their rights. Their rights are: to feed and clothe them according to your capability, to teach them the correct path of Deen etc. Some don't feed and clothe them or they are rather niggardly when it comes to spending upon their women. Some men are guilty of having illicit affairs even with lower-class women. They have no scruples of tainting their family lineage nor do they fear disrepute. A veil has fallen over their eyes and they have resolved to perpetrate acts of injustice. (Irshadat Hakeemul-Ummat page 407)

The injustices of the men and the forbearance of the women

Some men encroach upon the rights of their women in such a manner that they shamelessly worry about their personal comfort first. Such men eat the best, dress in the best of clothing whilst the wife and children are abandoned in total neglect. It is rather inhumane of him to dress up smartly whilst leaving the wife looking like a maid. He has no concern for her clothing nor her food. The woman is more eligible for beauty and adornment not a man. Some men are possessed by.evil dispositions which lead them to pursue illicit relationships with immoral women whereas they have wives like Hoors sitting at home. Their wives are sitting idle at home without even attracting a glance from their husbands. The women of India are very forbearing and grateful. They will do nothing but cry and lament over their plight. They don't usually expose the secrets of their husbands. (Huqooqul-Bait page 43)

The victimisation of women

Women are put through endless torments and hassles. I just received a letter from a lady today who took Bait (pledged allegiance at my hands) approximately 40 years ago. She is extremely pious. She complained about her husband's harassment and abuse. Her letter left me grieved and sorrowful. Men nowadays have resolved to encroach upon the rights of women. The poor lady wrote that excessive weeping adversely affected her eyesight as well. She lamented: "At times, I just feel like tearing off all my clothes and running out of the house. Sometimes I feel like drowning me by jumping down a well. However, since this is contrary to Deen, I'm able to do nothing like this. I placate the heart and restrain me. All day long, I can do nothing but cry."

How despotic of her husband. What else can the poor lady do besides crying? This lady had remarried about 17 years ago. Her husband probably married her with high hopes when she was a bit younger. She must have been very beautiful and charming at that time. Her husband must have been infatuated with her at that time as well. Now that she has reached old age, he doesn't even look at her. In fact, he even refuses to maintain her. Her husband is much younger than her in age. At least the husband should have taken into account the company she afforded him for all of these seventy years. But alas, it has no effect on his hard-heartedness and cruelty. Even when the poor lady asks him if this is the fruit of all her past services, the despotic husband retorts: "What services are you talking about!?"
I wonder what services the husband has in mind that his wife was unable to fulfil, I am in the process of writing a booklet concerning these same helpless souls. Everyone wishes to be in authority over others. There is no problem with that but there are some rules and regulations governing the rights of the subjects. They should also be considered. Hadhrawt jokingly says: "If I get control of the government, the first thing I will do is to announce: "All women who are being victimised and persecuted should report it to me and I will investigate the problem and pass judgement on the matter. I will also make arrangements for their comfort. But as the proverb goes a mean person becomes a nuisance if invested with power. Where will I be invested with power when I already have the intention of harassing the men. They won't even vote for me. The women won't give me their vote but at least they will bake Roat (roti) for me."

The aftermath of wife-abuse

There was a person, so-called Alim and Muttaqee who was very stern and cruel upon his wife. Owing to his behaviour, she used to address him as soowar ka bachhaa (son of a pig). The effects of my amicable behaviour with my family members has left such an impression on them that they consider me a true Spiritual mentor. Rawsoolullawh (S) was very affectionate and tender towards his wives. (Al-Qawl-uj-Jaleel page 76)

Cruelty upon the fairer gender? How merciless and cowardly!

Women under the authority of their men folk are rather befitting to the proverb a dead body at the hands of the living, (in other words, they are the mercy of their husbands). How much of Thawabb (reward) will you acquire if you harass them?! If you have a penchant to exercise your valour and authority then why don't you seek a powerful adversary? Then only will you be regarded as brave and courageous. Try saying something to a harsh-mannered labourer. You will see the reality of your authority. Some men transgress even these limits and physically abuse their women. Visualising such a scene is also frightening. Such harshness upon women is a sign of cowardice and chicken-heartedness that does not behove the honour of a man. It is rather ungallant of a man to inflict physical abuse upon another human who is totally subjected to him and at his mercy. (Nusrawtun-Nisa Huqooquz-Zawjayn pages 268&548)

Beware of the ah of an oppressed woman

The poor ladies are unable to do anything much because their rights are not even considered binding upon the males. Surely, they do know how to curse. When the husband harasses her, her tongue is in constant movement. This is quite cruel of him and to top that if she complains to her parents, he threatens and intimidates her. The poor lady is apparently left with nobody to lodge her complains. The only being she can turn to is Allawh Ta'ala and continue cursing her husband. Really her curses are so close to Allawh Ta'ala that they are readily accepted. The sigh of pain uttered by an oppressed person is readily accepted by Allawh Ta'ala. We learn on the basis of the Ahadeeth that he who has no assistant, Allawh Ta'ala is his best of assistants. When the oppressed makes a Du'a against the oppressor, Allawh Ta'ala declares: "I'll definitely help you even though it may become apparent to you after some time." (Huqooquz-Zawjayn Nusrawtun-Nisa pages 147&549)

The calamitous aftermath in this very world of oppressing women

Live with your family members with exceptional character and love; converse and joke with them. Don't be cruel to them in any way. Fear Allawh Ta'ala (in regards to their matters) at all times. Allawh Ta'ala has the power to inflict some calamity upon you, draw up a court case against you, inflict you with some deadly disease, appoint an oppressive ruler over you or anything of that sort. The aftermath of oppression is generally exposed in this very world. The former nations were inflicted with punishment swiftly and openly. Allawh Ta'ala's special mercy descends upon this Ummah in that His punishment does not appear as openly or else this would have been rather disgraceful. But of course it is a veiled form of punishment for the sin of oppression. The masses of the world don't even realise that this is a form of punishment. They attribute it to external causes. In fact it is a punishment for oppression particularly when the oppressed makes a Du'a against the oppressor. The Du'a of the oppressed is very swiftly accepted. (Irshaadaat Hakeemul-Ummat waz-Zulm page 408)

The punishment of the hereafter

Severe punishment awaits the perpetrators of injustice and cruelty. When a woman who was guilty of cruelty to a cat died, Rawsoolullawh (S) saw her burning in the fire of Hell while the cat was busy clawing her. She was hurled into the hell-fire just for being cruel to a cat. The children and women folk are after all human beings. They will definitely take revenge in the hereafter. (Da'waate-Abddiyat volume 19 page 119)

One who harasses the wife or anyone else will enter Jahannam

If you intentionally harass anyone (like the wife for instance), it is very repugnant indeed. If you don't have an intention to harass but you do such things that cause harassment, then too it is repugnant. It appears in the Ahadeeth that 2 women were made mention of before Rawsoolullawh (S). One of them, it was said was very particular with her (optional) Sawlah and Sawm but she harassed her neighbours. Rawsoolullawh (S) declared regarding her: "She's destined for the hellfire." The other woman, it was said was not very particular about her (optional) Sawlah and Sawm but she did not harass her neighbours either. Rawsoolullawh (S) said regarding her: "She'll enter Jannah." Ponder over the above. This is the outcome of harassment. Hence our concern (of ensuring that others are not harassed by us) should surpass the concern we have for Sawlah and Sawm. (Husnul-Azeez page 234)

CHAPTER XIV

RELIGIOUS CODE OF CONDUCT WHEJN SHE DISOBEYS OR TRANSGRESSES

"As for those women on whose part you fear disobedience (disloyalty and ill-conduct), then (first) advise them. Next, abandon them in the sleeping quarters (suspend sexual relationships with them and don't sleep with them). (Finally) beat them (lightly). But if they obey you then seek no path (of annoyance) against them (Soorawh Nisa verse 34)

Commentary

If you are really confident of a woman's transgression then you should employ verbal advice and admonishment first. If she still does not mend her ways, then avoid sleeping with her. If even this is not sufficient then beat her, albeit in moderation. However, if she starts obeying you then don't look for excuses to commit excesses upon her for Allawh is Most Great and Lofty (above you). Allawh's rights, authority and Urn are much greater. If you take advantage over her, then He can also claim thousands of His rights from you. However, in spite of all this, if you fear such contention between the spouses which you feel they would not be able to resolve themselves, then appoint arbiters from the husband and wife's families ensuring that both arbiters are capable enough. Send these arbiters to look into their dispute and endeavour to resolve the issue. They should advise the defaulting party or parties. If both parties really wish to rectify the situation then Allawh Ta'ala will bring about reconciliation between the spouses, provided they implement the advice given to them by the arbiters. Verily Allawh Ta'ala is totally knowledgeable and well-acquainted. He is well aware of the measures that can bring about reconciliation between the spouses. When Allawh Ta'ala sees the correct intention of both arbiters, then He will inspire them with those measures. (Bayan-ul-Qur'an volume 2 page 115)

A summary of the procedure

1. Exercise patience upon the stupidity and ill manners of the wife.
2. If she does not refrain from her transgression or the husband is unable to exercise patience, then advise and admonish her.
3. Thereafter, if she still persists, sleep separately from her.
4. Thereafter, you may beat her. However, this beating should be very light and not harsh at all.
5. Even if this proves ineffective, then appoint two arbiters – one from each spouses family. They should look into their dispute and try to resolve the issue.

Hadeeth of Rawsoolullawh (S)

Rawsoolullawh (S) is reported to have said something to the effect: "Treat the women in an amicable manner as they are like prisoners under your authority. You don't have more authority than that. If they do something offensive, make them sleep separately. If this proves insufficient, then beat them. However, don't beat them very severely but very lightly. Thereafter, if they become obedient, tell them nothing. (In other words, don't overdo it with them.) Behold! There are some rights you enjoy over women whilst they also enjoy some rights over you. Your right over them is that they don't allow such people who you are displeased with, to sit on your bed. (In other words, they don't allow anyone to come into your home without your permission.) And their right against you is that you feed and clothe them well. (Huqooquz-Zawjayn page 268)

Punitive measures and their limits

There is a need at times for punishment and chastisement. According to the rule necessity is confined to the demand of the occasion, only that amount of chastisement is permitted that will enable proper reformation. Such chastisement is referred to as Ta'zeer in the Shari'ah. There are various forms of this to:

1. Reproach
2. Scold
3. Beat with the stick or hand
4. Pull the ears
5. Utter harsh words
6. Physically detain
7. Apply financial restraints etc.

Only that amount of punitive measures can be employed that assist in improvement. It should not reach a stage of excessive torment and agony. Such excess is, let alone a sin, also unnatural and inhumane. The Fuqawha (jurists) have explicitly prohibited excessive beating. This includes beating in a manner that leaves marks on the body. As for beating in a manner that breaks the bones or splits the skin, it will obviously be more prohibited. (Islaahe-Inqilaab volume 2 page 220)

Method of restraining oneself within the permitted boundaries

Hadhrawt Thanwi (RA) was told that people tend to commit excesses with the tongue and hand whilst applying punitive measures upon their subordinates. However, they most often regret their actions. Hadhrawt was asked for some method to ensure people remain within the limits. Hadhrawt replied, "The best plan is, prior to you saying anything or stretching your hand out, to ponder over what you are going to say or what course of physical action you will assume. Thereafter, make sure you stick to those limits. (Husnul-Azeez page 351)

The best remedy is to ensure that you don't hit whilst angry. Once the anger subsides, contemplate over the severity of the offence and punish accordingly. (Da'waate-Abddiyat volume 19 page 119)

On occasions of extreme fury

If one becomes furious with someone else, he should move away from in front of him or move the other person away. Thereafter, drink some water. If the anger is much worse, one should ponder over the fact that Allawh Ta'ala has many rights over us and we are also guilty of offences. Just as He forgives us, we should also forgive the faults of the other party. What will our condition be if Allawh Ta'ala has to take us to task for all our sins? (Malhoozaat Jadeed Malfoozaat page 6)

Treatment for anger

Rawsoolullawh (S) once enquired from the Sahabah (R): "Who is referred to as a brave and valiant champion?"
"One who wrestles," they replied.
He said: "No! A true champ is he who controls himself at the time of anger."

It is quite natural when anger develops into rage. One cannot be reproached for this. However, Allawh Ta'ala has also blessed us with the faculty of control. One should endeavour to suppress his anger.

Hadhrawt Abu Wa'il narrates: "We once went for some work to Urwah 'Ibn Muhammadd. For some reason or the other he became extremely furious. He immediately summoned for some water to be brought to him. He made Wudhu and performed 2 Rawkahs of Sawlah. Thereafter he said: "My father reported from Rawsoolullawh (S) that anger is from Shaitawn and Shaitawn has been created from the fire."

Think about it, only effects of heat are exposed at the time of anger; the face becomes red, the hands and feet start trembling. All these are the doings of fire.

Shaitawn was asked: "Where about in man's body do you abide?"
He replied: "When a man is happy, I dwell in his heart and when he is angry, I am above his head."

The treatment for anger prescribed by Rawsoolullawh (S) is like a total onslaught for this malady. He ordered us to make Wudhu at the time of anger. The mere washing of the limbs is not sufficient because it is not caused by fire alone but anger is also the effect of Shaitawn who was created from fire. So in essence, the fire can be overcome with water whilst the villainy and disbelief of Shaitawn can be overcome with 'Ibadah (Wudhu). 'Ibadah is the total opposite of pride and pride is the essence of Shaitawn's evils. So the treatment prescribed thwarts the fire as well as pride. This treatment is Wudhu. And Wudhu is a form of 'Ibadah. 'Ibadah is a reference to something that brings about proximity towards Allawh Ta'ala. When a man gains proximity towards Allawh Ta'ala, he obviously, distances himself from Shaitawn. In fact Shaitawn will not be able to stay close to him. He will have to flee from him. (Ghawa'ilul-Ghawzabb)

Another treatment for anger

Rawsoolullawh (S) is reported to have said: "When one of you becomes angry, if he's standing, he should be seated. If this doesn't thwart the anger, he should lie down."

I have total confidence that no further plan of action or treatment will be required. When a man is standing, his body is much further away from the ground. When he is seated, he is nearer to the ground and he is closest to the ground when he is lying down. Allawh Ta'ala has placed humility within the constitution of the earth. So this humility impresses its effects on this angry person. Humility is the total opposite of anger and pride. So, in other words, this treatment prescribed is (in medical terms) a counteracting remedy. (Ibid)

Experience bears testimony to the fact that at the time of anger, one is involuntarily inclined to lake on an appearance that is more conducive towards hilling, seizing, bashing etc. For instance, if one is seized by anger whilst lying down, he involuntarily sits up. If his anger is relatively more intense, he tends to stand up. So it is a natural demand of anger that compels a lying person to sit up and a seated person to stand up. So the sitting position enjoys some distance from the demands made by the conditions of anger whilst the position of lying down is most distant. So these guidelines – sit down if standing and lie down if sitting – are prescribed to us for the suppression of anger are essentially logical guidelines.

A 3RD treatment to curb anger

Two Sahabi (R)s became furious with one another before Rawsoolullawh (S). None of the two wished to remain silent. Rawsoolullawh (S) remarked: "I'm aware of such a verse that if an angry person has to recite it, his anger will subside immediately. And that verse is: A'oozubillahi."

A 4TH treatment

The Ulama have prescribed this treatment as well for the suppression of anger: they say that he should separate himself from that environment. Obviously, when a person moves away from that place, the person who incited his anger will not be there nor will the things that incited him be there. The anger will automatically die down.

A 5TH treatment

A person who gets angry very quickly should write the following text down on a piece of paper and hang it up at a point where he can always see it:

Allawh Ta'ala enjoys more authority over you than what you enjoy over the person upon whom you're venting your anger.

A person only gets angry upon the person who he considers weaker than himself. He will not become angry if the opposition is more stronger than he is. In fact, even if a more powerful third party is there, this person will not get angry. Whenever he sees this text, its contents will become etched onto his mind. In other words, the power and might of Allawh Ta'ala will always come to mind. This in turn will ensure he does not get angry (with his wife or anyone else). [Ghawa'ilul-Ghawzabb]

Don't entertain high hopes of totally reforming your wives Don't ever have high hopes of her becoming totally like you are. Their intrinsic crookedness and natural deformities will never vanish. "Straighten out a dog's tail for a hundred years but it'll still remain crooked." (An English proverb expresses this in the following words: "What is bred in the bone will never come out of the flesh.")

Men should not be so cruel and ill-tempered that every trivial and inconsequential grossness of their wives infuriates them. You should not exercise such awe over your wife that you turn out to be a bugbear (object of needless terror) for her. The moment you step foot into the house, she feels terrorized, she loses her senses, the poor lady has to just ask for something and she is physically manhandled. The poor lady left her parents and family members only for your sake. Now her vision is centred around you only. She is always concerned about her husband only. If her husband does not give her support then who else can she turn to? Hence, morality demands that such a loyal soul should not be put through any sort of difficulty. Whatever ill manners or disrespect she displays should be considered as an act of pomposity and dalliance (Naz). They are less intelligent, at times unable to differentiate and they lack the correct etiquette of speech. This is why they tend to speak in a manner which is very offensive to men. However, the reality of this behaviour can be summed up as pomposity (Naz). After all, with who else can she behave in such a manner? You are the only person in the world for her. If your heart is really perplexed with her ignorance and ill manners, this can be rectified as well. Teach her some religious books. This will bring about, to some extent, some etiquette and manners in her because religious knowledge rectifies one's behaviour and brings about the fear of Allawh Ta'ala. It also makes her aware of her husband's rights. Even if she is really at fault, then too you should overlook it. Exercising patience upon her harassment will elevate your status in the hereafter and bring about forbearance within your disposition. This forbearance is extremely beneficial to Deen and very rewarding. (Huqooqul Bait pages 35,40, At-Tabbleegh volume 7 pages 57,138, Al-Qawl-uj-Jaleel page 77)

A formula whereby the spouses will never contend with one another

Hadhrawt Luqqman (A) – who was unanimously Hakeem (wise) and a Nabee according to some – was employed as a labourer in an orchard. One day, the owner of the orchard came and asked him to bring some cucumbers. He peeled one and gave it to Hadhrawt Luqqman (A) who started eating it with relish. The owner, witnessing Hadhrawt Luqqman eating the cucumber with such relish thought that it must be rather delicious. He placed a slice of it into his mouth and on finding that it was extremely bitter, spat it out and frowned. "This cucumber's rather bitter/" he addressed Hadhrawt Luqqman, "but you were eating it as though it was very delicious."

Hadhrawt Luqqman said: "Yes, of course! It's bitter."

"Why didn't you say so?" asked the master.

He replied: "What can I say? I thought to myself that the hand from which I ate sweet things thousands of times if the same hand gives me something bitter just once, how can I show it on my face?"

This is such a principle that if both spouses remember it, there will never be an opportunity for contention and dispute. The wife should remember that the husband has put up with all her frivolities thousands of times, what is there if he is hard with me just this once? The husband on the other hand should also ponder over the thousands of times his wife had served him diligently. This is just an isolated incident which I am unhappy with. The same subject is also dealt with by Allawh Ta'ala in the Holy Qur'an (as explained at the beginning of the next chapter). [At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 128]

Where there are many instances of ill manners found amongst our Indian women, there are also many virtues found within them. They should also be taken into consideration. Those virtues demand that you should be lenient and affectionate towards them. Don't overlook those virtues. Their most profound virtue is their service to you. She is always concerned about your comfort and well-being. If the person who has comforted you a hundred times torments you just once, don't even mention it before that person. (Huqooqul Bait page 45)

An incident

Our Spiritual mentor Sahibah (the wife of Hadhrawt Hajee Imdadullawh Sahib (R'A)) became very feeble and helpless during her last days. One of Hadhrawt's servants went from here (India) to Makkah Mu'azzamah to attend to his household chores. This servant took the responsibility of running the affairs of the entire household. However, she was very harsh-mannered and hot-headed. She was always fighting with Peer Sahibah. On one occasion, my wife commented to Peer Sahibah: "This woman continues fighting with you but you tell her nothing nor do you throw her out of the house?"

She replied: "This woman grants me great comfort and ease as well. Not to exercise patience on the excesses committed by someone who also gives great comfort is unethical and an act of ingratitude. So whenever she harasses me, I think about all her comforts and I overlook and forgive her excesses."

She as a woman understood this. You are a man after all. You should employ your intellectual powers in whatever you do. Think about all the comforts your wife has afforded you and exercise patience upon all her excesses. (Huqooqul-Bait page 45)

CHAPTER XV

INTERCESSION ON BEHALF OF ILL-MANNERED WIVES AND CONSOLATION FOR HUSBANDS BEREAVED BY THEIR WIVES' BEHAVIOUR

Men should contemplate over the manner in which Allawh Ta'ala intercedes on behalf of the women in the following verse:

And associate with them (the women) in an amicable manner and if you dislike them (for any reason) then probably you dislike (just) one thing about them whereas Allawh Ta'ala has placed an abundance of good in it.

Obviously this dislike a man harbours for a woman is fuelled by some reason or the other. The main reason for disliking women is their ill behaviour and this is quite tormenting to a man. However, it is a sort of promise made by Allawh Ta'ala that He will make the ill manners etc. of the women a source of abundant virtue and goodness. Allawh Ta'ala is all-wise. He has the power to do everything. For instance, from this ill-mannered woman, a man may get children who will assist him in the hereafter. On the day of Qiyamah (judgement), a person, due to his excessive sins, will be destined for Jahannam but one of his children who died in infancy or immaturity will intercede for him and say: "I will never go to Jannah until my father also goes into Jannah."

Due to this child, the father will also be admitted into Jannah. There is also abundant goodness in a woman's foul tongue or ill manners in a sense that a man exercises patience upon her tormenting utterances and the reward for patience is Jannah. Jannah is obviously goodness in abundance. The harassment a person endures from his wife in this world is relatively negligible. It is only for a few days. The comforts he will enjoy in the hereafter as a form of recommendation will definitely be much more because those comforts will be permanent (and her harassment was temporary). So there is an abundance of goodness in woman. In such instances (where a man dislikes certain traits) he should keep the promise of Allawh Ta'ala in mind and he should abstain from thinking about her ill manners (or her other faults). However, this in no way indicates that he should totally abstain from admonishing and advising her as well. You should endeavour to reform her, albeit with tenderness. At times, threatening her also is not inappropriate. However, don't harass and torment her. Excessive threatening is also not recommended. (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 130)

The virtues of exercising patience upon a woman's ill manners

Allawh Ta'ala says:

If for any reason you dislike your wives, then most probably you dislike something whereas Allawh Ta'ala has placed an abundance of good therein.

Some people may be under the notion that this goodness can only be confined to the presence or absence of children and nothing else. A woman's ill manners and temperamental nature normally generates hatred and dislike for her. So what goodness can there be in that? In this also there is goodness for a man. By the husband exercising patience, his status in the hereafter is increased. Secondly, forbearance develops within his disposition. Patience and forbearance occupy the uppermost levels of good character. (Huqooqul-Bait page 40)

An Incident of Hadhrawt Mirza Jaan Jaanaan (RA)

Hadhrawt Mirza Jaan Jaanaan (RA)'s wife was extremely ill mannered and he was extremely sensitive as evident from the following incident: A very old lady Mureed of Hadhrawt once sewed a quilt for him and brought it to him whilst Hadhrawt was lying down. He asked her to throw it over him and go away. When he got up in the morning his eyes were very red. On enquiry by his servants, he complained of lack of sleep. "You were feeling very cold?" they asked.

He replied, "No, the quilt was sufficient to combat the cold but the stitches on the quilt were skew. As a result, I felt uneasy and I was unable to fall off to sleep."

Think about it! The stitches are not visible in the darkness of the night but he perceived the crooked stitching on the quilt. How sensitive he must have been to perceive the crookedness of the stitching without looking and this made him so restless that he was unable to sleep for the night. So Hadhrawt was very sensitive but he was extremely patient with his ill mannered wife who used to let him have it verbally. Hadhrawt used to bear all her utterances with patience and he never thought of divorcing her nor did he ever ill-treat her on his part. In fact he was so considerate of her that every morning he used to send his servant to enquire about her health etc. The servant would go and ask her on behalf of Mirza Sahib and she in reply would hurl abusive remarks about Hadhrawt and openly abuse him. However, the servant used to return and merely inform Hadhrawt that she is well. One day according to his norm he sent his Palhan servant – who hailed from the frontier region – to enquire about her health. He became extremely furious with her .cply and returned to Hadhrawt saying: "She verbally abuses you and vilifies your character but yet you are so considerate towards her?"

He replied: "Don't take her abuses to heart. She's also your senior. I'm very considerate of her because she is a very great benefactor of mine. All these spiritual achievements of mine you're witnessing are all due to her."

In other words, exercising patience upon her ill manners has brought me to this level of spiritual achievement. Allawhu Akbar! What harrowing agony a sensitive man like him must have went through with such an ill-mannered wife. How sublime of him, though, to exercise patience and live with her. The Ahlullawh (Saints of Allawh) did not annoy even their enemies but alas, we can't even endure the torments of friends among whom the best of friends is the wife. We are unable to bear her nuisances. If you are unable to bear her harassment with the intention of reward in the hereafter, then endure it all thinking that this must be Kaffarawh (expiation) for some sin or the other committed by me. (Huqooqul Bait page 42)

Method of exercising patience upon an ill-mannered, ugly, and slovenly woman

Think of it this way that 1 have perpetrated a sin and this woman is a sort of Kaffarawh (expiation) for that sin. I heard about an incident involving a couple from Lucknow. The husband was a very saintly man whilst the wife was very ill-mannered. One day he shouted out at her: "You are really unlucky! You are living with me for so many years but yet you have achieved no spiritual enlightenment."

She retorted: "Why should I be unlucky? There's none more lucky than I'm because I got a noble man like you. You're unlucky for getting a woman like me in your marriage."

Another incident

There is another similar incident mentioned of a man who was very handsome and pious whilst his wife was ugly and ill-mannered. The men of today would have divorced her in a matter of days but this husband was a pious servant of Allawh Ta'ala. He exercised patience upon her behaviour. When asked why he wouldn't divorce her, he replied: "No, I'd never divorce her. I probably committed some sin or the other. Allawh Ta'ala has given me such a wife as a form of punishment for that sin. She, on the other hand, probably did some pious action for which Allawh Ta'ala has rewarded her with a handsome man like me. I am her reward and she is my punishment. So why should I divorce her?"

This was the manner in which the pious servants of Allawh consoled their hearts. They did not separate their wives just because of their ill manners or unsuitable behaviour. They always exercised patience. So even if the wife is definitely at fault, then too you should overlook it and exercise patience. This forbearance is very beneficial for Deen and it entails tremendous rewards. (Huqooqul-Bait page 42)

Exercising patience upon an ugly woman

If a man is sexually inclined to a strange woman, he should, as a remedy shown by the Hadeeth, have intercourse with his own wife. The same Hadeeth portrays the reason for this remedy thus: "She (the wife) also has what she (the strange woman) has."

Maulana Muhammadd Ya'qoobb Sahib (R'A) analysed this Hadeeth in a rather marvellous manner. They were personalities whose Uloom (religious knowledge) was not compiled. Hadhrawt said in explanation of this Hadeeth: "All usable items are divided into 3 categories; the 1ST category comprises of things whose objective is merely the fulfilment of a need, pleasure is not the objective. For example, visiting the toilet. The 2ND category comprises of things whose objective is solely pleasure. For example; in spite of the absence of thirst, to consume a delicious and fragrant drink – as will be the case in Jannah. The 3RD category deals with things compounded with both aspects. In other words, pleasure and the fulfilment of a need, both are the objectives. This category again has two angles to it; one where the fulfilment of a need is predominant – as in the case of consuming food. The fulfilment of a need is dominant even though pleasure is also the objective. This is why the table, tablecloth, utensils, etc. are all kept neat and tidy. However, this is not necessary. The 2ND angle to this is the case where pleasure is predominant. For example, in sexual intercourse there is a fulfilment of need whereby excess spermatic fluid is released and also there is an angle of pleasure to it. However, the angle of pleasure is dominant."

So coming back to the Hadeeth, Rawsoolullawh (S) says that even though the angle of pleasure is dominant in intercourse but you should look at the other angle – where the objective is the fulfilment of a need. Once the objective is the fulfilment of a need then a strange woman and one's wife are the same in fulfilling this objective. The main objective of an adulterer is pleasure. This is why if he has to sleep with all the women of the world except one, he will still want her as well thinking that the pleasure may be different with her. Hence, such a person is always living in anxiety and restlessness. This is unlike the person whose dominant objective is the fulfilment of a need. He will be at ease and remain within the bounds. (Al Kalam-ul-Hasan page 120)

Policy towards a woman fit to be divorced

There was a saint who was perpetually harassed by his wife. Even the masses learnt about the extent his wife used to torment him. Some suggested that he should rather divorce such a woman. He replied: "I've the ability to divorce her but think about the repercussions of this divorce. If she doesn't remarry, she would be in difficult straits and if she does remarry, then her Muslim husband would have to bear her hounding. It is better if I endure her harassment and save another Muslim from grief. Whilst I'm alive, why should another Muslim be put to difficulty?"

Policy towards a disobedient and impinging wife

One should ponder over the fact that Allawh Ta'ala has many rights over us and we are also guilty of encroaching upon those rights. Just as He forgives us, we should also forgive the faults of the other party. What will our condition be if Allawh Ta'ala has to take us to task for all our sins? (Malfoozaat Jadeed Malfoozaat page 6)

Friends! Ponder over the fact that we are the subjects of Allawh Ta'ala and yet He gives us grace. How much the servants disobey Allawh Ta'ala but yet His conduct with them in reciprocation is remarkable; He still continues to provide their sustenance and He does not punish them immediately. The reason for this is that Allawh Ta'ala is quite aware that all these are His subjects. There is no other being apart from Him they can turn to. Whatever sins they commit are due to their stupidity and ignorance. This is why Allawh Ta'ala takes them into such great lengths of consideration. Our behaviour with those under us (like our wives, servants etc.) should also be the same. (At-Tabbleegh volume 7 page 59)

Expressing anger over the infertility of a woman

The husband should not be so harsh that he boils in fury over his wife's trivial mistakes. At times, his anger is centred over matters within her control. This is understandable. However, at times he becomes furious over matters that are beyond her control. This is rather deplorable of him. For example, some husbands tell their wives: "You unlucky women! You can't even get children." What can the poor lady do in such a case? The procurement of children is beyond her control. At times, even the kings don't get children in spite of taking aphrodisiacs and fertility drugs. Such matters lie solely in the control of Allawh Ta'ala. This is no fault of the women. In fact, yow should visit the doctor. He might find some problem with you instead of her.

Expressing anger over her deliverance of female children only

We have witnessed some men vilifying their wives for giving birth to female children only. Firstly, this is no fault of the poor lady and secondly there is nothing offensive about female children. Friends! You do recall the incident of Hadhrawt Khidr (A) when he murdered a young boy. This murder was beneficial to the boy's parents. We learn from other narrations that following the death of this boy, Allawh Ta'ala had blessed his parents with a daughter whose descendants comprised of many Ambiya (A). So if you had a son who turned out to be like the boy killed by Hadhrawt Khidr (A), what would you do? It is through the Wisdom of Allawh Ta'ala that he has given you daughters upon daughters only. Girls generally don't bring disrepute to the family like boys normally do. Girls are more obedient to their parents also. Nowadays, the boys are so wayward that Allawh save us – it is better not to have them. As for the couple who has not been blessed with any children whatsoever – neither girls nor boys – this is better for them. Allawh Ta'ala is quite aware of what is good for His servants. Today a person may be occupied with his Deeni devotions with no worry or concern simply because he has no children. Now if he happens to gel children, who knows whether the freedom from care and anxiety will still remain or not? There are thousands of problems attached to children; one of them has an ear-ache, another has stomach-ache, one has fallen down, the other is lost and so forth. Their problems leave the parents perplexed and in constant worry. Probably this is why Allawh Ta'ala did not bestow them with children – He wishes to keep them free from any concern and anxiety. Undoubtedly, there are various types of grief and concerns attached to children. If they grow up to be pious, then well and good. However, this is very rare nowadays. If they are impious, then everyone is quite aware how tormenting they can be. Once they grow up, the parents are now concerned about getting them married. With great difficulty they marry but then again they are grieved over the lack of children. Employing Taweezes and other fertility drugs, the couple get children but by now the old man (i.e. the children's father) is so old that even his grandchildren have grown up. The same children or grandchildren (who he was pining for) mock at him and they are fed up of serving him. They verbally abuse and vilify him. The poor old man is sitting helpless in one corner unable to do anything. (In the other corner of the house, contention between the mother-in-law and daughter-in-law has left the boy's mother depressed.) This is the (bitter) fruit of the children. Then why do people still pine for children when this is the position? Childless couples should console themselves by looking at the people of the world. They should see the problems people are facing with their children. If this docs not console them, they should ponder over the fact that whatever Allawh Ta'ala wishes is best for me and even if I do get children, who knows what their condition will be? If a person is unable to do this also, then he should at least realise that his wife is not at fault for them being childless. (Huqooqul-Bait pages 35-38)

A few basic and beneficial A'maliyat (Taweezes) for the procurement of children

1. Excessive recitation of Al Bariul-Musawwir will simplify the occurrence of miraculous wonders. If the woman is barren, she should fast for 7 days and break each fast with water. After breaking her fast, she should recite this (Al-Bariul-Musawwir) 21 times. Insha Allawh, she will fall pregnant.
2. Aw Kazulumaatin Fil Bahri [Soorawh Noor verse 40]: The aforementioned verse should be recited upon 7 cloves. After taking a bath following purity from haidh (menses), she should take one clove daily. The clove should be taken at night without water. During these days, her husband should continue engaging in sexual intercourse with her.
3. The following verse should be written with rose water and saffron upon the pellicle (membrane) of a deer's skin that should thereafter be tied as a Taweez around the infertile woman's neck. The verse is: "Walaw anna Qur'aanan Suyyirat Bal Liliaahil Amru Jameea'a. [Soorawh Raw'd verse 31] (A'amal-i-Qur'ani pages 69-70)

Preventing a miscarriage

1. Yaa Ayyuhan Naasut-Taqoo Rabakum [Soorawh Hajj verse 1]. This verse is very beneficial in protecting the foetus. Recite this verse thrice after every Sawlah. Thereafter make Du'a unto Allawh Ta'ala.
2. Allawhu Ya'lamu Maa Tahmilu [Soorawh Raw'd verse 8]: If there is a fear of miscarrying or there is a history of her suffering a miscarriage, the aforementioned verse should be written and placed upon her womb (taking care that no disrespect is shown to the verse). Insha Allawh, the foetus will remain intact or if she is not conceiving, she will Insha Allawh conceive soon. (A'amal-i-Qur'ani page 70)

CHAPTER XVI
DIVORCE

It is cruel to issue a divorce without intense compulsion

Some people don't restrain themselves whilst issuing a divorce. Trivial excuses are sufficient for them to blurt out Talaqq whereas this is not permitted except in dire circumstances. A Hadeeth warns:

Talaqq (divorce) in the eyes of Allawh Ta'ala is the most disliked of all permitted things.

A verse of the holy Qur'an prohibits such a form of Talaqq:

If the women obey you, then do not seek excuses against them.

In other words, do not look for excuses to separate them. Issuing of divorce without any valid Shari reason leads to the perpetration of many sins, such as:

1. Foolishness of judgement
2. Showing ingratitude towards the Ni'mat of Nikah

3. Causing grief and harassment to the wife and her family
4. Afflicting her children with grief
5. Bringing shame and disrepute to the wife since people may cast doubts over her chastity and character. As a result, it would be very difficult for her to remarry. Ultimately, her entire life will be wrecked. (Islaahe-Inqilaab volume 2 page 163)

It is very sinful of her to unnecessarily ask for a divorce

Some women are also at fault for asking their husbands to divorce them over trivial matters. Stern warnings have been issued by the Ahadeeth in this regard. Rawsoolullawh (S) is reported to have said:

The woman who requests her husband to divorce her without any pressing need, the fragrance of Jannah is forbidden upon such a woman.

(Tirmeedhi, Abu Dawood, Ahmad etc.)

Requesting divorce against another woman is also prohibited

Just as it is impermissible to request an unnecessary divorce for oneself, similarly it is not permissible to ask him to divorce another woman. For example, if a man who already has one wife, requests her hand in marriage, she only agrees on condition he divorces the first wife beforehand. This has also been prohibited in the Hadeeth. The Hadeeth advises her to remain content with what has been allotted for her. It has been reported in a Hadeeth:

Don't ask (your husband) to divorce your sister (your co-wife) so that you may attain whatever is in the utensil entirely.

It's sinful to issue a divorce whilst she's in Haidh or Nifas

Quite often people don't even think while issuing a divorce whether she is in her menses or whether intercourse had taken place in this period of purity (in between 2 periods). In fact, it is sinful to issue a divorce whilst she is in her menses or in such a period of purity wherein intercourse had taken place. Divorcing her in a state of Nifas (period of bleeding following childbirth) is the same as divorcing her in her period of Haidh. (Shaami volume 2 page 290)

A very common error

Some ignorant people – either out of anger or jokingly – call their wives as divorcee. (For example, they call out to her: O divorced lady.) They are under the false notion that divorce utlered in such a manner does nol take place. In fact even in such instances divorce docs take place. (Islaahe-Inqilaab volume 2 page 165)

Talaqq in anger

At the time of anger, helplessness is no excuse. Even at the time of anger, a person is subject to the laws of Shari'ah. He is compelled by Shari'ah to control and curb his anger. Some ignorant people go to the extremes of issuing a divorce in anger and they don't even consider it binding. They claim that since they uttered the Talaqq in anger, it will not be considered. Friends, open your ears and listen to this Shari rule. Leave aside anger, even a Talaqq uttered jokingly is considered binding. This is explicitly mentioned in the Hadeeth:

There are three things, whether they are uttered in seriousness or in jest, they will be binding…

One of the three is Talaqq. If one jokingly tells his wife that I have divorced you, the Talaqq will come about. If uttered once or twice, a revocable Talaqq (Rajie) comes about. In other words, he can revoke it and recall her within the period of 'Iddat if the marriage has been consummated. Once he recalls her, the Nikah still remains intact. However, once 3 Talaqqs has been issued, it becomes Talaqq-i-Mughawllazah (irrevocable divorce). Now there is no way he can recall her into the Nikah. The family is broken up. This is the Islamic ruling for issuing a divorce in jest and it will invariably apply to the divorce issued in anger. (Ghawa'ilul-Ghawzabb page 213)

Both spouses are at fault

Even the women should lake heed to this ruling since it is a very common malady. Women are not very adept in reading other people's moods. Many a times, when the husband is not in if good mood, she goes on arguing with him. She will not think of suppressing the contentious issue at hand. The whole issue then explodes beyond control until such time that the husband is Ted up and he divorces her. There have been many instances of this nature. Thereafter, both of them regret what they did. Discord is not confined to their household alone, but both spouse's families are now at logger-heads with each other. Some women are so foolish that no opportunity is spared in demanding a divorce from the husband. Men and women both should take heed that the word divorce does not appear – neither in jest nor in anger – on their tongues. The word Talaqq can be likened to a loaded gun; the bullet is released whether you pull the trigger intentionally or playfully. Even if the trigger is pulled in anger, then too the bullet is released. Losing control in anger is not entertained as a valid excuse, neither religiously nor judiciously. Control your anger and learn how to suppress it. The teachings of the Shari'ah aren't futile. They are there for your own benefit. (Ghawa'ilul-Ghawzabb page 213)

If the marriage has irrevocably broken down, Talaqq is the best option

At times, the issuing of Talaqq is Wajibb

Some people feel ashamed to issue Talaqq irrespective of the urgency and wisdom behind issuing it. Even if the spouses are unable to live amicably with each other – resulting in the encroachment of each other's rights – or even if the wife is so irreligious that the husband is unable to reform her, then too some men are adamant and refuse to divorce their wives. If the wife is a tormentor or she is totally negligent of her Sawlah, the Fuqawha (jurists) have considered it Mustahabb (preferable) to divorce her. And if the man is unable to fulfil her rights, they have considered it Wajibb upon him to issue a divorce. (However, if she waives her rights, it is not Wajibb to issue a divorce.) [Islaahe-Inqilaab volume 2 page 155]

Nonetheless, considering it to be contrary to family nobility, many people are not prepared to issue a divorce. He thereby renders his or his wife's entire life bitter and acrimonious. When the occasion demands, it is permissible to issue a divorce with no form of Shari detestability even though Talaqq is the most detestable of all permissible things. At times, Talaqq is either Mustahabb (preferable) or Wajibb (compulsory). Hence, it is not possible for something to be Mustahabb or compulsory and detestable at the same time. Therefore, even Talaqq is not detestable at times. The holy Qur'an says:

There is no harm upon you if you divorce the women (when the occasion demands.

According to a narration by Rawzeen Rawsoolullawh (S) wanted to divorce Hadhrawt Sawda (R) but refrained from doing so when she requested him to keep her. (Mishkaat)

Many incidents of divorce amongst the Sahabah have also been narrated. (Raddul-Muhtaar)

Hence, Talaqq cannot be detestable without any exception. There are certain occasions when Talaqq is not detestable. Undoubtedly, it will be detestable when there is no pressing need for it. (Shaami) [Islaahe-Inqilaab volume 2 page 160]

The limits of Talaqq

Some people after learning of the Mas'alah that the Nikah remains intact after revoking the Talaqq are under the false impression that revoking the divorce is limitlessly permitted regardless of the number of times Talaqq has been issued. They should understand well that this is not the case. The issuing of Talaqq is confined to 3 Talaqqs only whether these were issued collectively or individually or whether revocation intervenes or not. If a person issues one Talaqq and thereafter revokes it (by taking her back into his marriage), this revocation is in order because only one Talaqq has been issued. If he again issues a revocable divorce and thereafter revokes it, then too his revocation is in order because this revocation appears after only two Talaqqs. This will now be considered as 2 Talaqqs because the first Talaqq will also be counted with the second Talaqq even though he had revoked the first Talaqq. Once a Talaqq is revoked, its effects only vanish but its reality remains. (Hence, the second will be considered with the first and a total of 2 Talaqqs will be considered as issued.) Thereafter. if he issues a third Talaqq, he cannot revoke it and she cannot return to him because according to the aforementioned rule, this revocation appears after 3 Talaqqs and revocation after 3 Talaqqs is not in order. Similarly, if he fails to revoke the Talaqq after issuing one or two Talaqqs until such time that her Iddat has passed (3 menstrual cycles), then too the Nikah has terminated. If they willingly remarry thereafter and he again issues a Talaqq, then this Talaqq will be counted together with the first. If again he issues a Talaqq. it will be considered as 3 Talaqqs. Thereafter, he will be unable to revoke it.

Note: The 2 Talaqqs mentioned above refer to Talaqq-i-Rawj, not Talaqq-i-Baain.

It is prohibited to issue 3 Talaqqs collectively it is a very common malady nowadays that when people issue Talaqq they issue 3 Talaqqs collectively or issue more than 3 Talaqqs. It is sinful and prohibited to issue Talaqq in such a manner. Apart from the sin this involves, such a divorce is also imprudent. After issuing a divorce, quite often a person regrets his action and he may remedy the situation if one or 2 revocable Talaqqs were issued. If Talaqq-i-Baain was issued, he is unable to revoke it but he may remarry her with her consent – within her Iddat or out of it. However, if he has issued 3 Talaqqs – regardless of how he has issued them – then there is no way he can remedy the situation even if both parties agree except if a third person makes Halalah. (If another man marries her and divorces her after consummation of the marriage, she may remarry her first husband after her Iddat. This is referred to as Halalah; it is as though the second person is rendering her Halal (lawful) for her previous husband. Hence the word Halalah). Even if Halalah is made, then too it is doubtful whether the situation can be rectified or not (because the second husband may or may not divorce her.) If the second person marries her on condition that he will divorce her after intercourse, then, in the words of the Hadeeth, both of them are cursed – the person who is making Halalah and the person in whose favour Halalah is being made. The Fuqawha (jurists) have considered this to be Makruh-Tahreemi (close to Harawm). [Raddul-Muhtaar]

Even after subjecting the second husband to a condition of divorce, he is not compelled to issue a divorce. It is left entirely upto him. The first husband and wife have no option in this regard. So these are the detriments of issuing 3 Talaqqs collectively. (Islaahe-Inqilaab volume 2 page 164)

3 Talaqqs render the wife like a stranger

Many people, overcome with furious rage, issue 3 Talaqqs collectively. Thereafter to save face, they endeavour to suppress their folly. Many of them, in spite of issuing 3 Talaqqs, keep their divorced wives as normal wives under the notion that releasing them entails disgrace and disrepute. Alas! Is there no disgrace in committing adultery? Obviously this is more disgraceful in this world itself whilst the disgrace and punishment of the hereafter is much more intense. Those amongst them who are irreligious and fearless, have no scruples about Harawm and Halal. Hence they continue living in sin. If the woman is also like this, then it is though they have established a workshop for sin in which illegitimate children are produced. However, if the woman is fearful of Allawh Ta'ala due to which she excuses herself, she is beaten and oppressed. This action now entails a twofold sin; adultery as well as oppression. Nonetheless, it is Wajibb upon the woman to abstain from him as far as possible and until there is no threat of serious injury, she should not succumb to his sexual demands. Some people who claim to be religiously inclined employ some strategy or the other whether the strategy is valid or not. For example, they probably heard a modern Mujjtahid claiming that the issuing of 3 Talaqqs collectively is only counted as one. Hence, according to them, revocation of the Talaqq or renewal of the marriage without Halalah is permitted. They accept this opinion claiming that after all the person who issued this Fatwa is also an Alim (learned scholar). They claim that it is permissible to practice upon this opinion whereas it has already been established that this opinion is totally incorrect and it is prohibited to practice upon it. (Raddul-Muhtaar volume 2 page 688)
This is the condition of the so-called religious people. As for the ignorant they grapple with the Ulama employing unwitting methods to justify their claims. They say that they had no intention of issuing Talaqq whereas intention is not conditional for an explicit divorce. Some claim that Talaqq was blurted out of anger and not cheerfully whereas Talaqq generally occurs in anger. In other words, people generally issue Talaqq out of anger and not because they are cheerful. [Islaahe-Inqilaab volume 2 page 161]

Condition of some aristocrats

Some noblemen conclude that in such cases (where 3 Talaqqs have been issued) the spouses should not stay as husband and wife but the (divorced) wife should be kept within the home and provided with maintenance. This is done to avoid the disrepute of Talaqq and also to ensure that there is no need for her to remarry. (In some instances, the women themselves request for such an arrangement). There are very many evils attached to this system. For example, the fact that both of them are going to live in one house is sure to provide an opportunity some time or the other where both of them will be all alone. Hence, the evil of being alone with a strange woman is posed. This is Harawm. This is further compounded by the fact that since both of them have lived informally for some time, there is a greater chance of them both falling into evil compared to other women; another evil is that the husband is compelled to provide maintenance for his (divorced) wife throughout his entire life whilst the wife is prevented from remarrying. Both these evils in the light of the Shari'ah are contemptible. (Islaahe-Inqilaab volume 2 page 161)

An important Fatwa

Issuing Talaqq at the behest of the parents

If the parents ask their son to divorce his wife without any valid reason, he is not compelled to obey them in this regard. As lor the Hadeeth which makes mention of obeying them in this regard, it will be ascribed to desirability or a valid reason. In other words, it will be preferable to divorce her or he should divorce her if there is a valid reason. Similarly, if they demand that your entire earnings be handed over to them, then too you are not compelled to obey them. If they force you, they will be sinful. If they take anything more than they need without your permission, it will be considered as a debt. Request for repayment can be made in this world. If they fail to reimburse you in this world, they will be compelled to do so in the hereafter. (Imdaadul-Fataawa volume 4 page 485)
Question: In order to prevent myself falling into sin, I, of my own accord, married a woman I am deeply in love with. However, my father insists I divorce this woman and marry someone else. Should I divorce her or not?
Answer: Don't divorce her if you fear that either you or your wife will be unable to exercise patience (without each other). (Imdaadul-Fataawa volume 2 page 467)

A few Masa'il on Talaqq and Iddat

1. There are 3 types of Talaqq; Rajj'i, Baa'in, and Mughawllaz. In Talaqq-i-Rajj'i, the husband may revoke the Talaqq and recall her within the Iddat period. She is not permitted to marry anyone else within her Iddat period. If the husband failed to revoke the Talaqq within the Iddat period, his Nikah with her has terminated. She may marry another man after this period. In Talaqq-i-Mughawllaz, he is unable to revoke the Talaqq. However, she is not permitted to marry another man within her 'Iddat period. She may do so after her Iddat.
2. The details regarding Iddat are as follows: if the woman has not been to her husband as yet (in other words, the marriage has not been consummated as yet) and then he issues Talaqq, Iddat is not Wajibb upon her. If the marriage has been consummated and then he divorces her, her Iddat is 3 (lunar) months if she is a minor who does not menstruate or if she has reached menopause. However, if she does menstruate, her 'Iddat is a period of 3 menstrual cycles. If she is pregnant, her Iddat terminates upon delivery of her child. In the case where the husband dies, her Iddat is 4 months and 10 days. However, if she is pregnant, then in this case as well, her Iddat terminates upon delivery of the child. A second marriage (to another man) within the Iddat period is not permitted. She may marry only after the termination of her Iddat. The same conditions of Iddat will apply to a non-Muslim woman who converts to Islam whilst her husband remains a non-Muslim. Iddat is Wajibb upon her as well. She is not permitted to remarry until the termination of 3 menstrual cycles or the termination of pregnancy. Many people aren't very circumspect in this regard. (Islaahur-Rusoom page 97)

CHAPTER XVII
ANNULMENT AND SEPARATION

The need for a Shari judge in certain cases of annulment

There are many instances (in the annulment of marriages etc.) where the judgement of a Muslim ruler (or Muslim judge in an Islamic court) is conditional. This is referred to Qawdha-ul-Qawdhi (judicial ruling) in Islamic terminology. Some of these cases are in regard to the wife of a man whose:

1. Impotent.
2. Insane.
3. Lost.
4. Refusing to maintain her or fulfil her conjugal rights.
5. Whereabouts are known but he refuses to call her lo stay with him or he refuses to provide maintenance.

In all the aforementioned cases, the Islamic judicial ruling of a Muslim judge is conditional. In other words, the wife or her guardians arc not at liberty lo make their own decisions in these matters. They should lodge a case at the court of the Muslim judge. The judge will pass judgement according to Shari principles only after probing into the case. Without this, annulment or separation cannot be realised in the aforementioned Masa'il. (Al-Heelatun-Naajizah page 41)

Annulment of marriages in our present circumstances

In our present circumstances here in India, since there is generally no Shari judge in most places, other available avenues will 1ST be mentioned in regards to such Masa'il in areas where:

1. A Shari judge is present, there is no problem. It is a simple matter.
2. There is no Shari judge but there is some form of administration of justice, like a judge, magistrate etc. they do have the authority from the government to pass judgement in such matters. If such people are Muslims, then their ruling and judgement will serve in place of Qawdha-i-Qawdhi (ruling of a Muslim court) – as inferred from the text of Shaami. However, if the judgement is passed by a non-Muslim judge, it will definitely not be considered. His judgement in annulment of marriages etc. will not be binding because a non-Muslim isn't fit to. pass judicial verdicts against a Muslim. In fact even if the proceedings of the case are prepared by a non-Muslim and judgement's passed by a Muslim judge or vice-versa, then too his judgement will not be implemented. (Al-Heelatun Naajizah page 45)

If judgement is left in the hands of another group or committee - like in the case where the rendering of a verdict is left to a panel of judges or a committee of legal experts etc. – then in this case, it is conditional for every member to be a Muslim. If the judge, magistrate or any member of this group is a non-Muslim, the verdict of this group is not acceptable. Annulment ton the grounds of such judgements will definitely be incorrect. (Al-Heelatun Naajizah page 45)

Appointing a Muslim Judge

The judgement of a Muslim judge is conditional in many Shari Masa'il (propositions) that is referred to as Qawdha-ul-Qawdhi (legal verdict) in Shari terminology. According to Kitabul-Qawdha, one of the conditions of this judge is that he be a Muslim even though he is appointed by non-Muslim rulers. This is explicitly mentioned in Durre-Mukhtar and Rawddul-Mukhtaar. For example, in order to annul the marriage of a lady whose husband's whereabouts are unknown or to annul the marriage of a girl who was married before maturity and wishes to exercise her right of annulment etc. There is many other Masa'il of this nature where a legal verdict is required. So the ruling body in every administrative district or province should be requested to appoint – with the counsel of the 'Ulama – a pious and learned Alim who will listen to such cases. If this can be achieved, it will really simplify matters for the Muslims or else they will be left in constrained circumstances. For example, I once issued a Fatwa regarding the wife of a man whose whereabouts were unknown that once the period of waiting passes according to Imam Malik (R'A), the people of that locality should request the local authorities lo appoint an Alim for listening to this case. This Alim should thereafter pass judgement and declare: "According to me, the person whose whereabouts are unknown has died."

Following this verdict, the woman should sit in Iddat-e-Wafaat (130 days) and remarry if she desires. The people of this locality did as suggested but the local authority responded by saying that they do not wish to interfere with the religious affairs of the Muslims. So, look how difficult it becomes. In some cases, there is apparently no difficulty but there is some Shari problem. For example, in a case where a girl was married before puberty and she wishes to exercise her right of annulment once she reaches puberty. If a non-Muslim judge annuls the marriage and permits her to remarry, then apparently legal proceedings will follow but from a Shari viewpoint, these proceedings are not acceptable. Her first marriage will not be annulled and her second marriage will not be valid. Hence, both spouses will now be guilty of illegitimate intercourse throughout their lives. Therefore, such cases render the appointment of a Muslim judge extremely necessary. These are cases which deal with Harawm and Halal (prohibited and lawful). Its need is felt for by the entire community at large. Hence, due consideration to this matter entails Thawabb as well. The simplest method of (getting a Muslim judge appointed solely for such cases) is that the men of letters should get together and draft a letter to the relevant authorities explaining the need for such a system. This letter should then be signed by as many people as possible and presented to the government for approval. Hopefully, the government will look into the matter. (Bawaadirun-Nawaadir volume I page 45)

Annulment of a marriage in today's times

If such a situation (of annulment) does arise in today's times, file a suit with a Muslim governor (judge, magistrate etc.) who has such powers even though he may be appointed by the non-Muslims. If he does not have such authority of annulment, request for it from the government even if it means just for this one case; once he acquires the authority and annuls the marriage, the Nikah will be considered annulled from a Shari viewpoint. In areas where there is a Muslim judge, his annulment will suffice. In short, the Nikah will only be considered annulled if the annulment is executed under the authority of a ruler by a Muslim judge. Nothing will be legally considered merely by the father (or anyone else) saying that he is not satisfied with the Nikah. (Huqooquz-Zawjayn page 380)

Question: In cases where the legal judgement of a Shari judge is conditional, will the judgement of an English court be considered in the same light?

Answer: If the judge is a Muslim, he is considered as a Shari judge. (Imdaadul-Fataawa volume 3 page 434)

POLICY TO BE ADOPTED IN THE ABSENCE OF A SHARI JUDGE

Council of arbitration: In places where there is no Muslim ruler or authority to submit the case to the court of a Muslim judge or the Muslim ruler (or judge) does not pass judgement according to Islamic law, then in this case, as far as possible, Talaqq should be sought by Khula (by giving the husband a sum of money etc.). However, if Khula is not possible due to the adamant behaviour of the husband or due to the insanity or unknown whereabouts of the husband, there is scope according to the Maliki school of thought, of presenting the case to a council of pious Muslims. According to the Maliki school of thought, in the absence of a Shari judge, it is permissible for the pious Muslims of the locality to form a council of at least three members. This council should probe the case at hand and pass judgement according to Shari'ah. This will sufficiently serve as Qawdha-ul-Qawdhi (legal verdict handed down by a judge). In cases of extreme necessity and common urgency it is permissible according to the Hanafi school of thought to pass a Fatwa according to another school of thought. However, the ordinary laymen are not permitted to do so as and when they please until and unless a number of learned and pious Ulama investigate the urgency of the matter and pass Fatwa accordingly. Urgency will only be considered as such by the Ulama of insight. (Al-Heelatun Naajizah)

Important points regarding the formation of a council of arbitration

According to the Fataawa of the Malikiyah, the members of the council of arbitration should comprise of Udool (singular – Adl) Muslims. Adl is referred to as a person who is not a Fasiqq (flagrant violator of Islamic law). In other words, he abstains from major sins and he is not persistent upon minor sins. If he does commit a sin, he repents immediately. Hence, a person who accepts bribery or interest, shaves his beard, speaks lies, is not regular with his Sawlah or Sawm etc. cannot become a member of this council. This Mas'alah (proposition) was virtually borrowed from the Maliki school of thought. Hence, all conditions attached to it according to their school should be applied here as well. According to them, it is a precondition for the Qawdhi (judge) to be Adil (upright). Therefore, a non-Adil's judgement will not be instituted. According to the Hanafi school of thought, although it is not a precondition for the Qawdhi to be Adil, it is nevertheless Harawm to acquire judgement from a non-Adil. Hence, even according to the Hanafis, it is not permissible to appoint a non-Adil as a member of the arbitration council. In short, it is imperative to ensure that the council comprises of Deeni inclined and pious members. (Al-Heelatun Naajizah)

Laymen's council of arbitration is unacceptable: If judgement is handed over to a council of ordinary laymen, it will not be acceptable. There is a great possibility of them failing to adhere to Shari requirements. Hence, ensure that all the members of the arbitration council are Ulama. If this is not possible, then at least ensure that there is one well-acquainted Alim amongst the members. Seek his counsel for the case at hand from the beginning to the end. If an Alim is unavailable, then the judgement handed down by this council is not acceptable. However, the proceedings of the entire case may be shown to well-acquainted Ulama. Every angle of the case should be presented to them for their perusal. Thereafter, the council may pass judgement according to the Fatwa of the Ulama. If the council of laymen fail to carry out even such a procedure, and pass judgement according to their own whims and fancies, their judgement will not be accepted even if their judgement proves to be incidentally correct as mentioned by the jurists of (he Maliki school of thought. (Al-Heelatun Naajizah)

In the absence of the influential pious

In the unfortunate event of the influential people being irreligious, then the influential people should grant authority to a few pious people so that in Shari terms, the judgement can be attributed to this group of pious people. The membership of the influential is not necessary but their influence simplifies matters. In this manner, the objective will be achieved and the influential will also be rewarded. (Al-Heelatun Naajizah)

The Shari ruling of the council of arbitration

If the council of arbitration – whose mention was made above – unanimously, annuls the marriage, it will serve in place of the judgement of a Qawdhi (judge). Hence, its annulment will be considered valid. However, if the members of the council differ on any given issue, the annulment will be considered invalid. If anyone does pass any judgement, it will be considered as non-existent. The only judgement considered valid is the one handed down unanimously by all council members. Even the opinion of the majority is not considered, simply because majority is not regarded as a Shari proof and no judgement can be established without Shari proof. (Al-Heelatun Naajizah)

A woman may appeal against the judgement passed by the arbitration council

Nevertheless, a woman has the right to request the council to review the judgement handed down. After reviewing the case, if the council does come across any angle which corroborates her request of annulment and it thereafter unanimously re-passes judgement in her favour, then this annulment will be considered valid. However, if the proceedings of the case are invariably the same as before, nothing new has come to light, then annulment will not be considered. (Al-Heelatun Naajizah page 53)

Ruling of a Muta'annit's wife

Muta'annit literally means a stubborn or obstinate person. In Shari terminology, a Muta'annit is referred to as a man who despite the ability refuses to provide maintenance to his wife. In dire circumstances, the ruling in this case also has been taken from the Maliki Madhabb to release the oppressed women from the clutches of oppression; the wife of the Muta'annit should firstly endeavour to free herself by making Khula' with her husband. However, if there is no other avenue, then due to pressing need, there is scope to practise upon the Maliki Madhabb. According to their school of thought, the wife of a Muta'annit does have the right of annulment as well. The method of annulment is as follows: she should lodge her case before a Muslim ruler or Muslim judge. In their absence, she may lodge her case before a Muslim council of arbiters. Whoever has been handed the case will probe into the case employing Shari methods of testimony etc. If the woman's claims – regarding her husband who despite the ability fails to maintain her – proves lo be true, then the husband will be ordered either to fulfil her rights or grant her a divorce or face annulment of his marriage. If the cruel husband fails to respond favourably then the judge or the council charged with his responsibilities should annul the marriage. There is no need to wait or to grant respite in this case. Within the Iddat period, if the obstinate (Muta'annit) husband repents from his evil (and decides to fulfil her rights), the wife is compelled to go and live with him as his wife whether she is willing or not. This law applies simply because the consent of the wife is not conditional in the case of Talaqq-i-Rajie (revocable divorce). However, as a precautionary measure, it is advisable to renew the Nikah (marriage). If the Iddat period has already passed without the husband repenting, he has no authority left over her. However, the Nikah may be renewed if both parties willingly consent to a renewal. (Halalah is not required.) [Al-Heelatun Naajizah page 82)

Disability to provide maintenance doesn't justify annulment

Some women are rather erroneous in requesting annulment even over the negligible financial straits of the husband. Remember, according to some Ulama, the judge is permitted to annul the marriage in cases of extreme poverty. Nonetheless, we don't have a Shari judge and annulment without a Shari judge is not permitted according to all the Ulama. Secondly, according to our Madhabb, even if there is a Shari judge, he is not permitted to annul the marriage on these grounds. In cases where the husband is destitute and unable to provide for his wife, the judge will order her to lake a loan and spend when necessary. Repayment of this loan will be the responsibility of the husband. (Islaahe-Inqilaab volume 2 page 183)

Shari ruling of a husband who neither calls his wife to live with him nor provides maintenance

Question: What is the ruling in the case where the husband's absent but his whereabouts are known? He neither comes to his wife nor does he call her to him. He neither provides maintenance for her nor does he grant her Talaqq. The wife is distressed and perturbed. Is there any way where she can separate herself from this man and legally remarry someone else?

Answer: The woman in question may resort to Khula' (pay a certain amount of money to her husband and free herself). If the husband is not willing to accept, then she may, in extreme circumstances, resort to the following procedure laid down by the Maliki Madhabb: She should first lodge complain with the judge (or his deputy). She should establish her marriage by utilising witnesses etc. Thereafter she should establish that her husband has left her without providing any sort of maintenance nor did he make any arrangements for its provision. She should also say that she has not forgiven the maintenance. In other words, she should establish the compulsion of maintenance as well as her claim that her husband is deficient in the execution of this compulsion. She should also swear an oath upon all these claims; thereafter if a relative or stranger shoulders the responsibility of her maintenance, then good and well. Otherwise, the judge will order the husband to either come and fulfil her rights over here or to call her over to him or to make some arrangements for her or to issue a Talaqq. in the event of failing to comply with any of the above, the judge will threaten him with annulment. If the husband does not comply with any of the above, the judge will grant him respite of another month and request the wife to hold on for a further month. If her problem is not sorted out after this period, the judge will annul her marriage. Obviously, a request by the wife for annulment is conditional. Hence, if the wife abandons her request after her husband's reply to this court order, annulment will not be instituted. (Al-Heelatun-Naajizah page 84)

Cautionary note

The summons issued by the judge (or council of arbitration) and sent by post to this obstinate man will not suffice legally. Written judgement should be handed over to 2 reliable men and they should be made cognizant of its contents. This judgement should be taken by these two men to the obstinate man and solicit a reply from him. Whatever his answer – verbal or written, negative or positive – should be promptly recorded so that they may give testimony upon their return. Even if he fails to reply, they should give testimony accordingly. In short, the judge (or the Muslim council of arbitration) should pass judgement in consideration of their testimony. However, if the obstinate husband lives in such a far off land that in spite of laborious endeavour, it is not possible to send someone to him, then there is scope in this case for the ruler, (judge, or the council of arbitration) to annul the marriage following a probe into the case according to the aforementioned rules. DESCRIPTION OF WUDU (ABLUTION)

Rule: Wudu is breached if anything comes out of urinal passage or anus; such as urine, 'mazi' (minor involuntary seminal discharge), semen, glutinuous liquid, worm or stone from bladder and profusion of rectum or wind—however small in quantity they might be. (Alamgiri Vol. I)

Rule: Wudu (ablution) is not breached if one fears passing of urine and keeps piece of cotton at the catheter or at the opening of the private part, then there is no harm, and in such a case Wudu (ablution) is not breached until urine appears on the surface of cotton. (Alamgiri Vol. I)

Rule: Wudu (ablution) is breached if on being touched by the opposite sex or just out of thinking, liquid comes out of vagina of a woman, and the liquid that comes out of sexual passion is called 'mazi'.

Rule: Sticky water that comes out of vagina of a woman is unclean and causes breach of Wudu (ablution). Though a few Muslim theologians go against this, but however, caution should be maintained.

Rule: If a drop of urine or 'mazi' (minor involuntary seminal discharge) comes out of the urinary organ but remains within the covering skin of the organ, even then the Wudu (ablution) is breached. Its coming out of the covering skin is not necessary for the breach of Wudu (ablution).

Rule: If a man's organ touches a woman's private part and no cloth etc. intervenes, then Wudu (ablution) is breached. Similarly if two women join their private parts, Wudu (ablution) is breached. But such an act is bad and sinful. In both cases, whether anything comes out or not, the same rule will apply.

Rule: If some part of the anus comes out then Wudu (ablution) is breached, whether it goes back of its own or is pushed back with the help of some stick, etc.

Rule: Both 'mazi' and 'wadii' cause breach of Wudu (ablution). Thick dust-coloured water which comes out after urina-nation is called 'wadii', Rule: If after making Wudu (ablution), nails are clipped or dead skin of a wound is scratched, then Wudu (ablution) is not breached nor it is necessary to reach water again to those spots.

Rule: If after making Wudu (ablution) one touches one's private part, then Wudu (ablution) is not breached—whether the person is male or female.

RULES REGARDING BATH

Rule: During bath, it is obligatory for a woman to pass water into the outer skin of vagina, otherwise bath will remain invalid. In the same way if a man has not been circumcized, then water should be passed into the skin which is not cut off during circumcision.

Rule: Whether asleep or awake, if semen is discharged with excitement, bath becomes necessary—no matter whether the person is man or woman.

Rule: If upon awakening, semen is found on clothes or the body, then also bath becomes necessary, whether there had been a wet dream or not.

Warning: In exuberance of youth, the liquid which comes out of excitement and which enhance excitement instead of cooling it, is called madhi; and that which comes out after full enjoyment is called 'semen'. Moreover, 'madhi' is thinner, while semen is thicker. So only passing of the 'madhi' does not make bath necessary—but Wudu (ablution) is certainly breached.

Rule: If the top of the male organ (penis) enters vagina and becomes invisible, bath becomes necessary for both, whether semen is discharged or not, Insertion of penis into back organ also makes bath necessary. But it is a major sin to do so in the back organ.

Rule: If the top of the male organ has undergone incision, the organ upto the length of the top makes bath necessary, whether semen is discharged or not.

Rule: If the male organ is inserted into the private part of an animal or a dead person or a minor girl who is not fit for sexual intercourse, then bath will not be necessary without discharge of semen. (Alamgiri)

Rule: The blood which comes out of the vagina of a woman every month, is called 'menses'. When menses stops, bath becomes obligatory. The blood which comes out after child-birth is called 'nifas'. When it (nifas) stops, then also bath becomes obligatory. In short, four cases make bath obligatory—(1) Seminal discharge with excitement (2) Insertion of the top of the male organ and when (3) menses and (4) nifas (after-birth discharge) stop.

Rule: If a man indulges in sexual intercourse with a minor girl who has not yet attained her puberty, bath is not necessary for her, but in order to make her used to take bath, she may be made to take bath.

Rule: If during sleep, a woman dreams of having sexual intercourse with a man or a man dreamt of having sexual intercourse with a woman and also had a taste of it, but on waking up found no seminal discharge, then bath is not necessary. But in case of seminal discharge, bath becomes compulsory. Moreover, if (on waking up), one finds his or her clothes or body a little wet, but thinks it to be 'madhi' and not semen, then also bath is compulsory—whether man or woman.

Rule: If after bath, semen of the husband comes out of the vagina of the woman, the bath remains valid; repetition of bath is not necessary.

Rule: If after a little seminal discharge, a woman takes bath but after taking bath, a little more semen comes out, then repetition of bath is compulsory. It should be considered at this point that if semen is discharged with excitement and in such a case some quantity of the semen comes out and the rest remains inside and comes after birth, only then repetition of bath becomes compulsory. But if after taking bath, fresh semen comes out without excitement, then repetition of bath is not compulsory. This is the rule for the compulsory repetition of bath but since it is difficult to know that the semen coming out without excitement is former or fresh, so the Muslim Jurists taking recourse to their authority has decided that the semen which comes out before walking forty or fifty steps or before sleeping and before passing urine, belongs to former state and so one should repeat the bath; but if semen comes out after a lot of walking or after sleeping or after passing urine without any excitement, then the semen is fresh, and if it comes out again, repetition of bath is not compulsory.

Rule: If on account of some illness or loadings or falling from a raised spot, semen comes out without excitement, then the semen is fresh and so repetition of bath is not compulsory but Wudu (ablution) will certainly become invalid.

Rule: If husband and wife were sleeping on the same bad and on waking up found certain stains of semen on clothes but neither of them remembers to have a wet-dream, precaution demands that both should take a bath because nobody knows as to whose semen is this.

Rule: If a non-believer accepts Islam, then it is desirable for him or her to take a bath. But if during the state of infidelity he or she had made bath obligatory for him or her and had not taken a bath or had taken a bath but not according to religious code, then the bath is obligatory for him or her.

Rule: One who gives bath to a dead body, it is desirable for him to take a bath.

Rule: If one, for whom bath has become compulsory, wants to eat and drink something before taking a bath, then he or she should first wash his or her hands and mouth and rinse the mouth. If one eats or drinks without doing so, he or she is not supposed to have committed any sin.

Rule: One who needs a bath, is forbidden from touching or reciting the Holy Qur'an or entering a mosque.

Rule: If the semen is discharged with excitement but the person stops its release by putting finger etc. on the hole and the semen comes out when excitement is over, then also bath becomes obligatory.

Rule: If any man's circumcision has not been done and his semen comes out but sticks in the superfluous skin which is cut-off in circumcision, then bath will become obligatory for him.

Rule: If a man has undergone castration and he enters the top of his penis into the vagina of a woman, then also bath will become obligatory for both of them.

Rule: If anyone is suffering from spermation and semen continues to come out, bath is not obligatory for him. But if the sufferer has a seminal discharge with excitement, then bath will become obligatory.

Rule: If a man enters his penis into the navel or thigh of a woman or man and semen is not discharged, then bath will not be obligatory.

Rule: If a man or a woman has a wet dream, but on waking up has no trace of wetness or semen, then bath is not compulsory, even if there was taste of discharge in dream.

Rule: If a woman puts medicine in her vagina or makes anybody else to do so, bath is not obligatory for her.

Rule: One who needs a bath, touching of the Holy Quran or reciting it or entering a mosque is not forbidden for him; but reciting of Allah's name and 'Kalimah' (word of Allah) and Darood (blessings upon the Holy Prophet—Sallallahu alaihi wa Sallam) is valid—and other such 'rules' will Insha-Allah (Allah-willing) be described in the chapter on 'menses'.

Rule: To touch "Books of Commentaries" (on the Holy Qur'an) without Wudu (ablution) is disapproved; and to touch the Holy Qur'an with translation is quite prohibited.

Rule: If anyone has slept on such a bed which had semen in dried form and the bed became wet due to his or her sweat, then if the wet bed does not leave any trace on his or her body, he or she is not unclean.

But if wetness of the bed leaves its trace on the body, then the body will become unclean and its cleaning becomes compulsory.

Rule: After passing urine or stool, Istinja (cleaning the private parts after natural evacuation) with clod of earth is enough, provided the pollution is not spread to the sides of the organ. If it has spread to the sides of the organ, it is essential to clean it with water as well; and if the pollution has spread upto one 'dirham' (small silver coin) Istinja (cleaning the private parts after natural evacuation) is compulsory.

Rule: The method of performing 'Istinja' after passing urine is that one should hold his penis with the left hand and take clod of earth in his right hand and make it dry till the period one is quite satisfied that drops of urine were no longer to come out; and according to some others, one should perform 'Istinja' by walking a few steps or by wrapping his right leg with the left leg so that any drop, if left stuck, should come out. In short, if one is satisfied that the pollution inside the hole has come out, 'Istinja' becomes proper. After this, cleaning also with water is better. If urine has spread over the top of the penis, it is compulsory to get it washed.

Rule: If after passing urine, one performed 'Istinja' with clod of earth, and not with water and while making Wudu (ablution) one did not remember to perform 'Istinja' with water and did remember after making 'Wudu' that he had not performed 'Istinja' with water then he should perform 'Istinja' (with water) as and when he recalls it. In case, one recalls during prayer that he has not performed 'Istinja' with water, and if he thinks that pollution over the top of the penis was not upto the size of a 'dirham', then he should offer prayer and that prayer will be quite valid. But if he is sure that the pollution was spread over the top of the penis, then he should perform 'Istinja' after breaking his prayer. Similarly, if one recollects after offering prayer that he had not performed 'Istinja' with water, then, if he is sure that the pollution had spread about the size of one 'dirham' then he should again perform. 'Istinja' and repeat his prayer. But if he is sure that what to speak of a 'dirham' the pollution would have hardly spread upto the size of a grain of rice or two, repetition of prayer is not at all necessary.

Rule: A woman suffering from 'Istehazah' (prolonged morbid menstruation) should compulsorily perform 'Istinja' for every prayer.

Rule: If someone suffers from Bright's disease (liquid coming from the private part by drops), then the person should perform 'Istinja' at the time of offering every prayer and washing of the portion of the clothes which is supposed to be affected from the 'drops' is compulsory or that 'tahband' (sheet meant to cover lower part of the body) or trousers should be changed.

Rule: If anybody's left hand is crippled or cut off and there is none to pour water, then 'Istinja' with water is not necessary, only clod of earth is enough; and if he has control over the running water, he should perform 'Istinja' with the right hand. (Alamgiri Vol. I)

Rule: If a patient has no wife or maid-servant and has a son or brother, then in case of his being unable to perform 'Wudu' then he can perform Wudu with the help of his son or brother. But 'Istinja' can not be performed with the help of others, because none else can touch the penis of others. So 'Istinja' will become null and void for him. In the same way, if a female patient has no husband, her daughter or sister can help her perform 'Wudu', but they also should not help in performing 'Istinja' because they can not touch private part. So 'Istinja' is null and void for that woman as well.

Rule: One should perform 'Istinja' with one clod of earth only once, but in case the clod is so big that 'Istinja' may be performed once with one side and again with another side, then it is allowed. The used part of the clod should not be used again.

Rule: It is disapproved to pass urine in standing position or lying state or after being naked. If there is no way out, there is no harm.

THINGS WHICH DO NOT BREAK FAST AND WHICH BREAK IT AND REQUIRE BOTH COMPULSORY FAST AND RECOMPENSATION

Rule: If anybody sleeps in the day and has a dream which necessitates a bath, then the fast will not be breached.

Rule: If husband and wife lie together, touch each other and embrace each other, it is permissible in a fast. But if these acts excite passion so much that there is fear of sexual intercourse then one should avoid such acts. It is execrable to do so.

Rule: If bath becomes essential in the night, but one did not take a bath in the night, rather took bath on the day following then the fast remains valid. The fast remains valid even if one does not take bath the whole day following. But he will become a sinner for remaining unclean and for not offering the prayer.

Rule: If one indulges in sexual intercourse during fast, then the fast will be breached, and both compensatory fast and recompensation become due in such a case. The fast is also broken when the top of the male organ enters the vagina, then both compensatory fast and recompensation become due, irrespective of the fact whether semen is discharged or not.

(Alamgiri)

Rule: If a person observing fast rubs his organ of sex or makes others to do so or cause it to move by others and semen is discharged, then the fast will be broken and compensatory fast will be due. (Alamgiri)

Rule: If one rubs his sexual organ with a dead-body or an animal and semen is discharged, then compensatory fast will be compulsory but recompensation will not be due.

Rule: If a man commits sexual intercourse with a sleeping woman or in a state of her unconsciousness, then the fast of the woman is lost and compensatory fast becomes due; but the man (who committed sexual intercourse) is responsible both for the compensatory fast and recompensation as well.

Rule: If someone committed sexual intercourse forcibly with a woman, then the woman is liable to compensatory fast and not recompensation, but the man is responsible for both. But in case she was disagreed at the beginning but agreed before discharge of semen, then she also is responsible both for compensatory fast and recompensation.

Rule: If a man was sleeping and someone rubbed his sex organ which resulted in seminal discharge, then the fast was not disrupted. (Alamgiri)

Rule: If anyone kissed his wife or slave-girl and semen was discharged, then the fast was disrupted. In such a case compensatory fast is essential but recompensation is not due.

(Alamgiri)

Rule: If anyone kissed an animal and it caused discharge of semen, then fast was not disrupted.

Rule: If anyone rubbed a woman above the clothe and it caused discharge of semen, then the fast will be disrupted if the heat of her body was felt.

Rule: If the vagina of an animal is rubbed with hand and it causes seminal discharge, then the fast will not be disrupted.

(Alamgiri)

Rule: If anyone looks the face or the vagina of a woman again and again or only once and it causes seminal discharge, then the fast is not disrupted. Similarly, if semen is discharged out of imagination then also the fast is not disrupted.

Rule: If a woman rubs the penis of her husband and semen is discharged; then the fast remains intact. But if the husband asked his wife to do so, then his fast is disrupted

(Alamgiri Vol. I)

Rule: If anyone commits sexual intercourse with an animal or a dead-body or committed sexual intercourse outside the vagina and it caused no seminal discharge, then the fast is not disrupted. But if there is seminal discharge in such conditions, then the fast will be disrupted and a compensatory fast will be due on him, but recompensation will not be due.

Rule: If seminal discharge is caused on account of looking anybody committing sexual intercourse or on seeing anybody's sexual organ or on mere imagination, then the fast is not disrupted, only a bath will be due.

Rule: If two women rub their sexual organs together and seminal discharge is caused to both of them, then the fasts of the both women are disrupted. In such a case compensatory fast is due and not any recompensation.

Rule: If anyone enters his penis (into vagina) before dawn and pulls out as he is informed of the sunrise but the semen is discharged with the sunrise, then neither the fast is broken nor any compensatory fast became due. In the same way, if anyone enters his penis (into vagina) in forgetfulness or enters before the dawn and hurriedly pulls out on recollection or on information about sunrise, then the fast is not disrupted. But if after recollection or in spite of being informed about the sunrise, pushed his penis a little more (inside the vagina) or remained as it is and did not pull out, then his fast became disrupted and he is liable to both compensatory fast and recompensation. (Alamgiri)

Rule: If anybody observing fast knowingly inserts the top of his penis (into vagina or anus) then both compensatory fast and recompensation becomes due on both of them, whether semen is discharged or not. But if the woman was not agreed upto the last, then only a compensatory fast is due on her and not any recompensation. But if the woman was disagreed in the beginning but agreed in the due course, then she also is liable to both (i.e. compensatory fast and recompensation). (If the woman lets her body loose and allowed to be used at will, then this also will be taken as agreement).

Rule: If due to wet-dream or on seeing a beautiful woman or on touching the vagina of an animal or out of imagination, seminal discharge is caused and he thought that his 'semen' was breached and so he ate anything, then only a compensatory fast and not a recompensation is due.

Rule: If anyone inserts his finger in his anus or any woman does so into her vagina, then the fast will not be breached. But if the finger is wet with oil or water, then the fast will be breached and a compensatory fast will be due and not the recompensation.

Rule: It is not proper for a woman to put any medicine or oil etc. into her vagina. If anybody does so, then the fast is breached and a compensatory fast is due and not any recompensation.

Rule: If out of need, a midwife inserts her finger into the vagina of any woman or the woman herself inserts her finger into her own vagina and after pulling out a part or whole of the finger, inserted it again, then the fast in disrupted, but recompensation is not due. But if the finger after being pulled out, is not inserted again, then the fast is not disrupted. But if the finger was wet with water or oil, then the fast is disrupted at the very first insertion of finger (into vagina).

Rule: If a man pour some medicine into his penis or does so with a syringe, then the fast is not disrupted, provided the liquid poured inside the penis does not reach the bladder.

(Alamgiri Vol. I)

Rule: If a person performs enema with oil or reach oil inside his nose or pours it into his ears, then his fast is disrupted, but expiation is not due. If the person himself does not perform enema but anybody else does so with him, then also his fast it disrupted, and expiation is not due. (Alamgiri Vol. I)

CONDITIONS UNDER WHICH ONE IS EXEMPTED FROM DESERVING 'SAUM' (FAST)

Rule: If menses starts or a child is born to a woman, and after-birth discharge is started, then it is not proper for her to observe 'Saum' (fast) during the period of menses and after-birth discharge.

Rule: If a woman becomes clean in the night, then she must not give up 'Saum' in the morning. In case she does not take bath in the night, even then she should keep a 'Saum' and take bath in the morning. But if she becomes clean after sun-rise, then intent for 'Saum' is not proper. But it is also improper to eat and drink anything. One should pass the day like a 'Saum'—observing person.

ABOUT 'HAIZ' (MENSES) AND ISTEHADA (PROLONGED MORBID MENSTRUATION)

Rule: The blood which usually comes every month from the vagina of a woman is called Haiz (menses).(Hidaya 62/Vol. I)

Rule: The least duration of menses is three days and three nights and the maximum is ten days and ten nights. So if one has menses for less than three days and three nights, then it is not menses, rather it is 'Istehada'. It has happened due to some disease. If the blood has come for more than ten days and ten nights, so the days other than ten, will be included in 'Istehada'.

(Hidaya 62/Vol. I)

Rule: In case it (the blood) comes for three days, but it stops before the third night is passed; for example, if it starts from the morning of Friday and stops by the sun-set, then also it is not menses, rather it is 'Istehada'. In short, if it is even a little less than three days and nights, it is not at all 'menses'. For instance, if the blood starts from the morning of Friday at the sun-rise, and it stops on Sunday, a little before the sun-rise, then it is not menses, rather it is 'Istehada'. (Shami 393/Vol. I)

Rule: During the period of menses, the blood in red, yellow, green, 'khaki' that is dust-coloured, or in whatever colour it comes, it is menses, unless the sanitary towel remains white. And when it looks white as it was kept, then she (the woman) became clean from the menses.

(Dur-e-Mukhtar 297/Vol. I)

Rule: Nobody has menses before nine and after fifty-five years of age. Therefore, the blood which comes to a minor girl less than nine years old is not menses, rather it is 'Istehada'. In case the blood comes after fifty-five years, and if it is too reddish or black, then it is menses, but the yellow or green or dust-coloured is not menses, rather it is 'Istehada'. But if this woman had yellow or green or dust-coloured blood before this age, then even after fifty-five years it will be taken as menses. But if it is against the habit, then it is not menses but 'Istehada'.

(Alamgiri 32/Vol. I)

Rule: If one had blood for three or four days, but in some month it came for more days but not more than ten days, then it is all menses. But if it exceeded more than ten days, then it is 'Istehada' for the days more than what it used to come habitually. For example, if it habitually comes to one for three days, but in some month it came for nine or ten days, then it is all menses. But if it exceeds even a little more than ten days and nights, then only three days are those of menses and the rest are those of 'Istehada'. One has to offer compensatory 'Namaz' (prayer) for those days.

Rule: If a woman who has no fixed habit i.e. blood comes to her sometimes for four days and sometimes for seven days and it so often changes like that and sometimes it comes for ten days as well, then it is all menses. If blood comes to such a woman for more than ten days and nights, then it is to be noted as for how many days it came in the previous months. Now it is menses for the days formerly fixed for the same and it is 'Istehada' for the rest of the days. (Shami 293/Vol.I)

Rule: If someone always had menses for four days, but in some month it came for five days and came for fifteen days in the next month, then out of these fifteen days, five days will be counted as those of menses and the rest ten days as those of 'Istehada'. In such a case, former habit will not come under consideration and it will be supposed that the habit is now changed to five-day cycle. (Shami 309/Vol. I)

Rule: One had blood for more than ten days, but she does not remember her former habit as for how many days it had come in the previous month, then the rule for it is so delicate that it is not very easy to understand and it seldom happens so. Therefore, I leave out its description. If one needs it, she should consult some renowned scholar and not any ordinary 'moulvi'.

(Shami, Dur-e-Mukhtar, Hidaya 66/Vol. I)

Rule: If a girl had first experience of such a blood, then if it is for ten or a little less than ten days, then it is all menses; and if it comes for more than ten days, then it is menses for ten days and for the rest of the days it is 'Istehada'.

Rule: The least duration of cleanliness between two menses is a fortnight and for the most there is no limit. So if menses stops to anyone for any reason, she will remain clean for the months menses does not come.

Rule: If someone has blood for three days and nights, then she remains clean for a fortnight, then again blood comes for three days and nights, then the blood before and after the fortnight will be taken that of menses and the fortnight in between, will be taken as the period of cleanliness.

Rule: If anyone has blood for a day or two and then remains clean for a fortnight, and the blood comes again for a day or two, then the period in between is that of cleanliness. The blood which comes of a day or two before or after (the period of cleanliness) is not that of menses, but of 'Istehada'.

Rule: If one has blood for a day or for a few days and then remains clean for less than a fortnight, this is not at all reliable. In such a case it will be taken as if the blood remained continuing for the whole period. So the period habitually fixed for menses will be counted as those of menses but the rest will be taken as those of 'Istehada'. For example, if someone usually has menses by the first, second or third of every month, but in some month it happens that the blood comes on the first, and she remains clean for fourteen days and has blood once again for one day only, then it be taken as if the blood remained continuing for the whole period of sixteen days. Out of these days, the period of three days passed earlier will be taken as the days of menses and the rest of the thirteen days are those of 'Istehada'. If the fourth, fifth or sixth of every month are the dates of menses by habit, then these dates will come under the period of menses; and the three days passed earlier and the ten days passed later are those of 'Istehada'. But in case she has no fixed habit, then the ten days will be taken as those of menses and the rest of the six days as those of 'Istehada'.

(Shami 289/Vol. I)

Rule: The blood which comes during the period of conception is also not that of menses but it will come under 'Istehada', no matter how many days it comes for.

(Shami 289/Vol. I)

Rule: The blood which comes at the time of child-birth, before the child comes out, is also that of 'Istehada'. In fact, that blood is also that of 'Istehada' which comes till the child comes out more than half. (Hidaya 63/Vol. I)

ABOUT MENSES

Rule: It is not proper to offer 'Salat or observe Saum' during the period of menses. But while one is exempted from offering Salat during this period and compensatory 'Salat' is not due, 'Saum' is not excusable. One has to observe compensatory 'Saum' after being clean. (Hidaya 63/Vol. I)

Rule: If menses starts during 'Fard (obligatory) Salat' then that Salat is also excused. One is not to offer compensatory Salat after being clean. But if the menses starts during 'Nafl' or 'Sunnah' Salat, then one has to offer compensatary 'Namaz' for that. If the menses starts after observing Saum for half a day, then that 'Saum' is breached, and one has to observe compensatory 'Saum' for that. If the menses starts during the 'Nafl Saum' then compensatory 'Saum' for that is also due.

(Hidaya 62/Vol. I)

Rule: If menses comes at a time when there is very little time left for offering Salat then also Salat is excused.

(Shami 300/Vol. I)

Rule: It is not proper for one to indulge in sexual intercourse with one's husband, but to lie down with the husband or eating and drinking with him is allowed.

(Dur-e-Mukhtar 194/Vol. I)

Rule: If one habitually has menses for five or more days and the blood also came exactly for that period and then stopped, then sexual intercourse is not permissible unless she takes bath. If she does not take bath then she can have sexual intercourse after the period of one compensatory Salat is over.

(Hidaya 64/Vol. I)

Rule: If one has a habit of five days, but the menses stopped after four days, then she should compulsorily offer Salat after taking bath. But one is not allowed to get indulged in sexual intercourse before five days are completed, because there is not chance for the menses to come.

Rule: If the menses comes the whole ten days and nights, then sexual intercourse is proper only after menses is stopped, whether she has taken bath or not. (Hidaya 64/Vol. I)

Rule: If the blood stops after a day or two, then bath is not compulsory; one can offer Salat after performing Wudu, but sexual intercourse is not yet allowed. So, if menses starts before a fortnight is over, then it will be known that the period was that of menses. In such a case, the period by calculation should be taken as that of menses. Now one should offer Salat after taking bath. But if the entire fortnight in between is over without bleeding, then it will be considered as 'Istehada'. So the Salats that were left off because of bleeding for a day or two, will now be offered in the compensatory form. (Hidaya)

Rule: If the menses habitually comes for three days, but it so happens that in a certain month, bleeding does not stop, then one should neither take bath nor offer Salat. If bleeding stops after full ten days and nights or less than that period, then Salat for those days are excused and no compensatory Salat is to be offered; and it will be taken as if the habit is now changed and so all these days will come under the period of menses. If it bleeds for the eleventh day too, then only three days will come under the account of menses and the rest will be counted as 'Istehada'. Now one should take bath on the eleventh day and offer compensatory Salat for seven days and should continue Salat without a break.

Rule: If the menses came for less than ten days and it stopped when the time for offering Salat is so little that even if she hastily takes bath she can hardly say Allahu Akbar only once and make intent (niy-yah) for Salat and nothing else, then also the Salat of that time becomes due and one has to offer compensatory Salat. But in case of a lesser time than this, the Salat is excused and no compensatory Salat will be due.

(Shami 302/Vol. I)

Rule: If the menses comes for full ten days and nights and bleeding stopped at a time that nothing other than Allahu Akbar can be uttered and also she does not have time for a bath too, then also Salat becomes compulsory and one has to offer compensatory Salat.

Rule: If one becomes clean in the day during the month of Ramadan, then after being clean, eating and drinking is not proper. One should compulsorily live like the observers of 'Saum'. But the day will not be counted in 'Saum', rather compensatory 'Saum' for the day will have to be observed.

(Hidaya 207/Vol. I)

Rule: If one has become clean after ten days of menses, then if the part of the night left is so little that Allahu Akbar can be said only once, then also the 'Saum' for the day following is compulsory. In case the part of night left was enough for taking bath but did not do so, then she should not break her 'Saum', rather she should make 'niy-yah' (intent) for the 'Saum' and take bath in the morning. But if the part of night left is so little that one can not even take bath, then the 'Saum' of the next morning is not valid. But eating and drinking in the morning is also not proper. One should pass her day like an observer of 'Saum' and observe compulsory 'Saum' later on.

(Dur-e-Mukhtar 205/Vol. I)

Rule: Menses starts by the time the blood comes upto the outer skin (of vagina). It makes no difference whether it comes out of the outer skin or not. If one keeps cotton pad etc. inside vagina so that blood does not come out of vagina; then, it will not be taken as menses. Till the blood remains inside and the cotton pad is not stained, it will not be taken as menses. If the blood stain appears on the outer skin of vagina or on the cotton pad, then the menses will be considered as started.

Rule: If a clean woman keeps pad inside her vagina in the night and finds blood-stain on it in the morning, then the period of menses will be counted from the time the blood stain has come to knowledge. (Dur-e-Mukhtar 154/Vol. I)

ABOUT ISTEHADA (PROLONGED MORBID MENSTRUATION)

Rule: Istehada is like bleeding at the nose without a break: Such a woman should offer 'Salat' and observe 'Saum'. No compensatory prayer is necessary in such a case; and sexual intercourse with such a woman is quite right.

Note : Istehada has the orders of the disabled and the excused.

ABOUT NIFAS (AFTER-BIRTH DISCHARGE) AND HAIZ (MENSES)

Rule: A woman who is passing from the period of menses or 'Nifas' and has bath compulsory for her, it is not permissible for her to enter a mosque, circumambulate the Kalimah, recite the Holy Qur'an or touch it. But if the Holy Qur'an is put in a case or wrapped in a bag of cloth which is not stitched with the cover and that can easily be put off then it is permissible to touch or lift the Holy Qur'an.

Rule: One who is without Wudu (ablution) should not touch the Holy Qur'an; but, of course, it can be orally recited.

(Hidaya 64/Vol. I)

Rule: The coins or saucer of amulet having verses of the Holy Qur'an written on it should also not be touched. But if these articles are kept in a bag or vessel, then these containers may be touched and lifted.

Rule: To hold or lift the Holy Qur'an with the skirt of shirt and corner of 'dupatta' (sheet worn loosely over shoulder) is not proper. But if there is some clothe detached from the body like handkerchief, towel etc.; they can be used for holding and lifting the Holy Qur'an.

Rule: If (during the period of menses or Nifas) on recites not the whole of a verse or just a word of a verse or half of a verse, it is proper. But this half of a verse should not be as big as some small a verse. (Hidaya 64/Vol. I, Shami 303/Vol. I)

Rule: If Surah Al-Fatihah or Al-Hamd as a whole to be recited with the intention of Du'a (invocation) or other invocations from the Holy Qur'an are recited with the intention of invocation only and not with an intention of recitation, then it is permissible. It is not a sin. The following invocation; for example:

(INVOCATION IN ARABIC)

Rab-bana aataina fid-dunya hasanatanw wa fil akhirate hasanatanw wa Q'ena Adhabannar.

and the following invocation:

Rabbana la tu akhidhna innasina aw akhtana upto the last written at the end of Surah Baqara or any other invocation that has occurred in the Holy Qur'an can be recited with the intention of invocation. (Shami 302/Vol. I)

Rule: Recitation of Dua-e-Qunut is also permissible (in such a condition). (Alamgiri 24/Vol. I)

Rule: If a woman gives lessons in the Holy Qur'an to others, then (in such a condition) she can only teach them the spellings of words, but while teaching fluently one should not recite the whole verse, but should break the breath after a word or two and teach fluency in parts. (Alamgiri 24/Vol. I)

Rule: To recite Kalimah (word) or Darood or to call out the name of Allah or to recite 'Istighfar' or Incantation (Wazifah) for instance,

La haula wala quwwata illa billahil ali-ul azeem is not prohibited.

Rule: During the period of menses, it is appreciable to perform Wudu and recite the name of Allah at some clean spot so that the habit of Salat may not be broken and she may not feel disgusted after being clean. (Alamgiri 23/Vol. I)

Rule: If one had a need for taking bath but the menses started before she could take bath, then bathing is not compulsory for her. She should rather take bath after being clean from the menses. Only one bath is enough for both of them.

(Qazi Khan 27/Vol. I)

ABOUT CLEANING OF THE POLLUTION

Rule: If the semen in the clothe dries up, then it will be clean only after the semen is being scratched, but the wet semen requires washing. But if one had not performed 'Istinja' (cleaning after a natural evacuation) and the semen is discharged in the meanwhile, then only rubbing will not be enough, rather washing would be necessary. (Alamgiri 27/Vol. I)

ABOUT SALAT

Rule: If one is giving birth to a child but only a small portion of the child has appeared, then also it is Fard (obligatory) to offer Salat, provided she is conscious. To give up Salat is not proper. But if offering of Salat endangers the life of the child, then she is allowed to give up Salat. In the same way, if the mid-wife thinks that offering of Salat on her part may harm the child to be born, then she also can give up the Salat. But all of them should offer compensatory Salat as soon as possible. (Dur-e-Mukhtar 308/Vol. I)

ABOUT ATTAINING PUBERTY

Rule: When a girl gets menses started or though menses has not started, but she becomes pregnant or though she has not been pregnant, but she commits sexual intercourse in dream and had a seminal discharge as well as taste of sexual intercourse—then in all these three states of affairs she attains puberty. 'Saum' and all other orders of 'Shari'ah' (Code of Islam) will be applied on her. In case, she has not yet experienced any one of the three things mentioned above but has now become fifteen years old, then also she becomes young (or attains puberty) and she will come under the laws which are applied on a young girl.

Rule: In Shari'ah, to become young means to attain puberty. No woman (girl) can become young before nine. Even if she starts bleeding (before nine) she cannot be taken as young. The blood which comes before nine is not menses but 'Istehada'—and orders of Shari'ah have already been mentioned in this regard.

ABOUT BURIAL RITES

Rule: If abortion is caused and if the child born has not developed limbs like mouth, nose etc., then without giving bath and shroud, it should be wrapped in a piece of cloth and be buried into a pit dug for the purpose. In case, the new-born child has developed some limbs, then it will come under the order of the child born dead. Now it should be named and given bath, but it be given no shroud nor any Salat-Janazah (funeral prayer) should be offered. It should be buried after having wrapped in a piece of cloth. (Dur-e-Mukhtar 904/Vol. I)

Rule: During the process of birth, if only the head of the child appears and the child is dead, then it will come under the rules of a dead child. But if the child is dead after a major portion came out, it will be considered to be born alive. If the child is born from the side of head, then if the child is born upto its chest, it will be considered that the major portion is out; and if it came out with the reversed side, it should be out upto its navel. (Shami 927/Vol. I)

ABOUT PEOPLE WITH WHOM MATRIMONY IS PROHIBITED

Rule: If a man commits adultery with a woman, then it is not permissible for him to marry her mother or her daughters.

Rule: If a woman, out of sexual passion and with evil intent commits sexual intercourse with a man, then it is not permissible for the mother or daughters of that woman to marry that man. In the same way, the man who commited sexual intercourse with a woman, became prohibited for her mother and daughters.

Rule: If a man gets up in the night to waken his wife but commits sexual intercourse with his daughter or mother-in-law by mistake, but with sexual passion taking her to be his wife, then that man becomes prohibited for his own wife for ever. Now there is no way out to make her valid for him and hence divorce becomes necessary.

Rule: If a boy commits sexual intercourse with his step-mother with bad intent, then woman became prohibited for her husband. Now she can in no way become valid for him. And if the step-mother does so with her step-son, then the same rule will apply.

Rule: If a woman who has no husband, becomes pregnant by adultery, her matrimony is also proper. But to indulge in sexual intercourse before the birth of the child is not proper. But if she performs matrimony with the same person who had committed adultery with her, then sexual intercourse with him is also permissible.

ABOUT GUARDIAN

Rule: After being informed of matrimony, when it is necessary to approve it with tongue, she did not do so, but when her husband met her she did not refuse sexual intercourse with him, then also the matrimony became proper.

Rule: If the matrimony of a girl (who has not yet attained her puberty) is being performed with someone by anyone other than her father and grandfather, and the girl was well-informed about her matrimony; and she attained her puberty and remained without sexual intercourse with her husband as yet; then if she expresses her disapproval just at the time of attaining puberty and says that she does not want to keep this matrimony and even if none is present there, her matrimony will not break unless she does not go to a religious authority and he makes her matrimony break. But if after attaining puberty she remains silent even for a moment, then she will forfeit her right of breaking her matrimony. But if she was not informed of her matrimony, then she should express her disapproval just at the moment she attains puberty, otherwise her right to break her matrimony will be forfeited.

Rule: If one attains her puberty after sexual intercourse by her husband, then refusal is not necessary just after reaching puberty, rather one has a right to accept or reject till her inclination be comes clear; no matter how much time is passed. But if she tells in clear words that she does approve of the relation or any indication regarding approval is found such as her living with her husband in privacy like 'husband and wife' then her right to refuse her matrimony is forfeited and matrimony becomes inevitable.

ABOUT MAIH'R (MONEY SETTLED UPON THE WIFE)

Rule: If one got fixed rupees ten or twenty or a hundred or something according to his monetary position, as 'Maih'r' and brought his wife home and indulged in sexual intercourse with her or did not do so, but both the husband and wife lived together in such a place where there was nothing to stop him from committing sexual intercourse, then the entire 'Maih'r' fixed, has to be paid. And if nothing happened as mentioned above and in such a state the husband or the wife died, then also the entire amount of 'Maih'r' will have to be paid. And in case, no sexual relation got established nor there was a chance for the same and the husband divorced his wife, then half of the amount of 'Maih'r' will have to be paid. In short, the husband and wife had such a privacy as mentioned above or any one of them died, then the whole Maih'r became compulsory. But if divorce took place before such a privacy as mentioned above came to them, then half of the Maih'r became compulsory.

Rule: If one of the two (husband or wife) was sick or was in a state of 'Saum' (fasting) of Ramadhan or was donning 'Ehram' (pilgrim's robe during Hajj) or the wife had menses or anybody would peep into the enclosure; such a privacy does not make the entire Maih'r compulsory. If she gets divorce, she is entitled to half of the Maih'r. But if the Saum (fast) was not that of Ramadhan, rather it was a Saum of compensation or of 'Nafl' or 'Naz'r' (oblation) observed by anyone of the two and in such a state she remained in privacy with her husband, then she is entitled to get the whole of the 'Maih'r'. The husband will have the whole Maih'r due on him.

Rule: If the husband is impotent but the husband and wife remained in privacy with all its conditions then also she would get the whole Maih'r. In the same way, if any eunuch performed matrimony but divorced after remaining together in privacy, then also the Maih'r becomes due and she is entitled to get it.

Rule: If the husband and wife pass time in privacy, but the girl is so minor that she is not fit for sexual intercourse or the boy is so minor that he can not commit sexual intercourse, then such a privacy does not make Maih'r compulsory.

Rule: If anyone performs Nikah (matrimony) against the rules and so the husband and wife had to be separated; for example, one performed Nikah (matrimony) without any knowledge of people or two witnesses or the two witnesses were deaf and hence they could not hear the words uttered during matrimony; or the husband had divorced her or had died and she performed another matrimony without completing the 'Iddat' (probationary period) or any such thing happened against rules and hence the two had to be separated without sexual intercourse committed by the husband, then she is entitled to no Maih'r at all. She will get no Maih'r even if she passed time with her husband in privacy fulfilling all conditions; then the wife is entitled to Maih'r-e-Mis'l (dower in force in the family). But if some Maih'r was settled at the time of matrimony and Maih'r-e-Mis'l is more than that, the Maih'r settled will be given and not the Maih'r-e-Mis'l.

Rule: If one commits sexual intercourse with a woman by mistake, thinking her to be his wife, then he has also to pay Maih'r-e-Mis'l. But such a sexual intercourse is not adultery and hence no sin for that. If, as a result of such a sexual intercourse, the woman becomes pregnant, then the family lineage will also not be affected and the child will not be treated as illegitimate. And when the person comes to know that the woman was not his wife, then she must remain aloof from her and now sexual intercourse with her is not permissible. Now it is necessary for the woman to wait for the 'Iddat' (probationary period); she, now, cannot have sexual intercourse with her husband without completing her Iddat (probationary period). The description of Iddat (probationary period) will come later, Insha-Allah.

Rule: If the husband could not pay in advance the amount of Maih'r according to family custom, then the wife has a right to refuse sexual intercourse or if sexual intercourse has already been committed once, then also she has a right not to allow sexual intercourse a second or third time or refuse to go abroad without taking advance from Maih'r. In the same way, if the woman goes abroad with any close relative or from her husband's house to her paternal home, the husband has no right to prevent his from doing so. But when he pays in advance from Maih'r what is customarily due on him, then his wife cannot do anything or to go anywhere without his permission or the husband can take her to any place at his will, and refusal on her part is not proper.

ABOUT NIKAH (MATRIMONY) OF THE KAFIRS (NON-BELIEVERS)

Rule: If the woman adopts Islam but the man remained a non-believer, then the woman cannot marry another man unless she passes the whole period of three menses.

ABOUT PARITY AMONG WIVES

Rule: Parity in sexual intercourse is not essential. For example, if one commits sexual intercourse with one wife in her turn, it is not necessary that he must do so when the turn of another wife arrives.

ABOUT DIVORCE BEFORE ARRIVAL OF THE BRIDE AT THE BRIDEGROOM'S HOUSE

Rule: If the woman has not arrived at the house of her husband as a bride or arrival has taken place but they had not been together in the same type of privacy as has been mentioned in the chapter on Maih'r. So, if such a woman is divorced by his husband then it will be a Talaq-e-Bayyin (distinct divorce) whether it has been done in clear words or in ambiguous words; in every case it will be a 'distinct divorce' (Talaq-e-Bayyin).

And there is no Iddat (probationary period) for such a woman. She can marry any man after divorce; and the husband does not have a right to divorce a second time after once such a woman has been divorced. If such a divorce is given, then it is invalid. But, if at the very first time he says that he is giving divorce twice or thrice, then the same number of divorces will become valid. But after being divorced thrice at a time, they cannot marry each other once again without hala'la (marriage and sexual intercourse with another person). But, if he says that he is giving her Talaq! Talaq! (divorce ! divorce !); then also it will be counted as one Talaq (divorce). And, if after arrival at husband's house, she has sexual intercourse with her husband or had such a privacy with her husband as mentioned above, then all Talaqs (divorces)—from one to three—which have been given, will be taken as valid. Here the rule as applied is that in case of the word 'Talaq' (divorce) being said less than three times, one can return to such a woman without re-marriage. But after getting the Talaq (divorce) thrice at a time, the woman after being Mughalliza (severely divorced) will turn compulsorily out of marriage.

ABOUT PRONOUNCING THREE TALAQS (DIVORCES)

Rule: (After three Talaqs) if (a woman) wants to live with the same man and to remarry him, then there is only one way out, that is, first after marrying some other man, she should have sexual intercourse with him, and when that second man dies or pronounces Talaq, then after passing the Iddat (probationary period) she can marry the first husband. She cannot marry her first husband without having a second husband. If she marries another man, but he died before committing sexual intercourse or divorced before committing sexual intercourse, then that is not considerable; she can not remarry her first husband without having committed sexual intercourse with her second husband. Remarriage with the first husband without it is not permissible—one should clearly note it.

Rule: If a woman is given in marriage to another man on condition that he (the second husband)will divorce her later on, then this confession or promise is not considerable. He (the second husband) has a right to leave her or keep her at his will; and to perform 'Nikah' with any promise is a sin and it is prohibited. Such a person invites curse from Allah; but if such a 'Nikah' is performed, then after this if the second husband leaves her after committing sexual intercourse or dies. then she will become valid for the first husband.

ABOUT TALAQ (DIVORCE) ON SOME CONDITIONS

Rule: If someone told his wife that if menses starts, she be divorced. After this he saw blood, then any decision will not be taken about Talaq, unless it bleeds for three days and nights. Only after the completion of three days and nights, it will be decided that the divorce is valid from the moment the menses started. But if someone had said that his wife be divorced at one menses, then the Talaq (divorce) will become valid after the completion of one menses.

ABOUT REJOINING (RAJAAT) IN REVOCABLE DIVORCE (TALAQ-E-RAJAIE)

Rule: One method of rejoining is also that one says nothing in words but commits sexual intercourse or kisses or embraces her with sexual passion. In all these state of affairs, she becomes his wife again and there is no need of re-marriage.

Rule: The woman who has menses, has three monthly courses as the period of her Iddat (probationary period). When the three monthly courses have passed, it means her Iddat (probationary period) has been complete. When this state of affair comes to light, then it is to be kept in mind that if the third monthly course has lasted for full three days, then period of Iddat is over with the completion of full ten days and the right of the man of retain her will also cease to exist whether the woman has taken bath or not, because this is not considerable. If the third menses lasted for less than ten days and then stopped, but the woman has neither taken bath as yet nor any 'Salat' has become due on her, then the right of the man on her is yet intact. Even now she can be retained as wife, if he turns back from his resolve. But if she takes bath as the bleeding stops or does not take bath but the time of one obligatory 'Salat' is passed, that is one obligatory Salat becomes due on her, then the right of the man to retain her is forfeited. Now she can not be kept without Nikah.

Rule: The woman with whom sexual intercourse has not been done by her husband, in spite of privacy pronouncement of only one Talaq takes from him the right to retain her as wife, because this Talaq is a distinct (Bayyin) divorce. This rule has to be kept perfectly in mind.

Rule: If both (husband and wife) remained together in privacy, but the husband claims not to commit sexual intercourse and after this claim, divorced her, then he forfeits his right to turn back from divorce.

ABOUT TAKING OATH OF NOT GOING TO WIFE

Rule: One who vows and says that by Allah he will not commit sexual intercourse or says by Allah, he will never commit sexual intercourse with her or says that he vows that he will not commit sexual intercourse with her or says the same thing in any other way, then the rule is, that, if he does not commit sexual intercourse, then after the passage of four months, Talaq-e-Bayyin (distinct divorce) will become effective on the woman. Now they can not live like husband and wife without Nikah or remarriage. But if he breaks his oath before the expire of four months and committed sexual intercourse, then Talaq will not be effective, but he will have to pay expiation for breach of oath. Such an oath is called 'Eila' in 'Shari'ah'.

Rule: If one vows not for ever (for committing sexual intercourse with his wife) but only for four months and says that by Allah he will not commit sexual intercourse with her for four months, then the purpose of 'Eila' is served. The rule for this also is that if he commits no sexual intercourse for four months, then Talaq-e-Bayyin (distinctive divorce) becomes effective; and if he commits sexual intercourse before the expiry of four months, then he will have to pay expiation for that. The description of expiation for oath will come later.

Rule: If one vows for a period less than four months, then it is not considerable. If he vows even a day less than four months, then 'Eila' will not be effective. But, of course, if he commits sexual intercourse before the period for which the oath was taken, then he will have to pay expiation for breaching his oath; and if he has not committed sexual intercourse, then divorce will not become effective and his oath will also be fulfilled.

Rule: If one vows only for four months and then does not break his oath, then after the expiry of four months, divorce will become effective, and if after divorce, remarriage takes place with the same man, and after this Nikah (marriage) he does not commit sexual intercourse, then there is no harm and nothing will happen now. And if he vows for ever, as he says that by Allah he will not have sexual intercourse with her or says that by Allah he will never indulge in sexual intercourse with her, then did not break his oath, and divorce will become effective after four months. If he marries her for the third time, the same rule will apply. If he does not commit sexual intercourse even after this marriage, then the third divorce will become effective. Now remarriage is not permissible without her marriage with a second man. If he would have committed sexual intercourse after second or third divorce, then the oath had been broken and then divorce would have never been effective. Only expiation for the breach of oath would have to be paid.

Rule: Similarly, if during all the three 'Nikahs' one after another three Talaqs become effective, then if the woman marries another man and after being left by him, and having completed her Iddat (probationary period) she marries again her former husband and again he does not commit sexual intercourse, then a Talaq will not become effective; no matter how long he abstains from sexual intercourse. But whenever he commits sexual intercourse, he will have to pay expiation for his broken oath, because he had vowed that he would never indulge in sexual intercourse; and that oath is now broken.

Rule: If a man pronounces distinct divorce (Talaq-e-Bayyin) to his wife and then vows not to commit sexual intercourse with her, then 'Eila' does not become effective. Now if after remarriage, he abstains from sexual intercourse, then the 'Talaq' will not become effective. But whenever he commits sexual intercourse, he will have to pay expiation for the breach of oath. If after pronouncing Talaq-e-Rajaie (revocable divorce), he vows like that before the period of 'Iddat' (probationary period) is over, then 'Eila' becomes effective. If he now rejoins his wife but abstains from sexual intercourse, then after four months, Talaq will become effective; and if he commits sexual intercourse, then he will have to pay expiation for breach of oath.

Rule: If one does not swear by Allah but says that if he commits sexual intercourse with her, then she be divorced, then also 'Eila' becomes perfect. If he now commits sexual intercourse, then Talaq-e-Rajaie will become effective, but expiation for breach of oath will not have to be given. And if he abstains from sexual intercourse, then after four months, Talaq-e-Bayyin will become effective. If he says that in case of sexual intercourse, one Hajj (pilgrimage of Mecca) or one Saum (fast) or, alms of one rupee or one Qurbani (sacrifice of animals during Hajj) is due on him, then in all these conditions, 'Eila' becomes perfect. If he now commits sexual intercourse, then he will have to fulfil his pronouncements, but will not have to pay expiation for that, and if he abstains from sexual intercourse then Talaq (divorce) becomes effective after four months.

ABOUT CALLING WIFE EQUIVALENT TO MOTHER

Rule: If someone said to his wife that she is equal to his mother or to him she is equal to mother or now she is to him like his mother, hen one should try to arrive at the meaning of these words. If these words carry the meaning that she is equal to his mother in esteem or age or appearance, then it is immaterial. Similarly, if he said all these things without any intention and uttered these words aimlessly, then also there is no harm. But if he meant divorce then one Talaq-e-Bayyin (distinct divorce) becomes effective. But if he meant neither divorce nor had the intention to leave his wife, but he simply meant that although she is his wife and he does not want separation from her, but from now on he will not commit sexual intercourse with her and make sexual intercourse prohibited for himself; and now her rights are reduced to food and clothe only; and in short, he does not want to divorce her, but thinks this act as prohibited, then in Shari'ah this act is called 'Zehar' (elevation of one's wife to the supposed status of one's mother or sister' etc.). In such a case, the religious injunction is that the woman will remain in his marriage, but unless the man pays expiation, he can neither commit sexual intercourse, nor can he embrace her with sexual passion, nor can kiss her. All such acts are prohibited for him. That woman will remain prohibited for him unless expiation is paid, no matter how many years are passed. When the man pays expiation, they can live as husband and wife. They need no re-marriage. The expiation for this is the same as for the breach of 'Saum'.

Rule: If the husband commits sexual intercourse with her before expiation is paid, then it is a major sin and he should repent and pray Allah for His Forgiveness and should now resolve firmly not to indulge in sexual intercourse with her without paying expiation and the woman should not allow her husband to come near her unless expiation is paid.

Rule: The religious injunction is the same; if the husband said that his wife was equal to his sister or daughter or paternal aunt or any such woman with which marriage is forbidden for ever.

Rule: If the husband said that his wife was like a swine, then if he had an intent for divorce, then divorce became effective; but if he told this with the intent of 'Zehar', that is he had an intent not to divorce but only to make sexual intercourse forbidden for himself, then it is of no account. In the same way, if he had no intent for anything, then also it is immaterial.

Rule: If during 'Zehar', the husband abstained from sexual intercourse nor paid expiation, it would neither be divorce nor 'Eila'.

Rule: Unless the expiation is paid, he is not forbidden from looking or talking with his wife, but, of course, looking at the private parts is not permissible for the husband in such a case.

Rule: If 'Zehar' is not intended for ever, but it was for a specified period, say, for one year or four months, then Zehar will last for the specified period. If he wants to commit sexual intercourse within that period, he will have to pay expiation; but if he commits sexual intercourse after the prescribed period then he has to pay nothing and the woman will become lawful and valid.

Rule: In case of 'Zehar' also, if he hastily said : Insha-Allah (if Allah-willing) then nothing happened.

Rule: A minor or an insane person cannot exercise 'Zehar'. If such a person does so, it is immaterial. In the same way, if 'Zehar' is exercised for a woman who has not yet come into his marriage, then also it is of no account. Nikah (marriage) with such a woman is quite permissible.

Rule: If the words of 'Zehar' have been repeated several times; for example, he says twice or thrice that she is equal to his mother; then he will have to pay expiation for the number of times he said so. But if by uttering the words of 'Zehar' twice or thrice he just wanted to make it firm and no fresh 'Zehar' was intended, then only one Zehar is enough.

Rule: If the husband said so to several women, then he has to pay expiation for as many wives as he has with him.

Rule: If the word 'equal' or 'like' has not been spoken, but the man directly tells that 'she is his mother' or 'sister' then it is not immaterial. The woman does not become forbidden for him, but to utter such words is bad and sinful, In the same way it is also bad to address his wife as his sister, but saying so is quite immaterial.

Rule: If someone says that if he keeps her, then it is to keep his mother, or if he says that to commit sexual intercourse with her is to do so with his mother, then it is immaterial.

Rule: If someone tells his wife that she is forbidden for him like his mother, then if these words are uttered with the intention of divorce, then Talaq (divorce) will become effective or if this is said with the intention of 'Zehar' or with no intention at all, then 'Zehar' will become effective. Now it is the proper way to commit sexual intercourse after paying expiation.

ABOUT EXPIATION (KAFFARAH)

Rule: Expiation for 'Zehar' is the same as for breach of 'Saum' (fast). There is no difference at all. Such rules have been mentioned in the chapter 'About Saum'. Here we mention some things which could not be discussed here.

Rule: If the husband has the strength, he should keep sixty fasts (Saum) in succession without a gap, and should not commit sexual intercourse unless these 'Saums' are completed. If he commits sexual intercourse with the woman, then he will have to keep the same number of fasts again, whether sexual intercourse with that woman has been committed during the day or night or intentionally or otherwise, the same rule will apply.

Rule: If one starts keeping fasts (Saum) from the first of the month, then he should keep fasts for the two successive (lunar) months or for full fifty days and whether the (lunar) month be of thirty days or be short by one day, in both ways recompensation would be met; and if the fasts have not been started from the first of the month, then he is bound to keep sixty successive fasts.

Rule: If sixty successive fasts are beyond the strength of the person, then he should give two meals to sixty Faqirs (poor-men) for sixty days or give foodgrains in the same quantity. If before completing the quota of feeding the Faqirs (poor-men) he commits sexual intercourse, then he committed sin no doubt but recompensation will not have to be repeated.

Rule: If one had two recompensations of 'Zehar' due on him and he gave four kg. of wheat to each of the sixty Faqirs and thought that he gave two kg. of wheat to each person for one 'Zehar' and hence both the recompensations are met, then also only one recompensation is met; he should have to give another recompensation again. But if one recompensation was for breach of Saum and another for Zehar; then both were met.

LE'AN (ALLEGATION OF ADULTERY)

Rule: If a husband accuses his wife of adultery or says about the new-born child to be not from him, then the religious injunction is that the woman accused should file a complaint with the Qazi (Judge) or any religious authority. Now the authority should call both of them and first ask the husband to say four times that by Allah, his allegation against his wife is quite true; and the fifth time he should say that Curse of Allah be upon him, if he is untrue. Then the accused (woman) should say four times that she says by making Allah witness that the allegation made against her (by her husband) is false; and the fifth time that if he (her husband) is true in his allegation, then Curse of Allah be on her. When both of them take oath like that, the legal authority will order separation between them and Talaq-e-Bayyin (distinct divorce) will become effective. Now the child will not be treated as from the husband and will be given over to the woman. In 'Shari'ah', this mutual cursing by a couple in a law-court in a case of adultery is called Le'an (Slander).

ABOUT IDDAT (WIFE'S CONFINEMENT ON HUSBAND'S DEATH OR DIVORCE)

Rule: If a woman's husband divorces her or the marriage is revoked by 'Khula' (divorce obtained on wife's initiative) or Eila (to take oath not to go to wife) etc., or the husband dies, then in all such cases, the woman has to remain confined in a house for a specified period and before the end of this period she is not permitted to go outside nor can she marry any other man. She is at liberty to do anything only after this specified period is passed. This specified period is called Iddat.

Rule: If the husband divorces his wife, she should stay in the husband's house, where she has been divorced; for a period of three monthly courses. She must not go out of this house either in the day or night, nor marry any other person during this period. If, in such a state, three monthly courses are passed, then Iddat is complete. Now she can go anywhere at her will. The rule for one 'Talaq' by the husband or two or three Talaqs or Talaq-e-Bayyin or Talaq-e-Rajaie is the same.

Rule: The period of Iddat for divorce for a minor girl who has never seen menses or for so aged a woman who has now ceased to menstruate, is the same, and that is a period of three months. So, for a period of three months she must remain confined in the house, and after the expiry of this period she can do anything at her will.

Rule: If a girl has been divorced and she started her Iddat according to her monthly course, but during the very period of Iddat she has her menses, then she should have to remain confirmed for a period of three monthly courses. The period of Iddat will not come to end without the period of three monthly courses being over.

Rule: A pregnant woman, if divorced, has to wait for the birth of the child and that is her Iddat. This period of Iddat is over with the birth of the child. If the child is born just after being divorced, then also her Iddat is over.

Rule: If a woman is divorced during her monthly course, then that monthly course will not be taken into account. So apart from that monthly course, three more monthly courses will be the period of her Iddat.

Rule: The Iddat of Talaq is to be observed by such a woman who has been divorced after sexual intercourse or if sexual intercourse has not been committed but the husband and wife have remained together in seclusion as a result of which 'Maih'r' becomes due or that privacy which does not make full amount of 'Maih'r' due. But the woman who has not been in privacy, if divorced, need not pass the days of Iddat, as has been mentioned above.

Rule: If one commits sexual intercourse with a woman other than his wife by mistake, then the woman has to observe Iddat. She must not allow her own husband to commit sexual intercourse with her without her Iddat being over, otherwise both of them would be guilty. Iddat for this also is the same as has been mentioned above. If the woman becomes pregnant with this sexual intercourse, then she should wait till the child is born and observe Iddat. Such a child is not illegitimate. His lineage is proper. The child will belong to the man who has committed sexual intercourse.

Rule: One who performs Nikah (marriage) against the rule; for example, if after Nikah one comes to know that the husband of that woman is yet alive, and has not divorced as yet, or came to know after Nikah that both the husband and wife are foster-brother and sister, then the rule is that if the man commits sexual intercourse with such a woman, and the truth came to light later on, then the woman has to observe Iddat. And the Iddat started from the time the man repented and got separation from that woman. But if sexual intercourse had not been committed as yet, then Iddat is not yet essential; rather if one has been in perfect seclusion and privacy with such a woman, then also Iddat is not essential. Iddat is due only when sexual intercourse has been committed.

Rule: During Iddat, food and clothes are due on the person who has divorced the woman. A detailed description of the same will come later on.

Rule: If one gives Talaq-e-Bayyin (distinct divorce) or gives three Talaqs but commits sexual intercourse with the same woman by mistake, then on account of this mistake one more Iddat becomes essential. Now the woman has to complete three more monthly courses. When three monthly courses are passed, then both the Iddats are over.

Rule: If a man gives Talaq-e-Bayyin (distinct divorce) and he lives in the same house with the divorced woman, then a curtain must be raised between the two.

'IDDAT' CAUSED BY THE DEATH OF ONE'S HUSBAND

Rule: If the husband of a woman dies, then she has to observe Iddat for four months and ten days in the same house where she used to live with her husband and became widow. It is not permissible for her to go out. But if the widow is too poor to have means of livelihood at home and hence she has to work as a maidservant somewhere else, then she is allowed to go out, but should positively stay at home in the day. And the same rule will apply where they indeed had committed sexual intercourse or not, or whether she had privacy with her husband or not; and whether monthly course used to come or not. In every case she has to observe Iddat for four months and ten days. But if the woman was pregnant at the time of her husband's death, then she should observe Iddat till the child is born to her. If delivery takes place even a few minutes after the death of the husband, then also her Iddat is over.

Rule: The widow is allowed to live in the entire portion of the house. The practice for the widow to remain confined to a fixed spot and not move from that place is meaningless and nonsense. This practice should be abandoned.

Rule: If the husband is an immature child but when he died, her wife was pregnant, then also her Iddat lasts till the birth of the child. But this child is illegitimate and hence it would not belong to the husband.

Rule: If the husband of a woman died on the first of the lunar month and the woman was not pregnant, then she should complete four months and ten days according to lunar month; and if he has not died on the first of the lunar month, then she should complete four months and ten days, counting every month of thirty days. The same rule applies in case of Iddat of Talaq as well. If the divorced woman is neither having menses nor she is pregnant and she is divorced on the first of the lunar month, then three lunar months should be completed, whether the moon is sighted on the 29th or 30th of the month. And if the divorce is not given on the first of the lunar month, then three lunar months should be completed counting every month as of thirty days.

Rule: If someone marries against rules, for example, she marries in the absence of witnesses or marries her brother-in-law in the presence of her sister still being in marriage (with the same person); then if her husband dies who was illegally married, she should not observe Iddat for four months and ten days; rather she should observe Iddat for three monthly courses only. If she does not have menses, then the period of Iddat is three months; and if pregnant, then it is till child-birth.

Rule: If one gives Talaq-e-Bayyin (distinct divorce) during his life-time, but he dies before the period of Iddat is complete, so one should see whether the period of Iddat for divorce is more or the period of Iddat for death of the husband, and she should complete the longer one; and if he has given Talaq-e-Rajaie (revocable divorce) and the husband dies before the period of Iddat has passed, then Iddat for death will become effective on the woman.

Rule: If the wife is informed of the death of her husband after four months and ten days are passed, then her Iddat period has already been complete. She need not observe Iddat after getting information about the death of her husband. In the same way, if she is not informed of divorce by her husband, and she gets information about it after the Iddat period of divorce has already passed, then its Iddat period also becomes complete. Now to observe Iddat is not essential.

Rule: If a woman had gone out of her house on some business or to her neighbour's house, and her husband died during her absence, then she must hastily come back and stay in the same house where she became a widow.

Rule: During the Iddat for death of the husband, maintenance is not due on any other person, she will have to spend from her own sources.

Rule: It is a practice with some people that after the death of her husband, she must observe Iddat for a period of one year. This is quite prohibited.

ABOUT MAINTENANCE OF WIFE

Rule: If the wife is too minor to be able for sexual intercourse, and the husband can keep her in his house for looking after the household affairs, then her maintenance is binding on him; but if she is sent back to her paternal home, then he is not bound for her maintenance. In case the husband is minor and the wife is grown-up, then her maintenance will fall on the shoulders of the husband.

ABOUT RESIDENCE

Rule: If Nikah (marriage) has broken due to some undesirable acts of the wife; for example, if she establishes illicit relation with her step-son or embraced him with sexual passion and nothing happened between the two or she turned infidel, and hence the husband divorced her or the marriage has broken because of her turning apostate, then in all such cases, the husband is not bound for her maintenance, but he has to provide a house for her. But in case she leaves the house of her husband, then the husband is not responsible for anything.

ABOUT LEGITIMACY OF THE ISSUES

Rule: If the husband is abroad and no information is reaching about him for a long time, nor he returned home and if in the meanwhile a child is born to the woman, then the child is not illegitimate, rather it is from that very husband. But if after being informed about the matter, he makes a refusal, then the rule of 'Lea'n' will apply.
